| 2. Town | 7 Nov. | 225 M & 5 H | 25 M | 150 H |
| 3. Shahjahanpur | 9 " | 29 H | 26 H | 34 M |
| 4. Dasna | " | 50 H | 10 H | 23 M |
| 5. Haraon | 10th " | 29 M | 10 M | 40 H |
| 6. Indargarhi | | | | |
| 7. Hapur | 13, 14 & 16 Dec. | 4 M, 1 H | 15 M 5 H | 150 H |
| 8. Baghara | 22nd " | 2 H | 2 H | 4 M |

| Table B |
|-----------|--------|
| Stray Cases | Killed, Injured. |
| 1. Rardhana Tehsil Mewana | 20 H |
| 2. Shahjahanpur Canal Bridge | 1 H |
| 3. Preshat garh | 1 M |
| 5. Ajrara Tehsil Hapur | 5 M, 2 H |
| 6. Mussuri | 10 H |
| 7. Tori | 1 H |
| Sardhana Tehsil Sradhana | 5 M 4 H |
| Pillana Tehsil Baghpat | 4 M |

The Hindu relief committee for the district consists of leading lawyers and other respectable people. The report about the Hapur relief committee is awaited.

Phool Singh,
Dated 23rd January, 1947. Secretary, UPCC.
6. Collective Fine Imposed on Non-Muslims of Hapur

Letter from Ratan Lal Garg to Jugal Kishore, 8 February 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-10/1947, NMML.

Dear Friend,

The resolution dated 21.1.47 of the Congress Committee, Hapur, advising the non-Muslims of Hapur to pay the collective fine imposed on them by the UP Govt was adopted under your assurance, as General Secretary, AICC to the deputation which waited upon you on behalf of the Congress Committee Hapur that an enquiry was already being held into Hapur Riot case by the Congress and that if it showed that the fine of two lacs imposed on the non-Muslims of Hapur was unjustified they would press upon the UP Ministry that it was refunded. Kindly expedite the aforesaid enquiry proceedings as the realization of this huge sum of fine has been causing great hardship on the Hindus of Hapur. An early reply is solicited.

Yours sincerely,
Ratan Lal Garg
Secretary,
Congress Committee, Hapur

7. ‘Communal Situation in United Provinces’

Resolution Passed by the Working Committee of the All India Hindu Mahasabha at New Delhi, 9 February 1947
AIHM Papers, File No. P-108, NMML.

‘The Working Committee of the All India Hindu Mahasabha has noticed with regret that communal riots have been and are going on in the United Provinces for the last eight and nine months, as a result of which Hindus inspite of their being in majority have been the sufferers both in life and property. The Committee has also noticed that the Provincial Government has so far failed to check these riots.

In the opinion of the Committee the only reason of these riots continuing for such a long time is that, in that province Muslims, though, a minority of 16 per cent hold a virtual [sic] monopoly of service in the Police Department as they hold 76 per cent of the police services and besides the Minister in charge of the Police Department is a Muslim as a result of which the Muslims, got various direct and indirect support and encouragement from the police.

The Committee calls upon the United Provinces Government to stop further recruitment of Muslims in the Police services and the recently started Home Guards till such time as the number of Hindus attain the ratio according to their population in the province.’

(True Copy)

General Secretary,
All India Hindu Mahasabha, New Delhi.
8. Enquiry into Hapur Riots

Letter from Jugal Kishore to Rafi Ahmad Kidwai, 26 February 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-10/1947, NMML.

My dear Kidwai Sahib,

I have just received a letter from the Secretary, Congress Committee, Hapur, regarding the resolution dated 21st January,'47 which the Hapur Congress Committee had passed regarding the payment of collective fine.

As I had advised them to pay up the fine, they have reminded me to approach you to set up an enquiry into the matter of Hapur Riot and to ascertain to what extent the Hindoos of that locality were responsible for the riot and whether the imposition of collective fine on Hindoos alone was justified by the events. You would perhaps remember your telling me that you would be setting up an enquiry not only for Hapur but for all such events in these Provinces. I do not know whether any enquiry has so far been set up. If it has not been done so far, I hope it will be done soon.

Yours sincerely,
Jugal Kishore
GENERAL SECRETARY.

The Hon’ble Rafi Ahmed Kidwai Sahib, Minister, UP Govt
Lucknow

9. Payment of Collective Fine

Letter from Jugal Kishore to Ratan Lal Garg, 26 February 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-10/1947, NMML.

My dear Ratan Lal Ji,

I am in receipt of your letter dated 8th February. I am glad to know that the Town Congress Committee, Hapur, by a resolution, has advised the non-moslems of Hapur to pay the collective fine.

I have already written to the Home Minister, UP, reminding him of his proposal to set up an enquiry and requesting him to do so if it has not already been done, as early as possible. I do hope that the enquiry so set up will satisfy you.

Yours sincerely,
Jugal Kishore
GENERAL SECRETARY.

Shri Ratan Lal ji Garg,
Secretary, Congress Committee,
Hapur.
10. Acharya Narendra Deva Questions Muslim League Ideology

Extract from a Speech by Acharya Narendra Deva in the UP Legislative Assembly, 13 March 1947

Acharya Narendra Deva agreed with the Leader of the Opposition that the UP Assembly was not the proper forum for discussion of political issues. Still, the question of Muslims being a nation had been raised in the House and he would like to say something on it. He asked the League members to accept Mr Jinnah's definition that in Muslim majority provinces the Muslims were a nation while in Hindu majority provinces they were a subnation.

Addressing the League Party, he asked it to give up its tribal mentality and face the modern world. Any nation which was not prepared to make sacrifices for achieving independence, would not get freedom and even if it got it, it could not keep it.

He asked what sacrifices League had made in the fight for freedom. Its contribution was almost nil. The battle of India's freedom was fought by Congress in the past and it would be Congress which would make sacrifices in the future not only for the freedom of the Hindus but also of the Muslims.

The Muslim League was dreaming of establishing a theocratic state in India in an age of science. He advised the League to take lesson from the Muslim Middle East countries who had one by one given up theocratic form of Government and were marching with the times.

The Congress was the only organization which cut across communal and sectional boundaries and wanted to weld India into one common nation. Its objective was the good of all and not one section of the country....

11. '9 Killed: 14 Injured in Benares'

The Tribune, 15 March 1947

BENARES, 14 March.—Nine persons have died and 14 others have been injured till 10 a.m. to-day as a result of communal disturbances which broke out there last evening, says a communiqué issued by the District Magistrate, Benares, this afternoon.

The communiqué says: Disturbances took place in the city on the evening of 13 March in connection with the Arya Samaj procession. There was sporadic rioting in several localities and the police had to resort to firing near Chauk Police station. Curfew was promulgated from 8 p.m. to 7 a.m. Unfortunately further rioting broke out on the morning of 14 March and by 9-30 a.m. rioting was reported from various quarters in the city. Up to 10 a.m. this morning the casualties reported are 14 injured and nine killed.

Curfew has, therefore, been promulgated from 10 a.m. on 14 March to 7 a.m. on 15 March, throughout the city with the exception of the Cantonment police station area. An order under Section 144, CrPC, prohibiting collection of five or more persons or the carrying of lathis and other dangerous weapons, has been promulgated for one month with effect from today. Curfew remains every night from 5-30 p.m. to 7 a.m. with effect from 13 March for a week.

The communiqué adds that arrangements will be made to conduct first and second class passengers arriving by night trains during curfew hours at the Cantonment Railway Station and requiring to go into the area covered by the curfew.—API.
Chapter 9. Demand for Partition

A. Punjab

1. The Case for a New Sikh–Hindu Province in the Punjab

Pamphlet by Gyani Kartar Singh, Undated
Rajendra Prasad Papers, File No. 2-B/47, NAI.

The Case for a
Sikh–Hindu Province in the Punjab

By
Gyani Kartar Singh
MLA (Punjab) and Member, Constituent Assembly of India

I. Special Claims of the Sikhs in the Punjab

Historical:—Punjab is not only the homeland of the Sikhs but also their holy land. All their Gurus were born or brought up here, and almost all their important places of worship are located in this province.

The founder of the Sikh religion, Guru Nanak, was born in 1469 A.D. It was a dark period in Indian history and northern India was being ravaged by invaders from the North, and corruption and misrule had reduced the Punjab to a state of utter misery. Guru Nanak achieved a synthesis of Islamic social democracy with Hindu idealism and created a new social order. His mission of goodwill was carried on by his successors who further enriched cultural life in the Punjab. Guru Nanak also evolved Gurmukhi and thus for the first time gave the Punjabi language a script. Guru Arjun built the temple at Amritsar which has become the metropolis of Sikh faith. Guru Gobind Singh created the Khalsa and made the Sikhs a martial nation, who became the mainstay of law and order in the Punjab after the disintegration of Mughal Power. Later on Maharaja Ranjit Singh founded a Sikh kingdom in the Punjab stretching into Kashmir and the North West Frontier of India. It was in this period that the tide of invasion was reversed and India began to invade the Pathan regions after many centuries. The Sikh State was lost to the British in the last century, largely due to the treachery of its generals and superior diplomacy of the British. The tussle, however, was so grim that in the words of the son of the then Governor-General ‘another such engagement would shake the British Empire to its very foundation.’

Contribution During The British Period:—During this period the Sikhs have played an outstanding role in the history of the Indian Army, and even now they form about 10 per cent of its total strength. The large number of Victoria Crosses won by them in the two World Wars gives an idea of their valour and chivalry.
THE CASE FOR A NEW SIKH-HINDU PROVINCE IN THE PUNJAB

by
GYANI KARTAR SINGH,
M.L.A. (Punjab) and Member, Constituent Assembly of India.
Distribution of Muslim and Sikh–Hindu Districts in the Punjab
Nor have the Sikhs lagged behind in the struggle for Indian freedom, in which they have taken a leading part with characteristic zeal and fervour. The Ghadar Party of San Francisco provided many martyrs in the cause of freedom, and revolutionaries like Bhai Balwant Singh, Kartar Singh of Sarabha, Bhagat Singh and countless others adorn the pages of Indian history.

Place in the Economy of the Province:—Sikhs are the best farmers in India and are in fact the only successful colonisers of new lands. By their hard work they have made the deserts of Montgomery and Lyallpore blossom into a peasant’s paradise.

On account of their capacity for hard manual labour and aptitude for mechanical work, they make fine industrial workers, mechanics and artisans, and will in fact form the working class of the future Industrial India.

Educationally also they are a forward community, and their percentage of literacy in the Punjab is 17 per cent, as compared with 16 per cent of Hindus and 6 per cent of Muslims. They have produced a larger number of able administrators, engineers and doctors.

The importance of the Sikhs, therefore in the economy of the Punjab is out of all proportion to their numbers.

Population And Its Distribution:—According to the census of 1941, the Sikh population in the Punjab is 50,69,240, out of which 37,57,401 are in British Punjab and 13,11,839 in the Punjab States. In the former, Sikhs are mainly concentrated in Central and Eastern Punjab in regions known as Majha, Malwa and Doaba. The Majha districts are Gurdaspur, Lahore and Amritsar; the Doaba districts are Jullundur and Hoshiarpur; and Malwa consists of Ferozepur, Ludhiana, Ambala and Sirsa Tehsil of Hissar district.

II. Muslim Claim of Pakistan

Punjab is being claimed as homeland by ‘Paks’ who consider it the pivot of their North West Pakistan. The unfortunate part of this claim is that it is being made by people, many of whom have neither homes nor lands in the Punjab. Maps are being drawn arbitrarily by schemers who conveniently ignore the presence of Sikhs and Hindus in the Central, Eastern and Southern Punjab. In the fourteen districts of British Punjab, between Jumna and Ravi, which form a compact and contiguous area, the Sikhs, Hindus and other non-Muslims number 89,25,537 out of a total population of 1,43,96,805, that is, 62 per cent. Again, there are six Sikh States which have played a distinguished role in the defence of the country and to which Sikhs are bound by inseparable ties of religion and history. There are also small but numerous Hindu Rajput States in this region. Are they all to be handed over unceremoniously to the proposed Pakistan?

The Sikhs have already expressed their views emphatically and clearly on this point. At the All India Akali Conference held at Attari on 12th February 1940, they passed a resolution viewing with deep concern the growing endeavours of League Muslims to convert the Punjab into a part of Pakistan, and decided to resist such a demand by all possible means. They have since, reiterated this resolve on a number of occasions. The Hindus of this area in particular of Ambala Division, have also taken a similar view in the matter and are pressing for the creation of a separate Hariana Province.

The position of the Sikhs in the Punjab is similar to that of Muslims in the whole of India. If Muslims cannot view with equanimity the Hindu domination in the Central Government, the Sikhs cannot acquiesce in Muslim domination of the Punjab, particularly in Central,
Eastern and Southern Punjab, where they, along with the Hindus, are in an overwhelming majority. The Sikhs have always expressed their opposition to the Muslim League claim for the vivisection of India on religious basis, but since the substance thereof has been conceded, in the form of Groups B and C, by the Cabinet Mission Plan of 16th May, the Sikhs along with the Hindus demand that the Central, Eastern and Southern portion of the Punjab, where they are in majority, be separated from the North and Western Punjab and constituted into a new Province, so as to give the Sikhs and Hindus of the Punjab a homeland where they will work out their destiny according to their genius. The proposal for the partition of the Punjab is a concrete demand which has the backing of the Sikh community, who desire that it should be implemented forthwith.

III. Cabinet Mission Plan and Its Grave Injustice to the Sikhs and Hindus of Punjab

According to this plan there will be a three tier system of Government—the Centre, the Groups and the Provinces. Grouping has been devised to safeguard Muslim interests, and in the words of the Cabinet Mission ‘to remove the very genuine and acute anxiety of the Muslims that (in a unitary form of Federal Government) they would find themselves subjected to a perpetual Hindu Rule, and to assure them a control in all matters vital to their culture, religion and economic or other interests.’ At the Union Centre, which will deal with all Indian subjects like defence, foreign affairs, and communications, Muslims have been given the following safeguard:

Any question raising a major communal issue in the Legislature should require for its decision a majority of the representatives present and voting of each of the two major communities as well as a majority of all the members present and voting.

It will thus be observed that all possible safeguards have been provided for the Muslims.

No similar provisions, however, have been made to protect the interests of the Sikhs in the Punjab and Group ‘B’, though they have been recognized as one of the three main communities in India, having special interests in the Punjab. The result is that, though along with the Hindus they form an overwhelming majority in a compact and contiguous area, they will, if left as they are, always find themselves, both in the Province and Group B subject to the ‘brute’ majority rule of the Muslims.

It may be argued, that the non-Muslims interest will find a safeguard in the Union Centre wherein they will be in a permanent majority. But in the first place the Muslims, as pointed out above, have been given a virtual veto in all communal issues which may arise at the Centre, and secondly it will be the Groups and the Provincial Governments which will actually govern matters of vital interests to individuals and communities, namely, law and order, agriculture and industries, trade and commerce, local bodies, education, health, civil rights, and others. The Central subjects are but three in number, and do not affect the day to day life of most of the people.

Grouping under the Cabinet Mission Plan has religion for its basis. That is why NWFP, Sind, Baluchistan and Punjab having different languages, economic interests, historical background and outlook have been grouped together. This being the case it is not understood why the Sikh–Hindu majority residing in a contiguous area in South-East Punjab has not been similarly treated.

Under the Cabinet Mission Plan, as understood by a large majority of the people of this country, it was provided that ‘Provinces should be free to form groups with executives and legislatures'. If this had been the case, there was some hope that Groups B and C, with permanent Muslim majorities, would after all not be formed, as the NWFP and Assam had expressed their opposition to their formation. This hope, however, has now been set at nought by the latest declaration of the British Government made on 6th December 1946, that the decision to form Groups would not be taken by Provinces individually but by Sections as a whole by a bare majority vote. Not only this, the Sections, on the same principle, have been given the right to frame Provincial Constitutions as well. This in fact means, judging from the present temper of the Muslim League, a virtual dis-enfranchisement of all non-Muslim representatives in Sections B and C for purposes of framing Group or Provincial Constitutions.

The Provision in the Cabinet Mission Plan enabling Provinces afterwards to opt out of Groups is illusory, because the Muslim League majorities in Sections B and C can so manoeuvre Provincial Constitutions as to make opting out impossible. Even this inadequate provision to opt out of Groups does not exist for areas in Punjab and Bengal, where non-Muslims are in a clear majority, for this right can only be exercised by Provinces as at present constituted.

It is thus clear that the interests of non-Muslims in the Punjab and Bengal have been ignored, and there are no prospects of a fair deal being meted out to them in Sections B and C, as now proposed to be worked by the British Government. Their case qua these sections, it may be pointed out, is exactly similar, in fact stronger, than that of Muslims qua the whole of India, as they constitute 43 per cent and 45 per cent of the total population of the Punjab and Bengal, whereas the Muslims constitute only 24 per cent of the total population of India.

IV. Solution

The non-Muslims in the Punjab and Bengal should be granted the same autonomy which has been given to the Muslims in relation to the whole of India, namely, the right to form autonomous Groups in areas where they are in a majority. This means that contiguous areas in the Punjab and Bengal, where the non-Muslims are in a clear majority, should be formed into separate autonomous Provinces. Such a step was taken in Ireland in 1911 when the boundaries of Ulster were revised and the three Catholic Counties excluded from its area and joined to the Catholic South. A similar step in the case of Punjab and Bengal will be widely welcomed by their non-Muslim population and will not be contrary to their wishes or interests as stated by the Cabinet Mission. On the other hand, they will strongly resent and resist the imposition of Provincial and Group Constitutions framed against their wishes by Muslim majorities in Sections B and C. The proposed autonomous non-Muslim Provinces in the Punjab and Bengal should be given the freedom to join any of the Groups A, B or C.

It has been suggested in certain quarters that the contiguous areas in Punjab and Bengal, where the non-Muslims are in a majority, should be formed into sub-provinces, on the analogy of the sub-province of Croatia in pre-war Hungary and Ulster under the Government of Ireland Act 1920. The latter experiment was never tried and Croatia formed an uneasy partner of pre-war Hungary. Moreover, there are three objections to this proposal. Firstly, the sub-provinces will be subject to the Muslim majorities of Punjab and Bengal. Secondly, in the proposed three tier system of Indian Government, they will form the fourth tier and, after the appointment of Central, Group and Provincial subjects, will hardly have any important subjects left with them and will thus be no better than glorified local bodies. It may here be mentioned that the sub-provinces of Croatia and Ulster formed the third tiers in their systems of Government and, therefore, had powers and functions similar to those enjoyed or to be entrusted to Provincial Governments. Thirdly, the sub-provinces in Bengal and Punjab, will not have the right to opt out of their respective Groups under the Cabinet Mission Plan of 16th May. This is, therefore, not a practical or satisfactory solution.

V. The Proposed Province in the Punjab
This will consist of Ambala and Jullundur Divisions and Amritsar, Gurdaspur and Lahore Districts. The total population of the proposed Province, according to the census of 1941, will be 144 lakhs, of which 62 per cent will be non-Muslims, mainly consisting of Sikh and Hindu Jats, who are closely akin to each other in race and culture. The composition of the population, by communities, will be 19 per cent Sikhs, 38 per cent Muslims and 43 per cent Hindus and others. No single community, therefore, will be in an absolute majority and in a position to dominate the rest. Each will have an effective voice in the administration of the proposed Province. The position of the Sikhs will be further improved, if the Sikh States decide to coalesce with it at a later stage.

In economic and financial resources also, the proposed Province will be self-sufficient and compare well with many of the existing Provinces of India. It will include within its boundaries the rich and fertile tracts of Majha, Malwa, Doaba, and the Ambala Division with its bright future prospects when the Bhakra Dam Scheme materialises. It will also contain important commercial and industrial centres like Lahore, Amritsar, Jullundur and Ludhiana.

VI. Sikh and Hindu Minorities in North West Punjab
The interests of these minorities, particularly of Lyallpur, Montgomery, Sialkot, Gujranwala, Sheikhupura and Rawalpindi districts, have not been forgotten. Nor has the question of Gurdwara Nankana Sahib and other Gurdwaras and places of worship been overlooked. The proposed Sikh–Hindu Province will be a bulwark of strength to them, and there are certain other proposals in view which will satisfactorily solve their problem, of which the writer is fully conscious.

VII. Conclusion
It is strongly urged that steps should be taken forthwith to form the proposed autonomous Sikh–Hindu Province in the Punjab, to allay the genuine fears and apprehensions of the large non-Muslim population residing in this area.

If this just demand is not conceded, it will mean the ruin of the Hindu martial, as well as commercial, classes under the permanent domination of those who believe in their being a separate nation. Similarly the Sikhs, 95 per cent of whose world population resides in the Punjab, will become politically extinct. A people, who not a hundred years ago, were rulers of this land, would become subservient to those whom they had conquered and ruled. This is unjust, unfair and preposterous and shall not be permitted. Therefore:

By the right of self determination,
By the right of majority,
By the inherent right of a culturally homogeneous people to live their own life, the division of the Punjab is absolutely essential.

1 Appendix I & II not reproduced here.
A plan for the formation of an autonomous Sikh–Hindu province in the Punjab to ‘secure elementary justice to the large non-Muslim population residing in this area and allay its genuine fears and apprehensions’ is put forward by Gyani Kartar Singh, MLA (Punjab) and Member, Constituent Assembly.

Pointing out the special position occupied by the Sikhs in the Punjab, Gyani Kartar Singh writes ‘Educationally they are a forward community and their percentage of literacy in the Punjab is 17 as compared with 16 of Hindus and 6 of Muslims. They have produced a large number of able administrators, engineers and doctors.’

Commenting on the Muslim League demand that the Punjab should be included in Pakistan, Gyani Kartar Singh continues, ‘Maps are being drawn arbitrarily by schemers who conveniently ignore the presence of Sikhs and Hindus in the Central, Eastern and Southern Punjab. In the fourteen districts of British Punjab, between Jumna and Ravi, which form a compact and contiguous area, the Sikhs, Hindus and other non-Muslims number 89,25,537 out of a total population of 1,43,96,805, that is, 62 per cent. Again, there are six Sikh States which have played a distinguished role in the defence of the country and to which Sikhs are bound by inseparable ties of religion and history. There are also small but numerous Hindu Rajput States in this region. Are they all to be handed over unceremoniously to the proposed Pakistan?...

‘It is strongly urged that steps should be taken forthwith to form the proposed autonomous Sikh–Hindu province in the Punjab.

‘If this just demand is not conceded, it will mean the ruin of the Hindu martial as well as commercial classes under the permanent domination of those who believe in their being a separate nation. Similarly, the Sikhs, 95 per cent of whose world population resides in the Punjab, will become politically extinct.’

Gyani Kartar Singh, a member of the Constituent Assembly and a prominent leader of the Sikh Panth, has made the interesting suggestion that the communal problem of the Punjab may be satisfactorily solved by dividing the province into two, in one of which the Muslims will be in a majority and in the other the non-Muslims. According to his proposal the Ambala and Jullundur divisions and Amritsar, Gurdaspur and Lahore districts containing a population of 144 lakhs will be made into an autonomous province and the rest of the Punjab containing nearly an equal population will become another province in which the Muslims will form an overwhelming majority. He has said that ‘the proposal for the partition of the Punjab is a concrete demand which has the backing of the Sikh community who desire that it should be implemented forthwith.’

It is a pity that the Sikhs did not formulate this proposal while the Cabinet Mission was here. At that time, they insisted that the Punjab should not be divided, lest the Sikh community should find itself dismembered. They were content with some special safeguards guaranteed by a Central Union Government. It is true that the present demand for a partition is a reaction to the proposal for Grouping. The Sikhs who are four millions and constitute 14 per cent of the Punjab will be reduced to 11 per cent in the North Western Group contemplated in the Cabinet Mission plan. This reduction of status combined with the existence of two Governments in both of which the Muslims will be a dominant majority is naturally calculated to alarm the Sikhs regarding their future. Better results may, however, be achieved by dividing the present Punjab into three parts. In the seven districts of Amblala, Hisar, Rohtak, Gurgaon, Karnal, Simla and Kangra, the Hindus are 39.4 lakhs out of a total of 56 lakhs. The Muslims will be only 22 per cent while the Sikhs will be in a negligible minority of 2.5 lakhs. On the other hand, in the 17 North-western districts of the Punjab, Muslims will have a 75 per cent majority. It is in the six districts of Jullundur, Ludhiana, Ferozepore, Hoshiarpore, Amritsar and Gurdaspur that no community is in a majority. Their total population of 71 lakhs will consist of 30.8 lakhs Muslims, 21.5 lakhs Sikhs and 16.3 lakhs Hindus. This is the tri-communal area of the Punjab for which a special constitution preventing domination by any one community can be devised. In order, however, that this division may be acceptable to the Muslims, the new Hindu and tri-communal provinces of the Punjab must voluntarily agree to go into the North-Western Group and co-operate in the evolution of a proper Group constitution which will preserve and extend to the other provinces of the Group all the present advantages of a united Punjab while securing to the Hindu and Sikh populations a valuable measure of autonomy. In the Group as a whole, the Muslim will be in a majority, and they will, therefore, have nothing to fear by the new rearrangement. At the same time, the present bitter conflict due to a bare Muslim majority in the present province of Punjab would be amicably resolved.
Towards Freedom: 1947

The Cabinet Mission plan is based on the integrity of the existing provinces. So any kind of arrangement of boundaries can be undertaken only on the basis of the consent of all the parties concerned. If the Sikhs are earnest about securing a position of equality with the other two communities in the region where they are most concentrated, they should revise their plan on a rational basis in the interest of the object they have in view. If this is done, we do not think the Congress will raise any objection even to the Grouping. A similar approach to the problems of Bengal and Assam may prove to be the most practicable solution of the present differences between the Congress and the League. The Hindus of Bengal and Assam may waive their objection to the North-Eastern Grouping if the 11 districts of Bengal in which the Hindus are in a majority can be constituted into an autonomous province which, as well as Assam, will be given an honourable status within the Group. In the Punjab and Bengal, it is the possibility of a double domination both in the province and the Group, that is the root cause of opposition. Whatever agreement there may be regarding the procedure to be followed in the Sections, no constitution which enforces this double domination over millions of unwilling people can function. Just as the limitation of Union subjects and the vesting of all other subjects including residuary powers in the provinces was considered the best way of reconciling the need for Indian unity with Muslim apprehensions of cultural domination, a sub-division of the Punjab and Bengal so as to give the Hindus and the Sikhs effective cultural autonomy while preserving the economic unity of these regions may be the best way to reconcile the conflict between Grouping and provincial autonomy.
4. Demands for Adequate Safeguards

Telegram from Basant Singh to J.B. Kripalani, 10 January 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-17 KWI/1946, NMML.

INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT
LAHORE 4 22 ACHARYA KRIPLANI CONGRESS PRESIDENT NEW DELHI FULFIL CONGRESS COMMITMENTS AND ASSURANCES FOR ADEQUATE SAFEGUARDS FOR SIKHS = BASANT SINGH SECRETARY PRATINIDHI PANTHIC BOARD AMRITSAR =

5. ‘League to Blame if It Does Not Enter Constituent Assembly’
The Tribune, 18 January 1947

From Our Special Representative
LAHORE, 17 Jan.—'In the event of the Muslim League not agreeing to come into the Constituent Assembly even now, the Sikhs would support the Indian National Congress in whatever line of action it may decide upon to take so far as the work of the Constituent Assembly is concerned.' Thus observed the two Sikh representatives in the Constituent Assembly, Sardar Ujjal Singh and Giani Kartar Singh, President of the Shiromani Akali Dal in the course of their talk with pressmen at a social gathering at the 'Stiffles' this evening. The function had been arranged in their honour by Sardar Harcharan Singh Bajwa, a prominent Akali leader and this provided an opportunity to the Akali leaders to express their views on the question of their attitude towards the future of the Constitution Assembly and their own demands regarding the right of veto in matters affecting the Sikhs, a right similar to the one which the British Cabinet Mission has given in their statement of 16 May to the Hindus and the Muslims who have been described as the two of the four major minorities—the other two being the Sikhs and the Scheduled Caste.

The two Akali leaders contended that even though they wished so much that the Congress had not passed its Delhi Resolution of 6 January, 1947, yet they were not going to withdraw their co-operation which they had decided upon to give to the Congress in the Constituent Assembly. They had been co-operating with the Congress and they would continue giving that co-operation.

League Will Be at Fault

Sardar Ujjal Singh and Giani Kartar Singh maintained that the Muslim League should join the Constituent Assembly now and one expected that it would do so, so that the historic Constituent Assembly may as a result of the joint efforts of all evolve an agreed constitution of India. If, however, the League would not decide to come into the Constituent Assembly even now it will be their fault and not of the Congress at all. League had been given sufficient time and opportunity to reconsider their position and the work of the Constituent Assembly must therefore, now proceed when it reassembles on 20 January. The work before the Constituent Assembly said the two speakers when it re-assembles will be, the consideration of Pandit Nehru's resolution, the formation of the Minorities Advisory Committee, Steering Committee, and Union Powers Committee. The Constituent Assembly had already waited for 'absent friends' to come even though every one wanted to proceed uninterrupted with the task of the Constituent Assembly.
Sikhs’ Claim

The two Sardars referring to the Sikhs’ position asserted that the Sikhs wanted for themselves a similar ‘right of veto’ so far as the matters affecting them were concerned as had been given to the Hindu and Muslim minorities. By this right of veto, as it had been described, nothing more was being asked than that ‘nothing affecting the Sikhs should be decided upon without the consent of the Sikhs themselves.’ This right, they were asking to be given to the Sikhs in the Punjab and N-WFP section even though they would not insist upon such a right being given to them so far as the Centre was concerned. That right of veto, maintained the two Sikh leaders, must be given to the Sikhs leaders, must be given to the Sikhs before it is decided that the Sections should sit separately.

Both of them reviewed hurriedly the sequence of events which led to the lifting of the boycott by the Sikhs of the Constituent Assembly and pointed out that it was in view of the assurances given to them by the Congress and its leaders, by the Secretary of State and Sir Stafford Cripps that the Sikhs ultimately decided to give a trial to the Constituent Assembly and decided to enter it. Their position was that they were there so far as they were able to safeguard the Sikh rights and claims in the constitution-making. They, however, made it clear that in case they are not able to secure the Sikh rights and claims which at present was the getting of the ‘right of veto’, they would stand by the resolution of the Panthic Pratinidhi Board, whose directive was to withdraw from the Constituent Assembly in that event.

How to Resolve Deadlock

Giani Kartar Singh who was fully supported by Sardar Ujjal Singh added that they had been told, and rightly so, that communal deadlocks might be created as a result of the veto power given to the major minorities. In order that such communal deadlocks may be resolved, said the two Akali leaders, they were prepared for any machinery being set up even now which could be employed for the purpose of resolving the deadlock when and if one is created. In this connection they referred to the method of arbitration being one form of the machinery for such a purpose and they said that the Sikhs would be willing to abide by any decision made either by the Arbitration Board or any other machinery which might be set up by the Constituent Assembly.

Minority Advisory Committee

The two Sikh representatives in the Constituent Assembly explained their second demand which they said, must be conceded also. This demand was that in the Minorities Advisory Committee the Sikhs who were one of the four Major Minorities should be given their full representation. By ‘full representation’ the Sikh leaders meant—‘almost equal representation.’ This ‘full representation’ was further explained by the Sikh leaders as being nine or ten Sikhs in an Advisory Committee of 50 which number they visualized would be the number of the Minorities Advisory Committee.

In this connection while asking for ‘full representation’ for the Sikhs the two Sikh leaders made a very important and significant suggestion when they said that the President of the Minorities Advisory Committee should be a person of a very high and commanding personality. In this connection when they were asked if they could name any such person, they said that they would like that the President of the Minorities Advisory Committee should be a person of the highest integrity like Mahatma Gandhi?
A journalist: Is there any other person of the highest integrity like that of Mahatma Gandhi.

The two Sikh leaders replying said: that they wanted to suggest the name of Mahatma Gandhi himself for being made the chairman of the Minorities Advisory Committee whose appointment as such would result in the solution of many difficulties.

6. Sikhs Demand Safeguards in Face of Muslim Domination

Record of Henderson’s Conversation with Tara Singh, 19 January 1947

_ TOP, Vol. IX, p. 513._

Stated that the Sikhs had strong fears of Muslim domination. They desired some safeguard in Section B such as had been provided at the Centre in respect of major communal differences. Sikhs would then willingly co-operate in the work of the Section. I asked him whether if no such safeguard was given whether they would refuse to enter into the Section. He said that it was doubtful that they would, although they might take a decision to enter the Section in order to state their case reserving their freedom to leave subsequently.

He stated that if British bayonets were not here the Sikhs would revolt and seek to prevent Muslim domination by seeking control of the Province themselves.

They might as an alternative by the use of force agree to the division of the Province, but only as a last solution. Provided there was no risk of Muslim domination they preferred to keep the Province as at present constituted, but this [was] dependent, as he had already stated, upon the provision of adequate safeguards, and required inter-communal co-operation. If the safeguard for which they asked were given, they would willingly co-operate with the other communities in running the Provincial administration.

He indicated the possibility of a visit to England in order to put the Sikh case to the British public.

7. Hindus and Sikhs to Oppose Pakistan Together

Resolution Passed by the Working Committee of the All India Hindu Mahasabha, 8 March 1947

_AIHM Papers, File No. C-155, NMML._

A meeting of the Working Committee of the All India Hindu Mahasabha was held on 8th March 1947 at Hindu Mahasabha Bhawan, Reading Road New Delhi, at 3-30 p.m. under the Presidentship of Sree L.B. Bhopatkar.

The following members were present:

The Committee discussed for four hours the implications of the announcement made by the His Majesty’s Government on 20th February ’47 and ultimately a Committee was formed consisting of Mr N.C. Chatterji, Sjt B.G. Khaparde, Sree Ashutosh Lahiry, Sjt V.G. Deshpande and Sree Panchanatham to draft a resolution on the subject. The Committee adjourned till 10 a.m. on the 9th March ’47.
The Working Committee reassembled on 9th March '47 at 10 a.m. and sat for two hours. Besides the general political situation the Committee also considered the Punjab situation and ultimately the following resolutions were adopted:

'PUNJAB RESOLUTIONS':

1. This meeting of the Working Committee of the All India Hindu Mahasabha noted with grave concern the province wide riots in the whole of Punjab resulting in massacre of Hindus and Sikhs in large numbers and immense loss of Hindu and Sikh property worth several crores of rupees. This meeting further notes that these riots were brought about by a combination of the Agents of the Bureaucracy and Muslim League in order to terrorize the Hindus and Sikhs so that they may give up their agitation against Pakistan. The Working Committee learnt with pain that the Police which is predominantly Muslim in character has shown communal bias and has been responsible for the numerous innocent Hindus and Sikhs. The Punjab Government having failed to discharge its primary obligation of maintaining peace and order and of giving adequate protection to the minorities the Working Committee calls upon the Central Government to intervene and take the necessary steps to suppress lawlessness and to prevent its further spread.

2. The Working Committee congratulates the Hindus and Sikhs of the Punjab for having built up a common Anti-Pakistan Front sinking all difference of opinion and creeds and assures them of its whole-hearted support in their struggle against Pakistan.

3. The Working Committee calls upon the Hindus and Sikhs of India to observe the 23rd of March as the Punjab Day as a mark of their sympathy with the sufferings of the Hindu and Sikh brethren of Punjab and request the Provincial Sabha to take necessary steps in this direction.

The Working Committee of the All India Hindu Mahasabha is of opinion that except for the statement that the transference of power to responsible Indian hands will be effected by a date not later than June 1948 the whole of the announcement of His Majesty’s Government of 20th February is vague and is likely to lead to unrest and strife in India. The recent announcement militates against the previous statement and declarations of the British Statesmen to keep intact the geographical integrity of India, the finding of the Cabinet delegation that there is almost universal desire for the unity of India and His Majesty Government’s avowed declaration of its intention not to allow a ‘minority to place their veto on the advance of the majority’.

This Working Committee calls upon His Majesty’s Government to transfer power and responsibility to a strong and independent Central Government which can effectively control the destinies of whole of India (Akhand Hindusthan).

The declaration of His Majesty’s Government that the differences among Indian parties ‘are preventing the Constituent Assembly from functioning as it was intended that it should’ that it is the essence of the plan that the Assembly should be fully representative and that His Majesty’s Government had agreed to recommend to Parliament a constitution worked out in accordance with the proposals made therein by a fully representative Constituent Assembly imply that His Majesty’s Government will not be prepared to recommend to Parliament any constitution drafted by the present Constituent Assembly. The Working Committee consider that in making these statements His Majesty’s Government are pursuing the old Imperial policy of keeping India divided and these statements and their implications give a direct incitement to those who are putting obstacles in the way of India in achieving her freedom by deliberately keeping out of the Constituent Assembly. The qualifications and restrictions put by His Majesty's Government are calculated to impede the transfer of power in a peaceful and orderly fashion from Britain to India.

The Hindu Mahasabha is strongly and categorically opposed to the alternative envisaged by the Cabinet declaration, namely, transfer of powers to the Provincial Governments with regard to areas which are not now fully represented in the Constituent Assembly owing to their own perversity. His Majesty's Government's statement is a definite encouragement to the Muslim League to stay out of the Constituent Assembly. The League is indirectly assured of getting Sovereign Pakistan States in the Muslim majority provinces. This is a direct incitement to disruptionists to persist in the unreasonable attitude of continued non-co-operation in the constructive effort of constitution making for the whole of India.

The Hindu Mahasabha appreciates the wisdom of the Rulers of those Hindu States who have expressed their concurrence to participate in the deliberations of the Constituent Assembly inspite of all incitement to the contrary.

This Working Committee urges the Constituent Assembly to courageously proceed with the completion of their task and to frame a constitution on the principle of one man one vote for the whole of India which would provide for a strong centre and demand transfer of all power and responsibility from His Majesty's Government to that Central Government. Having regard to the attitude of the Moslem League and His Majesty's Government's latest announcement the Constituent Assembly should not longer feel bound by the restrictions imposed upon it by the Cabinet Mission scheme and the Assembly should frame a constitution irrespective of any artificial groups and sections and without conceding any right to any part of India to remain outside Indian Union.

The recent deplorable and tragic events both in Bengal and in the Punjab indicate the incitement to Pakistan and the attempt to impose a communal domination upon the Hindus and the Sikhs would accelerate civil strife and would lead to cleavage and chaos and bloodshed if it is not the desire of the British to forcibly disrupt India's unity and integrity then it is her paramount and sacred duty not to permit the splitting up of India into warring zones and conflicting province but to liquidate British Rule with honour to herself and lasting benefit to India's millions by substituting a strong Central Government in a Pan Indian Union in place of the present British Power and the attributes of Sovereignty should be vested in that Government.

It will be immoral and unconstitutional to impose Pakistan on millions of Hindus in Bengal and millions of Sikhs and Hindus in the Punjab and Frontier, Sind and Bilochistan against their wishes and to imperil their culture and their religion and their political economic and civic rights. The Hindus mass prepare themselves throughout the country to organize an effective opposition to Pakistan.

This Working Committee calls upon all sections and classes of Hindus and Sikhs to sink their differences and to establish Anti-Pakistan Front throughout the country irrespective of party and political affiliations.
8. Division of Punjab

Extracts from the Resolution Passed by the Congress Working Committee, 8 March 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-43/1947, NMML.

During the past seven months India has witnessed many horrors and tragedies which have been enacted in the attempt to gain political ends by brutal violence, murder and coercion. These attempts have failed, as all such attempts must fail, and have only led to greater violence and carnage.

The Punjab, which had thus far escaped this contagion, became six weeks ago the scene of an agitation, supported by some people in high authority, to coerce and break a popular ministry which could not be attacked by Constitutional methods. A measure of success attended this, and an attempt was made to form a ministry dominated by the group that had led the agitation. This was bitterly resented and has resulted in increased and widespread violence. There has been an orgy of murder and arson and Amritsar and Multan have been scenes of horror and devastation.

These tragic events have demonstrated that there can be no settlement of the problem in the Punjab by violence and coercion, and that no arrangement based on coercion can last. Therefore it is necessary to find a way out which involved the least amount of compulsion. This would necessitate a division of the Punjab into two provinces, so that the predominantly Muslim part may be separated from the predominantly non-Muslim part.

The Working Committee commend this solution, which should work to the advantage of all the communities concerned, and lessen friction and fear and suspicion of each other. The Committee earnestly appeals to the people of the Punjab to put an end to the killing and brutality that are going on, and to face the tragic situation, determined to find a solution which does not involve compulsion of any major group and which will effectively remove the causes of friction.

9. ‘Meet at Round Table Conference—Punjab Problem’

The Tribune, 11 March 1947.

LAHORE, 10 March.—As an obvious reaction to the Congress High Command’s ‘Divide Punjab’ declaration, Mr Firoz Khan Noon, a Muslim League leader, attempted on Monday an approach to the Sikhs by urging that ‘the time has certainly arrived when Sikhs and Muslims should sit round a table to find a solution to their political problems.’

‘I am almost certain’, he declared in an interview to the Press in Lahore, ‘that if these two could agree, the Punjab Hindus would welcome this pleasant change in the political atmosphere. What we want is peace and prosperity for the Punjab, a province which is the homeland of Hindus, Sikhs and Muslims, all combined together. We have lived here for centuries and we must live together.’

The Muslim League leader said: ‘If there is a strong and independent demand from a majority of Sikhs for a division of the Punjab, they will find that there will be a good response from the Muslim side for satisfying their legitimate aspirations.’

‘It appears that the Congress Working Committee in Delhi have passed a resolution demanding a partition of the Punjab in the belief that the Punjab Mussalmans will dislike the idea and accept Akhand Hindusthan at the Centre. The Sikhs interests seemed to have had little influence in this decision.

‘Lahore Division, with a population of seven million, has four million Muslims in its six districts. Amritsar district itself, where the most sacred Sikh temple is situated, is predominantly Muslim, particularly if the Tarn Taran tehsil is taken out of the district, Amritsar town itself has a Muslim majority.

‘The rivers, irrigation systems, hydro-electric schemes and the Sikh holy places in the Western Punjab, not to mention the rich Sikh colonies in Montgomery, Lyallpur and Sargodha districts, seem to have played no part in the Congress decision. The Sikhs even in the Eastern Punjab will not be more than 33 per cent, the Muslims and the Hindus each being the same.

‘Thinking Sikhs already know that if there is a partition of this nature, the Sikhs in the Eastern Punjab will in due course be absorbed in the Congress party, who have already captured nine Sikh seats in the Punjab out of 33. The obvious implication is that the Congress by this partition of the Punjab are hoping that this proposed Eastern Punjab State will become part and parcel of Akhand Hindusthan. But it must not be overlooked that this proposed Eastern Punjab State, where the Sikhs and the Muslims together will constitute a majority may join the “B” Group.’

Mentioning some of the ‘alternatives’, he said: ‘The suggestion was put forward on behalf of some Sikh thinkers that the Punjab as it stands today should be a separate sovereign State allied to neither Akhand Hindustan nor to Pakistan.

‘Another suggestion that has been mooted is that the Punjab should be with the B Group, but that the Sikhs should have certain guarantees provided in the constitution and enforceable by a new Federal Court in the B Group, to be set up for this and other purposes.

‘It is also suggested that in this case the Muslims could have no objection in the following:

‘The Sikhs could be taught the Gurmukhi language if the majority of Sikh legislators so desire. The precedent exists in Switzerland, where French, German and Swiss are taught in their schools.

‘The Sikh share in the education grant could be handed over to a Sikh educational council as in the case of Washington, DC, where 33 per cent of the Negro population were receiving one-third of the total education grant in 1937.

‘We could also provide in the constitution that in matters connected with the Sikh religion, law of inheritance, customary and other personal laws, the majority Sikh vote shall prevail.

‘The Sikhs could also be given a completely Sikh public services commission to select Sikhs for the public services.

‘We could also provide that our newly set up Federal Court should have the right to dismiss any servant newly appointed when not entitled to hold that post in accordance with the quotas fixed for the various communities.

‘Another suggestion which has been examined is that if the predominantly Sikh areas wish to go under an adjoining Punjab, Sikh State, they should be allowed to do so.’—APA
10. ‘This Partition Racket’

We return to the Congress resolution on the partition of the Punjab because of a statement made by the Congress President at Madras on Sunday. Congress, he said, wants a United India, but ‘if that is not possible and if people must murder each other, then the Working Committee recommend the division of the Punjab into two provinces.’ Mr Kripalani went on to say that Congress would also demand the partition of Bengal ‘if conditions are the same in Bengal.’ What is significant in these remarks is that in the case of Hindus and Sikhs Congress readily accepts partition in order to ‘save’ them from Muslim majorities, but when it is a question of saving Muslims, the Congress would not agree even to the establishment of large pockets of Muslim population within a province. This is the attitude which the Congress Ministry in Bihar has adopted. Although so many thousands of Muslims have perished in a manner now known to the whole world and although the best means of ensuring the safety of Muslim minorities in that land of communal lunatics is to concentrate the Muslim population in fair-sized pockets, the Congress has resolutely refused to countenance it. The casualties and losses suffered by Hindus and Sikhs in the Punjab, where incidentally the biter seems to have ended by being bitten, have so unnerved these pseudopatriots that they have hastily revised their earlier attitude to ‘vivisection’; but the far greater losses suffered by Muslims in Bihar leave them so unmoved that they decline even to concentrate Bihar’s Muslim population in areas within the province itself.

As for the new stunt of partitioning Bengal, it is even more senseless than the proposal to divide the Punjab into halves. Bengal’s Hindus are themselves strongly opposed to it except for a few who have other axes to grind. In Bengal as at present constituted the Hindus are an effective and powerful minority and the great majority of them, we imagine, would not be so foolish as to throw away this position at the instigation of non-Bengalee Hindus whose contempt for the ‘Bengalee Babu’ is traditional. This talk of partition of provinces, however, is only an academic irritant introduced into the situation by the Hindu High Command and cannot be regarded as a practical proposition worthy of serious notice. Apart from the fact that Muslims would not yield an inch of their homeland, who is to decide on partition and carry it out? The British Government have already declared that they are no longer going to interfere in internal issues whose solution the Indian parties must themselves find by agreement if possible. It there is no agreement the British will transfer power to certain PROVINCES or Combined Government for those provinces. The question of a ‘part’ of a province or ‘partitioning’ a province no longer falls within the initiative of the British who will take the provinces as they are. Mr Kripalani and other members of the Congress Working Committee will do well to read more carefully the speech of Sir Stafford Cripps in course of the Commons debate.

11. Strong Opposition to Division of Punjab
B.S. Moonje’s Interview with Globe, 11 March 1947
B.S. Moonje Papers, S. No. 112, NMML.

Dr Moonje was asked a question—What have you to say to the proposal of dividing the Punjab, so that the claim and quarrels of the Moslems on one side and of the Hindu–Sikhs on the other be satisfactorily settled?
Dr Moonje replied—I have been always opposed to the idea of division of Maharaja Ranjit Singh's Punjab. There was some such proposal by some Hindus when I was in the Round Table Conference, London. But I was deadly opposed to it. Even now I am similarly dead opposed to the idea and why? It is supposed that such division will satisfy the Moslems? Will it stop the hooliganism? No. It is a terrible mistake to suppose that it will lead to peace and tranquillity. The ambition to be a Ruler and to be called His Majesty no community can shed when developed unless and until it is actually killed by a fight. In view of what has happened a few months ago in Bengal and is at present happening in Punjab, who can say that the proposal of divide Punjab and Bengal, even if agreed to by the Hindus, will satisfy the ambition of sovereignty implicit in Pakistan? If not, then where is the wisdom of the Hindus and the Sikhs surrendering and succumbing to hooliganism?

Will not the British Government, then, transfer their sovereignty separately to Punjab and Bengal where there is Moslem predominance and thus lead to division of India?

Dr Moonje replied—What do you mean by predominance? Will the Moslem majority of a few per cent and that too of doubtful existence be interpreted as Moslem predominance? One can understand predominance when the population ratio is 70 or 75 per cent? If that be the criterion with the Congress, then possibly the Punjab may be divided along the line of Jhelum but not along the Ravi River and the predominantly Moslem Bengal will be circumscribed into a small handful province between west Bengal and Assam. Will the Moslems agree? They will certainly not. Then where is the advantage if the Hindus and the Sikhs were to give out and proclaim their committal beforehand? Besides where is now the British Government to divide? The Present Interim Govt, in its policy of appeasement, of the Moslem League, will not have the courage boldness to divide.

Thus, on the whole, it will be wise to stick out for Akhand Hindusthan, being prepared boldly to face whatever bloodshed, rapine, loot, arson and what not would come in the offing just as in China, France and Germany. Peace will eventually come and all controversy will then be settled.

12. ‘Words to the Sikhs’

Extracts from an Editorial from Dawn, 18 March 1947.

...This new stunt of partition of the Punjab is ostensibly intended as a sop to the Sikhs in order to keep them tied to the Congress chariot wheel. But a little reflection should convince the Sikhs that if they consent to this proposal they will be selling their birthright in the Punjab to the Hindus for a mess of worthless pottage. Quite apart from the fact that Congress leaders like Mr Gandhi and Mr Sarat Bose have strongly opposed the partition of either Bengal or the Punjab and that Muslims will in any event resist the proposal to the last, what would the Sikhs gain if a number of Punjab's eastern districts were to be constituted into a separate province? The Sikhs will form 17.5 per cent of the population, Muslims 32.6 per cent and Hindus about 50 per cent. The Sikhs will thus remain a hopeless minority in the new province, even if created, and the dominant majority will be the Hindus....

The Sikh leaders who are allowing themselves to be used as pawns in the Hindu bid for supremacy seem also to forget that once their community has served the Hindu cause and helped the Hindus to secure a little more territory for Akhand Hindustan, the Hindus will appear in their true colours and not only subject the Sikhs to political domination but also to the process of assimilation for which Hinduism has been well known through the ages. Pandit Nehru in his book The Discovery of India proudly refers to the assimilative capacity of Hinduism which he describes in the language of a British writer as ‘infinitely absorbent like the ocean’. With obvious satisfaction the Pandit writes: ‘It is odd to think of India with her caste system and exclusiveness having this astonishing inclusive capacity to absorb foreign races and cultures’, and he goes into ecstacies over ‘the wonderful assimilative power of Hinduism’. When the Sikhs have finished fighting for the Hindus, shedding their blood to further Hindu ambitions and casting their dead on the ‘battle fields’ to establish a new Hindu Empire, their job will have been done and they will themselves be cast aside. Then, in the small new province adjoining the Hindu stronghold of the United Provinces—assuming that such a province does materialize—the Sikhs will be taught new lessons in ‘democracy’. They will be told that a minority of 17 or 20 per cent is always a minority and must be content with a minority’s position. Lulled by the siren voice of the Congress Master Tara Singh may today hug illusions of a ‘Khalistan’ in which the Hindu population of 50 per cent will render homage to the Panth and accept the leadership of the Sikh minority, but his grandchildren and their children will reap the bitter fruits of his illusion. The Hindus will doubtless be generous towards the Sikhs in allowing them to serve as soldiers in the Army, as personal body guards, motor drivers, artisans and in other capacities calling for brawn and sturdy labour, and possibly as contractors, but they will never allow the Sikhs or any other section of Indians, which refuses to merge its identity in the ‘absorbent ocean’ of Hinduism, to rule over them or even to share equal power with them in any part of Hindustan.

The Sikh leaders will do well to reflect on these stark realities and desist from their present suicidal policy. When master Tara Singh marched at the head of a Lahore procession with a naked sword in his hand he may have forgotten Mr Patel’s Meerut dictum that the sword is always met by the sword, but the deplorable event that followed in the wake of that procession should have convinced him that by far the best course for the Sikhs was to sheathe the sword and substitute in its place sweet reasonableness.

13. Problems and Prospects of Partition in the Punjab

Letter from Janki Nath to S.P. Mookerjee, 19 March 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Installment II to IV, Subject File No. 95, Pt. I, NMML.

Tribune Office,
Lahore,
19th March, 1947.

Respected Sir,

Before writing to you some-thing about the Punjab situation drawing your kind attention to certain important and immediate problems to be solved, I must congratulate you on your single handed effort to create a strong opinion for the division of Bengal. With a man of your determination at the helm we are bound to succeed. You must have seen the marked change of the tone and attitude of the Muslims in general after the division of Bengal and Punjab was advocated by the Hindus of Bengal and Punjab.

The attitude of the so-called Nationalist Muslim organizations like the Majlisi Ahrar, Ulemai Hind, Shia Conference and others to the division of the Punjab and Bengal clearly exposes them. None of these organizations has any hold on the Muslims and yet they influence our line of action. They support a week centre with parity for the Muslims and Hindus and strong provincial governments, thus envisaging strong Punjab and strong Bengal separating from the Indian Union at any future time. They are worse than Jinnah and are like snakes in the sleeve. They say that they do not want the division of India on the basis of religion and want a united India but does the division of Bengal or the Punjab pre-suppose Pakistan or vivisection of India. We should not give up the demand for the division of Bengal and Punjab unless the Muslims concede joint electorates and the two provinces agree to a strong centre ultimately responsible for the peace and tranquillity of the provinces as well. It is strange that the Congress leaders like Mr Sarat Chander Bose oppose the demand although they have been able to do pretty little for the Hindu minorities in either Bengal or the Punjab.

I need not relate to you the woeful plight of the Hindus and Sikhs in the western Punjab and NWF Province. The Muslims have killed and rendered homeless thousands and burnt villages in hundreds. In short the worst that the Muslims League could do has been done. There is, however, one aspect of the present situation which has impelled me to write to you and encroach upon your precious time. I hope in view of the urgency of the matter no time will be lost in moving in the matter. There being no Hindu leader in the Punjab who commands universal respect, it is the Sikhs under the lead of Master Tara Singh who can help. Though the Congress has united the Hindus yet the leaders are divided against each other and all are working under the leadership of Mr Saif-ud-Din Kitchlew and hence nothing can be expected of them.

I have already written to you that on the Basis of population the Hindus and Sikhs can claim three-fourths of the Lahore division in addition to Ambala and Jullundur divisions, but so far as the Lahore division is concerned our weakness is that we are slightly in a minority except in Amritsar district. The position in Lahore division excluding Amritsar district is as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Dist</th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Non-Muslims</th>
<th>Margin.</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Lahore</td>
<td>10,27,772</td>
<td>6,67,603</td>
<td>3,60,169</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gurdaspur</td>
<td>5,89,923</td>
<td>5,63,008</td>
<td>26,335</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sialkot</td>
<td>7,39,218</td>
<td>4,51,279</td>
<td>2,87,939</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gujranwala</td>
<td>6,42,706</td>
<td>2,69,528</td>
<td>3,73,178</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Sheikhupura</td>
<td>5,42,344</td>
<td>3,10,164</td>
<td>2,32,180</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

It is clear from the above figures that in some of the above districts especially Lahore and Gurdaspur districts we could easily retrieve our position provided we act judiciously. The Muslims have facilitated our job. If the Hindu and Sikh leaders persuade the displaced villagers from Multan and Rawalpindi division as also from the affected areas of the Frontier province to come and settle in Lahore and Gurdaspur districts and even if we succeed in bring 6 or 7 lakhs of Hindus we can easily turn tables against the Muslims in both the above districts. The sins of Muslims will recoil on their heads. If we allow the Congress to take the lead, they will simply send back these villagers to their own villages leaving them permanently in the jaws of death and leaving a permanent Hindu Sikh minority in the Pakistan zone. The Hindus and Sikhs in these areas have already been considerably eradicated and this is the time to settle these people in the Central Punjab.

The reason for this action on our part should be obvious. Apart from the key and historical position that Lahore holds, Hindus have a great stake in the city. Their stake runs to thousands of crores and if they but spend a few crores they will save a lot for themselves. I may here say that there is a lot of scope for the absorption of lakhs of Hindus and Sikhs in these areas and I can give you a perfect picture as to how to settle and absorb these refugees if you feel that my suggestion is feasible and practicable. If the Muslims can ask the Bihari Muslims in their lakhs to move to different provinces like Sind and Bengal surely the Hindus with vast resources can do the job and make the position of Muslims in the Lahore and Gurdaspur districts untenable.
Towards Freedom: 1947

If we do not move in time, the Congress will take the initiative and persuade the remnants of the Hindus and Sikhs to go back to their districts where they will ultimately be engulfed by huge Muslim majorities.

With respects,

Yours respectfully,

Ex-Secretary to Raja Narendra Nath,

Shriyut Dr Shyama Prashad Mookerji,
Sir Asotosh Mukerji Road, Calcutta.

14. Gandhi Opposes Partition

Letter from M.K. Gandhi to Jawaharlal Nehru, 20 March 1947

I would like you...to tell me what you can about the Punjab tragedy. I know nothing about it save what is allowed to appear in the Press which I thoroughly distrust. Nor am I in sympathy with what may be termed by the old expression of ‘hush hush policy’. It is amazing how the country is adopting almost the very measures which it criticized during the British administration. Of course, I know the reason behind it. It makes no appeal to me.

---

I have long intended to write to you asking you about the Working Committee resolution on the possible partition of the Punjab. I would like to know the reason behind it. I have to speak about it. I have done so in the absence of full facts with the greatest caution. Kripalani said in answer to a question in Madras that it was possible that the principle might be applied to Bengal also. I was asked by a Muslim Leaguer of note...if it was applicable to the Muslim-majority provinces, why it should not be so to a Congress-majority province like Bihar. I think I did not know the reason behind the Working Committee’s resolution, nor had I the opportunity. I could only give my own view which was against any partition based on communal grounds and the two-nation theory. Anything was possible by compulsion. But willing consent required an appeal to reason and heart. Compulsion or show of it had no place in voluntariness.

15. Support for Partition of Punjab

Report by the Information and Broadcasting Department, New Delhi, 22 March 1947

Master Tara Singh the Sikh leader at a press conference in New Delhi on 21st March reiterated according to API, ‘We shall not join any ministry which is dominated by the Muslim League’. He said: There are two alternative plans. One is if there is a change in the composition of the Punjab Assembly on a basis of thirty per cent seats for Hindus and Sikhs each and forty percent for Muslims, it does not matter who the premier is. ‘If we cannot get that constitutional change then in the present set-up the premier must be either a Sikh or a Hindu’.

Master Tara Singh agreed in principle with the partition scheme (see note below) but his final agreement would depend on the boundaries. He was anxious that the Sikhs—or at least the major portion of them—should not be divided under any partition scheme.

He said the Sapru Committee had approved the principle that there should not be a majority of a single community in the Punjab. ‘I would advise coalition governments in all parts of India just as at the Centre’.

Master Tara Singh felt the Punjab Disturbed Areas Act had been enacted too late. ‘Probably it has been promulgated to prevent retaliation’, he said. He was anxious that power to shoot at sight should be given to the military only. ‘The Punjab police is finished. It is divided into communal compartments’, remarked Master Tara Singh adding Muslims were in an overwhelming majority in the Punjab police.

Master Tara Singh said if no settlement could be arrived at he would prefer the continuation of Section 93 of the Government of India Act. Under Section 93 the position will remain as it is; if Muslim League rule is established it will be worse, he said.

NOTE
Reports of what has been described as a Zonal Autonomy Plan for the Punjab has been published in the press which attributed the authorship of the plan to Pandit Nehru, but his authorship is not confirmed. According to the New Delhi correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore the plan envisages a regional administrative system which can be given effect to under section 59 of the Government of India Act of 1935 which empowers a Governor to distribute portfolios for the administration as he chooses.

Under this plan, says the correspondent Ambala and Jullunder Divisions will be grouped into an eastern zone and placed in charge of three Ministers—one Hindu, one Sikh and one Muslim. The western zone, consisting of Multan and Rawalpindi Divisions will be governed by two Muslim and one Sikh Ministers. The Lahore Division will be a joint zone under one Muslim and one Hindu Minister. The ratio indicated provides a rough idea of cabinet ministers balanced between the majority and the minorities and is amenable to alteration and adjustment.

The correspondent continues: except for matters concerning finance and irrigation, Ministers in each zone shall enjoy complete autonomy. While the plan guarantees full protection to minorities it also envisages a Muslim premier and limits the Cabinet’s power to finance and irrigation affairs. The plan will endeavour to maintain the unity of the Punjab; but if need be it will provide a basis for partition; each part having its own cabinet responsible to a legislature and a Governor without affecting the set up of the present Legislative Assembly’s structure.
B. Bengal

1. Rights and Safeguards for Hindu Minority of East Bengal

Letter from D.N. Banerjee to S.P. Mookerjee, 17 February 1947

S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Correspondence with D.N. Banerjee, Installment II to IV, NMML.

20, Umesh Datta Road
Bakshi Bazar, Dacca.

D.N. Banerjee
HEAD OF THE DEPARTMENT OF POLITICAL SCIENCE UNIVERSITY OF DACCA.

Dear Sir,

Your letter of the 8th instant reached me on the 10th. I was then lying ill with influenza. This will explain my delay in replying to your letter. As desired by you, I am sending herewith my drafts of fundamental rights and special constitutional safeguards for the Hindu minority in Bengal. I had been thinking of publishing something on these questions when your letter came. We had some discussion on these matters at our last Political Science Conference at Delhi.

I have also indicated in the drafts my view on the question of the partition of Bengal into two Provinces. I was so long hesitant. But I am now feeling that a grave danger faces the Hindu minority in Bengal. If it is to survive these repeated onslaughts from the ‘brute majority’ and maintain an honourable existence, then it must have the special constitutional safeguards indicated in my Second list, or there must be a partition of Bengal into two provinces, East Bengal and West Bengal, within the Union of India. There is no other course left. You are, therefore, to take up the matter very seriously. A large section of Hindu public opinion here is on the side of partition. It says that there must be, at least, one safe area in Bengal for the Hindus of East Bengal to take shelter in. As it is, the Hindus are on the point of losing the whole of Bengal.

In regard to the question of the connotation of the proposed Union subjects, I shall require a little more time. This question could be best settled by an oral discussion by a few constitutional experts. As, however, there is no such opportunity for me, I shall let you know my own views as early as possible. My recent illness has interfered with my programme of work. Moreover, in our University, I have, in addition to my administrative duties as Head of a Department, to do both undergraduate and post-graduate teaching work. All this leaves very little time to me to do any other work. Still, I have been carrying on somehow. However, kindly let me know your probable address, or addresses, during the next three weeks so that I may communicate to you my views on the connotation of the proposed Union Subjects.

On the 12th instant I received a letter, along with an enclosure, from Mr Sanat Kumar Ray Chaudhury of the Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha. He also wanted my views on the question of fundamental rights, and others. I am sending him today a copy of my drafts. I think that will do.

Trust you are doing well.

With highest regards,
Yours sincerely,
D.N. Banerjee.
A. Some Typical Fundamental Rights

1. All citizens shall in all respects be equal before the law. There shall be no privilege on the ground of sex, birth, colour, creed, religion, or occupation. All citizens shall enjoy the same civil political rights, without distinction of race, language or religion.
2. There shall be full and absolute protection of life and liberty for all without any distinction of the ground of origin, nationality, language, race or religion. Exceptions to this principle may be made only in cases recognized by international law.
3. The liberty of the person shall be inviolable and no person shall be deprived of his liberty except in accordance with law duly made and promulgated. Except when taken in the act of committing an offence, no person shall be arrested without a warrant issued by a magistrate, which must be shown at the time of arrest.
4. The dwelling of each citizen shall be inviolable and shall not be forcibly entered into except in accordance with law duly made and promulgated.
5. The right of free expression of opinions and ideas by speech, writing, print, picture or other similar means, as well as the right to assemble peacefully and without arms or weapons, and to form associations or unions, shall be guaranteed to all citizens for purposes not opposed to public morality or public order. Laws regulating the manner in which the right of forming associations and the right of free assembly may be exercised, shall contain no political, religious, or class distinction.
6. Public employments shall, without distinction, be open in the same degree to all citizens, under conditions prescribed by law.
7. Within the territory of the Union of India every citizen shall be free to choose his domicile or place of residence, to change his domicile or emigrate, to choose his profession or means of livelihood, and also to transfer his property. The exercise of these rights may, however, be made subject to limitations prescribed by law in special circumstances.
8. The liberty of the Press shall be guaranteed, subject to the requirements of any law duly made for the prevention of the abuse of this liberty. The press shall not be subsidized by the state.
9. The secrecy of letters and other correspondence may be violated only in cases provided for by law.
10. No person shall be removed against his will from the jurisdiction of the Judge to whom the law assigns him. Exceptional Courts shall only be permissible in cases provided by laws promulgated before the commission of the offence.
11. No penalty shall be established or enforced except by virtue of a law.
12. No one shall be deprived of his property except for a public purpose, and in the cases and according to the forms established by law, and in consideration of a just compensation previously determined.
13. Subject to the requirements of law duly made in the interests of public morality, public safety, and public order, there shall be liberty of conscience, religious liberty, and freedom of public worship for all. No one shall be compelled to join in any manner whatever in the forms or ceremonies of any religious denomination. And all religions shall be equal before the law.

No person shall be permitted to refuse, on the ground of religious opinion, to fulfil any obligations of citizenship. Nor should religious beliefs be permitted to be pleased as a reason for non-fulfilment of public duties.
14. There shall be no ex post facto legislation. This provision shall not, however, apply to Acts of Indemnity passed for the protection of the military men, police and others in respect of unlawful acts done by them, bona fide and in the service of the country, during a time of war or during serious internal disorder or disturbances.

15. Freedom of commerce and industry shall be guaranteed throughout the Indian Union, subject to such conditions and limitations as may be prescribed by law in respect of any specific commodity or article.

16. The freedom and secrecy of elections shall be guaranteed by law. Every person in the position of an employee or workmen shall have a right to such free time as may be necessary for the exercise of his civic rights.

17. There shall be protection by law to the language, culture and traditions of all communities.

18. The sanctity and inviolability of the places of religious worship shall be guaranteed by law. Such places of religious worship shall not, however, be permitted to be used for the commission of any offence forbidden by law.

The above list of fundamental rights is not exhaustive, although fairly comprehensive. Our Constitution-makers should consider the extent to which the people of India should be allowed to keep and bear arms. In the United States of America there is no restriction in this regard, and this right is included within the Bill of Rights. Perhaps in the circumstances of India and in view of the complexity of its communal problem, there should not be any unrestricted right to keep and bear arms. At the same time, the present position in this country is not at all satisfactory. The issue of a licence for a gun or a revolver even to a highly respectable citizen depends entirely on the whims or caprices of local officials. This must be stopped.

B. Constitutional Safeguards for the Hindus Minority in Bengal in case Bengal is not divided into two Bengals, East Bengal and West Bengal, within the Union of India.

1. Any question raising a major communal issue in the Bengal Legislature shall require for its decision a majority of the representatives present and voting of each of the two major communities in Bengal, namely, the Hindu and the Muslim, as well as a majority of all the members present and voting.

(This provision has been copied, mutatis mutandis, from clause (2) of Paragraph 15 of the Cabinet Mission Declaration of 16th May, 1946. If such provision was considered necessary, obviously, in the interest of the Muslim minority in India, it is all the more necessary for the Hindu minority in Bengal).

2. There shall be joint electorates with proportional reservation of seats for different communities, in respect of elections to all legislative bodies, provincial, urban and rural.

3. There shall be a statutory composite Cabinet for the Province of Bengal. Excluding the office of Prime Minister, the number of Hindu members (including the Scheduled Caste representatives) shall be equal to the number of Muslim members on the Cabinet. Portfolios shall be equitably distributed between the Hindu and Muslim members of the Cabinet. The portfolio of law and order shall be in the hands of a Hindu Minister.

4. Fitness, to be determined by the results of competitive examinations held by competent authorities, such as the Provincial Public Service Commission, and others, should alone be the criterion of eligibility for appointment to offices. If this principle is not accepted, then at least 50 per cent of the officers in every branch of public service under the Government of Bengal shall be reserved for the members of the Hindu Community including the Scheduled Castes.

5. The Head of the Government of Bengal shall alternately be a Hindu and a Muslim. The Chief Minister shall be the leader of the Party which will command a majority in the Lower House of the Bengal Legislature in case the Legislature is made bicameral, or in the Provincial Legislative Assembly if the Legislature is made unicameral.

As there is now a very serious threat to the sense of values, culture, language, religion, and economic and political interests—nay, to the very existence, with honour and self-respect,—of the Hindu Community in Bengal, there should be started, as a regrettable necessity, an intensive agitation in the country for the partition of Bengal into two Provinces within the Union of India, namely, East Bengal and West Bengal, unless the special constitutional safeguards for the Hindu community in Bengal as shown above, are agreed to by the Muslim community in Bengal, or in India, as the case may be.

2. Mookerjee's Views on Bengal Partition

Letter from S.P. Mookerjee to St Nihal Singh, 24 February 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Correspondence with St Nihal Singh, Installment II to IV, NMML.

My dear St Nihal Singhji,

Thanks for your letter. I do not remember having kept any of your letter unanswered. I am sorry some of my letters did not reach you. I have not yet definitely supported the proposal for partitioning Bengal. But this is a matter which requires very careful consideration by Hindus of Bengal. If the majority community in Bengal refuses to concede the elementary rights of Hindus and the latter are placed at the mercy of a communal electorate controlled by the majority community we have no option but to ask for Bengal’s partition. Either Muslims must agree to live in Bengal as Bengalees or Hindus must be allowed to have their homeland comprising areas where they are in a majority. Roughly speaking Hindu Bengal will have about 2 crores and 25 lakhs population of which 75 per cent will be Hindus. Muslim Bengal also will have a population of about 3 crores and 50 lakhs of which 75 per cent are Muslims. The majority community in either province will hesitate to oppress the minority as it will constantly realize that almost the same proportion of Hindus and Muslims are living as a minority community in the two provinces concerned. Bengali Hindus also will have a chance of developing themselves in accordance with their best tradition and thereby contribute to the development of India as a whole.

This problem has become acute in view of the recent pronouncement by the British Prime Minister. There is a possibility of Bengal being made a sovereign province and handed over to the Moslem League Government when the British will withdraw in June, 1948. This means perpetual slavery for Bengali Hindus unless they can get one get of the following three things.

1. Compel Bengal to remain as part of a united India which would be governed by a strong Central Government capable of protecting the Hindu minority.
2. Compel the Bengali Muslims to live as Bengalees first and not as rank communalist and
3. divide Bengal so as to enable Hindu Bengal to be linked up with rest of India leaving Muslim Bengal to develop as she may like.

We must not be guided by emotion alone. This is a life and death question for us and if we refuse to face realities at this crisis we shall be doomed.

I am proceeding to Delhi tomorrow and shall be there for some time. If I can manage, I may come to Dehra Doon for a day from Delhi and spend some quiet hours with you. I very much look forward to meeting you and Mrs St Nihal Singh. I hope you have fully recovered now. I did not know that you were confined to bed.

My address at Delhi will—C/O Director of Agricultural Research Institute, New Pusa, Delhi.

With best wishes,

Your affly,
St Nihal Singh,

Suryasthan,
16, Nemi Road, Dehra Doon

3. Demand for Partitioning Bengal

Letter from Debendra Nath Mukherjee to S.P. Mookerjee, 25 February 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 102, Installment II to IV, NMML.

BENGAL PROVINCIAL HINDU MAHASABHA.

162, Bowbazar Street, CALCUTTA,

Dear Sir,

You are aware that a large section of Hindus in Bengal have been insistent in agitating the public mind on the question of dividing Bengal particularly for creating a separate Home-land of the Hindus for their self-expression with their language, religion and culture. They contend that Bengal as she stands to-day will remain in the hands of the Muslim League in whatever way the British may ultimately transfer their powers according to the latest statement of the British Premier. From the legislative politics and administrative actions of the League government, it is clear that they are determined to swallow the minority community in Bengal economically and culturally. It is, therefore, necessary that proper safeguards should immediately be made by the Hindus for their self-preservation.

Bengal may remain united if the Muslims in Bengal agree to:

1. Joint Electorate with reservation of seats for the minorities in proportion to their number;
2. Parity of representation of the Hindus and Muslims in the Bengal Cabinet; and
3. Allotment of the Chief Ministry to the Hindus and Muslims in alternate years; and
4. No special privilege or favouritism will be provided for the majority community under the Constitution.
5. Such other provisions as will ensure maximum good to every citizen irrespective of his faith.
But if the Muslims do not agree to these constitutional Provisions, the only other alternative left is to divide Bengal in a manner that the Hindus in contiguous areas numbering more than two crores may form a separate Province with their independent political organization. They will then, not only be able to develop their own culture and interest but also to give protection more effectively to the Hindus in East Bengal where the Muslims may number about three crores and Hindus about 70 lakhs.

Those who oppose the division of Bengal argue:

1. What was achieved by the great patriots like Sir Surendra Nath Banerjee and others after agitation for a number of years should not be undone.
2. Endeavour should be made for forming a bigger Bengal comprising Purulia, Santhal Parganas, Manbhum and Sylhet on linguistic basis. Although there may be still Muslim majority but it will be very small and if there is proper organization and consolidation of the Hindus in this Bigger Bengal, they will be able to maintain their separate entity.

To consider these views, a Conference will be held on the 15th and 16th March at the office of Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha at 162, Bowbazar Street, under the Presidentship of Dr Syamaprosad Mookerjee. You are requested to gather, meanwhile, in writing the collective opinion of your Branch Sabhas, the Bar Associations, Teachers’ Associations, Business Communities, and other interest in your district to enlighten the Conference on this question so that the Hindu Mahasabha may come to a definite conclusion of its own.

I am to state at the conclusion the Bengal Hindu Mahasabha has not officially formulated its policy on this important issue, though its members have spoken for or against it in their individual capacity.

Your presence is earnestly solicited on this occasion.

Yours faithfully,
Debendra Nath Mukherjee
General Secretary

4. Demand for a Separate Non-Muslim Province in Bengal

Petition from Some Residents of Calcutta to Vallabhbhai Patel, 12 March 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 141, Installment II to IV, NMML.

To
Hon’ble Sardar Ballabh bhai Patel
Home Member
Interim Government of India
Imperial Secretariat

NEW DELHI

Dated Calcutta, the 12th March, 1947.

Sir,

We beg to approach the Government of India with the fervent prayer that a separate Province be carved out of the Province of Bengal, by inclusion therein of the Presidency Division including Calcutta, the Burdwan Division and the districts of Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling. In the above zone the non-Muslims form a majority being over 70 per cent of the population, and the total population is about 24 millions, which is sufficient for the formation of a major province. We suggest that a Boundary Commission be appointed to include therein such other areas of the Rajshahi and Dacca Divisions which may be necessary for administrative convenience and on the ground of non-Muslim majority.

2. Our claim is not dependent on the question whether Bengal joins the Union of India or keeps out of it as an independent state. We base our claim on the democratic ground of self-determination. If however, Bengal chooses to remain within the India Union, then the separated portion of West Bengal should be placed under the Sub-Federation styled Section A in the Cabinet Mission's plan. If Bengal remains outside the Union and sub-federations are not formed then we claim to be incorporated within the Union of India.

3. It is necessary for us to explain why the people who opposed partition of Bengal forty-two years ago, are claiming the same now. It was then thought that the growing nationalistic strength of Bengal was sought to be curbed by partition. It is now realized that if communal-minded Moslem majority get the authority of perpetually ruling over the non-Muslim community, then their nationalism would be crushed. The spirit underlying both the movements which are in opposite directions, is the same, namely, preservation of the national spirit, just as the Moslem League supported partition then and are opposing it now on the ground of strengthening their communal spirit.

3. The Bengalee Hindus stand much in need of legislation for social reforms. Such legislation will give them the sense of unity and of solidarity. A communally-minded Moslem majority is not likely to support any legislation which would remove the weakness of the present social system of the Hindus. In a national state in West Bengal such legislations would be possible and once the benefits therefrom are released, the Hindus of East Bengal will assimilate the reforms, without legislation.

4. The Bengalees were the first to receive western education. They became ardent admirers of western law, literature constitution, ethical and social ideas and of their arts and sciences. The Bengalees assimilated in their literature the western ideas and enriched the same. Education was planned on western lines. Since the Government was formed on the basis of the Communal Award, the tendencies have been as they were expected to be. In every place where the Moslems and non-Moslems had worked jointly and contributed to common culture, cleavage has been sought to be established. Discord has been assiduously sown where communal harmony had existed. The events of the last 10 years are too well known to require mention. The principles and preachings of the Moslem League could not but lead to different results. It is our fervent desire to protect that part of Bengal where the non-Muslims are in a majority, from that baneful influence, which is subversive of common citizenship. If our hope that the new Province will be wholly run on the liberal ideas of the present times, materializes, then the people of Eastern Bengal, non-Muslims and Moslems alike will get much advantage from the same. It is just possible that in course of time the outlook of the Moslems will improve. Under the helpless position in which the opposition is now placed in the Legislature, it is not possible for them to effect any change in the Government policy and the non-Muslims will be politically dead. We humbly submit that it is against the best interests of the country to allow the present spirit of communalism to triumph. It is not unlikely that the spirit which pervades now the bulk of the Moslem community will infect the non-Moslem community. We consider it an evil day for our Province when the community which is national still now, will become communally-minded. Already, a Section of the Public has begun to incite the nationalists to communalism by calling them defeatists.

An early action is therefore earnestly desirable.

We have the honour to be,
Sir,
Your most obedient servants
R.R. Banerjee, Advocate and 144 other signatories

5. ‘Calcutta Barristers Demand Partition of Bengal’

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 12 March 1947.

Fifty Barristers of the Calcutta High Court have issued a statement demanding the partition of Bengal and giving reasons in support of the division.

Copies of the statement are being forwarded to Mr Attlee, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Sardar Vallabhai Patel, Acharya Kripalani, Mr L.B. Bhopatkar, Master Tara Singh and Sardar Baldeo Singh.

The following is the text of the statement:

We are supporting the move for the creation of a province in the area where the non-Muslims would be in a majority. We formulate the reasons which impel us to support this demand.

1. Because we want to build up a State based on the principles of nationalism and democracy—joint electorate, universal adult suffrage (one man, one vote), fullest protection to the minorities and fullest freedom of thought and worship for every citizen.

2. Because a strong and self-contained nationalist Bengal alone can be effective protection to the oppressed minority in Eastern Bengal.

3. Because the Muslim League refuses to listen to our just demands ‘inter alia’ for the abolition of communal electorate, the formation of a national ministry and the eradication of communalism from public services and from the academic and economic spheres.

4. Because we refuse to pay taxes to a communal caucus which wants to cripple and destroy us and because we want to put a stop to communal legislation which aims at destroying the fabric of our national life.

5. Because we are strongly opposed to the transfer of power of the present Provincial Government in Bengal.

6. We do not believe in Pakistan and would resist its imposition in any shape or form. We are determined to remain as willing members of an all-India Union.

7. Because we want to preserve the culture of Bengal and to maintain the nationalist institutions which have been built up by the sacrifices and services of Bengal’s noblest sons.

8. Because we do not want to live as serfs in our motherland. We demand freedom as our birth right. We refuse to exchange one slavery for another.
6. ‘Demand for Bengal Partition’

The two-day Conference of Bengal Hindus held under the auspices of the Hindu Mahasabha, in a resolution passed on Sunday, advocate the scheme for partition of Bengal as ‘the best means to prevent the destruction of the fabric of Bengal’s national life.’

The Conference called upon HMG as well as the Interim Government and the Constituent Assembly that Bengal should be immediately partitioned and a separate province for Bengal Hindus must be set up before any transfer of power took place from HMG.

It was decided at the Conference that the Working Committee of the Provincial Hindu Mahasabha should appoint a special committee of experts to draw up a scheme for the delimitation of the areas which would constitute the new province. The Conference also expressed its willingness to co-operate with all political parties and organizations who agree with the principles formulated in the resolution.

The Conference was held under the presidency of Dr Syamaprasad Mookerjee at the Indian Association Hall.

The following is the text of the resolution:

‘The latest pronouncement of HMG of the 20th February, announcing its definite decision to transfer all power and responsibility to Indian hands by June 1948, has completely altered the political situation and there is great responsibility now thrown on the representatives of the people who should sink their difference in order that they may shoulder the great task and take over power from the British Government and administer India with credit and efficiency and contribute to the world peace and security.

‘This Conference regrets that, in spite of its avowed declaration to quit India the British Government is now contemplating to split India. The latest declaration of HMG implies that if the Muslim League does not join the Constituent Assembly, any constitution framed by that Assembly would not be acceptable for the whole of India and that HMG may hand over power and responsibility to the existing Provincial Government in some areas and not to one Central Government for the whole of India, thus destroying the political integrity of India and sowing the seeds of civil strife and anarchy. The Congress has also accepted the position that no constitution will be imposed on any unwilling part of India, which virtually means a partial concession of Pakistan.

‘This Conference records its opinion that this Pronouncement by the British Cabinet clearly envisages the possibility of the imposition of Pakistan for the whole of Bengal. This Conference warns the British Cabinet that the imposition of Pakistan on the whole of Bengal will be firmly resisted. The Hindus of Bengal declare that their cardinal creed is the integrity of India (Akhand Hindusthan) and that they should not accept any such communal rule and shall refuse to pay any taxes or give any allegiance to any such Pakistan Government in Bengal.

‘In order to build up a strong National Government it would have been extremely desirable if it were possible to achieve a real understanding between the Hindus and the Muslims in Bengal so that they could live as common citizens in one territorial union as a self-respecting component State in the Indian Federation. But this is not possible as the Muslim League has refused to give up its idea of establishing Pakistan in Bengal and persists in the two-nation theory and refuses to build up a State based on the true principles of nationalism and democracy.'
Demand for Partition

'This Conference, therefore, demands that the Muslim majority areas in this Province of Bengal must be separated from those areas where the Hindus are in majority.

'This Conference proclaims its firm resolve that the Hindus of Bengal at least in the Hindu majority areas, must remain within the Union of India and they must not be separated from the rest of India by coercion or by the acceptance of Pakistan in any shape or form.

'Under the communal Raj prevailing in Bengal for the last ten years the Hindus are being crushed in every sphere of life, cultural, economic, religious and political and the oppressed Hindu minority in Eastern Bengal have not received any adequate protection from communal fanaticism and aggression. In order to end this organized tyrannies and oppression of the Hindus throughout Bengal and in order to put a stop to the carnage and anarchy in Calcutta, Dacca, Tipperah and Noakhali, it is essential that there should be a strong self-reliant State which can save the Hindus within its borders and can also afford effective protection to the oppressed minority in the Eastern Bengal.

'This Conference advocates the scheme of partition of Bengal as the best means to prevent the destruction of the fabric of Bengal's national life and to preserve and maintain Bengal's culture and heritage as well as the national institutions which have been built up by the services and sacrifices of Bengal's noblest sons.

'This Conference calls upon HMG as well as the Interim Government and the Constituent Assembly that Bengal should be immediately partitioned and a separate Province for Bengal Hindus must be set up before any transfer of power, takes place from HMG. This Conference demands that this new province should be constituted as a unit of the all-India Federation. This Province will guarantee the fullest protection to all minorities and will build up a State base on the principles of true nationalism and will insist on similar guarantees for the protection of the Hindu minority in the province of Eastern Bengal which shall also function as an integral part of the Indian Union. Every Bengali Hindu living in Eastern Bengal shall be treated as a national in the new Province and shall enjoy as a matter of rights all facilities and privileges which will be open to any citizen living in that Province.

'This Conference calls upon all parties to unite at this grave crisis of the history of Bengal and to organize a strong Anti-Pakistan Front and to mobilize public opinion effectively on this demand for the creation of a separate Province comprising the Hindu majority areas in Bengal.

'This Conference also resolves that adequate steps be taken to present the case of Bengal before the Constituent Assembly, the Interim Government and HMG.

'This Conference calls upon the Working Committee of the Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha to place this Resolution before the ensuing Bengal Provincial Hindu Conference which will be held at Tarakeswar during the Easter Holidays and to call upon all Hindu Sabhas throughout Bengal to form local committees and to enroll volunteers for educating public opinion on the lines indicated in this Resolution.

'This Conference further calls upon the Working Committee of the Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha to appoint a Special Committee of Experts to draw up a scheme for the delimitation of the areas which will constitute the new Province.

'This Conference emphasizes that the Hindu Mahasabha should act in co-operation with all political parties and organizations who agree with the principles formulated in this Resolution.'
7. Creation of a New Province in Bengal
Memorandum by the Jatiya Banga Sangathan Samiti, 18 March 1947

Jatiya Banga Sangathan Samiti

PRESIDENT:
JADABENDRA NATH PANJA. M.L.A.
SECRETARY:
ATULYA GHOSH
J.T. SECRETARIES:
HARENDRA NATH MAJUMDAR
ABDUS SATTAR

8/C, RAMANATH MAJUMDAR ST.
Calcutta

MEMORANDUM ON THE CREATION OF A NEW PROVINCE IN BENGAL

There is a strong feeling in Bengal for the creation of a New Province comprising the Burdwan and Presidency Divisions including Calcutta, which will be a unit of the Union of India. The aspirations and interests of this province will suffer so long as it will be linked with the other portion of the existing Province of Bengal.

The demand for having a New Province carved out of the existing Province of Bengal rests mainly on three grounds, namely, administrative, economic and political. The proposed New Province has certain peculiarities of its own. The climate is rather dry and the land is rather elevated in comparison with East Bengal. This region is mainly a paddy-producing one and it requires irrigation, whereas East Bengal requires drainage.

Administrative:
Both the area and the population of the existing Province of Bengal are too large for efficient and smooth administration. The area is 83,000 sq miles, about two and a half times that of Orissa. The population of the whole province of Bengal is more than six crores, that is, about three times that of the Bombay Province.

The area of the proposed New Province will be about 30,500 sq miles and the population will be more than 2,31,00,000 of whom Non-Muslims will be about 1,60,00,000.

In these days, the functions of a Provincial Government have multiplied greatly. The Government have to discharge many social services. We feel keenly that in the so called interests of the larger Bengal the real interests of West Bengal are being neglected and sacrificed and its special needs and requirements are not at all being attended to.

Economic:
The agriculturists of West Bengal who form practically the entire population face to-day a great crisis. Their existence is at stake. Irrigation is the main question in this region. As regards the irrigation problem, this region is not getting any impetus and attention from the present system of administration. Whenever any irrigational question arises, the Government evade the question and as such very little improvement has been effected in this part of land.

Paddy, as mentioned above, is the main crop. The price of paddy is getting lower and lower, whereas that of other necessaries of life is rising higher and higher. The cultivators of West Bengal are hard hit by the exceedingly low price of paddy. The Government is callous to the situation and it must be so because most of the people of East and North Bengal have to buy paddy or rice.
Demand for Partition

551

Unless West Bengal has its own Government its grievances will not be redressed. Its people will get impoverished more and more and will be totally ruined, if it is not turned into an autonomous Province under the aegis of the Indian Union immediately.

Political:
The communal tension in Bengal is acute. The reason for this tension is scramble for political and economic power. The ratio of the Muslims and Non-Muslims in the existing Province is 55:45. The population of the two major communities being almost equal, the nominal major community tries its utmost to have the preponderating majority and to domineer over the entire population of the existing province. The communal and fratricidal fight will automatically cease, if the present Province of Bengal be divided into two Areas, keeping in view, the Areas where the Moslems and Non-Moslems will preponderate. In such circumstances, the people of the divided Areas will be able to live peacefully, realize their aspirations and develop the Areas according to their needs.

The proposed new Province does not like to remain a part of a Bengal detached, from the Centre and turned into an ‘Ulster’. It (New Province) has made substantial contribution to the growth and formation of the Indian Nation. It cannot discard its nationalism. It yearns to be a part and parcel of the Union of India.

If a plebiscite be taken the majority of the people of the New Province will be in its favour.
Many statutory and voluntary organizations and members of the Legislatures and Constituent Assembly and prominent citizens have supported this view, namely, the creation of a New Province in Bengal.

We solicit the favour of your kind help and active assistance in the creation of this New Province.

Atulya Ghosh Jadabendranath Panja
Secretary
President.

The following organizations and prominent individuals among others have supported the above proposal:

Midnapur District Congress Committee.
Burdwan District Congress Committee.
Hooghly District Congress Committee.
West Bengal Provincial Committee.
Bengal Partition League.
Bangadeshiya Kayastha Sava.
Mymensing Bar Association.
Midnapur Bar Association.
Burdwan Bar Association.
Howrah Bar Association.
Asansol Bar Association.
Kalna Bar Association.
Bagerhat Bar Association.
Diamond Harbour Bar Association
Fifty prominent members of the Calcutta High Court Bar.
More than Hundred Solicitors of the Calcutta High Court Bar.
Barakpur Municipality.
Chairman, Khulna Municipality.
Chairman, Suri Municipality.
Chairman, Bankura Municipality.
Chairman, Kalna Municipality.
Chairman, Burdwan District Board.
Chairman, Murshidabad District Board.
Vice Chairman Hooghly District Board.
Chairman, Kalna Local Board.
President 24 Parganas District Congress Committee.
Secretary, Howrah District Congress Committee.
Secretary, Jangipur Subdivisional Congress Committee. (Murshidabad)
Nagendranath Mukhopadhyay, MLA (Central)
Prafulla Chandra Sen, Member, Constituent Assembly.
Radhanath Das, MLA Member, Constituent Assembly.
Ashutosh Mallick, MLA Member Constituent Assembly.
Dhirendranarayan Mukherjee, MLA Chief Whip of the Congress Assembly Party, Bengal
Annada Prosad Mondal, MLA (Burdwan)
Bonku Behari Mondal, MLA (Burdwan)
Kanailal Das, MLA (Burdwan)
Arabinda Gayen, MLA (Howrah)
Kanailal De, MLA (Bankura)
Kamal Krishna Roy, MLA (Bankura)
Nishapati Majhi, MLA (Birbhum)
Nikunja Behari Maity, MLA (Midnapur)
Promothanath Banerjee, MLA (Midnapur)
Charu Chandra Mahanti, MLA (Midnapur)
Annada Prosad Chowdhury, MLA (Midnapur)
Rajani Kanta Pramanick, MLA (Midnapur)
Sukumar Dutta, MLA (Hooghly)
Bipin Behari Ganguli, MLA (24 Parganas)
Satish Chandra Chakraborty, MLA (Khulna)
Sj Jogendra Narayan Roy, MLC
(Chairman Asansol Municipality)

Manoranjan Sen Gupta, Hon General Secretary, All-Bengal Teacher’s Association and Fellow of the Calcutta University.

This proposal for the creation of a New Province in Bengal has been enthusiastically supported in many public meetings held in different parts of Bengal.
8. Report from Bengal Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report for Bengal for First Half of March, 1947, 18 March 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

...2. The most obvious development of the period has been the intensification of interest in the proposal for a separate West Bengal. This proposal, to which attention had been drawn in previous reports, is a movement well worth watching. Recent events have given it an undoubted fillip. The Mahasabha has been the main protagonist of this proposal and the recent resolution of the Working Committee of the Congress on the possibility of a division of the Punjab, coupled with an explanatory statement of the President of the of the All-India Congress Committee relating that proposal to Bengal, have also focused the attention of the Congress on the question. The present attitude of the Mahasabha leaders is that since the Muslim League is not prepared to abandon the demand for Pakistan the League will try to settle the issue by launching direct action against the Hindus which will eventually lead to civil war as a result of which the British will seek to retain their position in India. Plans to fight Pakistan in Bengal and for a Hindu State comprising the Hindu majority districts of West Bengal are therefore necessary. The appointment of a Special Committee is envisaged the functions of which will be (1) to organize strong Hindu public opinion for a separate State, (2) to establish closer contact with the existing nationalist and social organizations of the Province including the Bar Libraries, and (3) to devise ways and means for giving earliest effect to this demand for a separate Hindu State. In West Bengal itself the Commissioner reports that in as many four out of six districts there appears to be a genuine movement in favour of the separation of West Bengal, as a Hindu majority Province, in anticipation of the coming into being of Pakistan in East India. The movement is not yet vigorous but it is gaining strength and appears to have the moral support of the great majority of the Hindu population of the Division.

3. Failing a lead from the Muslim League High Command it is impossible to indicate with certainty the approach of the Muslim League to recent political developments. There is a feeling, however, in Muslim circles that the statement of the Prime Minister has left the Congress no other alternative but to accede to the demand of the Muslim League or to make preparations for civil war. The most recent development has been the statements of the Chief Minister at Rajshahi and on the floor of the House in favour of a united independent, Bengal governed by the Muslims and Hindus in coalition. It is not yet clear to what extent this statement represents the official view of the Muslim League High Command and responsible Muslim opinion. Reactions at the time of drafting this report appear to be that the statements call for clarification before they can be accepted as a working basis. The announcement of Mr Nalini Ranjan Sarkar, referring to the necessity for the abolition of the communal electorate if any stable coalition Government and non-communal administration can be maintained in the Province together with an appreciative reference to the desirability of maintaining a separate West Bengal State in the event of a non-communal Government being impossible in Bengal as at present constituted, is likely to intensify interest in the present movement towards a separate, West Bengal, Province.
9. Should Bengal Be Divided into Two Provinces?

Dr Syama Prasad Mookerjee’s Statement, 19 March 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 142, Instalment II to IV, NMML.

The two days’ conference of Hindu representatives from all parts of Bengal, convened by the Bengal Hindu Mahasabha, has unanimously resolved that a separate province must be created comprising the Hindu majority areas in Bengal. A large number of these representatives hailed from Hindu minority areas in Northern and Eastern Bengal. If the majority community in Bengal had shown any indication by their conduct that they were prepared to live with the minority community under an administration which was fair and just to all and to promote the interest of Bengal as a whole, the demand for separation would not have been made. Mr Suhrawardy is loudly declaring today that Bengal belongs to Bengalis. How does he reconcile this with the systematic policy of his Ministry in giving shameless preference to non-Bengali Moslems and even other non-Bengalis, ignoring the rightful claims of Bengali Hindus. Ten years of communal raj in Bengal, has produced disastrous results in every sphere of life. In respect of education, trade, commerce, services, land and property, women’s honour, religious rights, the minority community in Bengal has suffered immeasurably at the hands of a ruthless communal administration. What Bengal has passed through is not a mere communal struggle. It is a sinister and planned attempt on the part of an organized government to utilize its machinery secretly and openly to reduce the minority community to a state of serfdom. It should not be overlooked that all this has happened when Bengal has remained within a united India, the Central Government being unable to give any protection to the minority.

Today the British Government has announced that its rule over India will cease not later than June, 1948. If the Moslem League does not agree to join the Constituent Assembly, Bengal may be cut off from the rest of India in the light of this announcement. The Congress also has declared that it will not impose any constitution on any unwilling area which is unrepresented in the Constituent Assembly. If Bengal’s constitution is left to be determined by a body of persons, the majority of whom are dominated by the Moslem League policy, whether in or outside the Indian Union, we can expect no protection whatsoever from their hands. Our only salvation in such circumstances lies in demanding for ourselves a separate province which will be large enough in area and population and wherein will reside more than two-third of the total Hindu population of Bengal. Let me analyse the arguments which have been advanced for and against this proposal.

First, it is said that we shall be disloyal to the great patriots who supported the anti-partition movement forty years ago and virtually gave birth to an all-India movement of freedom. Let me emphasize that Lord Curzon’s partition and our demand for a new province are like poles asunder. The Curzon partition was aimed at giving a deathblow to the ‘seditionist’ Bengali Hindus. They were placed in a minority in the then created province of Eastern Bengal and Assam with two major languages, namely, Bengali and Assamese. They were also in a minority in the then created Province of West Bengal, Bihar and Orissa which had three languages, namely Bengali, Hindi and Oriya. Our present proposal for Hindu Bengal on the other hand is aimed at saving Bengali Hindus and also the cause of nationalism which is their life-blood. The newly proposed province will have one language and 70 per cent of its population will be Bengali Hindus. After all, the mere mention of the word partition need not throw us into a fainting fit. Let us examine the object with which Lord Curzon tried to advance his imperialistic designs, or the motives that inspire the Communal Award thirty years later, and ask ourselves if our present proposal is not intended to frustrate those very design and save from political death that element in Indian life which has been responsible more than anyone else for the dismemberment of British Empire in India.
Demand for Partition

Secondly, it is said that creation of the new province supports the cause of Pakistan. This is entirely wrong. We have demanded that both Hindu Bengal and Eastern Bengal must remain within one India. We are against Pakistan in any form or shape. It does not however depend on Bengali Hindu alone whether division of India shall be prevented or not. If Hindus and other nationalist forces throughout India are rarely determined not to allow any portion of India to go out of the Indian Union, they will get the largest measure of support from Bengali Hindus. If on the other hand an attempt is made to place Bengal out of the Indian Union, due to commitments with which the British Government, the Moslem League and the Congress are close associated, we shall at any rate break the solidarity of Eastern Pakistan, save one area of Bengal and link it up with the India Union.

Thirdly, it is said that the minority Hindus in Eastern Bengal will be completely sacrificed. I believe on the contrary that the creation of Hindu Bengal, which will be linked up with a strong and representative Indian Union, will be a source of tremendous strength in saving the minority Hindus in Eastern Bengal. In Hindu Bengal there will be about 60 lakhs Muslims. No Muslim Government functioning in Eastern Bengal would easily like to torture and torment the minority Hindus in as much as it would be anxious in its own interest to ensure that the minority Moslems in Hindu Bengal should receive a fair and equitable treatment at the hands of the majority representatives. Even if trouble arises, effective and speedy protection can be given by Government of Hindu Bengal sitting in Calcutta, supported by the rest of India. Today the Moslem League ministry is acting recklessly in advancing its communal policy and inspite of all our efforts. We can hardly give any protection to the oppressed. Without political power and the backing of an organized government it is impossible to safeguard the interests either of the people residing within a territory or to any nationals living outside its zone. Only because Muslim League was in power in Bengal could the Ministry extend help to the refugees from Bihar and spend a crore of rupees out of public funds. In Eastern Bengal Hindus will be about 30 per cent of its population which is higher than any Moslem minority in the existing provinces of India. If they are reorganized within the zone and are properly backed by a government of their kith and kin in the adjoining territory, they will be in a much stronger position than at present. Let us not forget that the Eastern Bengal province will for its own sake act with care and caution surrounded as it will be by three predominantly Hindu States, Hindu Bengal, Assam and Nepal and having two strong Hindu Native States, Tripura and Coochbehar close by its heart.

Fourthly, it is said that the division of Bengal on religious basis is against the fundamental principle of nationalism. No one desires religion to be introduced into politics. But why must we hide our head ostrich-like and ignore present realities? Even today the electorates are communal and no Hindu, however advanced his views, can be returned from any Moslem constituency. It is not we who want a division of India or any part merely on religious consideration. But if we find that the whole of Bengal is going to be dominated by communal frenzy and 45 per cent of its population reduced to a state of slavery, only because they follow a particular religious faith, is it a crime on our part to demand that we must have our own territory where we can live as free men, and build up our own culture, our own social and economic life in accordance with our best tradition? I fail to see how by allowing ourselves to remain as slaves under a communal raj in a so-called united Bengal, we can advance the cause of nationalism or socialism. And was not Sind carved out from Bombay only to placate communal whims and did not many of our present oppositionists quietly acquiesce in such division, much to the detriment of Hindus in Sind? Again is not every province in India composed of people belonging to the two major religions and two other faiths, the majority and the minority strength differing from area to area?

Fifthly, it is said that 45 per cent of Bengal’s population comprising nearly 25 millions of people constitute such a large number that no government can possibly crush them. This is nothing but an idle and self-deceiving slogan. The Hyderabad State today includes 90 per cent Hindus but they are groaning under a tyrannical rule which is predominantly communal. It is not the number that matters; what matters is the system of administration under which the people are compelled to live. And have we not already had a bitter taste of crush-the-minority rule even under the British Governors? Must we wait further to appreciate the significance of a full-fledged Pakistan rule? Only the other day the Chief Minister announced that it was his deliberate policy to import Punjabi Muslims to the armed police force in Calcutta so that he can faithfully serve his own community. A further contingent of 1000 Punjabi Muslims is being brought into the province, mainly for the purpose of guarding Western Bengal areas. If the ministry continues its present policy of manning the services mostly with its chosen men, based on communal considerations, and places them in key provinces, the minority community will not be able to extricate itself easily from the iron clutches of such an administration.

After all let us not allow emotion alone to determine vital matters that affect our very existence. We would have all liked to see Bengalees as such living together in one united Bengal. If however the majority community constantly declare and demonstrate, that to use the words of Mr Jinnah, that there was nothing in common between Hindus and Moslems, indeed, there was much that was in conflict between the two, why should we shed constant tears and ourselves pave the way for committing suicide. Let others go in their own way and see for themselves how they can serve the best interest of their community and province. Let us choose our path and build up at least that portion of the province where we predominate. We shall make that an effective base for defending the rights and honour of any citizens in the North Eastern India.

Apart from all other considerations, India with her vast population of 400 millions can well afford to have a much larger number of provinces than at present. The United States of America with about 180 millions population has 49 States. The creation of new provinces comprising Andhra, Gujarat, Maharashtra has also been forcibly demanded. Purely for administrative reasons, Bengal may be well divided into two provinces. Although Hindi is the common language for the vast majority of the people in the areas covered by Bihar, UP and CP, they constitute three distinct provinces. A Hindu Bengal consisting of more than 25 millions of people will not be a small province. Economically it will be self-sufficient and its development will become easier once we keep the communal conflict in the background. The Damodar Canal will open up vast possibilities for expansion of this area, leading to the economic prosperity of the people.

I do not ignore that our demand for a separate province will be stoutly resisted by the Moslem League. If this succeeds, Eastern Pakistan will virtually perish. It is all the more reasons why all Hindus in Bengal should sink their differences and stand united on this great issue, inspite of all the ‘isms’ that divide them. Today we hover between life and death and we must look at our problems with complete realism. It was the clarion call of the Bengali Hindus which awakened the nationalist forces of the entire Indian continent. The blood and toil, the sacrifice and suffering of thousands of Bengali Hindus, known and unknown, laid the foundation for the freedom of India. This self-chosen dedication was not prompted by narrow personal interests but by the noblest idealism aimed at freeing their beloved motherland from bondage. Today when freedom is about to dawn on India, can they not even demand that they must be allowed to live as free men at least in that portion of India where they predominate and remain linked up with the imperishable spirit of one India? This demand must now be fearlessly and openly voiced by all sections of the people throughout the province so that none can dare oppose it. I firmly believe that this alone will offer a peaceful solution of the grave communal problem, for it will give the two major communities in Bengal full freedom to develop their own culture and tradition in the areas where they live in predominant numbers; both are also sure to recognize soon that it will be to their mutual interest to guarantee full protection to the respective minorities in the two province.

Let me emphasize in conclusion that this matter must be made an all parties’ question. I have every hope the Congress party in Bengal will also take it up in right earnest as a result of its deliberation at the Convention which it has called early in April. The coming twelve months will be hard and difficult for us. We will have to pass through the fire of sacrifice and suffering which we must cheerfully face. If we work with unity and determination there is no force on earth that can deprive us of our just and legitimate right. This will give us a new hope and aspiration, something for which we can live and die, which will destroy completely that deadly attitude of negation and defeatism, of compromise and pacts, which has absorbed the minds of many Bengali Hindus today. Let us wake up and fortify ourselves by our own strength, courage and organization, so that we may confidently call upon the rest of India, whose sympathy we have always valued, to stand by us at this supreme crisis in the history of this great province.

10. ‘Pakistan Bound to Come but Bengal Is Indivisible’

‘The British Government has finally decided to hand over by June 1948 and Bengal is eagerly looking forward to the era of independence. With a feeling of emancipation in the near future the Muslims of Bengal can on the one hand look forward to a rich and prosperous Bengal and at the same time to a period of prosperity and glory in the year to come’, said Mr H.S. Suhrawardy, Bengal’s Chief Minister at a conference held on Sunday at Kashimpur in Tippera attended by a large audience.

Continuing, Mr Suhrawardy said, ‘But much work has still to be done in order to prepare ourselves for wielding power and earning the full fruits of independence. Too often has it been stated that Bengal is poor, but she is not poor. If Bengal kept all the money that it earned, it would have quite enough in its coffers to meet its expenses and progress along modern lines. There have been various financial settlements but although the last one was better than the former, it was still unfair to Bengal which contributed more than any other province to the Centre. If Bengal could cut itself asunder from the Centre, it would be able to keep its resources’, he said.

Visualizing the future Mr Suhrawardy observed that he was not in a position to say now whether there would be a Central Government or not or if there would be any division from a complete Pakistan. But of this he was certain that Pakistan was bound to come to the Muslims in some form or other and Bengal would form part of Pakistan where there would be scrupulous regard for the rights of all minorities.

‘BENGAL INDIVISIBLE’

Deprecating the ‘threats’ being made to divide Bengal he emphasized that Bengal belonged to Bengalees and Bengal was indivisible. One portion of Bengal depended upon the other and all were entitled to participate in its administration, and he hoped that all sections of the people were determined to live and work for making Bengal a glorious land.

...Unfortunately Bengal was short of several of its requirements, Mr Suhrawardy said. It imported cloth, salt, mustard oil, sugar, dal and pulses, yarn for weavers and fishermen and hosiery, kerosene and such like commodities from outside. Most of these necessary articles were controlled by the Government of India and were sent to Bengal in controlled quantities on condition that they were sold through controlled shops within the province. Fortunately mustard oil and mustard seeds and other edible oils had been decontrolled and he hoped that pulses would also be decontrolled in the near future.

The Chief Minister further said that salt had already been decontrolled, kerosene was coming now in fair quantities, but there seemed to be no sign of the decontrol of cloth and yarn. He was aware of the terrible shortage in the province and the general cry for both these commodities. It was a pity that Bengal did not get its fair share from the Government of India and no body could say when justice would be done to it.

NEW ERA OF PROSPERITY

Concluding his speech Mr Suhrawardy said, ‘We must make ourselves self-sufficient in these necessary commodities and I hope that when independence would be achieved a new era of prosperity would dawn on Bengal. For the time being Bengal is in financial straits. The effects of the war are still being felt throughout the province and we have not yet been able to rehabilitate ourselves while other provinces have been able to lay by surplus unfortunately at our expense’.

On arrival at Comilla air strip Mr Suhrawardy, who was accompanied by Mr Mafizuddin Ahmed, Chief Whip and Mr Ali Ahammad Khan, MLA, was received by local officials. After the reception the party proceeded to Kashimpur. The journey covered approximately 40 miles of rough country roads. Groups of people had gathered at wayside places to discuss their problem with him. The Chief Minister made enquiries about the crop position and other problems concerning the local population.

11. Opposition to the Movement for Partitioning Bengal

Extract from the Governor’s Report to the Viceroy, 19 March 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 17, NMML.

Extract from report No FJB-21 dated 19th March 1947 from His Excellency Sir Frederick Burrows, Governor of Bengal to His Excellency the Viceroy.

2. The movement for partitioning Bengal is gathering momentum. Hindu opinion is at present very divided. For once Sarat Bose and Mr Gandhi see eye to eye and both condemn the movement, of which Syamaprasad Mookerjee and the Hindu Mahasabha are the chief protagonists. Suhrawardy has made a number of speeches on the subject, his line being that Bengal must be independent of the Centre, that Hindu and Muslim Bengalis must work in harmony for the common prosperity of the province, and that one-party rule in this and other Provinces must end. His sentiments have been echoed by two of his colleagues, but I doubt if the rank and file of the Party have the vision to realize that they cannot hope by means of their present political power (which is to some extent the artificial creation of British rule) to dominate the Hindus with whom the economic power still rests, and I see that, possibly under pressure from the Party, Suhrawardy has had to ‘explain’ that when he speaks of a League–Congress coalition in Bengal he is assuming coalitions in other (Congress dominated) Provinces too. I am not sure how this arises if Bengal is independent: For the moment I, like Tar-baby, ‘ain’t sayin’ nuthin’. My immediate objective is to get the Budget safely through the Assembly by 31st March. The last fortnight of March is nearly always a period of Ministerial stress and strain; and by the beginning of April the shape of things at the Centre should be clearer.

12. ‘Socialist Party and Partition’

...The Socialist leader, Dr Rammanohar Lohia, in a statement explains his party’s attitude to the question of Pakistan and the present move for partition of the provinces of the Punjab and Bengal. Dr Lohia said:

The demand for Hindu and Sikh homelands in East Punjab and West Bengal is sure to grow.
An acute emotional need of millions cannot be argued away. We must meet the emotional need that has given rise to the demand for Pakistan and now for Hindu homelands on its own ground, cleanse it of communal dirt and give it a democratic direction. Nationalists in East Bengal should help Muslims to achieve democracy and to choose or create suitable leaders.
With that end in view and so that reaction does not rule over Pakistan in the name of religion, an irresistible agitation must speedily grow for realizing two simple demands of democracy, land to the tiller and basic wage to the labourer.

In all this debate about Pakistan and Hindu homelands nationalists are behaving as though they need not talk to the Muslims any more. It is true that the Muslims do not listen to us and will probably not for sometime to come, no matter what we talk. And yet we must never cease to take account of their feelings or to keep talking a language that could interest them.

The Socialist leader added: ‘The current agitation is giving to the imperious need of West Bengal millions a communal turn and one which gives it no strength against a storm. This agitation should plainly and simply aim at the creation of a member State of the Union.
This State shall provide its population entire freedom from British control, satisfy their yearning to be part of the Indian Union, give them security and enable them to share in the all-nation schemes of river training, of renewal of agriculture and industry, which will make life fuller and joyful.

‘...This plan of action outlines for the west as also the east of the province a movement for kisan-majur democracy, more particular, struggles for land to the tiller and basic wage to the labourer. In the west, it strives to create a member State of the Indian Union. In the east, it persuades Pakistan to free itself from all British control. Besides, two over-all items have to be added, abolition of caste and establishment of Gram raj.
Towards Freedom: 1947

'At the same time, the spirit of Gram raj must be embodied in village institutions to serve in a small way health and educational, judicial and police needs and perhaps also, to engage in the beginnings of a co-operative economy. The more we grow in Gram raj, the less will the debate between a weak Centre and a strong Centre vex us.'

To work out any plan of action Dr Lohia asserts, 'we must draw sustenance from the example of Mahatma Gandhi. No matter what fires of hate rage round him and fuel added to these from the Central or Provincial capitals he move from village to village and teaches neighbours the art of good conduct. Every person can in his limited area do likewise and in spite of difference in opinion, own at least one friend of the other faith.'

Continuing he says 'while I affirm that the ideas of Pakistan and Hindu homelands imperial freedom and democracy and act as brakes on progress, I repeat that general phrases of nationalism and socialism, unless defined in the concrete terms of this plan, will set the seal on religious division over a very much wider area and make the tyranny of communal rule complete.'

Dr Lohia concludes: 'The pace of events is rapid and will even increase as each day of the fourteen months passes. Our people are blundering through rioting and killing and maze of spoken aspirations and muted needs to the United Republic of Hindustan. Can we intervene consciously in this process? The agency to work out this plan will not be difficult to create, for, if a sufficient number of people express themselves devise their instruments'.—(A.P.)

13. Congress Opposition to an Independent Bengal

Record of Interview between J.F. Burrows and K.S. Roy, 22 March 1947

After some desultory talk, the conversation was steered by Mr Roy to the present political situation in Bengal and its relation to the political situation elsewhere in India. He said it was inconceivable that Bengal should stand by itself as an independent State and that there was no possibility of the Hindus co-operating if the dominant Muslim majority made that an issue. What the Hindus would probably do in such circumstances would be immediately to launch a passive resistance movement (if it remained at that), refuse to pay any taxes to the existing Government of Bengal and set up a parallel Government of their own to which they would pay taxes. He expressed great appreciation of the Chief Minister's (Mr Suhrawardy's) recent speeches but felt that they were the expressions mainly of his own individual opinion and had but slight backing from the Muslim League Party.

HE said that in his view Pakistan, envisaged as enjoying sovereign and independent status, would be difficult to apply to Bengal divided as it is from the nearest potential Pakistan unit, the Punjab, by over 700 miles of territory comprising two Hindu Provinces and with three Hindu Provinces as its neighbours. He suggested that the proper course for Mr Roy and his Party to adopt was to be reasonable and to meet the Chief Minister more than half way so that a Coalition Government could be set up in Bengal irrespective of what happened in the rest of India to enable a peaceful transfer of power to be made.

Mr K.S. Roy replied that if that could be accomplished he and those for whom he spoke would be more than satisfied and he added that they would be content to leave the issues of the number and distribution of portfolios in such a Coalition Government in the hands of the Governor.
Chapter 10. Volunteer Organizations

1. Formation of Hindustan National Guards

Circular Letter from the General Secretary, AIHM, to all Provincial Hindu Sabhas, 5 January 1947
AIHM Papers, File No C-165, NMML.

ALL INDIA HINDU MAHASABHA,
READING ROAD,
New Delhi

CIRCULAR LETTER NO. 2.
The General Secretary,
...Provincial Hindu Sabha

Dear Sir,

The All India Hindu Mahasabha at its Gorakhpur Session has chalked out a definite plan of the organizing Hindus in order to meet the situation caused by the political developments which have resulted in outbursts of Muslim aggression and fanaticism in several parts of India.

The first and foremost item of the seven points programme of the All India Hindu Mahasabha is to start a Hindu National Army styled as ‘Hindustan National Guards’ or ‘Hindustan Rashtra Sena’.

In order to implement this programme it has decided to conduct a Workers’ Training Camp at New Delhi, 1st February 1947 for ten days, so that trained workers may be available in every province who would immediately undertake this work.

1. The classes would open on the 1st February, 1947, in the Hindu Mahasabha Bhawan, New Delhi, and would close on the 10th Feb.’47
2. Each Provincial Hindu Sabha would send two workers to the class one of them being for Hindustan Rashtra Sena work and the other for general organization work.
3. The traveling expenses of these workers upto Delhi and back would be borne by the Provincial Hindu Sabha and the All India Hindu Mahasabha would arrange the boarding and lodging of the workers at Delhi.
4. The names of the workers should reach the Head Office before the 20th January, 1947.
5. Those workers shall have to devote at least one year for doing the work for which they are being trained.
While making selection for the person to be incharge of the Hindustan Rashtra Sena it should be borne in mind that such person should be of sufficient organizing ability as to enable to work as the Provincial Organizer. He may be given some honorarium per month in order to enable him to devote his whole time to the work on returning to the province. A full scheme on the subject is under consideration and will be intimated in due time.

By order of the President.
Ashutosh Lahiry
General Secretary
All India Hindu Mahasabha

2. ‘National Guards Advised to Stick to Noble Ideals’

Broach, Friday.—Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffer, MLA (Central) presiding over the Gujerat Muslim League National Guards Conference this evening, exhorted his audience to develop courage to face the present situation, fortitude to bear its consequences and persistence in keeping to the ideals of the Muslim League.

   He said: ‘Our aim in life is not to destroy, but to create faith in honourable living of all the communities of India. This can only be achieved when we are fully developed in body, mind and spirit.

   ‘So let us achieve this through a movement that stands for service and sacrifice.

   ‘Let there be large-scale organizations devoted to the physical culture and training of self amongst the Muslim masses. The Muslim League has given an ideal and national guards mean to achieve this end.’

   Referring to the present political situation, Mr Ahmed Jaffer said that it was a pity that the Congress had not realized its mistake even now. Instead of accepting the statement of 6 December in a straight and an honest way, it is trying to camouflage its real intentions.

   ‘Unless and until the Congress accepts Grouping unequivocally, how can the Muslim League enter the Constituent Assembly?

   ‘Let the Congress sincerely work for the establishment of Groups and the League will also help it in establishing a Union.

   ‘This is the only viamedia we can accept. Otherwise, let them have their Hindustan and we shall have our complete independent Pakistan. The Musalmans cannot be fooled by the Congress and I hope the British Government will also be not duped this time.’—API

3. Government Attitude towards Khaksars

   Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Allama Mashriqi, 12 January 1947

   New Delhi

Dear Allama Mashriqi,

Thank for your letter of the 9th January which was handed to me by your representatives. I have discussed the matter with them and given them my reactions on the various points raised.

I do not know the exact position in regard to some matters as these relate to the Home Department. But so far as I know the Government of India are not at present concerned with any bans or other restrictions on the Khaksar organization. These are entirely provincial matters and the present Government of India, unlike the previous one, does not interfere in provincial matters. Your chief grievance appears to be against the Punjab Government. Many things have happened in the Punjab which we have not liked but we do not think it proper to interfere. Nor is it constitutionally possible to do so.

There is a definite distinction between the old Government of India and their treatment of the provinces and the present Government of India.

I do not see how any question arises now about the Government of India issuing any kind of a press communiqué in regard to Khaksars. The old position is ended and now each provincial administration can take such action as it desires including the issue of any fresh statement.

...I do not know anything about properties which were confiscated. This matter should be taken up with the local administration in question.

As regards the newspaper you wish to start, the main difficulty is one of newsprint which is very scarce at present. So far as I know no special permission is necessary. As for the newsprint, application can be made to the department concerned. This will depend upon the newsprint available for distribution.

So far as I am concerned I do not wish any special restrictions to be placed on the Khaksar organizations or their peaceful activities. But you will realize that the situation in India at present is very difficult and a delicate one and many Provincial Governments as well as the Government of India have had to impose restrictions generally though not on a particular organization. As a rule action is taken by provincial administrations. In such a matter the Government of India only deals with the areas directly under its control and these are very few.

Yours sincerely
Jawaharlal Nehru

4. Report from Bombay Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report for Bombay for Second Half of January 1947, 3 February 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/1/47, NAI.

Note showing the development of Volunteer organizations in Bombay Province.

1. Rashtra Seva Dal.
The present strength of the Dal is 49,300. The Dal celebrated its 6th anniversary on 28th December 1946 throughout the Province by holding flag salutations and meetings and by taking out processions and prabhatferis.

2. Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh.
The present strength of the Sangh is 27,308. The Sangh volunteers went through their usual daily programme. The annual Maharashtra Provincial Camp was held in Poona on 7th and 8th December 1946. Annual winter camps were also held at various places. In Thana district, the volunteers patrolled the Hindu localities at night in view of communal situation.

The present strength of the Corps is 231.
4. Muslim National Guards.
The present strength of the Guards is 14,986. The Guards celebrated Mr Jinnah’s birthday on 25th December when they held flag salutation ceremonies and took an oath to save the honour of the Muslim League flag and Mr Jinnah at the cost of their lives.

A conference of the Gujarat Muslim National Guards was held at Broach from 10th to 12th January at which intemperate speeches were made. The object of this conference was to infuse the spirit of the organization in Gujarat districts.

In Bombay City six Guards were arrested on 25th January for shouting slogans. They were however, warned and released on the same day. Two others were convicted and sentenced to one year’s Rigorous Imprisonment each for defiling a place of worship and committing theft.

5. Lok Sena.
The present strength is 1,825. It has branches in Bombay City and in Thana, Sholapur, Nasik and West Khandesh Districts.

They took part in the celebration of the birthday of Mr Subhas Chandra Bose and of the ‘Independence Day’.

7. Arya Vir Dal.
The volunteers did relief work in connection with riots.

8. Samata Sainik Dal.
The present strength is 7,545.

This is a new organization sponsored by Forward Bloc and the Indian National Army men. Its present strength is 1,076. The Dal has branches in Bombay City and in the districts of Poona, Dharwar, Bijapur, Thana and Ahmednagar. The branches at Poona, Dharwar and Bijapur are controlled by the Congress while the other branches by the Forward Bloc.

The branches at Poona have been started by disgruntled Congressmen in the Maharashtra Provincial Congress Committee whose grievances against the Congress leadership and the Rashtriya Seva Dal are that the masses of Maharashtra are not adequately represented by its own leaders in the Ministry and in other fields of Congress activities.

In Bombay City the volunteers are trained by Captain James of the Indian National Army in drill and physical training and defence exercises.

Note—The Dal has no influence but is politically dangerous.

10. Sikh Nav Javan Dal.
This is a new organization started by Mr Jogendra Singh Chadda and Sardar Karter Singh for carrying on propaganda of Sikhism in other communities. Mr Karter Singh who organized this, was a leader of the Bombay Akhali Dal. Its strength is 200. The members attended the ‘Laksha Chandi Maha Yajna’ for maintaining order during the first, second and third weeks of January 1947. They are doing relief work for riot-effected Hindus.

Note—This organization is not potentially dangerous.

NB—There was no appreciable activity by the other Volunteer organizations.
5. Report from NWFP

Extracts from the Fortnightly Report for NWFP for the Second Half of January 1947,
5 February 1947
Home Poll (I), 18/1/47, NAI.

SECRET

... REDSHIRTS.

Strength.—8,000.
Uniform.—Dark red safas, red coats, or shirts, red shorts or trousers, leather belts and badges of rank.
Weapons.—Nil, Volunteers are often accompanied by country bands, carrying Congress flags.
Activities.—Red shirts parade to words of command and march in file and threes. Bugles are occasionally used at big Redshirt rallies.

The Redshirt volunteers are utilized at big political rallies held by the Congress and Redshirt organizations to keep order, act as body guards for notable political personalities, and in the past, have been used during various civil disobedience movements for picketing of courts, liquor shops, and others. Their activities have been usually non-violent. Their policy is determined by their leader, Abdul Ghaffar Khan, The Redshirt organization is based on a net-work of village committees, the presidents of which are known as ‘Saddars’, The following titles are used in the Redshirt organization:
Salar-i-Azam—commands Redshirts of the whole N-WFP.
Salar—one for each district.

Generals, Colonels, Majors, Captains, and Lieutenants, who command smaller parties of Redshirts. Peshawar City alone contains three Redshirt ‘Generals’.

During the month, parties of Redshirts have proceeded on goodwill missions to North and South Waziristan, Mohmand tribal territory, the Kurram Agency, Swat and Bajaur, in order to acquaint the inhabitants of tribal territory with the Congress creed. The mission which proceeded to North Waziristan is stated to have contacted the Faqir of Ipi. The mission to South Waziristan only penetrated a short way into the Agency and was turned back owing to the possibility of their being attacked by tribesmen hostile to them.

A few Redshirts have resigned from the organization and joined the Muslim League during the month.

An actual or potential threat to public order.—While the Congress Ministry is in power in the N-WFP, the organization cannot be said to be an actual or potential threat to public order. If, however, the Muslim League took power in this province, it is possible that the Redshirt volunteers might constitute a threat to public order, if any campaign was launched by Congress against the Muslim League.

MUSLIM NATIONAL GUARDS

Strength.—5,000.
Uniform.—Green safas, or usual headgear, green coat, shirt, or trousers, leather belt and badges of rank.
Weapons.—The volunteers usually carry spears, sometime with leather slings, or lathis, and those, who hold licenses for arms, have been noticed carrying arms. Some of the volunteers also carry sheathed daggers. Bands accompany the volunteers and banners are carried bearing the star and crescent. Bugles are also used.

Activities.—Parties of Muslim National Guards, some of whom carried spears and lathis, have performed routine drill movements, and have marched through Peshawar City and other towns, headed by bands. They have attended all large Muslim League meetings during the month, and small parties accompanied Muslim League propagandists in their tours of the rural areas. New enlistments have been made in volunteers in Peshawar Tahsil, where Muslim League Committees have been formed.

On 15th December, about 900 Muslim National Guards marched to Peshawar Cantonments railway station to celebrate the departure of 80 Muslim League supporters from various districts in the N-WFP, who left for Bihar.

On 17th December, 58 Muslim National Guards were present at the Nowshera Cantonment railway station to welcome S. Abdur Rab Nishtar, Member for Communications in the Interim Government.

The second Muslim League medical mission returned to Peshawar from Bihar on 24th December and was given a warm welcome. This mission included various Muslim National Guards, and members of the party addressed a public meeting in Peshawar City, describing their experiences in Bihar. Human skulls and leaves from burnt copies of the Quran were displayed. On return to their villages, those Muslim National Guards who belonged to the second medical mission, have been relating harrowing stories of the Bihar atrocities.

Reports have been received of individual Khaksars, Redshirts and Ahrars who have joined the Muslim National Guards during the month.

An actual or potential threat to public order.—At present, the organization is acting in a non-violent way, but the carrying of spears, licensed arms, and their undesirable conduct on certain occasions, give ground for believing that they might constitute a potential threat to public order, in the event of the Muslim League deciding to launch any kind of campaign directed against the Government then in power.

KHAKSARS

Strength.—1,200.

Uniform.—Ordinary khaki clothes. The volunteers wear a type of Arab head-dress and sometime carry miniature Qurans.

Weapons.—The Khaksars carry special plated spades, with leather slings as usually used for rifles. Some of the volunteers carry sheathed daggers.

Activities.—Khaksars march in twos and threes, obey words of command, and offer salutes to their leaders. They are summoned by the sound of bugle, and on occasions, have carried out mock battles. The Khaksar volunteers receive their orders direct from Khaksar headquarters and follow the vagaries of their leaders' will. Ostensibly, their organization is for social service, but in actual fact although they occasionally assist in keeping order during religious festivals, their activities are chiefly of an organizational nature, and directed to strengthening their movement. The political attitude of the Khaksar organization in this province has been against the Congress, Redshirts, and the Muslim League.
N-WFP. Khaksars held their usual weekly rallies and parades in Peshawar, and most other towns of the N-WFP. A few meetings were held, which failed to attract large audiences at which Khaksar speakers advocated the formation of an ‘Azad Muslim League’, and an ‘Azad Muslim League Office’ was opened in Peshawar City on 28th December. Those Khaksars who had proceeded to Sind to support Khaksar candidates in the Sind Assembly elections have now returned to this province.

An actual or potential threat to public order. — The Khaksar organization undoubtedly constitutes a potential threat to public order, in view of the district discipline imposed on the organization, and the uncompromising attitude adopted by their leader, although they have not actually been responsible for any breaches of the peace during the past year.

AHRARS

Strength. — 200.
Uniform. — Redcoat.
Weapons. — Medium-sized polished axes which cannot be described as meant for anything except display or use as a weapon. They are sometimes fitted with leather slings.
Activities. — Small parties of Ahrar volunteers marched through Peshawar City on various occasions, carrying their axes.

An actual or potential threat to public order. — Owing to the little influence this party has in the Frontier Province, they cannot be described as a potential threat to public order, although it is clearly undesirable that they should be permitted to carry axes in public.

RSS SANGH

Strength. — 2,000.
Uniform. — Khaki shirts, white shorts, khaki stockings, and canvas shoes. They salute an orange-colored flag.
Weapons. — Lathis.
Activities. — RSS Sangh volunteers continued to hold their daily rallies at which parades and physical exercises took place. The annual camp was held at Peshawar City from 25th to 28th December, which was attended by volunteers from Mardan, Risalpur, Nowshera, Charsadda, Shabqadar, Peshawar City and Cantonments and Kohat. One hundred and forty-two RSS Sangh volunteers from Rawalpindi, and another party from Lahore also attended the camp. Two-day camps were also held at Dera Ismail Khan from 25th to 27th December, and in Bannu from 29th to 31st December.

Interest by Hindus in the organization appears to be on the increase.
The following volunteer organizations also exist in the N-WFP but their membership is so weak that their activities do not require further notice:

Bajrang Sewak Akhara, Mahabir Dal, Ranjit Dal, Arya Samaj, and Akali Dal.

By order, etc.,
D.G.H. de la FARGUE,
Chief Secretary to Government,
North-West Frontier Province.
6. Strength of RSS in Orissa

Telegram from Cuttack, Orissa, to Home Deptt., New Delhi, 5 February 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 22/3/47, NAI.

IMMEDIATE

Please refer to your telegram No. 22/3/Poll (1), dated 31st January 1947.

2. Mr A.E.H. Jaffar’s question referred to activities of RASHTRIYA SEWA SANGHA a report about which was sent in the Government Express letter No. 246-C dated 30th January.

3. The telegram under reference refers to RASHTRIYA SWAYAM SEVAK SANGH. As far the province of Orissa is concerned the information about this SANGH is furnished below.

4. A training centre in Cuttack town has been organized by Mr Mukunda Rao Munjee of Nagpur, a member of RASHTRIYA where about 60 Hindu students are receiving training in lathi drill wrestling GYMNASIc and others. The training centre has not yet been given a name, but it is locally considered to be a part of RASHTRIYA. There is no other branch of RASHTRIYA in this Province.

5. The Cuttack training centre is obviously of a military nature in view of its training programme, but it cannot be said to be a military or criminal organization.

6. Government have not received any representation in regard to the training centre, but District Magistrate of Cuttack received a few days ago a petition from an official ....local MUSLM league stating that the centre is a direct challenge to Orissa MUSLIMS. District Magistrate has enquired into matter and his report shows that MUSLM League’s fears are largely unfounded.

7. So far as this Province is concerned, question of resignation of Congress Flindus from the RASHTRIYA has not arisen; and there is nothing to show that SANGHA has been responsible for any riots in the Province.

8. In view of position explained above, as far Government of Orissa are concerned, they see no reason at present to declare the SANGHA to be an unlawful organization in the interest of peace; nor do they see any necessity for appointing a Committee to investigate the activities of SANGHA.

SECY: & ASST: SECY: HOME DEPTT: (2) & CABINET

7. Report from CP and Berar

Extract from the Fortnightly Report for CP and Berar for the Second Half of January 1947, 6 February 1947
Home Poll (I), 18/1/47, NAI.

... 5. Volunteer Organization:

1. Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh: There was a general increase in the membership of this organization during the month. Ten new branches were opened and a defunct one revived.

   Besides the usual parades and lathi drill, there have been camps, rallies and demonstrations at a number of places. Weapon training with wooden models was given at Mandla. The programme at these camps and rallies consisted of PT, lathi, sword, and lezim exercises. Squad drill, simple skirmishing, Indian games, guard mounting and dismounting were practised at the Nagpur camp on the 24th December which was attended by about 2,000 volunteers. Volunteers were asked to be ready to defend their religion and culture. At the Wardha winter camp which was attended by 2,400 volunteers Ram Prasad Tiwari of Jubbulpore said that the unorganized and undisciplined Hindus of Noakhali were unable to protect themselves even though Congress was in power at the centre and in view of the inability of Congress Ministries to check disorders, every effort should be made to intensify training and increase the membership. At another camp in Amroati, Pakistan was criticized and Subhash Bose’s methods were held out to be the best suited for present problems.

At another camp in the Jubbulpore district, the speakers attacked the Muslims in the Muslim League who, they said, were obstructing the country’s freedom. The communal disturbances in East Bengal were reviewed and members were warned to be on the alert. The volunteers were not to be on the offensive, but to be ready to defend their life, property, religion and culture.

2. Azad Hind Dal: A new branch was opened at Harda in Hoshangabad and a defunct one revived at Akola.

Squad drill was performed by the Nagpur branch. At Yeotmal rifle exercises were also practised with the aid of wooden models. This organization was responsible for posting notices at important cross-roads in Yeotmal giving extracts from a speech by Jai Prakash Narain exhorting Hindus and Muslims to unite and paralyse British rule. Regular parades were held in Damoh (Saugor). The Jai Hind Dal and the Charkha Sangh at Pandharkowda (Yeotmal) have been amalgamated.

At a flag salutation ceremony of the Dal, Dr Kashikar prophesied a severe movement against the British and said that the volunteers of the Azad Hind Dal, Rashtriya Sewa Dal and the Hindusthan Red Army would serve the purpose of a National Militia in securing India’s freedom.

At a meeting of the Azad Hind Dal at Yeotmal, it was said that there could be no true freedom without bloodshed and members were advised to prepare for the next fight in which they would be expected to play an important part.

3. Muslim National Guards: There has been a general increase in membership of all branches, and activities were more noticeable. Seven new branches have been started, Jubbulpore district claiming four of them. The Sohagpur (Hoshangabad) branch was revived. The membership of the Jubbulpore branch has risen during the last three months from 400 to 2,500.

Daily parades, lathi exercises, drill and military formation were the principal features of the training. In Damoh (Saugor) parades are held with spears and lathis and in Bilaspur, where the training is given in a private place, daggers are used. Swords were also used in Buldana.

There were demonstrations on Mr Jinnah’s birthday (25th December) at Nagpur, Jubbulpore, and Raipur. At Raipur, a procession was taken out when volunteers shouted provocative slogans. At an ‘intellectual’ class in Jubbulpore, it was pointed out that one of the principles of Islam was ‘Jihad’ (holy war), and volunteers were exhorted to shoulder the responsibility of protecting their religion and nation against their enemies.

Following an anonymous letter that Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh workers will burn Maulana Burhanul Haq’s house at Jubbulpore, Muslim National Guards mounted guard over the Maulana’s house. A report is being called for. At Nagpur and Damoh (Saugor), Muslim National Guards patrol Muslim localities.

Recently the members of the Bilaspur branch gave a demonstration of physical feats and prizes were awarded to the best performance. A similar demonstration was held at Khamgaon (Buldana) on the 11th and 12th in lathi, sword, dagger and spear exercises by Muslim National Guards and other Muslim akhadas. The volunteers were privately exhorted to strengthen the branches.

‘Bari Memorial Day’ was celebrated on the 13th January at Nagpur by three branches. In his presidential address, Abdul Salam Faruqui advised plain living and high thinking. He said that the Muslim League would have to seize political power from the British and would have to safeguard themselves from the Congress with the help of their National Guards who, he claimed, were the standing army of the League. He also appealed for larger enlistment in order to serve the community with a view to achieving Pakistan.

4. Samata Sainik Dal: The strength in Nagpur district has increased from 3,000 to 3,500 during the last three months and at Chanda it is reported to be 650 including 150 girls. A new branch was formed at Raipur.

5. Hindusthan Red Army: The branches of the Red Army in Nagpur city have been divided into three zones, each in charge of an organizer. The instructors of individual branches have to work under the guidance of zone organizers who will submit daily reports to headquarters through special cycle messengers.

A branch of the Hindusthan Red Army was formed in Harda (Hoshangabad).

The Nagpur and Akola branches perform squad drill regularly, while the Gondia (Bhandara) branch held daily parades and marched in the streets shouting anti-imperialist and anti-capitalist slogans....

8. Activities of RSS

Questions in the Central Legislative Assembly, 11 February 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 22/3/47, NAI.

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY
Starred Question No. 178
(To be answered on 11th February, 1947).

178. Mr Ahmed E. H. Jaffer.—(a) will the Honourable the Home Member please state whether Government propose to appoint a committee to investigate the activities of the Rashtriya Sewak Sangh?
(b) Have Government received any representation in regard to the recent activities of the RSS?
(c) Is it a fact that the Sangh has branches all over India?
...

Reply.—
The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel:

(a) Government have no intention of appointing a Committee to investigate the activities of the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh.
(b) No.
(c) The Sangh has branches in several Provinces.
Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffer: Have the Government of India made inquiries or do they propose to make enquiries regarding the activities of this organization?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: There are many organizations of which reports are being received from the Intelligence Bureau and from the Military Intelligence.

Mr Sasanka Shekhar Sanyal: May I know the nature of the relation that exist between the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh and the Muslim National Guards Organization?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I do not think between the two there is any relation.

Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffer: May I know whether the Government of India was consulted by the Punjab Government before they declared both these bodies unlawful?

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Central Government knew nothing about it till they read it in the Press.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: May I point out that these bodies have not been declared unlawful. The allegation of my friend is not correct.

Mr President: Order, order.

Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffer: I am referring to the Punjab Government activities.

Lala Deshbandhu Gupta: Have the Government of India received any reports about the Muslim National Guards here.

The Honourable Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The Government is getting reports about all organizations.

ends.

SECRET

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA,
Home Department.
Express Letter.

From Homein, New Delhi.

To
All Provincial Governments and Chief Commissioners (except Panth-Piploda and Andaman and Nicobar Islands).

No. 22/3/47-Poll (I).

New Delhi, the 9th January, 1947.

Reference enclosed copy of a question proposed to be put in the Central Assembly by Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffer. The Government of India would be grateful to be supplied by the 30th January 1947 with material for a reply to parts (b) to (e) and any suggestions or comments on parts (a) and (f) thereof.

(G.V. Bedekar)
Deputy Secretary to the Government of India.
Towards Freedom: 1947

...SECRET

From
Akhtar Hussain, Esquire, OBE., ICS.,
Chief Secretary to Government, Punjab.

To
The Deputy Secretary to the Government of India,
Home Department, New Delhi.

No. 791-BDSB, dated Lahore, the 20th January, 1947.

Memo.

Please refer to your secret express letter No. 22/3/47-Poll (I) dated the 9th January 1947, forwarding a copy of a question regarding the Rashtriya Swayyam Sewak Sangh to be asked by Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffer in the forthcoming session of the Central Legislative Assembly.

2. Material which may help in formulating replies to parts (b) to (e) of the question is given below:

(b) It is a purely Hindu organization whose members are undergoing training in military fashion.
(c) Representations have been made to the Punjab Government through the press and otherwise bringing to notice the militant activities of RSSS and suggesting that the organization should be declared unlawful.
(d) The Punjab Government has no information.
(e) The Sangh has branches in nearly all the cities and towns of the Punjab. This province has so far escaped communal riots on a large scale.

3. As regards parts (a) and (f) of the Assembly Question, the Punjab Government is of opinion that action should be taken against all militant communal volunteer organizations.

Akhtar Hussain
Chief Secretary to Government, Punjab

SECRET.

EXPRESS LETTER.

No. 98-BI., dated Peshawar the 21st January 1947
17/6-BI

From Norwef, Peshawar.

To Homein, New Delhi.

Subject: Central Assembly Question.

MESSAGE

Reference your express letter No. 22/3/47-Poll (I), dated the 9th January 1947.

2. The Provincial Government suggest the following replies:
(a) The activities of the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh are known to Provincial Criminal Investigation Department who can furnish any information required.

(b) The RSS Sangh is not a criminal organization. It has not shown any signs of being actively militant in the NWFP, although members have received training in physical exercises, sword and lathi play, musketry, and the throwing of balls which represent dummy grenades. In view of the fact that Hindus are a minority in this Province, such activities can only be for training in self defence.

(c) The NWFP Government has not received any representation in regards to recent activities of the RSS Sangh.

(d) Not in the NWF Province.

(e) The RSS Sangh has numerous branches in the NWF Province at places where Hindus live. It has not been responsible for any riots in the NWF Province.

(f) It is not considered that the activities of the Sangh in the NWF Province are of such a nature as to render it necessary to declare it an unlawful organization.

Chief Secretary to Government,
North West Frontier Province

EXPRESS LETTER
No. 292 C.61/47
Government of Bihar.
Political Department.
Special Section.

From
T.P. Singh, Esqr, ICS,
Under Secretary to Government

To
Home in, New Delhi

Patna, the 23rd January 1947

Reference Letter No. 22/3/47-Poll (I) dated the 9th January 1947 regarding a question to be put up in the Central Assembly by Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffar on the subject of Rastriya Sewak Sangh. There is no organization of this name in Bihar but presumably the reference is to the organization known as Rastriya Swayam Sewak Sangh. The information which is supplied below is based on this assumption.

(b) The Rastriya Swayam Sewak Sangh is a purely communal organization whose avowed object is to organize Hindus into a disciplined militant body capable of resisting anything considered detrimental to the cause of the Hindus. It aims at organizing the Hindu youths and giving physical training and claims to have nothing to do with politics. It is reported to have recently refused an offer of amalgamation with the Hindu Mahasabha. It teaches Hindu History and Culture at various centres and also imparts physical training including the use of lathi. There is nothing on record to show that it is a criminal organization, though it can be safely presumed that it will be naturally in the fore-front of any fight between communities.

(c) The answer is in the negative.
Towards Freedom: 1947

(d) The answer is in the negative; on the contrary there is has been considerable increase in the number of members of the Sangh following the recent communal disturbances.

(e) The Sangh has several branches all over the Province but there is nothing to show that it was at all responsible for the recent communal riots in Bihar.

(f) The Provincial Government do not consider that the Sangh should be banned as such a course cannot be justified. In any case, it can not be banned unless similar action is taken against the Muslim National Guard, its Muslim counter part.

The Provincial Government do not think that the Sangh constitutes a threat to the Public peace.

The Provincial Government do not think that it is necessary to appoint a Committee to investigate the activities of the Rastriya Swayam Sewak Sangh.

T.P. Singh
Under Secretary to the Government

EXPRESS LETTER

SECRET

From
A.A. Said, Esquire, MA, LLB (Cantab), Bar-at-Law, Home Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Delhi.

To,
The Secretary to the Government of India,
Home Department, New Delhi.

No. F. 26/47-C

Dated Delhi, the 25th January 1947.

Reference Mr Bedekar’s express letters No. 22/3/47-Poll.(l),, dated the 9th January 1947, regarding the question proposed to be put in the Central Assembly by Mr Ahmed E.H. Jaffer. I am directed to furnish the following material for reply to parts (b) to (e) of the question and to offer the comments asked for on sections (a) and (f) thereof;

(b) The Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh is a communal volunteer body organized in semi-military lines and its members believe in what may be described as militant Hinduism.

(c) A number of representations have from time to time been received in this office against the activities of the Sangh.

(d) It is understood that some Congress Hindus have recently left the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh, but the reasons for their doing so as well as the numbers and other details, are not available.

(e) The Sangh has several branches in all parts of the Delhi Province. It is understood that instructions were received that the Sangh as such was not to participate in the recent communal riots in Delhi. There were, however, individual cases of members of the Sangh taking part in the disturbances.
Comments on sections (a) and (f)

(a) The Chief Commissioner is of the opinion that no useful purpose will be served by appointing a committee to investigate the activities of the Sangh, as the leaders of the organizations have taken special precautions to ensure secrecy. Whatever information is procured by Special Branches of the CID is passed on to the Government of India from time to time. An open enquiry on the other hand, is likely to prove futile.

(f) Unilateral action against the Sangh only would not be desirable but a ban on it and all of the similar organizations, for example, Muslim National Guards would do much to prevent communal trouble.

A.A. Said
Home Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Delhi.

...EXPRESS.
GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM

Letter No. C.8/47/10
Shillong, the 29th January 1947

From
The Chief Secretary to the Government of Assam,

To
The Secretary to the Government of India,
Home Department.

Sir,

With reference to Mr Bedakar’s secret letter No. 22/3-47-Poll (I) dated the 9th January 1947 forwarding copy of a question proposed to be put in the Central Assembly by Mr Ahmed E. H. Jaffer, I am directed to say as regards parts (b) to (e) that this government have until recently received no reports of activity by the Sangh in Assam. It is reported by the Special Superintendent of Police, CID, Assam that Dadaji Paramaratha, All-India Organizer of Rashtriya Sevaka Sangh, visited Shillong in the early part of December 1946 and started a Branch of the Sangh in Shillong. Shri Mulkaranji, a worker of the said Sangh is now imparting training to 40 members in moral principles and physical education. There was previously no organization of this Sangh in Assam nor is there any other organization now other than that described above.

2. As regards parts (a) and (f) of the aforesaid question, I am to say that this Government do not feel able to advise on these suggestions in the light of present information.

Chief Secretary to the Govt of Assam.
EXPRESS LETTER
No. A 219–XXV/CX

From
A.R. Sinclair-Day Esq,
Deputy Secretary to Government, United Provinces.

To Home in,
New Delhi

Confidential
Department Dated Lucknow, 31 January, 1947

Reference Homein Express Letter No. 22/3/47-Poll (I), dated 9 January, 1947, regarding an Assembly question about the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh. The following material is furnished for parts (b) to (e) of the question:

(b) The RSS Sangh is a Hindu organization which aims at organizing the Hindus ostensibly for purposes of defence. Its headquarters are at Nagpur, and Lucknow is the nucleus of the Provincial organization. The routine activities of the Sangh consist of parades and lathi exercises and instruction in the use of swords and spears. At the training camps practice in sham fighting and tactical exercises is also given. The members are sworn to secrecy but are encouraged to inform the public of the aims and objects of the Sangh.

This organization is looked upon with considerable suspicion by the Muslims who regard its activities as a threat to their own safety. Recent reports indicate a considerable increase in its activities and also in its membership. The total strength in the United Provinces has increased from 10,225 in April 1946 to 25,056 in December 1946. Towards the end of December 1946 training camps attended by 100 to 2000 volunteers were held in various districts of the Province.

(c) The only representation received by this Government is a telegram dated 5 June, 1946, from a Muslim resident of Bareilly, which is to the effect that the Rashtriya Swayama Sewak Sangh is a menace to the public.

(d) This Government have no information.

(e) The Sangh is an all-India organization with branches in several districts of this province as regards the latter part of this question, this government have no information which may suggest that the Sangh is responsible for the communal disorders in the country.

2. The Provincial Government have no comments to offer on part (a) of the question, and in regard to (f) would suggest that as the Sangh is not the only organization of its kind, any action to be taken in this matter should be directed against all ‘private armies’.

A.R. Sinclair-Day
Deputy Secretary.
9. Organization of Hindustan National Guards

Letter from General Secretary, AIHM, to All Provincial Hindu Sabhas, 21 February 1947
AIHM Papers, File No C-165, NMML.

Hindu Mahasabha Bhawan
Reading Road,
New Delhi

To,

The General Secretary,
Provincial Hindu Sabha

Dear Sir,

You have doubtless received our circular letter regarding Malaviya Hindu Sangathan Fund. I trust you are moving in the matter. I am expecting from you a communication as to when you desire the President to tour in your province, for mobilizing public opinion about the present political situation and also for helping you in collections to the Malaviya Fund.

You are requested to take immediate steps for organizing Hindusthan National Guards. The situation now calls for intensive internal re-organization. It is apparent that we have not so far attracted sufficient number of young men to our ranks. There has been a general complaint that we lack any concrete tangible programme which might appeal to the young men and which they may be called upon to undertake from day to day. The Hindusthan National Guard provides an opportunity for such constructive service. If the Guard is properly organized it will provide us with sufficient number of militant workers who will take up our work in rural areas and many of whom will be trained to undertake work involving initiative and leadership. I trust, you will realize the significance of such an exclusive body of volunteers wedded to the ideals and programme of the Hindu Mahasabhas through service and suffering. I shall be glad if you kindly intimate to this office what practical steps you have taken or are taking in organizing the Guards.

You are requested to furnish to this office a list of members of your Working Committee as well as of your present office-bearers with their addresses. You are also requested to send a comprehensive list containing the names and addresses of Presidents and Secretaries of all district and sub-divisional Sabhas within your province. I would request you to furnish the list within a fortnight.

Trusting to receive an early reply,

Yours faithfully,

Ashutosh Lahiry
General Secretary
10. Report from Bombay Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report from Bombay for the Second Half of February 1947, 3 March 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/2/47, NAI.

Note showing the development of Volunteer Organizations in Bombay Province.

1. Rashtra Seva Dal:
Six more branches of this Dal have been opened. Their strength varies from 30 to 135.

In Bombay City the Dal has an inner group of about 125 well-trained and experienced volunteers known as Jai Prakash Dal.

In addition to usual activities, such as training in drill, physical training exercises, maintenance of order at festivals, and others, the Dal held three rallies at Ahmedabad at which the volunteers were advised to take more interest in the organization, to maintain discipline and to follow the Congress creed and policy.

A big rally was also held by the Dal at Satara on 1st and 2nd February, under the presidency of Capt Shah Nawaz, ex-INA. About 13,000 volunteers from Maharashtra, Deccan States and Karnataka attended it. Several speakers, including Congress Socialists and Forward Blocists, addressed the gathering urging the volunteers to strengthen the Dal with a view to achieving freedom. The volunteers displayed physical exercises, Indian games, lezim, construction of nuts and bridges, and other things, and gave a demonstration in first aid to the injured.

Note—This organization wields considerable influence and may be regarded as potentially dangerous in the event of political disturbances.

2. Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh:
Six more branches were opened with membership ranging from 20 to 50

The volunteers carried on their usual activities.

3. Khaksar Volunteer Corps:
Except in Poona where about 150 Khaksars organized a camp between 15th and 17th February to try to revive local interest, the organization was inactive throughout the province.

Note—It wields no influence, but is potentially dangerous.

4. Muslim National Guards:
Four new branches were opened.

Usual training in lathi, drill and physical exercise was imparted.

To protest against the ban imposed on their organization by the Punjab Government, they took out a procession at Sholapur, organized a ‘hartal’ at Godhra and held a meeting in Poona. At a private meeting held at Ahmedabad they decided to send a batch of volunteers to help the Satyagrahis in the Punjab, but the Chief of the National Guards for India told them to be prepared when called upon in case of necessity.

In Bombay City, the Guards continued to do relief work at various relief centres and to keep order at Muslim meetings. Some Guards had approached their Commandant and requested him to permit them to go to the Punjab to take part in the civil disobedience movement there. In the absence of orders from Mr Jinnah and the Chief Commander, their request was refused.
5. Congress Seva Dal:
A new branch has been opened in Bombay City and about 35 volunteers have been enrolled in this branch.

6. Lok Sena:
A rally was held on 9th February and the volunteers gave a demonstration of physical exercises.

7. Bombay National Guards:
The Guards celebrated their eleventh anniversary on 6th February.

8. Samata Sainik Dal:
There is a marked increase in membership, but no special activities were noticed.
It wield influence in Nasik and Poona districts only and is not so potentially dangerous.

9. Azad Hind Dal:
The membership has decreased considerably. It has no influence. In Bombay City rallies were held at three places and Col Ehsan Quadir, who is touring India for the purpose of coordinating the activities of the Dal, came to Bombay to place the Dal on a sound footing.

NB—There was no appreciable activity by the other volunteer organizations.

Statement showing the strength of the organizations in the month of February 1947.

1. Rashtra Seva Dal. ... 53,398
2. Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh. ... 28,056
3. Khaksar Volunteer Corps. ... 230
4. Muslim National Guards. ... 15,149
5. Congress Seva Dal. ... 1,500
6. Independent Labour Party, Volunteer Corps. ... 1,065
7. Rashtriya Seva Samiti ... 195
8. Hindu Rashtra Dal. ... 50
9. Lok Sena. ... 1,825
10. Bombay National Guards. ... 125
11. Swastika League Volunteer Corps... 200
12. Arya Vir Dal. ... 250
13. Red Guards. ... 800
14. Samata Sainik Dal.... 10,295
15. Azad Hind Dal.... 620
16. Sikh Nav Javan Dal. ... 200

11. Muslim National Guards Create Panic in Chittagong
Telegram from Ahmad Saghir Chowdhry to M.A. Jinnah, 5 March 1947

CHITTAGONG,

Quaid-i-Azam Jinnah, Mount Pleasant, Malabar Hill, Bombay.

Twenty businessmen purchased all motor vehicles depot Chittagong from disposals. Fazlul Qadir Chowdhury, Secretary, District Muslim League demanded five lac rupees donations. On

AHMAD SAGHIR CHOWDHURY

12. Report from CP and Berar

Extract from the Fortnightly Report from CP and Berar for the Second Half of February 1947, 8 March 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/2/47, NAI.

... 5. Volunteer Organizations:

Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh: There has been an increase in membership during the period under review. 19 new branches have been started in different parts of the province including a womens’ branch at Mandla. Routine activities comprise physical exercises including those with lathi, dagger and sword. Speeches explaining the importance of physical fitness and the need for extending the organization in view of the communal situation was made at a few private meetings; parades were held at Jubbulpore, Katni, Raipur and Damoh, and marching drill practised at Chhindwara, Seoni and Saugor. At intellectual training classes, the implications of the Constituent Assembly, the necessity for the removal of untouchability and the desirability of protection of Hindu religion and culture were explained. At meetings in Amraoti and Katni, the Punjab Government were criticized for declaring the Sangh an unlawful organization. The branches at Nagpur, Kamptee, Chanda, Wardha and Bhandara celebrated their anniversaries by games, tournaments demonstrations of physical training and intellectual classes. The present political situation was explained and volunteers were urged to protect Hindu women and were told their responsibility for the protection of Hinduism and opposition to the vivisection of the country. The abolition of the caste system was advocated and the hope was expressed that members would fight for the integrity of India.

Azad Hind Dal: The branches at Kamptee and Saoner (Nagpur) registered an increase in membership. 7 new branches were started in Nagpur, Betul, Hoshangabad and Jubbulpore districts. The formation of Azad Hind Dais was the main topic at some Congress meetings and at Patan (Drug) Subash Bose’s birthday was utilized for Azad Hind Dal propaganda and speakers at a public meeting advocated the formation of dais in every village as independence will have to be fought for.

Muslim League National Guards: A new branch was formed at Katni (Jubbulpore). About 40 out of 100 applicants who signed enlistment forms with their own blood were accepted at Drug. Parades were held regularly and squad drill performed at various centres. About 40 volunteers of Katni moved out in a procession on cycles to protest against the arrest of League leaders in the Punjab and the ban imposed on the Muslim League National Guards by the Punjab Government. The President of the City Muslim League addressing some 300 men of the Muslim League National Guards on the occasion of the Prophet’s birthday appealed to the audience to be ready to proceed to the Punjab to vindicate the Muslim League cause against tyranny and oppression.

Samata Sainik Dal: A branch of the Dal was started at Mul (Chanda). The chief centres of activity of this institution were the branches in Chanda and Nagpur districts, where physical exercises were performed and marching and drilling done.

Hindustan Red Army: Membership is on the increase. New branches were formed at Chipabar (Hoshangabad), Karanja (Akola) and Buldana. A secret meeting of the local commanders was held at Nagpur at which Shyamnarain Kashmiri made suggestions in regard to the improvement of the organization by the appointment of NCOs, the formation of two full Companies comprising 700 volunteers and the publication of progress reports in the Marathi ‘Inquilab’ the organ of the Congress Socialist Party. In addition to the routine activities of parades and physical exercises, ‘Shankar Memorial Day’ was observed; a procession was taken out during the Subash Bose’s birthday celebrations and the ‘Independence Day’ observed. About 200 volunteers of the Hindustan Red Army and Vir Bajrang Dal in uniform gave a demonstration of squad drill and were afterwards exhorted by Maganlal Bagdi to keep the memory of Shankar who had been hanged for the murder of a police constable, and follow his methods of securing freedom. In Akola, members visited villages and carried on anti-Ministry propaganda saying that the present Government consisting of capitalist Congressmen was indifferent to the needs of the poor. An officers’ training corps was convened at Nagpur for a week, the main features of which were instructions in map reading by Shyamnarain Kashmiri and demonstration in bayonet fighting. It is reported that dummy guns were secured and real bayonets were fixed to the guns for training.

13. Organization of Home Guards

Extract from G.B. Pant’s Speech in the UP Legislative Assembly, 19 March 1947

...You might be knowing that we have prepared a scheme to organize Home Guards. Its object is that while the police is busy in its routine duty and is moving about, a strong force of volunteers should be always available for the maintenance of peace. ... Now Home Guard units are being established at Allahabad, Varanasi, Bareilly, Agra, Kanpur, Gorakhpur, Meerut and several other places. A special officer has been deputed for this work. Advertisements have also been issued for the recruitment of commandants and other officers. I hope very soon a cadre of officers will be created and people of all classes and communities and even of different political persuasions will come forward to join the Home Guard units so that a national force is available to enable us to maintain peace in the province. An effective implementation of the scheme will be of great help to the police and there will also be no need to increase the police force. Those who join the Home Guard units will gain self-confidence as they will learn how to use arms, and will also become disciplined.

These days many voluntary organizations are being formed in this and other provinces to carry on constructive works and to go to the masses and try to raise their standard of living. But if there is any private organization of volunteers meant to defend any particular group of people against some other group, it should be condemned. In fact, if the Government does its job well, there should be no need to raise private organizations of volunteers. Even for self-protection, such forces should not be raised. But unfortunately there is a tendency to raise such forces with the object of coercing some sections of people. This tendency is harmful to society.

On the other hand, the Home Guards force will afford protection to every section of people and also help in creating an atmosphere of mutual goodwill in the province. Hence I hope the honourable members will fully cooperate with the Government in making this scheme a success. Once a beginning is made, there is no reason why this force should not grow rapidly and become a big force. We should not forget that, whatever our differences, the maintenance of peace is of paramount importance. If all sections of people do not work towards this end it cannot be realized. If someone or the other keeps on igniting the fire, it cannot be extinguished even if others keep on dousing the flames. Hence the only proper course for us is to work together to make the Home Guards scheme a success and thus help in establishing a lasting peace in the province.

The Home Guards scheme, which is based on the spirit of cooperation between different communities, will have a great moral effect on the people. If a riot breaks out in a town, the very presence of a body of armed persons representing all communities and political parties will put a damper on the evil designs of unruly elements and the rioting will cease automatically. I hope all the members will realize the importance of the scheme and approve of it....
Chapter 11. Minorities

1. Separate Political Representation for Depressed Classes
   1 January 1947

After a month of patient labour in Britain where he met leading members of the Govt as well as of the opposition, Dr Ambedkar, the Scheduled Castes leader, has returned to India where his main work lies. The trip to London was undertaken in order to place his community’s case before the British Public in a realistic manner. Congress propaganda for the last several years has created a wrong picture of the existing divisions in the country and even the Cabinet Mission was taken in by its false presentation of facts.

The All India Scheduled Castes Federation is the representative organization of the Community and Congress has come in as an interloper to disrupt the strength and solidarity of the organization. The statement by the Cabinet Mission members in the House of Commons that the Congress represented the Scheduled Castes is correct only to the extent that this powerful political organization backed up with its immense resources succeeded in capturing many seats reserved for the Scheduled Castes. That did not mean that the true representatives of the community have been returned to the various legislatures.

Dr Ambedkar’s immediate task in Britain was to demolish this myth and he has done it in the memorandum which he has submitted to the British political leaders. The memorandum itself has not been published but from the interview Dr Ambedkar gave on his arrival in Karachi it is clear that he has gained some measure of success in his mission. He has established personal contacts with several leading personalities in Britain including Mr Attlee and Mr Churchill, and he speaks confidently that when the matter comes to be examined by the Parliament at the time of passing the Act transferring sovereignty some definite steps are sure to be taken to ascertain the real wishes of the Minorities as to the safeguards they need. It is also cheering to hear from the Doctor that there is not only a great deal of sympathy among the British Public for the Scheduled Castes’ cause but also general resentment that the Cabinet Mission should have ignored the claims of the community. Even among the labour party people the feeling is said to be growing whether after all what the labour Government has done for the solution of the Indian constitutional problem is the right thing to do. This is certainly a gain for once the British public gives up wishful thinking and faces the realities of the Indian situation, solution of the Indian problem should become less difficult.

Dr Ambedkar insists on separate political representation for the Depressed Classes as the only means by which their dispute with the Congress can be settled and once this is granted, he thinks, there will be absolute peace between the Congress and the Scheduled Castes. As one who has suffered in his earlier days from Caste Hindu tyranny and ostracism he cannot easily be brought round to trust the Upper Classes among the Hindus nor can he safely place the destiny of his community to their tender mercies. Adequate statutory protection of their rights against Caste Hindu encroachments is a wise course that dictates his line of action. He says, he is wedded to constitutional means of seeking redress of his community's grievances and only after they have been exhausted will he look to other courses. Here is the olive branch extended to the Congress.
Towards Freedom: 1947

The Scheduled Castes leader has denied any secret pact between the Scheduled Castes Federation and the Muslim League. What pact secret or otherwise, can there be except that they are both alive to the common peril that faces them and the country by the imposition of Caste Hindu Congress rule over this sub-continent? The character and Composition of the Congress leadership is such that it has given grave fears among wide sections of the people and if the League and Scheduled Castes are drawn together, it is out of a realization of the common danger and how best to face it in the general interest and well being of the people as a whole. The life of the Depressed Classes in this country has been that of slaves for ages and they are determined to end it. It is for them to decide as to how best they can do it and not for the Congress to dictate.

2. Safeguards for Minority Rights

Extracts from the Proceedings of Bengal Provincial Buddhist Association, 6 January 1947

AICC Papers, File No. CL-3 (Part 3)/ 1946-47, NMML.

To

The President,
The Indian National Congress,
New Delhi.

Sir,

I am directed by the Governing Body of the Bengal Provincial Buddhist Association to forward herewith a copy of Extracts from the Proceedings of a meeting of the said Governing Body dated the 5th January, 1947 for your information and request you to exert your influence for taking necessary action in the matter.

I have the honour to be,

Your most obedient servant.

Nirmal Chandra Baruya
General Secretary.

Enclosure

Extract from the proceedings of a meeting of the Governing Body of the Bengal Provincial Buddhist Association held on the 5th January, 1947, at the office of the Association at 123A, Dharamtala Street, Calcutta:

'Resolution No. 1. The Bengal Provincial Buddhist Association while welcoming the inaugural address by Dr Rajendra Prosad as permanent President of the Indian Constituent Assembly on the 11th December 1946 and his views on the programme of framing a “model constitution” for an independent and free India, which “will satisfy the people of all groups and communities and religions inhabiting this vast land,” considers that in successfully working out such a constitution worthy of the name, much greater emphasis should be placed on securing “special safeguards” for the smaller minorities including the Buddhists. No doubt, the Buddhists of India today have dwindled down to a little over five lacs of people. Still their cultural and international importance can hardly be ignored. They are, however, to be found in their largest number in the Province of Bengal where they form a distinctly separate community by religion, culture, tradition, social status, manners and customs and temperament. The Buddhists of Bengal consisting of diverse races speaking the different dialects, are recognized as a “minority community” by the Government and their population is 1,46,000, which is evidently larger than that of the Anglo-Indians and the Indian Christians of the Province and also that of the Parsees in the whole of India, while including the non-regulated Tribal Areas of the Chittagong Hill Tracts and Darjeeling their number is about four lacs. This Association therefore notes with considerable concern the present unsatisfactory position of the Buddhists in the field of constitutional changes of their country, which is due to the unwise and irresponsible action of the Bengal Congress Parliamentary Board because the latter failed to consider favourably the legitimate claims for Buddhist representation in the Constituent Assembly which is a Constitution-making body, in spite of the fact that even on population basis the Buddhists represent a comparatively larger recognized minority in Bengal.

Resolution No. 2. This Association considers that responsibility for safeguarding the interests of all minority communities including the Buddhists is essentially that of the Constituent Assembly and the Indian National Congress, which claims to represent all communities and sections of people of India. This Association would strongly urge that there should be an early revision of the existing Congress policy with a view to enable all communities and sections of people of India including the Buddhists to participate in the great work of framing her future constitution the success of which depends on mutual trust, good will and co-operation of all concerned.

Resolution No. 3. This Association urges that there should be implemented immediately the recommendation on “special safeguards for minorities” envisaged in paragraph 20 of the British Cabinet Mission’s Proposals as embodied in the statement by the Secretary of the State for India on the 16th May, 1946, and having regard to the importance to the cultural, educational and religious contributions of the Buddhists of this country, this Association stresses the need for adequate Buddhist representation both in the Constituent Assembly and in the Minorities’ Advisory Committee before their arriving at final decision on fundamental rights and interests of this community.

Resolution No. 4. This Association desires to impress upon the Constituent Assembly that the Buddhists are in favour of a united and undivided free India under a single constitution with separate constituencies for minority communities including the Buddhists, with reservation of seats for election of Buddhist representatives to the Central Legislatures of India and to the Provincial Legislatures of Bengal.

Resolution No. 5. This Association stresses the desirability that the parts and tracts that are now treated as excluded Tribal Areas such as those in the Chittagong Hill Tracts and Darjeeling, which are inhabited mainly by the Buddhists, should be granted franchise [sic] rights so that the Buddhist dwellers therein may send up their own representatives by election along with their co-religionists who have already been granted franchise [sic] rights.

Resolution No. 6. Resolved that copies of the foregoing resolutions, Nos. 1 to 5, be forwarded to the President, Indian Constituent Assembly, to the President, Indian National Congress, to Dr Syamaprosad Mookerjee and other leading Members concerned with a request to take necessary action in the matter.'

N.C. Baruya
General Secretary

3. Appeal to Recognize Gurkhas in India as a Minority Community
Letter from the All India Gurkha League to J.B. Kripalani, 20 January 1947
AICC Papers, File No. CL–3 (Part 2)/1946-47, NMML.

Darjeeling
Pujya Rastrapati Jie,

I have the honour to append hereby the resolutions passed in a public meeting held on Saturday, the 18th instant in Darjeeling under the auspices of the All-India Gurkha League, for your kind perusal and favour.

Resolution I
‘Resolved that three million Gurkhas, domiciled in India, having their own linguistic, cultural and racial separateness residing in India for the last several centuries, be recognized as a Minority Community for the safeguard of their peculiar rights by the All-India National Congress to whom the Gurkhas, as represented by the All-India Gurkha League, are pledged to fight for the complete freedom of India and for the security of a united India. If recognized as a minority community, the All-India Gurkha League, on behalf of the three million Gurkhas, assures the All-India National Congress that they will not be an anti-national force but rather they will be instrumental in cementing the national edifice in India torn by the abominable communalism.’

Resolution 2.
‘Resolved that the copy of the above resolution be forwarded to,

1. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Vice-President, the Interim Govt of India
2. Acharya J.B. Kripalani, the President, AICC.
3. HH the Maharaja of Nepal for information and necessary action’

Yours sincerely,
T. Manaen
Secretary
All India Gurkha League
4. Anglo-Indians Wish to Join the Muslim League

Letter from W.B. Scott to M.A. Jinnah, 26 February 1947

32 Marquis Street, Calcutta

My dear Sir,

Pardon my troubling you. Since Anglo-Indians and Muslims have been neighbours together, it is, therefore, nothing but right [that] we should both join hands together [sic] in New India.

I understand that owing to a certain Rule, Anglo-Indians are not allowed to become members of the League. Will you kindly consider this point and I request the favour of your kindly issuing such order as your good self thinks fit and proper whereby Anglo-Indians can become members of the League.

Anxiously awaiting for [sic] a favourable reply at your convenience.

Trusting no offence is taken,

Yours obediently,

W.B. Scott

5. ‘Muslims Will Establish Pakistan in Punjab: What Will Stone Gods Give Us?—Mandal’

_Dawn_, 6 March 1947.

AGRA, Tuesday.—The _UP scheduled castes federation conference_ was held at Firozabad, on 1 and 2 March with the Hon’ble J.N. Mandal, Law Member, Interim Govt, participating. About 3,000 delegates came from all parts of UP. Besides the delegates nearly 25,000 visitors and Mr Raj Bhoj, General Secretary of the All-India Scheduled Castes Federation, Mr Shastri (Bombay), Mr Gopi Chand Pipal (Agra), Chaudhri Parushram (Aligarh), Mr Karan Singh Ken, Ex-Parliamentary Secretary, UP Government, Dr Manik Chand, Ex-MLA, UP, were present.

Mr Mandal, in his speech, laid stress on Hindu–Muslim unity. He said: ‘When I have established personal relations between Scheduled Castes and Muslims I see no reason why Mr Gandhi can noe [sic] do so.’

Through communal award the Scheduled Castes were allowed separate electorates, but Mr Gandhi said, he would give his life but would not permit that. Then in Poona Pact, Dr Ambedkar signed a death warrant for Scheduled Castes, which he repents even now.

Referring to His Majesty’s statement dated 20 February, he said: ‘Pakistan will be established in the Punjab under the Muslim League and N-W Provinces will not remain aloof from the League.’

He said: ‘I do not believe in stone gods. Mr Gandhi, who is our enemy No. 1, wants to engage our attention in opening temples for us. But may I know what stone gods will give us?’

‘We want political power, separate electorates, representation in services, trade, commerce, and schools for our children and not merely entry in the temples. Mr Gandhi calls us Harijans, “creatures of God”. Are Mr Gandhi and Jawaharlal not creatures of God? Why do not they call themselves Harijans?’
Towards Freedom: 1947

‘I have joined hands with the League because the Muslims and Scheduled Castes are both poor and backward. They are mostly labourers and agriculturists at least in Bengal and need immense relief. So no law will be made for the good of Muslims, which will not be beneficial to the Scheduled Castes. I joined the League Ministry in Bengal. They gave me three Ministers, three Parliamentary Secretaries and ten lakhs of rupees for education. When Qaed-e-Azam took me into the Interim Government, I made it clear that I will work for the Scheduled Castes, and there was no objection. We were given seats without any condition.’

‘The Hindus, who call us Hindus have given us no concession so far. They always opposed us. Sir Cripps who is a best friend of the Congress did not even recognize our right to self-determination.’

Mr Mandal appreciated the idea of the Federation to organize Satyagrah against the UP Government from 25 March. He regretted the Ministers did not care to reply to the memorandum submitted by the Scheduled Castes Federation on their demands.

At a reception given in his honour Mr Mandal said that Mr Jinnah is not only the leader of the Muslims but of all the minorities in India. He is the biggest man of India.

6. Unite Minorities behind the Muslim League
Letter from L. Lobo to M.A. Jinnah, 18 March 1947

44 Islampura Street, Golpita, Bombay

Dear Sir,

As I write this with great avidity and impatience, I cannot forbear discovering the same impatience in thanking you immensely for the trouble in reading my epistle.

I am intensely happy to be in the knowledge [sic] that the League is open to members of the Minorities as well and it is the dearest wish of my heart to be a partner in such a worthy organization. I therefore approach you with the pledge that henceforth I shall dedicate my services to the cause of the Muslims and the Minorities.

I had thought it futile to plunge into politics of our country but after much deliberations I am convinced that the Congress is on the wrong road to freedom and the only road to liberation is the one leading to Pakistan. On my way to this land of destiny I seek your aid and counsel which I do hope will be forthcoming from you with pleasure. If you will afford me the full support of my plans to band together the Minorities for the great struggle to form the Pakistan State, I am confident to succeed in my Sacred Mission.

I believe implicitly in Pakistan, the idea has possessed me and it is the only plan bearing practical operating value. What is preached by the Congress as the great road to freedom is for us indeed the high road to servitude. We shall not consent to remain serfs of Hindu Dictators for they stand for the indefinite promotion of Hindus alone with utter disregard to our welfare. Pakistan is the only defence against any designs of the Congress aimed at the destruction of the Muslims and Minorities.

The Congress is predominantly a Hindu organization having primarily a different racial attitude towards us and all the love in the world cannot wholly take away that knowledge from us. We shall not let them transform our country into a Bania Rule but shall stand united to crush Congress piracy. Our cause must prevail and is beyond moral challenge. Pakistan is our destiny and without it hope would vanish from a restless and awakened India. We shall not let ourselves be dragged as captives by Banias but fight their idea of liberation. Our indomitable spirit and willing sacrifices shall prove to the world that we are worthy to hold the citadel against all aggressors.

If the Congress is an organization dedicated to the uplift of India there is no shorter cut to an understanding of their machinery than the tragic example of the Untouchables. How then can such an organization perpetuate the status of Muslims and Minorities? Let Congress understand that we know the time of day in the world we inhabit and we will not be fooled—no systematic propaganda can mislead us. Their grandiose plan to seize power and to overthrow us must be toned down. They are unfit to trust in action as in word, they have no virtues as partners in the difficult adventure of freedom and can never deal constructively with the affairs of our country. Their expedition is a tragedy of errors for they have met each crisis with an improvisation while patching the immediate breach has generated into new misunderstanding, thus bringing a useful cause into disrepute. If the Congress was so benevolent, so unselfish and so devoted to the public good we would tolerate their usurpation out of gratitude. But they have placed their own interests above national advancement and it is an impossible piece of Idealism. We have therefore no choice but to fight to keep the flag of Pakistan flying over the Citadel. My mission is to unite the Minority elements to collaborate with you and I await with much interest your immediate reply to enable me to contact you and discuss at length the progressive plan I have in view. May Providence grant you unbroken health to witness the birth and functioning of Pakistan is my prayer.

Yours faithfully,

L. Lobo

7. ‘Part and Parcel of Hindu Community: Not Joining League—Eight Punjab Harijan MLAs’ Statement’

LAHORE, 20 March.—The false propaganda which had been carried on against the Harijan Members of the Punjab Assembly of their alleged intention to join the Muslim League has been nailed to the counter by the eight Harijan MLAs in a joint statement issued by them today.... All these MLAs have solemnly declared their determination to stand by the Hindus and the Sikhs of the Punjab.

‘Those who make false propaganda,’ they say, ‘that the Harijan MLAs are going to join the League or would join it in the near future are only the interested persons of the League itself.’

The Harijan MLAs say: ‘We are of the firm conviction that the Pakistani Ministry is not the panacea of all the religious, moral, cultural, social, political and economic problems and a United India with a strong centre is its best solution. The disturbances in Bengal and the Punjab have shown that no difference was made between the caste Hindus and the Harijans thereby treating them alike. When at the time of miseries and sorrows we have been a part and parcel of the Hindu community it is too much to think that the temporary benefits and comforts of life would win us to the other side.’
The signatories are: Mr Prithvi Singh Azad, MLA, Member of the Constituent Assembly, Chaudhri Harbhaj Ram, MLA, Member of the Constituent Assembly, Chaudhri Sunder Singh, MLA, former Parliamentary Secretary, Chaudhri Matu Ram, MLA, Chaudhri Sant Ram, MLA, Chaudhri Mehr Chand, MLA, Chaudhri Prem Singh, MLA, and Chaudhri Sunder Lal, MLA.
Chapter 12. Refugees*

1. Relief Arrangements for NWFP
   Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Mehr Chand Khanna, 13 January 1947

   New Delhi

   My dear Mehr Chand,

   I have just learnt that the tribal people in Hazara have submitted to our terms and, therefore, it is not necessary for any further action to be taken against them. This is good. But news from the settled areas of the province in Hazara continues to be bad. I am sure your Government is doing everything possible. I am rather worried about the fate of the refugees, more especially those who have gone over to Kashmir and near Muzaffarabad. Apparently no one looks after them there. Sardar Patel told me yesterday that he could arrange to have some money sent for relief work for these refugees, who are, I understand, principally Sikhs. I suggested to him that the money might be sent to you and you could make proper arrangements for their relief. I hope you will be able to do this.

   Yours sincerely,
   Jawaharlal Nehru

---

* The issue of refugees, relief and resettlement is interwoven with communalism in general. For more on these questions, see the chapter on communalism.
2. Rehabilitation of and Compensation for Riot Victims

Letter from S.N. Mozumdar to Home Department Enclosing a Memorandum, 25 January 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 22/1/47, NAI.

CONFIDENTIAL

EXPRESS LETTER
No. 300 C. 40/47
Government of Bihar.
Political Department.
Special Section.

From
S.N. Mozumdar, Esqr, ICS,
Chief Secretary to Government.

To Homex, New Delhi.

Patna, the 25th January 1947.

Reference Express letter No. 22/1/47-Poll (I), dated the 3rd January 1947 from the Government of India, Home Department, regarding question Nos. 3 and 5 to be asked by Mr A.E.H. Jaffar in the Central Legislative Assembly. The information required by the Government of India is as under in so far as the province of Bihar is concerned:

Question D No. 3.
(a), (b) and (c)—The number of persons killed in communal riots during the period from the 2nd September 1946 to the 15th January 1947 was 4679 Muslims and 272 Hindus.
(d)—The instructions given by the Provincial Government were to disperse.
(e)—The answer is in the negative.

Question D No. 5.
(a)—A memorandum giving information regarding the measures taken by the Provincial Government in the matter of rehabilitation and compensation of the victims of the communal riots, is enclosed.

Chief Secretary to Government

Government of Bihar
Political Department
Special Section
MEMORANDUM

The Provincial Government promulgated the Harvesting of Paddy and Cultivation of Rabi Ordinance and deputed about 200 officers for this work. Instructions have also been issued to the local officers to assist the evacuees in harvesting the crop themselves with the help of armed force and vehicles.

Government have announced a house building grant on the average of Rs 250 per house leaving discretion to local officers to vary the amount according to requirement. The general policy is to meet the entire cost of repairing the houses damaged during the riots as far as possible. The maximum limit has not been fixed but it is contemplated that amounts in excess of Rs 700 for any single house should be given as interest free loans. There will not, however, be a large number of houses in this category. In order to make the house-building programme more effective, arrangements for extensive supply of building materials like bamboos, wood door, planks, tiles, thatch, and other things, have been taken in hand. These will be stocked at control places from where they will be issued according to requirement and the cost adjusted against the grant sanctioned.
Refugees

A rehabilitation grant of Rs 200 per family on the average has also been sanctioned which will be distributed by the District Officers after suitable enquiry. Here again discretion has been left to District Officers to vary the grant within this average according to the economic condition and estimate of damage suffered by the family.

Government have already placed at the disposal of the Relief Commissioner a sum of Rs 6,70,000 for expenditure on house building and rehabilitation.

A large number of Momins were affected by the riots and in order to rehabilitate them, special supplies of yarn have been made to them from time to time. An Industrial Home has also been set up at Patna with a number of looms to provide employment to the weavers for which they are paid at attractive rates.

Other problems arising out of the riots as maintenance of orphans and widows, education of students whose studies were affected by the riots and maintenance of abandoned cattle are receiving consideration.

A proclamation was issued on the 11th November declaring certain areas (the district of Patna, the Sadar subdivision of Chapra and the Johanabad subdivision of Gaya) as dangerous and disturbed areas under the Police Act of 1861. Press Notes followed inviting those who sustained injuries to apply for compensation under the terms of the Act.

Adequate military protection has been given to the disturbed areas. In addition the Army are patrolling certain roads and are also conducting flag marches. Government have sanctioned Addition Armed Police of nearly 2000 in strength recruited from ex-servicemen to replace the army. Collective fines have been imposed and are being imposed. Investigation of criminal cases are proceeding vigorously inspite of great difficulties of obtaining witnesses who have left the province in very large numbers. Improvement of communication in the disturbed areas is under consideration.

3. Muslim League Attitude Hampers Relief Work in Bihar

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Col N.S. Gill, 26 January 1947

My dear Colonel Gill,

I have received your letter of the 22nd instant today, and I am glad that you have been able to convince Gandhiji of the usefulness of your plan and he has accepted your workers, though limited in number, for his work there.

I do not know what work your volunteers can do in Bihar. There is no trouble there, and if there is any trouble it is with regard to the relief and rehabilitation of the Muslim sufferers due to the obstructionist attitude of the Muslim League which has practically taken charge of the relief operations. The Government spends money through the Muslim League, and the Muslim League volunteers do not allow the evacuees to go back to their villages or discourage them from doing so. No incident has taken place since the first week of the disturbances, and there is no question of any sense of insecurity now. However, I would have no objection to your sending your volunteers there if Gandhiji agrees. I cannot take the responsibility of doing any work in Bihar without his consent. He is sure to know about it and ask me about it, and I would have to explain. As I have told you, I keep nothing secret from him, and if you want me to finance this project you had better obtain his approval.
Towards Freedom: 1947

You are not right when you say that this work is not under Gandhiji, and therefore you can deal direct with me. He keeps his vigilant eye on the Bihar work also. You know recently the Bihar Ministry had sent a deputation to him to explain the work that they have been doing. He is in correspondence with them, and anything that happens in Bihar goes to him directly or indirectly immediately. You may, therefore, obtain his consent and I will do the needful.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

4. Bihar Refugees Migrate to Bengal

Text of Adjournment Motion by Sasanka Sekhar Sanyal in Central Legislative Assembly, c. January 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 24/1/47, NAI.

NOTES IN THE HOME DEPT.

Adjournment motion by Mr Sanyal

Motion
The necessity and duty on the part of the Government of India to advise His Excellency the Governor General in Council and other relevant authorities asking the latter to prevent migration of Bihar people into Bengal which has been taking place at the instance of and through the direct encouragement and assistance of the Government of Bengal.

Statement of facts
According to the reports of Provincial Governments about a lakh of refugees from Bihar have moved into Bengal and near about 2,200 families have gone from Bihar to Sind or are on the point of moving. It is not possible to have an exact idea of the number of persons that have moved out of Bihar unless the refugees who have moved have been or are regularly counted.

The Bengal Government have stated that they are not encouraging such migration.

Reason for opposing admission
The matter is not of urgent importance and the question affects two Provincial Governments and their conduct in relating to law and order and migration of refugees respectively.
5. Question of Compensation to Riot Victims

Telegram from the Assistant Secretary to Government of Bengal to Home Department, Government of India, 1 February 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 22/1/47, NAI.

Government of Bengal,
Home Department,
Political.

From—Bengal, Calcutta.
To—Home in, New Delhi.

No. 422 - p., dated Calcutta, the 1st February 1947.

Reference Home Department Express letter No. 22/1/46-Poll (I), dated the 3rd January 1947 and in continuation of this Government Express letter No. 407-P., dated the 31st January 1947. A statement showing the position in Bengal with regard to rehabilitation and payment of compensation to riot victims is forwarded herewith as reply to Mr A.E.H. Jaffer’s question D No. S5

31.1.-C, PN.1.2 Asstt Secy to the Govt of Bengal

Statement showing the position with regard to rehabilitation of and payment of compensation to the riot victims in this province.

Government have already decided that no compensation can be given out of provincial revenues for the losses or damages sustained by the people through communal disturbances.

They have however sanctioned the following kinds of financial help from their funds for the purpose of rehabilitation of riot-victims in Calcutta and other places:

I. Calcutta

Free grants not exceeding Rs 1,000 per individual or family to

(a) persons of small means, having their own places of business or exercising their profession, trade or calling independently, who have lost their means of livelihood through riot; and

(b) small salaried employees whose earning capacity has been impaired by loss of property during the riots. These grants are intended to assist persons in both the above categories in the replacement of household effects and repair of bustee dwellings. They are also intended to assist persons in clause (a) in the replacement of lost stock-in-trade and equipment and persons in clause (b) with replacement of personal effects necessary to their earning capacity.

Mr N.L. Hindlay ICS, has been appointed as the adjudicator for the purpose of assessment and payment of the grants. The work of assessment has almost been completed and the payment will commence shortly.

II. Other places.

(a) Free grants up to Rs 250 per family to indigent persons for reconstruction of or repair to their destroyed or damaged huts. In special cases the local officer have power to raise the limit to Rs 350 per family. In both the cases however the amounts are inclusive of the values of the building materials issued, if any.
6. ‘Hazara Situation Normal: Refugees Returning’

_The Tribune, 4 February 1947._

PESHAWAR, 3 Feb.—The situation in the Hazara district is now normal and the refugees have started returning to their villages, excepting in snow-bound area where rehabilitation is not possible for some time. This information was given to Maulana Abul Kalam Azad, Education Member in the Interim Government, who made telephonic enquiry last night from Mr Mehr Chand Khanna, Minister, Frontier Government about the situation in Hazara.

Mr Khanna told Maulana Azad that for those refugees belonging to this snow-bound areas relief camp accommodating about 3,000 persons had been established for the...period where all possible facilities including food, other essentials of life, medical aid and education for both boys and girls had been provided by the provincial Government. Offenders were being apprehended, searches being made and stolen property being recovered. Peace committees had also been formed.

Mr Mehr Chand Khanna is expected to visit the spot shortly to personally study the situation.—API

7. Relief for Refugees in Bihar

_Letter from Col N.S. Gill to Vallabhbhai Patel, 5 February 1947_
_SPC, Vol. IV, pp. 224–6._

Achint
PO Bankipore (Patna)
5 February 1947

My dear Sardarji,

I enclose herewith copies of letters (i) from Gandhiji to Mr Suhrawardy, (ii) from Mr Suhrawardy to Mr Jafar Imam, MLA. This explains the present position. Gandhiji’s letter was written after further talks with me so as to leave no reason for doubts now or in future.

The two letters made it compulsory for me to come here and I arrived this morning. I have already met many Muslim leaders, including Syed Abdul Aziz. They appear very keen on taking me round and are making all arrangements. Needless to say, I have no comments to make yet. I have over a dozen men and lady volunteers here but these are lying quiet yet. In all probability I have to go back to report to Gandhiji and only then launch on any work here if at all necessary. But even if no future work is to be done here the commitment here stands for this month as by the time I report to Gandhiji and finally decide about this place it will be about the end of this month and I have to keep these volunteers here till that date. I can meet the expenses of the party here including travelling and other things, at a cost of Rs 3,000. So, would you be good enough to send me a cheque for that amount at the address here earliest possible? The cheque can be made payable preferably here at Patna or at Calcutta.

As regards the work in Noakhali, line 3 of Mr Suhrawardy's letter amounts to consent in writing. So Gandhiji can utilize my workers for as long as they are useful and I hope they will stay there till his mission succeeds.

I am almost certain when I say that I shall not call upon you for any further amounts. If there is to be no work here then with these Rs 3,000 I will wind up the party here and meet their expenses right to their houses. If the work is to be done (with Gandhiji’s approval of course) then this sum will enable me to carry on till the end of this month....

I myself wanted to come back after having settled it in Noakhali—but in fairness you will agree I had to come here and it would have been an unhappy way to leave this alone.

This explains the situation up to date. Will you please send me (i) the amount Rs 3,000, (ii) any instructions regarding here at this address but earliest possible, please?

... I do hope Sikhs will solidly remain with the Congress. How I want to organize the Sikh youth and they are crying for it too! The rest I will reserve till our next meeting.

I do hope you have fully recovered your health.

Yours affectionately,
Niranjan Singh Gill

ENCLOSURE 1

GANDHI’S LETTER TO H.S. SUHRAWARDY

Kazirkhil
Ramganj P.S.
Noakhali District
28 January 1947

Sardar Niranjan Singh Gill has told me of all the talk he had with you. He says whilst you do not mind his men working in Noakhali you would doubt his bona fides until he with his men worked in Bihar just as assiduously as in Noakhali. In the circumstances I have told him that he should first go to Bihar and work there and in order to be able to do so effectively he should take from you a note of recommendation to the leader in Bihar of the League party. Unless he is so armed, I have told him, his work might, from the League point of view, fall flat. I added that he should keep himself in touch with you regarding his work there.

As to his work in Noakhali, I have told him that, regard being had to your views as interpreted by the Sardar, he should withdraw his men from Noakhali unless you approved of his work in Noakhali. It is not enough that you tolerate his men’s work. It should have your written approval. His men can only be here as accepted friends of both Hindus and Muslims. I cannot entertain them on any other terms. I have told him too that he should find financial support, not from private sources including funds at my disposal, but he should, in order to be aboveboard, depend upon open public support. Therefore I have suggested to him too that, if you approve of his activity here, you should subscribe to his appeal even if it be a token rupee. But there may be difficulty in this of which I could have no knowledge even though you might approve of his activity in Noakhali.
My dear Jafar Imam Sahib,

You must have heard of Col Niranjan Singh Gill of the INA. He has been recently to Noakhali with my consent for the purpose of seeing things for himself and helping in the rehabilitation and the return of Hindu refugees. He took a fairly strong contingent of Sikhs with him. I have, however, been pressing upon him that he should go to Bihar also and see things for himself and then he will realize what has taken place and then I shall be in a position to discuss with him communal disturbances and the forms that they take and what should be done to prevent them. Lest his presence be misunderstood, he has asked me to give a letter of introduction to the Muslim leaders. As his motives are purely altruistic and he is anxious to serve in the cause of humanity, I am accordingly giving him this letter and hope that you will let everybody know so that there may be no mistake or apprehension regarding his presence there. I wish also that you might give him a correct picture of what has actually taken place and even show him, if possible, some of the places where the Muslims have been murdered, particularly women and children, or where their bodies have been thrown down into the wells and so on. I think he should see for himself some visible atrocities which have been committed on women if such evidences are at present available in the hospitals or in your refugee camps.

Yours sincerely,

Shaheed Suhrawardy
(H.S. Suhrawardy)
[Chief Minister of Bengal]

Jafar Imam, Esqr.
Patna.

8. Exodus of Refugees from Bihar

Question in the Legislative Assembly, 8 February 1947
Home Poll (I), File. No. 22/4/47, NAI.

QUESTION FOR THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

AHMED E.H. JAFFER: (a) Will the Honourable the Home Member please make a statement to this House on the question of Bihar exodus?
(b) What is the extent of this Exodus of the Muslims of Bihar into other Provinces?
(c) Is it a fact that the Bihar Government are placing every obstacle to the people of that province to move into other provinces for safety?
(d) What inducement has the Government of Bihar given to the Muslim population to remain in the Province?
(e) Will Government request the Bihar Government to give every assistance to those of the population who wish to leave the Province? If not, why not?

***
NOTES IN THE HOME DEPARTMENT

Please see the Legislative Assembly question in the PUC.

2. The Bihar Government in their fortnightly report for November 1946 have stated that intensive propaganda of many of the Muslim League volunteers discouraged refugees from returning to their villages and many have even left the Province and have gone to Bengal and other places. In their fortnightly report for the first half of December, 1946 the Bengal Government have stated that in Burdwan there are about 20,000 Bihar refugees and in Calcutta about 9,000 refugees. The Bengal Government themselves do not appear to be happy about the refugees from Bihar since they have said that the presence of Bihar refugees in Burdwan has been disturbing labour and increasing communal tension. It will also be seen that there are about 25,000 Bengal refugees in Assam. Whether these movements of refugees should be termed a mass exodus of refugees from Bihar to Bengal is a matter of opinion and we have no information as to the Bihar Government’s placing any obstacles. In this connection attention is also invited to the United Press of India message below.

It does not seem necessary to address the Bihar Government for any materials. We may await the admission of the question. It admitted we may reply that the Government understand that a few thousands of refugees have gone from Bihar to Bengal and other places as some refugees from Bengal have also gone to Assam and other places. We may also say that as these movements of population are related to the maintenance of public order the matter is one for the Provincial Govts. to settle and that there is no occasion for the Central Govt to intervene.

G.V. Bedekar
3/1/47
Secy

I argue that the matter is not one of interprovincial migration which would be a central concern. I would hope that the question would be disallowed.

If it is admitted there would be nothing gained by reference to the Govt of Bihar since the material for a reply will be in the ‘receiving’ provinces.

The line of reply would I think be to say that the matter is of provincial concern and that neither the G of Bihar nor any other Govt has applied for the intervention of the G of I which is not preapared to intervene in these circumstances.

If any detailed reply is thought of it might be on these lines—

(a) and (e) No Sir: the matter is not primarily the concern of the Central Govt.
(b) [the figures upto date so far as reported—for example, from Bengal—could be given]
(c) No—but incitements are reported to be offered to prevent Muslims returning to their villages.
(d) Arrangements have been made to ensure the safety of returning villagers.

A.E. Porter
4/1/47

HM

HM is doubtful if we would be able to avoid the question on legal grounds. Information on (a) of this question may be obtained from the Provinces concerned including the Govt of Bihar.
and a statement should be prepared on the basis of the information received. Clauses (b) and (c) may be referred to the Bihar Govt only.

V. Shankar
7/1/47 PS

Secy
***

Original

No. 673

Coorg Chief Commissioner’s Office,
Mercara, the 17th January 1947

From: Diwan Bahadur K. Chengappa, CIE,
Chief Commissioner of Coorg.
To: The Deputy Secretary to the Government of India,
Home Department, New Delhi, 3.

Subject: Communal Disturbances—Refugees from Bihar.

Sir,

Please refer to your express letter No. 22/4/47-Poll (I), dated the 9th January 1947 on the subject mentioned above.

There are no refugees from Bihar in Coorg.

For Chief Commissioner

***

GOVERNMENT OF ASSAM.
HOME DEPARTMENT. POLICE BRANCH.
No. HPL.6/47/6.
Dated Shillong, the 18th Jan. 1947

From
Chief Secretary to the Government of Assam,

To
The Secretary to the Government of India,
Home Department.

Subject: Communal Disturbances—Refugees from Bihar.

Reference: Mr G.V. Bedekar’s letter No. 22/4/47-Poll (I), dated the 9th January, 1947.

Sir,

I am directed to say that so far as known to this Government, no refugees have migrated to this Province from Bihar.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,
Chief Secretary to the Government of Assam.

***
EXPRESS LETTER

From: Baluchistan, Sibi
To: Home in, New Delhi.

No. 12-P15/47(I)
Dated Sibi, the 20 January 1947.
Subject: Communal Disturbances—Refugees from Bihar.

Your Express letter 22/4/47-Poll (I), January ninth aaa No refugees from Bihar have migrated to Baluchistan.

for Agent to the Governor-General in Baluchistan

***

EXPRESS LETTER

From
A. Said, Esquire, MA, LLB (Cantab), Bar-at-Law, Home Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Delhi.

To
The Secretary to the Government of India,
Home Department, New Delhi.

No. F. 16(3) 47-Home
Dated Delhi, the 23rd January 1947.

Kindly refer to Mr Bedekar’s express letter No. 22/4/47-Poll (I), dated the 9th January 1947, asking for material for reply to a question in the Legislative Assembly for the forthcoming Budget session regarding migration of refugees from Bihar to the Delhi Province. No definite information is available in regard to the exact number of immigrants from Bihar after the recent disturbances in that Province, but an approximate estimate of refugees who have arrived in Delhi from Bihar is eighteen.

A.A. Said
Home Secretary to the Chief Commissioner, Delhi

***

EXPRESS LETTER

No. A/26-2

From: The Chief Commission Ajmer-Merwara
To: Home, New Delhi 3.

Dated Ajmer the 23 January 1947.

Communal Disturbance. Refugees from Bihar

Reference Home Department Express letter No. 22/4/47-Poll (I), dated the 9th January 1947.

2. So far as is known to this Administration there is only one refugee from Bihar in Ajmer-Mewara. He is Mohd Khalil son of Wazir of Patna and is staying in Mohalla Kumrah, near Shahjahnri Dargah, Ajmer. He brought with him his wife, mother-in-law and son.

FOR CHIEF COMMISSIONER AJMER MERWARA

***
INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

TO RE CUTTACK

REFCE: YOUR EXPRESS LETTER NUMBER 22/4/47-POLL (1), DATED NINTH JANY 1947 AAA NO REFUGEES FROM BIHAR HAVE MIGRATED ORISSA = ORISSA

***

INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

TO

RE BOMBAY 24 STE PTY 75 IMMEDIATE HOMEIN NEW DELHI

YOUR EXPRESS LETTER NO 22/4/47-POLL (1) OF 9TH INSTANT REPORTS SO FAR RECEIVED SHOW THAT ONLY ONE REFUGEE CAME TO THIS PROVINCE ON 1ST INSTANT AND LEFT ON 18TH ALSO A MUSLIM EMPLOYEE OF RESERVE BANK AT MONGHIR WHO HAS NOT SUFFERED IN RIOTS HAS LEFT HIS JOB AND COME TO BOMBAY TO SEEK EMPLOYMENT HE IS BEING HELPED BY MUSLIM LEAGUE RELIEF COMMITTEE = BOMBAY SPECIAL.

***

INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

LUCKNOW 25 STE 34 HOMEIN NEW DELHI

REFCE HOMEIN EXPRESS LETTER NO 22/4/47-POLL (1) DATED JANY NINTH STOP SUMMARY ENQUIRY REVEALS NO REPEAT NO EVIDENCE OF REFUGEES FROM BIHAR MIGRATING INTO THIS PROVINCE = UPAD =

***

IMMEDIATE

GOVERNMENT OF SIND.

No: L.A.40/A/I-H(S).

To,

The Deputy Secretary to the Government of India,
Home Department,
New Delhi.

Subject: Communal disturbances—Refugees from Bihar

Reference your Express Letter No: 22/4/47-Poll (1), dated the 9th January 1947, on the subject noted above.

2. I am to state that in this province refugees from Bihar have so far migrated only to the City of Karachi.

3. The Chairman Bihar Emigrants Reception Committee, Karachi, reports that 200 men, representing 200 families, are already in Karachi: their families are reaching Karachi in batches. In addition to this number, two thousand poor families are starting from Bihar for Karachi by special train very soon according to the....

***
INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT.

X RA NAGPUR 25 STE 27 HOMIN NEW DELHI
REFCE YOUR EXPRESS LETTER NO 22-4-47-POLL (1) OF NINTH JANY STOP NO REFUGEES FROM BIHAR HAVE MIGRATED TO THIS PROVINCE: = CP =

***

INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT.

OOO ND CALCUTTA 27 STE PTY 104 IMMEDIATE HOMIE IN NEW DELHI
REFERENCE YOUR EXPRESS LETTER 22/4/47-POLL (1), DATED JANUARY
NINTH STOP NUMBER OF REFUGEES IN CAMPS IS ABOUT SIXTYONE THOUSAND STOP THESE EXCLUDE LARGE NUMBER LIVING IN BUSTEESES IN CALCUTTA AND MILL AREAS IN SUBURBS STOP IN HOOGHLY MILL AREA ABOVE NUMBER ESTIMATED TO BE ABOUT SEVEN THOUSAND = 50 = STOP FIGURES OF THOSE LIVING WITH FRIENDS AND RELATIVES NOT AVAILABLE BUT THEIR NUMBER BELIEVED TO BE ABOUT FIFTY THOUSAND STOP REFERENCE YOUR EXPRESS LETTER 74 D/47 ROLL (1) DATED JANUARY NINTH STOP
THIS GOVERNMENT CONCERNED WITH ITEM (b) ONLY AND REPLY IS IN THE NEGATIVE = BENGAL

***

Express Letter

17/6-BI

From: Norwef-Peshawar
To: Homein-New Delhi

subject: Communal disturbances—Refugee from Bihar.

Message:

Reference your Express letter No. 22/4/47-Poll (I), dated the 9.1.1947.

2. A Muslim Doctor and his relation arrived at Mardan, North West Frontier Province on the 24th December, 1946, as refugees from Bihar. They stayed in Mardan and Lundkhwar until 11th January 1947, and then returned to Bihar, as the doctor found that the local language and the absence of other facilities handicapped him in his work.

The only other refugee from Bihar, who has permanently settled in the North-West Frontier Province, is a young boy of about 4 years of age called Mohd Hassan. He is staying with Mohd Jan, a baker of Dera Ismail Khan.

-----------------------

Issue of the above has been authorized.

for Chief Secretary to Government
North-West Frontier Province.

***
Towards Freedom: 1947

INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

TO X OE LAHORE

YOUR EXPRESS LETTER 22/4/47-POLL (1), DATED NINTH JANUARY

STOP NUMBER OF BIHAR REFUGEES MIGRATED TO THIS PROVINCE THREE TWO FIVE 325 =

HOMSEC

***

GOVERNMENT OF MADRAS

Home Department.
Express Letter Routine No. 279

From Madras home, Madras.

To
Homein, New Delhi

Migration—From Bihar to Madras—Number of immigrants.

Ref: Your express letter No. 22/4/47-Poll (1), dated 9-1-1947

Only one refugee from Bihar is reported to have migrated to the Madras Province.

for Secretary to Government

9. ‘Need of Relief and Rehabilitation’

Extracts from a Report from The Tribune, 9 February 1947.

NAWASHAHR (HAZARA). 8 Feb.—R.B. Lala Isher Das, President Hazara Hindu–Sikh Relief Committee writes:

...Thousands of refugees have taken shelter in Muzaffarabad (Kashmir State) Rawalpindi and Hassan Abdal (Punjab) and in the district itself there is an official relief camp at Kakul and a large number of refugees are now living in Abbottabad and Haripur also where there are non-official camps aided by the State.

Relief and Rehabilitation

The question of relief and rehabilitation has, therefore, assumed enormous proportions and it cannot be tackled successfully by the residents of Hazara alone. Its magnitude can be judged from the fact that some 12,000 Hindus and Sikhs have either lost their homes or have left them in panic and are now living in uncomfortable conditions in the places mentioned above. The Government will have to think in terms of lakhs rather than thousands, where so much loss of property, life and dispossession on such a large scale have occurred, and this aspect of the case is receiving their urgent consideration.

I do not know exactly how many houses and shops have been burnt, how many cattle—milch and draught—have been destroyed and how much other property has been irretrievably lost. The total loss must, however, run into lakhs and though, it is hoped that with the return of confidence most of the Hindu and Sikh town-dwellers would go back to their homes and resume their normal life in the course of a few weeks, the Sikhs and a few Hindu villagers of the Abbottabad tehsil cannot go back to their villages for several weeks—possibly months—for the simple reason that they have no houses left where to take shelter in the wintry climate of a sub-Himalayan range. The prolonged absence of these persons from their fields will naturally adversely affect agricultural operations and, therefore, even when they go back to their villages and start building houses, they will still need a good deal of relief.

Appeals for Funds

The Government should appoint a committee of officials and non-officials to go into the question of rehabilitation at the earliest moment. The need for relief on a large scale by private agency still exists. I, therefore, appeal most earnestly on behalf of the Hazara Hindu–Sikh Relief Committee for funds to enable it to carry on its work till such time as is no longer required. I can give an assurance that the money received will be utilized in the best possible manner for the purpose for which it is donated....

10. Disbursal of Money for Bengal and Bihar Relief

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Col N.S. Gill, 15 February 1947

My dear Colonel Gill,

I have received your letter of the 12th instant. It was delivered to me yesterday by your man. I have seen Gandhiji’s letter enclosed by you along with the letter. It does not authorize me to give you any more money. I told you that I had instructions from him not to give any money without his sanction.

I had replied to both of your letters referred to in your letter of the 12th instant and posted them at the address mentioned therein. In both these letters I had made it clear that I would give any amount that may be sanctioned by Gandhiji. In this matter I can give nothing without his approval, and therefore you have only to obtain his approval if you want me to give you any money. I do not like to say ‘no’ in this small matter, but you will understand that it is not a question of money, but a question of principle and discipline. I cannot go against his instructions. It would create difficulties for me as well as for you. If he wanted that I should give you any more money, he would have given you a letter of instructions to Birlaji at Calcutta as he did previously.

I very much regret that I cannot accept your suggestion that Bihar work can be taken up independently by me or you. He is sure to enquire about it, or at least know about it, and he would take you to task if he found out afterwards that you had gone against his instructions.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

Colonel Niranjan Singh Gill

Patna
11. Nehru Consoles Refugees
Jawaharlal Nehru’s Speech at a Refugee Camp in Lahore, 15 March 1947

I have heard of your woeful tale and am conscious that you have suffered a lot. But four things are essential. First, people should not get panicky; secondly, those still in danger should be protected; thirdly, those who have been evacuated from the danger zones should be properly looked after; and, fourthly, further trouble must be stopped and stopped speedily.

I am confident that the military authorities will be able to bring the situation rapidly under control. The Government are determined to do everything possible to meet the situation. The people should face all difficulties with courage. I have always loved the people of the Punjab and admired them as a brave people. I feel sure that the Punjab and the whole of India will progress as they are already on the threshold of freedom. The present difficulties are in the nature of a test which, I have no doubt, will be successfully met.

12. Gandhi’s Advice on Resettlement and Rehabilitation Record of M.K. Gandhi’s Discussion with Relief Committee Members in Bihar, 15 March 1947
CWMG, Vol. LXXXVII, pp. 84–6.

QUESTION: Will you advise Muslims to return to their villages in the prevailing disturbed conditions?

ANSWER: If you have the courage and if you have the requisite faith in God, I shall advise you to return to your villages. I do realize that it is a difficult task. If I had undergone such harrowing experience, perhaps I myself would not have been able to go back; it would have made me a raving lunatic. The memory of murdered men and women would have haunted me. But I aspire to reach a stage when I shall have such abiding faith in God that I would go and stay in the midst of people who had become my enemies.

Q. If there is no change of heart in the majority community, what should the suffering minority do? Should they live in small pockets or leave the province for ever?

A. If you do not return and since it was the fault of the Hindus, the Government is bound to compensate you for the loss of your property. But I do not understand your demand that the Government should allot land somewhere else. Well, if you can arrange mutual exchanges, no one can prevent you. But if the Government arranges this, it will not lead to a purification of hearts. Many people are talking of pockets. I simply do not understand this. If those villages where the Muslims are in majority welcome you, who can prevent you from going there? Similarly, no one can prevent you from leaving the province if you decide to go in spite of my promises of affection. There is a law in the USA that anyone wanting to migrate from that country has to obtain Government’s permission. I do not approve of such a law.

Q. Should or should not those who have committed murder, rape, arson and other heinous crimes receive appropriate punishment? If you think they should, how will you advise the Government of Bihar?

A. Of course, those responsible for devilish deeds must be punished. The Government of Bihar has not abjured the principle of punishment. There is no such government anywhere in the world today. When such a government comes into being, I shall listen to their argument. But a government which believes in the theory of crime and punishment but does not punish the criminal has no right to call itself a government.

Q. Should the Government of Bihar make adequate provision for the relief of orphans and widows who have no one to support them? If some organization has undertaken such work, what will you advise the Bihar Government on this?
A. They are the responsibility of the State. If some organization wants to render relief in its own manner, it will not be justified in expecting assistance from the Government. This work has to be done either by the Government itself or in a manner approved by the Government.

Q. How will it be possible to make good the historical, cultural, social and religious damage done by the madness of the majority?
A. This has been a cruel and terrible tragedy. Such holocausts have shaken the world earlier and will do so even in the future. Only when we are reformed and tolerant enough to realize that all religions lead to the same God called by various people by various names, will the world change for the better. Till then the earth shall not be a habitable place. Till that change comes about, it is impossible to prevent such barbarity and the irreparable losses resultant from it.

Q. What should be done with those officers who openly helped the rioters and deliberately helped one side against the other?
A. Those officers against whom such charges can be proved can have no place in the government.

Q. What do you propose to do to prevent the repetition of riots at places where the Muslims have suffered? Even now the houses and properties of Muslims are being damaged.
A. I am doing my best to prevent a repetition. I shall continue to stay here till I succeed in my effort. I have already declared that I shall do or die. God will either grant me success or put an end to my life. I believe that a change of heart is essential if I am to succeed. As I have been telling the Hindus in Noakhali, this is not a work where the army or police can be of much help. You must gather courage and fear no one except God. I shall advise the Ministers to frame a law making Hindus responsible for the safety of the Muslim minority. Such laws will not in fact be needed where hearts have been purified.

Q. Can the cruelties and injustices meted out to us detain you for long in Bihar? Your prolonged presence is needed for the help of the refugees.
A. You need not worry on that account. I shall not leave Bihar so long as Hindus and Muslims do not jointly allow me to do so on the basis of their brotherly feelings.

Q. Will you call them Congressmen who organized and led the recent riots? If not, what action will be taken against them to preserve the prestige of the Congress?
A. How can those who participated in riots be called Congressmen? Before condemning them, I must listen to their version of the story. I am a devotee of truth and shall lay down my life in serving truth.

13. ‘Suffering Punjab Calls for Help—An Appeal for One Crore’ Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 16 March 1947.

LAHORE, 15 March—A terrible catastrophe has befallen the unhappy land of five rivers. An unprecedented storm of communal hatred is raging all over the province and forces of violence unparalleled in the history of the Punjab have been unleashed. We are still too thick in the midst of a ghastly tragedy, and things undreamt of before are happening at a terrific speed.

It is yet too early to assess the magnitude of the calamity. But little bits of news as they are percolating through the rigidity of press censorship tell a frightfully bad tale. Human life has lost its sanctity and the number of killed and wounded has already run into thousands. The loss of property, movable and immovable has been tremendous, harrowing accounts of thousands of non-Muslim refugees from villages in Rawalpindi and Attock districts seeking shelter in Rawalpindi and other towns have already appeared in the press. They have been rendered homeless and destitute and it would not be easy for them to make a fresh start in life. The plight of widows and orphans in these areas can be well imagined.

The situation as it is unfolding itself calls for very prompt measures. Survivors of persons killed have to be supported medically and general aid has to be rendered to the wounded, legal aid and defence arrangements have to be made for people who may be in need of the same and extensive schemes of rehabilitating thousands thrown on the streets have...worked out. Money is urgently needed for doing all this and much more.

While the Government will take its time in reacting to the situation things cannot and should not be allowed to drift. We, therefore, deem it our duty to appeal to the generosity of our countrymen to enable us to give the much-needed relief to the suffering humanity.

Though our needs are colossal, we have fixed our minimum target at rupees one crore. While the Punjab, though its economic life has been rudely shaken, will do its utmost to help its people, we hope our fellow countrymen in other provinces will not fail us at this critical juncture. We have constituted a representative committee for organizing relief work and we are taking steps that it is properly centralised and co-ordinated. An earnest effort will, therefore, be made to spend every pie in most useful and effective manner.

All contributions earmarked or general will be gratefully received and thankfully acknowledged and may be sent to the Secretary, Punjab Riot Sufferers Relief Committee, Lajpatrai Bhawan, Lahore or to the current account of the committee with its bankers, the Punjab National Bank Ltd., Lahore, and the Central Bank of India and their branches. Contributions can also be sent to the branches of the Bharat Bank, Prabhat Bank, National Bank of India, National City Bank, the First National Bank and the Punjab Kashmir Bank, who have been requested to receive collections on behalf of this committee.

Swaran Singh, Ex-Minister, Coalition Government, President, Bhim Sen Sachar, Ex-Minister, Coalition Government, Secretary....

14. ‘Pakistan Should Become Really Pak’

M.K. Gandhi’s Advice to Muslim Refugees at Patna, 16 March 1947

You have my sympathy in your misery. What has happened should never have happened. But I believe that everything is futile unless there is a change of heart. I would suggest that you should go to Noakhali. Go there and find out for yourself if the Hindus have not been oppressed. If you are convinced about it, engage yourselves in relief work and service in that place. Impress upon the minority that they are your brethren, that they cannot leave the country, and that they may do so only over your dead bodies. Tell even the oppressors—let me say they are the members of the [Muslim] League—that such tyranny would neither bring any benefit to their party nor would it protect it in any way. And if the tyrants still continue to oppress, you must lay down your lives to protect your brethren. You must courageously tell them that they should first strike you before striking the innocent. Even if there is one such person among you, your fame would be matchless in all the world and God would shower flowers over you, and that fragrance would spread in the entire country. I am merely showing you your duty, since you have come to seek my advice. I would be the happiest man to see you rising high and to see Pakistan becoming really pak. And, if you do this people would come to you to learn the lessons of non-violence and love.

15. ‘HELP PUNJAB—Thousands Need Bread and Shelter—Sardar Patel’

The Tribune, 18 March 1947

NEW DELHI, 17 March.—Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel has issued the following appeal for relief to Punjab victims:

‘The Punjab has witnessed within the last two weeks communal orgy on a very extensive scale. Unprecedented devastation, involving large-scale arson, murder, loot and wanton destruction of life and property over a widely scattered area, has been perpetrated.

...tragic sufferings of a very large number of innocent and helpless victims of this bestiality demand immediate action for relief and succour. Thousands have lost their dear ones, most of whom were probably the bread-winners, a very vast majority of them have lost their most valued possessions and almost all have been deprived of the shelter of their roof and the refuge of their homes.’

‘All this makes an irresistible call on the humanitarian and brotherly instincts of all of us. The task of relief and rehabilitation is of a magnitude the dimensions of which cannot at present be computed with precision, and help, if it is to be utilized to the best advantage, must be both timely and adequate. I know many are willing and even anxious to contribute their utmost to the relief of refugees and victims whose number runs into thousands. In order to afford them a medium through which help can reach those who so amply deserve it and urgently need it, I have decided, in my capacity as treasurer of the Indian National Congress, to open a fund to be known as “the Punjab Relief Fund.” I appeal to all my countrymen to respond whole-heartedly to this call of humanity and to send their donations to the above fund at Aurangzeb Road, New Delhi, with the least possible delay. Every contribution will be gratefully acknowledged.’—API

16. Gandhi Assures Muslims of Safety and Resettlement

M.K. Gandhi’s Talk with Muslim Refugees at Masaurhi, 18 March 1947

Refugees: Please give us an assurance that our lives, property and honour will be protected. Gandhiji: Efforts are being made in this direction. I shall advise the Government to hold all the Hindus in a village responsible for any harm to its Muslim minority and to punish them strictly according to law.

R. Securities should be taken from gangsters and influential people in the locality so that they may not foment riots again.
G. Those persons who had led the riots should be held responsible for law and order in the locality to prevent recurrence of riots. As it is not right to hold everyone responsible for the riots, it would not be right to punish everyone for the riots; nor would it be easy to do so. But if you can recognize and prove anyone's participation in the riots, the law will certainly punish him.

R. We should be issued licenses to possess arms for self-protection.

G. It is strange that I am hearing the same arguments here which I used to hear in Noakhali. I shall certainly oppose this. I can never understand why some or all of you should be given arms. This is not the way of creating an atmosphere of friendship. I had told the Hindus in Noakhali that they could not live there nor could the local Government protect them if the entire Muslim population was hostile to them. Should the Government kill 80 per cent of the population to protect them? No Government can do this today. I would like to tell you that my ways are different. I believe that a man should become brave but bravery consists not in killing but in getting killed and that too without hatred for the killer. Muslims were no cowards, but they are terrified today and that too on account of us—this makes me hang my head in shame. If my staying here has any meaning, you should shed your anxiety. I shall not go away till you yourself ask me to go, and assure me that Hindus and Muslims are living like brothers again.

R. There should be some arrangement so that all Muslims can live together.

G. This talk of 'pockets' is not new to me. As soon as I arrived in Bihar, I went to see the leader of the Muslim League, Barrister Abdul Aziz of Patna. He explained to me everything. Earlier I used to oppose the idea of 'pockets'; but now I understand the logic behind the demand. I can very well understand that one just cannot stay at a place where one's relations and friends have been massacred. Hence if people want to shift to villages where there is a large number of Muslims, they can migrate there with mutual consent.

I have advised the Government to build houses for displaced persons or give them funds for the purpose if they so choose. If you demand, however, that the Government should provide you everything, it may not be in a position to do so because it would mean acquisition of some people's lands. And this would lead to all sorts of complications. If there is any vacant piece of land and you can settle there, you may certainly do so. A big landlord from North Bihar was ready to take as many Muslims as would like to stay on his lands. If you agree I shall write to him.

R. We should receive compensation for whatever we have lost.

G. Even the Government would go bankrupt if it agreed to this. Some people claim they have lost lakhs, some others claim they have lost crores. How can we evaluate the actual loss? I think the Government would not be in a position to pay even one-fourth of the claims. It can only provide shelter or give money to enable people to stand on their own feet. In Noakhali, many weavers and fishermen had practically nothing to support themselves. There I had suggested that the local Government should advance them loans which could be repaid in easy instalments. Money alone has no value. You are all farmers, a hard-working lot. If you take courage in both hands, you will forget in no time what you have undergone. Moreover a commission is being set up. Its object is not only to record whatever has happened, but also to examine the steps that are being taken and to recommend measures for the future.
R. 50 per cent of us should be taken in the police force.
G. I am totally opposed to such demands. I told Hindus in Noakhali: ‘I will not put in a word for a Hindu police officer. Does it make any sense that an officer is removed just because he is a Muslim? Of course, he should certainly be removed if he is inefficient. And after all, the officers are going to carry out only what the Chief Minister of Bengal, Shaheed Suhrawardy Saheb, wants them to do. If Shaheed Saheb is good, the officers will be good; but if he himself is bad, how can they remain good?’

R. The Government or the Congress should pay us compensation or loans in proportion to the size of our business.
G. The Government should only advance loans and not pay compensation.

R. Stolen goods are being recovered. This work should be done swiftly and firmly. Aid should be given to those who want to buy looms and yarn. They should be given free rations as long as they do not earn enough for their sustenance.
G. All efforts must certainly be made to recover looted property. To those whose tools and properties have been totally destroyed Government must provide shelter and food till they can stand on their own feet. But if someone argues that the Government should go on providing everything free, then that will not be feasible. It will mean the Government should provide everything free to an ex-millionaire until he starts earning his millions. This is a ridiculous proposition.

R. Adequate arrangements should be made for recovering abducted girls.
G. Certainly. Please give the names and addresses of such girls to me. I shall immediately try to trace them. Hindus have been writing to me to let them know even if there is one such girl; and they will move heaven and earth to recover her.

R. We should have complete freedom to practise our religious rites, as we used to enjoy before the riots.
G. Certainly, it should be so.

R. The Government should make early and adequate arrangements to repair or rebuild before the rainy season such houses as were damaged during the riots.
G. Certainly, this work should be finished early.

The following decisions taken at the meeting of the refugees were placed before Gandhiji for his comments:

1. The relief camps should be situated near police stations instead of inside the towns. Gandhiji should be requested to depute two special workers for each camp.
G. I agree.

2. We shall, besides Government help, raise volunteers with the co-operation of Hindus for our protection, clearing of our houses and so on.
G. Right.

3. Panchayats will be formed which will perform such functions as scotching false rumours, settling internal disputes, returning mortgages and striving to recover stolen goods and so on.
G. Formation of panchayats is welcome. If people co-operate among themselves, I shall help them in every possible way.
4. The loans for relief should be advanced in a spirit of mutual help.
G. Right.

5. Women volunteers should also be recruited from among the Muslims as well as Hindus and they should, in addition to other work, strive to recover abducted women.
G. Right.

6. After constructing the houses, essential things like utensils, cots, small tables, and other things, should also be provided.
G. Right.

7. Licences for arms should be issued on the recommendations of the panchayat. They should not be issued to persons who do not need them or who want them for sport.
G. That's right.

17. Relief Measures for Refugees in Punjab

Note by Evan Jenkins of His Interview with Gokul Chand Narang, 22 March 1947

Dr Gokul Chand Narang came to see me this afternoon with reference to his letter of yesterday, 21st March. Our conversation dealt with the following points:

...2. Special measures should be taken to evacuate refugees in the Jhelum district. I explained what we were doing and said that two special trains had been sent to Chakwal yesterday and had returned empty.

3. Medical arrangements and equipment will be needed for the refugee camps. Here again I explained what we were doing. I said we were sending up five doctors, that blankets were being arranged, and that we would take over medical equipment from the Army. Dr Gokul Chand suggested sending a large number of Boy Scouts and other workers, but I rode him off this. I said we were in need of plates, and other things, and he replied to this that we could use leaf plates, which would do very well.

4. Special efforts should be made to trace abducted women and to prevent their being taken out of the Punjab, especially into NWFP. I said all this was in hand. Dr Gokul Chand then said that he had been told by people from Jhang that the Pir of Makhad was now very hostile. I said the Pir's influence was rather less than he made out, and that I never believed much that was said for or against him without verification. The feuds between him and the Khan of Makhad are notorious....

11. There are still several non-Muslim families staying in village Bachial, Tahsil and Police Station Gujar Khan. They have been forcibly converted, and it is to be assumed that they would like to get away. Dr Gokul Chand left with me a chit about this village signed by a Professor of the Dyal Singh College, who has relations there (attached)....

[E.M.J.]
My dear Quaid-i-Azam,

The question of Bihar Muslims has become a problem. The Muslims of Sind are anxious to receive as permanent settlers as many Muslims as possible. We would, of course, prefer people who are cultivators and who can plough. The Provincial Muslim League has received offers from various leading zamindars of this province showing their willingness to receive as many cultivators as we can send them, but the emigrants from Bihar who are pouring into this province are mostly middle-class people looking for service employment; only a very small number of them are in search of trade.

The Government of Sind is planning for their accommodation and giving them land at a nominal value near Karachi. The speed with which the Government is planning to open up this new colony, with hospitals, schools, and a police post, is really to be congratulated [sic], and I hope that demarcation of this land will be over by the end of the next month.

The only unfortunate controversy which arose between Khan Bahadur Khuhro and Sir Ghulam Hussain [Hidayatullah] was with regard to agricultural land near Karachi in which K.B. Khuhro had said that about 60,000 acres of land would be available for Biharis between 1948 and 1949 and would be given to them for cultivation. Sir Ghulam Hussain then issued a press communiqué, stating that the land will not be available till 1952. Of course, this has discouraged the immigrants, and I am receiving letters from all kinds of people.

I had a discussion with K.B. Khuhro, and he told me that he is preparing statistics which will be placed before the Governor for his final approval for land which will be available for cultivation in 1948–49; and now again a communiqué has been issued by K.B. Khuhro’s department, a cutting [of which] I enclose for your information.

I understand from a reliable source that there is a movement afoot in Bihar with regard to Muslim emigrants endeavouring to discourage them from leaving the province. Mr Yunus has written a letter to Sir Ghulam Hussain, a copy of which he has sent to Mr Khuhro, which I enclose for your information. I feel that Mr Yunus does not sympathize with emigrant movement. I feel that this policy will do no good to the Muslims there, while a little emigration from that part will be of great help to Sind in building up our population figures and providing the labour to the Province so desperately requiring [sic] in its industrial and commercial advancement.

What I wish is this that the Muslims in Bihar should be encouraged to leave [Bihar] and settle in Sind. If you happen to see Mr Yunus or the Bihar leaders personally, you may kindly impress upon them the necessity of Muslims coming to settle in this part of the country.

Yours sincerely,

Y.A. HAROON

[Enclosures 1 and 2 omitted]
My dear Hidayatullah Sahib,

Regarding the conversation I had with you this morning, I was rather surprised to learn that someone has given you the impression that we are sending out people with hopes that they will get fifty thousand acres of land in Sind. I believe this impression is created due to the fact that some people of standing issued some statements giving out such hopes to the people of Bihar. I can quite appreciate that the poor Bihar sufferers have been very much misled in this connection. The fact, however, remains that they are now in Sind, and the problem which faces us is as to whether due to their own fault or through the fault of someone else, they are there now and what is to be done for them. I do hope you will look at the whole question in this light and help them as far as you can in settling them wherever possible. I must express my sincerest gratitude to you and to all the Ministers for all that you all have been doing and are prepared to do, and I quite realize and appreciate the difficulties that naturally stand in the way of large numbers of refugees getting into the place all at once.

The difficulty with the minority provinces has been that these people claim that they have a right to expect from the Pakistan areas such help which is their due, owing to the fact that they have staked all and sacrificed themselves for the establishment of Pakistan. In fact the Biharis have suffered most and we hope that their suffering and their blood will help in establishing Pakistan in the majority provinces. However, I am trying to impress upon the people the difficulty which is naturally in your way.

A very small population has gone to Sind; they find it easier to walk across the border into Bengal. We are very grateful to the Muslim League Ministry of Bengal who have spent several lacs on them in maintaining nearly three lacs of people at their own cost for at least three months. I have visited most of the camps in Calcutta and I found the arrangements for both their board and lodging entirely at Government cost very satisfactory. I am proceeding by car on the 9th with a view to visiting a large number of areas in different parts of Bengal to see our refugees there. The Government of Bengal, just like the Government of Sind, but, of course, on a very much larger scale, have prepared a scheme for the rehabilitation of these Muslim sufferers. The position of Bengal, of course, offers a smaller difficulty because of its proximity to Bihar....

I tried to get several other Ministers on the phone but was told that they were out of the station. I could only get you and the Honourable Mr Pir Ilahi Bakhsh. I am, therefore, forwarding copies of this letter to all of them, so that they may, in consultation with you, help us and give you all information regarding the subjects of their respective portfolios with which they may be dealing.

I hope you are keeping well. With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

M. YUNUS

The Honourable Mr Ghulam Hussain Hidayatullah, Prime Minister, Sind,
Karachi
20. Gandhi Reassures Muslim Refugees

M.K. Gandhi's Talk with Women Refugees at Pipalwan, 22 March 1947

I am sad as well as glad to meet you all. There are many sisters here whose husbands, sons and relations have been killed. Their tragic tales make me sad. I was very glad to hear that the SDO acted very promptly and prudently to prevent riots here, and that refugees from other places were given shelter here. Hindus from this place have written to me saying that they did not participate at all in the riots.

I have seen with my own eyes how much people have suffered because of the riots. I have seen houses which were burnt or looted, and I was told that the residents had been killed. The aggrieved people, the people whose houses have been destroyed, wish to resettle at some other place. Personally, I do not approve of this. Why should we lose heart? We should keep up courage. The Hindus have committed a sin. What have they gained thereby? You do not trust them. But if their hearts are cleansed, if they clean your houses, if they build new houses for you and if they sincerely atone for their sins, why should you then not return to your homes? True bravery on the part of Hindus consists in confessing their guilt and changing their hearts. I shall be only too glad if they do this.

People should return to the houses where there had been no killing. If the residents don’t feel like going to murder-haunted houses they may shift to another place. It would be good if lands can be exchanged by mutual consent. It may not be possible for the Government to arrange such transfers. In any case whether they return to their own villages or shift to some other place, Muslim brothers and sisters should eschew all anger and bear no ill will towards Hindus. You should not think of taking revenge against those who have oppressed you. That is true bravery.

How transitory is this life? Everyone has to die one day. It is difficult to comprehend the ways of God. Is there any place where He is not present? Some people hold God responsible for whatever has happened. Who can understand His ways? God cannot be talked about disparagingly. Why should we, then, blame Him for these happenings? I do not wish to hear such talk from the lips of those who recite the kalma. In fact, no one should even speak in this vein.

I wish to reassure all of you that I am wandering from place to place to prevent a repetition of what has happened so that Hindus and Muslims may live like brothers. I shall stay and strive here as long as hearts are not cleansed and fraternal feelings are not revived. I shall do or die; I shall either succeed in my mission or perish in the effort.
Section II

23 March 1947 to 2 June 1947
Chapter 13. Constituent Assembly

1. Rights of Minorities and Scheduled Castes

Extracts from the Memorandum and Draft Articles Submitted by B.R. Ambedkar to the Sub-committee on Fundamental Rights, 24 March 1947

...ARTICLE II—SECTION III

Provisions for the protection of minorities

The Constitution of the United States of India shall provide:

Clause I

(1) That the Executive—Union or State—shall be non-Parliamentary in the sense that it shall not be removable before the term of the Legislature.

(2) Members of the Executive if they are not members of the Legislature shall have the right to sit in the Legislature, speak, vote and answer questions.

(3) The Prime Minister shall be elected by the whole House by single transferable vote.

(4) The representatives of the different minorities in the Cabinet shall be elected by members of each minority community in the Legislature by single transferable vote.

(5) The representatives of the majority community in the Executive shall be elected by the whole House by single transferable vote.

(6) A member of the Cabinet may resign his post on a censure motion or otherwise but shall not be liable to be removed except on impeachment by the House on the ground of corruption or treason.

Clause 2

(1) That there shall be appointed an Officer to be called the Superintendent of Minority Affairs.

(2) His status shall be similar to that of the Auditor-General appointed under section 166 of the Government of India Act of 1935 and removable in like manner and on the like grounds as a judge of the Supreme Court.

(3) It shall be the duty of the Superintendent to prepare an annual report on the treatment of minorities by the public, as well as by the Governments, Union and State, and of any transgressions of safeguards or any miscarriage of justice due to communal bias by Governments or their officers.
(4) The annual report of the Superintendent shall be placed on the Table of the Legislatures, Union and State, and the Governments, Union and State, shall be bound to provide time for the discussion of the report.

Clause 3

(1) The social boycott, promoting or instigating a social boycott or threatening a social boycott as defined below shall be declared to be an offence.

(i) Boycott defined—A person shall be deemed to boycott another who—
   (a) refuses to let or use or occupy any house or land, or to deal with, work for hire, or do business with another person, or to render to him or receive from him any service, or refuses to do any of the said things on the terms on which such things should commonly be done in the ordinary course of business, or
   (b) abstains from such social, professional or business relations as he would, having regard to such existing customs in the community which are not inconsistent with any fundamental right or other rights of citizenship declared in the Constitution, ordinarily maintain with such person, or
   (c) in any way injures, annoys or interferes with such other person in the exercise of his lawful rights.

(ii) Offence of boycotting—Whoever, in consequence of any person having done any act which he was legally entitled to do or of his having omitted to do any act which he was legally entitled to omit to do, or with intent to cause any person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do or to omit to do any act which he is legally entitled to do, or with intent to cause harm to such person in body, mind, reputation or property, or in his business or means of living, boycotts such person or any person in whom such person is interested, shall be guilty of the offence of boycotting:

   Provided that no offence shall be deemed to have been committed under this section, if the court is satisfied that the accused person has not acted at the instigation or in collusion with any other person or in pursuance of any conspiracy or of any agreement or combination to boycott.

(iii) Offence of instigating or promoting a boycott—Whoever—
   (a) publicly makes or publishes or circulates a proposal for, or
   (b) makes, publishes or circulates any statement, rumour or report with intent to, or
   (c) in any other way instigates or promotes the boycotting of any person or class of persons, shall be guilty of the offence of instigating or promoting a boycott.

Explanation—An offence under this clause shall be deemed to have been committed although the person affected or likely to be affected by any action of the nature referred to herein is not designated by name or class but only by his acting or abstaining from acting in some specified manner.

(iv) Offence of threatening a boycott—Whoever, in consequence of any person having done any act which he was legally entitled to do or of his having omitted to do any act which he was legally entitled to omit to do, or with intent to cause any person to do any act which he is not legally bound to do or to omit to do any act which he is legally entitled to do, threatens to cause such person or any person in whom such person is interested, to be boycotted shall be guilty of the offence of threatening a boycott.
Exception—It is not boycott—

(i) to do any act in furtherance of a bona fide labour dispute;

(ii) to do any act in the ordinary course of business competition.

(2) All these offences shall be deemed to be cognizable offences. The Union Legislature shall make laws prescribing punishment for these offences.

Clause 4

That the power of the Central and Provincial Governments to make grants for any purpose, notwithstanding that the purpose is not one for which the Union or State Legislature as the case may be may make laws, shall not be abridged or taken away.

ARTICLE II—SECTION IV

Safeguards for the Scheduled Castes

Part I. Guarantees

The Constitution of the United States of India shall guarantee to the Scheduled Castes the following rights:

Clause 1

Right to Representation in the Legislature

(1) Quantum of Representation—(a) (i) The Scheduled Castes shall have minimum representation in the Legislature—Union and State—and if there be a group Constitution then in the group Legislature equal to the ratio of their population to the total population, provided that no other minority is allowed to claim more representation than what is due to it on the basis of its population.

(ii) The Scheduled Castes of Sind and the NWF Province shall be given their due share of representation.

(iii) Weightage where it becomes necessary to reduce a huge communal majority to reasonable dimensions shall come out of the share of the majority. In no case shall it be at the cost of another minority community.

(iv) Weightage carved out from the share of majority shall not be assigned to one community only. But the same shall be divided among all minority communities equally or in inverse proportion to their

1. economic position
2. social status, and
3. educational advance.

(b) There should be no representation to special interests. But if the same is allowed it must be taken out of the share of representation given to that community to which the special interest belongs.

(2) Method of Election—

(A) For Legislative Bodies

(a) The system of election introduced by the Poona Pact shall be abolished.

(b) In its place, the system of Separate Electorates shall be substituted.

(c) Franchise shall be adult franchise

(d) The system of voting shall be cumulative.
(B) For Local Bodies
The principles for determining the quantum of representation and the method of election for municipalities and local boards shall be the same as that adopted for the Union and State Legislatures.¹...

... Part II Special Responsibilities
That the United States of India shall undertake the following special responsibilities for the betterment of the Scheduled Castes:

Clause 1

(1) Governments—Union and State—shall be required to assume financial responsibility for the higher education of the Scheduled Castes and shall be required to make adequate provisions in their budgets. Such provisions shall form the first charge on the Education Budget of the Union and State Governments.

(2) The responsibility for finding money for secondary and college education of the Scheduled Castes in India shall be upon the State Governments and the different States shall make a provision in their annual budgets for the said purpose in proportion to the population of the Scheduled Castes to the total budget of the States.

(3) The responsibility for finding money for foreign education of the Scheduled Castes shall be the responsibility of the Union Government and the Union Government shall make a provision of rupees ten lakhs per year in its annual budget on that behalf.

(4) These special grants shall be without prejudice to the right of the Scheduled Castes to share in the expenditure incurred by the State Government for the advancement of primary education for the people of the State.

Clause 2

1. The following provision shall be made in the constitution of the Union Government:

(i) There shall be a Settlement Commission under the new Constitution to hold uncultivated lands belonging to the State in trust for settlement of the Scheduled Castes in separate villages.

(ii) The Union Government shall set apart annually a fund of Rs 5 crores for the purpose of promoting the scheme of settlement.

(iii) That the commission shall have the power to purchase any land offered for sale and use it for the said purpose.

2. The Union Government shall from time to time pass such legislation as may be necessary for the commission to carry out its functions.

Part III Sanction for Safeguards and Amendment of Safeguards

Clause 1

The Constitution of the United States of India shall provide that—

The United States of India undertakes to give the safeguards contained in Article II, Section IV a place in the Constitution and make them a part of the Constitutional Law of India.

Clause 2

The provisions for the Scheduled Castes shall not be altered, amended or abrogated except in the following manner:
Any amendment or abrogation of Section IV of Article II or any part thereof relating to the Scheduled Castes shall only be made by a resolution passed in the manner prescribed below by the more popular chamber of the Union Legislature.

(i) Any proposal for amendment or abrogation shall be initiated in the form of a resolution in the more popular chamber of the Union Legislature.

(ii) No such resolution shall be moved—
   (a) unless 25 years have elapsed after the Constitution has come into operation and has been worked; and
   (b) unless six months’ notice has been given to the House by the mover of his intention to move such a resolution.

(iii) On the passing of such a resolution, the Legislature shall be dissolved and a new election held.

(iv) The original resolution in the form in which it was passed by the previous Legislature shall be moved afresh in the same House of the newly elected Union Legislature.

(v) The resolution shall not be deemed to have been carried unless it is passed by a majority of two-thirds of the members of the House and also two-thirds of members of the Scheduled Castes who have been returned through separate electorates.

Part IV Protection of Scheduled Castes in the Indian States

The Constitution of the United States of India shall provide that the admission of the Indian States into the Union shall be subject to the following condition:

All provisions relating to the Scheduled Castes contained in Section IV of Article II of the Constitution of the United States of India shall be extended to the Scheduled Castes in the Indian States. Such a provision in the Constitution of an Indian State shall be a condition precedent for its admission into the Union.

Part V Interpretation

I.—For the purposes of Article II the Scheduled Castes, as defined in the Government of India Scheduled Caste Order, 1936, issued under the Government of India Act, 1935, shall be deemed to be a minority.

II.—For the purposes of Article II a caste which is a Scheduled Caste in one State shall be treated as Scheduled Caste in all States of the Union.

1 Clause 2 and 3 of this section of the draft articles ensured representation for Scheduled Castes in the Executive and the Services along similar lines as in Clause 1.

APPENDIX I

EXPLANATORY NOTES

...Article II—Section III

Clause 1

...The problem of the Untouchables is a formidable one for the Untouchables to face. The Untouchables are surrounded by a vast mass of Hindu population which is hostile to them and which is not ashamed of committing any inequity or atrocity against them. For a redress of these wrongs which are matters of daily occurrence, the Untouchables have to call in the aid of the administration. What is the character and composition of this administration? To be brief, the administration in India is completely in the hands of the Hindus. It is their monopoly. From top to bottom it is controlled by them. There is no department which is not dominated by them. They dominate the police, the magistracy and the revenue services, indeed any and every branch of the administration. The next point to remember is that the Hindus in the administration have the same positive anti-social and inimical attitude to the Untouchables which the Hindus outside the administration have. Their one aim is to discriminate against the Untouchables and to deny and deprive them not only of the benefits of law, but also of the protection of the law against tyranny and oppression. The result is that the Untouchables are placed between the Hindu population and the Hindu-ridden administration, the one committing wrongs against them and the other protecting the wrong-doer, instead of helping the victims.

Against this background, what can Swaraj mean to the Untouchables? It can only mean one thing, namely, that while today it is only the administration that is in the hands of the Hindus, under Swaraj the Legislature and Executive will also be in the hands of the Hindus. It goes without saying that such a Swaraj would aggravate the sufferings of the Untouchables. For, in addition to a hostile administration, there will be an indifferent Legislature and a callous Executive. The result will be that the administration unbridled in venom and in harshness, uncontrolled by the Legislature and the Executive, may pursue its policy of inequity towards the Untouchables without any curb. To put it differently, under Swaraj the Untouchables will have no way of escape from the destiny of degradation which Hindus and Hinduism have fixed for them.

These are special considerations against the introduction of the British system of executive which have their origin in the interests of the minorities and the Scheduled Castes. But there is one general consideration which can be urged against the introduction of the British Cabinet system in India. The British Cabinet system has undoubtedly given the British people a very stable system of government. Question is: will it produce a stable Government in India? The chances are very slender. In view of the clashes of castes and creeds there is bound to be a plethora of parties and groups in the Legislature in India. If this happens it is possible, nay certain, that under the system of Parliamentary executive like the one that prevails in England under which the Executive is bound to resign upon an adverse vote in the Legislature, India may suffer from instability of the Executive. For it is the easiest thing for groups to align and realign themselves at frequent intervals and for petty purposes and bring about the downfall of Government. The present solidarity of what are called the major parties cannot be expected to continue. Indeed as soon as the problem of the British in India is solved the cement that holds these parties together will fall away. Constant overthrow of Government is nothing short of anarchy. The present Constitution has in it section 93 which provides a remedy against it. But section 93 would be out of place in the Constitution of a free India. Some substitute must therefore be found for section 93.

Taking all these considerations together there is no doubt that the British type of executive is entirely unsuited to India.

The form of the executive proposed in the clause is intended to serve the following purposes:

(i) To prevent the majority from forming a Government without giving any opportunity to the minorities to have a say in the matter.
(ii) To prevent the majority from having exclusive control over administration and thereby make the tyranny of the minority by the majority possible.

(iii) To prevent the inclusion by the majority party in the executive representatives of the minorities who have no confidence of the minorities.

(iv) To provide a stable executive necessary for good and efficient administration.

The clause takes the American form of executive as a model and adapts it to Indian conditions especially to the requirements of minorities. The form of the executive suggested in the proposal cannot be objected to on the ground that it is against the principle of responsible government. Indians who are used to the English form of executive forget that this is not the only form of democratic and responsible Government. The American form of executive is an equally good type of democratic and responsible form of Government. There is also nothing objectionable in the proposal that a person should not be qualified to become a Minister merely because he is elected to the Legislature. The principle that a member of the Legislature before he is made a Minister should be chosen by his constituents was fully recognized by the British Constitution for over hundred years. A member of Parliament who was appointed a Minister had to submit himself for election before taking up his appointment. It was only lately given up. There ought therefore to be no objection to it on the ground that the proposals are not compatible with responsible Governments. The actual proposal is an improved edition of the American form of government, for the reason that under it members of the Executive can sit in the Legislature and have a right to speak and answer questions.

Clause 2

The proposal cannot be controversial. The best remedy against tyranny and oppression by a majority against the minority is inquiry, publicity and discussion. This is what the safeguard provides for. A similar proposal was also recommended by the Sapru Committee.

Clause 3

Social boycott is always held over the heads of the Untouchables by the caste Hindus as a sword of Damocles. Only the Untouchables know what a terrible weapon it is in the hands of the Hindus. Its effects and forms are well described in the report made by the committee appointed by the Government of Bombay in 1928 to investigate the grievances of the Depressed Classes and from which the following extracts are made. It illuminates the situation in a manner so simple that everybody can understand what tyranny the Hindus are able to practice upon the Untouchables. The committee said:

Although we have recommended various remedies to secure to the Depressed Classes their rights to all public utilities we fear that there will be difficulties in the way of their exercising them for a long time to come. The first difficulty is the fear of open violence against them by the orthodox classes. It must be noted that the Depressed Classes form a small minority in every village, opposed to which is a great majority of the orthodox who are bent on protecting their interests and dignity from any supposed invasion by the Depressed Classes at any cost. The danger of prosecution by the police has put a limitation upon the use of violence by the orthodox classes and consequently such cases are rare.

The second difficulty arises from the economic position in which the Depressed Classes are found today. The Depressed Classes have no economic independence in most parts of the Presidency. Some cultivate the lands of the orthodox classes as their tenants at will. Others live on their earnings as farm labourers employed by the orthodox classes and the rest subsist on the food or grain given to them by the orthodox classes in lieu of service rendered to them as village servants. We have heard of numerous instances where the orthodox classes have used their economic power as a weapon against those Depressed Classes in their villages, when the latter have dared to exercise their rights, and have evicted them from their land, and stopped their employment and discontinued their remuneration as village servants. This boycott is often planned on such an extensive scale as to include the prevention of the Depressed Classes from using the commonly used paths and the stoppage of sale of the necessaries of life by the village bania....
Towards Freedom: 1947

This was said in 1928. Lest it should be regarded as a phase which has now ended I reproduce below a copy of a petition by the Untouchables of the village Kheri Jessore in the Punjab addressed to the Deputy Commissioner of the Rohtak District in February 1947 a copy of which was sent to me. It reads as follows:

From
The Scheduled Caste People (Chamars),
Village Kheri Jessore, Tehsil and District Rohtak.

To
The Deputy Commissioner,
Rohtak District, Rohtak.

Sir,

We, the following Scheduled Caste (Chamars) of the Village Kheri Jessore, beg to invite your kind attention to the hard plight, we are put to, due to the undue pressure and merciless treatment by the caste Hindu Jats of this village.

It was about four months back that the Jats of the village assembled in the Chopal and told us to work in the fields on a wage in kind of one bundle of crops, containing only about one seer of grains per day per man instead of food at both times and a load of crops, and annas 8 in addition which we used to get before above announcement was made. As it was too little and insufficient to meet both ends, we refused to go to work. At this they were enraged and declared a social boycott on us. They made a rule that our cattle would not be allowed to graze in the jungle unless we would agree to pay a tax not leviable under Government for the animals, which they call as Poochhi they even do not allow our cattle to drink water in the village pool and have prevented the sweepers from cleaning the streets where we live so that heaps of dust and dirt are lying there which may cause some disease if left unattended to. We are forced to lead a shameful life and they are always ready to beat us and to tear down our honour by behaving indecently towards our wives, sisters and daughters. We are experiencing a lot of trouble of the worst type. While going to the school, the children were even beaten severely and in a merciless manner.

We submitted an application detailing the above facts to yourself, but we are sorry that no action has been taken as yet.

It is also for your kind consideration that the Inspector of Police and Tahsildar of Rohtak, whom we approached in this connection, made a careless investigation and in our opinion, no attention was paid to redress the difficulties of the poor and innocent persons.

We, therefore, request your good self to consider over the matter and make some arrangement to stop the merciless treatment and threats which the Jats give us in different ways. We have no other approach except to knock at your kind door and hope your honour will take immediate steps to enable us to lead an honourable and peaceful life which is humanity’s birth-right.

We beg to remain,

Sir,
Your most obedient servants,
Scheduled Caste People (Chamars),
of Village Kheri Jessore,
Tehsil and District Rohtak.
Thumb Impressions

Copy forwarded to the Hon’ble Dr B.R. Ambedkar, Western Court, New Delhi.
Received on 1st February, 1947

This shows that what was true in 1928 is true even today. What is true of Bombay is true of the whole of India. For evidence of the general use of boycott by the Hindus against the Untouchables one has only to refer to the events that occurred all over India in the last elections to the Provincial Legislatures. Only when boycott is made criminal will the Untouchables be free from being the slaves of the Hindus.

The weapon of boycott is now-a-days used against other communities besides the Scheduled Castes. It is therefore in the interests of all minor communities to have this protection.

The provisions relating to boycott are taken bodily from the Burma Anti-Boycott Act, 1922.

Clause 4

Such a provision already exists in Section 150 of the Government of India Act, 1935.

Article II—Section IV

Part I—Clause I

There is nothing new in this clause. The right to representation in the Legislature is conceded by the Poona Pact. The only points that require to be reconsidered relate to (1) Quantum of Representation; (2) Weightage and (3) The System of Electorates.

(1) Quantum
The quantum of representation allowed to the Scheduled Castes by the Poona Pact is set out in clause I of the Pact. The proportion set out in the Pact was fixed out of the balance of seats which remained after (i) the share of the other communities had been taken out; (ii) after weightage to other communities had been allotted, and (iii) after seats had been allocated to special interests. This allotment of seats to the Scheduled Castes has resulted in great injustice. The loss due to seats taken out as weightage and seats given to special interests ought not to have been thrown upon the Scheduled Castes. The allotment of those seats had already been made by the Communal Award long before the Poona Pact. It was therefore not possible then to rectify this injustice.

(2) Weightage
There is another injustice from which the Scheduled Castes have been suffering. It relates to their right to a share in weightage.
As one can see the right to weightage has become a matter of double controversy. One controversy is between the majority and the minorities, the other is a matter of controversy between the different minorities.

The first controversy relates to the principle of weightage. The majority insists that the minority has no right to representation in excess of the ratio of its population to the total population. Why this rule is insisted upon by the majority it is difficult to understand. Is it because the majority wants to establish its own claim to population ratio so that it may always remain as a majority and act as a majority? Or is it because of the fact that a minority no matter how much weightage was given to it must remain a minority and cannot alter the fact that the majority will always be able to impose its will upon it? The first ground leads to a complete negation of the basic conception of majority rule which if rightly understood means nothing more than a decision of the majority to which the minority has reconciled itself. This cannot be the intention of the majority. One must put a more charitable construction and assume that the argument on which the contention of the majority rests is the second and not the first. That a minority even with weightage will remain a minority has to be accepted in view of the insistence of a communal majority to remain a majority and to claim the privileges of a political majority which it is not. But surely there is a difference between a defeat which is a complete rout and a defeat which is almost victory though not a victory. Cricketers know what difference there is between the defeat of a team by a few runs, a defeat by a few wickets and a defeat by one whole innings. The defeat by one whole innings is a complete frustration which a defeat by a few runs is not. Such a frustration when it comes about in the political life of a minority depresses and demoralizes and crushes the spirit of the minority. This must be avoided at any price. Looked at from this point of view there is no doubt that the rule of population—ratio-representation insisted upon by the majority is wrong. What a minority needs is not more representation but effective representation.

And what is effective representation? Obviously the effectiveness of representation depends upon its being large enough to give the minority the sense of not being entirely overwhelmed by the majority. Representation according to population to a minority or to the minorities combined may be effective by reason of the fact that the population of a minority where there is only one or of the combined minorities where there are many is large enough to secure effective minority representation. But there may be cases where the population of a minority or of the minorities combined is too small to secure such effective representation if the population ratio of a minority is taken as an inflexible standard to determine its quantum of representation. To insist upon such a standard is to make mockery of the protection to the minority which is the purpose behind the right to representation which is accepted as the legitimate claim of a minority. In such cases weightage which is another name for deduction from the quantum of representation which is due to the majority on the basis of its population becomes essential and the majority if it wishes to be fair and honest must concede it. There can therefore be no quarrel over the principle of weightage. On this footing the controversy becomes restricted to the question, how is the magnitude of weightage to be determined? This obviously is a question of adjustment and not of principle.

There can therefore be no manner of objection to the principle of weightage. The demand for weightage is however a general demand of all the minorities and the Scheduled Castes must join them in it where the majority is too big. What is however wrong with the existing weightage is unequal distribution among the various minorities. At present, some minorities have secured a lion’s share and some like the Untouchables have none. This wrong must be rectified by a distribution of the weightage on some intelligible principle.

(3) Electorates

...5. One of the issues which has embittered the relations between the Hindus and the Scheduled Castes in the political field is the issue of electorates. The Scheduled Castes are insisting upon separate electorates. The Hindus are equally insistent on opposing the demand. To arrive at a settlement on this issue—without which there can be no peace and amity between the Hindus and the Scheduled Castes—it is necessary to determine who is right and who is wrong and whether the opposition is based on rational grounds or is based on mere prejudice.

6. The grounds which are generally urged against the demand of the Scheduled Castes for separate electorates are:

(i) that the Scheduled Castes are not a minority;
(ii) that the Scheduled Castes are Hindus and therefore they cannot have separate electorates;
(iii) that separate electorates will perpetuate untouchability;
(iv) that separate electorates are anti-national; and
(v) that separate electorates enable British imperialism to influence the communities having separate electorates to act against the interests of the country.

7. Are these arguments valid?

(i) To say that the Scheduled Castes are not a minority is to misunderstand the meaning of the word ‘minority’. Separation in religion is not the only test of a minority. Nor is it a good and efficient test. Social discrimination constitutes the real test for determining whether a social group is or is not a minority. Even Mr Gandhi thought it logical and practical to adopt this test in preference to that of religious separation. Following this test, Mr Gandhi in an editorial under the heading ‘The Fiction of Majority’ in the Harijan dated 21st October 1939 has given his opinion that the Scheduled Castes are the only real minority in India.

(ii) To argue that the Scheduled Castes are Hindus and therefore cannot demand separate electorates is to put the same argument in a different form. To make religious affiliation the determining factor for constitutional safeguards is to overlook the fact that the religious affiliation may be accompanied by an intense degree of social separation and discrimination. The belief that separate electorates go with separation in religion arises from the fact that those minorities who have been given separate electorates happen to be religious minorities. This, however, is not correct. Muslims are given separate electorates not because they are different from Hindus in point of religion. They are given separate electorates because—and this is the fundamental fact—the social relations between the Hindus and the Musalmans are marked by social discrimination. To put the point in a somewhat different manner, the nature of the electorates is determined not by reference to religion but by reference to social considerations. That it is social considerations and not religious affiliation or disaffiliation which is accepted as the basis of determining the nature of the electorates is best illustrated by the arrangements made under the Government of India Act 1935 for the Christian community in India. The Christian community is divided into three sections—Europeans, Anglo-Indians and Indian Christians. In spite of the fact that they all belong to the same religion each section has a separate electorate. This shows that what is decisive is not religious affiliation but social separation.

(iii) To urge that separate electorates prevent solidarity between the Untouchables and the caste Hindus is the result of confused thinking. Elections take place once in five years. Assuming there were joint electorates, it is difficult to understand how social solidarity between the Hindus and the Untouchables can be promoted by their devoting one day for voting together when out of the rest of the five years they are leading severely separate lives? Similarly, assuming that there were separate electorates it is difficult to understand how one day devoted to separate voting in the course of five years can make for greater separation than what already exists? Or contrary wise, how can one day in five years devoted to separate voting prevent those who wish to work for their union from carrying out their purposes? To make it concrete, how can separate electorate for the Untouchables prevent intermarriage or interdining being introduced between them and the Hindus? It is therefore futile to say that separate electorates for the Untouchables will perpetuate separation between them and the Hindus.

(iv) To insist that separate electorates create anti-national spirit is contrary to experience. The Sikhs have separate electorates. But no one can say that the Sikhs are anti-national. The Muslims have had separate electorates right from 1909. Mr Jinnah had been elected by separate electorates. Yet, Mr Jinnah was the apostle of Indian nationalism up to 1935. The Indian Christians have separate electorates. Nonetheless a good lot of them have shown their partiality to the Congress if they have not been actually returned on the Congress ticket. Obviously nationalism and anti-nationalism have nothing to do with the electoral system. They are the result of extra-electoral forces.

(v) This argument has no force. It is nothing but escapism. Be that as it may, with free India any objection to separate electorates on such a ground must vanish.

8. The reason why the arguments advanced by the opponents of separate electorates do not stand the scrutiny of logic and experience is due entirely to the fact that their approach to the subject is fundamentally wrong. It is wrong in two respects:

(i) They fail to realize that the system of electorates has nothing to do with the religious nexus or communal nexus. It is nothing but a mechanism to enable a minority to return its true representative to the Legislature. Being a mechanism for the protection of a minority it follows that whether the electorate should be joint or separate must be left to be determined by the minority.

(ii) They fail to make any distinction between the demand for separate electorates by a majority community and a similar demand made by a minority community. A majority community has no right to demand separate electorates. The reason is simple. A right by a majority community to demand separate electorates is tantamount to a right to establish the Government of the majority community over the minority community without the consent of the minority. This is contrary to the well-established doctrine of democracy that government must be with the consent of the governed. No such evil consequence follows from the opposite principle, namely, that a minority community is entitled to determine the nature of the electorates suited to its interests, because there is no possibility of the minority being placed in a position to govern the majority.

9. A correct attitude towards the whole question rests on the following axioms:

(i) The system of electorates being a device for the protection of the minority, the issue whether the electoral system should be the joint electorate or separate electorate must be left to the wishes of the minority. If it is large enough to influence the majority it will choose joint electorates. If it is too small for the purpose, it will prefer separate electorates for fear of being submerged.

(ii) The majority, being in a position to rule, can have no voice in the determination of the system of electorates. If the minority wants joint electorates, the majority must submit itself to joint electorates. If the minority decides to have separate electorates for itself the majority cannot refuse to grant them. In other words, the majority must look to the decision of the minority and abide by it....

...Part II—Clause 2

This is a new demand but is justified by circumstances. At present, the Hindus live in the villages and the Untouchables live in the Ghettoes. The object is to free the Untouchables from the thralldom of the Hindus. So long as the present arrangement continues it is impossible for the Untouchables either to free themselves from the yoke of the Hindus or to get rid of their untouchability. It is the close-knit association of the Untouchables with the Hindus living in the same village which marks them out as Untouchables and which enables the Hindus to identify them as being Untouchables. India is admittedly a land of villages and so long as the village system provides an easy method of marking out and identifying the Untouchables, the Untouchable has no escape from untouchability. It is the system of the village plus the ghetto which perpetuates untouchability and the Untouchables therefore demand that the nexus should be broken and the Untouchables who are as a matter of fact socially separate should be made separate geographically and territorially also, and be settled into separate villages exclusively of Untouchables in which the distinction of the high and the low and of Touchable and Untouchable will find no place.

The second reason for demanding separate settlements arises out of the economic position of the Untouchables in the villages. That their condition is most pitiable no one will deny. They are a body of landless labourers who are entirely dependent upon such employment as the Hindus may choose to give them and on such wages as the Hindus may find it profitable to pay. In the villages in which they live they cannot engage in any trade or occupation, for owing to untouchability no Hindu will deal with them. It is therefore obvious that there is no way of earning a living which is open to the Untouchables so long as they live in a ghetto as a dependent part of the Hindu village.

This economic dependence has also other consequences besides the condition of poverty and degradation which proceeds from it. The Hindu has a code of life, which is part of his religion. This code of life gives him many privileges and heaps upon the Untouchable many indignities which are incompatible with the dignity and sanctity of human life. The Untouchables all over India are fighting against the indignities and injustices which the Hindus in the name of their religion have heaped upon them. A perpetual war is going on every day in every village between the Hindus and the Untouchables. It does not see the light of the day. The Hindu press is not prepared to give it publicity lest it should injure the cause of their freedom in the eyes of the world. The existence of a grim struggle between the Touchables and the Untouchables is however a fact. Under the village system the Untouchable has found himself greatly handicapped in his struggle for free and honourable life. It is a contest between the Hindus who are economically and socially strong and the Untouchables who are economically poor and numerically small. That the Hindus most often succeed in suppressing the Untouchables is due to many causes. The Hindus have the police and the magistracy on their side. In a quarrel between the Untouchables and the Hindus the Untouchables will never get protection from the police and justice from the Magistrate. The police and the magistracy naturally love their class more than their duty. But the chief weapon in the armoury of the Hindus is economic power which they possess over the poor Untouchables living in the village. The proposal may be dubbed escapism. But the only alternative is perpetual slavery.

Part III—Clause 1

No country which has the problem of communal majority and communal minority is without some kind of an arrangement whereby they agree to share political power. South Africa has such as understanding. So has Canada....

...Unfortunately for the minorities in India, Indian nationalism has developed a new doctrine which may be called the Divine Right of the Majority to rule the minorities according to the wishes of the majority. Any claim for the sharing of power by the minority is called communalism while the monopolizing of the whole power by the majority is called nationalism. Guided by such political philosophy the majority is not prepared to allow the minorities to share political power nor is it willing to respect any convention made in that behalf as is evident from their repudiation of the obligation (to include representatives of the minorities in the cabinet) contained in the Instrument of Instructions issued to the Governors in the Government of India Act of 1935. Under these circumstances there is no way left but to have the rights of the Scheduled Castes embodied in the Constitution.

Part III—Clause 2

This is not a new demand. It replaces clause 6 of the Poona Pact which provides that the system of representation for the Scheduled Castes by reserved seats shall continue until determined by mutual consent between the communities concerned in the settlement. Since there is no safe method of ascertaining the will of the Scheduled Castes as to how to amend and alter the safeguards provided for them it is necessary to formulate a plan which will take the place of clause 6 of the Pact. Provisions having similar objectives to those contained in the proposal exist in the Constitutions of Australia, America and South Africa.

In dealing with a matter of this sort two considerations have to be borne in mind. One is that it is not desirable to rule out the possibility of a change in the safeguards being made in the future by the parties concerned. On the other hand it is by no means desirable to incessantly struggle over their revision. If the new Union and State Legislatures are to address themselves successfully to their responsibilities set out in the preamble, it is desirable that they should not be distracted by the acute contentions between religions and classes which questions of change in the safeguards are bound to raise. Hence a period of twenty-five years has been laid down before any change could be considered.

Article II—Section II, Part IV

The object of this provision is to see that whatever safeguards are provided for the Scheduled Castes in British India are also provided for the Scheduled Castes in the Indian States. The provision lays down that an Indian State seeking admission to the Union shall have to satisfy that its constitution contains these safeguards.
Article II—Interpretation

Whether the Scheduled Castes are a minority or not has become a matter of controversy. The purpose of the first provision is to set this controversy at rest. The Scheduled Castes are in a worst position as compared to any other minority in India. As such they require and deserve much more protection than any other minority does. The least one can do is to treat them as a minority.

The purpose of the second provision is to remove the provincial bar. There is no reason why a person who belongs to Scheduled Castes in one province should lose the benefit of political privileges given by the Constitution merely because he happens to change his domicile.

2. Demand for Representation in Constituent Assembly

Letter from Shiv Chand (on Behalf of Scheduled Castes of Simla Hill States) to J.B. Kripalani, 25 March 1947

AICC Papers, File No. CL-3, (Part 1)/1946–47, NMML.

Ref. No. 181/HSCA/47
Dated 25th March 1947

Sub: Simla Hill States and Constituent Assembly Case for Representation of Scheduled Castes

Sir,

On the 23rd of February 1947 a meeting of the Praja Parishad was held and on this occasion [sic] we were graced by the presence of Mr Kachru. A joint representation was placed before Mr Kachru, requesting him to consider the nomination of a representative from the Scheduled Castes to the Constituent Assembly, but he disagreed with our proposal, on the plea that unless we become members of the Parishad and get ourselves amalgamated into the regional council, we had no chance of having our grievances redressed although we formed majority of the total population of Simla Hill States.

Under these circumstances we humbly beg the President of the Minorities Advisory Board that taking into consideration the various factors, particularly our backwardness and age-old suppression at the hands of the upper classes, a representative should be nominated from amongst the Scheduled Castes Association to the Constituent Assembly.

We are entitled to send one representative of ours on that Body on population basis also. The total population of the Simla sector is approximately 16 lacs, of which Scheduled Castes count for about 65 per cent. The whole of this sector comprises 37 Hill States. The State authorities have long deprived us of our legitimate social, political and cultural rights. Whatever conditional rights the Scheduled Castes are entitled to in theory we are also being interfered with by the State authorities. In all these Hill States there are local councils, but the Scheduled Castes have no representation even on these petty councils. And when we do raise our voice in protest against these depressing conditions we are told that we are incapable of enjoying the rights we ask for.

Since it has already been made explicit in a ruling of the Constituent Assembly that a minority should enjoy the same rights of elections as other bodies, and since, irrespective of the fact that we have a clear majority the secretary of the Praja Parishad does not deem it
Towards Freedom: 1947

It is advisable to send our representative to the Constituent Assembly, it can well be inferred that we are being clearly deprived of our rights.

We might point out that the Scheduled Castes of Simla Hills were formerly organized under Himalaya Prantiya Koli Sabha. Recently the Sabha was renamed ‘Himalaya Scheduled Castes Association’. This is the only representative institution of the Scheduled Castes of these parts. Our Association has twenty branches spread in the length and breadth of Simla Hills.

In view of the aforesaid circumstances we earnestly feel that our Depressed Class brethren should get representation. We sincerely hope that the President of the Minorities Advisory Board shall give sympathetic consideration to our case and nominate one candidate to the Constituent Assembly on behalf of our Association. In case a just decision is not forthcoming we fear it might have prejudicial effect on the interest of our majority community.

Hoping to be favoured with a sympathetic response.

I beg to remain,

Sir,
Yours most obedient Servant
Shiv Chand
President,
Himalaya Scheduled Castes Association
18, Chitter Gupta Rd,
New Delhi.

3. Parsis’ Role in Building Up Modern India: Demand for Safeguards

Extract from Memorandum on Minorities by R.K. Sidhwa, 31 March 1947

In more than one of the meetings of the Constituent Assembly, some members pertinently raised points that the Parsees do not come under the minority community and no reference was made by the British delegation in their Statement of May 16, 1946 in that respect. I have tried to explain to some of the members, but I do feel that the matter requires to be placed on record as to why the British delegation have not made any reference to the Parsee community as a minority community.

The facts are that the Parsee community though small in number is almost equal to the population of Anglo-Indians. Parsees were the pioneers in all walks of public life, namely, political, social, educational, commercial and industrial, and they always held progressive views in all these matters. In fact, efforts were made many a time by the British Government through their agents in India pressing the Parsee community to ask for a separate representation in various legislatures, but they flatly refused. It may be mentioned here that a year after the 1942 struggle for freedom, by the Indian National Congress, Mr Amery, then Secretary of State for India, made another effort to divide the Parsee community and made an offer for a separate representation to them. This was again emphatically opposed in a representation signed by nearly 2,000 Parsees holding university degree which was sent to him stating that their interests are safeguarded by sister communities. In view of all these facts, the British Government are perfectly justified in not mentioning the name of the Parsee community, like other communities who demanded special representation and special rights. This does not mean that when India is going to be absolutely free Parsees should not have any say in the framing of the constitution for free India. The very fact that the Congress have been very generous in electing three Parsees in the Constituent Assembly refutes the arguments advanced by certain persons who are not conversant with facts....

Coming to comparatively recent times, the Parsees have contributed no mean share in building up the city of Bombay. In Karachi Parsees have played a very important part in the building of its civic and political life. Amongst the adventurous and intelligent brains of various communities who have built up the prosperity of this part of India so many of them were Parsees—mill magnates, merchants, traders, businessmen, bankers, brokers, financiers, educationists, social reformers, physicians, politicians, lawyers, parliamentarians and so forth.
The first spinning and weaving mill in Bombay was started by a Parsee, followed in his footsteps by yet another Parsee. The pioneer of silk mill industry in India was a Parsee. Soaps and safes are synonymous with the name of a Parsee. The first Indian bank was sponsored by a Parsee.
The iron and steel industry, hydro-electric ventures, scientific learning and research were all mooted by a Parsee industrialist of great depth of mind and vision, Mr J.N. Tata. The first hospitals, roads, wells, tanks, bhandharas, dharamshalas, schools, and other things, were built by a Parsee—Sir Jamsetjee Jejeebhoy the Ist Bart., the king of munificence and benevolence.
The first Indian to enter the Parliament was a Parsee—Dr Dadabhoy Naoroji, the political guru of Mahatma Gandhi and nearly the father of the Indian National Congress along with Hume, Cotton, Bradlaugh, Wedderburn and the rest. The first to fight for the civil liberties of an Indian and to show the way to civil and political autonomy was a Parsee—Sir Pherozeshah Mehta, the uncrowned king of Bombay. The name of Mr Jamshedji Tata, the founder of the House of Tatas, is only comparable with the name of Andrew Carnegie of America or of Lord Nuffield of England. Girls education was first sponsored by a Parsee Mr Malabari....

Parsee community though very small in number has by far surpassed any other community in the various activities of public life. In Karachi there are technical colleges sponsored by Parsees open to all communities without any distinction. There is a N.E.D. (Nadirsha Edulji Dinshaw) Trust Fund under the management of the Bombay University, which gives scholarships to Indians for training in Western countries and many Indians take advantage of the same. Sir Dorab Tata’s Trust Fund sends a number of Indians to Europe and America for training in pioneer industries and various Indians have received scholarships for this training.
While selecting the candidates for the last many years excepting very few Parsees, all other communities’ persons have been sent to these countries. It may be mentioned that after Bombay, the large number of the Parsee population in Gujarat, namely, Surat, Broach, Ahmedabad and Navasari in Baroda State. Then nearly 3,000 reside in Poona. The population of Parsees in Karachi is about 5,000. It may also be mentioned that Parsees contribute a fairly good sum of taxes both to the Central and Provincial governments in comparison with population of other communities. Their contribution towards taxes and other matters if compared with the population of other communities would be greater in every respect.

Since then the other communities have followed past activities of the Parsees in all directions. This does not mean that the philanthropic, benevolent and patriotic work done by the Parsees compared with the number of their population should be lost sight of. Parsees have held the high posts of Judges, Magistrates, Advocate Generals, Public Prosecutors, Collectors, Commissioners, Directors of Agriculture, Inspectors General of Prisons, Police and Hospitals, Directors of various Government Departments. These they have obtained by sheer dint of merit and ability and not by any favour. Parsees have all along tried to stand on their own legs.
The upper class are generally in profession and business and lower middle class are employed mostly in commercial firms. The Parsees have lived in the past by the honest sweat of their brow and they want to live the same life under the new regime.

In short, the Parsees have lacked in nothing to build up modern India. They have helped the cause, whatever its nature, with their usual munificence, never caring for caste, creed or colour. Gujarat floods, Bihar and Quetta earthquakes and such other nation-wide catastrophes are a few instances. Indeed their charities have been cosmopolitan and many a well placed Indian has been able to acquire his education through the instrumentality of some of the Parsee trusts. Parsee catholicity is thus well known and needs no stressing. While doing so much for its neighbours, its fellow brother, the community as a whole has refrained from any spoon-feeding by a political junta or a social or economic organization. It has sought no favour and seeks none. But today it finds itself obliged to come forward only to ensure its place in the India of the future. Before the future constitution of India is framed and put on the statute book the community hopes justice will be dispensed fairly and it will be given freedom to cultivate and develop its innate genius according to its own cultural pattern and on its own lines compatible with national interest.

While we believe in the universal aphorism that no community can live its own life in the midst of an ever-expanding world, one cannot but admit that the Parsee community has led a unique existence of its own these thousand years and more and preserved its heritage. Today however as is natural it has begun to experience certain biological and socio-biological difficulties. For the last two decades it has displayed a falling birth-rate, especially in the city of Bombay and the logistic fit would go to show that two or three decades hence the population will begin to be stationary or even retrogressive. Already a microscopic community in the midst of 400 millions, the Parsees can no longer remain passive to their populational arithmetic....

The Parsees have today a separate Act for matrimonial purposes, which Act is known as ‘Indian Act 3 of 1936—Parsee Marriage and Divorce Act.’ This Act came into existence about 70 years ago and in 1936, when this Act was amended, objections were sent to the Parsee Panchayats in various Provinces, where the Parsees reside, to express their opinion and whatever suggestions were made, were accepted by the legislatures without a comma or a fullstop being changed. In Indian Succession Act there is a separate chapter relating to Parsees for distribution of shares amongst the children by parents after death.

We desire that Acts of this nature should continue to exist in the new Constitution and any amendment in these Acts shall be made only with the consent of the Parsee community as has been done in the past.

It is further suggested that no enactment affecting the religion, customs, personal law, endowments, and other cognate subjects should be initiated and passed except with their own concurrence obtained as in the case of Matrimonial Act and other Acts.

The above statement disposes of the various questions mentioned in the questionnaire issued by the Constituent Assembly Office. There are two clauses, however, Nos. 5 and 6, which are very important. As regards No. 5, I do feel that machinery should be set up to ensure that the safeguards, which have been provided in the Constitution for minorities are fully adhered to. I would suggest a minorities commission as outlined by Babu Rajendra Prasad in his Book ‘India Divided’, p. 381, which runs as under:

There should be an independent minorities' commission at the centre and in the provinces composed of representatives of each community (but not necessarily a member of that community) represented in the legislature, elected by members of the legislature belonging to that community.
No member of the legislature shall be eligible for election and the term of office of the members of commission shall synchronize with that of the legislature. The function of the commission shall be to keep a constant watch over the interests of minority communities, to call for such information as the commission consider necessary; to review periodically the policy pursued in regard to the implementation of non-justifiable fundamental rights and to submit reports to the Prime Minister. The recommendations of the commission shall be considered by the Cabinet and the Prime Minister shall place the report of the commission with a full statement of action taken thereon before the legislature which shall have facilities provided for a discussion thereon.

This may require certain changes in the above paragraph which can be discussed in detail at the meeting.

As regards clause 6, I am absolutely in favour of elimination of the safeguards granted to the minorities communities, within a certain period. Personally I would put its period upto the first election, namely, five years. I feel, however, that my view may not be acceptable to the other minority communities. Therefore maximum period of 10 years is to be put for the safeguards being continued. These safeguards should be so administered that they should automatically come to termination within a period of 10 years. For this purpose there will require some kind of provision in the Instrument of Instructions or in the Act. The relations between the various communities should be so cordial that they should feel themselves after the period of ten years that such safeguards are no longer necessary. If the period is not mentioned then there will be a kind of perpetual instinct in the mind of the minority community representatives that the safeguards are to remain for ever and it will be difficult for these small communities to come nearer with major communities. Ultimate phase of political life of all Indians should be one nation, no community.

4. Demand for Proportionate Representation on Population Basis and Socio-religious and Economic Safeguards

Memorandum on the Plains Tribal People of Assam by R.N. Brahma, March/April 1947

The Assam tribal people living in the plains of Assam form an important section of the population of the Province. They were the dominant people with a distinct type of culture and civilization of their own in ancient Assam. Owing to their backwardness in education and their present deplorable economic condition these people have been now placed in a very miserable and helpless condition and in their present circumstances they rightfully deserve special safeguards for protecting their interests in the future Constitution of India. By the Government of India Act, 1935, these people have been recognized as an important distinct minority in the Province of Assam in the present constitution. For the first time they have been allowed four separate seats in the Provincial Legislature (Assam Legislative Assembly) with a separate electorate in four constituencies though according to their population they were entitled to much more seats. The tribal people in the plains are composed of different tribes all of whom are equally backward. All of them have retained their own dialects. They use their own mother-tongue among themselves and in schools they have been adopting Assamese language as their medium of instruction. The Kacharis or the Boro Kacharis form the major portion of the tribal population in the plains in Assam. The following main tribes should be included in the plains tribal population of Assam in the future Constitution of India:
Towards Freedom: 1947

(b) Ex-Tea Garden Tribes: All the Indian ex-tea garden tribes who have settled in the plains of the Province of Assam.

There are Christians, Buddhists and Hindus among the Assam Plains tribes and majority of them have still retained their own tribal forms of worship and religion. It is the agreed and joint demand of these tribal people that irrespective of any religion these people should be grouped together and treated as plains tribal in the future Constitution of India on their ethnological basis.

1. Scope and Nature of Safeguards

The tribal people in the plains of Assam should have equal rights and privileges to enjoy all the fundamental rights of a citizen in the future Constitution of India. They should be proclaimed and made statutory. Certain limitations to the fundamental rights of citizens may however be prescribed in different Provinces according to local conditions, if it is found necessary for protecting the interests of the tribal people. Over and above the general fundamental rights of citizens the tribal people need some special political, economic, cultural and other safeguards both in the Centre and the Provinces for protecting their interests in the future Constitution of India. The special safeguards needed for the tribal people of the plains in Assam are detailed below:

2. Political Safeguards

(a) Centre: The Plains tribal people in Assam demand their proportionate representation in the Central Legislature on population basis and also representation in the Central executives for the Plains tribal people. They also demand seats in the Central Cabinet.

(b) Provinces: The Plains tribal people in Assam demand proportionate representation on population basis in the Provincial Legislatures with weightage of at least 25 per cent of the total seats allotted. In Assam the total population of the Plains tribal people will be about one-fifth of the total population of the Province and they demand representation on the basis of this population. It has already been stated above that the Government of India Act, 1935, has provided the tribal people of the plains in Assam with separate seats with a separate electorate. What should be the system of electorate for the minority people in the future Constitution of India is a matter which will have to be decided by the sub-committee, the main Advisory Committee and ultimately by the Constituent Assembly after full deliberations and discussions, after having the views from all the representatives of the different minority communities. So far as the tribal people of the plains in Assam are concerned some of them think that in the present circumstances joint electorate system with reservation of seats on population basis may be suitable for them but majority of them still feel that so long the Plains tribal people cannot feel their position secure in the hands of the more advanced people there should be provision for representation on population basis with a separate electorate for the Plains tribal people in Assam in the future Constitution of India though they welcome the day when there will be no more necessity for such a separate system. They feel that they should be given the right of freely selecting their own representatives without interference of other people. Some think that a system of election by proportional representation with the single transferable vote may serve their purpose.

The tribal people of the plains in Assam demand that there should be statutory provision for reserving at least 3 (three) seats for the Plains tribal people in the Assam Cabinet or Ministry in the future Constitution for safeguarding and looking after the interests of the tribal people. They also demand adequate representatives on population basis in local bodies.

3. Economic Safeguards

(a) Centre: The Plains tribal people should have their legitimate and due shares in Central Services, contracts and all other economic facilities and that they should not be exploited in business spheres.

(b) Province: The tribal people living in the plains of Assam should be protected from being exploited in economic and business spheres. They should have adequate representation on their population basis in all Government services. There should be reservation of all the Government contract works on their population basis for the Plains tribal people. Where necessary they should be given preference and special facilities for developing and improving their economic condition. They should have due share in trade, commerce and industries of the Province.

Land Problem: In Assam the question of land problem has become very acute to the tribal people in the plains. Thousands and thousands of these people have become landless. They are being exploited by the immigrants and other more advanced people everywhere in all the districts of the Assam Valley in the Province. There must be some special statutory provision for protecting these Plains tribal people with their lands. Some blocks or belts will have to be created for these people where other non-tribal people should not be allowed to take settlement of lands and where the sale or transfer of lands to the non-tribal should be strictly prohibited. There should be reservation of sufficient lands for providing the landless tribal people with lands and for their future expansion.

4. Religious, Cultural and Educational Safeguards

Religion: There are Christians, Hindus and Buddhists among the tribals in the plains of Assam and majority of them have still retained their own forms of worship and religion. There should be full freedom of religion.

Cultural: Many of the Assam tribals living in the plains such as the Kacharis, and the Miris have got their own distinct cultural peculiarities. They have their own dialects, arts, traditions, social customs and usages. All the Plains tribal people in Assam should have the statutory rights to retain and develop their own cultural peculiarities.

Education: In Assam the Plains tribal people are the most backward people in education. Over and above the general provisions in the provincial annual budget where the tribal people should have their due share, specific sums should every year be set apart as earmarked provisions from the public funds for the educational and cultural developments of these people in the areas where they preponderate. There should be reservation of sufficient number of scholarships both for technical and general education on population basis for the tribals in the plains in schools and colleges. There should be special officers, and a board or a committee to advise and look after the education of these tribal people. More schools should be opened in tribal areas. Adequate and sufficient aids should be given to the schools in tribal areas. In the areas where it is found necessary the tribal people in the plains should be allowed the option of introducing their mother-language or vernacular as medium of instruction at least in the primary schools.

5. Machinery

One of the Plains tribal Ministers who will be in the Provincial Cabinet or Ministry will form a board with other tribal members of the Legislatures and advise the executive head of the Province and see that the safeguards are effective. There should be statutory provision that the executive head of the Province shall have to hear and follow the advice of that Minister.

6. These safeguards should continue till the tribal people of the Province of Assam consider them necessary and till they can feel their position secure.

5. Sikh Interests in Punjab: Replies to the Questionnaire of the Constituent Assembly on Minorities

Extract from the Memorandum on Sikhs by Ujjal Singh and Harnam Singh, March/
April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 121, NMML.

...Since the annexation of the Punjab with British India, the Sikhs have played a most noteworthy part in the making of the Punjab of to-day, and have made contributions towards the defence of India, and towards its economic and political life, which are out of all relationship with their small numerical strength but which are in keeping with their historic role in the political and cultural life of India....

Professor Coupland on p. 84 of The Future of India says:

The Sikhs form 15 per cent of the aggregate population of the province and the States and there is not a single district in which the Sikhs are in a clear majority. But the traditional qualities of the typical Sikh, the sturdy, free-minded peasant proprietor of the Central Punjab, where he owns most of best land, his energy, and toughness and courage and the great contribution, has long made and is still making to the strength and renown of the Indian Army give to the community an importance in the Punjab out of all proportions to its numbers.

Mr Robert Needham Cust, ICS, Secretary to the Royal Asiatic Society writing in 1859 described the rich tract which lies between the river Chenab and Beas as the original Sikh land, the cradle of the faith and the nursery of the chivalry of the followers of the Gurus. The state of affairs that existed in 1859 continues till today as detailed hereunder. ...

5. In the matter of the defence of the country, the services which the Sikhs have rendered are even more remarkable. The intelligent student of history knows that the credit of having effectively closed the North-West mountain passes through which hordes of foreign invaders have come to India to disturb its cultural and political life, for thousand of years, goes to the Sikhs. They are rightly described as ‘the backbone and flower of the Indian Army.’ Although the Sikhs are less than two per cent of the population of India, their strength in the defence forces was over thirty per cent in the second half of the nineteenth century and during the last war it was about fifteen per cent. Even during this war, in spite of the fact that the Indian Defence Forces have been increased to 25 lakhs, which is more than 12 times its previous strength, the Sikhs are in the neighbourhood of 10 per cent in the defence forces. The quality of a Sikh as a soldier and a fighter does not need elaboration.

The Sikhs maintain that the Punjab is and must remain the homeland and the holy land of the Sikhs. The facts and figures on this point are so clear and overwhelming that nothing but sheer audacity can account for any claim to the contrary, including the facetious claim that the Punjab is a Muslim province, or that it comprises one of the homelands of the Muslims. The Sikhs have more than seven hundred historic Gurdwaras in the Punjab with rich endowments, and undying memories of their Gurus, saints and martyrs attached to them. The Sikhs have set up and are financing over 400 educational institutions, colleges, schools, seminaries and technical establishments, thus making a contribution towards the educational progress of the Province out of all proportions to their numerical strength and far in excess of any such contribution made by other communities, particularly the Muslims. The policy of and the atmosphere prevailing in these institutions, is more liberal and non-communal than that in any similar institution run by other communities.

In view of these considerations it is difficult to appreciate the Muslim claim that the Punjab is a Muslim province, particularly so when the non-Muslims own more than eighty per cent of the urban property and pay more than eighty per cent of income tax and urban property tax in the Punjab.

Having given the background of the Sikh case, we now proceed to answer the questionnaire.

1. Nature and Scope of the Safeguards for a Minority in the New Constitution

The existing safeguards for the various minorities as provided in the Government of India Act are mainly of a political nature, that is, communal representation in the Legislatures by separate electorates and weightage provided for certain minorities. The special responsibility of the Governors and the Governor-General in regard to the safeguards of the legitimate interests of minorities are provided under section 12(1)(c) and 52(1)(b). Besides, guidance is given in the Instrument of Instructions to Governors and the Governor-General. Section 298 of the Government of India Act, 1935, provides safeguards against discrimination in regard to acquiring, holding or disposing of property or carrying on occupation, trade, business or profession. Section 83 and section 242 provide educational safeguards and the position of Anglo-Indians in certain services. Such political safeguards will have to be provided in the future Constitution as well. Fundamental rights of the citizens will cover rights of every individual and will consequently provide some of the safeguards for the members of the minorities as well. In addition to these, the minorities require safeguards for the protection of their religion, language, and culture as well as for social and economic rights. All these safeguards shall be incorporated in the Constitution and shall not be repeated, altered, varied or amended without the consent of the representatives of the minorities affected.

2. Political Safeguards (a) in the Centre, (b) in the Provinces

(a) (i) In the Central Legislature, 6 per cent of the seats shall be reserved for the Sikhs both in the Upper and the Lower Houses.
(ii) At least one Sikh shall always find a seat in the Cabinet of the Union.

(iii) Sikhs shall have reserved for them 5 per cent of the Central Services or at least 8 1/3 per cent reserved for small communities according to the existing arrangement should be split up on the basis of population of these communities to ensure a separate share for the Sikhs.

(iv) In framing rules for the regulation of recruitment of the defence forces of India, the authority concerned shall have due regard to the past association of the Sikh community with the defence forces and particularly to the specified class, character and the numerical percentages of posts hitherto held by members of the Sikh community in the Indian army.

(v) The Sikhs shall also be represented on the Union Service Commission and the various boards, committees and statutory bodies set up by the Union Government.

(b) Provincial Legislatures: In Sind, Baluchistan, United Provinces, Delhi, Bengal, Bombay, Central Provinces, Bihar and Assam, the Sikhs shall be recognized as a separate minority and provisions shall be made for their representation in the Legislatures of the said Provinces.

In the North-West Frontier Province the Sikhs shall have representation of 10 per cent in the Legislature.

Punjab: The Punjab shall be divided into two separate autonomous units, but in case division of the Punjab into two separate autonomous units is not possible under the State Paper of May 16, 1946, the Punjab shall be divided into two sub-provinces, North-West Punjab and South-East Punjab. Each sub-province shall have its own Legislature and Cabinet to deal with its own affairs. In this set-up, affairs of joint concern, if any, shall be dealt with by a joint Legislature comprising an equal number of members elected by the sub-provincial Legislatures. The weightage to the Sikhs in the Joint Legislature shall be on the lines adopted for Muslims at the Centre.

In the passing of any bill, motion, or resolution affecting exclusively a single community, members of other communities shall not have a right of vote.

Executive: The executive head will be advised by the Cabinet of North-West Punjab in affairs relating to North-West Punjab, by the Cabinet of the South-East Punjab in affairs solely of the South-East Punjab and by the joint Cabinet in affairs of joint concern.

In the Cabinet constituted for the administration of affairs of joint concern, the representation of the Sikhs shall be at least 25 per cent.

In North-West Frontier Province and Baluchistan, a Sikh Minister shall be appointed by rotation with a Hindu Minister.

In United Provinces one Minister for smaller minorities shall be appointed.

The Cabinet shall be chosen on the Swiss model, all the Legislatures and Cabinets having the same fixed term.

Services: In the Punjab 25 per cent representation in the Provincial Services shall be given to the Sikhs.

The existing reservation of 10 per cent services for smaller minorities in United Provinces shall be split up on a population basis and a share fixed for each minority separately.
In North-West Frontier Province, the Sikhs shall have representation of 10 per cent in the services.

3. Economic and Social Safeguards

(i) Freedom to choose one’s occupation as well as to originate enterprises or industries of an agricultural, commercial, industrial or other nature shall be guaranteed in the Union of India.

(ii) No subject of the Indian Union shall on grounds of religion, caste, creed, place of birth or descent shall be ineligible for any office in any part of the Indian Union or be prohibited on any such ground from acquiring, holding or disposing of movable and immovable property or carrying on any occupation, trade, business or profession in any part of the Indian Union.

(iii) All nationals, subject to rules of recruitment and reservation made for various communities shall be treated on a footing of equality as regards admission to public employments, functions and honours, including military ranks and to public establishments.

(iv) Officials may not be provisionally removed from office or provisionally or permanently retired, or transferred to another post with a lower salary save in accordance with and in the manner determined by law.

(v) All citizens shall have an equal right of access to and use of public wells, reservoirs, tanks, hostels, restaurants, parks and all other places of public resort.

4. Religious, Educational and Cultural Safeguards

(i) The preparation and use of ‘jhatka’ meat in public institutions shall be allowed and ‘jhatka’ meat shall be treated on a par with ‘halal’ meat.

(ii) No law shall be enacted nor any executive order made or promulgated to restrict in any manner or to any extent whatsoever the manufacture, sale, the keeping and wearing of kirpans by the Sikhs.

(iii) Every religious denomination shall have the right to manage its own affairs, own, acquire and administer property, movable and immovable and maintain and control institutions for religious and charitable purposes.

(iv) The State shall maintain intact all religious and charitable institutions and the endowments attached to them and such religious institutions or endowments and the properties attached to those institutions shall not be resumed or acquired by State action and the State shall not create by financial assistance or otherwise any endowments or institutions out of taxes not specifically and exclusively collected from the religious community for the benefit of which such new endowments or institutions are sought to be created.

(v) The minorities shall have an equitable share of the sums provided for religious purposes in the State, municipal or other budgets taking into account the requirements of nationals belonging to religious minorities.

(vi) The State shall provide special educational facilities and also facilities to enter public services for backward classes such as the Scheduled Castes, Aboriginal Tribes, the Mazahbis, Ramdasia and Kabir Panthi Sikhs and shall protect them from social injustice and all forms of exploitation. All such facilities shall be available to any member of these castes and tribes who embraces Sikhism.
(vii) The State shall protect the culture, language and script of the various communities and linguistic areas in India.

(viii) The right to employ Punjabi for the conduct of administrative and legislative business in the Punjab shall be guaranteed by the Constitution.

(ix) The Constitution shall guarantee Punjabi to be the court and official language of the Punjab with option to the various communities to use their own script, if any.

(x) The maintenance of minority educational institutions shall be provided for according to the same principle as the maintenance of other State educational institutions.

(xi) The Indian Union guarantees that all minorities shall have equal rights with other citizens in forming, controlling, administering at their own expense, charitable, social and religious institutions, schools and other educational establishments with the free use of their language and the practice of their religion therein.

(xii) The Indian Union guarantees that all minorities shall have equal rights with other citizens in forming, controlling, administering at their own expense, charitable, social and religious institutions, schools and other educational establishments with the free use of their language and the practice of their religion therein.

(xiii) A minority school shall be established on the application of a national supported by the persons legally responsible for the education of at least 40 children of that minority provided that these children are nationals and that they belong to the same school district, and that they are of the age at which education is compulsory and that their parents intend to send them to the said school. If at least 40 of these children belong to the same denomination or religion, a minority school of the denominational religious character desired shall be established on such application.

(xiv) Legislative or administrative measures providing State aid for schools shall not discriminate between schools under the management of different religious denominations.

(xv) Religious minorities in the country shall have a right to establish autonomous institutions for the preservation and development of their national culture and to maintain special organizations for their welfare so far as it is not incompatible with the interests of the State, the organizations having power to levy the taxes for the maintenance of such institutions.

(xvi) The State shall make provisions for the teaching of Gurmukhi in all educational institutions where a minimum of 10 Sikh students in one class are receiving education.

5. Machinery To Be Set Up to Ensure That the Safeguards Are Effective

(i) The Constitution Act shall provide the establishment at the Centre and in each of the Provinces of independent minority commissions which shall be composed of a representative of each of the communities concerned,

(ii) The functions of the commission shall be:
   (a) to keep a constant watch over the interests of the minority communities in the area;
   (b) to call for such information from the Government concerned as the commission may consider necessary for the discharging of its functions;
   (c) to review periodically—for example once every six months—the policy pursued in legislation and administration by the Legislature and the Executive in regard to the implementing of non-justiciable fundamental rights and other minority rights.
assured by the Constitution to the minority community and to submit a report to the Government concerned.

(iii) The recommendations of the commission shall be considered by the Cabinet concerned as soon as possible. In case any of the recommendations are not accepted wholly or in part, the report shall be referred to the Federal Court and the decision on such report taken by the Federal Court shall be binding on the Government concerned.

6. Under the existing conditions of India, we do not see any possibility in the near future or even in the distant future when minorities will not stand in need of protection under the modern democratic constitution. If, however, majorities win the confidence of minority communities by their sympathetic and generous treatment, some of the special safeguards may automatically lapse. But others will still be needed to see that the minorities get opportunities for full growth, and enjoy due share in the governance of the country.

6. Safeguards for Minorities and Scheduled Castes

Reply by Jagjivan Ram to the Questionnaire on Minorities, 3 April 1947

1. What should be the nature and scope of the safeguards for a minority in the new Constitution?

The nature of the safeguards should be such as

(i) to ensure protection to religious and racial minorities (for example, Christians and Aboriginals) from destruction, and

(ii) to accelerate the assimilation of the other minorities (such as the Scheduled Castes) in the parent body by bringing them to an equal level with others in that community.

Such safeguards should cover the fields enumerated in question Nos 2, 3 and 4. Many of the safeguards can be provided in the fundamental rights. The following among others may be included in the fundamental rights in the Constitution:

1. All citizens are equal before the law.
   Men and women have fundamentally the same civic rights and duties. Public legal privileges or disadvantages of birth or rank shall be abolished. Titles shall be simply a part of the name and shall no longer be conferred.

2. Personal liberty is inviolable. No encroachment on or deprivation of personal liberty by any public authority is permissible except in virtue of a law.

3. The residence of every citizen is an inviolable sanctuary for him, exceptions are admissible only in virtue of laws.

4. The secrecy of correspondence and of the postal, telegraph and of telephone services is inviolable, exceptions may be permitted only by law.

5. Every citizen has the right, within the limits of general laws to express his opinion freely, by word of mouth, writing, printing matter, or picture, or in any other manner.

6. All citizens have the freedom of domicile and of change of domicile.

7. All citizens have the right without notification or special permission to assemble peaceably and unarmed.

8. All citizens have the right to form unions and associations for purposes not in contravention of the penal laws. This right may not be restricted by preventive regulations. The same provisions apply to religious union and associations.
9. Every union is at liberty to acquire legal rights in accordance with the provisions of the civil code. These rights shall not be refused to a union on the ground that its objects are of political, social or religious nature.

10. The freedom and the secrecy of election are guaranteed. Details are to be determined by electoral laws.

11. All citizens of the State, without distinction of caste or creed are eligible for public offices, as provided by law in accordance with their qualifications and abilities.

12. The organization of economic life must correspond to the principles of justice, and be designed to ensure for all a life worthy of a human being. Within these limits the economic freedom of the individual be guaranteed.

Legal compulsion is permissible only in order to enforce rights which are threatened, or to subserve the pre-eminent claims of the common weal.

Freedom of trade, industry and occupation is guaranteed without any distinction of caste or creed.

13. All citizens are equal before the law and possess equal civic rights. There shall be no law, civil or penal, substantive or procedural, of a discriminative nature.

14. It is the moral duty of every citizen without prejudice to his personal liberty, to make such use of his mental and bodily powers as shall be necessary for the welfare of the community. Every citizen must be afforded an opportunity to gain his livelihood by economic labour. Where no opportunity for his work can be found for him, provision shall be made for his support. Details shall be determined by special law.

Special protection shall be extended to women and young persons engaged in occupations injurious to health.

15. Usury in every form is prohibited.

16. Extraordinary tribunals shall not be permitted. No person shall be withdrawn from the jurisdiction of his lawful judge. No person shall be tried on any criminal charge save in due course of law.

17. All citizens have the right to free elementary education and of admission into any educational institution maintained or aided or recognized by the State without any distinction of caste, colour or creed.

18. No person attending any school receiving State aid or other public money shall be compelled to attend the religious instruction that may be given in the school.

19. Officials are the servants of the community and not of any party.

The land, sea and air forces of the whole country shall be above and outside personal, regional or party affiliations, shall be loyal to the State, and shall love and protect the people.

No party and individual may utilize the armed strength as an instrument in the struggle for political power.

20. All religions shall be equal before the law.

21. Every citizen shall have the right to keep and bear arms in accordance with the regulations made in that behalf.

22. All begar and compulsory or forced labour in whichever form existing anywhere shall cease and shall be dealt with as a cognizable offence.

The Constitution shall contain a provision that no law, order, rule or regulation infringing any of the fundamental rights shall be enacted or issued.
2. What should be the political safeguards of a minority—(a) in the Centre, (b) in the Provinces?

Political safeguards for the Scheduled Castes. (This may apply to other minorities as well.)

(a) In the Centre (Union): Seats shall be reserved for the Scheduled Castes proportionate to their population in:
   (i) Legislatures
   (ii) Services of all categories (civil including judiciary and military)
   (iii) Executive (Ministry, Cabinet)
   (iv) Commissions and committees which are statutory, standing, or may be formed from time to time
   (v) Local bodies

(b) The post of the executives shall rotate by turn among the several communities represented in the local body concerned.

(c) Seats should be reserved for the Scheduled Castes in all services in local bodies proportionate to their population.

Scheduled Castes have never demanded weightage for themselves and have always insisted that no weightage should be given to any community. If weightage is to be given to any community it should come from the share of the majority community and the Scheduled Castes should also get proportionate weightage. If representation is to be given to special interests it should come from the share of the majority and not of the minorities.

Election to all seats reserved for the Scheduled Castes in Legislatures and local bodies shall be by the system of (i) joint electorate with the caste Hindus; (ii) adult franchise; and (iii) distributive voting in plural constituencies.

Scheduled Castes shall be free to contest unreserved seats in elective bodies and compete for unreserved seats in services and executives.

3. What should be the economic safeguards of a minority—(a) in the Centre, (b) in the Provinces?

Economic safeguards: Besides the fundamental rights Nos 12, 14 and 22, the following provision should be made in the constitution of the State (Centre or Provinces as the case may be):

(i) All key and basic industries shall be owned and run by the State.
(ii) All land shall be nationalized.
(iii) There shall be a housing and homestead board to secure suitable homestead land and provide healthy houses to the Scheduled Castes. The details shall be determined by law.

The distribution and use of land shall be supervised by the State in such a way as to prevent abuse and with a view to ensuring to every family which has no objection whatsoever in working itself thereon, a dwelling and economic holding suited to its needs.

(iv) Large forested estate in private ownership shall be expropriated by law with such compensation as may be determined and become the property of State.

(v) All mineral rights shall vest in the State.

4. What should be the religious, educational and cultural safeguards for a minority?

A. Religious safeguards: Fundamental rights should provide ample safeguards. Every religious minority shall be ensured freedom to practise its own faith and have its own places of worship.
Observance of untouchability in any shape or form by any person in public places, places of public worship, public institutions, and places established or maintained at public cost and for the use of the public should be regarded as a cognizable offence.

B. Educational: Besides fundamental rights Nos. 17 and 18—

(i) Provision shall be made by every Provincial Government for the free education of the students of the Scheduled Castes at all stages in all types of educational institutions maintained, aided or recognized by Government or local bodies.

(ii) Provision shall be made in the budget of every Provincial Government for adequate sums of money each year for ameliorative measures for the Scheduled Castes.

(iii) Provision shall be made in the budget of the Central Government for adequate sums of money each year for granting stipends to Scheduled Caste students for higher and specialized training in science, arts, and others, in India and abroad.

(iv) Provision shall be made for proportionate representation of the Scheduled Castes in Senates, Syndicates, Courts, etc., of Universities and on governing bodies of all educational institutions.

C. Cultural and Social: Fundamental rights should include provisions for the protection of the language, culture, etc. of the minorities.

No disability, social, civil and religious, shall attach to any person on account of his birth in a particular caste in the society.

All citizens shall have equal rights and duties in regard to roads, places or public resort, water-fountains, reservoirs, tanks, wells, hydrants, rivers, bathing ghats maintained out of State or local funds or dedicated by private persons for the use of general public.

Criminal Tribes Act shall be repealed.

No person shall be debarred from acquiring landed property in any part of the State on account of his birth in a particular caste.

It shall not be obligatory on any person simply because he is born in a particular caste in Hindu society to perform certain social and religious functions. No person who performs certain religious or social functions in the Hindu society shall refuse his services to some castes of the Hindus.

5. What machinery should be set up to ensure that the safeguards are effective?

There shall be an independent Minorities Commission to deal with those rights which are not enforceable by a court of law, in the Centre and in every Province.

Its composition shall be as follows:

1. One judge of the Supreme Court (of the Provincial High Court in the case of a Province) who will be ex-officio chairman of the commission.

2. Three members of the Legislative Assembly elected by the members of the minority community in the Assembly concerned.

3. Three members of the minority communities nominated by the Government.

The commission shall have power—

(a) to call for any information from the Government.

(b) to call for any person, official or non-official to appear before it and give evidence.

(c) to examine laws or rules which operate against a minority or minorities.
(d) to examine acts of omission or commission on the part of the executive in administration of the privileges and facilities granted to the minorities and submit report to the Government.

Procedure. The commission shall examine on its own initiative or on an application from any person of the aggrieved community, in the matter of any infringement of the rights, privileges or facilities of the minorities, and submit its findings with a recommendation to the Government.

The Government shall, thereupon, take steps, legislative or administrative as the case may be, to give effect to the recommendations of the commission.

6. How is it proposed that the safeguards should be eliminated? In what time and under what circumstances?

Some of the safeguards shall have to remain for all times in the Constitution such as those guaranteeing religious and cultural freedom to religious and racial minorities. Political and other safeguards for these minorities may be eliminated after these minorities have been convinced that their rights shall be amply protected by the majority community even if they (minorities) are not represented in the legislature or the administration.

The various safeguards provided for the Scheduled Castes may be eliminated as soon as untouchability totally disappears. It is, no doubt, difficult to ascertain the total disappearance of untouchability but for this purpose three criteria may be laid—

(i) When all Hindu temples are open to all the castes in the Hindu society without any distinction or discrimination.

(ii) When water or eatables of any caste shall not be polluted by the touch of any other caste of the Hindu society.

(iii) When in all religious and social functions of the Hindus, persons of all castes of Hindus may participate without any discrimination.

As soon as this stage is reached, an official resolution seeking the elimination of the safeguards for the Scheduled Castes may be framed by the Central Government. A copy of this resolution shall be sent to every Provincial Government. The Provincial Government shall move this resolution in the Provincial Assembly. The resolution shall be deemed passed if it is passed by a two-thirds majority of the House and if two-thirds of the members of the Scheduled Castes present and voting vote in favour of the resolution. The resolution shall be moved in the Central Assembly if it has been adopted by all the Provincial Governments in the manner prescribed above. The resolution shall be deemed to have been passed by the Central Assembly only if it is passed by a two-thirds majority in the whole House and if two-third members of the Scheduled Castes present and voting have voted in favour of the resolution.

No resolution to the same effect shall be brought within the life of the same Legislature within two years of the rejection of the first resolution.

All the safeguards provided for the Scheduled Castes shall be incorporated in the Constitution of the units (State) which may join the Union at the very beginning or at a subsequent stage.
7. Demand for Minority Rights by Digambar Jains

Reply to the Constituent Assembly Questionnaire by the All India Digambar Jain Parishad, 8 April 1947

AICC Papers, File No. CL-3 (Part 1), 1946–7, NMML.

The Jains are an ancient community of India with its own distinctive religion and philosophy, worship and ritual, social customs and manners. It is now recognized amongst oriental scholars that Jainism is essentially a non-Vedic religion and philosophy and in this connection attention may be invited to the view of Prof Dasgupta and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. The relevant extracts are reproduced below for ready reference.

‘Thus Mahavira was a contemporary of Buddha, but unlike Buddha he was neither the author of the religion nor the founder of the sect, but a monk who having espoused the Jains’ creed afterwards became the seer and the last prophet (TIRTHANKARA) of Jainism. His predecessor Parsva, the last Tirthankara but one; is said to have died 84,000 years before Mahavira’s Nirvana. The story in Uttaradhya Yanasutra that a disciple of Parsva met a disciple of Mahavira and brought about the union of the old Jainism and that propounded by Mahavira seems to suggest that this Parsva was probably historical person.

‘According to the belief of the orthodox Jains, the Jaina religion is eternal, and it has been revealed again in every one of the endless succeeding periods of the world by innumerable Tirthankaras.’

(Chapter VI, The Jain Philosophy—The Origin of Jainism—‘A History of Indian Philosophy’, by Das Gupta—p. 169.)

‘Buddhism and Jainism were certainly not Hinduism or even the Vedic Dharma. Yet they arose in India and were integral parts of Indian life, culture and philosophy. A Buddhist or Jain in India is a hundred per cent product of Indian thought and culture, yet neither is a Hindu by faith.’

(Discovery of India by Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru—Chapter IV—‘What Is Hinduism’, p. 73).

Although Jainism is, to quote Panditji ‘a hundred per cent product of Indian thought and culture’ it is often forgotten that the Jains have distinctive social and religious customs. Even their ritual is still regulated according to the injunctions in the Jains sacred literature. It may also be mentioned that Jains have even a system of law of their own and attempts have been made by prominent Jains to secure its acceptance so as to regulate legal relations amongst the Jains according to their own system of law. It may also be pointed out that the Jains do not follow any Verna system nor is there regular inter-marriage between the Hindus and the Jains.

The Jains’ doctrine of Non-violence (Ahimsa), which is the foundation of the Gandhian creed, and universal brotherhood and tolerance are far too well-known to need special mention here. The Jain doctrine of Anekantavada and Syadvada represents a unique contribution to logic and can easily provide a theoretical basis for intellectual tolerance when the world is divided into ideological camps warring against one another. The contribution of Jainism to vernacular literature is noteworthy and along with the Buddhists Jains were the first to use the languages of the people for their sacred literature. It may also be mentioned here that the Jains have their own legal system. High Court Judges like Kumarswami Shastri, Officiating Chief Justice of the Madras High Court and Rangnekar of the Bombay High Court have held that it is utterly wrong to think that the Jains were originally Hindus and later converted to Jainism. Raghvachariar in his latest edition of Hindu Law (1947) supports this view.
In modern times the Jains have played an important part in all walks of national life and their complete identification with the national movement for freedom stands out prominently as compared with the role of other minorities who have often been obscurantist and demanded heavy price for their support. It is a matter of pride to us that the Jains did all they could to promote the Congress struggle for freedom and so far never asked for special or unusual concessions.

In view of these considerations we strongly feel that the Jains should be treated as a minority. They are a distinctive group with its own distinctive culture and it would be doing a grave injustice to the Jain community if they were merely treated as a branch of Hinduism. Besides this is utterly wrong. Because of their intellectual and moral doctrines they have been always ready to learn and assimilate whatever is good in other communities. That some of their customs and manners are indistinguishable from those of the Hindus only speaks volume for tolerance and good sense. It is unfortunate that the ignorant have therefore been misled into treating the Jains as only a section of the Hindu community.

The recognition of the Jains as a separate minority has now become necessary for at least two reasons. First, in spite of their glorious past and substantial contribution to the modern India, the community has been declining in numbers and it is not in a position to make its rightful contribution to the intellectual and cultural life of the country. Their ancient culture and civilization will need special care and protection when a permanent constitution is to be framed, the denial of the minority status to the Jains will mean their death warrant as a distinctive cultural group especially when all other minorities are going to be recognized. Even the legitimate sections of Hinduism like the Harijan and a small community like the Parsees are treated as minorities. Although the Jains hold important positions in industry and commerce and other spheres of life, as a community the Jains are backward. At one time the Jains formed a substantial part of the Indian population but today they number barely twenty lacks [sic]. We, therefore, demand in the first place that the Jains be treated as a minority and given all rights and privileges which may be given to other communities.

Q.1 What should be the nature and scope of safeguards for minorities in the new constitution?
Ans. With regard to the first question, the value and scope of safeguards for the Jains in particular will be a full provision for the protection and promotion of their culture, political and economic position in the community. Special provision will have to be made for education, health and other social services, employment in Government services, temples and other historical and cultural monuments, facilities for publication of sacred literature and promoting study and research in the universities as well as other bodies which the state might setup.

Q.2 What political safe-guards are needed for the minorities in the Union and Provincial constitution?
Ans. The actual safe-guards for ensuring the rights and privileges of the Jain community should be on parallel lines to those provided for the other minorities. The Jains should be given special representation in the administrative, executive, judicial, diplomatic, foreign and military services of the nation, of course subject to the Government rules and regulations which shall be applicable thereto. They should also be given special representation in the Central and Provincial legislatures, local self-governing bodies, as well as in all the official committees set up from time to time by the Central and Provincial Governments.
Q.3 What economic safeguards are necessary for the minority in the Union and the Provincial constitution?
Ans. With regards to the economic safeguards it is suggested that the legitimate interest of Jain Commerce, Industry and Trade should be protected against any communal discrimination. In all measures which involve distribution of national wealth the community should be given a special position in consonance with the present position of the Jains as well as general principles accepted for other communities.

Q.4 What religious, educational and cultural safe-guards should be provided to the minorities at the centre and in the province?
Ans. No legislation affecting religion, culture, philosophy, temples, mathas and their property as well as the personal Law of the Jains should be introduced without the consent of the Jain community and their accredited representatives in the Central and Provincial legislatures.

(b) So long as the legal system is based upon the principles of codify [sic] Hindu and Muslim law the Jain Law should be accepted as binding as the personal law for the Jain community.

(c) Special provision for education in all stages of the State system of education.

(d) Special provision for research and study of Jainism in all its aspects in the Universities and other bodies set up for the purpose.

(e) Special provision for the publication and distribution of the sacred literature of the Jains.

(f) Special provision for the presentation of Jain monuments, temples.

(g) Special protection for private institutions and organizations in their legitimate activities for the protection and promotion of Jain interests.

Q.5 What machinery should be set up to ensure the effective enforcement of minority rights?
Ans. In order to protect the interests of the minorities and to enforce their rights, a permanent commission consisting of accredited representatives of the various minorities should be set up both at the centre and in the provinces. All legislation affecting the minorities should require the prior consent of those commissions before such legislations [sic] is introduced and also should be approved by it. Any member of the commission may demand that the legislations affecting his own community should require the consent of that particular community. In case of dispute between the legislature and the commission the matter should be referred to the Federal Court and its precedents should be binding on both the legislature and the community concerned. It is suggested that in any central judicial machinery that may be set up there should be a special section which alone would be competent to decide both questions of law and fact with regard to the minorities.

Q.6 How is it proposed to finally eliminate these safeguards, at what time and under what circumstances?
Ans. The question of eliminating safeguards for minorities can only arise when complete harmony and concord are established and when the State enjoys complete confidence of all its components [sic] groups. It is not easy to visualize the future developments and much will depend upon the working of the legislature, the commissions for minorities and the judicial machinery. It seems to us that the best solution for entire problem of minorities will be to set up a second chamber both at the centre and the provinces consisting of accredited... representatives of the various distinguished cultural groups in the country with equal powers of legislation and executive with those of assemblies or councils that may be set up. A council of nationalities as an integral part of legislative and executive apparatus of the State will go a long way towards restoring complete confidence and goodwill. Such a council should give equality of representation to all component groups irrespective of their number or importance. For this purpose of minorities and distinctive groups should constitute special constituencies and representatives should be elected directly on the basis of adult franchise.

6 Darya Ganj
Delhi

Ugra Sen Jain
A.I.D. Jain Parishad

8. NWFP Tribes Oppose the Tribal Areas Sub-committee of Constituent Assembly

A report, for which a measure of reliability is claimed by the Deputy Director, Intelligence, Peshawar, has been received to the effect that on the 28th March, 1947, the Mohmand Jirga held at Ziarat Ghakhai adopted the following resolution:

We, Mohmands of the Independent Tribal Territory, announce to the Viceroy of India, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and the Governor, NWFP, that the Committee which the Hindu Congress Government and the British have jointly appointed without our consultation is illegal and is unacceptable to us. Therefore the need for its visit does not arise. We Muslim Pathans of the Tribal Territory regard this Committee as our enemy. As this has not the unanimous approval of our tribe in this connexion, they should be considered as thieves for whom we have proposed the severest punishment. We are independent and will remain so. We will never recognize anybody’s suzerainty over us. We, Mohmands, and also other independent tribes record our deep annoyance against the British and the Hindus over the atrocities committed and still being perpetrated by the Hindus on our Muslim brethren in India and denial of the right of self-determination to the latter, and demand that Muslims should be given the right to establish an independent Muslim State with a view to prevent further destruction. If this division is not carried out at once it would mean that the British want Hindus and Muslims to fight to the bitter end and be destroyed.

G. Ahmed
Deputy Director (C)
11.4.1947
9. Reply to the Constituent Assembly Questionnaire by an AICC Member from Andhra

Letter from M. Jagannadharaao to the Secretary, Constituent Assembly Congress Party
13 April 1947
AICC Papers, File No. CL-3/(Part 1), 1946–7, NMML.

Congress Sevak Sadanam
VIZAGAPATNAM
The Secretary
Constituent Assembly Congress Party
New Delhi
Dear Sir,

Recently a questionnaire has been circulated to all the members of all the legislatures by Sir B.N. Rau, Constituent Adviser to the Constituent Assembly, for their opinions regarding certain provisions to be included in the future constitution.

With a few Congress workers and some MLAs I have discussed the questionnaire. I felt that the results of those discussions should be communicated to you as well as to the AICC office.

I am enclosing the answers to the questionnaire herein. As you could be having a copy of the questionnaire itself, I have not included it here as an enclosure.

As these are answers to specific questions, other important matters, such as fundamental rights and duties and minority safeguards have not been touched.

However I would like to suggest that the inclusion of fundamental duties of a citizen is as much necessary and important as the declaration of fundamental rights. Facilities for discharging the duties as well as facilities for exercising fundamental rights should be secured in the constitution.

I request you to place these views before the concerned sub-committee of the Congress party in the Constituent Assembly.

Yours faithfully,
M. Jagannadharaao
Member, AICC

Answers to the Questionnaire
Constituent Assembly

Introductory Notes:
(1) The Union Centre has limited powers having only a few subjects under its control, still it should derive its rights from the General Citizen. It should be a closely integrated unitary type of Government.

(2) At the bottom the villages should be considered as units and such village units should have a constitutional existence. The elections to the union centre may be indirect thro' the village councils. For a group of villages having a population of 5,000 in rural areas and for a population of 10,000 in urban areas there should be one council consisting of 9 members whose term will be 6 years and the elections to which shall be by rotation 1/3 vacating every two years. The village councillors shall form an electoral college which shall elect the Union President and members of the union legislature.
Constituent Assembly

Constituent Assembly 655

These village councils shall have all the powers now given to local boards. The executive officer shall be appointed by the provincial Government and shall belong to the Government Subordinate Service. He shall carry out all functions except judiciary. Provision should be made in the Constitution for the provincial assembly to relinquish any of their rights and powers in favour of village councils without requiring any amendment to the Constitution.

NB. In provinces where provision is not made for such village council as above, the citizens through adult franchise shall elect 9 voters for every 5000 population in rural areas and 10,000 population in urban areas. And such voters in a constituency shall function as the Electoral College.

(3) The right to recall an elected member should be secured to the constituency. The right should not be exercisable for a period of 6 months from the date of election or during the last 6 months of the legislature.

If 2/3 of the village councils in any particularly [sic] constituency ask for the recall of a member, the member may resign or ask the president to refer it for a vote of the constituency. If the member resigns he can stand for re-election. If he asks the president for a vote of the constituency and if such vote is against him, he is [sic] should be disqualified from standing as a candidate in the two subsequent elections.

There should be no recall for the members of the upper house at the centre.

As for the village council, if 1/3 of the voters sign a memorandum specifying the reasons for recall and submit it, the village assembly (a meeting of the adult population of the village) should be summoned. The member against whom the memorandum is submitted, shall reply referring to the various points in the memorandum. The matter should then be put to vote (secret ballot) and if 2/3 of the voters present support recall the member should resign. (The quorum for village assembly should be 50 per cent of the voters.)

(4) Special qualifications and disqualifications for candidates in elections to the village council, provincial assembly and union assembly.

(1) Age: at least 21 years.
(2) Educational: Literate in the language of the Province.
(What constitutes literacy shall be decided by the Provincial assembly from time to time.)
(3) The legislators for the province and the union, should be whole time workers (they should not be employed otherwise) and hence receiving monthly remuneration from Government.
(4) A legislator should tour his constituency at least 90 days in the year and submit an annual report regarding the same to the president of the union or province as the case may be and also to the village councils in his constituency.
(5) Sitting members of the provincial assembly or village councils are not eligible for election to the union centre.

(5) The villagers should have the right to impeach the members of the village council. The document of impeachment should be signed by at least 30 per cent of the voters and specifying the charges. It should be presented to the circuit judge (referred to in the judiciary) with a deposit of Rs 300. The signatories should make out a prima facie case before the circuit judge.
Then the impeachment proceedings will be conducted by a tribunal, consisting of the circuit judge and 2 more members nominated by the District Judge from the District Bar Association. The deposit money is liable to forfeiture if so decided by the tribunal (for frivolous charges and other things).

Answers

(1) The head of the Indian Union shall be called the President do. Provincial Government do.

(2) For the union, he shall be chosen by an electoral college consisting of the members of the village council (secret ballot). For the Province he shall be elected directly by the electorate (adult franchise age limits 21 years) Secret ballot. [sic]

(3) The term of the office should be five years.

(4) He should be eligible for re-election for two terms.

(5) No statutory provision is necessary for rotation among communities.

(6) There is no need for a vice-president.

(7) No vice-president.

(8) The President should be the executive head of the state with similar functions as in Ireland. He should in addition have the following rights and powers:

   (i) Appointing judges to the supreme Court by the Union President or the High Court by the Provincial President.

   (ii) Right to send back legislation for the re-consideration of the legislature. (He can send it back but only once.)

   (iii) He can submit important legislative enactments for referendum.

(9) There is no vice-president.

(10) As in the Irish constitution, but after the verdict of impeachment is passed, it should be submitted for referendum before the president is removed. In the provinces where there is only a single legislature, the impeachment proceedings can be started by 40 per cent of the members of the house, submitting a petition to the speaker. The whole house then by a 2/3 majority should pass the verdict. If the result of the referendum shows confidence in the president, the legislature should be dissolved and fresh elections conducted.

(11) For temporary absence of the President, he can nominate one of the Presidents of the Provincial legislatures to act for him. In the case of vacancy caused by death or impeachment (between the passing of the verdict of the assembly and the verdict of the electorate or the election of the new president) a commission consisting of the Chief Justice of the supreme court and 2 members elected by the presidents of the provincial legislatures and the speakers of both the legislatures forming an electoral college and from among themselves shall act. A commission may act by majority. In the case of a commission acting, steps should be taken to elect the new president within 6 months of the setting of the commission.

In the case of the Provincial assembly, for temporary absence, the president can nominate one of the judges of the High Court to act for him. In the case of vacancy caused by death or impeachment, a commission consisting of the chief justice of the high court, the speaker of the assembly and one member nominated by the union president shall act. In the case of a commission, acting steps should be taken to elect a new president within 3 months of the setting of the commission.
B. Executive

(12) It shall be as in England (Cabinet system, responsible to the lower house or the provincial assembly).

(13) To ensure stability, any motion of no-confidence should have a majority of 2/3 of the members present.

(14) The cabinet shall be composed of not more than 15 members. A minister cannot remain in office for more than 3 months without being a member of the legislature.

(15) No statutory provision is necessary.

(16) Joint responsibility and co-ordination of the cabinet is secured by convention as in England.

(17) The lower house at the centre and the provincial legislature in the province shall elect the Prime Minister who shall be appointed by the President. The Prime Minister shall recommend the names of the other ministers in the cabinet and President appoints them.

(18) The cabinet holds office until a vote of no confidence is passed by a 2/3 majority of the lower house. Individual ministers can be removed from office on the advice of the Prime Minister.

(19) As in Ireland, the president should be the titular head and all laws are promulgated in his name. He acts with the consent of the Prime Minister and his cabinet except when the cabinet loses the confidence of the assembly. In that case he may in his discretion, dissolve the assembly and call for fresh elections or ask the assembly to choose another premier.

C. Legislature

(20) Legislature shall be Bicameral for the Union and of single chamber for the provinces.

(21) The upper house should consist of members elected by proportionate representation (single transferable vote) from the provincial legislatures, each province having not less than 2 and not more than 4 seats, depending on the population of each province, the total number being restricted to 60.

The lower house at the centre should consist of members elected by village councils forming an electoral college. There shall be one electoral district for a population of 20 lakhs and it shall be a single member constituency.

The provincial assembly should consist of members elected directly, one for every 2 lakhs of population. 10 per cent of the total number of seats in the assembly shall be reserved for functional representation (Universities, professional associations (merchant chambers, bar associations, medical associations, public libraries etc.), Labour and women).

(22) There should be reservation of seats for Mahomedans, Harijans, Sikhs, Christians, Parsees and Hindoos—where they are in a minority—the reservation shall be proportionate to population for bigger minorities and for smaller minorities (less than 10 per cent of the population, there shall be a slight weightage (10 per cent weightage)). The minorities can contest for general seats also. Election is direct and on the basis of joint electorate for all seats.

(Plural constituencies say returning 3 members—with single non-transferable vote may be considered if no provision is made for reservation of seats.)

(23) (a) Composition of the legislatures has already been dealt.

(b) There should be universal adult franchise minimum age being 21.

(c) Joint electorate with reservation of seats.
(d) There should be single member returning constituencies.
(e) The election to the Provincial Assembly and the provincial president shall be direct. Election for the upper house at the centre shall be indirect through the provincial assemblies, Election to the Union lower house shall be indirect, through the electoral college composed of the members of the village council.
(f) The allocation of seats shall be according to population as stated above.
(24) The term of all legislatures shall be 5 years.
(25) The upper house shall have a suspensory veto for a period of 60 days in respect of bills other than money bills or urgent bills. If they have the support of 2/5 of the members of the lower house, it can request the president for a referendum. It may ask for a joint session where it does not agree with the lower house.

D. Judiciary

(26) There shall be a supreme court for the union. It shall have jurisdiction over the union constitution, inter provincial disputes and appellate jurisdiction over such cases where leave for appeal is granted by the High Court. The judges of the supreme court shall be appointed by the union President. Once appointed they cannot be removed except through impeachment.
Impeachment of supreme court judges shall be initiated by one of the houses and the other house shall hear it as a court and at both stages there must be 2/3 majority of the respective house.

There shall be a high court for each province. The judges of the high court shall be appointed by the president of the province. Once appointed they cannot be removed except through impeachment. The impeachment proceedings should be initiated by the provincial legislature on a motion sponsored by at least 1/3 of the legislators and with a majority of 2/3 of the legislators. The supreme court sitting in a bench shall be the trial court.

Each district shall have one district court with one judge with appellate jurisdiction and also original jurisdiction.

There shall be circuit courts with one judge for a territory comprising of 1 lakh of population having original jurisdiction and dealing with all judicial matters, civil, criminal and revenue.
The district judges and circuit judges shall be appointed by the High Court.

The circuit court shall be assisted by 3 assessors elected by the village council when dealing with cases concerning the members and property in the jurisdiction of the respective village council. Where inter village matters are at issue the assessors shall be elected by all the village councillors concerned forming an electoral college.

E. Amendments to the Constitution

(27) By an act of the legislature passed with a 2/3 majority in a joint session of the houses, the union centre can affect amendments in the constitution, except with regard to fundamental rights and minority safeguards, in which cases the amending bill should be further submitted for referendum before it becomes law, provided that no amendment altering provincial boundaries or rights of provinces is affected until in a referendum a majority of the voters in the province or provinces concerned consent. In a referendum on constitutional amendments the majority of provinces and the majority of voters must approve before it becomes law.

A majority of the provincial legislatures can initiate an amendment to the union constitution.
When a majority of both the houses approve it shall become law except in the case affecting minority safeguards and fundamental rights when a referendum must be held.
Changes in the provincial constitution can be effected if the amendments to the constitution are passed by 2/3 majority of the provincial assembly and a majority of the voters in a referendum.

If 1/3 of the village councils pass any amendment to the provincial constitution, it shall be put before the legislature and if it is passed by a 2/3 majority it shall become law, provided however that where fundamental rights and minority safeguards are concerned the amendment must be passed in a referendum.

10. Demands for Political Representation and Socio-economic Safeguards for Depressed Classes

Memorandum to the Minorities Sub-Committee from the Working Committee of the All India Adi-Hindu Depressed Classes Association, 15 April 1947

Historical Survey

1. The position of the Scheduled Castes in India is unique. It is impossible to find a parallel to it. They are 70 million in population and thus on a population basis they constitute the third largest community in India, the other two being the Caste Hindus and Muslims. It is not necessary to dwell at length on their past history and how their degradation has taken place. Suffice it to say that on arrival in this country, the Aryans, now known as Caste Hindus, took the first step towards the original inhabitants now known as Scheduled Castes—they submerged and suppressed them. The light of knowledge was completely screened away from them. The conflict of their economic and political interests with those of the children of the soil made them adopt a systematic suppression of the latter through the ages. They called themselves ‘Arya’ or virtuous and from time to time styled the original inhabitants as ‘Dasyu’, ‘Chandal’, ‘Pancham’, ‘Antyaf’, ‘Varnasankar’ and ‘Bahiskrita’ and other things. Eventually they went so far as to assign to the children of the soil the status of ‘Asprisha’ namely, untouchables—a system to which the world’s history bears no parallel.

The latest name given by them to the Depressed Classes is ‘Harijan’ which connotes the offspring of ‘Devadasis’ or ‘Murlis’ dedicated in temples in the service of Gods or ‘Hari’. This is in keeping with the names given to them in succession and is meant to perpetuate the inferiority complex. With the utmost emphasis at its command, the Working Committee of the All India Adi-Hindu Depressed Classes Association protests against and condemns the use of this disgraceful and humiliating term for the Scheduled Castes.

The Poona Pact

2. This much for the past. Let us now take stock of the present and look forward to the emancipation of the depressed classes in the new Constitution of a self-governing India. The experience of the last two elections held under the Government of India Act 1935 has proved that the system of joint electorates has deprived the Scheduled Castes of the right to send true and effective representatives to the Legislatures and has given the Caste Hindu majority the virtual right to nominate members of the Scheduled Castes who are prepared to be the tools of the Caste Hindu majority. In the Poona Pact, the panel system was provided to allay this but has proved totally ineffective. The process is not only cumbersome but does not provide any guarantee for the return of the real representatives of the Scheduled Castes. It is obvious that a candidate securing the lowest number of votes in the panel is returned by Caste Hindu votes and the candidate securing the highest number of votes in the panel is defeated. This gives a chance to the Caste Hindus to set up dummy Scheduled Castes candidates and get them returned by Caste Hindus’ votes. The Working Committee of the All India Adi-Hindu Depressed Classes Association is opposed to the panel system because it involves double election and does not ensure the return of the real representatives of the Scheduled Castes. Hence the committee urges the abrogation of the Poona Pact.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Constitutional Safeguards for the Scheduled Castes in the New Constitution

3. The Working Committee of the All India Adi-Hindu Depressed Classes Association demands that the new Constitution shall contain within itself provision for securing the following purposes:

1. For representation of the Scheduled Castes is proportion to their population:
   - (i) in the Central and the various Provincial Legislatures.
   - (ii) in the Central and the Provincial Executives.
   - (iii) in municipalities and all statutory local bodies.
   - (iv) in the public services.
   - (v) on the Public Service Commissions.

2. For their representation in the Central and the various provincial legislatures by:
   - (a) adult suffrage.
   - (b) by separate electorates or by reservation of seats in joint electorates provided that a candidate to be declared elected must secure 40 per cent of the total number of votes recorded by members of the Scheduled Castes.

3. For earmarking a definite sum in the budgets of the Provincial and Central Governments for the secondary, university and advanced education of the Scheduled Castes.

4. For reservation of Government lands for Scheduled Castes who are landless agricultural labourers through a Settlement Commission.

5. For the recognition of the above provisions as fundamental rights beyond the powers of the Legislatures or the Executives to amend or alter or abrogate.

4. The Working Committee further demands that the following fundamental rights shall be made part of the Constitution of India:

1. All citizens are equal before the law and possess equal civic rights.

2. All citizens have the right to education without any distinctions of caste or creed in the matter of admission into any educational institutions, maintained or aided by the State.

3. No person shall, by reason of his caste or creed be prejudiced in any way in regard to public employment, office of power or honour and the exercise of any trade or calling.

4. All citizens have an equal right of full enjoyment of the accommodations, advantages, facilities, privileges of inns, rivers, streams, wells, tanks, roads, paths, streets, public conveyances on land, air and water, theatres and other places of public resort or amusement.

5. No form of forced labour shall be permitted.
Constituent Assembly 661

11. Report of the Sub-Committee on Fundamental Rights Submitted to the Advisory Committee

Extract from a Letter from J.B. Kripalani to Vallabhbhai Patel, 16 April 1947

To
The Chairman,
Advisory Committee on Minorities, Fundamental Rights etc.

Sir,

We, the undersigned, members of the Sub-Committee on Fundamental Rights appointed by the Advisory Committee on the 17th February 1947 have considered the matter referred to us and have now the honour to submit this our report¹....

3. When the committee began its work, it was resolved that a difference should be drawn in the list of fundamental rights between rights which are enforceable by appropriate legal process and provisions which are in the nature of fundamental principles of the social policy that is to regulate the governments concerned. In this respect, the committee has followed the Irish model and adopted a middle course between the one adopted by the framers of the American Constitution and the one pursued in recent European constitutions which have mixed up the two sets of rights. The committee also were of opinion that while certain human rights must be guaranteed to every resident of the Union, other rights must be confined only to citizens and accordingly it will be noticed that some clauses refer to every person and other clauses to citizens only.

4. While the committee has drawn upon the American and Irish Constitutions as also upon the recent European constitutions, the committee has throughout kept in view the complexity of Indian conditions and the peculiarities of the Indian situation and has made appropriate changes. In certain cases, provision has been made for penalties and sanctions being enacted by the law of the Union for violating the fundamental rights. This is of course without prejudice to the provision which makes any law in contravention of the fundamental rights invalid or inoperative. A general provision has also been inserted for the enforcement of the rights by appropriate remedies before the Supreme Court to be established as a part of the Union constitution. The detailed provisions in regard to the enforcement of fundamental rights by appropriate writs and applications before the Supreme Court to be established as a part of the federal structure of the constitution will necessarily have to find a place in the powers and jurisdiction of the court to be so established as also in other provisions relating to the Union constitution.

5. Though clause 20 of the Statement of May 16, 1946 contemplates the possibility of distributing fundamental rights between the constitutions of the Union, groups, if any, and the unit, we are of the opinion that fundamental rights of the citizens of the Union would have no value if they differ from group to group or from unit to unit or are not uniformly enforceable. Rights of man enforced uniformly have come to be recognized as an essential condition of stable society. We recommend that provisions on the lines set out in the Annexure be incorporated in the new Constitution so as to be binding upon all authorities, whether of the Union or the units.

6. We are of the opinion that every citizen is entitled to free trade, commerce and intercourse within the territories of the Union unburdened by any internal duties or taxes of customs. At the same time, we realize that many Indian States depend upon such duties and taxes for a considerable part of their revenue and cannot do without it all at once. Similar difficulties have arisen in the framing of the constitutions of other countries and unless there is a scheme for a smooth transition to free trade in the Union friction will inevitably arise. Some agreement will therefore have to be made with those States in the light of their existing rights with a view to their ultimate elimination within a period to be prescribed by the Constitution. Thereafter, there will be untrammeled free trade within the Union.
Towards Freedom: 1947

7. The committee was of the opinion that the right of the citizen to have redress against the State in a court of law should not be fettered by undue restrictions. The committee however was not able to draft a suitable formula as the matter required more investigation than has been possible in the time at its disposal.

8. A proposal was made that a clause should be inserted to afford protection against discrimination against citizens mainly by Government officers in public administration on the ground of race or creed or social status. The committee decided by a majority that this was a matter which should be further discussed by the Minorities Sub-Committee who may, if necessary, refer back to this committee.

9. In regard to any particular matters in which individual members have not agreed with the majority view, they have appended a note of dissent.

10. While we are agreed (subject to the minutes of dissent) on the main principle of the clauses we have recommended, we have not had time to examine in any detail the effect of these clauses on the mass of existing legislation.

11. Sardar Panikkar was nominated on 10/4/47 and joined our deliberations only on the 14th April. We had however the benefit of discussing the whole draft with him.

Signed on behalf of the committee.

J.B. Kripalani,
Chairman,
Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee

1 Annexure not reproduced here.

12. Minority Rights

Extracts from Memorandum on Minorities by S.P. Mookerjee, 17 April 1947

Fundamental and Minority Rights

1. The Indian Union is a sovereign federated republic.

2. All powers of government and all authority, legislative, executive and judicial in the Indian Union, are derived from the people of the Indian Union. (Ref. Article 2 of the Constitution of the Irish Free State, 1922).

Political Rights in General

3. All citizens shall be equal before the law, irrespective of religion, caste, creed, colour or sex and there shall be no discrimination made either through legislation or administration. (Ref. Article 123 of the Soviet Constitution)
4. All persons born or naturalized in the Indian Union and subject to the jurisdiction thereof are citizens of the Indian Union; and all citizens of the Indian Union are citizens of the Province or the federated State wherein they reside. Every citizen is free to move throughout the Union and stay and settle in any part thereof, to acquire property and to follow any trade or calling, and to be equally entitled with regard to facilities for education, public employment and legal protection in all parts of the Union. [Ref. Art. 1(xiv), Resolutions of All India Congress Committee, Bombay, August 1931.]

5. All peoples or races of the Indian Union are component parts of the Indian nation and shall be equal. [Ref. Art. 5 of the Chinese Constitution.]

6. Every citizen shall have freedom of speech, freedom of association, and freedom of expression.

7. No person shall be arrested, detained, tried or punished, nor shall his dwelling or property be entered, sequestered and confiscated save by an order of a competent court and according to law. [Ref. Art. 1(viii), Resolutions, AICC, Bombay, August 1931.]

8. Every citizen shall enjoy freedom of conscience and the right freely to profess and practise his religion and religious observances subject to public order and morality. Everybody shall have the right to build places of worship, but the location of such places of worship shall not interfere with the freedom of any citizen to use a public highway without let or hindrance. [Ref. Art. 1 (ii), Resolutions of AICC, Bombay, August 1931.]

9. No citizen shall be subjected to any disability or prejudiced by reason of his religion, caste, creed, colour, place of birth and descent, or sex, in regard to public employment, office of power or honour, and in the exercise of any trade or calling. [Ref. 1 (v) of the Resolutions of AICC, Bombay, August 1931.]

10. All children shall have the right to free education up to the fourteenth year of age, and they shall have the right of admission without any distinction of caste, colour, creed or sex, in any educational institution maintained by the State, except in institutions founded, run or maintained by, or for any particular sector or community. Education appropriations shall constitute no less than 30 per cent of the total amount of the provincial, district and municipal budgets. [Ref. Art. 134 and 137 of the Chinese Constitution.]

11. There shall be no State religion. The State shall observe neutrality in regard to all religions. [Ref. Art. 1(ix), Resolutions AICC, Bombay, August, 1931.]

12. The franchise shall be on the basis of universal adult suffrage. [Ref. Art. 1(x), Resolutions AICC, Bombay, August 1931.]

13. The State shall confer no titles. [Ref. Art. 1(xii), Resolutions AICC, Bombay, August, 1931.]

14. Every citizen shall have the right to keep and bear arms, in accordance with regulations and reservations made in that behalf. [Ref. Art. 1(vii), Resolutions AICC, Bombay, August, 1931.]

15. Every citizen shall have the right to present petitions, lodge complaints and institute legal proceedings in accordance with law. [Ref. Bill of Rights, 1689 of the English Constitution, and Art. 18 of the Chinese Constitution.]

16. Every citizen shall have the right to compete in accordance with law, in State examinations. [Ref. Art. 20 of the Chinese Constitution.]
17. Every citizen shall have the freedom of secrecy of correspondence. Such freedom shall not be restricted except in accordance with law. [Art. 12 of the Chinese Constitution.]

18. Any public functionary who illegally infringes upon any private liberty or right shall, besides being subject to disciplinary punishment, be responsible under criminal and civil law. The injured person may also, in accordance with law, claim indemnity from the State for damages sustained. [Art. 26 of the Chinese Constitution.]

Minority Rights

1. The culture, language and script of the minorities and of the different linguistic areas shall be protected. [Ref. 1(iii), Resolutions of AICC, Bombay, August, 1931.]

(a) All minorities shall have equal right to establish, manage and control at their own expense charitable and religious institutions, and start educational schools and colleges with freedom to use their own language and to practise their own religion therein.

(b) If in any village, or in a group of contiguous villages or towns a demand is made on behalf of a prescribed number of children of a minority community for a separate educational institution for them, the authorities concerned shall set up such an institution for suitable instruction through the language and script of the community.

(c) No child attending any school receiving State aid shall be compelled to attend religious instruction imparted in that school, or participate in religious observances, other than his own, that may be practised in that school.

2. (a) All schools, colleges, technical and other institutions established by the minorities shall be entitled to the same assistance from the State and local funds, as similar institutions for the general public or the majority community.

(b) Any racial, religious or linguistic minority in any province may demand and secure the establishment of a separate authority or separate authorities for the primary, secondary and higher education of its members. In that case, the government shall provide to such authority or authorities financial aid which shall bear the same proportion to total government expenditure for primary, secondary, or higher education, as the case may be, as the proportion of the numerical strength of the minority to the total population of the Province concerned. [Art. 121 of the Soviet Constitution.]

3. No Bill, nor any clause thereof, nor a resolution introduced by a member of a legislature affecting one or the other communities, which question is to be determined by the members of that particular community in the legislature concerned, shall be proceeded with, if three-fourth of the members of that community in that particular legislature oppose the Bill, or any clause thereof, or the resolution.

(Lucknow Pact, 1916; also ref. to the Resolution of the Madras Congress, 1927, and the criticism of the Montagu—Chelmsford Report regarding the article in para. 1964 of the Report).

4. (a) An adequate share for the minorities in the legislatures and other self-governing authorities should be secured by joint electorate and reservation of seats for recognized minorities. If any weightage is to be given it should be on a uniform basis in the Centre and in the Provinces. In no Province should any weightage be given to the majority community, nor the minority be given less representation than is due to it on population basis. Reservation of seats should cease after twenty years or earlier, if the communities concerned agree.

(b) The executive governments in the Provinces and at the Centre during the period referred to in clause (a) shall be of a composite nature reflecting the proportion of each community in the various legislatures, and enjoy the confidence of the minority community or communities concerned.

(The cabinet system in Canada depends on convention.)

5. During the transitional period aforesaid 50 per cent posts in all public service shall be recruited purely on merit as the result of open competitive examination, and the remaining 50 per cent filled on population basis by selecting the best candidates from each community. Communal inequalities, if any, in the first half should not be made up from the other half. This latter percentage should be reduced after every five years, by progressive stages and entirely done away with after twenty years.

6. Communities and groups of people in a Province who together profess a particular religion, or speak a particular language, or belong to a particular race, and who are not a majority of the total population of the Province, but are at least fifty thousand in number, shall be declared as minorities and the protection of their interests shall be guaranteed to them.

7. All citizens have an equal right and access to and use of, public wells, reservoirs, tanks, hotels, restaurants, parks and all other places of public resort. This shall not apply to religious institutions of any community.

Provided that no citizen belonging to a particular religious community shall be prohibited from entering or using a public place of worship of that community for religious purposes, merely on the ground that he belongs to a particular caste or section within that community (Sapru Committee p. 219, para. 307(5), proviso added).

No public authority or court of law shall, in carrying out the functions and duties entrusted to it under any law, recognize any custom or usage imposing a disability on any person on the ground that he belongs to a particular caste or an aboriginal tribe (Sapru Committee p. 219).

8. The rights of the Sikhs for the use of the jhatka meat shall be protected. (Sapru Committee, p. 242).

9. No law shall be enacted to restrict in any manner or to any extent, the manufacture, sale, keeping and wearing of kirpans by the Sikhs (Sapru Committee p. 242).

10. If the majority of citizens who constitute a minority within a Province living in more or less contiguous areas and numbering at least seven millions desire to form themselves into a separate Province for linguistic, cultural or economic reason, such Province may be formed in accordance with the following conditions:

(a) the proposal must be initiated by at least one-fourth of the representatives of such citizens in the Lower House of the Provincial Legislature, and supported by at least two-thirds majority of the members concerned.

(b) The resolution so adopted shall be laid before the Provincial Legislature, and if agreed to by it, shall be transmitted by the Provincial Government to the Union Government with the request to take necessary steps to give effect to the demand.

(c) If the Provincial Legislative Assembly does not agree, then the provincial government shall transmit the resolution and the proceedings of the Assembly with its observations to the Union Government. If the Union Government is satisfied as to the desirability and feasibility of the new proposal, then it shall appoint a Boundaries Commission and make arrangements to give effect to the demand, provided that the Union Government, may, if it chooses, order a plebiscite amongst the adult members of the population within the area concerned, before it makes a final decision.
Towards Freedom: 1947

11. If the majority of citizens who live in more or less contiguous areas, and who constitute a minority within their Province, desire to be amalgamated with another contiguous Province, for linguistic, cultural, or economic reasons, a redistribution of provincial boundaries may be made in accordance with the conditions laid down in the previous clause.

12. The aforesaid rights shall be incorporated in the Constitution, and shall be protected and enforced by Government. There shall be a permanent Minorities Commission under the Union Government which in consultation with that Commission, shall immediately after the first operation of this Constitution frame the necessary rules and procedure for protecting these rights. [Ref. Art. 87-97 of the Chinese Constitution which have set up a Control Yuan to safeguard the fundamentals of the constitution.]

13. In every Province also there shall be a permanent Minorities Commission, consisting of the representatives of the minorities concerned to advise the Provincial Government and Legislature in regard to the protection of the interests and rights of the minorities. If the Provincial Government fails to protect the rights of the minorities, the commission may ask for the intervention of the Union Government. [Ref. Art. 87-97 of the Chinese Constitution which set up a Control Yuan.]

No citizen of the Indian Union shall be debarred from approaching the Federal Court for relief against the infringement of any of the aforesaid rights.

In case any Provincial Government fails to implement any of these rights, or in case any decision of the Minorities Commission either at the Centre or in the Province, or any decision on an appeal from an aggrieved person is not duly executed by the proper provincial authority in that behalf, then and in every such case, as far as only as the circumstances of each case require, the Union Government may make remedial laws for the due protection of such rights.

14. Laws, either of the Provinces or of the Union, in conflict with the Constitution are null and void. [Ref. Art. 140 of the Chinese Constitution.]

15. Administrative order, either of the Provinces or of the Union, in conflict with the Constitution are null and void. [Ref. Art. 141 of the Chinese Constitution.]

16. The interpretation of the Constitution shall be done by the Federal Court.

Electorates: Provincial and Union

17. The franchise shall be on the basis of universal adult suffrage. Elections to legislatures, provincial and Union, and to all local self-governing bodies shall be through joint electorates, with reservation of seats for minorities according to population unless a particular minority does not wish to have any seats reserved for them.

18. In provinces where the Hindus are in a minority, they shall be treated as a minority and classed as such for the purpose of reservation of seats, and not included, as at present, in the ‘General List’.
19. In a joint electorate whether for the Centre or for the Provinces, or for the local bodies, a candidate must secure at least 33 per cent votes of his own community and at least 10 per cent from the other community or communities.

Safeguards for the Services

1. Regarding protection of Government servants belonging to minority communities in the Provinces: It is not possible to give any special protection to officers belonging to minority communities except by ensuring the independence and impartiality of the Provincial Public Service Commission, and its composition in such a manner as to secure the appointment of the real representatives of these communities on the commission in accordance with the proportion of their population to the total population of the Province.

   It is accordingly suggested that the following provisions should be made in the Provincial Constitution.

   (i) There shall be a Public Service Commission in each Province consisting of a chairman and such number of other members as may be fixed by the Provincial Government, provided that the communities should be represented in the commission in accordance with the strength of their population in the Province....

13. Dissent to the Report of the Sub-committee on Fundamental Rights

Selected Extracts from Minutes of Dissent to This Report, 17-20 April 1947

I

Clauses 9 and 24 give the citizen the option to learn and use the national language through the medium of either the Devanagari or the Persian script. We regret that our colleagues on the sub-committee did not find it possible to agree to the option being extended to the use of the Roman script as a further alternative. While those who have received English education may form a small part of our population, the fact remains that lakhs of Indians are familiar with the Roman script and that those of them, particularly in the South, who are not familiar at the same time with the Nagari or Persian script would find it easier to learn the national language and use it if they were able to do so through the medium of the Roman script. These considerations apply with special force to members of small minorities like the Indian Christians, Anglo-Indians and Jews who know the Roman script alone. So too the Indian Army has so far been successfully imparted training and education through the medium of ‘Roman Urdu’, which means Hindustani in the Roman script. That is a salutary practice which has made it possible for mixed regiments to be taught the national language without distinction of religion or province. If it is now to be abandoned, it will mean that our national army will have to take cognizance of the religious grouping or provincial origin of each of its soldiers, thus making mixed regiments difficult to organize and to educate. We trust, therefore, that the Advisory Committee will add the Roman script to those already specified in clauses 9 and 24.

M.R. Masani

Hansa Mehta
II

We are not satisfied with the acceptance of a uniform civil code as an ultimate social objective set out in clause 39 as determined by the majority of the sub-committee. One of the factors that has kept India back from advancing to nationhood has been the existence of personal laws based on religion which keep the nation divided into watertight compartments in many aspects of life. We are of the view that a uniform civil code should be guaranteed to the Indian people within a period of 5 or 10 years in the same manner as the right to free and compulsory primary education has been guaranteed by clause 23 within 10 years. We, therefore, suggest that the Advisory Committee might transfer the clause regarding a uniform civil code from Part II to Part I after making suitable modifications in it.

M.R. Masani,
Hansa Mehta
Amrit Kaur

III

We regret that though the sub-committee was almost evenly divided on it, the majority of the sub-committee turned down the proposal to include a clause based on Article 54 of the Swiss Constitution on the following lines:

No impediments to marriage between citizens shall be based merely upon difference of religion.

The Special Marriage Act III of 1872, which governs civil marriages between Indians of different religious faiths, demands from both contracting parties at present the following solemn declaration:

I do not profess the Christian, Jewish, Hindu, Muhammadan, Parsi, Buddhist, Sikh or Jain religion.

Such an impediment to marriage between two Indians is a reflection on our claim to common nationhood. Only as recently as February 26, 1947, Mahatma Gandhi is reported at a prayer meeting to have supported the idea of marriages between persons professing different religious faiths, each retaining his or her own religion without abatement. Unfortunately, such marriages cannot be solemnized in India today. Indians who have desired to marry a fellow national of another religious faith have had to leave the borders of India in order to get married without being forced to perjure themselves. It is only possible, however, for those with more than average means and facilities to leave the country for such a purpose and the law has actually prevented several conscientious persons of limited means who were unwilling to comply with the requirements from marrying fellow nationals of their choice. The incorporation in the Constitution of the proposed clause would render such a primitive restriction as at present prevails ultra vires of the Constitution. We strongly urge that this clause be inserted at a suitable place in Part I.

Amrit Kaur,
Hansa Mehta,
M.R. Masani.
IV

During the discussions we recorded our vote against compulsory service in any form and adhere to this position. We are, therefore, not in favour of the ‘explanation’ as given under clause 15.

We look upon compulsion as against all tenets of democracy and would point to the danger of giving to the State powers of compulsion in any sphere of life.

We would instead suggest the creation of paid social service in both the Centre and the units for the spread of education and other nation-building activities.

In a country where there is no lack of man power compulsion is particularly out of place.

Amrit Kaur,
Hansa Mehta.

VIII

National Language

Clause 9 as it stands makes Hindustani the language of the Union. In view of the terminology adopted by the committee it is clear that Hindustani shall not be the language of the units. I am of the opinion that Hindustani shall be the language of the State, that is, of the Union as well of the units. If each unit is given liberty as the clause does to make any language an official language not only the object of having a national language for India will be defeated but linguistic diversity will make Indian administration impossible.

I therefore am of opinion that for the word ‘Union’ the word ‘State’ should be substituted. It may be that the units may require time to make Hindustani their official language. There is no harm in giving them time. But there cannot be any doubt upon the issue that the units shall be put under an obligation to adopt Hindustani as an official language from the very start. There is a great danger of the Hindustani language becoming Sanskritized by Hindu writers and Arabicized by Muslim writers. If this happens Hindustani will cease to be a national language and will become a sectional language. Without a National Academy the Hindustani language will not be able to overcome this danger. It is therefore necessary for the Constitution to make provision for the establishment of National Academy on the model of the French National Academy.

Compulsory Service

Para (2) of explanation to clause 15 should be deleted. No country however peaceful and non-violent in its intention or philosophy can escape the necessity for compulsory military service for defending itself and its liberty when attacked by another nation. The fact must be faced that there are so many nations which are neither peaceful nor non-violent. Ban on compulsory military service by a nation living in the midst of hostile nations free to impose compulsory military service is nothing but wilful self-immolation which is contrary to wisdom and morally quite heinous.

B.R. Ambedkar
Towards Freedom: 1947

X

1. I have differed from my colleagues, or a majority of them, on the following:

(i) Distinction between justiciable and non-justiciable rights;
(ii) The right of married women to retain the citizenship of their birth;
(iii) Reasonable restrictions on freedom of internal trade for reasons of social reform;
(iv) Conscription for social service;
(v) Right of conscientious objection to retain civil obligations;
(vi) Property of religious bodies;
(vii) Marriage as a monogamous civil contract;
(viii) Guarantee to private individual property in certain forms of natural wealth [eg., Article 27 (now 26)];
(ix) Right to work, or to employment.

Distinction between Justiciable and Non-justiciable Rights

2. While appreciating the distinction between justiciable and non-justiciable rights. I hold that, owing to the very fact of such a distinction being drawn, the latter category of rights would remain no more than so many pious wishes. Given this differentiation, the Union and the unit Governments will be encouraged to stress or invent excuses why any one of these non-justiciable rights should not be given effect to. By keeping them on the Statute Book without making them imperative obligations of the State towards the citizen, we would be perpetrating a needless fraud, since it would provide an excellent window-dressing without any stock behind that dressing.

3. There are, moreover, many rights in this category, which it may not be practicable all at once to give effect to. We have ourselves provided an illustration of this in laying it down as a fundamental right (justiciable) of the citizen to a given standard of education, free of cost to the recipient, his parent or guardian. Admittedly, such a policy may not be feasible all at once for reasons of finance and personnel. To meet this difficulty, we have made this right enforceable within a period of not more than ten years. Once an unambiguous declaration of such a right is made, those responsible for giving effect to it would have to bestir themselves to find ways and means to give effect to it. If they had no such responsibility placed upon them, they might be inclined to avail themselves of every excuse to justify their own inactivity in the matter, indifference, or worse.

Obligations of the State

4. At the last sitting of our sub-committee, the heading of that part of our report which deals with non-justiciable rights, was changed into ‘Fundamental principles of social policy’. This is an improvement, as far as it goes. But unless these ‘Principles of social policy’ are specifically made obligations of the State to the citizen, the apprehension felt by me will be more than realized. For these are not, as I view the matter, mere directions of policy. They are rather mandates of the community to its organized representative, the State, to be carried into effect at the earliest possible opportunity; and not to be played with as mere catchwords to delude or deceive. There should, therefore, be no such distinction; and the ‘Principles of social policy’ must be categoric injunctions, or obligations of Government, to be given effect to as soon as possible.
(i) Obligations of the citizen

5. Lest the tale of obligations sounds one-sided, I would add that corresponding to the rights of citizens, there are also implied or declared obligations of the citizens. There is, I fear, too much talk of rights everywhere; and distressing silence in regard to duties. In a modern society, where the division of labour or specialization of function is so widespread and complex; where every individual is necessarily dependent upon the co-operation of his fellows, there cannot be rights only, without any thought or mention of duties. Rights and duties must go hand in hand, if we are to progress on right lines.

6. Not all these duties need, however, be expressly stated. From the nature of the case, many of them are taken for granted; for example, the duty to contribute towards the burdens of Government in proportion to one's ability; or the obligation to join in the tasks of national defence. Because of the comparative unfamiliarity of that other civic obligation—the duty to work—the right of the State to conscript the entire man-power of the community for social service must be expressly stated to be used if and when the State organizes the country's resources, and mobilizes the manpower to develop the same to their utmost capacity.

(ii) Married women's right to reserve her native citizenship

7. In the sub-committee's report provision is left to be made by the law of the Union, for 'The accrual, acquisition, and termination' of the citizenship of the Union. I am afraid these words might not include the case of a woman who, originally a citizen of the Union, marries a non-citizen, and yet desires to retain her citizenship by birth. The terms 'accrual, acquisition and termination' would not necessarily include 'retention'. It must, therefore, be specifically provided for in the fundamental rights of citizenship.

8. I may add that this matter has already been a subject of international convention. In times of war, particularly, women, originally citizens of the country, but married to those of another which may conceivably be at war with the former, may find themselves in great difficulty, unless the right to retain their native citizenship is expressly reserved. This will be particularly important if the Union of India does not eventuate, as contemplated in this draft, and some parts of this country become alien ground.

(iii) Restrictions on freedom of internal trade

9. Article 13, (now 14) even as re-drafted, does not permit restrictions being imposed by any unit on the freedom of trade within the Union on grounds of social reform. The resolve of a unit, for instance, to prohibit intoxicating drinks or drugs altogether within its jurisdiction, or stop other kinds of immoral traffic, will not be covered by the proviso permitting 'reasonable restriction in the interests of public order, morality or health'. For it may be argued that drinking or the use of drugs in moderation will not hurt the health of the user. They may even be needed as medicine. And 'morality' is too vague a term to be depended upon for this purpose. I would, therefore, like the ground of 'social reform' being added expressly to the exceptions permitted in that Article.

(iv) Conscription for social service

10. In the explanation to Article 15, I would like to substitute 'national or social service' in place of 'education'. I recognize 'education' as amongst the foremost of our needs of nation-building, for which conscription would be fully justified. But that
Towards Freedom: 1947

(These words were omitted from the draft report subsequently) does not make the claims of other items in nation-building, or social service, like health, the less urgent.

11. Later on in this note, I have argued for inclusion in the fundamental rights of citizenship the right to work or employment to be guaranteed to every citizen by the State. In order to make this guarantee real, every unit will have to prepare a comprehensive plan of its own development, to be integrated in an over-all National Plan. There is no hope of the immense poverty of India being ever remedied, and the people of India being assured a decent standard of living, without a National Plan for all-round development. Work can also be provided for every adult citizen, in accordance with the ability, training and aptitude of each individual, if there is such a plan in every region in operation. I am afraid it will not be possible for independent, sovereign India to make up the long leeway she suffers from, in social as well as economic matters, without an all-round plan, which organizes and provides work for every citizen.

(v) Right of conscientious objection

12. Article 16, Explanation III, provides: ‘No person shall refuse the performance of civil obligations or duties on the ground that his religion so requires.’

If a civil obligation is imposed to kill rats as plague carriers, or commit any similar Himsa for similar reasons, a conscientious Jain would refuse to shoulder such an obligation, or perform such a duty. The right of the genuine conscientious objector, in such cases, should, I think, be safeguarded.

(vi) Property of religious bodies

13. Some of my colleagues have, I believe, dissented from the provisions of Articles 17 and 21 which relate to property of religious organizations. I would associate myself with them on the grounds they have mentioned; and add that all kinds of property in the hands of religious bodies escapes civic obligations by way of taxation, and other things. Death or estate duties cannot be charged upon such property, as it is in mortmain, the hands of perpetual corporations. I consider this unfair to the community, as it was the forebears of the present generation of the people of this country who made the original endowments; and I see no justification why such readily available and mobilized resources should not be available to the present generation to be utilized for the benefit of this and succeeding generations. I do not see any reason why they should remain for ever immobilized, and so cause a needless handicap in the task of the fullest possible development of our social services and economic resources for improving substantially the lot of the masses. Those articles are, accordingly, unnecessary and may be omitted.

(vii) A common civil code for social institutions as marriage

14. While accepting the principle of a common civil code, mentioned in Articles 41 (now 39) and 42 (now 40), I think it necessary to give some indication of the basic principles of that code. For instance, I hold that marriage should, in the eyes of the law, be no more than a civil contract of a monogamous character, that is, both parties must be of age, free from any coercion or undue influence, and entitled to equal rights and duties under the contract. No impediment should be cast in the way of freedom of choice in marriage on grounds like difference in religious beliefs between the parties. Nor should any special disability or handicap be imposed, such as that under the Special Marriages Act of 1872, under which intending parties to a marriage,—both Indians professing different religions, have to declare that they do not profess any of the named religions. This leads to unnecessary perjury; and comes in the way of a real unification of this country.

(viii) Private property in certain forms of national wealth

15. Article 27 (now 26), guaranteeing, as it were, individual property should be made subject to some exceptions in regard to those forms of natural wealth, which, like land, flowing water in rivers, or lakes, wherein valuable fisheries might be found, are the sources of producing new wealth. These must be owned publicly, and operated for the common benefit. They should be open to the fullest possible development and exploitation by collective effort. No room should be left for a private proprietor to interpose his veto, in his selfish interests upon the proper utilization of such natural resources.

16. It is not merely reasons of economic efficiency in developing these resources, or of social justice in distributing their benefits, that dictates this exception against unlimited guarantee of the rights of private property. Reasons of national defence are no less imperative. There are minerals, for instance, found in the different parts of India which may prove of vital importance in the organization of national defence. The risk of their being alienated by a private proprietor seeking his own profit to foreigners, whose country may conceivably be at war with ours, is too great not to require being fully safeguarded against.

17. Nor should a private proprietor, individual or corporation, be entitled to keep these resources undeveloped if he cannot develop them himself. Such a dog-in-the-manger policy is no figment of imagination. Moreover, these are not all perennial assets. Once exhausted, a mine cannot be renewed. Once denuded, a forest will take long years to replace. Pearl fisheries need to be carefully protected, even as whale hunting has had to be regulated by international convention. Such protection or regulation will not be easy unless the rights of ultimate ownership in these forms of natural wealth are reserved to the community.

18. We must, therefore, see to it that the fullest opportunity is provided for the utmost utilization of such sources of new wealth by collective effort for the common benefit. If individual proprietors have to be expropriated for this purpose, reasonable compensation should be given to them. But even here, it must be remembered that, in the case of developed land and exploited mines at least, the individual proprietor must have, in many cases, benefited himself several times over the value of his property. This should be taken into account before any policy of expropriation with compensation is adopted and carried into effect.

(ix) Right to work, or to employment

19. The right to gainful employment, or useful work, should be guaranteed to every citizen, as part of the fundamental rights. It must be amongst the most imperative Obligations of the State to organize, coordinate and distribute productive work, so that no able-bodied citizen be unable to get work suited to his qualifications, taste, or aptitude. None should be a parasite, none a burden or a nuisance to society, who can work for his living.

20. Without this right being guaranteed, all other rights and freedom will be meaningless. As the late President Roosevelt has said: ‘Necessitous men are not free men’. People who are out of job, to use the language of the same great statesman and democrat, are the stuff of which dictatorships are made. Individual freedom cannot exist without economic security; and that is why he included it amongst the famous four freedoms which were to be the appropriate foundation as well as symbol for the new age of freedom and democracy.
21. The provision in Article 37(i) [now 35(ii)] of the Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee’s Report,—that the citizens, men and women equally, have the right to an adequate means of livelihood,—and later on to some sort of social insurance or security is not enough, not only because it was included among the non-justiciable rights,—only pious wishes or mere principles of policy for the general guidance of the State; but also because it might be interpreted as satisfied if the State institutes some form of dole to the unemployed, or provides something like our existing Famine Relief Work. I would like it to be categorically asserted and assured as a fundamental right. In consequence an imperative obligation will have to be shouldered by the State to organize and provide remunerative work to every citizen in accordance with the training, taste, or aptitude of each, so that there be no suspicion of charity in the work provided by public agency for those who cannot get it under private enterprise.

22. In times of depression, it has, already become the practice, in all advanced communities conscious of the responsibility of the community to the individual, to ‘create’ work for unemployed citizens. This may take the shape of public works,—like roads, wells, canals, soil conservation and other things. Work organized and provided under the Famine Relief Code in India is an instance of the same kind.

23. These are, however, all cases of uncoordinated effort, undertaken spasmodically, when a widespread emergency actually occurs. Such work also involves some kind of a stigma of charity. It is admittedly of a temporary nature, which would be given up the moment the particular emergency is over. There is thus needless waste in money as well as energy, which may well be used to much better purpose, if all work in the community is carefully planned in advance, mutually adjusted and co-ordinated, and scientifically distributed among the workers according to the ability, aptitude and qualifications of each. Such work would not be unproductive, as it would include the entire effort of the community, properly organized, so as to develop fully all its productive resources, services and utilities, and thereby provide useful work to every member able and qualified for the purpose.

24. The right to gainful work or useful employment is assured to the citizen only. Such work, if it is to be fruitful, must be adjusted to the capacity,—physical as well as mental,—training and aptitude of the worker. In view of the large numbers enjoying this right, and in view also of equal pay for equal work, there need be no fear of too many seeking a few lines of employment only, and other lines suffering from shortage of workers, provided there is a proper planning and assignment of the work in advance.

25. The right, it need hardly be added, is coupled with the duty to work. None shall starve who works; but none shall eat who does not work. This must be categorically laid down as an unexceptioned maxim of our national policy, to be given effect to by the State organizing and providing suitable work for every citizen in accordance with each one’s capacity and qualifications.

26. Exception to the rule may be permitted in all cases where, owing to temporary illness or accident or permanent disability due to old age, an individual is incapacitated from normal work. Every endeavour should be made to find work suitable for those suffering from remediable disabilities. With a nation-wide plan including all occupations, this would cause no difficulty. Those temporarily incapacitated by illness or accident should be excused ordinary work for the time being and care provided for them under a national system of social security or insurance.

27. Children of school-going age at school must be regarded as preparing for work when they have received proper training. Just as providing for their education up to a minimum standard is agreed to be an obligation of the State, so, too, the provision of work for them when they are duly trained and qualified should be a national obligation, to be discharged through the Government of each unit, aided and advised when required by the National or Union Government. Public expenditure on the education of the people or their health is no waste. It is the soundest of all national investments.

28. The same principle must apply to the case of the aged and the superannuated. They must be taken to have worked sufficiently in their youth and health to have earned their pension.
They deserve maintenance by the community in their old age and incapacity and be excused hard work. Provision on this account should also be considered as in the nature of insurance benefit, for which, hereafter at least, every worker should be required to contribute his premium.
The scheme will then become self-sufficient, and the aged, indisposed, or incapacitated worker will receive no favour or charity when he accepts his insurance benefit as his due.

29. The report of the Sub-Committee on Fundamental Rights provides that equal work should be equally remunerated, for men as well as women. The work of the housewife in the home must be treated, for purposes of this right (or rather as a matter of national accounting) as useful work, which must be fully recognized as such by the State. Real emancipation of women will not be possible without this recognition.

30. Apart from these exceptions,—if they may be called exceptions,—no exemption should be allowed from the civil obligation to work, or the State’s duty to provide employment. As in the case of the State’s obligation to provide a prescribed minimum of education to every child in the community, free of cost, which is permitted under the report of the sub-committee to be made good in ten years, this obligation too, may be allowed to be fully discharged in a like or less time.

31. For this right to be real and of daily enjoyment it may be that wholesale reorganization and reconditioning of our national economy will become necessary. That is, however, inevitable in any case, if we desire to resume our arrested march for progress and economic development.
If the community realizes the advantage of such planned development, the objective sought to be attained under this right would be attained in less time than seems likely today. It is all a matter of national conscience and the national will to make Swaraj real and lasting for all.

K.T. Shah

1 Minutes V to VII not reproduced here.

A Note by Rajkumari Amrit Kaur
20 April 1947

I beg to submit my emphatic opposition to the revision by the Minorities Committee of clause 16 of the report of the Fundamental Rights Committee. The matter was thoroughly discussed in the latter committee and the words ‘free practice of religion’ were deliberately omitted. It was felt that they would not only be a bar to future social legislation but would even invalidate past legislation such as the Widow Remarriage Act, the Sarda Act or even the law abolishing sati. Everyone is aware how many evil practices, which one would like to abolish, are carried on in the name of religion, for example, pardah, polygamy, caste disabilities, animal sacrifice, dedication of girls to temples, to mention a few.
Towards Freedom: 1947

The propagation of religion is amply assured in clause 10 dealing with freedom of speech and expression.

Since conversion by force or undue influence only is to be banned, it follows that conversion of an adult to any religion by reason of conviction will be permissible.

Freedom of religious worship, freedom of conscience and free profession of religion should really give to the individual and community all he or it needs.

The clause, as revised, is also going to make it extremely difficult for the State to ban religious meetings or processions that may be adjudged to lead to communal strife or public disorder. Such bans may be defied on the plea that they are an encroachment on fundamental rights and endless litigation may ensue. I am informed that the right to religious processions has in fact been the subject of litigation in courts right up to the Privy Council.

To make the ‘free practice of religion’ a justiciable right is, I submit, an error and will defeat not only social progress but will keep alive communal strife.

There are other points in the Minorities Committee’s Annexure to which I am opposed but I will raise these as they come up for discussion in the Advisory Committee.

15. Interim Report of Committee on Minorities and Fundamental Rights Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to the President, Constituent Assembly, 23 April 1947

Constituent Assembly of India
No. CA/24/COM/47
Council House,
New Delhi, the 23rd April, 1947

From

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel,
Chairman, Advisory Committee on Minorities, Fundamental Rights, etc.

To

The President,
Constituent Assembly of India

Sir,

On behalf of the members of the Advisory Committee appointed by the Constituent Assembly of India on the 24th January, 1947, I have the honour to submit this interim report on fundamental rights.1 In coming to its conclusions, the Committee has taken into consideration not merely the report of the Sub-Committee on fundamental rights but also the comments thereon of the Minorities Sub-Committee.

2. The Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee recommended that the list of fundamental rights should be prepared in two parts, the first part consisting of rights enforceable by appropriate legal process and the second consisting of directive principles of social policy which, though not enforceable in Courts, are nevertheless to be regarded as fundamental in the governance of the country. On these latter, we propose to submit a subsequent report; at present, we have confined ourselves to an examination only of the justiciable fundamental rights.

3. We attach great importance to the constitution making these rights justiciable. The right of the citizen to be protected in certain matters is a special feature of the American constitution and the more recent democratic constitutions. In the portion of the Constitution Act, dealing with the powers and jurisdiction of the Supreme Court, suitable and adequate provision will have to be made to define the scope of the remedies for the enforcement of these fundamental rights. These remedies have been indicated in general terms in clause 22 of the Annexure.

4. Clause 20 of the Statement of May 16, 1946, contemplates the possibility of distributing fundamental rights between the constitutions of the Union, the Groups, if any, and the Units. We are of the opinion that fundamental rights of the citizens of the Union would have no value if they differed from Group to Group or from Unit to Unit or are not uniformly enforceable. We recommend that the rights set out in the Annexure to this report be incorporated in the constitution so as to be binding upon all authorities, whether of the Union or the Units.

5. Clause 10 deals with the freedom, throughout the Union, of trade, commerce and intercourse between the citizens. In dealing with this clause, we have taken into account the fact that several Indian States depend upon internal customs for a considerable part of their revenue and it may not be easy for them to abolish such duties immediately on the coming into force of the Constitution Act. We, therefore, consider that it would be reasonable for the Union to enter into agreements with such States, in the light of their existing rights, with a view to giving them time, up to a maximum period to be prescribed by the constitution, by which internal customs could be eliminated and complete free trade established within the Union.

6. We have made a special provision in regard to full faith and credit being given to the public Acts, records and judicial proceedings of the Union in every Unit and for the judgments and orders of one Unit being enforced in another Unit. We regard this provision as very important and appropriately falling within the scope of fundamental rights.

7. Clause 2 lays down that all existing laws, regulations, notifications, custom or usage in force within the territories of the Union inconsistent with the fundamental rights shall stand abrogated to the extent of such inconsistency. While in the course of our discussions and proceedings we have kept in view the provisions of existing Statute law, we have not had sufficient time to examine in detail the effect of this clause on the mass of existing legislation. We recommend that such an examination be undertaken before this clause is finally inserted in the constitution.

8. The Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee was of the opinion that the right of the citizen to have redress against the State in a court of law shall not be fettered by undue restrictions. That Sub-Committee was not able, however, to draft a suitable formula as the matter requires more investigation than was possible in the time at its disposal. It was also suggested during our deliberations that certain additional fundamental rights should be inserted in the constitution. We have not had the time to consider these matters; we shall do so in due course and incorporate any recommendations we may have to make on them in our next report.

9. The Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee and the Minorities Sub-Committee were agreed that the following should be included in the list of Fundamental Rights:

"Every citizen not below 21 years of age shall have the right to vote at any election to the legislature of the Union and of any unit thereof, or, where the legislature is bicameral, to the lower chamber..."
of the legislature, subject to such disqualifications on the ground of mental incapacity, corrupt practice or crime as may be imposed, and subject to such qualifications relating to residence within the appropriate constituency, as may be required, by or under the law.

(2) The law shall provide for free and secret voting and for periodical elections to the legislature.

(3) The superintendence, direction and control of all elections to the legislature, whether of the Union or of a Unit, including the appointment of Election Tribunals, shall be vested in an Election Commission for the Union or the Unit, as the case may be, appointed, in all cases, in accordance with the law of the Union.\footnote{Annexure not reproduced here.}

While agreeing in principle with this clause, we recommend that instead of being included in the list of fundamental rights, it should find a place in some other part of the constitution.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant,

Vallabhbhai Patel

Chairman

Advisory Committee on Minorities, Fundamental Rights, etc.

16. Discussion on the Report of the Committee on Union Subjects

Extract from the Proceedings of the Constituent Assembly, 28 April 1947

Mr President: Presentation of the Report of the Committee appointed by the Resolution of the Constituent Assembly of the 25th January, 1947, to examine the scope of Union subjects.

Mr H.V. Kamath: Sir, is it only the presentation of the Report or is a motion being moved? There is no notice of a motion.

Mr President: If the Hon’ble Member will wait and hear, he will know what it is.

The Hon’ble Sir N. Gopalaswami Ayyangar (Madras: General): Sir, I come forward to perform a merely routine and prosaic duty of presenting the Report of the Committee on Union subjects. It is not intended that any motion on this Report should be placed before this House today. This Committee was appointed on the 25th January for the purpose of examining the scope and content of the subjects assigned to the Centre in the Statement of the Cabinet Mission of May 16th and to draw up lists of matters included in and interconnected with the subjects so assigned. The Committee started with strength of twelve and power was reserved to you, Sir, to nominate ten more, the intention being that some seats should be filled by nomination of representatives of the Muslim League if they came in, and others should be assigned to representatives of the Indian States. As it is, the Muslim League has not so far come in, and as Pandit Jawaharlal explained to you a little while ago, strenuous attempts were made to get the full quota of nominations for representatives of the Indian States being filled in, if possible. But it was not possible to do so. In the later stages of our deliberations, however, we have had the assistance of two distinguished representatives from Indian States.
Now, Sir, I said I was only performing this prosaic duty; I was not going to perform the function which my Hon’ble friend, Mr Kamath, would have liked me to perform today. Copies of this Report, I believe, have been circulated to Members. It is not, therefore, necessary that I should read the Report; and in connection with mere presentation of reports in a deliberative assembly of this kind it is not usual to make a speech on the contents of such a report except on an occasion such as the one mentioned by Mr Kamath, for instance, on a motion for taking the Report into consideration. That motion is not to be made today, nor is it intended by those to whom has been entrusted the task of steering the business of this Assembly. It is not their intention that such a motion should be placed before the House during the current Session.
There are several reasons why this decision has been taken. In the first place, Sir, the subject is a very important one; it is a vital matter connected with the framing of the Constitution, and it is only desirable that this Report on so important a subject should be read through and studied carefully by Members of this House before it is taken into consideration. And then we have got to remember that the Committee had to work on the Cabinet Mission’s Plan. That Plan contains some very unusual features, the unusualness really resulting from the desire to satisfy the wishes of the Muslim League if it ever decided to come in. The coming in of the Muslim League is not yet officially ruled out; there is still a possibility of their coming in, though the probability is perhaps very small. Should this possibility materialise it would be only just and reasonable that the debate on so important a subject, as the subjects and powers to be assigned to the Union centre, should be held in a House which contains a full representation of the Muslim League. Whether they will come in or not will be definitely known before the June-July Session of this Assembly. And that is one main reason why we are not taking up the discussion of this matter in this current Session.

Then, Sir, there are the Indian States—a number of representatives of Indian States have joined us today but there is a very large number still to come in. Those have not come in because they require time for going through the procedure prescribed for the purpose of choosing them and sending them to this Assembly. The Indian States have got a very vital interest in the matter which is covered by the Report of this Committee, and it is desirable that as full a representation of the Indian States as possible should be in the Assembly before we begin to discuss so important a matter. Thirdly, Sir, there is the question of the present political conversations. The decisions on those conversations are not available yet: they will be available in all probability before we meet again in the June-July Session. The decisions will be of the most important character, and I think the House will agree with me in thinking that those decisions will have very important repercussions on the plan of work which this Constituent Assembly will have to adopt in framing the Constitution for the country if that decision should, as it is feared, take the shape of anything like the division of India into two or more independent States it may become necessary for this Assembly to deviate from rigid conformity to the Cabinet Mission’s Plan. It is unnecessary for me to say now in what directions this deviation might become necessary. The nature of those deviations must necessarily depend upon the political decisions that are taken but apart from such deviations the number of subjects that have to be assigned to the Centre, their scope and content, the definition of a field of concurrent jurisdiction between the Union and the Units, and the relations between the Union and the Units as regards the exercise of legislative and administrative powers, will all be matters which would require a fresh and thorough examination. This examination will so far as I can visualize have to be done in close collaboration between the Committee on Union Subjects and the two Committees which are proposed to be set up in the course of the current Session—one for the purpose of determining the principles of the Union Constitution, and the other for determining the principles of a model provincial constitution. These three Committees will have to work in close collaboration, and it is necessary that before they enter into such collaboration, they must have before them the political decisions that will have been reached before them.

Now, Sir, taking all these facts into consideration, it is, I think, very necessary that the debate on the Report of the Committee on Union Subjects should be postponed beyond this Session, to the next Session, and therefore it is that I am not placing before you any motion for taking this Report into consideration today.

There is one matter about which I think I must ask the permission of the House to approve of what this Committee has done. In the original Resolution appointing this Committee, it was asked to submit its Report before the 15th of April. As a matter of fact, the Committee signed its Report on the 17th of April. I do hope, Sir, that the House will excuse this delay of two days.

There is another matter which I might mention. This Report should not be taken as the final Report of the Committee on Union Subjects. I have already placed before you considerations which will necessitate the matter being reviewed and overhauled by the same Committee in collaboration with other Committees. There are matters, for instance, connected with Indian States, which require perhaps more consideration than it was possible to give them during the time that this Committee met between its appointment and today. The representatives of the States who wish to give us the benefit of their views feel that there are some matters which require further investigation before they could finally commit themselves, and there are also other matters and certain questions connected with the subjects which have been listed in this Report about which greater consideration, it is considered by certain members of the Committee, would be necessary. And apart from that there is looming before us the political decision which will necessitate our overhauling the entire Report if it comes to that. Therefore, Sir, I request the permission of the House to let this Committee submit a further Report if it becomes necessary. With these words, I merely present the Report of the Committee to the House.

Mr President: The Report has been presented. I think the House will condone two days delay in signing it, and will also give permission to the Committee to submit another Report if it finds it necessary to do so.

This was unanimously agreed to.

Mr R.K. Sidhwa (CP and Berar: General): When the subsequent Report is presented, may I know whether this Report will also be open to discussion. We have not read even a single sentence of this Report which has been presented to the House.

Mr President: We are not entering into any discussion on this Report. The Hon’ble Member will read this Report, and we can then discuss it during the next Session.

We will meet at 8-30 tomorrow morning and we will go on until 12-30 when we will adjourn. Any Member who has any amendments to suggest to the Report of the Fundamental Rights Committee should do so before 5 o’clock this evening. The Report will be taken into consideration tomorrow. The House now stands adjourned until 8-30 a.m. tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till half past Eight of the Clock, on Tuesday, the 29th April, 1947.
NEW DELHI, April 28.—Dr Rajendra Prasad, President of the Constituent Assembly, addressing the house, which met this morning, indicated that it must be prepared not only for a division of India but a division of some provinces and for this the Assembly may have to draw up a constitution based on such a division.

Dr Rajendra Prasad said: ‘Whatever the nature of the constitution that may have to be drafted, whether for one undivided India or only for parts of it, we shall see to it that it gives satisfaction to all coming under its jurisdiction.’

Expressing the hope that the Assembly would proceed with all expedition in view of HMG’s declared intention to transfer power to Indians by June, 1948, Dr Rajendra Prasad said that it had been tentatively decided to finalise the Constitution by the end of October....

NEW DELHI, Tuesday.—‘Untouchability in any form is abolished and the imposition of any disability on that account shall be an offence... There shall be no discrimination against any citizen on grounds of religion, race, caste or sex.’

These are among the Fundamental Rights which the Constituent Assembly adopted today unanimously, thus proclaiming to the world that the free State it wishes to construct shall be the most democratic.

Another proof of this resolve was given in the evening when the Congress Party at a meeting in the Constitution House resolved to omit various provisos governing the Fundamental Rights relating to the freedom of speech, of association and of the Press. The meeting considered it enough to state that the exercise of various freedoms shall be subject to the requirement of morality and public order.

The Assembly dealt with the report of the Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee in a businesslike way and passed five clauses during its four-hour sitting in the day. The discussion was lively and Sardar Patel and Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Iyer effectively answered most of the criticism voiced by movers of amendments....

Then occurred a battle of legal wits on the definition of citizenship. It started on an innocent-looking question put by Mr B. Das as to whether the definition that every person born in the Union shall be a citizen of the Union was not too liberal to foreigners. The question assumed significance because the President, Dr Rajendra Prasad, declared that it required an answer. Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Iyer, who is the brain behind the sub-committee’s report, gave a lucid exposition of the issues involved.

The political argument was provided by Sardar Patel, who said that the world was watching them and they must not bring in racial tinge while they were fighting against racial discrimination in South Africa and elsewhere. The House laughed when he clinched the issue by asking: ‘How many foreign women are coming here to give birth to children to acquire Indian citizenship?’ The President expressed himself as unconvinced and since some members had suggested postponement of the clause the general sense of the House favoured postponement. The President will form a committee of eminent lawyers to re-examine the definition.

When the House debated the clause stating that there shall be no discrimination on grounds of religion, race, caste or sex, Mr Lahiri (Communist) proposed that there shall be no discrimination on grounds of political creed. Sardar Patel reacted sharply to this plea by remarking: ‘There may be some political creeds which may be highly objectionable and may deserve not discrimination but suppression.’ The amendment was rejected, not even the mover saying ‘aye’.

Mr Rohini Kumar Chaudhry suffered a similar rebuff when he suggested that discrimination on grounds of dress should be banned. His grievance was that some European hotels were still not admitting people wearing Indian dress. ‘They are all quitting,’ said Sardar Patel, ‘Some people are still haunted by ideas of slavery.’

19. Demand for Retention of Anglo-Indian Schools and Reservation in Civil Services
Extracts from the Memorandum on the Anglo-Indian Community by Frank Anthony, President, All India Anglo-Indian Association, April 1947

Education and Instruction in Our Mother-Tongue

We place the greatest emphasis on a specific clause in the Constitution somewhat similar to section 83 in the Government of India Act of 1935. The position of the Anglo-Indian community, vis-à-vis its educational facilities, is different from that of any other community in India. It is essential that Anglo-Indian schools should continue as a distinct entity within the educational system of the country.

The community claims the retention, and adequate provision for the maintenance, of its schools by the State as a fundamental right, the right of a minority to preserve its religion, its culture, its language and its way of life. The Christian religion of the Anglo-Indian, the English language as his mother-tongue, the Anglo-Indian culture and way of life are assumed. These are characteristics which are inherent in the religion, descent and traditions of the community.
If the Anglo-Indian community is to preserve its cultural heritage, such preservation is inseparable from the retention and continuance of the distinct identity of Anglo-Indian schools.
This is the universal and ardent desire of the community—a desire common to and claimed by every minority seeking to preserve its religion, its culture, its language and its way of life.
The community places the greatest importance upon a specific clause being introduced in the new Constitution whereby educational grants for the benefit of the community shall continue to remain a statutory obligation on Provincial Governments. It is, however, claimed that the basis on which grants are assessed and the terms of the present section require suitable amendment. Experience of the actual working of the section indicates the need for ensuring that the educational grants made for the benefit of the community be adequate to maintain the present standards of its schools and provide for further development. Under conditions which obtain at present the grants are insufficient for both purposes. Under the terms of section 83 of the Government of India Act of 1935, Provincial Governments are required to make annual grants for the benefit of the Anglo-Indian community, ‘not less in amount than the average of the grants made for its benefit in the 10 financial years ending on the 31st March, 1933’.
This assessment bears little or no relation to the present-day expenditure of Anglo-Indian schools. With the general rise of the cost of living, in common with other schools, the cost of maintaining Anglo-Indian schools has risen considerably during the past decade. There has been an increase of 42 per cent in the total expenditure. It is essential that Government should recognize and provide for this increase in the cost of maintenance. Unfortunately, no cognizance has been taken of this increase. Despite the heavy rise in total expenditure, the grants to our schools have remained static. The proportion of the cost met by Government has consequently declined. Further, while section 83 provides for a reduction of the grants to Anglo-Indian education pro rata to any reduction in the total grant to education made by the Provincial Government, it makes no provision for pro rata increase. Under these terms, the development of its schools and the community’s participation in the benefits accruing in the progress and reform of education become impossible.

In the application of the statute by the majority of Provincial Governments what was meant to be a statutory minimum has tended to become a statutory maximum. It is generally argued that as the per capita expenditure by the State on Anglo-Indian education is higher than that prevailing for other communities, no increase in the grants is justifiable. The plea is here made for a sympathetic approach to the whole question. This approach can be helped by consideration of the following facts:

1. The special need of the Anglo-Indian community in the matter of its education has been recognized repeatedly. It was in the pursuance of this recognition by the Irwin Committee, which consisted of distinguished Indians such as the Hon’ble Dr Jayakar and Sir Mohd Iqbal, that special grants-in-aid for Anglo-Indian education were provided under section 83 of the Government of India Act of 1935.

2. The Anglo-Indian community is, no less than other communities, an Indian community, rooted in Indian soil. In this connection we would draw attention to section 93 of the Canadian Constitution by which a seemingly insuperable difficulty between Roman Catholics and Protestants was overcome by offering generous terms in the matter of education to denominational schools.

3. Higher expenditure on Anglo-Indian education rises from certain inevitable facts such as:

   (a) The natural standard of living of the community.

   (b) The fact that half the number of Anglo-Indian schools are boarding establishments and the cost to Government per pupil includes boarding charges which are a non-existent or negligible item in the case of other communities.

   (c) The admittedly higher standards, particularly as to training and discipline, obtaining in these schools.

4. While Government meets almost cent per cent the expenditure of schools for other communities, Anglo-Indian parents meet 50 per cent of the expenditure by payment of fees. The average annual cost per child to the Anglo-Indian parent in 1944–45 was Rs 160 whereas that to the parent in a non-Anglo-Indian school was only Rs 5.

5. Although the Government grant may amount, per capita, to much more than what is granted to other communities, yet the absolute amount is comparatively small.

6. The cost to Government per pupil as envisaged in the Sargent Scheme will be Rs 32 at the primary stage, Rs 55 at the middle school stage and Rs 109 at the high school stage. In 1944–45 the average cost to Government per Anglo-Indian pupil was Rs 71.
This shows that the cost of Anglo-Indian education is not more on an average than that envisaged by the Sargent Scheme for pupils of other communities.

7. A point to be remembered is that while these grants have been made to Anglo-Indian schools, most of the schools admit up to 40 per cent of pupils from other communities which means that, in fact, these grants are expended also on the education of a large number of pupils of other communities, whether Hindu, Muslim or Sikh.

8. While Municipal and District authorities maintain schools for other communities, at considerable cost, no such schools are provided for Anglo-Indians.

9. These schools represent a real national asset. A large percentage of members of other communities also attend these schools. The standard of education envisaged by the Sargent Scheme, and which is likely to take 30 or 40 years to materialize already obtains in Anglo-Indian schools. In asking for the retention of a clause similar to the provision in the Government of India Act, we wish certain aspects to be emphasized. While Government grants to other communities have steadily increased by about 29 per cent, since 1926-27, Government grants to Anglo-Indian schools have not only not increased at all but decreased. The provision in the Government of India Act which set out a minimum has, in practice, been interpreted by a majority of the Provincial Governments as prescribing a statutory maximum. In the result, the Anglo-Indian parent, as mentioned above, bears 50 per cent of the cost of education of the child. Comparatively, the Anglo-Indian parent bears a burden for the education of his child such as that not borne by parents of children of other communities. It is very necessary that the future Governments should consider these aspects and that the grants should be so increased to these schools as to lift an increasingly intolerable burden from the shoulders of Anglo-Indian parents.

Finally, I wish to reiterate that the mother-tongue of the community is English, and, because of this, is as much an Indian language as the mother-tongue of any other Indian community. I appreciate the fact that national self-respect will require that increasing importance be given to the main Indian languages. Our schools have recognized the need for the mastery of one of the main languages but the principle of cultural autonomy gives us the right to expect the continuance of English as the medium of instruction in our schools. We would also draw attention to the unnecessary hardship that will be caused to minorities, whose mother-tongue is not Hindi or Urdu, by precipitate measures as to the language media.

***

The Services

We appreciate the fact that the ideal condition would be to do away with all communal considerations for the purposes of recruitment to the services. But under present communal conditions, this must remain, at least for some time, unattainable. The present principle, to use the words of Appadorai must be that ‘efficiency of the public services depends not merely upon the qualifications of the entrants thereto but upon the social harmony in the body politic served by them’. In order to maintain the social harmony we feel that communal representation is essential, subject of course to salutary safeguards which require adequate qualifications. Under this section we would ask for a special clause in the Constitution safeguarding our percentages of employment in the Railways, Posts and Telegraphs, and Customs Services. This clause can be based on section 252 of the Government of India Act, 1935, by which the class and character of the posts, hitherto held by members of the Anglo-Indian community, are safeguarded. We ask for this clause in the Constitution for the following reasons:

(a) The community has, as already mentioned, helped largely in the founding and developing of these important services.

(b) It is unfair to calculate these percentages on a flat numerical ratio. The community is cent per cent literate. Further, the whole community studies up to at least the Middle School stage. This is certainly not the case with practically all the other communities. Finally, over a period of many decades, the community has developed special aptitudes for these services. On the basis, therefore, of the number of persons qualified and willing to enter these services, our percentages are not only not disproportionate but perhaps comparatively low.

(c) The economy of the community has, as the result of circumstances beyond its control, been based almost entirely on Government service. A sudden and violent dislocation by depriving the community abruptly of these three major avenues, would be to deal it an economic death-blow. This we feel could never be the deliberate intention of any section of our fellow countrymen towards us. If necessary, this safeguard clause can be made operative for a limited period of 30 years, so as to give the community an opportunity to divert itself into other avenues of employment.

(d) The total number of posts held by the community in these three departments, approximates to 17,000. This represents a microscopic proportion of the hundreds of thousands of other Government’s posts left untouched by the community.

20. Discussion on the Interim Report of the Committee on Fundamental Rights

Extracts from Proceedings of the Constituent Assembly, 1 and 2 May 1947

CLAUSE 13—RIGHTS RELATING TO RELIGION

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, I move the adoption of clause 13, namely,

‘All persons are equally entitled to freedom of conscience, and the right freely to profess, practise and propagate religion, subject to public order, morality or health, and to the other provisions of this Part.

Explanation 1—The wearing and carrying of kirpans shall be deemed to be included in the profession of the Sikh religion.

Explanation 2—The above rights shall not include any economic, financial, political or other secular activities that may be associated with religious practice.

Explanation 3—The freedom of religious practice guaranteed in this clause shall not debar the State from enacting laws for the purpose of social welfare and reform.’

I see that there are a number of amendments on the Order Paper. I shall speak on them when they are moved and, if there is any that could be accepted, I shall accept.

Mr K.M. Munshi: Sir, I move an amendment to the effect that, after the last Explanation, the following words be added:
‘and for throwing open Hindu religious institutions of a public character to any class of section of Hindus.’

After the Explanation above was drafted it was thought that the practice of religion referred to should not be of such a character as will interfere with the right of the Legislature to legislate on social questions. The question arose with regard to the throwing open of all temples to all classes of Hindus, whether it would be religious practice. In order to prevent any such construction of clause, it was decided that the throwing open of Hindu religious institutions shall not be held to contravene the practice of Hindu religion.

Mr President: I shall now call upon Members who have given notice of amendments to this clause, to move them... (after a pause)... As I find that there is no amendment moved to the clause I shall put it to the vote of the House.

Mr H.J. Khandekar (CP and Berar): Sir, in case Mr Munshi’s amendment to this clause is accepted, it may be necessary to have a definition for ‘places of public worship’. Unless this is done it may be difficult for people to know which is a place of public worship. Even where admission to people of all classes is given, depressed classes are not allowed. Even when there is a written record that a certain temple is open to worship by depressed classes, the pujaaris obstruct and say that that temple is a private one and, therefore, not open to depressed classes.
So, Sir, if there is definition of ‘places of public worship’ there will be no difficulty. I suggest, therefore, that there should be a definition for ‘places of public worship’.

Mr President: May I know in which clause that expression occurs?

Mr H.J. Khandekar: Explanation 3.

Mr President: I do not find this expression there.

There is no mention of any place of public worship there.

Mr H.J. Khandekar: I want a definition for ‘religious institutions of a public character’.

Mr President: Mr Khandekar wants some explanation of the term ‘religious institutions of a public character’ so that it may be clear what religious institutions are referred to.

Shri L. Krishnaswami Bharathi: Sir, the clause reads: ‘other provisions of this Chapter’. It should read ‘other provisions of this Part’.

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: The word ‘Chapter’ has been substituted by the word ‘Part’.

I accept Mr Munshi’s amendment and I congratulate the House on agreeing to pass this very controversial matter which has taken several days in the Committees and gone through several Committees. There might be differences of opinion, but on the whole we have tried our best to accommodate all sections of the people. I move that this clause as amended be passed.

Mr President: I am putting to the vote first the amendment to Explanation No. 3. The amendment is:

‘That the words “and for throwing open Hindu religious institutions of a public character to any class or section of Hindus” be added at the end of Explanation No. 3’.

The amendment was adopted.
Mr President: Now I put the clause as amended to the House. Clause 13, as amended, was adopted.

Mr President: Now we go to clause 14

CLAUSE 14.

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Now I move clause 14.

‘Every religious denomination shall have the right to manage its own affairs in matter of religion and, subject to the general law, to own, acquire and administer property movable and immovable, and to establish and maintain institutions for religious or charitable purposes.’

There is a little addition by way of an amendment which Mr Munshi will move. I move this clause for the acceptance of the House.

Mr K.M. Munshi: Sir, I move an amendment that in clause 14 the words ‘or a section thereof’ be added between the word ‘denomination’ and the word ‘shall’. It was felt that the use of the term ‘religious denomination’ may prevent a section of a denomination from being protected.

Sri K. Santhanam: What is meant by ‘general law’?

Mr K.M. Munshi: There is a general law of the country as apart from any special legislation. When the word ‘law’ is used, it means the law of either the Unit or the Union according to the power which is being exercised. If it is a Union subject, it is Union law. If it is a Unit subject, it is Unit law.

Mr President: Has the word ‘general’ any special significance here, Law is law.

Mr K.M. Munshi: The intention was that any specific legislation was to be excluded. There are certain legislations specifically intended for certain classes of people. If the desire of the House is that it should be ‘law’, I have no objection.

Some Hon’ble Members: ‘...subject to “law”.’

Mr President: Mr Santhanam, there is an amendment to be moved by you, amendment No. 63.

Sri K. Santhanam: No, Sir. I am not moving it.

Mr President: Mr Rajagopalachariar, you have an amendment.

The Hon’ble Sri C. Rajagopalachariar: No, Sir. I am not moving it.

Mr President: The clause and the amendment are now open for discussion.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I oppose the omission of the word ‘general’ which is opposed to special or local laws which are defined in the Indian Penal Code as relating to a particular subject or a particular part of British India. There ought to be no restriction on the acquisition of rights and property by any religious institution under any special law. The same definition relating to special and local laws will be found in the General Clauses Act also. I, therefore, want the retention of the word ‘general’. I think the framers of the clause were right in including it.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Diwan Bahadur Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar: The General Clauses Act and the Penal Code will not apply to the interpretation of our Constitution. We must have an interpretation clause in our Constitution when the Constitution is finally framed.

Mr H.V. Kamath: I could not hear a word of what Sir Alladi said.

Mr President: Sir Alladi’s view was that the General Clauses Act and the Penal Code will not apply to our Constitution and, therefore, we need not attach any importance to them.

Mr D.N. Datta (Bengal: General): If the words ‘existing Indian law’ are there, the General Clauses Act will apply.

Mr President: You are at liberty to differ from Sir Alladi.

The Hon’ble Sri C. Rajagopalachariar: Apart from the question of how words should be interpreted, it is very necessary that this special right that we are giving to religious denominations should be subject to all the laws that will be enacted and, therefore, the expression should be only ‘law’ and not any particular portion of the law.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: We are trying to get these on the statute book. What is the meaning of taking these technical objections?

Mr President: As a matter of fact, the point has been discussed, and if there is anything else, then the Drafting Committee will attend to them.

Now I will put the various amendments. The first amendment I will put is that the words ‘or a section thereof’ be added between ‘denomination’ and ‘shall’. That part of the clause will read as follows:

‘Every religious denomination or a section thereof shall have the right to manage its own affairs...’

and so on.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr President: The next amendment is that the words ‘the general’ be omitted.

The amendment was adopted.

Mr President: The clause as amended will read:

‘Every religious denomination or a section thereof shall have the right to manage its own affairs in matters of religion and, subject to law, to own, acquire and administer property movable and immovable, and to establish and maintain institutions for religious or charitable purposes.’

I put the clause, as amended, to the House.

Clause 14, as amended, was adopted. ...

CLAUSE 17

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, I move Clause 17.

‘Conversion from one religion to another brought about by coercion or undue influence shall not be recognised by law.’

Mr K.M. Munshi: Sir, I beg to move the following amendment:

‘That for clause 17 substitute the following clause:
“Any conversion from one religion to another of any person brought about by fraud, coercion or undue influence or of a minor under the age of 18 shall not be recognised by law”.

The additions that are made to the clause as it is originally moved are there. First of all, the word ‘fraud’ is added to the words, ‘coercion and undue influence’. The second matter is with regard to the conversion of a minor. As a matter of fact, it was proposed by one of the other Committees in some form or other, and it is the general feeling that this clause should be restored in this form,—any conversion of a minor under the age of 18 shall not be recognized by law. The only effect of non-recognition by law would mean that even though a person is converted by fraud or coercion or undue influence or be converted during his minority he will still in law be deemed to continue to belong to the old religion and his legal rights will remain unaffected by reason of his conversion. The idea behind this proposal is that very often, if there are conversions by fraud or undue influence or during minority, certain changes in the legal status take place, certain rights are lost. This will have only this effect that the rights will remain exactly the same as at the moment a person was converted by fraud or coercion or undue influence and in the case of a minor at the moment of conversion.

If Hon’ble Members desire I will read the whole clause. The whole clause is put in this form.

‘Any conversion from one religion to another of any person brought about by fraud, coercion or undue influence or of a minor under the age of 18 shall not be recognised by law.’

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhury (Assam: General): May I ask you to explain as to what is meant by the words ‘undue influence’? Is it used in the sense laid down in the Contract Act or in the general sense?

Mr K.M. Munshi: It is difficult for me to say, but I am sure ‘fraud’ is fraud all the world over and in all systems of jurisprudence. There is no difference between the two words coercion and undue influence as understood in India and in other countries. There may be little shades of difference but the free India will form its definitions and it may not be different from the Oxford dictionary meaning so far as I can see.

Shri Phool Singh (United Provinces: General): In view of the amendment moved by Mr Munshi, my amendment will not fit in. But I suggest, Sir, that conversion by coercion should be made an offence. I would suggest he might move an amendment to this effect.

The Hon’ble Mr Jagjivan Ram: I am not moving my amendment (No. 72 of the Supplementary List II).

Mr President: Amendment No. 73 of the Supplementary List II.

Mr R.K. Sidhwa: This is a new clause. It may be taken up later.

Mr F.R. Anthony (Bengal: General): Mr President, my amendment, is with specific reference to Mr Munshi’s amendment, ‘or of a minor under the age of 18’. To this part of the clause I want to add these words: ‘except when the parents or surviving parents have been converted and the child does not choose to adhere to its original faith’. This was more or less the form in which the particular clause was accepted by the Minorities Sub-Committee. We discussed it at length and it was felt that in the form, I have sought to re-introduce, it would best serve the interests that we were considering there.
I agree that conversion under undue influence, conversion by coercion or conversion by fraud should not be recognized by law. I am only interested in this question, Sir, on principle. My community does not propagate. We do not convert, nor are we converted. But I do appreciate how deeply, how passionately millions of Christians feel on this right to propagate their religion. I want to congratulate the major party for having, in spite of its contentious character, retained the words ‘right to practise and propagate their religion’. Having done that, I say that after giving with one hand this principal fundamental right, a right which is regarded as perhaps the most fundamental of Christian rights, do not take it away by this proviso, ‘or of a minor under the age of 18’. I say that if you have this particular provision, or if you place an absolute embargo on the conversion of a minor, you will place an embargo absolutely on the right of conversion. You will virtually take away the right to convert. Because, what will happen? Not a single adult who is a parent, however deeply he may feel, however deeply he may be convinced, will ever adopt Christianity, because, by this clause you will be cutting off that parent from his children. By this clause you will say, although the parents may be converted to Christianity, the children shall not be brought up by these parents in the faith of the parents. You will be cutting at the root of family life. I say it is contrary to the ordinary concepts of natural law and justice. You may have your prejudices against conversion; you may have your prejudices against propagation. But once having allowed it, I plead with you not to cut at the root of family life. This is a right which is conceded in every part of the world, the right of parents to bring up their children in the faith that the parents want them to pursue. You have your safeguards. You have provided that conversion by undue influence, conversion by fraud, conversion by coercion shall not be recognized by law. I have gone further, and unlike the position in other parts of the world, I have even given discretion to the child provided it has attained the age of discretion, to adhere to its original faith. The wording is ‘and the child does not choose to adhere to its original faith’. If both the parents are converted and if they want their children to be brought up as Christians, if these children have reached the age of discretion and say that in spite of the conversion of their parents, they do not want to be brought up as Christians, under the restriction which I have introduced, they will not be brought up in the Christian faith.

I have also added the word ‘surviving parent’, for this reason, I say that if you restrict it to both the parents,—what will happen? If a widow, let us assume, adopts Christianity, do you mean to say that if she wants to bring up her children in the Christian faith, and if those children themselves want to be brought up in the Christian faith, you are placing an embargo on this? If you do not use the word ‘surviving parents’, if the father who happens to be a widower adopts the Christian faith, and the children wish to be brought up as Christians, it may be said that since both the parents are not alive, the father cannot bring up the children in his faith. He will automatically be cut off from his children.

I realize how deeply certain sections of this House feel on this question of conversion. But I do ask you, having once conceded the right to propagate, to concede this in consonance with the principles of family law and in consonance with the principles of natural law and justice.

Mr P.R. Thakur: Sir, I am a member of the Depressed Classes. This clause of the Fundamental Rights is very important from the standpoint of my community. You know well, Sir, that the victims of these religious conversions are ordinarily from the Depressed Classes. The preachers of other religions approach these classes of people, take advantage of their ignorance, extend all sorts of temptations and ultimately convert them. I want to know from Mr Munshi whether ‘fraud’ covers all these things. If it does not cover, I should ask Mr Munshi to re-draft this clause so that fraud of this nature might not be practised on these depressed classes. I should certainly call these ‘fraud’.

The Hon’ble Rev J.J.M. Nichols-Roy (Assam: General): Mr President, Sir, it appears to me that the clause as it came out of the Advisory Committee is sufficient and should not be amended at all. The amendment seeks to prevent a minor, who is of twelve years of age, or thirteen years of age, up to eighteen years of age from exercising his own conscience. The age limit may be quite right in law. But to think that a youth under the age of eighteen does not have a conscience before God and, therefore, he cannot express his belief is wrong. That side of the question must be appropriately considered. There is a spiritual side in conversion which ought to be taken notice of by this House. Conversion does not mean only that a man changes his form of religion from one religion to another, or adopts a different name of religion, such as, a Hindu becomes a Christian. But there is the spiritual aspects of conversion, that is, the connection of the soul of man with God, which must not be overlooked by this House. I know there are those who change their religion being influenced by material considerations, but there are others who are converted being under the influence of spiritual power. When a boy feels that he is called by God to adopt a different faith, no law should prevent him from doing that. The consciences of those youths who want to change their religion and adopt another religion from a spiritual standpoint should not be prevented from allowing these youths to exercise their right to change their legal status and change their religion. We know, Sir, in the history of Christianity, there have been youths, and I know personally, there have been many youths, who have been converted to Christianity, who are ready to die for their conviction and who are ready to lose everything. I myself was converted when I was about fifteen years old when I heard the voice of God calling me. I was ready to lose anything on earth. I was ready to suffer death even. I did not care for anything save to obey and follow the voice of God in my soul. Why should a youth who has such a call of God be prevented by law from changing his religion and calling himself by another name when he feels before God that he is influenced by the Spirit of God to do that and is ready even to sacrifice his life for that. This part of the amendment about minors is absolutely wrong when we consider it from the spiritual standpoint. From the standpoint of conscience I consider that it is altogether wrong not to allow a youth from the age of twelve to eighteen to exercise his own conscience before God. It will oppress the consciences of the youths who want to exercise their religious faiths before God. Therefore, I am against this amendment as it is. The clause should be left as it was before. The legal and other aspects have been discussed by Mr Anthony regarding the conversion of the children of the converted parents. Certain minors should be allowed to follow their own conviction if they have any, and should not be forced to do anything against their own conviction. Why should the law not allow them if they themselves do not care for their former legal status? Why should they be prevented from changing their religion? Why should their consciences be oppressed? That is a very important point, Sir, to be considered by this House. This freedom I consider to be a Fundamental Right of the Youths. No law should be made which will work against good spiritual forces. India, especially, is a country of religions, a country where there is religious freedom. If this amendment is carried in this House, it will only mean that in making a law to prevent the evil forces our minds lose sight of the real religious freedom which the youths of this land ought to have. Therefore, I am against this very principle of forcing the youths by not allowing them to exercise their religious conviction according to their consciences. I would suggest, Sir, that if in the amendment moved by Mr Anthony the words ‘or save when the minor himself wants to change his religion’ are included, then I do not object to this amendment. I am against any conversion by undue influence or by fraud or coercion. When we make a law against all these evils we should be careful to see that that law does not oppress the consciences of the youths who also need freedom.
Towards Freedom: 1947

The Hon’ble Shri Purushottamdas Tandon (United Provinces; General): Mr President, I am greatly surprised at the speeches delivered here by our Christian brethren. Some of them have said that in this Assembly we have admitted the right of every one to propagate his religion and to convert from one religion to another. We Congressmen deem it very improper to convert from one to another religion or to take part in such activities and we are not in favour of this. In our opinion it is absolutely futile to be keen on converting others to one’s faith. But it is only at the request of some persons, whom we want to keep with us in our national endeavour that we accepted this. Now it is said that they have a right to convert young children to their faith. What is this? Really this surprises me very much. You can convert a child below eighteen by convincing and persuading him but he is a child of immature sense and legally and morally speaking this conversion can never be considered valid. If a boy of eighteen executes a transfer deed in favour of a man for his hut worth only Rs 100, the transaction is considered unlawful. But our brethren come forward and say that the boy has enough sense to change his religion. That the value of religion is even less than that of a hut worth one hundred rupees. It is proper that a boy should be allowed to formally change his religion only when he attains maturity.

One of my brethren has said that we are taking away with the left hand what we gave the Christians with our right hand. Had we not given them the right to convert the young ones along with the conversion of their parents they would have been justified in their statement. What we gave them with our right hand is that they have a right to convert others by an appeal to reason and after honestly changing their views and outlook. The three words, ‘coercion’, ‘fraud’ and ‘undue influence’ are included as provisos and are meant to cover the cases of adult converts. These words are not applicable to converts of immature age. Their conversion is coercion and undue influence under all circumstances. How can the young ones change their religion? They have not the sense to understand the teachings of your scriptures. If they change their religion it is only under some influence and this influence is not fair. If a Christian keeps a young Hindu boy with him and treats him kindly the boy may like to live with him. We are not preventing this. But the boy can change his religion, legally only on attaining maturity. If parents are converted why should it be necessary that their children should also change their religion? If they are under the influence of their parents they can change their religion on maturity. This is my submission.

With your permission, Mr President, I would like to address a few words in English that such of my friends who do not know Hindi may follow me.

Sir, I am astonished at the manner in which some Christian friends have advanced the claim to convert minors. We have agreed to the right of conversion. Generally, we, Congressmen do not think at all right—I say so frankly—that people should strenuously go about trying to convert peoples of other faith into their own, but we want to carry our Christian friends with us—friends who feel that they should have the right to make conversions—and we have agreed on their insistence to retain this formula about ‘propagation’. They know that we are opposed to it, yet we have agreed.

Mr C.E. Gibbon (CP and Berar: General): It is quite wrong.
The Hon’ble Shri Purushottamdas Tandon: I am speaking, Sir, as a Congressman. I say that the majority of Congressmen do not like this process of making converts (interruption), but in order to carry our Christian friends with us...

Mr C.E. Gibbon: On a point of order, Sir.

The Hon’ble Shri Purushottamdas Tandon: There can be no point of order. There may be a point of opinion.

Mr C.E. Gibbon: I do not think, Sir, that the Speaker is competent to speak for all Congressmen.

Some Hon’ble Members: Why not?

Mr President: That is no point of order.

Shri Balkrishna Sharma (United Provinces: General): The Speaker has every right to speak on behalf of most of the Congressmen. He is most certainly entitled to do so.

The Hon’ble Shri Purushottamdas Tandon: I know Congressmen more than my friend over there. I know their feelings more intimately than probably he has ever had an opportunity of doing, and I know that most Congressmen are opposed to this idea of ‘propagation’. But we agreed to keep the word ‘propagate’ out of regard for our Christian friends. But now to ask us to agree to minors also being converted is, I think, Sir, going too far. It is possible that parents having a number of children are converted into some other faith but why should it be necessary that all these children who do not understand religion should be treated as converts? I submit it is not at all necessary. The law of guardianship will see about it. Guardians can be appointed to look after these children, and when they grow up, if they feel that Christianity is a form of religion which appeals to their minds they will be at liberty to embrace it. That much to my Christian friends.

I understand, Sir, that it is possible that difficulties may be raised by some lawyers. What is the legal difficulty about this matter? The ordinary law of guardianship will see about this. When we say that minors cannot be converted, that implies that when parents go to another faith and they have a number of children to look after, the law of the country will take care of those children. You can always enact a law of guardianship and you can, if necessary, add to the laws which at present exist on the subject so that in such cases the minors should be taken care of. I do not, Sir, therefore, see that there is any legal difficulty in the way of the amendment which Mr Munshi has proposed being accepted. I heartily support Mr Munshi’s amendment....

Mr President: I have got a list of a number of names of members who wish to speak on this amendment. I take it that my eye catches members in the order in which I have received the requests. So, I call upon Shri Algu Rai Shastri.

Shri Algu Rai Shastri (UP: General): Mr President, I stand here to support the amendment moved by Mr Munshi. I believe that by accepting the amendment we shall be doing justice to those minors who have perforce to enter the fold of the religion which their parents embrace out of their greed. This practice is like the one prevailing in the transactions of transfer of land and which is that ‘trees go with the land’. It is on some such basis that the minor children who do not understand what change of religion or coercion or religious practices mean, have to leave their old faith along with their parents. This evil practice has a very bad effect, on the strength of our population. It is proper for us that we, who are framing the charts of Fundamental Rights, should safeguard their interests and save them from such automatic conversion. The dynamic conditions of our society make it more important than ever that we should incorporate such a provision in our Constitution as will prevent such practices. Such minors on attaining majority often regret that they were made to change their religion improperly. Wherever the Europeans or the white races of Europe, who rule practically over the whole world, have gone, they have, as Missionaries. A study of the ‘Prosperous India’ by Digby shows that ‘cross was followed by the sword’. The missionary was followed by the batons, the swords and the guns. It was in this way that they employed coercion for spreading their religions and for extending their Empire. At the same time, they put economic and political pressure on the indigenous tribes and consolidated the foundations of their dominion. We want such an amendment in this clause of Fundamental Rights that a person who wants to change his religion should be able to do so only after he is convinced through cool deliberation that the new religion is more satisfactory to him than the old one. For example it is only when I am convinced that Sikhism is preferable to Hinduism, that I should be able to change my religion. This right I believe we have. But no one should change religion out of greed and temptation. When the followers of one religion employ, sword and guns to attack a family consisting of a few members, the latter have no option but to accept the religion of the aggressors in order to save their lives. Such a conversion should be considered void and ineffective because it has been brought about through coercion and undue influence. In view of such conditions which exist today, conversion brought about through temptation and allurement is, in fact, not a conversion in the real sense of the term. I have a personal experience extending over a period of 24 years as to how the elders of the family are induced through prospects of financial gain to change their religion and also with them the children are taken over to the fold of the new religion. It appears as if some are taking the land physically in his possession and the helpless trees go with it to the new master.

One particular part of the country has been declared as an ‘Excluded Area’ so that a particular sect alone may carry on its propaganda therein. Another area has been reserved for the ‘Criminal tribes’. Similarly, other areas have also been reserved wherein missionaries alone can carry on their activities. In Chattisgarh and other similar forest areas there are tribes which follow primitive faiths. There the Hindu missionaries cannot carry on their activities. These are called ‘Excluded and partially Excluded Areas’, and no religious propaganda can be carried on in these areas except by the missionaries. This was the baneful policy of the Government. We should now be delivered from this policy of religious discrimination. In his book ‘Census of India—1930’ Dewton writes that the Christian population of Assam has increased 300 times and attributes this increase to certain evils in Hindu Society. It is these evils which gave other missionaries opportunities to make conversions. In his book ‘Census of India—1911’ Mr S. Kamath has said that the missionaries of one particular religion are reducing the numbers of another by exploiting the evils of that group. They convert some influential persons by inducement and persuasion. The bitterness of the present is due to such activities. I am conversant with what Christian missions have done for the backward classes and I have also seen their work among such classes of people. I bow to them with respect for the way in which they (missionaries) have done their work. How gracious it would have been had they done it only for social service. I found that the dispute, if and when it occurs, between members of such castes as the sweepers or the chamaras on the one side and the land-lords or some other influential persons on the other have been exploited to create bitterness between them. No effort has been made to effect a compromise. This crooked policy has been adopted to bring about the conversion of the former. Similarly, people of other faiths have intensified and exploited our differences in order to increase their own numbers. The consequence is that the grown-up people in such castes as Bhangies and chamars are converted, and with them their children also go into the fold of the new religion. They should be affectionately asked to live as brothers. This is what has been taught by prophets, angels and leaders. But this is not being practised today. We are in search of opportunities to indulge in underhand dealings. We go to people and tell them ‘you are in darkness; this is not the way for your salvation’. Thus every body can realize how all possible unfair means have been adopted to trample the majority community under feet. It is in this way that the Foreign bureaucracy has been working here, and has been creating vested interests in order to maintain its political strangle-hold over the people. If we cannot remove this foundation whom are we going to give the Fundamental Rights? To these minors who are in the lap of their parents? If we permit minors to be transferred like trees on land with the newly embraced religion of their parents, we would be doing an injustice. Many fallacious arguments are offered to permit this. We must not be misled by these. We know that our failure to stop conversion under coercion would result in grave injustice. I have a right to change my religion. I believe in God. If I realize tomorrow that God is a farce and an aberration of human mind then I can become an atheist. If I think that the Hindu faith is false, I, with my grey hair, my fallen teeth and ripe age, and my mature discretion can change my religion. But if my minor child repeats what I say, are you going to allow him also a right to change his religion (at that age)? Revered Purushottam Das Tandon has said in a very appealing manner that if a child transfers his immovable property worth Rs 100 the transaction is void. How unjust it is that if a minor changes his religion when his parents do so, his act is not void? It has an adverse effect on innocent children. This attempt to increase population has increased religious bitterness. The communal proportion has been changed so that the British bureaucracy may retain its hold by a variation in the numbers of the different communities. I am saying all these things deliberately but I am not attacking any one community in particular. The sole interest of the government in the illusory web of the census lies in seeing a balance in the population of the communities so that these may continue to quarrel among themselves and thereby strengthen its own rule. This amendment of Mr Munshi is directed against such motives. Nothing can be better than that, and, therefore, I support it.

In my opinion this majority community should not oppress the minority. We respect and honour all and we give an opportunity to everybody to propagate his religion. Those who agree with you may be converted. But convert only those who can be legitimately converted. Improper conversions would not be right. You tempt the innocent little ones whom you take in your lap, by a suit of clothes, a piece of bread and a little toy and thus you ruin their lives. Later, they repent that they did not get an opportunity to have a religion of their choice. I, myself, am prepared to change my religion. But someone should argue with me and change my views and then convert me. Surely, I should have no right to change the religion of my children with me—specially children below a certain age. Those children are considered to be minors who are under teens, that is, below eighteen.

Mr H.V. Kamath: Under teens includes nineteen.

Shri Algu Rai Shastrli: However if it is nineteen, it is all the better. Even if it is not possible they should extend minority by a year of grace. The age limit fixed for minors and majors should be adopted in religious matter as well. They say that there would be no incentive for conversion if people have to forego their children. I hear that in Japan the father has one religion and the child another. What does religion mean? Does the mother feed her baby so that the child’s religion might change? If the mother’s love is true she will surely feed her baby. Does the mother’s milk change the religion? We do not wish to snatch away the child from the mother’s lap, but we wish to give to the baby a right to record his (natal) religion in the report of the Census and any other government records, till he attains majority and declares his (new) religion. We give him this right in this amendment. Parents need the company of their children. If they have changed their religion discreetly, let them educate their children. But the change in the religion of the children may be considered (only) on their declaration at reaching majority. This is the purpose of this amendment and I support it, and I strongly oppose the view that this right should not be given to children....

Dr B.R. Ambedkar: Mr President, Sir, I am sorry to say that I do not find myself in agreement with the amendment which had been moved by Mr Munshi relating to the question of the conversion of minor children. The clause, as it stands, probably gives the impression to the House that this question relating to the conversion of minors was not considered by the Fundamental Rights Committee or by the Minorities Sub-Committee or by the Advisory Committee. I should like to assure the House that a good deal of consideration was bestowed on this question and every aspect was examined. It was, after examining the whole question in all its aspects, and seeing the difficulties, which came up, that the Advisory Committee came to the conclusion that they should adhere to the clause as it now stands.

Sir, the difficulty is so clear to my mind that I find no other course but to request Mr Munshi to drop his amendment.

With regard to children, there are three possible cases which can be visualized. First of all, there is the case of children with parents and guardians. There is the case of children who are orphans, who have no parents and no guardians in the legal sense of the word. Supposing you have this clause prohibiting the conversion of children below 18, what is going to be the position of children who are orphans? Are they not going to have any kind of religion? Are they not to have any religious instruction given to them by some one who happens to take a kindly interest in them? It seems to me that, if the clause as worded by Mr Munshi was adopted, namely, that no child below the age of 18 shall be converted it would follow that children who are orphans, who have no legal guardians, cannot have any kind of religious instruction. I am sure that this is not the result which this House would be happy to contemplate. Therefore, such a class of subjects shall have to be excepted from the operation of the amendment proposed by Mr Munshi.

Then, I come to the other class, namely, children with parents and guardians. They may fall into two categories. For the sake of clarity it might be desirable to consider their cases separately; the first is this: where children are converted with the knowledge and consent of their guardians and parents. The second case is that of children of parents who have become converts.

It does seem to me that there ought to be a prohibition upon the conversion of minor children with legal guardians, where the conversion takes place without the consent and knowledge of the legal guardians. That, I think, is a very legitimate proposition. No missionary who wants to convert a child which is under the lawful guardianship of some person, who according to the law of guardianship is entitled to regulate and control the religious faith of that particular child, ought to deprive that person or guardian of the right of having notice and having knowledge that the child is being converted to another faith. That, I think, is a simple proposition to which there can be no objection.

But when we come to the other case, namely, where parents are converted and we have to consider the case of their children, then I think we come across what I might say a very hard rock. If you are going to say that, although parents may be converted because they are majors and above the age of 18, minors below the age of 18, although they are their children, are not to be converted with the parent, the question that we have to consider is, what arrangement are we going to make with regard to the children? Suppose, a parent is converted to Christianity. Suppose a child of such a parent dies. The parent, having been brought up in the Christian faith, gives the Christian burial to the dead child. Is that act on the part of the parent in giving a Christian burial to the child to be regarded as an offence in law? Take another case. Suppose a parent who has become converted has a daughter. He marries that daughter according to Christian rites. What is to be the consequence of that marriage? What is to be the effect of that marriage? Is that marriage legal or not legal?

If you do not want that the children should be converted, you have to make some other kind of law with regard to guardianship in order to prevent the parents from exercising their rights to influence and shape the religious life of their children. Sir, I would like to ask whether it would be possible for this House to accept that a child of five, for instance, ought to be separated from his parents merely because the parents have adopted Christianity, or some religion which was not originally theirs. I refer to these difficulties in order to show that it is those difficulties which faced the Fundamental Rights Committee, the Minorities Committee and the Advisory Committee and which led them to reject this proposition. It was, because we realized, that the acceptance of the proposition, namely, that a person shall not be converted below the age of 18, would lead to many disruptions, to so many evil consequences, that we thought it would be better to drop the whole thing altogether. (Hear, hear) The mere fact that we have made no such reference in clause 17 of the Fundamental Rights does not in my judgment prevent the legislature when it becomes operative from making any law in order to regulate this matter. My submission, therefore, is that the reference back of this clause to a committee for further consideration is not going to produce any better result. I have no objection to the matter being further examined by persons who feel differently about it, but I do like to say that all the three Committees have given their best attention to the subject. I have therefore, come to the conclusion that having regard to all the circumstances of the case, the best way would be to drop the clause altogether. I have no objection to a provision being made that children who have legal and lawful guardians should not be converted without the knowledge and notice of the parents. That, I think, ought to suffice in the case.

The Hon'ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, this is not a matter free from difficulties. There is no point in introducing any element of heat in this controversy. It is well known in this country that there are mass conversions, conversions by force, conversions by coercion and undue influence, and we cannot disguise the fact that children also have been converted, that children with parents have been converted and that orphans have been converted. Now, we need not go into all the reasons or the forces that led to these conversions, but if the facts are recognized, we who have to live in this country and find a solution to build up a nation,—we need not introduce any heat into this controversy to find a solution. What is the best thing to do under the circumstances? There may be different points of view. There are bound to be differences in the view points of the different communities, but, as Dr Ambedkar has said, this question has been considered in three Committees and yet we have not been able to find a solution acceptable to all. Let us make one more effort and not carry on this discussion, which will not satisfy everybody. Let this be therefore referred to the Advisory Committee. We shall give one more chance.

Mr President: Do I take it that it is the wish of the House that this clause be referred back to the Advisory Committee for further consideration?

The clause was referred back to the Advisory Committee.

CLAUSE 18—CULTURAL AND EDUCATIONAL RIGHTS

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I move clause 18 now.

‘(1) Minorities in every Unit shall be protected in respect of their languages, script and culture, and no laws or regulations may be enacted that may operate oppressively or prejudicially in this respect.

(2) No minority whether based on religion, community or language shall be discriminated against in regard to the admission into State educational institutions, nor shall any religious instruction be compulsory imposed on them.

(3) (a) All minorities whether based on religion, community or language shall be free in any Unit to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice.

(b) The State shall not, while providing State aid to schools, discriminate against schools under the management of minorities whether based on religion, community or language.’

I move this clause for the acceptance of the House.

Shri Mohanlal Saksena (United Provinces: General): Sir, with your permission, I would like to move that this clause be referred back to the Advisory Committee for reconsideration. There are certain aspects which require reconsideration, and, on the whole, I think it would be much better that this whole clause be referred to the Advisory Committee for their reconsideration.

Mr President: Mr Mohanlal Saksena has moved that this clause also be referred back to the Advisory Committee for further consideration....

Shri Mahavir Tyagi: Sir, I rise to support the motion of Mr Mohanlal Saksena. He has only proposed that this clause be referred back to the Advisory Committee. I think, Sir, we are taking this document lightly. It may be that in matters like these, that is, cultural and educational rights, they could be defined only as far as they appertain to individuals and the question of minorities had better be left for the future Governments. I think we are binding the hands of our future Governments too much. We should leave them free to do according to the times and the situations they face.

Now, Sir, the question of guaranteeing the rights of minorities with regard to culture and education privileges, I would suggest that in future occasions may arise when the Governments belonging to the Union may have to negotiate with other units and may have to know from them as to what is happening to the minorities that reside in the areas which have not chosen to join the Union. Now, supposing the Governments of the Units which belong to the Union are committed by means of this clause 18 to a certain policy towards the minorities, the people here may feel the necessity of knowing as to what is happening to the minorities who reside in those units which have refused to join the Union and belong to Pakistan or any other parts of India which may organize themselves separately. My suggestion is that on the question of minorities we may not be committed here and this question be left over for the time when we may definitely know as to whether the whole of India is going to be one Unit or is going to be partitioned into two. If there is to be a partition, we must know what is happening to the minorities on the other side, in the other units. Therefore, the question is not so easy to solve just now. I submit that the whole House will support me when I say that this question had better be hanging fire till we definitely know as to what is going to be the final shape of India and how the Units are going to treat the minorities. I therefore support the motion of Mr Mohanlal Saksena that the consideration of this clause be put off.

Seth Govind Das (CP and Berar: General): Sir, I think the motion before us contains no such clause which can be considered controversial. Mr Mahavir Tyagi has said that we do not know till now whether India is to remain one or is to be partitioned. For reasons which lead him to think that this should be sent to the Advisory Committee, I feel that it should be passed by us today. Whether there is one Hindustan or Pakistan, undivided or divided India—the phantom of this thought sticks to us and we look at all problems when they come up, obsessed with that view.

While supporting the resolution of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru I said that we should not care whether our Muslim League brothers enter the Assembly or not. On the same grounds I again wish to say that we should not care whether India is to remain undivided or is to be divided. We want one India. We want that India should remain one. We are not to stop any of our efforts. I am even against Mr Munshi’s amendment, for I cannot see anything in this whole clause against any caste or community. As I have said that without looking to what is going to happen to India in future, we should pass this resolution keeping in view as to what our duties are and what should be done in this Assembly.

Mr D.N. Datta: Mr President, Sir, clause 18, sub-clause (1) says—

‘Minorities in every unit shall be protected in respect of their language, script and culture, and no laws or regulations may be enacted that may operate oppressively or prejudicially in this respect.’

I shall illustrate my point. Suppose in a certain unit there are different communities residing, using different scripts, and that unit intends to make a law that there should be one script instead of different scripts now prevailing. I feel that there may be necessity for the unit to promulgate a law that there should be one script for that particular unit for the benefit of the unit itself, and if that is not allowed by the Fundamental Rights, I think the interests of the Unit will suffer. I cannot suggest what should be the language of the clause under which such laws can be promulgated so that there should be one script for the benefit of the whole Unit. I suggest that this matter may also be referred to the Drafting Committee of the Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee because it is a very fundamental matter. The minority must have a right, but at the same time the Unit itself should also have a right to promulgate such a law—that there should be one script for the whole Unit or province. So, I consider that this matter should be considered by the Fundamental Rights Sub Committee or by Sardarji.

Srijut Rohini Kumar Chaudhury: Mr President, Sir, I wish to draw attention to sub-clause (2) of clause 18:

‘No minority whether based on religion, community or language shall be discriminated against in regard to the admission into State educational institutions, nor shall any religious instruction be compulsorily imposed on them.’
Towards Freedom: 1947

It refers to the compulsory imparting of religious instruction. Clause 16 which also refers to compulsory participation in religious instruction in school has already been referred by this Hon'ble House to the Advisory Committee. So it is only reasonable that we should agree to refer this clause to the same Advisory Committee which will consider clause 16.

I submit, Sir, that other sub-clause of this clause are not inoffensive or free from difficulty as they may seem on surface.

Take for instance, sub-clause (1) which speaks of scripts. Most of the tribal people in our Province have lost their original script. Some have taken to Assamese language and script, but Roman scripts have been recently imposed on them and now most of them are willing to take Hindi scripts which they would not be able to adopt if the sub-clause stands as it is.

Then turning to sub-clause (3) (b), if the clause stands as it is, it will seriously interfere with proper distribution of grants. So, on the whole, I think, instead of remitting sub-clauses piece-meal, it will be wise to refer the whole clause 18 to the Advisory Committee.

Shri Rajkrushna Bose (Orissa: General): I suggest, Sir, that clause 18 as moved by Sardar Patel and the amendment of Mr Munshi, should be taken up for consideration now and the House should come to a decision in the matter. It seems that there is a move to refer clauses like this back to the Advisory Committee and it has become a little too catching and therefore we are not in a position to do anything here but refer back to the Advisory Committee. Let us not forget that before these clauses passed through the Committee, they had passed through two other Committees, namely, the Minorities Rights Sub-Committee and the Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee. Clause 18 which we are now considering is so very simple and innocuous that it really needs no referring back to the Advisory Committee again. Three sub-clauses are attached to it, one is that the language, script and culture should be preserved and no laws or regulation may be enacted that may operate oppressively or prejudicially in this respect. If we are going to have one script in India as was suggested by Mr Datta, it may create difficulties and any unit which wants to have a common script for the whole unit will have difficulties if this sub-clause is kept.

Well, my contention is that the sub-clause should be retained as it is, just because, if today we raise the question of wiping out languages or scripts when we are framing our first independent constitution, there may be any number of complications and difficulties and misunderstandings and at a time when we are having a lot of other difficulties we should not invite any more now. Therefore, we ought to keep the first sub-clause as it has been kept in the original. Then sub-clause (3) (a) reads:

‘All minorities whether based on religion, community or language, shall be free in any Unit to establish and administer educational institutions of their choice.’

This is a right, Sir, which I think no country can take away and ought to take away and all constitutions should concede this right to the minorities. It is such a simple thing that it needs no reference back to the Advisory Committee again. Now, sub-clause (3) (b) reads:

‘The State shall not, while providing State aid to schools discriminate against schools under the management of minorities whether based on religion, community or language.’

This again is such a simple question. If any minority wants to start a school of its own in any unit or in any part of the Union, certainly you are not going to forbid them from doing so, or pass laws whereby they cannot have this ordinary right. If you are going to do that, all your claim to give protection to the minorities will be reduced to a farce. Therefore, I do not see why this simple clause, namely clause 18, with all its sub-clauses should be referred back to the Advisory Committee. Of course, a point has been raised by one of the members that the consideration of matters relating to minorities should be put off till we know the mind of the Pakistanists in the matter and the rights they are going to concede to the minorities in their areas. Well, Sir, if, knowing fully well that those who oppose India’s independence today like the Muslim League are adopting dilatory tactics to delay our freedom we put off our business till Doomsday or wait till they have made some decisions, we shall have to wait indefinitely. If, say for instance, they go beyond June 1948 to reach a decision with regard to these matters, are we to postpone our decisions on matters so simple and ordinary: I think, Sir, that it will be foolish on our part to delay decisions on matters like these, and therefore clause 18 as moved by Sardar Patel and amended by Mr Munshi should be adopted by the House.

Dr B.R. Ambedkar: Mr President, Sir, I confess that I am considerably surprised at these amendments—both by Mr Munshi as well as Mr Tyagi. They have, I submit, given no reason why this clause 18 should be referred back to the Committee. The only reason in support of this proposal—one can sense—is that the rights of minorities should be relative, that is to say, we must wait and see what rights the minorities are given by the Pakistan Assembly before we determine the rights we want to give to the minorities in the Hindustan area. Now, Sir, with all deference, I must deprecate any such idea. Rights of minorities should be absolute rights. They should not be subject to any consideration as to what another party may like to do to minorities within its jurisdiction. If we find that certain minorities in which we are interested and which are within the jurisdiction of another State have not got the same rights which we have given to minorities in our territory, it would be open for the State to take up the matter in a diplomatic manner and see that the wrongs are rectified. But no matter what others do, I think we ought to do what is right in our own judgment and personally I think that the rights which are indicated in clause 18 are rights which every minority, irrespective of any other consideration is entitled to claim. The first right that we have given is the right to use their language, their script and their culture. We have stated that ‘there shall be no discrimination on the ground of religion, language, etc.’ in the matter of admission into State educational institutions. We have said that ‘no minority shall be precluded from establishing any educational institution which such minority may wish to establish’. It is also stated there that whenever a State decides to provide aid to schools or other educational institutions maintained by the minority, they shall not discriminate in the matter of giving grant on the basis of religion, community or language. Sir, I cannot understand how there can be any objection to these rights which have been indicated in clause 18. At any rate, nobody who has supported the motion that this may be referred back to the Committee has advanced any argument that either these rights are in excess of what a minority ought to have or are such that a minority ought not to have them. Therefore, it seems to me a great pity that the labours of three Committees which have evolved these provisions should be so brusquely set aside simply because for some reasons people want that this matter should be referred back to the Committee. I do not know what objection my friend Mr Munshi has to sub-clause (2) as it stands, but if it is necessary that this sub-clause may be referred back to the Committee I certainly would raise no objection. That sub-clause may be referred back because I understand that we have limited this matter to State educational institutions and we have said nothing about those which are only State-aided. If that point needs to be further clarified the matter may be referred back, but, because there may be something to be said in favour of the reference back of sub-clause (2) I do not see that the same logic could be extended to the whole of the clause. I submit therefore that the clause as it stands, should be passed, barring sub-clause (2) which may, if necessary, be referred back to the Committee for consideration.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Shri Lakshminarayan Sahu: Mr President, Sir, while I was speaking some time before, I was just telling that I welcomed this clause 18 in the Fundamental Rights, because this is the first time that minorities will feel happy that they have got some definite rights. I was referring to the question of who should be called a minority about which I have my doubts. But I hope they will be cleared by further discussions. But as it is, I welcome this clause. I want to show that in Midnapore district the population of Oriyas has been mutilated to a very great extent so much so that today we do not find in the census figures any Oriya as such. In 1891 the census number of Oriyas was 6 lakhs. In 1901 it was reduced to 3 lakhs and in 1911 it was reduced to less than 2 lakhs. In 1921 it was 1,40,000 and in 1931 the figure is only 45,000.

Now, the same thing has happened in the southern portion of Orissa. The Utkal Union Conference for over 40 years agitated to get a separate province for Orissa only in order to get their minority rights, because as minorities they were not safe in any of the provinces, and when they got a separate province they were very happy. Now the question has come about the language. Referring to only one district there, out of the six districts of Orissa,—to Ganjam,—there is great language difficulty there. The Vizagapatnam District Gazetteer of 1906 writes:

‘The language of the district forms a veritable bable. In Gunjam 940 out of a 1,000 speak Telugu in their houses, 14 talk Oriya, 9 Khond, 7 Gadaba, 5 Hindusthani. But among the same number in the Agency, 451 speak Oriya, 204 Khond, 180 Telugu, 56 Savara, 30 Poroja, 23 Gadaba, 11 Koya, 3 Hindustani, 3 Gondi and 5 other vernaculars such as Labadi, Bastari, Hindi, Chhatiskari, etc.’

This difficulty about language has been felt in our province because a section of the people are Andhras and they are claiming that their children should be educated right up to the college stage through the medium of their own mother-tongue. And this should be decided clearly. I hope that by a clause like this these difficulties will be removed and our culture will be intact in those places where the Oriyas will be left outside their province; and so also the culture of other people who will be left in the province of Orissa will be properly safeguarded. But I would like to know what should be the language of the province and also the language of the different aboriginal people who are in the province of Orissa. As I have already said, there are any number of aboriginals speaking any number of different languages. Some of the aboriginal workers who are coming up claim that their language must be respected. In Orissa, if we respect every language it will be very difficult for the provincial Government to run the administration.

Quite apart from all the above difficulties which may be solved by the Units, I welcome this clause 18 which safeguards our cultural and educational rights.

Mr President: We have two amendments. One is from Mr Mohanlal Saksena.

Shri Mohanlal Saksena: Sir, I beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr President: Then the other is from Mr Munshi to refer back sub-clause (2) to the Committee.

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: I accept it.

The amendment of Mr Munshi was adopted.
Mr President: Then I put the amended clause to the House now leaving out sub-clause (2) and retaining sub-clause (1) and sub-clause (3) (a) and (b).

Clause 18, as amended, was accepted.

Mr President: I think we have just come nearly to 12–30. So we shall stop today and take up the work again at 9 o’clock tomorrow.

The Assembly then adjourned till Nine of the Clock on Friday, the 2nd May, 1947.

Constituent Assembly of India

Friday, the 2nd May, 1947
The Constituent Assembly of India met in the Constitution Hall, New Delhi, at Nine of the Clock, Mr President (The Hon’ble Dr Rajendra Prasad) in the Chair.

INTERIM REPORT ON FUNDAMENTAL RIGHTS—contd.

Mr President: We shall resume further discussion on the remaining clauses of the Fundamental Rights. Clause 19.

Clause 19.—Miscellaneous Rights.

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel (Bombay: General): I beg to move clause 19. The clause runs thus:

‘No property, movable or immovable, of any person or corporation including any interest in any commercial or industrial undertaking, shall be taken or acquired for public use unless the law provides for the payment of compensation for the property taken or acquired and specified the principles on which and the manner in which the compensation is to be determined.’

I do not expect any amendments to this motion, but if there are any, we shall consider them in time. ...

Prof K.T. Shah (Bihar: General): Mr President, I have given notice of an amendment to add the following proviso to clause 19:

‘Provided that no rights of individual private property shall be recognized in forms of natural wealth, like rivers or flowing waters, coastal waters, mines and minerals, or forests.’

But as this raises many complicated issues, I do not move it but suggest that this should go back to the Advisory Committee.

Mr President: Do you move the amendment?

Prof K.T. Shah: No, Sir.

Mr President: There is only one amendment to this clause. The clause and the amendment are both for discussion.

Shri S. Nagappa (Madras: General): Mr President, I rise to offer my support to this clause proposed by the Hon’ble Mover of this Report. This is a clause that gives some hope to the poor tiller of the soil. This clause gives a promise to the people of the country that the Union Government or the Unit Governments are going to acquire property, landed or other sort of property, from either individuals or corporations or from industrialists or commercial concerns, in the public interest and that, when they do so, they are going to compensate them. Now, Sir, what sort of compensation is to be paid? There are difficulties in the way of settling this matter. I want that in paying compensation we must be reasonable. Now the question arises as to what is reasonable compensation. It seems to me, Sir, that when we are acquiring landed property from a zamindar, we need not pay as much as he wants. We need pay only what is reasonably required to enable him to maintain himself and his family for one or two generations. That is the only thing necessary to do to fulfil the kind of assurance which the Congress has given to these zamindars and jagirdars in their election manifesto. My humble request is that the Government should accept my interpretation of what reasonable compensation is. For instance, if a poor man's property is acquired for a particular purpose, then, in giving him compensation, care must be taken to see that it is reasonable in the particular case. In such a case the Government must pay him the cost of the land and something more even. But when the Government acquire lands from a zamindar, they need not pay the actual market rate or the local rate to make the compensation paid reasonable. You have to fix the compensation keeping in view the manner in which the zamindar acquired that property. That is my contention, Sir.

Then, Sir, I submit that when once you acquire land, you must see that the tiller of the soil is made the owner of the soil. Then alone we will be able to give a kind of encouragement to the toilers and make them increase the produce and the national wealth for the maintenance of the country. I hope this clause will not stand in the way of the provinces pushing forward land legislation which they have in some cases already undertaken. For instance, my respected leader of Andhradesa, Sri T. Prakasam, has already done a lot for the abolition of the zamindari system in Madras and the Madras Government are pushing forward legislation for the abolition of zamindaris. Once the zamindaris are abolished and the Government acquire their properties, it must be their endeavour to make the best use of such properties. The Government must see to it that collective farms are formed and that, through them, the maximum is produced and the tiller is given sufficient for what he does. These are the hopes which the particular clause gives to the poor tillers of the soil.

Now, Sir, so far as the industries are concerned I have been day in and day out asking in the Madras Legislative Assembly for their nationalization. That does not mean that we need not encourage private bodies to take to industrialization. We have to go forward in this respect. Our country is very backward industrially. If we are to move quickly forward, we must go to the extent of granting subsidies to our industries and nationalise them as soon as possible. When private enterprise has fully developed and when the country thinks that particular industries should be taken over by the Government for public benefit, reasonable compensation must be paid. In these cases it would be reasonable compensation if we offer the persons who started those industries ample funds to fall back upon. That is my interpretation of the word 'reasonable' in this respect.

Sir, these are two main points that should be borne in mind when legislation is undertaken for the abolition of zamindaris and nationalization of industries.

Once again, I offer my thanks to the Hon'ble Mover for bearing in mind this particular class of tillers of the soil who would be getting their due share of the results of their labours. I also thank you, Mr President, for giving me this opportunity to speak on this motion.

Dr Suresh Chandra Banerjee (Bengal: General): Mr President, Sir, I had naturally hoped that we would make some progress towards socialization at least when we gained our independence within a few months, but in these fundamental rights nothing has been put in regard to socialization. I would have been really happy, had the amendment of Prof K.T. Shah been accepted, because there is an element of socialization there. I feel that in a country like India where poverty is so acute, where general condition of the workers and peasants is so miserable, nothing but socialization can give some hope of improvement in the future. So, I would have been happy if the House had accepted the amendment of Prof Shah. But I know, Sir, the difficulties with which we are faced at present. We know, Sir, how many interests are represented here. Here, we have to consider the case of the Indian Princes, we have to consider the case of the Anglo-Indians, of the Christians and so many other people. As a matter of fact, it is a matter of great consolation to us that we have been able to find out a solution for reconciling so many interests. So, in the present context, we cannot press for any amendment like this, but still I do hope that in the near future when India gets her independence, it will be possible to have some kind of socialization. With these words, Sir, I support the clause as it stands.

Shri Ajit Prasad Jain (United Provinces: General): I rise to make a few observations on this clause. I had given an amendment for the total deletion of this clause, but it became unnecessary to move that amendment for I could express my ideas during the course of general discussion. This clause reproduces a part of Section 299 of the Government of India Act, 1935, with a certain amount of amplitude. It says that no property, whether movable or immovable, shall be acquired for public use unless the law provides for the payment of compensation. We have some experience of the working of Section 299 of the Government of India Act. The House must be aware that in several Congress Provinces measures for the abolition of zamindari system are under consideration. In the United Provinces we passed a resolution for the abolition of zamindari system on payment of equitable compensation. That resolution follows the line laid down in the Congress Election Manifesto. In working out how the compensation should be calculated, we were faced with great difficulties. There was the question of the financial capacity of the State. If we fix compensation at a figure which the State could not pay, it would mean that the zamindari should continue to exist. We had also to see how much profits the landlords have made in the past from the zamindari. The question of the origin of zamindari also became relevant. Some of the zamindaris in our provinces have been acquired for helping the British by acts of treachery during the first war of independence in 1857. We could not ignore the market price of the zamindari either. After a careful consideration of these various factors we are trying to fix compensation for the zamindaris. On the other hand the landlords have been interpreting the word ‘compensation’ to mean full compensation, that is, the market price of the land. Some of them have threatened that they will go to the Federal Court for interpretation of the word ‘compensation’. We have no manner of doubt that it is impossible for the State to pay full compensation. Then the choice before us is to leave the zamindari as it is. Sir, land acquisition may take either of two shapes. It may be acquisition of a specified property for a specified purpose. In that case the State may pay not only its full value but something more for the compulsory acquisition as is provided in the Land Acquisition Act. There may be other cases in which property may not be acquired as a solitary thing. It may take the shape of a measure of social or economic reform for the welfare of the society. For instance, we may have to acquire factories, mines and industries for nationalization. In such cases the acquisition of the property will be for social use for the upliftment and betterment of the society. The property is being acquired in the interest of the large masses of the people. And in such cases considerations which may prevail in the cases of isolated acquisition will not apply. The State may not be in a position to pay full compensation. In fact, there may be only a nominal compensation or no compensation at all. This clause, if accepted as it stands, will stand in the way of large scale social and economic reforms. It will cover all the cases where property is being acquired for social or economic improvements. It is none of my intentions that the State should act as a robber or a bandit and arbitrarily seize properties of the people, but measures of social reforms stand on quite a different level. That is the reason why a number of amendments, which were not moved, had been tabled in the direction pointed out by me. Fundamental Rights in my opinion are embodied in the Constitution with a view to protect the weak and the helpless. The present clause will have just the contrary effect. It will protect the microscopic minority of property class and deny rights of social justice to the masses. I am, therefore, totally opposed to this clause and I do hope that the Hon'ble Mover will keep this in mind and refer the clause back to the Advisory Committee so that any provision which we pass today may not stand in the way of social and economic reforms which are necessary to bring prosperity and plenty to the country. With these few remarks, I commend my point of view for the consideration of the House.

Mr R.K. Sidhwa (CP and Berar: General): Mr President, Sir, one would have expected that under the present economic conditions prevailing in the country, there would be a clause for acquiring property in a different manner. It is very deplorable that at the present moment when various legislatures are out to abolish the jagirdari and zamindari systems by payment of a small compensation or no compensation, under this clause we are asked to pay compensation for any property that is going to be acquired. In free India where we should expect the property clause to be more liberal and beneficial to the people, we find that we are helping the upper class people by passing this clause.

Sir, the word 'property' is very vague. 'Property' includes public utility concerns like electric corporations, transport organizations, and other things. We are well aware that in many provinces these public utility concerns are being nationalised and I am sure that in a very short time to come almost all the public utility concerns will be nationalised. In fact, under the bureaucratic system of Government, all the railways have been nationalised by payment of any 'goodwill' that may have been specified under the agreement. I know, Sir, that the agreements with local bodies under which some electric concerns are working, provide for acquiring such concerns without any compensation being given. If you pass this clause, it would mean that although the agreements do not provide for it, we have to pay compensation, to these public utility concerns when we acquire them. Is it fair, may I ask, that the public utility concerns which are for the benefit of consumers and the people, and which in all countries eventually may become the property of the people, are to be taken over by paying the actual invested capital plus compensation even if there is no clause as to the payment of compensation? I do feel, Sir, that this clause requires amendment at least as far as the public utility concerns are concerned. But, Sir, I am helpless as I could not move an amendment. I would have been [sic] desired that this clause should have been amended or have gone back to the Advisory Committee under the circumstances I mentioned. If it is not going, I hope that this will receive the consideration of the Mover, because it will be really doing great injustice to the consumers,—that though in the agreement there is no clause of compensation we shall be bound to give it and in a small province they would have to take over concerns by paying them the actual amount invested plus compensation.

Mr President: Do you mean to say that an agreement will be affected by this clause?
Mr R.K. Sidhwa: Yes, Sir, No property shall be taken or acquired for public use unless the law provides for the payment of compensation, says the clause. Now, Sir, the law will be made certainly in accordance with this clause and a demand for compensation will be made even if there is nothing in the agreement.

Mr President: The acquisition itself will be provided for in the agreement.

Mr R.K. Sidhwa: If the law provides that a compensation is to be paid and if in the agreement there is no clause, then we will be bound down. I, as a common sense man, feel—of course, the legal luminaries may say, if they enlighten me I shall welcome it, but, as a common sense man, I feel that, if there is an agreement in which there is no clause for compensation and if you are enacting an Act for giving the compensation, they will claim from us the compensation. And owner of the property in that event will go to the Supreme Court and get his demand fulfilled under the clause.

Shri Vishwambhar Dayal Tripathi: Mr President, I stand here to oppose the amendment moved by my friend, Raja Jagannath Bakhsh Singh. His amendment says that the word ‘just’ should be added before the word ‘compensation’ here. I oppose this most emphatically. So far as this clause is concerned, not only I but most of my friends apprehend, that its wordings are such that their effect, particularly the legal effect, would not be to the good of the country to the same extent as it ought to be. I want that the words in the clause be changed so that it may not go against the interests of the country as apprehended by us. I would appeal to the gentlemen who drafted this clause to reconsider it and put before us a new ‘formula’.

It is proper and I accept it that when we acquire property of any one it is necessary to give compensation for it. This too I accept that in most cases compensation should correspond to the value of the property. But at the same time I also believe that we must also see as to how the property was originally acquired by the person concerned. If it was acquired justly, compensation ought to be given according to its value. If the property was not acquired justly or if the holder has earned sufficient profit from the same it is wrong to give him full compensation or to pay its full price. If we want to change the existing social order, if we want to change the present order of zamindari and capitalism and at the same time say that full compensation should be given for the property taken by the State, it would mean that we would not be able completely to do away with the present social order. If we have really to change this order, if we really want to implement the resolution passed by AICC on 8th August 1942, which promised to frame a constitution wherein the real power is vested in the workers in farms and factories, we have to reconsider these clauses. If this clause is left as it is, undoubtedly various obstacles will come up in our way of fulfilling the promises and declarations made by us before the country from time to time. Therefore, I again request the framers of this clause to reconsider it.

We have before us the question of ending zamindari in several provinces. We have also before us the question of payment of compensation to the Zamindars. There are all kinds of difficulties before us. I am a member of the UP Zamindari Abolition Committee which has to deal with such questions. I can say with all the authority at my command that if we have to pay the compensation for zamindari according to its market value, I have no doubt that it will be almost impossible for us to end zamindari; and even if it could be made possible, it would result in the peasantry remaining burdened for another 20 or 25 years to the same extent as they are today. After all from what source the compensation will be paid? It will be taken from the pockets of the poor. Under these circumstances for another 20 or 25 years the peasants will have to remain under the same financial burden which they have to bear today. They will not benefit in any way for this period of 20 or 25 years. Besides the statement of Raja Sahib that ‘just’ compensation should be paid is rather extremely odd. Is Raja Sahib prepared that a general examination of the titles of the Zamindars in respect of their landed property be undertaken to verify as to how many of these titles can be termed just? If he agrees to this his amendment may be considered. There are many estates in the country and particularly in Oudh, to which province Raja Sahib belongs, which were acquired by the present holders as rewards for their traitorous support to the English during the Mutiny of 1857. The recipients of these estates had no estate previously. The Englishmen gave them these estates for their treachery against India. Raja Jagannath Bakhsh Singh claims that the Zamindars participated in the war of liberation of 1857. I welcome those who had fought for freedom and I do recommend that they should be given the maximum concessions. Raja Sahib knows that there are instances of many who betrayed their countrymen and in return for their treachery received big estates. Such people have no right to demand compensation. Many of them enjoy exemption from payment of revenue, and have been continuously enjoying the profits of these estates for the last 90 years. They have been realizing rent from the tenants for the last 90 years without having had to pay even a pie of land revenue. If any body had even paid the price for it, he has already received five times its value. Those who acquired these estates as a reward for their betrayal of the country now demand compensation! The question of ‘just’ compensation does not arise so long as we have not examined the validity of the titles to these estates. Even if the word ‘just’ is not added here the clause as it stands, can be widely interpreted to include compensation to those who were never entitled to receive these estates, who have been receiving the profits of the estates for nearly 90 years and many of whom had not even to pay any land revenue to the Government. It would be improper to pay any compensation to these people. There is a ‘saving grace’ in this clause that the Government would consider the principles and basis on which compensation should be given.
Towards Freedom: 1947

It is my frank opinion that they should be given something as maintenance allowance for some years so that they may be able to live in, and adjust themselves to, the new and changed circumstances. I have no objection to this. I do not like, and nobody would like, that many of these people should be reduced to destitution and starvation. Therefore, if compensation can be supported it can be only on the basis that zamindars and capitalists should be given some amount for maintenance for a few years so that they may keep themselves alive without difficulties in the new economic set-up. If we want that the existing order of zamindari and capitalism should be done away with, it is desirable that compensation should be given on the basis of maintenance for a few years. But what I fear and suspect is that the clause in question may be legally so interpreted that our economic progress may be retarded, and the Congress and other important public organizations may not freely advance in the direction they intend to. Therefore, I oppose the amendment moved by Raja Sahib and at the same time request my respected friends, who have framed this clause, to reconsider it. If it is accepted as it is, disastrous consequences may follow. Therefore I beg to put these two requests of mine before you and hope that the Hon’ble President and my other friends would accept them.

Shri V.C. Kesava Rao (Madras: General): Mr President, Sir, I stand to support the clause, but I want to make some observations on that.
This clause provides compensation to the citizen whose property will be acquired for the use of the public. When the State acquires any person’s property, it is only for the benefit of the public and not of any individual. If such acquiring deprives a citizen of his livelihood, it is necessary to pay compensation equivalent to the property one loses. And I think nobody disputes such a compensation.

We are framing a constitution for free India. We are asking the British to quit India though they came here 200 years ago. We know that the British acquired India by foul means and not by hard labour. As the owners of this country, we have the right to ask them to leave the country, and in response to our demand, they are quitting India by June, 1948. In free India nobody wishes to be exploited by another. The big landlords and the Zamindars did not get their land and property by hard labour. In this respect there is no difference between the Zamindar and the British imperialist. The British acquired Empires and the Zamindars acquired large fortunes—both by means of exploitation.

In Free India it is necessary to keep all the citizens on the same footing. This may not be possible for some time to come due to the system prevalent in this country. The common cry of the tenant is that the whole produce collected by him is taken away by the landlord even though he requires some of it for the maintenance of his family. There is no other way for him except starvation. Is the State prepared to give him any livelihood or a compensation for the loss of his energy and for his labour? But if a Zamindar who exploits the poor and amasses wealth is deprived of a portion of his property for the benefit of the public, the State thinks of giving compensation for the loss, though it is not a loss to him actually. The present day request of a tenant is the reduction of rent for his land. But this request will lead to the snatching away of the little land he has been cultivating and maintaining his family with. The Zamindar is prepared to keep the land waste and not to reduce the rent. Thus he allows his tenant to starve.

Lastly, I wish to point out that the Indian National Congress has been fighting for the abolition of the system of Zamindari and even in the last election, it gave an undertaking to the masses that the Zamindari system will be abolished as soon as the Congress comes into power. And accordingly, the Congress Provincial Governments have prepared their Bills for the abolition of it. Now, when we are asked to frame the Constitution for Free India, we want to compensate them in the manner in which the law fixes. The law will be always in their favour and they get more than what is necessary.

In view of the above facts, I request the House to consider and amend the clause in such a way that only a nominal compensation may be payable for acquisition of the property of a citizen or a Corporation.

Rai Bahadur Syamanandnan Sahaya (Bihar: General): Sir, I would like to make a few submissions in connection with the amendment which has been moved by my Hon’ble friend, Raja Jagannath Bakhsh Singh. His amendment only suggests the addition of the word ‘just’ before the word ‘compensation’. I have been anxiously and carefully listening to the debate and I must say, I have heard nothing so far that there should be no justice exercised in the matter of the payment of compensation. No one has suggested, and I dare say, no one will suggest, that once we accede to the principle that acquisition of private property must be preceded by the payment of compensation, such compensation should be an unjust one. This, I submit, cannot be the contention of anybody in an august assembly like this. After all, the future of this country depends on the justice and fair-play that we exercise in dealing with the different problems confronting us here and in the tact and ability that we display in dealing with the affairs of international policy. I submit, Sir, whatever may be said about those who own lands at present, it cannot be denied that at one time they were the pioneers in building up the economic structure of this country a couple of centuries ago. They have earned and they have made money, but is that a ground for now taking away the property from them and paying them no compensation and even going to the extent of incorporating in the fundamental rights that they should get compensation and then arguing that it should be an unjust compensation. I do not think that any such proposition can be placed before this House, and even if it is placed, I do not think it will find acceptance in this House.

Well, Sir, what is the demand that the amendment puts forward? It says the word 'compensation' should be qualified. The Hon'ble Mover has referred to other constitutions in the world where the word 'compensation' has been qualified by the word 'just'. This is not the only word which has been used. If we refer to the constitutional series on Fundamental Rights which was circulated to us by Sir B.N. Rau, it will be found that even in the German Constitution the words used are 'due compensation'. It is said there—

'Expropriation may be effected only for the benefit of the general community and upon the basis of law. It shall be accompanied by due compensation.'

I therefore submit, Sir, that the use of the word 'just' could only indicate the real purpose behind what is embodied in the Report of the Fundamental Rights Sub-Committee, unless some members are prepared to argue that you might as well put the word 'compensation' there but be prepared to face the fact that it might be unjust compensation in certain circumstances. I contend, Sir, that that cannot be a correct and a proper approach to the problem nor a valid argument.

Then, Sir, the whole argument of all those who have opposed the amendment has centred round the question of the acquisition of the Zamindari. These friends unfortunately have either ignored knowingly or failed to appreciate that this compensation clause does not cover Zamindari alone. It covers the whole field of movable and immovable property in the country,—in the Union or in the Units. It may be necessary in the larger interest of the country at a later stage even to acquire 'Kashtakari', that is, tenants' lands. If you want to introduce cooperative farming or communal farming, it may be necessary to acquire even the tenants' lands. Would you deny them a just compensation? A proposition therefore like this which covers such a wide field—not merely Zamindari but even commercial interests and so many other interests—must, I submit, be placed beyond all doubts and suspicions. If I may submit, Sir, the right to private property and the protection of private property are the acceptance of the principle of right over might. You may choose to do away with it if you like, but we shall then all slowly drift towards jungle laws rather than good laws meant to keep society together. Some friends have also referred to the fact that certain zamindars got all their property for anti-national work during 1857 Revolution. The Hon'ble Mover of the amendment has questioned this remark. I will go a little further and submit that these Hon'ble friends have probably incomplete knowledge of the Zamindari system and therefore it is that they have come to the conclusions that many or most of the Zamindars acquired their property as a gift after the 1857 Revolution. They forget that in certain parts of the country the Permanent Settlement Act was enacted as early as 1793 much before the 1857 Revolution. It cannot be said of them that they got their Zamindari because of certain anti-national work. There may have been some people, whose conduct may not have been such as one would like, but you are dealing with a community and not individuals. You are dealing with the whole land problem, and when you are doing that, it is essential that the whole question and the entire picture must be within your consideration. There are also a large number of people who have paid good money and purchased Zamindari—not a hundred years before as some think. Zamindaris have been bought and sold every day. People have bought Zamindari only this year by paying good money, earned money which they have accumulated as their life's savings. Who does not know that until only a few years ago our main investment out of our savings was only in lands? It will certainly be unfair not to give them compensation—and a compensation which is just and fair. My suggestion, Sir, to the Hon’ble the Mover of the main clause and to the Mover of the amendment will be that the word 'compensation' itself means 'just and fair compensation'. Compensation cannot be, in my opinion, unjust and unfair, and I submit that if the Hon’ble Mover of the main clause feels precisely as I do, that compensation means just and fair compensation, then my advice to the Hon’ble the Mover of the amendment would be that he need not press his amendment.

Raja Jagannath Bakhsh Singh: In view of the discussion that has taken place, Sir, I would not like to press my amendment. I beg leave to withdraw my amendment.

The amendment was, by leave of the Assembly, withdrawn.

Mr President: Now, the discussion will only be about the whole clause.

Sri Lakshminarayan Sahu (Orissa: General): Mr President, Sir, while I approve of the clause as it stands now, I want to make certain observations especially with regard to Orissa Zamindaris. In Orissa the state of tenants is very bad and that is due to the people of Orissa receiving English education a little later than the people of Bengal and elsewhere. What happened was the Zamindaris that were in Orissa were transferred to the hands of absentee landlords in Bengal and the result has been that two-thirds of North Orissa—as it is called now—that is, the districts of Balasore, Cuttack, Puri and Sambalpur—two-thirds of the land in these districts are in the hands of absentee landlords and the result has been extremely disastrous. When they bought these Zamindaris they did not purchase them for a fair price. In fact, the Government records say that there was broad day-light robbery and that is how these Zamindaris were purchased. I, therefore, do not see why we should give any compensation to such Zamindars who bought these lands by a fluke or acquired them by broad day-light robbery.

Secondly, I want to draw the attention of the House to another Zamindar, the Zamindar of Jeypore. Now Jeypore Zamindari constitutes the whole of the Koraput District, which is one of the six districts of Orissa. It is a great pity that the Zamindari gives 16,000 rupees per annum to the Government but enjoys an income of Rs 16 lakhs per annum. This state of things is extremely bad and it must be cured. It is very difficult to run the administration in the presence of such Zamindars. I, therefore, say that while giving compensation—and I also say while giving just compensation—we should be very just to these absentee landlords of Bengal and also to such landlords as the landlord of Jeypore Zamindari in Orissa. These are the things that I wanted to say, in particular, about Orissa.

Another thing I want to say is that in future when trying to build up a democratic State, we cannot bear that such a state of things as the existence of these Zamindars, which is very galling, should be allowed to continue for some time more to come. The sooner the Zamindars are paid off the better. I have nothing more to say except to add that out of 100 zamindars at least 99 today have a very bad name and the duties that have been imposed on them are not performed by them. Take, for instance, one duty of the Zamindar. It is a part of their duty laid down by Government that they should look after the interests of the cultivators. They never look to the interests of the cultivators. On the other hand, the cultivators are rack-rented too much. There are so many illegal cesses which they take. If I were to narrate them one after another, it would make a very long list. In fact, there has been great agitation in one of the Zamindaris in Orissa—that is, the estate of Kanika—where 64 different kinds of illegal cesses were taken. Now, in spite of agitation the same situation exists even today. The tenants are harassed in many ways. Therefore, when we are promised a democratic republic and that too very soon, I say we cannot bear the oppression of Zamindars. The sooner the Zamindars are paid off the better.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Mr Satyanarayan Sinha (Bihar: General): I move: Sir, that the question be now put. The matter has been sufficiently discussed.

Mr President: I have got some more names. Mr Phool Singh.

Shri Phool Singh (United Provinces: General): Mr President, Sir, several speeches have been made from the floor of the House, which go to show that some compensation is proposed to be given in lieu of the abolition of Zamindari. It is true, as Bishwambhar Dayal Tripathi has said, that many people acquired their zamindari by being traitors to the country. In reply to that a Raja Sahib has said that some of them have also helped in the freedom-struggle of the country. I submit that no reward has been given to men who helped the country. In that war, lands were forfeited. It would be an unusual case if one was granted an estate for fighting against the Government. Anyway, the question just now is one of compensation. One of the reasons that is constantly advanced in favour of granting compensation is the Government of India Act of 1935, and whenever any person raises the point that no compensation should be paid then he is told that it can only be done after the repeal of the Government of India Act of 1935. But today the very same clause is being passed by the Constituent Assembly, and I think, by putting it, not in the country’s Constitution but in the list of its Fundamental Rights, the question is being closed once for all. Many people have spoken on the question of zamindari, but there is a much bigger problem than zamindari. It is industry. Who does not know that during the last five or six years of the war, many mill-owners have earned profits several times more than their invested capital? Take the Textile Industry in which, on the paid-up capital of nearly fifty crore rupees, some hundred crores of rupees have accrued as profits. It would not be very proper to compare this country with others. During this war capitalists of no other country have reaped as much profits as Indian capitalists. Therefore, what I want to say is that by passing the clause in its present form we would be running the risk of permanently obstructing the possibility of reform in this country for ever. I appeal to my elders and others, who guide the thinking of this House, to ponder again over this clause and to re-shape it in a way so as not to make it impossible for the coming generations to introduce reforms if they choose. Section 16 in its present form, as it has been placed before the House, if passed, will make nationalization of industry very difficult, if not impossible. I do not want to take any more time of this House, but I request you to refer this clause back for further consideration.

Sri Rajkrushna Bose (Orissa: General): Sir, I move that the question be now put.

Mr President: There is a motion that the question be now put. I think we have had enough discussion and I would like to take the sense of the House. The question is:

‘That the question be now put.’

The motion was adopted.
Mr President: Sardar Patel will give his reply.

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: Sir, the discussion on this question has gone on a wrong track. An amendment was moved by somebody, which has been subsequently withdrawn, but those who took part in the debate assumed that this clause was intended for the purpose of acquiring Zamindaris. That is, to say the least, not understanding the real meaning of the clause. Land will be required for many public purposes, not only land but so many other things may have to be acquired. And the State will acquire them after paying compensation and not expropriate them. That is the real meaning of the clause. But the Zamindars or some of their representatives thought that their interests must be safeguarded by moving an amendment or by making a speech here. But they are not going to safeguard these interests in this way. They must recognize the times and move with the times. This clause here will not become the law tomorrow or the day after; it will take at least a year more, and before that, most of the Zamindaris will be liquidated. Even under the present Acts or laws in the different provinces legislation is being brought in to liquidate Zamindaris either by paying just compensation or adequate compensation or whatever the legislatures there think fit. Therefore, it is wrong to think that this clause is intended really for them. It is not so. The process of acquisition is already there and the legislatures are already taking steps to liquidate the Zamindaris. Therefore, we must not or need not go into the question whether the Zamindars have in the past been patriotic or a nuisance or anything of that kind. It is all irrelevant and we need not go into the past.

There is no amendment to this clause and, therefore, I do not have to say anything by way of answer. I move that the clause as moved by me be passed.

Mr President: I put clause No. 19 to the House.

Clause 19 was adopted.

21. Question of Citizenship

Report of the Ad-hoc Committee on Citizenship and a Note by D.P. Khaitan, 1 May 1947

We have, after full consideration, redrafted the clause relating to citizenship thus:

Every person born in the Union and subject to its jurisdiction; every person either of whose parents was, at the time of such person’s birth, a citizen of the Union; and every person naturalised in the Union shall be a citizen of the Union.

Further provision regarding the acquisition and termination of Union citizenship may be made by the law of the Union.

The inclusion in the clause of children born in the Union even of non-citizens, provided they are subject to Union jurisdiction, is a well-marked feature of Anglo-American public law. This principle has been accepted in the Indian Naturalization Act, 1926. There is some authority for the view that the children of visiting foreigners are on the same footing as the children of foreign ambassadors and would as such be regarded as non-citizens even if born in the Union because of the qualifying phrase ‘and subject to its jurisdiction’. In any event, such cases are likely to be so few and far between that it is unnecessary in our opinion to make a special exception to exclude them from citizenship. As regards the possibility of double nationality, this is a well-known phenomenon, but it can be provided against by appropriate provisions in the Union Naturalization Law calling upon the person concerned to choose one or the other. For this purpose, the clause makes express provision for supplementary legislation terminating citizenship. We recommend that the clause as redrafted by us be adopted.

S. Varadachariar,
Tek Chand,
B.L. Mitter,
A.Krishnaswami Ayyar,
K.N. Katju,
B.R. Ambedkar,
K.M. Munshi.

Notes Submitted to the Ad Hoc Committee
Note on Citizenship Clause by D.P. Khaitan

In the definition of citizenship, I think, it should include that a woman on being married to a citizen of India will automatically become such a citizen. I think generally, it is the law in other countries also. But whether that be so or not, on India having been partitioned, I can visualize that there will be a large number of marriages between citizens of India and citizens of Pakistan. It may be argued that the wife may be naturalized. But the point applies to lakhs of people, most of whom would be illiterate and most others will not have the knowledge as to what citizenship implies and the disqualifications attaching to foreigners, and will further be too lazy to undergo the procedure of naturalization. Further, it would apply to lakhs of people at present inhabiting, for example, West Bengal, and the wives coming from East Bengal. The point also applies to marriages between citizens of India and citizens of Indian States.

As the law is being drafted at present, it is, in my opinion, necessary that this point be cleared up in order that Hindustan may not be full of, what would legally be, foreign women.

22. Discussion on Issues of Citizenship and Language

Extracts from the Proceedings of the Constituent Assembly, 2 May 1947

Mr President: Now there are two clauses that had been referred to a committee of five. We may now take them up one by one. The new clause 3 may now be moved.

Mr K.M. Munshi: I move that the following clause be substituted for the original clause:

'Every person both in the Union and subject to its jurisdiction, every person either of whose parents was at the time of such person's birth, a citizen of the Union, and every person naturalised in the Union shall be a citizen of the Union.

Further provision regarding the acquisition and termination of Union citizenship may be made by the law of the Union.'

The reasons have already been given fully in the Report of the Ad Hoc Committee. I have nothing to add to it.

Sri K. Santhanam: Sir, I move that the following be added at the end of the first paragraph of this clause:

'Every person born or naturalised in India before the commencement of the Union and subject to its jurisdiction shall be a citizen of the Union.'
The necessity for this amendment is simply this: You are conferring citizenship on people who are to be born hereafter and on those who are born citizens on the date the Union comes into existence. That means that unless any of us are born within the territories of the Union, we shall not be citizens. I have consulted Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar. This clause only covers the cases of persons who are born citizens on the day the Union comes into existence. Under the Cabinet Mission Plans, Union territories were expected to be co-extensive with the territories within the frontiers of India. In that case my amendment may not be necessary. But there is the possibility that the Union territory will be much smaller than the present territories. Supposing there is a man in the Union born in Sind. According to this definition he will not be a Union citizen. He will become an alien. Do you want that consequence to happen? I want to say that, at the beginning of the Union, anybody who has been born in India and who is subject to the jurisdiction of the Union, shall be a Union citizen. After the Union has come into existence I have no objection to this clause. Therefore it is a fundamental point. I hope it will be fully considered and, either in this form or in some other form, provision will be made to see that those who are citizens of India at the time of the commencement of the Union are treated as citizens and not deprived of citizenship simply because they are born outside territories of the proposed Union.

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: It is not necessary to consider such questions at this stage. We are at present providing for citizenship for people residing in the Union. Nobody can now say what will be the situation when the Constitution is finally drafted. Nobody can now say whether any part of India is going to be separated from the rest. When finality is reached in regard to these matters we can consider what should be the adjustment to be made between the parts if there are to be parts. It is unnecessary to consider it at this stage. I hope the Mover will withdraw his amendment.

Sri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar (Madras: General): What about persons born in the Union?

The Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel: You will be considered to have been born in the Union when the Constitution is passed.

The Hon’ble Sri C. Rajagopalachariar (Madras: General): The point to be covered is not a ridiculous or simple thing as has been imagined. The Union will consist of defined areas. It may not consist of the whole of India, but of certain parts of India only. Let us admit that. Now I will cite a concrete case. Suppose I am born in Mysore. I am a man who was born in Mysore. Mysore does not join the Union. Let us take it like that. Then, I shall not have been born in the Union according to the clause by any process of legal construction which is to be provided for legally. Therefore it is that it is suggested that any person who is born in any part of India at the time of the commencement of the Union shall be deemed, when by long previous residence he becomes subject to the jurisdiction of the Union, to be a citizen.

This is a very substantial question. Probably under this category will come a considerable section of the present population who should automatically be taken to be citizens of the Union as soon as it is formed? It does not depend merely on a process of interpretation or explanation. It has to be definitely provided for. This has to be considered and included.

Mr R.K. Sidhwa: Sir, as stated by Mr Santhanam, if the position is left as it is, this clause will deprive many persons who are born in the Union, which is going to be defined later on,— hope it will comprise all parts of India—of their rights of citizenship of the Union. What will be their position? I am born in Sind. Supposing Sind is not going to be part of the Union, what will be my position? Am I to lose my citizenship of the Union? That is a point which has to be considered later on. As I said the other day, citizenship right is a fundamental right. Why should a law hereafter provide for that? The right of citizenship has a first place in the Fundamental Rights. Foreigners who come to India for their own personal interest and gain can make an application for citizenship and can get it immediately, whereas those who are born in India will be under a disadvantage. For the foreigners a period of ten years must be mentioned. If the State is satisfied that after ten years they have their stake in India they can have the right of citizenship. This matter was discussed for a number of hours in this Chamber yesterday. We did not like to treat this matter lightly. We wanted to give this matter very serious consideration and you, Sir, were good enough to impress upon those who differed from us the need for giving this matter sufficient consideration and warned us against ignoring it in view of the fact that every person should have the right to become a citizen of this country. After all, we want to be in the Union. We cannot forget that we are Indians, that we were born here. If India is to be divided into parts, what kind of rules are we going to make for citizenship? I consider, Sir, that those who were born here before the Union should be given full guarantee that they are citizens of the Union and that they would not be deprived of their citizenship.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Then, about naturalization. Any man who comes here from a foreign country for his personal gain, for his personal benefit, has only to say, ‘I want to be naturalised’ to become a citizen of the Union. I am born in India but I am to be deprived of my citizenship. A foreigner by simply giving a declaration that he wants to become naturalised, gets all the rights of citizenship.

With due deference to the framers of this clause, I do not think this matter has been given due consideration although it has been stated that:

‘Further provision regarding the acquisition and termination of Union citizenship may be made by the law of the Union.’

I do not want any law to provide for my citizenship. Therefore, this matter should be discussed here, Sir.

Dewan Bahadur Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar: (Madras: General): I think, Sir, there is some force in Mr Santhanam’s argument. We did not, it must be admitted, consider in the Committee this particular question now before the House, but it may not be wise to put in an amendment on the spur of the moment. If a person was a resident of India, and makes the Union his home after the Union comes into existence, in such a case he might get citizenship. The mere accident that he was born in India or British India but not in the Union cannot give him the right of citizenship. We might have to add a further condition to this clause saying that they must make the Union of India their permanent residence.

So far as the term ‘born in the Union’ is concerned, I do not think there need be any difficulty. Union: there is a geographical concept. It is not a political concept. No man can be born in a political concept. ‘Born in the Union’ only means ‘born in the territories comprising the Union’.

There is certainly some force in the objection raised by Mr Santhanam. We do not want suddenly to disenfranchise any persons, possibly very distinguished people born in a Native State but today permanent residents of British India. Therefore, so far as that particular class is concerned, we might consider an appropriate formula. We may not be in a position to give the right of citizenship to every person born in any part of India. Suppose some of the States keep out of the Union, we may have to consider whether we should give the rights of citizenship to the people of those States. Therefore, we will carefully consider this aspect and put in an appropriate clause. In the Committee—I am a member of the Committee and Dr Ambedkar is a member—we did not consider this particular complication that might arise. I think we should not push through an amendment on the spur of the moment.

But so far as the general principle is concerned, there cannot be any exception. ‘Every person born in the Union and subject to the jurisdiction; every person either of whose parents was, at the time of such person’s birth, a citizen of the Union, and every person naturalised in the Union’, so far as that part is concerned, there can be no exception. That was considered by the Committee in all its aspects. This particular class of people which Mr Santhanam mentioned will have to be separately dealt with and provided for. On the understanding that this class of people will be provided for, this clause should be passed, or the whole clause might stand over, I have no objection. But so far as the main principle is concerned, we are all agreed and there is absolutely no difference of opinion. It was discussed threadbare by the Committee which was appointed by this House and we unanimously came to the conclusion that this should be adopted.

Shri M. Ananthasayanam Ayyangar: I do not agree with Sir Alladi. He says that Union means Union territory. The clause says, ‘subject to the jurisdiction thereof’. Is it subject to the jurisdiction of the territory or the Government of the territory? Mere territory is not enough. I therefore urge upon the House to remit this clause for the reconsideration of the Expert Committee.

Diwan Bahadur Sir Alladi Krishnaswami Ayyar: We may have remittance or re-remittance but I do not think that that Committee can throw any additional light on this. If there is any other class to be provided for, we will provide for them. I am merely answering the suggestion of remittal and all that. I was stating that it was not fair to that Committee to remit. This is a political question and not a legal question. We must come to a conclusion on that point. We were only anxious to get the help of that Committee for the purpose of determining the question whether ‘birth’ shall be the foundation of nationality or not, and that Committee has given its opinion. We may have any number of commitals and re-commitals, so far as the Committee of this House is concerned. The Committee which considered this consisted of Members of this House and also persons who are not members of this House. Under these circumstances, I would suggest that we have had all the help from people who are not members of this House and from the gentleman who was the President of that Committee. I do not think it will be fair to that Committee to remit it as if they had not considered any particular aspect of the question. It is a new question that has cropped up before the Committee and let us deal with it squarely. And before we next meet, there will be no difficulty in providing so far as that particular class of cases is concerned. This general principle may be passed and the other clause may be brought in later on or the whole thing may stand over. I am not wedded to either one theory or another, but let it be clearly understood that so far as the main principle is concerned, we accept the recommendation of the Committee presided over by a very distinguished lawyer.

The Hon’ble Sri C. Rajagopalachariar: I am sorry, Sir, the discussion has proceeded on lines which create a certain amount of confusion. I wish that attention should be bestowed on one important and entirely non-controversial matter, namely, that there are numerous persons in India today, who will be within the jurisdiction of the Union, however restricted it may be, however small it may be, who were born in other parts of India and who are now resident within the territories which are going to be in the Union. The formula as it stands today will exclude those large classes of people, not intentionally, but unintentionally. Therefore, the formula has to be corrected. It has to be corrected so as to give automatic citizenship to those large numbers of people who are born in various parts of India, as we today understand it, and who will be old and permanent residents of the areas which will be comprised within the Union. That exclusion would be wholly unintended and wrong. Therefore, the formula has to be revised. I myself believe that it can be revised, if Sir Alladi and Dr Ambedkar sit at it, in the course of 15 minutes; but if it is considered difficult, the whole thing should be remitted, because if we pass a clause like this solemnly in the Constituent Assembly, it cannot be added to afterwards without much ceremonial. I would suggest that it be deferred. Sir Alladi and Dr Ambedkar may meet today, discuss and finish it in a few minutes. If they do not think so, let them take their own time, but it cannot be simply ignored on the ground that it is a small matter. It is too large a matter to be put aside.

Mr K.M. Munshi: Nobody suggests for a moment that this is not an important matter. The Committee did not consider it, but when the original draft was placed this difficulty was present in my mind. But this, as Sir Alladi very rightly said, is not a question of fundamental rights only. It is a question which will have to be decided in future in the setting of the political situation at the time when we finally draft the Constitution. Of course, it is very easy to move an amendment, but we do not know today what is going to be the position of the Union with regard to its territory, whether it is going to be the whole of India, or part of it, or whether some portions are going to be hostile. The second question that has to be considered is whether people born in the Union, who are residing in other parts of India, will have rights as regards citizenship in those territories. An instance was given of Mysore. I will restrict myself to that case. Suppose Mysore stays out of the Union and makes a law like this, that any Indian born in any other part of India, though residing in Mysore for a whole life-time shall not be a citizen. This House will be in a position to consider those intricate problems not merely as a matter of fundamental right but as a question dependent upon the political situation at the time we pass it finally. This fundamental right, as drawn up, is the minimum right, the basic right. The fluctuating situation today is such that you cannot possibly draft any amendment to this clause. Let us, therefore, see the political situation between now and the day when the situation is going to be finally considered. At that time it will be possible to produce a proper formula which will find a place either in the Fundamental Rights or in some other convenient place. It has been said that several fundamental rights are going to be considered hereafter. It has also been said that this is a preliminary draft and any situation arising hereafter will be considered. I, therefore, submit that we should take the clause as it is, and with regard to the amendment of Mr Santhanam, it should be referred to the Advisory Committee together with the other amendments which are going to be referred, so that a proper aspect of the question may be brought before the House again.

Dr B.R. Ambedkar (Bombay: General): Mr President, Sir, I think there can be no doubt that the point raised by Mr Santhanam is a point of great importance and we have to take this matter seriously. The difficulty that has arisen will be seen easily if one reads the very first sentence of the clause as drafted by the Committee. The draft says, ‘every person born in the Union’. Obviously that has reference to future, those who will be born in the Union after the Union is formed. The question is this. What is going to be the position of people who are born in India, but who are born before the Union has come into being? In my judgment, in order to cover that case, we shall have to introduce another clause. I am not suggesting an amendment, I am putting forth an idea. The new clause shall have to be something like this:

‘All persons born in India, as defined in the General Clauses Act and who are residing in the Union and subject to the jurisdiction of the Union shall be citizens of the Union.’

I think that a clause somewhat on these lines is necessary and it will cover the case of people who are born in India, who will be the subjects of the Union, when the Union comes into being. Without this clause, large numbers of people will be denationalised. They will have no nationality at all. I, therefore, suggest that it may be as well to send the whole clause back for further consideration.

Mr President: A suggestion has been made that the whole clause be held over for further consideration.

Mr R.K. Sidhwa: This is not a matter for lawyers only. This question has a bearing on every ordinary person.

Mr President: The Advisory Committee will be free to consider it, and if it so feels, it can put forward any suggestions at the next sitting.

Do I take it that the House agrees that this clause be held over for further consideration?

Many Hon’ble Members: Yes.

Mr President: It is held over....

President’s remarks regarding the resolutions relating to linguistic and cultural provinces and the language of the constitution to be framed.

Mr President: There are one or two matters to which I should like to make a reference. Hon’ble Members will recollect that notice was given of Resolutions regarding the formation of linguistic and cultural provinces by several Members in the last Session of the Assembly and those Resolutions were held over and it was expected that they would be taken up in this Session. But as we have already under Resolution of this House decided to constitute two Committees, one for drawing up the principles of the Union Constitution and another for drawing up a model Constitution for the provinces, I announced the other day that those Committees would take into consideration those Resolutions also. I take it that that would be done and nothing further need be done now regarding those Resolutions.

Then there is one other matter about which I have been feeling a bit worried and I wish to share that worry with the House—not that I expect any answer to it just now but I would like the Members to take that into consideration. All our proceedings are being conducted in English because there are many Members who are not acquainted with the national language and so the drafts also are being prepared in the English language. In the drafts there are many expressions used which may be called terms of art, that is to say, technical language, taken from some constitution or other. Some of these constitutions have been subjected to legal interpretations, and by using that language we are in a way attracting the operation of those interpretations also to our constitution. In future—I do not say immediately, but in the future—a time may come when we shall probably cease to depend upon English as our language, and if the Constitution is passed today in the English language, then that remains the original constitution and any question of interpretation will have to be with reference to the language used in that constitution as it is passed today. The question arises whether we shall continue for ever in future to interpret our Constitution in English language and whether we shall expect our judges in future always to be acquainted with English language so that they might interpret our Constitution in the future. If the Constitution is passed in the English language, I suppose that will be the natural consequence. It is difficult at the present moment to make a suggestion which will resolve this difficulty. I was wondering whether we could have a translation made of this Constitution as it is drafted as soon as it is possible, and ultimately adopt that as our original Constitution. (Cheers). In case of any ambiguity or any difficulty arising as to interpretation, the English copy will also be available for reference, but I would personally like that the original should be in our main language and not in English language, (Loud Cheers), so that our future judges may have to depend upon our own language and not on a foreign language. (Cheers).

As I said, I do not expect an answer to a question like this, but I would like Members to take this matter into consideration, and in the meantime, if I have your permission, I shall try to get the Constitution as it is drafted translated into our language as soon as possible. I realize the difficulty of putting it in a form in which it will have the same interpretation, because appropriate terms of art will not be found in our language and we have naturally to add clauses which will explain those expressions of art. But if I have your permission, we might make an attempt. I am afraid our present staff, the staff we have got for translating these things, is not adequate for this purpose and we shall have to take the help of persons who are really persons of a very high order and who can do that. I do not know if it will be possible for me to do it, but if I have your leave, I might attempt it. I thought I might bring this to your notice for your consideration because, if this Constitution is going to be a Constitution which is expected to last, at any rate, for some time, then we cannot expect to have it in a language which is not our language. We must provide for a time when we shall have to depend on our own language, and that, at a not very distant date. Therefore I have brought this to the notice of the House so that Members might also take this into consideration and offer their suggestions, if not today, at least at a later stage before we have actually finalized our Constitution.

(Mr President at this stage rose to speak.)

Mr President: I did not expect any discussion on this. I simply expressed what I was feeling and I expect this thing would be taken into consideration at a later stage.

There is one other matter.

Shri Vishwambhar Dayal Tripathi (United Provinces: General): In this connection I have to....

The Hon'ble Mr B.G. Kher (Bombay: General): On a point of order, Sir. This is discussing.

Mr President: Anyway, let him finish.

Shri Vishwambhar Dayal Tripathi: I do not wish to say any thing in this connection. But rules provide that all the proceedings of the Assembly, for example, agenda, and other things, will be supplied to Members in Hindustani. True, there are difficulties. Nevertheless it is very important. I would request that some arrangements should positively be made for this in future.
Mr President: Yes. I tell you why this could not be done. Our Hindustani staff was not yet complete but arrangements are being made and I think it should be possible to arrange for it at an early date.

Shri Balkrishna Sharma (United Provinces: General): Without in any way going against the orders which have already been given in regard to the subject, may I just know whether the arrangement that is going to be made for the translation of the Constitution in our language will be in Hindi, Urdu or will be in a language which will be a conglomeration of both?

Mr President: It will be in a language which will be intelligible. (Laughter).

Mr President: Then, one other matter which I think we have to decide, that is, the next session of the Assembly. At the last session the House passed a Resolution fixing the month of April for this meeting. I would suggest that instead of fixing any date or even a month the House should leave it to me to fix the time of the next meeting.

Hon'ble Members: Yes.

Mr President: I can give this undertaking that I shall do it as soon as I feel that we have got material ready for the meeting.

Sri K. Santhanam: I suggest, Sir, that a formal motion to this effect may be moved.

Mr President: That is what I am also suggesting. A formal motion may be moved.

Shri Vishwambhar Dayal Tripathi: In this connection, I would like to add....

Mr President: Let this be over.

Mr Satyanarayan Sinha: Mr President, Sir, I move that this Constituent Assembly do adjourn till such date as the President may fix.

Mr President: The motion is that the Constituent Assembly do adjourn till such date as the President may fix. Do I take it that the House accepts the proposition?

The motion was adopted.

Mr R.K. Sidhwa: I wish to make one request. That is, now that the date has been left to you, Sir, will you kindly see that the agenda is supplied to us in sufficient time at our residence, so that we may study it?

Mr President: I have told you at the very beginning that I will fix the time when I have got the material ready for discussion.

(To Mr Tripathi), You wanted to say something.

Shri Vishwambhar Dayal Tripathi: I have only to repeat what Mr Sidhwa has said before you and nothing else.

Mr President: I think we have now finished our work. So the House now stands adjourned till such time as I may fix.

The Constituent Assembly then adjourned till such time as the President might fix.
23. Socialist Party Members to Join the Constituent Assembly if Invited Letter from Jayaprakash Narayan to Jawaharlal Nehru, 3 May 1947

My dear Bhai,

As you are very busy I have not thought it proper to take your time.

I am writing to inform you that the National Executive of the Socialist Party has now allowed, in the changed circumstances, its members to join the Constituent Assembly if invited to do so. If it is proposed to take some members from our group to fill up the vacancies that are to be created, I should like to recommend the following names: Acharya Narendra Deva, Aruna Asaf Ali, Rammanohar Lohia, Purushottam Trikamdas, Kamaladevi, Rao Patwardhan, Asoka Mehta, among others. Achyut is not in India, but if he comes back in time, he too should be included.

I should like my name to be left out. I am saying this not out of modesty, but I do not have the time to attend to fresh tasks nor have I the aptitude for this kind of work.

I have hesitated to write this letter, for it goes against my grain to ask for things. Had I to write to somebody else, I am sure the letter would have been unwritten.

With love and regards,

Yours,

Jayaprakash

24. No Interference in Socio-religious Institutions of Jains
Extracts from the Memorandum to the Minorities Sub-committee by the Jain Swetambar Conference, 7 May 1947

... 2. The Working Committee of the All India Jain Swetambar Conference at their meeting held in Bombay on the 21st March 1947 considered the position of the Jains in the political life of the country and the question whether any safeguards were necessary to be provided in the constitutions of the Union and the Provinces which are being forged by the Constituent Assembly with great desire to treat all the communities in the country with justice and equity and fair play, to protect the interests of the Jain community and passed a resolution that a representation should be made to the Constituent Assembly for that purpose and authorized us to make this representation. In accordance with the resolution and in conformity with the discussion and opinions expressed at the meeting we beg to submit this memorial for the consideration of the Constituent Assembly.

3. Though the Jains are racially Hindus and have their culture which is very much common with the Hindus, their religious philosophy, belief, customs and practices have considerably influenced their thought, their actions and their mode of life; and this influence has been so marked that they have been recognized as a distinct community and their culture also as distinct from others.

4. Their world famous temples on Shatrunjaya and Girnar in Kathiawar, at Dilwara on Mount Abu and on Sametsikhar or Parasnath Hills in Bihar and their other places of pilgrimage all over the country and particularly in Bihar, Kathiawar, Gujarat and in Central and Southern India, their ancient libraries (Pustak Bhandars), their literature both religious and secular, their religious orders, their religious and socio-religious institutions, their trusts and their charitable institutions are a rich and priceless heritage which they cherish and desire to preserve. They desire that in the management and administration of these institutions there should be no interference of other persons who do not understand their sentiments and susceptibilities and the ideas and ideals behind them. Your Honour will appreciate that this desire of the Jains is just and proper and reasonable.

5. In the interests of the unity of the country which is of supreme importance and especially so at the present critical moment of the country’s destiny, the Jains have decided not to ask for any separate representation in the legislative, executive or administrative institutions of the country nor to claim any separate political rights for them. They have thrown their lot with the other Hindus and have decided to stand together and work together and co-operate with all other communities in the country for the common good of all. The Jains have made their contribution and a very valuable contribution too in the country’s life; and they do want to serve the country for the common good. But they often feel that their interests have been neglected or over-looked and that they have suffered by reason of their having no influence and effective voice in the governance of the country. This feeling has at times tempted them to ask for and claim a separate representation. But at this supreme moment of the country’s destiny they do not desire to strike a discordant note. They hope that by their industry, ability and service they will occupy their proper place in the political, social and economic life of the country and enjoy their proper share in the common good. However there is a common feeling in the community that there should be no interference by others in their religious or socio-religious institutions as stated above.

6. We may here cite some instances where such interferences were either made or sought to be made. In Bihar, during the regime of the popular Ministry in 1938 a Bill called ‘Bihar Hindu Religious Endowments Bill’ was introduced with the object of preventing mismanagement of the Hindu temples and maths and other charitable institutions in Bihar. It was also made applicable to the Jain temples and other institutions. When we examined the Bill it was found that there were many clauses in the Bill which went beyond the said object. There were provisions for the appointment of a committee by the Government with powers to make and sanction budgets for the administration of the temples and institutions covered by the Bill. This surely was an interference which the Jains resented. Besides, on the committee consisting of about twelve members there was only one seat provided for the Jains. Your Honour will appreciate that such a committee consisting mostly of persons who are not Jains cannot understand the religious sentiments and the ideas and ideals behind the various institutions so as to make or sanction a proper budget. Our Working Committee had made a representation to the Bihar Government and had also joined in an All India deputation which had an interview with the Prime Minister and other Ministers concerned at Ranchi. Thereafter as the ministry resigned, the Bill was dropped. The Jains however apprehend that in future some such legislation may be introduced.

7. In Bombay an Act popularly called the Beggars Act was passed about year ago. In the said Act the definition of the term ‘beggar’ is made so wide that some of us were of the opinion that it would cover a Jain Sadhu. Our Working Committee thereupon made a representation to the Government seeking to expressly make an exception in case of a Jain Sadhu whose activity for collecting his food it was not and it could not be the intention of the legislature to prevent. The Government replied that they had instructed the police not to interfere with the Jain Sadhu going about to collect his food. However the Government was not pleased to grant even such a reasonable and just request to provide for a legislative exemption in favour of a Jain Sadhu. Now the position of the Jain Sadhu in respect of the provisions of the said Act is precarious. He has to depend upon the mercy of the executive.

8. These instances have caused grave apprehension in the mind of the Jain community that in future legislation there may be such interferences with their institutions.

9. We have therefore to request Your Honour to consider this matter in the Constituent Assembly and to make suitable provision in the declaration of fundamental rights in the Union or Provincial constitutions either generally or specially granting protection to the Jain community against such interferences in future. We submit that no law interfering with the management or administration of the Jain temples and places of pilgrimage, their religious orders of Sadhus and Sadvis, their literature and Pustak Bhandars, their trusts and other religious and charitable institutions, their art and architecture, should be enacted which has not the approval of the community.
Chapter 14. Interim Government

1. Gandhi’s Plan: Jinnah to Form Government

Louis Mountbatten’s Note on His Meeting with M.K. Gandhi, 1 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

TOP SECRET

Mr Gandhi asked if he might take a walk round the Viceroy’s garden at 9 o’clock, which he did accompanied by Rajkumari Amrit Kaur. Her Excellency went to meet him and accompanied him for part of the walk.

I met him at 9.30 as arranged, and we drew up chairs in the garden and continued our conversations.

He gave me his views on the origin of Hindu-Muslim animosity, and though he did not hold the British responsible for its origin, he said their policy of ‘Divide and Rule’ had kept the tension very much alive, and that I should now reap what my predecessors had deliberately sown.

He urged me whatever happened to have the courage to see the truth and act by it, even though the correct solution might mean grievous loss of life on our departure on an unprecedented scale.

Finally, he gave me the first brief summary of the solution which he wishes me to adopt:
Mr Jinnah should forthwith be invited to form the Central Interim Government with members of the Muslim League. This Government to operate under the Viceroy in the way the present Interim Government is operating. Any difficulty experienced through Congress having a majority in the Assembly to be overcome by their able advocacy of the measures they wished to introduce.

I need not say that this solution coming at this time staggered me. I asked ‘What would Mr Jinnah say to such a proposal?’ The reply was ‘If you tell him I am the author he will reply “Wily Gandhi”.’ I then remarked ‘And I presume Mr Jinnah will be right?’ To which he replied with great fervour ‘No, I am entirely sincere in my suggestion.’

At this moment the ADC reported that the Tibetan Mission had arrived, and our conversation therefore had to be terminated until the following day.

I did however obtain Mr Gandhi’s permission to discuss the matter with Pandit Nehru and Maulana Azad, in strict confidence, the next time they came to see me.

M.

Addendum

During the course of the discussion Mr Gandhi gave it as his considered opinion as a student of history and of world politics that never before, in any case of history he had read about in recent or past times, had so difficult or responsible a task been imposed on any one man as that which now faced me. I thanked him sincerely for realizing the position in which I was placed.

M.

2. Maulana Azad on Gandhi’s Offer to Jinnah to Form Government

Record of Louis Mountbatten’s Interview with Maulana Azad, 2 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

TOP SECRET

The meeting lasted from 5 to 5.45 p.m. I introduced him to Mr Campbell-Johnson.

I told him straight away of Gandhi’s plan, of which he already knew from Gandhi that morning.

He staggered me by saying that in his opinion it was perfectly feasible of being carried out, since Gandhi could unquestionably influence the whole of Congress to accept it and work it loyally. He further thought that there was a chance I might get Jinnah to accept it, and he thought that such a plan would be the quickest way to stop bloodshed, and the simplest way of turning over power.

When questioned categorically whether he preferred Gandhi’s plan to the Cabinet Mission plan, he had to admit that if a whole-hearted acceptance by all parties of the Cabinet Mission plan came about, this would be preferable to the Gandhi plan.

I mentioned the other alternative which I had put to Mr Gandhi an hour before, and he thought this also a very good alternative.

In fact Maulana Azad said that the sooner a decision could be taken and implemented, and the longer I could remain at the Centre to get things straightened out and running smoothly before I left, the better for the future of India.

I invited him to criticize my method of handling the Cabinet, and he was so complimentary that I had to accuse him of gross flattery and begged him to give me sincere constructive criticism. He replied he was absolutely sincere, and that he was certain that that view was shared by every Member of the Cabinet.

(Note. I realize that every Member of my Cabinet is probably out to ingratiate himself and his party, and that this form of flattery is to be expected at this stage.)

3. Jinnah to Be First Given the Option of Forming a Cabinet

Outline of a Draft Agreement by M.K. Gandhi as Dictated to H.L. Ismay, 4 April 1947

1. Mr Jinnah to be given the option of forming a Cabinet.
2. The selection of the Cabinet is left entirely to Mr Jinnah. The members may be all Muslims, or all non-Muslims, or they may be representatives of all classes and creeds of the Indian people.
3. If Mr Jinnah accepted this offer, the Congress would guarantee to co-operate freely and sincerely, so long as all the measures that Mr Jinnah’s Cabinet bring forward are in the interests of the Indian people as a whole.
4. The sole referee of what is or is not in the interests of India as a whole will be Lord Mountbatten, in his personal capacity.

5. Mr Jinnah must stipulate, on behalf of the League or of any other parties represented in the Cabinet formed by him that, so far as he or they are concerned, they will do their utmost to preserve peace throughout India.

6. There shall be no National Guards or any other form of private army.

7. Within the framework hereof Mr Jinnah will be perfectly free to present for acceptance a scheme of Pakistan even before the transfer of power, provided however, that he is successful in his appeal to reason and not to the force of arms which he abjures for all time for this purpose. Thus, there will be no compulsion in this matter over a province or a part thereof.

8. In the Assembly the Congress has a decisive majority. But the Congress shall never use that majority against the League policy simply because of its identification with the League but will give its hearty support to every measure brought forward by the League Government, provided that it is in the interest of the whole of India. Whether it is in such interest or not shall be decided by Lord Mountbatten as man and not in his representative capacity.

9. If Mr Jinnah rejects this offer, the same offer to be made mutatis mutandis to Congress.

4. Gandhi's Scheme Impractical

Extract from a Note by V.P. Menon, Undated (c. 4 April 1947)
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

Gandhi is not being quite fair to HE when he puts forward his proposal that the selection of the Cabinet for an Interim Government should be left entirely to Jinnah. He knows full well that similar offers have been made by him in the past and that Jinnah never took them seriously....

5. There is no reason to suppose that Jinnah will now accept an offer which he has rejected previously. If he forms a Government composed entirely of Muslim League nominees, that Government will find itself facing a predominant Congress majority in the Central Legislature from which Jinnah has to get his essential legislation and supply. On the other hand, if there is a coalition, it will have to be formed on conditions more acceptable to the Congress than to the League. In either event, the assurance of co-operation by the Congress is more a wishful thinking and would certainly place Jinnah in the position of having to adjust his views to those of the Congress. This is perhaps not unintended by Gandhi. In a Legislature where the Congress has got predominant representation, the question whether a 'particular proposal is in the interests of the Indian people' will in practice be decided by that party. The fact that HE as the arbitrator has decided on a particular course of action will not help Jinnah either with the Legislature or with the public....

7. According to Gandhi's proposal, Jinnah is at liberty to plan for Pakistan and even to put his plans into effect provided that he is successful in appealing to reason and does not use force. This is asking for the impossible. If Jinnah could persuade the Sikhs and Hindus of the Punjab and Hindus of Bengal to join Pakistan, he would automatically get his Pakistan without joining the Interim Government on dubious terms. On the other hand, if Jinnah still persists in his scheme of separation, he will be giving his case away by entering the Central Government. This was the main motive which induced him to keep out of the Central Government in the past and, as a matter of fact, he has never attached any importance to effective participation on the side of the Muslim League in the present Interim Government.

8. It is Gandhi's habit to make propositions, leaving many of their implications unsaid, and this method of negotiation has put him and the Congress in difficult positions in the past. For example, there is no reference here to the Muslim League participation in the Constituent Assembly. If Jinnah were to accept his proposal, Gandhi probably takes it for granted that the Muslim League would enter the Constituent Assembly. It seems to me clear therefore that the present proposals do not expose his full mind.

9. Since the Cabinet Delegation's visit last year, Gandhi is out of accord with the policy of the Congress Working Committee as well as the members of the Interim Government on several questions of major importance. It should not therefore be taken for granted that his present proposals will carry the support of either the Congress Working Committee or of Nehru and Patel.

10. It is suggested that if Jinnah rejects the offer the same offer is to be made mutatis mutandis to the Congress. It should be borne in mind that all the factors which have been mentioned as working to the disadvantage of Jinnah will for the same reason work to the advantage of the Congress. HE's main task is to find a solution to the present deadlock between the League and the Congress. It is no solution to suggest that power should be transferred to the Congress to the exclusion of the Muslim League. If the proposition were as simple as that, it would have been solved long ago.

5. Gandhi Amends Draft Outline of Plan

Letter from M.K. Gandhi to H.L. Ismay, 5 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 82A, NMML.

Dear Lord Ismay,

Pandit Nehru gave me what you have described as an outline of a scheme. What I read is merely a copy of the points I hurriedly dictated whereas, as I understood from HE the Viceroy, you were to prepare a draft agreement after the line of the points I had dictated. Of course, you were at liberty to amend them, add to them and omit what you wished to omit.

I had a chat with Pandit Nehru twice during the day, the second time when he handed a copy of the outline at 5 p.m.

The 7th point should read thus:

‘Within the framework hereof Mr Jinnah will be perfectly free to present for acceptance a scheme of Pakistan, even before the transfer of power, provided however, that he is successful in his appeal to reason and not to the force of arms which he abjures for all time for this purpose. Thus, there will be no compulsion in this matter over a Province or part thereof.’

What I could not recall yesterday I now recall. The 8th will read as follows:

‘In the Assembly the Congress has a decisive majority. But the Congress shall never use that majority against the League policy simply because of its identification with the League but will give its hearty support to every measure brought forward by the League Government, provided that it is in the interest of the whole of India. Whether it is in such interest or not shall be decided by Lord Mountbatten as man and not in his representative capacity.’
I have finished dictating this at 8.45 p.m. I am anxious that it reaches you tonight. Therefore, I have only made manifest correction and addition. The outline is by no means complete. When a draft agreement is prepared, many other points which should occur to any draftsman will have to be covered.

I must add that Pandit Nehru has at least one vital objection to the outline. But I will not tax you with its mention here. If the outline appears workable to HE I would like to wait on him once more and discuss Pandit Nehru’s objections. Before putting it before Jinnah I would like to show it to a few friends.

Yours sincerely,
M.K. GANDHI

6. Officials Consider Gandhi’s Scheme Unworkable
Minutes of the Viceroy’s Ninth Staff Meeting, 5 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 200A, NMML.

TOP SECRET
Those present during this discussion which took place at the end of The Viceroy’s Ninth Staff Meeting held at The Viceroy’s House, New Delhi on 5 April 1947 at 10 am were: Rear-Admiral Viscount Mountbatten of Burma, Lord Ismay, Sir E. Mieville, Mr Abell, Captain Brockman, Mr Campbell-Johnson, Lieutenant-Colonel Erskine Crum LORD ISMAY said that he had spent an hour with Mr Gandhi the previous day after the latter’s interview with the Viceroy. He had reduced to writing an outline of Mr Gandhi’s scheme for an Interim Government pending the transfer of power. The salient features of this scheme were that Mr Jinnah was to be given the option of forming a Cabinet of his own selection; and that if he rejected this offer, the same offer should be made mutatis mutandis to Congress.

LORD ISMAY said that he had sent copies of this outline to Sir Eric Mieville, Mr Abell and Rao Bahadur Menon, and after a meeting with them on the subject, Rao Bahadur Menon had rendered a note containing criticism of the scheme. It was clear that Mr Gandhi’s plan was not a new one. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY pointed out that Mr Gandhi had made no attempt to disguise this fact.

LORD ISMAY said that, after their talk the previous evening, he, Sir Eric Mieville, Mr Abell and Rao Bahadur Menon had come to the unanimous conclusion that Mr Gandhi’s scheme was not workable. It would put the Viceroy in an impossible position; Mr Jinnah’s Government would be completely at the mercy of the Congress majority; every single legislative or political measure would be brought up to the Viceroy for decision and every action the Viceroy took after the initial stages would be misrepresented. LORD ISMAY pointed out in support of this belief that Mr Gandhi the previous day had accused Sir Evan Jenkins of responsibility for the present situation in the Punjab; Sir Olaf Caroe of responsibility for the present North-West Frontier troubles; Sir Francis Mudie of excessive support of the Muslim League Government in Sind; and the whole Civil Service and Indian Political Service of all manner of sins, including corruption....

LORD ISMAY said that Mr Gandhi’s proposition had already been put up to Mr Jinnah who had rejected it and would do so again. He wondered whether Mr Gandhi would now take any further steps on the scheme outside.
HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that Mr Gandhi’s scheme was undoubtedly wild except for the fact of Mr Gandhi’s amazing personal influence which might induce Congress to accept it. A main danger in his opinion was that Mr Gandhi might die—then the scheme would completely break down. He had made it quite clear to Mr Gandhi, during one of their talks, that he was not going to be a party to any manoeuvre whereby he would make an offer to Mr Jinnah which the latter was likely to refuse. Mr Gandhi had quite sincerely stated that he would prefer Mr Jinnah to form a Government, but had insisted on the inclusion of the clause that if Mr Jinnah rejected the offer it must thereafter be made to Congress.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he had told Mr Gandhi that he intended to formulate all conceivable workable alternative plans for the future of India, talk over them all with the different Indian leaders and finally discuss them at the projected meeting at Simla. He intended to inform Mr Jinnah of Mr Gandhi’s scheme, and all the other alternatives, at an early stage so that he could discuss it with the other leading Muslim League personalities before the Simla house party. He felt that Mr Jinnah should be told all the possible plans and that there should be no manoeuvring....

LORD ISMAY, SIR ERIC MIEVILLE and MR. ABELL all agreed that it was desirable that the Indian leaders should not be asked to give their written acceptance of the selected plan. MR. ABELL pointed out that, if Mr Gandhi went to Congress with his offer, it would put the Muslim League in a very awkward position. Therefore, he did not consider that Mr Gandhi’s scheme should be ranked as a possible solution.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that, nevertheless, it would serve to remain as a frightening alternative to Mr Jinnah. It would not be very easy for Mr Jinnah to refuse Mr Gandhi’s offer. Basically, Mr Gandhi’s object was to retain the unity of India and basically he was right in this. Mr Gandhi honestly considered that the only hope of unity came from Coalition Government. He thought that the present Coalition Government was functioning very creakily. He felt that the Muslims’ fear must be removed before it could be made to work better. Once the British had handed over to a unified India, Mr Gandhi doubtless thought that the Indians themselves would be able to adjust matters and set up some sort of Pakistan, if necessary. Mr Gandhi’s viewpoint was that, since it was impossible to get Mr Jinnah to agree to Congress running the Interim Government, the only way was to get Mr Jinnah to run it himself and for him (Mr Gandhi) to use his great influence to induce Congress to accept that....

SIR ERIC MIEVILLE reverted to the point that there was a possibility of Mr Gandhi, putting up his scheme prematurely to Congress and possibly passing a resolution on it through the Congress Working Committee. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he would talk about this with Pandit Nehru that day. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY:

(i) invited C.V.S. and Pers. Sec. to prepare an appreciation on the various possible solutions;
(ii) directed Pers. Sec. to include in his next letter to the Secretary of State an outline of his present thoughts on the future timetable;
(iii) decided to talk to Pandit Nehru that afternoon about Mr Gandhi’s scheme.
7. Speculation on Gandhi’s Scheme

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and V.K. Krishna Menon, 5 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

TOP SECRET

Mr Menon, whom I saw twice in London before coming out, came to see me at 12.15 and stayed to lunch at 1.15.

I asked him categorically whether Mr Gandhi’s scheme of turning over the Central Government to Mr Jinnah could be made to work.

Mr Menon replied emphatically, but with due consideration for Mr Gandhi, that he was afraid that not even Mr Gandhi could put this particular scheme through; even if Mr Jinnah could be made to accept it.

8. A Revised Copy of the Draft Outline of Gandhi’s Scheme

Letter from H.L. Ismay to M.K. Gandhi, 6 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 82A, NMML.

Dear Mr Gandhi,

Thank you for your letter of 5th April. It was very kind of you to dictate it at such a late hour in order that it might reach me last night.

I think that there has been some misunderstanding about the form of the short note which I prepared last Friday. As I understood it, Lord Mountbatten, on the conclusion of his talk with you, asked if you would be so good as to spare a little more time for a talk with me about your plan, in order that I might prepare a short note summarizing its salient features in general terms. He had no intention, so far as I knew, that I should attempt anything formal or elaborate. I have now shown him your letter and he confirms that my interpretation of his wishes was correct.

I have prepared a revised copy of my note substituting your version of point 7 for the original and including your point 8. This covers much the same ground as my original points 3 and 4, which therefore now become redundant.

Lord Mountbatten has asked me to say that he much looks forward to having another talk with you about your plan before you leave.

May I conclude with an expression of my personal thanks for having spared me so much of your time last Friday.

Yours sincerely,

ISMAY

P.S.: The Viceroy assures you that he will not mention your plan to Mr Jinnah until he has had a further talk about it with you.

OUTLINE OF A SCHEME FOR AN INTERIM GOVERNMENT PENDING TRANSFER OF POWER

1. Mr Jinnah to be given the option of forming a Cabinet.
2. The selection of the Cabinet is left entirely to Mr Jinnah. The members may be all Moslems, or all non-Moslems, or they may be representatives of all classes and creeds of the Indian people.
3. If Mr Jinnah accepted this offer, the Congress would guarantee to co-operate freely and sincerely, so long as all the measures that Mr Jinnah’s Cabinet bring forward are in the interests of the Indian people as a whole.

4. The sole referee of what is or is not in the interests of India as a whole will be Lord Mountbatten, in his personal capacity.

5. Mr Jinnah must stipulate, on behalf of the League or of any other parties represented in the Cabinet formed by him that, so far as he or they are concerned, they will do their utmost to preserve peace throughout India.

6. There shall be no National Guards or any other form of private army.

7. Within the framework hereof Mr Jinnah will be perfectly free to present for acceptance a scheme of Pakistan, even before the transfer of power, provided, however, that he is successful in his appeal to reason and not to the force of arms which he abjures for all time for this purpose. Thus, there will be no compulsion in this matter over a Province or part thereof.

8. In the Assembly the Congress has a decisive majority. But the Congress shall never use that majority against the League policy simply because of its identification with the League, but will give its hearty support to every measure brought forward by the League Government, provided that it is in the interest of the whole of India. Whether it is in such interest or not shall be decided by Lord Mountbatten as a man and not in his representative capacity.

9. If Mr Jinnah rejects this offer, the same offer to be made mutatis mutandis to Congress.

---

9. Mountbatten Clarifies His Position on Gandhi’s Scheme

Letter from Louis Mountbatten to M.K. Gandhi, 7 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 82A, NMML.

Ismay has shown me your letter to him of 6th April, and we both are most upset to think that any act, or omission, on our part should in any way increase the great burden you are bearing. I therefore think it right to send you the following personal explanation.

As we were parting last Friday afternoon, I said that your plan had many attractions for me and I asked you if you would be so good as to explain it to Ismay, who had not been present when you first propounded it. On your agreeing to do so, I asked Ismay to make a note of its salient features, and I authorized him to talk it over in confidence with the Reforms Commissioner. I am extremely sorry if by these observations I gave you the impression that I wished your plan reduced to the terms of a formal agreement.

As I explained to you during the many talks that we have enjoyed, my aim has been and is to keep a perfectly open mind until I have had the advantages of discussions with important Indian’ political leaders with the object of seeking an agreement between all parties so that peace can be restored in the country and an acceptable basis for the transfer of power be worked out. When these preliminary conversations have been completed, I shall then have to make up my mind as to what I am going to recommend to His Majesty’s Government and, before I do so, I shall most certainly take advantage of your kind offer of further discussion with you.
10. Nehru on Gandhi’s Offer to Jinnah and Other Political Solutions

Extract from Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Jawaharlal Nehru, 8 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

TOP SECRET

The meeting lasted from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Lord Ismay showed him his correspondence with Mr Gandhi and explained the present position about the Gandhi plan. I asked Pandit Nehru to convey to Mr Gandhi a message explaining that I could not yet say anything further about the Plan since I was still busy getting background information.

We then discussed with Pandit Nehru what his solution would be for the transfer of power. He thought that it would not be right to impose any form of constitutional conditions on any community that had a majority in any specific area. Thus, if we were to demit Province by Province, he felt they should have the right to decide whether to join a Hindustan Group, a Pakistan Group, or possibly even remain completely independent. He added that of course before such a thing were done the Punjab and Bengal would have to be split into separate Provinces.

In reply to a question about how to obtain the real views of the people of the N.W.F.P. on which Group they wished to join he suggested that a fresh election should be held after a statement had been made.

The whole thing revolved round having a strong Centre, certainly to begin with, and for that reason Pandit Nehru would favour making a statement soon and transferring power to Provinces while there was still time for me to be in charge at the Centre to help in the early stages of negotiations at the Centre.

He agreed that a formula would have to be found which would prevent the Congress Party from being able to impose their will upon the Army by majority vote, if the Army were kept as a single Service under the Centre.

We also discussed the question of the States, and came to the provisional conclusion that Pakistan should be encouraged to set up their own Constituent Assembly, and the States should choose into which Constituent Assembly they would come.

Nehru thought that the only way the Gandhi plan could be made use of was by offering the premiership of the Interim Government to Jinnah, with the object of strengthening the central authority until the handing over of power in June 1948.

11. Gandhi Withdraws His Plan

Letter from M.K. Gandhi to Louis Mountbatten, 11 April 1947

Dear Friend,

I had several short talks with Pandit Nehru and an hour’s talk with him alone, and then with several members of the Congress Working Committee last night, about the formula I had sketched before you and which I had filled in for them with all the implications. I am sorry to say that I failed to carry any of them with me except Badshah Khan.

I do not know that, having failed to carry both the head and heart of Pandit Nehru with me, I would have wanted to carry the matter further. But Panditji was so good that he would not be satisfied until the whole plan was discussed with the few members of the Congress Working Committee who were present. I felt sorry that I could not convince them of the correctness of my plan from every point of view. Nor could they dislodge me from my position although I had not closed my mind against every argument. Thus, I have to ask you to omit me from your consideration. Congressmen, who are in the Interim Government are stalwarts, seasoned servants of the nation and, therefore so far as the Congress point of view is concerned, they will be complete advisers.

I would still love to take the place that the late C.F. Andrews took. He represented no one but himself. And, if you ever need my service on its merits, it will be always at your disposal.

In the circumstances above mentioned, subject to your consent, I propose, if possible, to leave tomorrow for Patna.

I have not forgotten the book about tribal expeditions. I have not yet been able to lay my hands on it, for I cannot recall the name of the author nor the year in which I read the book. As I told you, it was years ago in South Africa that I came across it. My search will continue wherever I am and as soon as I trace the book, it shall be sent to you.

I must confess a slip of memory I am answerable for in the course of our talks. I was wrong in connecting Sir Francis Mudie with the late Pandit Nehru. The incident I referred to was in connection with ‘Muddiman’, not ‘Mudie’. The charge, almost universally believed by Congressmen against the present Governor of Sind, remains unaltered, in spite of my slip of memory.

I hope these constant interviews are not proving an unbearable strain.

Yours sincerely,
M.K. Gandhi

12. Gandhi and Mountbatten’s Discussions on Political Situation
Note of Louis Mountbatten’s Interview with M.K. Gandhi, 12 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

TOP SECRET

The meeting lasted from 11.45 a.m. to 1.45 p.m.

I thanked him for the letter he had sent me the previous day saying that he had been unable to get his great plan for a Jinnah government through responsible members of Congress, and had therefore had to withdraw it. He regretted his failure very much, but said he thought I could still go ahead on the plan myself if I ardently believed in it.

I told him that however much I believed in it I couldn’t possibly go ahead and with success in a matter in which he had already failed himself with the Congress.

I then told him I wanted to report to him in strict confidence all my conversations with Mr Jinnah, to put him in the picture.

I then said that although my mind was still open I was now particularly studying two alternative solutions: (a) the Cabinet Mission plan; (b) a truncated Pakistan. I asked him how much he personally favoured a united India, and of course he said he was extremely anxious for it. I asked him how far he thought Congress would go towards accepting the Cabinet Mission plan, and warned him that Mr Jinnah was bitterly opposed to the Cabinet Mission plan and therefore Congress would have to go at least as far as Mr Jinnah wanted before he would even consider it.
Mr Gandhi said that the whole bone of contention was the interpretation of the meaning of the Cabinet Mission plan, and he suggested that I should call in the High Court to interpret it. I told him that the differences of opinion had already been resolved by the statement of the Cabinet of the 6th December; but he held that the people who drafted the statement were not the people who had to interpret it, and gave as an analogy Acts of Parliament. He said that if a difference of opinion arose as to the meaning of a particular clause in law, it was the judge who settled the meaning and who interpreted the law and not the people who framed the law. He seemed convinced that Congress would accept any interpretation the High Court gave.

I told him I did not see how we could possibly have a different interpretation put on the meaning of the Cabinet Mission plan to that which the Cabinet Mission themselves had announced on December the 6th after taking legal advice.

I then discussed the joint statement calling for a truce and a denunciation of the use of force to obtain political ends. He said he would gladly sign the statement shown to him or any similar statement if Mr Jinnah and I wished him to do so; though he must point out that the statement, to have any value, should be signed by Mr Kripalani on behalf of the Congress as a whole.

He said he had told Pandit Nehru that if indeed I could get Mr Jinnah to sign and abide by this statement, I should have taken the greatest step politically in the recent history of India, and one which he hoped he had been instrumental in putting into my head. Although I have absolutely no recollection of Mr Gandhi making any such suggestion, I felt it would be politic not to point this out. For although I believed it to have been my own idea I am only too delighted that he should take the credit.

In the meanwhile Lord Ismay came down at my request with the Cabinet Mission plan and the Statement of December the 6th. Mr Gandhi appeared never to have read this statement although he knew of its existence. He thought he was at Noakhali at the time and did not have time to read it. After reading it very carefully he came back to his original point of view that the Cabinet Mission statement should be submitted to the High Court for interpretation, and he felt sure the Congress would abide by their decision.

Lord Ismay pointed out that it was less a matter of finding out what the actual legal interpretation was than of ascertaining what common interpretation would be acceptable both to the Muslim League and Congress; and to this Mr Gandhi unreservedly agreed.

Meanwhile he called upon me to renounce the use of the British Army, and said that he included the British officers of the Indian Army in that term; in other words any of the armed forces under my orders.

I pointed out that except for the Punjab, which is under a Section 93 Government, in all other Provinces it was the local Government that called out the troops, and that if he wanted that practice to stop, why didn’t he make a start by talking to the Congress Government in Bihar where he was off to that evening. He said sadly he had already spoken to them, and that if they had had a strong conviction of non-violence they would offer themselves as sacrifices rather than allow these massacres to continue or trying to stop them by the use of troops.

I did not altogether follow his argument here, and may have misquoted him. But since it appeared to be purely academic, and a matter he was going to put before the local Congress Govt in Bihar, I did not pursue it.

He then said that he advised me to go on strengthening the Interim Government, and making them function correctly for the next 14 months; after which he considered I should hand over power to the Interim Government. This staggered Lord Ismay and myself, and we both pointed out that that meant handing over power to one party, namely Congress, to the grave disadvantage of the other party, the Muslim League, which would not fail to produce strife, possibly leading to civil war.

Mr Gandhi, with a wily smile, pointed out that if Mr Jinnah indeed signed the paper we were sending round to him he could not again use force for political purposes.

I must say I was speechless to find that he proposed, if Mr Jinnah indeed meant to both sign and stick to the statement, to take advantage of this to impose a Congress Government over the Muslims. Here again I find it hard to believe that I correctly understood Mr Gandhi.

Finally, after substituting the word ‘communities’ instead of ‘peoples’ and having the declaration of truce retyped, Mr Gandhi appended his signature in all three scripts: English, Urdu and Gujerati; and Lord Ismay took the paper for Sir Eric Mieville to take round to Mr Jinnah.

13. Patel Demands Resignation of League Members
Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 1 May 1947
SPC, Vol. IV, pp. 146–7.

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

I am enclosing a copy of the report of the speech of the Hon’ble Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar in Abbottabad as reported in the Dawn of 28 April 1947.

2. I have had occasions in the past to point out to Lord Wavell some instances in which the League Members of the Interim Government have directly attacked Provincial Governments which were not of their persuasion. Lord Wavell apparently agreed with my view, since he wrote to me in reply that he had spoken to the Finance Member about it.

3. My attitude, which I maintain reflects the correct constitutional view, is contained in my letter to Lord Wavell on the subject, a copy of which I enclose for your ready reference. The repetition of these attacks merely goes to show that my honourable colleagues do not intend to profit by experience. The matter is one which, in my judgment, cannot be ignored, and I would be grateful if you would kindly see that either constitutional propriety is observed by the League Members or, if the League Members are unable to restrain themselves, they follow the only honourable constitutional course of resigning their office from the Interim Government.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

---

Not enclosed in SPC.

ENCLOSURE

EXTRACT FROM DAWN DATED 28 APRIL 1947

Addressing a meeting at the Idgah, where the procession had terminated, Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar said: ‘The root cause of all the trouble in the Frontier Province is the unnatural Congress Government foisted upon 95 per cent Muslim population. The present Government has become intolerable. This yoke has to be cast away and it must be cast away....

‘... If our opponents even now hesitate to concede our just demand we have got to take it whatever the hardships and consequences we may have to bear.’
Chapter 15. Exploring Political Alternatives

1. Pessimism about India’s Future

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and John Matthai, 25 March 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

TOP SECRET

Dr Matthai struck me as an absolutely first class man, balanced, reasonable and with a sense of humour. He pointed out the most difficult situation of those who, in the present non-cooperative mood of the Coalition Government, tried to steer an independent and honourable course. These persons, among whose number he counted himself, became more and more disliked by both sides. Dr Matthai said that he had done everything in his power to back up Mr Liaquat Ali in the latter’s Budget proposals, and the only result was a bitter attack on him in the Muslim organ Dawn. He suggested that all who tried to steer a straight, unbiased course would find themselves becoming increasingly unpopular from both sides.

Dr Matthai confessed that everyone was most pessimistic about the future. But he, like the other political leaders I have met, agreed that the British Government’s policy of sending me out with ‘carte blanche’ was the only possible way of dealing with the situation. He also said that no one in this country had so far got into Jinnah’s mind, but thought that I might have a chance of doing so, and breaking down his facade. He agreed that Jinnah had been holding out for a long time on the basis of a negative nuisance value, but he described Jinnah as much more of a realist than he made out.

Matthai gave his opinion that, but for Congress, there was nobody in India, which would not move Heaven and Earth to keep the British.

2. Azad Blames Congress for Rejection of Cabinet Mission Plan

Extract from the Record of Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Maulana Azad, 27 March 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

TOP SECRET

Maulana Azad is a charming old gentleman who, though he understands English, spoke through an interpreter. He told me first that if he had not been due at that particular moment to leave the presidency of Congress, that party would have accepted the Cabinet Mission’s plan. He said that blame in the first place must be laid on Congress, although it was the Muslim League which was now intransigent. He considered that there was a good chance that I would succeed in 'deflating' Mr Jinnah; partly by flattering him and partly because he really has nothing to stand on. One of his great objects was to have ministers in the Central Government, and he had no intention of allowing them to leave it...

3. Naga Demand for Self-determination

Home Poll (1), File No. 61/1947, NAI.

When in January, 1929 Your Lordship at the head of a Statutory Commission on India visited Kohima, situated in the heart of Nagaland, to ascertain the wish of the people in the matter of future governance of their land which was arbitrarily tagged on to India for administrative convenience, we the Nagas made it clear to Your Lordship and Your Lordship's colleagues that we desired to be left alone in the event of the British Government withdrawing from India.

Now that the British Government have set a time for withdrawing from India, we wish to re-assert our right for self-determination.

Enclosed will be found a copy of Memorandum which the Naga National Council has submitted to HMG. Enclosed is also a copy of Communiqué issued by the present Government of Assam.

No argument is needed to show that the Nagas are a separate people, with their own customs, traditions and culture: and to say that the British Government have decided to hand over to Indian hands complete authority of even governing Nagaland, in complete inconsistence with the policy of administration hitherto followed in these hills and in violation of implied but clear pledges in the past years, without even asking the opinion of the Nagas, is not only unjust but immoral.

The demand of the Naga people as will be seen is a very modest one. They have simply asked for a period of ten years during which they should, with the aid of an advanced Nation, be allowed to grow in their own way and find their own feet. The reason for this is obvious. When the Cabinet Mission came to India last year, one in the trio made the notable pronouncement: 'India is politically adult'. This did not mean that Nagaland is politically adult. If, considering India to be politically adult, it is decided to sacrifice the Nagas on the altar of India's Independence, the Nagas who have all these years been loyal to a fault cannot help questioning the right of the British Government in appointing the Indians to be their heirs in succession.

This letter is being sent to acquaint Your Lordship with the submission of the Memorandum on the case of the Naga people to HMG, so that the Memorandum may be given the consideration it deserves.

The interests of the Naga people can only be truly safeguarded by granting them their request as set forth in the Memorandum.
To Winston Churchill Esquire,
London.

Sir,

Of the Nagas and the land they live in, you may not have heard at all; or may just have heard when the Japanese forces made a daring assault on the Naga Hills in their bid to invade India. But the righteousness of our case entitles us to demand your attention to a letter addressed to Lord Simon, who with the Right Honourable Clement Attlee had the opportunity of seeing with his own eyes our land and our people. The enclosures to that letter are appended as also a copy of Memorandum of the Naga People submitted to the Statutory Commission in 1929.

If proofs were sought of what the Naga People did for the British and the Allied cause when the jewel of British Crown was seriously threatened, we can only refer you to such personages as Lord Wavell and Lord Louis Mountbatten. It is not our intention to boast as to what we did. But when Britain, of her own free choice is letting the jewel go off her Crown, it is pertinent to stress before the man whose name will ever be associated with the Charter proclaiming freedom to all people to choose any form of Government under which they will live, that we did what we did during the war believing a better world of progress and growth, of justice and freedom was in store for us; and that our demand to exercise the right of self-determination in God’s good time would not be ignored.

Our country was taken over by the British Government simply to protect their territories in the Plains of India. Nearly seventy years of British administration has taught us the advantage of living at peace with our neighbours. When the British Government make over to Indian hands authority to rule in India, Britain can rest assured that by leaving us in the place we rightly belong to, that is, by acceding to us our persistent demand throughout all these years, the peace of India which Britain is anxious to ensure, will in no way be imperiled from this end.

To Britain, we the Nagas have never said: ‘Quit’. But when Time has decreed that Britain should quit, we must say: ‘Quit honourably’.

I am
Your obedient servant,
T. Sakhrie
Secretary, Naga National Council

4. ‘India’s Fateful Hour’

_The Tribune_, 28 March 1947.

Karachi, March 27.—In a statement to the Press, Sheikh Abdul Majid, President of the Muslim Jamait says:

‘The fateful hour for India has arrived perhaps to be divided, thus converting its several parts into veritable cockpits of dreadful intrigues and rivalries between nations of the world for economic, commercial, political and strategic considerations, which will be calculated to land India, Asia indeed the whole world into disastrous wars and conflicts. The peace in divided parts may also be disturbed on account of inter-provincial interstate disputes over many matters, not the least important matter of which being the supposed or real oppression of the minorities.

‘If the Major parties, who have developed a peculiar Fascism of their own, fail to agree upon a united scheme, the Viceroy should accept the Muslim Jamait’s scheme of ensuring equal representation to Hindus and Muslims at the union centre. The principle of representation on parity basis for major communities at the united centre enjoys the support of all non-League parties. Major parties are dominated and obsessed by arrogant and aggressive politics of communal provincial majorities, and have prospered at the cost of the minorities. In return the minorities have been mercilessly betrayed politically isolated in some provinces, and actually butchered and subjected to unspeakable inhumanities and atrocities in others. A strong Government alone can protect the minorities and remove communal jealousies and apprehension. Let there be equal representation of Hindus and Muslims subject to joint electorates in the Union Parliament and Executive, reserving 20 per cent representation for non-Hindu and non-Muslim minorities.

‘If the major parties do not accept this proposal let there be a plebiscite of all adults under the supervision of an impartial and neutral authority. The Constitution of free India has to be ratified by the entire population and not only by one party.’

5. British Declaration Indicates No Change of Attitude

Extract from a Report of J.P. Narayan’s Speech at East India Railwaymen’s Annual Conference

National Herald, 28 March 1947.

Though the British know only too well that they cannot stay in India any longer they will certainly take advantage of the differences among the people and will welcome an opportunity to prolong their hold.

If the people do not prepare themselves to snatch power and hold it, a day may come when the declaration of February 20 announcing Britain’s intention to quit would appear to be a fraud.

I disagree with those who think that the British declaration indicates any change of attitude.
Self-interest is the life-blood of every colonial Government and they change themselves according to their self-interest. Britain today is helpless and knows well that it is impossible to retain India in the empire. It is the revolutionary urge of the people as shown by the ’42 struggle and which the Congress has nurtured during the last 20 years and the energy unleashed by INA which have forced Britain’s hand. Britain has read the signs of time. That is why the Cabinet Mission was sent here. Britain’s only interest in offering to quit India by June 1948 is to take the maximum benefit from India’s friendship.

The Socialists have always been against a negotiated freedom and their fears are coming close. If the leaders of the country were in jail today instead of being in the Interim Government, the communal frenzy raging at present would never have attained such proportions.

Socialists knew that negotiations would involve waste of energy and time and therefore advocated a struggle. But our leaders had their own fears of struggle and therefore consented to negotiations. The results have given abundant proof of the failure of their policy. If we had followed the path of struggle we need not have waited for June ’48 and would have been free even by June ’47. Now we are fighting among ourselves and wasting our energy while Britain is successfully playing its game of giving something by one hand and snatching it away by the other.

The Congress entered the Interim Government to give it the status of a sovereign cabinet but the Viceroy managed to defeat its aim and brought in the Muslim League, without any promise or undertaking, only to strengthen his own hands. The Constituent Assembly, which was to frame the constitution of a free India, was also facing a deadlock. When the Congress protested against the conspiracy and gave an ultimatum, the British Government came out with a dateline for withdrawal from India.

The country’s salvation lies in the establishment of a socialist state. It is silly to talk of Pakistan or of Hindu Raj for both would mean suffering for the people. The numerous Hindu and Muslim states bear testimony to the wretched plight of the people in a communal state....

6. ‘Jinnah Calls for Truce’

BOMBAY, March 27.—Mr M. A. Jinnah, President of the All-India Muslim League to-day called for truce on the basis of Pakistan, the elimination of the British in India and India for Indians.

Mr Jinnah was speaking at a reception given to him by the Memon Chamber of Commerce, Bombay, this evening.

Mr Jinnah added, ‘Pakistan will have to be achieved. Pakistan means freedom for all, not for one community. Pakistan means freedom for both Hindus and Muslims. I assure you that I have respect for the great Hindu community and all that it stands for.’

Mr Jinnah continued: ‘I am fighting for Pakistan which means I am fighting for the freedom of India. I am fighting for Pakistan because it is the only practical solution for solving the problem and the other ideal of a united India and a rule based on the parliamentary system of government, is a vain dream and an impossibility. India is neither a country nor a nation but is a score of nations.’

Mr Jinnah said:

‘Let me tell you who brought this idea into our head. It is the British. What does it matter to Britain if India is divided or not divided? Why should the British bother? Why are they encouraging hopes against hopes? Britain is going. It has to go away. But why should they go about talking of a united India? They know it better than Indians do. Therein lies their (British) salvation. Because as long as it is insisted that India is one they know that there will be nothing but destruction and bloodshed. This has been the idea of Britain and while leaving the country the British are inspiring the armed camp.’

Mr Jinnah further said:

‘I appeal to the Mussalmans and Hindus and others to examine the position. Do not be carried away by dreams. Let us be practical; let us agree to divide; we live in Pakistan and you live in Hindustan. We will be neighbours. We want no outsiders.

‘We want to live in a friendly way, friends in trade and commerce as two brothers. And that is Pakistan.

‘Pakistan is coming nearer and nearer. Therefore, let us now call for a truce and let us agree on Pakistan. It is better to divide and flourish than to be united and be slave and destroy everything. There is no other alternative. United India will only result in destruction. Why should there be destruction? The answer is very simple. United India can only mean the rule of one nation over another. United India means three votes for Hindus and one vote for Muslims. Therefore, one nation with a brute majority cannot rule and inflict its own ideals on another nation.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Mr Jinnah characterized as absurd the oft-repeated assertion that the Muslims are a minority. He referred to the percentage of Muslim majority in the Frontier and asked them to consider if such a majority could be called, in any sense, a minority community.

'I ask you, if a union is forced, can it result in anything else but clash? That is why I say that forcing a union of India will not result in anything but a divided India will be able to create stable and secure Governments for both Hindus and Muslims in Hindustan and Pakistan. Pakistan and Hindustan will live in the most friendly way, and will show to the world that India is for Indians and not for any body else.'

Mr Jinnah referred to the exchange of population now being talked of in the country. He mentioned Mahatma Gandhi's reply to questions at Noakhali and Tipperah two weeks ago, 'Answering two questions, Mr Gandhi said that he was agreeable to exchange of population. When I suggested this it was considered a crime and there was a howl.'

Mr Jinnah concluded by exhorting them to remember the seriousness of the situation. He said: 'We are face to face with a serious situation, which requires immediate solution. If we fail, remember that the consequences—I cannot describe it—will be catastrophic.'—API

7. 'Gandhiji's Faith in British Pledge'

Extract from a Report from The Hindustan Times, 29 March 1947.

O.K.R.I (Gaya), March 28.—Mahatma Gandhi in his prayer speech here yesterday drew the attention of the people to the first pronouncement made by Lord Louis Mountbatten on his assumption of office that he was sent out to India as the Viceroy to wind up British rule in India and hand over power to the then existing national Government.

Gandhiji said that they must have noticed that the pronouncement was deliberate unconditional and unequivocal. Gandhiji knew that it had become the fashion, though not without cause, to distrust every British declaration at its face value without qualifying it in the light of past experiences. His experience was that it was the declarer who always lost and never the duped if he was honest and brave.

But, Gandhiji added, he very much feared, on account of what had happened in the country that by their folly or, what was worse, their insanity, they might let slip out of their hands their hard-won prize before it was strongly locked in their unbreakable fist. Thus supposed that Noakhali, Bihar and the Punjab had really lost their sanity and the madness swept over the land he had wisdom enough to see that they themselves might tempt the Viceroy to eat his own words uttered on solemn occasions.

Heaven forbid, Gandhiji said that such an occasion should arise. But suppose that did even though his might be the voice in the wilderness he would declare that the Viceroy should firmly and truly carry out his declaration and complete the British withdrawal....
8. Alternative to Cabinet Mission Plan

Extracts from Minutes of the Sixth Meeting of the Viceroy’s Staff, 31 March 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 200A, NMML.

Uncirculated Record of Discussion No. 2

TOP SECRET

AN ALTERNATIVE TO THE CABINET MISSION’S PLAN

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that it was, and would remain, his primary object to persuade the Indian political leaders fully to accept the Cabinet Mission’s plan for the future of India. He was convinced that that plan represented the ideal solution. However, in case of continued non-acceptance of it, other possible plans must be devised. He was at present thinking on the lines of the following alternative:

1. The essence of the plan would be a form of Partition with a central authority for reserved subjects; this to be an experimental arrangement and to come into being in the near future.
2. The three units which would be the result of this Partition would be:
   (a) Hindustan, to include the predominantly Hindu provinces.
   (b) Pakistan, to include the predominantly Muslim provinces.
   (c) The States.
3. Each of these units would be offered a form of Dominion status. In the case of the States, the larger would be offered this status by themselves; the smaller would have to combine into units of suitable size.
4. In view of the grant of Pakistan, and on the same principles which justified that grant, there would be partition of the Punjab and Bengal.
5. The plan would be brought into force in about May 1947, and would run experimentally until June 1948.
6. The Central authority, which might be called ‘Central Government’ or ‘Central Council’, would deal only with the reserved subjects of Defence; Foreign Affairs; Communications; Food; and Finance to cover these.
7. The Central Authority, as well as the Hindustan Government, would be situated in Delhi.
8. Each of the reserved subjects would be dealt with by a Council or Board, containing representatives from Hindustan, Pakistan and the States.
9. The Viceroy would continue to have the right of veto on these reserved subjects.
10. About three months before June 1948, a decision would be made as to whether or not the Central authority would remain in being after that date.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that the main advantages of this plan were that it involved the almost complete transfer of power at a much earlier moment than was at present envisaged; that all parties would have something to gain from it; that the help of the British would still be available in the interim period, working solely for the good of India; and that it would mean that India would at least have temporary experience of the benefits of a form of Dominion status. He wished to be assured, before going further, of the practicability of the plan.
SIR CONRAD CORFIELD said that he agreed with the basic idea as far as the States were concerned; it was practicable.

MR ABELL drew attention to the difficulties of setting up any form of Pakistan government in the time allowed. SIR CONRAD CORFIELD agreed with this, making the point that there was no power to which to demit in Pakistan except individual provinces.

SIR ERIC MIEVILLE said that he did not consider that the formula 'Dominion status' was altogether satisfactory. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY agreed with this point of view, and said that some other formula would have to be devised.

LORD ISMAY considered that the main difficulty would be the formation of the Central Authority. MR. ABELL pointed out that it would not be possible to compel the Muslim League to take an interest in the central subjects. He added that the boundary question in the partitioned Provinces would take much time to resolve.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that in his view the most difficult part would be the eventual decision whether or not to keep the Central authority in existence after June 1948. In this connection, he made reference to the reports in Hansard of the speeches in the India debate of Mr Zillicius and Mr Churchill, both of whom had suggested some sort of organization under U.N.O.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that there were three possible prototypes on which to model the future constitution of India—the United States of America; the Australian Commonwealth, where federal rights had only recently been handed over to the Central Government by the States; and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, where the Ukraine for example had sovereign rights but at the same time was represented at the centre.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY invited the senior members of his staff further to consider the plan outlined above, together with the difficulties therein involved.

9. President of Hindu Mahasabha and Master Tara Singh Represent Hindus

g—

VEER SAVARKAR HAD SENT THE FOLLOWING TELEGRAM TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY
‘AS GANDHIJI OR CONGRESS ON THEIR OWN CONFESSION DO NOT AND CANNOT REPRESENT HINDU PUBLIC AS SUCH I REQUEST YOUR EXCELLENCY TO INVITE FOR INTERVIEW PRESIDENT HINDU MAHASABHA AND TARASINGHJI BEFORE ANY FUNDAMENTAL CONSTITUTIONAL CHANGES AFFECTING HINDUS ARE EFFECTED AS WAS DONE BY LORD LINLITHGOW, SIR STAFFORD CRIPPS, LORD WAVELL, CABINET MISSION ON SUCH OCCASIONS IN THE PAST’
10. Questions Posed to Jinnah on Pakistan

Extracts from minutes of Viceroy’s Seventh Staff Meeting, 3 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 200A, NMML.

...Item 11

LIST OF ‘AWKWARD QUESTIONS’

SIR ERIC MIEVILLE handed to His Excellency a list of ‘A few questions that the Viceroy might consider putting to Mr Jinnah regarding Pakistan.’

Addendum

A FEW QUESTIONS THAT THE VICEROY MIGHT CONSIDER PUTTING TO MR. JINNAH REGARDING PAKISTAN

Geographical. If it is decided to hand over responsibilities to entirely separate Governments for Hindustan and Pakistan, what case could be made out which would justify HMG in handing over to Pakistan the areas contiguous to Hindustan in which there is a non-Muslim Majority? These areas amount to thirteen districts in the Punjab and eight districts—including Calcutta—in Bengal. (Lists attached.)

Is not the claim for the whole of the Punjab and Bengal simply a claim to non-Muslim territory? The Congress have said that they are ready to concede the Muslim majority districts. On what principle do you base your demand for the addition of Sikh and Hindu territory?

If the whole of the Punjab were included in Pakistan, do you think you can

(a) cope with the Sikhs;
(b) impose your will on the rest of the non-Muslim population;
(c) maintain the necessary good relations with Hindustan in spite of the hostility that your actions would arouse?

The same argument applies vis-à-vis the non-Muslim areas in Bengal.

You have frequently said that Muslim feeling is now so strong that a United India is impossible. On the assumption that the Punjab and Bengal are to be divided and that HMG will not be a party to giving the League more than the Muslim majority districts, how would you set about the Partition? Would you suggest a Boundary Commission or a decision by HMG? It must be remembered that time is short.

Defence. Could you propose

(a) to maintain a separate Army and Air Force;
(b) to build munition factories and other industries necessary to support such forces; and
(c) to be strong enough to face Russia and Hindustan at one and the same time?

Where are the resources in finance, minerals and expert manpower to justify such a course? Surely you can only survive in a defensive Alliance with Hindustan—for example, a common Defence Council.

Finance. Would not the financial position in Pakistan be such that it would be difficult to maintain its social services and impossible to make adequate provision for defence? It will be necessary for Pakistan to pay a proportionate share of the existing Government of India’s liabilities including, in particular, defence, National Debt and pension charges of an All-India
Character—What authority would be entrusted with the working out of the division of these liabilities and how would Pakistan be able to meet their obligations?

Would Pakistan feel obliged to set up their own Central Bank and their own Currency? If so, would not this create serious difficulties for them? Would Pakistan have its own Customs Barriers and create a Customs Service of its own?

List of districts

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Punjab</th>
<th>Bengal</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Hissar</td>
<td>Burdwan</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rohtak</td>
<td>Birbhum</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gurgaon</td>
<td>Bankura</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Karnal</td>
<td>Midnapore</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ambala</td>
<td>Howrah</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Simla</td>
<td>24-Parganas</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kangra</td>
<td>Jalpaiguri</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Hoshiarpur</td>
<td>Darjeeling</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Jullundur</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ludhiana</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ferozepore</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Amritsar</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gurdaspur</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

11. Muslim State Preferable to Working with Congress

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Liaquat Ali Khan, 3 April 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

The meeting lasted from 11.10 a.m. to 12.15 p.m.

I took him to task for allowing Members of the Interim Government to take an active part in the Committee of Action of the League, as reported in Dawn. He explained that most of the Members of the Interim Government belonged either to the Congress Committee or the Muslim League Working Committee. I accepted this but complained that the League Ministers were actively associated with the Committee of Action, to which he replied that they had been members of the Committee of Action before joining the Interim Government.

I told him that in their own interests they should either resign or refrain from taking an active part in the Committee of Action, and that I should probably take a convenient opportunity of expressing this view to Mr Jinnah. I ended with the very strong advice to him not to embarrass the position of the League in the Government by allowing these activities to continue.

We discussed the setting up of the Appointments Committee of the Cabinet. He gave me his very strong reasons against this at some length, and I have asked him to let me have these reasons in writing together with his proposal as to how the political difficulty can be overcome.

I asked him whether, in the event of my obtaining complete Congress adherence to the letter and spirit of the Cabinet Mission’s statement of the 16th May, he felt there was any chance that Mr Jinnah would then come back to his original agreement. He replied that the communal strife had become so bitter that he felt there was now no chance.
I then asked him what, if he were in my place, his solution would be for the transfer of power. He smiled engagingly and said ‘Since my dealings with the Congress Members of the Interim Government, I have come to realize that they are utterly impossible people to work with, since there is no spirit of compromise or fair play in them, and the majority are thinking only of ways and means by which they can do down the Muslim League and improve their own position’. He continued: ‘I consider the position now so intolerable that if Your Excellency was only prepared to let the Muslim League have the Sind Desert, I would still prefer to accept that and have a separate Muslim State in those conditions than to continue in bondage to the Congress with apparently more generous concession.’

Finally, he gave me a brief report of progress in his Department, and asked me to include in the Defence Committee, when, it was set up, the Member for Communications, Mr Nishtar, so as to ensure that there would be at least two Muslim League Members on the Committee.

12. Any Idea of Division Unacceptable

Letter from Chowdhry Kishenlal Lamror, General Secretary, All India Jat Mahasabha, Ajmer, to J.B. Kripalani, 4 April 1947
AICC Papers, File No. CL-3 (Part I)/1946–7, NMML.

Sir,

Herewith I am forwarding a copy of the resolution passed by the All India Jat Mahasabha in its Annual General Session held at Bharatpur on the 15th and 16th March 1947 under the presidency of the Hon’ble Sardar Baldeo Singh, Defence Minister, I.G. of India for your kind perusal.

Yours sincerely,

Enclosure
Copy of the resolution Nos. 4, 6

Copy of the resolution No. 4
‘This session of the All India Jat Mahasabha reiterates its old demand that the Province of Delhi be extended by attaching to it the Ambala, Jullundhur and the Lahore Divisions of the Punjab and the Meerut, Agra and the Ruhelkhand Divisions of the UP and Ajmer–Merwara and the province thus formed should be raised to the status of a Governor’s Province.

The Mahasabha is in full agreement with the decision arrived at in this connection by the Working Committee of the Indian Congress and resolves that immediate steps should be taken for the fulfillment of the above aims.

Copy of the resolution No. 6
‘This session of the All India Jat Mahasabha has its firm faith in indivisibility of India and in view of its status and importance would never tolerate any idea of its division.
13. ‘Sardar Patel’s Rejoinder to Jinnah—Truce Possible by Giving Up Use of Sword’

Extracts from a Report from Bombay Chronicle, 4 April 1947

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Home Member of the Interim Government and Member of the Congress Working Committee, today replied to the speech made by Mr M.A. Jinnah last week at Bombay calling for a ‘truce’ on the basis of Pakistan.

Sardar Patel who was addressing a large gathering of the citizens of Ahmedabad this evening, organized by the City Congress Committee, characterized the theory of Pakistan as ‘a huge joke’ and ‘a child’s play.’ Pakistan, he said, could be attained only on the basis of justice and not by force of arms or the sword.

In a 60-minute speech, Sardar Patel surveyed political situation in the country and the important role which India could play in world affairs, if she could settle down to govern herself in an orderly manner befitting a free country.

Sardar Patel said: ‘The goal of the Congress is very near. The “Quit India” resolution passed by the Congress in August 1942 is about to be fulfilled by the latest declaration of the British Government to quit India by June 1948.’...

The Muslim League, Sardar Patel said, was trying to capture power in the Punjab and the Frontier and to invade Assam and to establish Pakistan. But it was not an easy thing.

Referring to the offer to truce made by Mr M.A. Jinnah, President of the All-India Muslim League, in Bombay recently, Sardar Patel asked how there could be truce on the basis of Pakistan or Akhand Hindustan. Truce in the real sense meant giving up arms and the use of the sword.

‘Pakistan can be established only on the basis of justice. There are impartial agencies or tribunals who can decide the question.

The Congress is ready to sign the truce if the question of Pakistan is referred to an impartial tribunal. That implied that there should be no killing. Political problems are not solved by fight or resort to arms.’

‘The Congress has made its decision’, declared Sardar Patel, ‘when it invited the representatives of the League to meet Congress representatives and come to an understanding. Congress will not submit to any injustice. Truce has no meaning if the Congress is called upon to submit to any dictation by the League.’...

14. ‘A Surgical Operation’ of India Is the Only Solution

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and M.A. Jinnah, 5–6 April 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

When Mr Jinnah first arrived on Saturday 5th April, he was in a most frigid, haughty and disdainful frame of mind. A number of photographs was taken of him standing between myself and Her Excellency. He was recorded in the newspapers as describing himself on this occasion as ‘a thorn between two roses’. (Later I challenged him on this, and told him I thought he had said ‘A rose between two thorns’. He said ‘Yes, but in my mind I was expecting Her Excellency to be between you and me’.)

After having acted for some time in a gracious tea-party hostess manner, he eventually said that he had come to tell me exactly what he was prepared to accept. I said that I did not want to hear that at this stage—the object of this first interview was that we should make each other’s acquaintance. For half an hour more he made monosyllabic replies to my attempts at conversation—but one and a half hours after the interview started he was joking, and by the end of our talk last night (6th April, when he came to dinner and stayed until half an hour past midnight) the ice was really broken.

Our talks covered all subjects. I made it clear to him that I had not yet made up my mind what solution to recommend to His Majesty’s Government, and that at the present I was utterly impartial. But I explained that it was my policy to make a decision as soon as possible after seeing all concerned. He agreed not to force the pace, assenting that, whereas the whole of India was awaiting a quick decision, that decision must be the right one. I added that the problem, as I saw it at the moment, was not so much what to do, but how to do it in the time.

Mr Jinnah claimed that there was only one solution—a ‘surgical operation’ on India, otherwise India would perish altogether. I replied by reiterating that I had not yet made up my mind, and pointed out that an ‘anaesthetic’ must precede any ‘surgical operation’....

He also spoke of the emotionalism of the Congress leaders, pointing out that they had every reason for this when it was a question of getting rid of the British, but this reason no longer held good.

He accused Congress leaders of constantly shifting their front. They were determined, he said, to inherit to the full all the powers now exercised by the British in India. They would stoop to anything to gain this object—even to acceptance of Dominion status—rather than that any part of India should be handed over to the Muslims.

At the end of our interview, after he had told me a succession of long stories about how appallingly the Muslims had been treated, I informed him that what fascinated me was the way that all the Indian leaders spoke with such conviction.

He said that in his view the members of the Cabinet Mission had been imbued with the wrong attitude—they had come out pleading for agreement instead of laying down a solution. I pointed out to him that I was in a very favorable position compared with the Cabinet Mission and others who had been sent out to find a solution to India’s future, as I did not have to obtain prior acceptance from the Indian parties to the course I intended to recommend to His Majesty’s Government. I said that I would of course not recommend any solution which was patently unacceptable. He seemed pleased with these remarks.

15. Congress May Agree to Partition if It Precludes Civil War

Extracts from an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Rajendra Prasad, 10 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

The meeting lasted from 12 noon to 12.45 p.m.

Dr Rajendra Prasad gave me a brief account of his visit to the projected Kosi Dam area, and he spoke enthusiastically of the scheme.

I asked him what he would do if he were in my place about the transfer of power. He said he found it impossible to divest himself momentarily from his association with being a Hindu and a member of Congress, and asked me what my ideas were.
I said that I still had a completely open mind, but that it had become clear to me that Mr Jinnah was thinking only along the line of partition.

Dr Rajendra Prasad enlarged on the disastrous consequences of the break-up of Indian unity; and I expressed agreement with his sentiments and his reasoning. I then asked him whether he considered that those reasons were strong enough to override the objection that there would almost certainly be a civil war if I were to enforce it against the wishes of the Muslim League.

He agreed that the position now reached made civil war very likely if I were to try and enforce a decision against the wishes of any large section of the people.

I then asked him if he thought that Congress would accept voluntarily a decision which virtually abandoned the idea of Indian unity if that were the only way that I could transfer power without a risk of civil war. He said that if that were the position, he was inclined to agree that it might be accepted; since he did not see how I had any alternative but to transfer power in any manner which would not involve civil war.

We both eventually agreed that if it were possible to introduce a time element into the stages by which partition was implemented, that this would give some prospect of reason prevailing over communal emotional sentiments.

I asked him about the food situation in India, and he replied that although stocks were far shorter than he would like to see them, and although there were the added difficulties that wheat eaters had to be given rice and rice eaters had to be given wheat, according to locality, time of year and stocks available, he nevertheless did not fear any famine, and thought that we should get through the next year—short but not disastrously short of food.

16. Socialists for Unity of Country and Provinces

Extracts from a Press Interview by Jayaprakash Narayan, 10 April 1947

....So far as the question of the partition of Bengal and the Punjab is concerned, the Socialist Party wants no division either of the country or of any province, except where the people concerned want it on a linguistic and cultural basis and without affecting the integrity of the country. The Socialist Party believes in a united India and united Bengal and united Punjab. But this is a matter that does not rest with our wanting or not wanting certain things. Events may take a course contrary to our desires and we may not have the strength to check it. In other words, if the forces of reason, patriotism and socialism combined cannot prevent the division of the country, it becomes axiomatic that the division must be made on the basis of self-determination, territories choosing their centre of loyalty by their free will. In such an eventuality the partition of Bengal and Punjab becomes inevitable. I, therefore, believe that it is the duty of nationalists, including socialists, to make it clear to those who are bent upon dividing the country that they can not do so without dividing the Punjab and Bengal.
17. Mountbatten and Jinnah Debate Viability of Pakistan

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and M.A. Jinnah, 10 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

Mr Jinnah came at 4 o'clock, but I arranged to leave the field clear for Lord Ismay to talk to him until 4.45 and go through the points he had written down after his last meeting. From 4.45 to 6.30 I was present at the discussions.

Mr Jinnah could not possibly have been more clear that he would have nothing to do with the Cabinet Mission plan; and so we went ahead and followed up his desire for partition logically. He said that what he wanted was a surgical operation cutting off the 5 Provinces in the ‘B’ and ‘C’ areas, and turning them over to Pakistan, leaving the other six Provinces to Hindustan. He stressed that time did not permit any negotiations or details, and urged that I should give an over-all decision as soon as possible and allow the details to be worked out subsequently.

Lord Ismay and I were at pains to point out to him that unless we could get some indication of what mechanics were required to implement any decision, it would be impossible for us to consider such a decision.

I then explained to Mr Jinnah that although I still retained a fully open mind, the only way in which I could follow his advice was to pursue it to its logical conclusion. I said to him as regards the question of a united India: ‘You claim the right of a large minority people to partition on a big scale. If I grant you this how can I refuse Congress, who will press for exactly the same right for the large Hindu minorities in the Punjab and Bengal to be partitioned.’

We argued these points back and forth, Mr Jinnah’s main point being that I must make his Pakistan ‘viable’. He quoted the partition of Poland as not having been made on the basis of counting heads or taking into account the will of the people.

I told him I was not prepared to proceed on this basis, and that I must follow a course that would be generally acceptable, so as it was mechanically possible in present conditions to ascertain the will of the people. For this purpose I had in mind an immediate announcement that I would demit power to Provinces in June 1948, and that Provinces would have the right forthwith to decide whether they wished to join any other group of Provinces or remain entirely autonomous. I presumed in fact that Sind, half of Punjab and probably the NWFP would form one Group, part of Bengal another Group, which together would form Pakistan. The remaining Provinces I assumed would wish to join Hindustan.

I pointed out that Pakistan and Hindustan would then have to set up their constitution-making machinery and that the Indian States would have the opportunity of joining up with one or other of these two Constituent Assemblies, or of making separate negotiations, though how this should be done would require working out.

Mr Jinnah became more and more distressed and displeased at the turn the conversation was taking, claiming that Congress were deliberately drawing a red herring across my path, and threatening that in that case he would demand the partition of the Province of Assam. I replied that certainly I would grant him the same rights of course as Congress, and if he wished to put the Muslim majority areas of Assam in with Bengal he must let me have his proposals.

I continued to stress that this scheme was very tentative: until I could see what mechanics were involved I could neither tell whether the scheme was in fact practical or how long it would take to implement it.
Since he denied that the scheme I had just outlined was in any way what he wanted, he said he could not possibly contribute anything useful to working out the mechanics. Lord Ismay accepted that he should work out the mechanics, which would be submitted to Mr Jinnah for his views.

I pointed out that if it became evident in the course of investigation that the scheme could not be implemented in full by June 1948, then we would endeavour to work out a proposal by which the Indians could continue negotiations on a programme of implementation after our departure.

We next discussed the procedure to be adopted in following through whatever proposal I finally decided to make to HMG. Mr Jinnah urged me not to write any letters on the subject, that it would be a good thing to put the proposals to the Prime Minister before the proposed decision formally to the leaders.

Mr Jinnah said he had wanted to call his Working Committee but had now decided not to do so for the present.

He asked to be allowed to see what the Congress proposals were for carving up the Punjab and Bengal, so that he could submit counter proposals.

I decided that I would ask Pandit Nehru to come and see me and ask him for the proposed boundaries for the partition of the Punjab and Bengal, and to discuss with him the solution on which I had been working with Mr Jinnah.

I also said that I would suggest to Pandit Nehru that the Constituent Assembly should not meet on the 28th April, but should have its meeting postponed until after the decision had been announced.

Lord Ismay submitted the draft he had prepared for the joint call by the leaders of both parties for a truce to provocative action and violence. Mr Jinnah took it away with him to consider the wording carefully, it being arranged that Sir Eric Mieville should see him about getting the final wording agreed by him before it was submitted to Pandit Nehru.

Finally, I should like to record that in the course of this conversation I took the opportunity of Mr Jinnah’s bitter complaints about my ruining his Pakistan by cutting out half of the Punjab and Bengal including Calcutta and by making it economically very difficult if not impossible to function, to try and bring him back to the Cabinet Mission plan. I told him that I entirely agreed with him that the moth-eaten Pakistan which was all I could possibly offer him was almost unworkable, and I strongly expressed my inability to see why he was not prepared to accept the Cabinet Mission plan, which gave him the whole of the Punjab, the whole of Bengal including Calcutta and the whole of Sind, with complete autonomy, and in fact accorded to him a really worthwhile and workable Pakistan.

I pointed out that so far as I could see the only difference between the scheme I was prepared to give him and that which he could get under the Cabinet Mission plan was that under the Cabinet Mission plan he was obliged to accept a small weak Centre at Delhi controlling Defence, Communications, and External Affairs. I pointed out that these three might really be lumped together under the heading of General Defence, and that I did not see how under the new scheme he could possibly avoid joining some organization at the Centre to take care of General Defence. In fact I prophesied that he would find that he had thrown away the substance for the shadow, and that he was going to get an almost unworkable truncated Pakistan which would still be obliged to share a common organization at the Centre to arrange over-all defence. Whereas if only he would come back to the Cabinet Mission plan, he could have the whole of the Pakistan he wanted, without really having any tighter organization over him at the Centre than he would sooner or later be bound to accept under the truncated scheme; added to which, I pointed out, he was ruining the position of India as a great Power, and forever pulling her down to something below a second class Power.

18. Mountbatten Realizes United India Impractical

Minutes of the Viceroy’s Thirteenth Staff Meeting, 11 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 200B, NMML.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that it had always been and would remain his main desire to hand over power to an unified India with a strong centre. The next best to this would be to hand over to an unified India with a weak centre—such as was envisaged in the Cabinet Mission plan. He had now had six meetings with Mr Jinnah. The one the previous day had lasted for three hours. He had brought all possible arguments to bear on Mr Jinnah but it seemed that appeals to his reason did not prevail. He had pointed out to Mr Jinnah the enormous advantages of retaining an unified India—as one, India could be immensely powerful and in the front rank of world powers. He had asked Mr Jinnah why he could possibly wish to throw away such advantages. Mr Jinnah had not been able in his presence to adduce one single feasible argument in favour of Pakistan. In fact he had offered no counter arguments. He gave the impression that he was not listening. He was impossible to argue with. They had covered the whole ground time and again on every conceivable basis with no progress whatever. He had assured Mr Jinnah that he regarded himself as more or less the first head of the Indian state and that it was his sole intention to do whatever was best in the interests of the Indian people. Mr Jinnah was a psychopathic case. He was, whatever was said, intent on his Pakistan—which could surely only result in doing the Muslims irreparable damage.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that it was, however, quite clear to him that, if any effort was made to try and impose the Cabinet Mission plan, the Muslim League would resort to arms. He added that until he had met Mr Jinnah he had not thought it possible that a man with such a complete lack of sense of responsibility could hold the power which he did.

LORD ISMAY said that he believed that the dominating feature in Mr Jinnah’s mental structure was his loathing and contempt of the Hindus. He apparently thought that all Hindus were sub-human creatures with whom it was impossible for the Muslims to live. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY pointed out that, in any case, the Muslims and Hindus would have to live together. He had told Mr Jinnah that he believed that Congress were so keen on keeping an unified India that he might be capable of persuading them to pay the price of giving over the whole of Bengal, the Punjab, Assam, and the North West Frontier Province on the condition that a weak centre should be retained. He had also told Mr Jinnah that he believed that it would be possible so to work out the Constitution of the Centre that neither party could move the Armed Forces without the consent of the other, but again Mr Jinnah had not listened.

LORD ISMAY said that he had got the impression that, for the last half hour of the previous day’s meeting with Mr Jinnah, there had been some change of atmosphere. Mr Jinnah had made some effort to be helpful. He had said that, whatever the Viceroy decided, whether he agreed with it or not, he would never doubt His Excellency’s sincerity or good faith. He had also proffered helpful advice on two or three points.
Towards Freedom: 1947

His Excellency said that there had come a moment in his interview with Mr Jinnah two days previously when the latter, with a smile on his face, had hesitantly mentioned that, although he did not suggest that it might affect the decision, the first act of the Pakistan Government would probably be to apply for admission to the British Commonwealth on Dominion status. His Excellency the Viceroy said that he had informed Mr Jinnah that his instructions were to do nothing which would in any way help towards the splitting-up of India. It was the desire of His Majesty’s Government, he had said, that there should be a strong unified India free to choose herself whether she wished to remain in the British Commonwealth or not. He had explained that he could not possibly be a party to any suggestion that Pakistan should enter the Commonwealth, nor could he give any indication of what His Majesty’s Government’s attitude might be. His Excellency the Viceroy said that he believed that this had been a very rude shock to Mr Jinnah, who had apparently thought that His Majesty’s Government would jump at his suggestion.

Sir Eric Mieville said that he did not believe that Pakistan was an economic possibility. Mr Abell said that the political objections to Pakistan were in his opinion much greater. Economically it could be made to work, weak though it would be. A paper on the economic viability of Pakistan had been sent in by Mr Zinkin and Commander Nicholls was at the moment preparing a criticism of this paper.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that in his opinion the time factor was of over-riding importance. Mr Jinnah had no idea of the broad outline of the mechanics and time-table of establishing Pakistan. Everyone must bear in mind that the sheer logic of events and mechanical difficulties were likely to wield the greatest influence.

Lord Ismay said that it was fast becoming apparent that it would be impossible to hand over complete power to the Provinces by June 1948. They would not be ready to receive it. Some sort of a central organization would have to remain for a few years. There always remained the possibility that Mr Jinnah might be invited to be Prime Minister of the Central Government. His Excellency the Viceroy said that, from what he had seen of Mr Jinnah, he doubted that if he was brought into the Government any measure would thereafter be passed on its merits. Lord Ismay pointed out that there was always a tendency for responsibility to improve people in such cases out of all recognition. Mr Abell said that he did not think that Mr Jinnah would accept an invitation to join the Central Government. His Excellency the Viceroy said that he believed that he might do so on the grounds that it was the best way of getting his own policy through, but he would probably ask for a portfolio. Mr Abell considered that there might be great difficulty in persuading Congress to grant the Muslim League another seat.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that he was seeing Pandit Nehru that afternoon and he intended to take him fully into his confidence, which he had not yet done. He had not yet in fact asked the Congress leaders, with the exception of Mr Gandhi, for their proposals.

His Excellency the Viceroy emphasized that he still retained a completely open mind. He wanted, however, Lord Ismay to start to work out the details of the plan at present primarily under consideration. When and if the time came for this plan to be announced, he wanted a most careful preamble to be written making it clear that his view had all along been completely impartial; that it was only when it became apparent that the retention of any form of an united India would start civil war that he had regretfully been obliged to give up this ideal; and that he had therefore chosen a means which gave the choice of their future, as well as the somewhat primitive democratic machinery could allow, to the Indian people themselves.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICE-ROY finally emphasized that the chosen plan would of course be put up for approval to HMG before Indian party leaders were informed of the decision. He visualized that a simultaneous announcement might be made in Parliament by the Prime Minister and by himself over the wireless in India. He decided that he would make this announcement only in English and not also in Urdu.

19. Patel on Prospects of Unity and Partition

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Vallabhbhai Patel, 12 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

The interview lasted from 3 to 4.15 p.m. I first of all gave Patel an account of my negotiations with Mr Jinnah, and an explanation of why I have never consulted him, or any member of Congress, before as to the solution that they suggested should be followed for the transfer of power. I pointed out that this had meant that I could truthfully tell Mr Jinnah of my own views for the best future of India without having got my ideas from any member of Congress. I told him that my own views were that the very best for the future of India would be a firm Union with a strong Central Government, and that I would like to see the present Interim Government operating by itself, with the possible addition of Mr Jinnah with an important portfolio and to transfer power to that Central Government when I leave in June 1948.

I told him that my next best solution was the Cabinet Mission plan, and that the one solution that I did not wish to be forced into was Pakistan, but that if it were Pakistan it would have to be a truncated Pakistan.

I then asked Sardar Patel if he felt that Congress could be made to accept the Cabinet Mission plan without any reservations. He asked me if I meant by that that they should accept HMG’s statement of the 6th or 7th December. I pointed out that what I meant was that if Mr Jinnah could be made to accept the Cabinet Mission plan, then that Congress and he should accept the same interpretation, or at least agree upon an interpretation to be accepted. Sardar Patel informed me that it was he who finally got Congress to agree to accept the Cabinet Mission plan at the last moment, and that he remained the strongest protagonist in the Congress Party of the Cabinet Mission plan. (In passing it may be of interest to record that Lord Wavell informed me on the 22nd March that it was Sir Stafford Cripps who went to Sardar Patel and persuaded him that Congress’ best interests lay in accepting the Cabinet Mission plan, since otherwise it left the field clear to the Muslim League. He implied that the motive was to obtain an apparent success for the Cabinet Mission and conceal for as long as possible their failure.)

Sardar Patel told me that the mistake that all the British had permanently made with Mr Jinnah was always to give way to him, as a means of saving his face. He said that Mr Jinnah would only accept the Cabinet Mission plan when the force of circumstances gave him no alternative. He told me that as soon as I announced the partition of Bengal, the Muslim of Bengal would secede from the League in order to preserve the entity of Bengal. He thought that this might possibly follow in the Punjab, and it would not be unlikely that there would be a revolt of the League against Mr Jinnah if he had nothing better than the Sind, and possibly half of the Punjab to offer them for Pakistan, if Congress still retained their hold on the N.W.F.P.
Thus he thought that there was a real chance that either Mr Jinnah would be forced to come to my terms, or be overthrown by the League. In either case Sardar Patel promised me his support in getting Congress to support the Cabinet Mission plan at such a moment. He promised to send me information as to the exact present position of Congress with regard to the acceptance of the Cabinet Mission plan.

He complained very bitterly at the decision he had only recently learnt that HMG would not turn over the Secretary of State’s services until June 1948. He asked me how I imagined it was going to be possible for the Interim Government to govern, if they had no control over their services, and how he could get rid of disloyal members who are harming the Central Government.

I told him that if he reported to me any cases of disloyalty, and supported it by good evidence, I would take any necessary steps myself.

I pointed out to him that since it was now highly doubtful that there would be a unified India, and since, in fact, Pakistan was looming up before us, I did not see to whom the Secretary of State’s services could be turned over, since it was not even clear who would be in Pakistan and who would be in Hindustan.

Finally he made a long dispassionate and reasoned indictment against Lord Wavell in his system of government. He said that until the formation of the Interim Government, Lord Wavell had governed with a strong Centre, and had kept law and order in the Provinces. Since the formation of the Interim Government Lord Wavell had allowed such power to go to the Provinces that they could defy the Central Government, and by the introduction of the Muslim League members, against the advice of Congress, had so weakened the Centre that India was rapidly disintegrating into a lawless state.

He called upon me to strengthen and support the Central Government to keep unruly Provinces in order and show that I meant to maintain proper law and order, and stop further bloodshed.

I replied that my first preoccupation must be to find, as soon as possible, the correct solution and announce it, which I felt would do more than anything else to remove the causes of the strife. In the meanwhile I intended to put out a truce, to be signed by Mr Gandhi and Mr Jinnah.

20. Two Plans for Transfer of Power

Minutes of the Viceroy’s Fourteenth Staff Meeting, 12 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 200B, NMML.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that of the many possible plans which were still under consideration, the two receiving most thought at the moment were:

(a) Plan ‘Union’, which was the Cabinet Mission’s plan possibly modified in some respects; and

(b) Plan ‘Balkan’, which contemplated leaving to each Province the choice of its own future and would almost certainly result in a form of truncated Pakistan and the eventual abolition of a Centre, although it would be necessary to retain a Centre for some time after June, 1948, at least to deal with Defence until the Armed Forces were divided.
Mr Abell said that Mr Jinnah had always proclaimed that he would accept the Cabinet Mission plan if Congress did so unreservedly. He gave his opinion that there was now no chance of Congress doing this. Lord Ismay said that he did not believe that it was impossible that Congress would do so, though it would indeed mean a complete change of heart.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that he believed that there was a chance that, if the alternatives were clearly stated to them, the Congress leaders would take the step forward required to denote unequivocal acceptance. He had got the impression that the Congress leaders desired a united India above all and might well, if they were told the alternative, decide to accept plan ‘Union’ so as to achieve this end. The next step must clearly be to try and obtain Congress’s agreement.

Mr Scott suggested that the Viceroy might then appeal to a representative Muslim body before accepting Mr Jinnah’s opinion as final. There were three such bodies in existence—the All-India Muslim League Council, the All-India Muslim League Committee and the Muslim members of the Constituent Assembly who had been elected although they had never taken their seats. His Excellency the Viceroy said that this was indeed a suggestion worthy of consideration, although he would obviously not be able to address the chosen body in person. Perhaps a member of his staff might read an address from him, or such an address might be recorded. It would be valueless to leave it to Mr Jinnah to put his (His Excellency’s) point of view forward. Mr Scott emphasized that, if this appeal to a Muslim body was made, the maximum publicity for it would be necessary, the issue must be put before the whole world. In a private meeting, not open to the glare of world publicity, Mr Jinnah would, without doubt, have his own way.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that a possible alternative would be to call a Press Conference and, through that, tell the world in concise and irrevocable language exactly what the situation was. He pointed out that he had got the Prime Minister’s permission to convene a Press Conference whenever he thought it necessary. Mr Scott pointed out that the Muslim League’s main fear was what was going to happen to them after June, 1948. His Excellency the Viceroy said that this was confirmed by points raised in an interview which he had had the previous day with Mr Liaquat Ali Khan. The latter had suggested that after June, 1948, an impartial British head of the State should remain. His Excellency the Viceroy said that such a person would be in a most difficult position as impartial decisions were always apt to annoy both sides. Lord Ismay and Sir Eric Mieville agreed that such a person would be in an impossible position, having responsibility with no authority.

Plan ‘Balkan’

His Excellency the Viceroy said that, if plan ‘Balkan’ was eventually chosen, he intended, when the announcement of the decision was made, to broadcast a preamble showing how negotiations had progressed since his arrival. He would make clear that he had tried throughout to look at the whole problem objectively. He would say that he had always believed that an united India was the ideal answer, preferably with a Central Government similar to that at present in power, and with safeguards for the minorities. He would point out that he had devoted a long time to trying to obtain acceptance of a plan for an united India but that in the end he had found that it would be impossible to impose such a plan without a recrudescence of bloodshed, leading perhaps to civil war. He had therefore decided that the only answer was to leave the decision in the hands of the people themselves and to give the Provinces freedom to decide on their own future with the option of joining one or more groups.

Sir Eric Mieville asked how the Provinces would make their decisions.

His Excellency the Viceroy pointed out that in most cases there was no doubt of what each Province desired. In the North-West Frontier, however, it would probably be necessary to have an election; and in the Punjab and Bengal partition might have to come. He went on to say that he would, in this preamble, make clear the choices which had been put before Mr Jinnah—acceptance of plan ‘Union’ with a small centre and what would, in fact, be an untruncated Pakistan; or a truncated Pakistan with some central organization to begin with at any rate, as the Army was certainly going to remain united until June, 1948. The preamble would have to contain a review of the sincere attempts on the part of the British to find a peaceful solution. It would require most careful presentation.

Mr Abell said that during his conversation with Rao Bahadur Menon the previous day, the latter had at first insisted on the desirability for granting Dominion status to India immediately if Plan ‘Balkan’ was brought into operation. He had pointed out the disadvantages of this and had given his opinion that the Governor-General must keep the power in his own hands until June, 1948. Rao Bahadur Menon had eventually withdrawn from this position.

Finally, Lord Ismay threw out the suggestion that the possibility of making use of the United Nations Organization should not be ruled out.

21. Azad’s Solution for Congress–League Compromise

Letter from Abul Kalam Azad to Louis Mountbatten, 14 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 15, NMML.

New Delhi.

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

There is one point I forgot to discuss with Your Excellency when I met you last Saturday.

You will remember I pressed that the League should accept the Cabinet Mission plan and the interpretation of December 6th. The Congress has accepted both. If, however, the League should argue that the Congress acceptance of the interpretation of 6th December does not meet the League’s objections, I would suggest the following way out. Let both the Congress and the League agree that they will accept your reading of the 6th of December interpretation, not in your capacity as the Viceroy but in your personal capacity. I hope you will put this to Mr Jinnah when you meet him again, and if he is prepared to accept this solution, I am confident that I can persuade the Congress to do the same.

Yours sincerely,
A.K. Azad
22. Mountbatten Comments on the Political Situation
   Extracts from Viceroy’s Personal Report No. 3, 17 April 1947

22. Mountbatten Comments on the Political Situation

23. Having had nearly three weeks of incessant talks with all the leaders, I think I ought to let you know the lines on which my mind is working.

24. In the first place, I am convinced that we have got to make up our minds one way or the other in the very near future if we are to avert civil war and the risk of a complete breakdown of the administration. On this there is complete unanimity of opinion, both European and Indian, in this country. The Governors have not a shadow of doubt about it. My first conclusion, therefore, is that our decision must be announced before the end of May at latest.

25. Secondly, I have very slender hopes of getting acceptance of the Cabinet Mission plan, and I am very much afraid that partition may prove to be the only possible alternative.

26. Thirdly, I feel strongly that the scheme of partition should be such as will not debar the two sides from getting together, even before we transfer power, if saner counsels prevail when the bewildering complications of partition are more clearly realized.

27. I will not send you even a first draft of the plan at this stage, as it is all so tentative, but I have discussed it with the Governors and hope to let you have a further report next week. The chances are that I will send Ismay home with the draft announcement towards the end of this month to discuss it with you, and try to reach the earliest possible agreement on the precise terms.

28. Once this is done, I plan to try to get Jinnah, Nehru, Patel, Liaquat, Baldev Singh and possibly Bhopal and Patiala, to come and stay with me in Simla. The date at which I am aiming is the 15th May. Alternatively I might aim at a rather bigger ‘round table conference’. I will then make one final determined effort to secure some compromise on the basis of the Cabinet Mission plan. If I fail, I shall have to fire my last shot in the shape of our announcement of partition. I shall ask both Nehru and Jinnah to have their working committees in Simla, so that they may refer to them before pronouncing a definite view.

29. I ought to add that whatever the decision may be, I feel that the Central Government should be as strong as possible until we hand over. In this connection I am thinking of trying to get Jinnah to join the Cabinet. One of the difficulties would be the question of an appropriate and acceptable portfolio. I doubt whether Congress would surrender either External Affairs or Home Affairs, and I doubt whether Jinnah would look at anything else. Perhaps he might be Leader of the House? The talks in Simla would then be in the nature of a discussion of a Cabinet Committee, which would, I think, be all to the good. ...

30. We have had two garden parties and have about three luncheon parties of 30, and larger dinners each week, at which I have made it a rule that not less than 50 per cent of those present must be Indians. There has been the greatest spate of Indian names in the Visitors’ Book ever known at Viceroy’s House, and the atmosphere appears to be remarkably friendly. I now have three full time Indian ADCs, a sailor, soldier and airman from the major communities. Unfortunately I feel I must record that my young daughter sitting with two English ladies to whom she had not been introduced heard one say to the other ‘It makes me absolutely sick to see this house full of dirty Indians’. I recounted this story to the Governors, and have invited their co-operation in sending home anybody who expresses sentiments of this type.
23. Congress President Prefers Pakistan to Forced Unity

Extracts from Record of Interview between Louis Mountbatten and J.B. Kripalani, 17 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

TOP SECRET

...I next asked him whether he had made up his mind as to what advice he would like to give me for the transfer of power. He replied 'The point has now been reached at which the Congress must reluctantly accept the fact that the Muslim League will never voluntarily come into a Union of India. Rather than have a battle we shall let them have their Pakistan, provided you will allow the Punjab and Bengal to be partitioned in a fair manner'.

I asked him whether Congress unequivocally accepted the Cabinet Mission plan, as clarified by the statement of December the 6th. His reply was 'HMG themselves admit that we have accepted it'. I invited him to write me a letter setting forth the details of the acceptance. He said it was all quite clear in the various resolutions, but that if I wished it he would look them up. I told him that when I have the final meeting with the leaders, which I hoped would be in a month's time, I should undoubtedly ask the question straight-out whether they accepted the Cabinet Mission plan, and that it would be to the advantage of Congress to be able to say 'Yes', even if it were only for the sake of history.

We then discussed what could be done to maintain law and order. He said 'The only thing we ask of the British is to maintain law and order and be fair and impartial during their last 14 months out here.' I assured him that this was our policy; and he replied 'There are many officers of all seniorities who have been out here too long to be able to change their outlook. I do not believe they can be impartial; they are so strongly imbued with anti-Congress ideas or pro-Muslim ideas. On the Frontier, even Indian members of the ICS have been affected; the whole of the Frontier administration is now anti-Congress; that's what makes the situation there so difficult.'

He told me that he had been brought up under British rule, and although he did not like the rule he had to admire the complete efficiency with which the British could keep law and order if they wanted to. I replied that conditions had changed: Governors were the constitutional Heads of Provinces and had to do what their Governments told them to do. He said that to this day the prestige of a British Governor stood so high that he was convinced that any man worth his salt could make his Government keep law and order. I quoted the case of Bihar, and told him of the difficulties Sir Hugh Dow was experiencing. He said I do not wish to speak against any man by name. I invited him to say what he thought, and he very reluctantly said 'Sir Hugh Dow is one of the most notorious anti-Congress men in India. No wonder his Government cannot co-operate with him.'...
Dear Lord Mountbatten,

I understand from Acharya Kripalani that you wanted to have information regarding the districts of Bengal and the Punjab which would fall in the Muslim and non-Muslim zones in case divisions of those Provinces are made. I have dealt with the question at length in my book India Divided but I may refer to the two maps at the end of the book which show in different shades the districts with Muslim and non-Muslim majorities and Indian States in blank. The figures are given in tabular form for the Punjab at pp. 239-46 and for Bengal at pp. 247-8. It will be noticed that in Bengal there are two districts on the border line—Dinajpur with a Muslim majority of 50.20 per cent, and Khulna with a Hindu majority of 50.31 per cent, and similarly in the Punjab there is the district of Gurdaspur with a nominal majority of Musalmans of 50.14 per cent.

Yours sincerely,
Rajendra Prasad.

---

25. India’s Stand on Entry to Commonwealth

Extract from the Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and V.K. Krishna Menon, 22 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

Top Secret

I had a long and friendly talk with Mr Menon over a cup of tea. We properly let down our hair together and discussed every aspect of the plan now being worked on, and in particular of its relation to the world situation. I found that he had very shrewd views on the future trend of governments in the UK and America, and on world-wide politics.

He expressed his fear to me of American absorption from every point of view. He thought that Mr Grady had been shooting off his mouth in a manner which revealed only too well and clearly what the Americans’ object in India was: they wished to capture all the markets, to step in and take the place of the British, and finally he did not exclude the possibility that their aim might even be to get bases in India for ultimate use against Russia.

I discussed with him the announcement in the Press that if Pakistan were formed it would undoubtedly wish to remain within the British Commonwealth. I told him that I had made clear to those Muslim Leaders who had spoken to me about it that I had no authority whatever to deal with the question of Pakistan remaining within the British Empire, and that in fact I should probably advise against it, since we could not wish to back one side of India against another if it came to civil war. The only way of avoiding the risk of this would, of course, be not to concede the Pakistan demand to remain within the Empire. But I pointed out that if the demand went over our heads to the peoples of the British Commonwealth, the demand might be too strong to be resisted, and that in fact he must now reckon with the extreme likelihood of Pakistan being a British dominion.

If that happened they would of course have a complete call on British officers, and all the Services, who wished to remain in India, since they could so remain whilst retaining the King's Commission. Not only would they be able to get the same equipment as Hindustan, but could do a great deal better, since they could obviously get secret equipment not available to anybody not within the Commonwealth, and they could go to our schools and make use of our experimental establishments, and keep up-to-date. In fact, backed by British and American arms and technique, Pakistan would in no while have armed forces immensely superior to those of Hindustan, and in spite of the obvious disadvantages from which they would at first suffer, there was no reason why they should not be able to rise above these with British and American help; and I presumed that places like Karachi would become big naval and air bases within the British Commonwealth.

I asked him how he would like to see that happen; and he absolutely shuddered, and said 'How can we prevent it'? I said 'By the simple expedient of being in the Commonwealth yourselves; then there can be no question of Pakistan getting ahead of you, nor could there be any question of the unilateral use of bases without full consultation.'

He said 'I see that, but how in the world can it be achieved?' (He pointed out that they had pretty well burnt their boats by the statements about leaving the Empire and that it would be extremely difficult for him to get it over, even with Nehru, who would be the only person who would immediately understand it, and even more difficult with Patel; and that even if the three of them got together, he did not see how they could get it across to Congress or to peoples of Hindustan).

I pointed out that this was entirely a matter for themselves to decide. But I suggested to him a solution along the lines he himself had raised last time, namely Dominion Status before June 1948, so as to avoid the necessity of having to make any declaration when he left, and thus leave India within the Commonwealth. My proposal was that if we could possibly get the scheme working in time, Pakistan and Hindustan should be declared independent dominions, with a Central Defence Council, a single army (pending partition) and with myself at head of the Central Defence Council and as Governor-General of both dominions on a constitutional basis. I pointed out that the British Army would come directly under my command, and that would be my personal contribution to the Defence Council. I suggested that in order not to imperil the sovereignty of dominion status, each dominion could voluntarily accord me the right of a casting vote as Chairman of the Defence Council.

He seemed rather smitten with this idea, but said immediately, that it would be far better to declare India a single dominion which would consist of two parts—Pakistan and Hindustan, since he still harped on the fact that to give each side dominion status was advertising the complete separation of Pakistan.

I urged him to open his eyes and see things clearly. If Pakistan were given independent status, then they were cutting themselves adrift from the British Commonwealth.

He said that the furthest he thought it would be possible to go would be to call themselves an Independent Nation in relation with the British Commonwealth.

I reminded him that the crux of the matter was that they should not sever their connection with the Crown, since on this depended the ability of British Officers holding the King's Commission to serve in India. Once more I said to him 'You cannot have your cake and eat it; make up your mind which you want to do.'
Finally he told me that Pandit Nehru was over-working to the point of a breakdown; that he had relays of shorthand typists in and out all during the day and night. Not only was he dealing with the big problems, but he was always going down and attending to every little item; personally attending small meetings, and even trying to interfere in street scenes. He asked me if I could not take him away for two or three days on a holiday; and said laughingly ‘to avoid both of you breaking down from over work’. I said ‘Where shall I take him, Simla?’ He said ‘No, that is too official; you would neither of you stop working’. I said ‘Where else’? He said ‘Why not try Kashmir?’ ...

But he still wished me to take Nehru away for two or three days, anywhere restful, so that we could get to know each other—‘For’, he said, ‘between you, you can solve all the problem of India’.

He told me that Nehru was becoming unpopular with the Hindus through his international and unbiased outlook.

I told him I was expecting to see the President of the Hindu Mahasabha soon; and he then urged me, in that case, to see the Secretary of the Shia Conference, Mr Ali Zaheer, who had been in the first Interim Government and had made way when Mr Liaquat Ali Khan joined. He said he was at Lucknow, but would come up if sent for. He claimed that the Shias were a fairly numerous section of the Muslim community, all of whom were opposed to the Muslim League.

26. Fatima Jinnah Argues Case for Pakistan

Miss Jinnah spent an hour and a quarter with me yesterday afternoon, and, as previously, was most friendly to me, personally.

It was difficult, however, to stop her from talking politics almost continuously, although I tried to steer the conversation quite often onto other subjects.

Nevertheless, she somehow always managed to return to political topics and made violent attacks on Congress and the Hindu community as a whole. She seemed almost fanatical at times in her attitude.

I was interested to note in our conversation that she made frequent references to the fact that ‘the Muslims would fight for separation and their rights if these were not agreed to’, whilst the next moment she would stress the way her brother was supporting in every way the Non-violence Declaration, and at the same time made continuous references to the fact that Pandit Nehru and others in Congress were doing just the opposite.

Like Mr Jinnah, she has, of course a persecution mania, and is obviously convinced that the Hindu intends to subjugate and dominate the Muslim completely.

She gave me a number of concrete examples of persecution and discrimination by the Hindus, and asserted that the police and Government officials, even here in Delhi, were also discriminating in favour of the Hindu. As an example she stated that Muslims in the Delhi area were searched much more drastically than anyone else to see if they were carrying fire-arms or other unauthorized objects, and said that she had had complaints on this score that very day, (the other side of the picture, is of course, given equally forcibly by Congress Members, and by Rajkumari Amrit Kaur, a paper on which is attached regarding the North West Frontier Province).

When I tried to be sympathetic regarding the Muslim demand for Pakistan, but at the same time asked for information as to how Pakistan in its original form or in a modified one would really work, Miss Jinnah refused to give any definite answer, saying all the time that the problems involved would be quite easy once Muslim demands had been agreed to.

As far as Bengal and the Punjab were concerned she admitted that the non-Muslim communities might not wish to remain permanently within Pakistan, but that they would, of course, be allowed to make their own choice. This, on the other hand, she stated, would have to be made possible for the Muslim minority in the Hindu areas.

27. Patel Demands Immediate Transfer of Full Authority

Extract from the Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Vallabhbhai Patel, 24 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

....I invited him to come at 3 o’clock on Friday for discussions with the senior members of my Staff about the plan for the transfer of power, and he accepted gladly.

Finally he said ‘Since you have come out here things have got much worse. There is a civil war on and you are doing nothing to stop it. You won’t govern yourself and you won’t let the Central Government govern. You cannot escape responsibility for this bloodshed’. Asked to elucidate a little more, he explained that he was not trying to link my arrival with the bloodshed since the bloodshed had been occasioned by HMG’s statement of the 20th February, and the desire of the Muslim League to seize power wherever they could, hoping that I would transfer power to them.

He concluded by saying: ‘If you will not act yourself, then turn over full authority to the Central Government and let us stop the Muslim League war in the Punjab and N-W Frontier; let us stop the Muslim League being mobilized in Bengal to attack Assam; let us govern.’

28. Transfer of Power on Dominion Status Basis

Minutes by H.L. Ismay to Louis Mountbatten, 25–8 April 1947

H.E.

In accordance with your instructions, I send you herewith a note on what we generally refer to as the ‘V.P. Menon Plan’.

2. As you will see, it is a long-term plan, which cannot be put into effect until both Hindustan and Pakistan have the necessary machinery to operate it. This is not likely to be until the end of this year, even if everything goes swimmingly.

3. We think it important that, when the time comes, the suggestion for a plan of this kind or anything like it should come from the Indian leaders themselves and should not appear to originate with us.

ISMAY
25th April, 1947
I should like the plan (amended as desired) to be typed out as an Appendix to the papers you are taking home, so that the Cabinet may be aware of its existence.

Re your para 3—I take it VP can get Congress to put this request forward when the time comes—but if they don’t we can still pin it to their existing request for interim dominion status.

Note by Mr V.P. Menon

Transfer of power as an interim arrangement on the basis of a Dominion Constitution

The alternatives before us are (a) a United India on the basis of the Cabinet Delegation’s plan and, if that is not possible, (b) a Divided India. In deciding on this main issue, the question of Dominion Status is not relevant. But in the moves that we may be making the objective of Dominion Status has to be kept in mind as an interim arrangement.

There is now complete frustration in the political field. In the fast moving political scene in India a quick decision is essential. Lawlessness is on the increase. Conflict between capital and labour is constant. Economic instability will add to our political troubles very soon. With the best will in the world British authority in India cannot tackle any of these problems seriously since it is avowedly in the process of liquidation. If then we stick on to the last date and to the last hour, we shall probably find the country in a turmoil, and a measure of responsibility for this state of affairs will be attributed to HMG.

The question then is, can a positive contribution be made now?

If HE’s efforts succeed in bringing the parties together on the Cabinet Mission plan, there is every advantage in transferring power as early as practicable to an Executive responsible to the Constituent Assembly in which once the League comes in the Princes also will participate. This is the ideal solution.

If we fail on the Cabinet Delegation’s plan, the alternative is the division of India. The only reason for us to continue the existing set-up till June 1948 is to see that the arrangements that are necessary to give effect to the partition are implemented. With the best will in the world, we can only set up machinery and cannot, in view of the time factor, be responsible for the ultimate outcome. Is it not then better tactics to confront the parties as constituted authorities with the problem from the beginning?

For the transitional period Congress has accepted Dominion Status, and if we accept that proposition immediately, there is a good chance that the interim arrangement may cover a fairly long period during which the question of Independence versus Dominion Status may not come directly in issue so far, at any rate, as the Congress is concerned. On the other hand, if we defer parting with power to the last minute, we may not have any alternative except to hand over on the basis of complete independence.
If the partition issue is settled, it would be difficult for us to resist the Congress claim for freedom to administer their own territories in the manner they like unhampered by an uneasy coalition, and the Muslim League then cannot argue that the whole thing should be deferred till their Pakistan is actually on its feet.

There is the question of the position of the States too. The States get back their freedom when we part with power in British India. There are many matters of common concern which it will be difficult for the existing set-up to settle either on a temporary or a permanent basis. Here again, once a free India (or Indias) knows where it stands, it is up to it to negotiate either a stand-still agreement or a long-term plan.

HMG have already declared that they would like to part with power in an orderly and peaceful manner. If this is to be accomplished, the starting point should be the existing Constitution. On any other basis there will be very great administrative dislocation. There are a considerable number of provisions in the Govt of India Act and the Orders in Council under it which will have to be kept in being either temporarily or permanently. On the other hand, if power is transferred on the basis of Independence in June 1948, India may have to draft an interim Constitution in addition to a permanent one.

Our starting point for the transfer of power should therefore be the existing Govt of India Act. It has to be duplicated if there are to be two Indias.

The plan would roughly be on the following lines. If HE fails to bring the parties together on the Cabinet Delegation’s plan, HMG would then give an award for the partition of India. Some of the partitioned areas (that is, non-Muslim areas) will probably decide to come into the existing Constituent Assembly. NWFP mayor may not do so. Other partitioned areas will probably have a Constituent Assembly of their own. Each of the Constituent Assemblies will be asked to elect an Executive Council, to which HMG would transfer authority in their respective areas as an interim arrangement till they draft their own Constitutions.

The Act has to be duplicated for these areas with suitable amendments withdrawing the control of the Secretary of State and the special powers of the Governors and the Governor-General. The existing Indian Legislature will be abolished and its place will be taken by the two Constituent Assemblies.

The Governor-General will be common for both Hindustan and Pakistan and will be appointed by His Majesty. The Governors of Provinces will be appointed by the Governor-General on the recommendation of his appropriate Executive Council.

The question then arises what is to happen in regard to matters of common concern, for example, Defence, External Affairs and Communications. For this purpose a Joint Council should be constituted with equal number of representatives selected by both the Hindustan and the Pakistan Executive Councils. This Council would be presided over by the Governor-General and will decide the joint policy on these subjects which will be implemented by the respective Governments. The Commander-in-Chief and other Heads of Services may be called in for advice as occasion arises.

It will be open to the two Governments to appoint Committees to consider the question of common arrangements as regards other joint services in the same way as we shall have to make arrangements with the Indian States. Pending the conclusion of such agreements, the best course would be for the existing services to function in responsibility to the separate Executives in respect of the different areas in which they operate. This arrangement could be superseded by negotiated agreements as they are ready or separate authorities could take over complete control in the two States as soon as they are equipped and ready to do so.
The psychological effect of power having been transferred earlier than 1948 will be an invaluable factor in the long-term view of Indo-British relationship. If there is to be a division of India, it will take not less than 4 or 5 years for both parts of the country to frame their Constitutions, hold elections and come to arrangements about the common matters. Once complete transfer of power is made as an interim measure on Dominion Status basis, the urgency of producing a Constitution immediately will lose its force and the parties will be given time to think things over with leisure and sobriety and proceed meanwhile with the urgent problems of administration and development. Further, the joint arrangement on the Defence side and the part that the Governor-General plays in that sphere will go very far in cementing the good relationship between Great Britain and India. One may also hope that if the two Governments sit together and start drafting agreements they may find that these agreements are required in respect of so many matters that they may ultimately come right round to the view that an impassable barrier cannot be created between the two Indias and that after all a unified Constitution is better for all concerned. Finally it may happen that having realized the importance and usefulness of the presence of a Governor-General appointed by His Majesty, both the parts of India may see the benefit of retaining that link with Great Britain.

29. Liaquat Ali Khan on the Future Political Scenario

Letter from Eric Mieville to Louis Mountbatten, 29 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 84A, NMML.

Your Excellency,

I dined with Liaquat Ali Khan last night, and after dinner we had about twenty minutes talk. He started on the usual communal lines, saying that whereas the Muslims were being accused of violent methods, people had short memories and had apparently forgotten the iniquities of the Hindus in Bihar. He went on to talk of the proposed plan and said that he was in no way worried about Bengal as he was convinced in his own mind that the province would never divide. He thought that it would remain a separate state, joining neither Hindustan nor Pakistan.

He then went on to the Punjab and said that he could not understand the attitude of the Sikhs to whom the Muslims had offered far better terms than the Hindus. He added that the trouble with the Sikhs was that they were very stupid people and lacked a leader. They talked about Sikhistan, but as a matter of fact there was not a single district in which the Sikhs were in the majority. He had pointed this out to them and told them that it was all a question of counting heads and on that basis the Sikhs had no case. He was not unhopeful of persuading them to join the Muslims, in which case he could see no reason for the division of the Punjab.

He then went on to talk about the North-West Block and said that British help would be needed by the Muslims, particularly to develop their industries. They had been used to dealing with the British who were satisfied with their 5 per cent, whereas if they went to the Marwari Banias, who were the only alternative, barring the Americans, they would want at least 10 per cent on their money and would strangle development, being closely allied to the Hindus.

He finally referred to Dominion status and hoped that we would not drive the Muslims out of the Empire.

E.M.
30. ‘Partition Plan for India Admitted: Provinces to Be Split’

Daily Worker, 29 April 1947.

From A.S.R. Chari, Daily Worker Special Correspondent

BOMBAY, Monday.—The first open admission of the move to partition India based on Viscount Mountbatten’s talks with top Congress and Moslem League leaders was made today.

Speaking at the Third Session of the Constituent Assembly in New Delhi, Dr Rajendra Prasad, the President, declared that they must be prepared not only for the division of India, but also for the division of some provinces.

Present were representatives of some one-third of the Indian Princes who have decided to participate in the Assembly. The Moslem League kept its boycott going.

Political circles in New Delhi say that Lord Mountbatten’s interim arrangement for transferring power will be to introduce dualism at the centre in the Punjab and in the NW Frontier Province.

The Times of India, following its traditional Anglo-Indian, pro-Imperialist policy, declares that Indian distrust has made division necessary in order to avoid ‘a further grim harvest of communal slaughter.’

It ignores the obvious fact that the very threat of partition has unleashed a new crop of fratricidal savagery.

GOING AHEAD

The Constitution Assembly is expected to reassemble again in June or July.

If, as seems certain, Britain decides on partition the Assembly will go ahead without the limitations of the State Paper of May 16, 1946, and advise strong union for Hindu majority and non-Moslem areas of British India, and for such of the States as will have joined the Constituent Assembly.

Thus Congress hopes to face June, 1948, with a fully worked out Constitution for the major part of India.

31. ‘The Partition Racket’

Editorial from Dawn, 30 April 1947.

If one were to go by what appears in the Hindu Press it would indeed seem as if the demand for the partition of the Punjab and Bengal had not only received the universal support of the people residing in the areas in question but that these two provinces had already been as good as partitioned. Such is the power of propaganda. The progress of this spurious agitation provides an interesting study of Congress technique, and of course the Congress can now be taken as a generic term which embraces the Hindu Mahasabha, the RSS and every other Caste Hindu body whatever the label under which it plies its communal trade. We do not pretend to know what view Lord Mountbatten takes of the extent of support which this partition stunt has been able to secure but to those who have lived with Indian political problems for any reasonable length of time this cannot but appear to be a mala fide communal racket.

The ‘partitionists’ claim that their demand for the division of the Punjab and Bengal has the same basis of justification as the Muslim demand for a division of India. This is prima facie absurd and untenable. If one examines the two demands from the positive aspect it will appear... as plain as a pikestaff that there is a radical difference between the underlying principles. The Muslims want Pakistan on the ground that as a separate nation they are entitled to a separate homeland. The Hindus of certain Western districts of Bengal and the Hindus and Sikhs of certain Eastern districts of the Punjab cannot claim the partition of these provinces on the same principles, because their Hindustan, the homeland of the Hindu nation, is already there. If the Hindus of Western Bengal claim a separate homeland on the provincial basis the Muslims in Bihar, UP and other Hindu majority provinces can do the same. Viewed negatively, the difference between the two demands becomes even more apparent. If Pakistan or a separate national homeland is denied to the Muslims, then the Muslim nation will not be left with a single inch of territory in the whole of this sub-continent which they can call their own. But if the Hindus and Sikhs of Western Bengal and Eastern Punjab are denied the partition of these two provinces, the effect on the Hindu nation will not be the same. The Hindus will still have a national home far larger and far stronger than the national home of the Muslims. Those, therefore, who say that the partition of Bengal and the Punjab should follow as a matter of ‘ruthless logic’ from the Muslim demand for the partition of India are being victims of confused thinking. What they consider good logic is in fact an obvious fallacy.

The second argument of the partitionists that if Muslims of India as a whole are unwilling to accept the rule of the Hindu majority, the Hindus and Sikhs of Bengal and the Punjab are similarly entitled to say that they will not accept the rule of the Muslim majority, is equally untenable. It is quite obvious that even when a Muslim sovereign State of Pakistan is established many millions of Muslims will continue to live in Hindustan, similarly millions of Hindus will continue to live in Pakistan. Even if the two provinces of Bengal and the Punjab are partitioned this problem will not be solved and well over 20,000,000 Hindus will still be left in what is being described as ‘truncated Pakistan’.

These broad aspects of the respective demands of Muslims and Hindus should convince all right-thinking persons that the two do not stand on the same footing, nor have they the same justification. The first is genuine, the second is \textit{mala fide}, and the one does not logically follow from the other. These facts are likely to be overlooked unless an unbiased mind is brought to the study of the problem. It is, however, idle to expect spiteful and clamorous propagandists to recognize the validity of facts, because their one chance of success lies in suppressing the truth and keeping issues confused. Nevertheless, when they talk of ‘logic’ they will do well to remember that if logic is to be carried to such lengths then the carving knife cannot stop after having sliced up Bengal and the Punjab. Of necessity, it will have to do some carving in UP, Bihar and Madras as well; and ruthless logic must award to the Musalmans a big slice of the city of Delhi, not merely on grounds of population but also of history.

32. \textit{Jinnah’s ‘About-turn’}

\begin{flushright}
Letter from E. Stanley Jones to Rajendra Prasad, 1 May 1947
R.P. Papers, File No. 6-I/45-6-7, NAI.
\end{flushright}

\textbf{Dear Dr Prasad:}

I wrote to you on April 26th regarding a conversation with Mr Jinnah. The substance of the conversation was this: Mr Jinnah said, ‘Your suggestion is absurdly simple, but if the Congress would say that it would concede Pakistan, then I am prepared to say I will enter a union with the rest of India.’
'And mean it?' I asked.
'Yes, and mean it,' he replied.
I am compelled to report the sequel.
When one of the Congress leaders raised the question of what Mr Jinnah meant by 'union', I wrote to Mr Jinnah on April 27th as follows:
'In continuation of our conversation I write for clarification regarding one point.
'When you said that "If the Congress would say that it would concede Pakistan, I would say that in that case, it is my intention to enter a union with the rest of India," I take it that you meant federal union. Is that correct?'
This reply was received today: 'Regret it was your own suggestion, thoroughly impracticable and contradictory.'
From this complete repudiation of what he said to me, you will have to draw conclusions. I have drawn mine.

Very respectfully yours,
E. Stanley Jones

33. Congress Position on Proposal for Transfer of Power
Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 1 May 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-4/1947, NMML.

Secret
17 York Road
New Delhi.

Dear Lord Mountbatten,
The Congress Working Committee met this afternoon and had the benefit of Gandhiji’s presence and advice. I thought it desirable to acquaint the Committee with the major developments that had taken place since their last meeting and, in particular, with the steps that you propose to take in the near future. Five of the members of the Committee are members of the Interim Government.

2. Neither I nor my colleagues of the Interim Government, who were present at our meeting, know the full extent of the proposals that Lord Ismay is taking with him to London. But you have been good enough to keep me informed of the broad outlines of these proposals and I placed these before the Committee. I felt that it was important that they should know them and should express their opinion confidentially in regard to them at this stage in order to avoid any misunderstanding at a later stage. I am writing this letter at the instance of the Committee to convey their reactions to recent developments and the new proposals, in so far as we know them.

3. It has been our Committee’s earnest desire that India should achieve her freedom peacefully and in an orderly manner. Our whole policy, even in regard to conflict, has been peaceful. We had accepted the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme last year, even though we did not approve of it wholly, in the hope that it might lead to such peaceful and cooperative transfer of power to Indian hands. Subsequently we accepted in its entirety the British Government’s interpretation of this Scheme, which they issued on December 6th, 1946, although this was contrary to our own interpretation. In the same hope of achieving results peacefully, we welcomed HMG’s announcement of February 20, 1947. We have tried to adhere faithfully to the Cabinet’s Missions Scheme in our work in the Constituent Assembly and otherwise.

4. We have, however, been faced with a major difficulty. The policy of the Muslim League, started in August last, has deliberately encouraged violence and disorder and has resulted in murder, arson and loot in many parts of India. This has affected the functioning of both the Central Government and several provincial governments. It has indeed been the dominant feature of Indian politics during the past eight months.

5. In view of the fact that we had made it clear at the outset that there should be no compulsion in making or enforcing a constitution for India on any unwilling parts, the necessity for this policy was not obvious, unless it was meant to terrorize and compel others against their will. The announcement of February 20, 1947, led to an intensification of this Muslim League policy and what used to be riots developed into organized large-scale violent attempts to over¬ power provincial governments. In spite of the most horrible consequences of this policy, it was not stopped or even suspended.

6. Our invitation to the Muslim League to send their representatives to meet ours was not responded to. We reiterated that we were against any compulsion over any part of India, and even indicated our acceptance of the principle of partition of India in order to avoid conflict.

7. We had hoped that the joint appeal for peace and the declaration that violence must on no account be used for political objectives would lead to the withdrawal of the Muslim League’s ‘direct action’ movement and the cessation of organized violence. This did not happen, and indeed there are indications that there will be an intensification of this policy.

8. Every proposal and every change must be viewed in this context. If policy is to be influenced by the kind of brutal and terroristic methods that have prevailed thus far, then the inevitable result will be civil war on an extensive scale. The continuous appeasement of those who employ such methods and a submission to these tactics is the surest way to encourage them and to produce other dangerous reactions. We can on no account be parties to such a policy.

9. We feel that we must lay stress on this as it is the dominating feature of the situation and other matters are secondary. Unless this is appreciated there can be no common approach to our problems.

10. This applies in particular today to the situation in the Frontier Provinces. We wish to make it clear that we cannot agree to a surrender to this violence of the Muslim League which has resulted in horrible tragedy [sic] and which is still continuing and finding encouragement.
We have not seen any condemnation of the events in the Frontier from any Muslim League leader.

11. Any proposal to put an end to a duly constituted provincial government having a large majority at its command, and to hold elections as a result of terrorism must be considered a surrender and must be resisted.

12. In regard to the proposals which, I presume, Lord Ismay is carrying with him to London, our Committee are prepared to accept the principle of partition based on self-determination as applied to definitely ascertained areas. This involves the partition of Bengal and Punjab. As you know, we are passionately attached to the idea of a United India, but we have accepted the partition of India in order to avoid conflict and compulsion. In order to give effect to this partition every effort should be made to meet the wishes and the interests of the people affected by it.
13. Even before and apart from such partition, recent events have made an administrative division of both Bengal and Punjab an obvious and urgent necessity.

14. In regard to Baluchistan, it would be improper for a few Sardars of the Shahi Jirga or some nominated members of the Quetta municipality to decide the future of the province. An attempt should be made to consult the people of the province. There is still plenty of time to devise some method for this purpose.

15. I have not entered in this letter into any detailed consideration of all your proposals as we have not got them before us in their final form.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru.

34. ‘Partition of Punjab and Bengal—A Sinister Move’

_Dawn, 1 May 1947._

DENOUNCING the demand for a partition of the Punjab and Bengal as ‘a sinister move actuated by spite and bitterness’ Mr M.A. Jinnah, President of the Muslim League, in a statement in New Delhi on Wednesday night said: ‘I do hope that neither the Viceroy nor His Majesty’s Government will fall into this trap and commit a grave error.’ Mr Jinnah reiterated his demand for the creation of a Muslim National State consisting of six provinces. ‘The transfer of power to the Pakistan and Hindustan Governments’, Mr Jinnah said ‘must mean a division of the defence forces. This is a clear cut road and the only practical solution of India’s constitutional problem.’

Mr Jinnah also envisages that an exchange of population will have to take place and ‘the Constituent Assemblies of Pakistan and Hindustan can take up the matter and subsequently the respective Governments in Pakistan and Hindustan can effectively carry out the exchange of population wherever it may be necessary and feasible.’

The following is the text of Mr Jinnah’s statement:

‘I find from the Press reports that the Congress has now started by emphasizing that in the event of Pakistan and Hindustan being established, the Punjab will be partitioned and the Hindu Mahasabha has started a vigorous propaganda that Bengal should be partitioned.’

PRINCIPLE OF PARTITION

_I should like to point out that there is a great deal of confusion created on purpose. The question of the division of India, as proposed by the Muslim League is based on the fundamental fact that there are two nations—Hindus and Muslims and the underlying principle is that we want a National Home and a National State in our homelands which are predominantly Muslim and comprise the 6 units of the Punjab, N.-W.F.P., Sind, Baluchistan, Bengal and Assam. This will give the Hindus their national home and national state of Hindustan which means three-fourth of British India._

‘Now the question of partitioning Bengal and the Punjab is raised not with a _bona fide_ object but as a sinister move actuated by spite and bitterness as they feel that India is going to be divided, firstly, to create more difficulties in the way of the British Government and the Viceroy and secondly to unnerve the Muslim by opening and repeatedly emphasizing that the Muslims will get a truncated or mutilated, moth-eaten Pakistan.

‘This clamour is not based on any sound principle except that the Hindu minorities in the Punjab and Bengal wish to cut up these provinces and cut up their own people into two in these provinces._
HINDU HOMELANDS

'The Hindu have their homelands. As I said, consisting of six vast provinces. Merely because a portion of the minorities in the Pakistan provinces have taken up this attitude, the British Government should not countenance it because the result of that will be, logically, that all other provinces will have to be cut up in a similar way, which will be dangerous, as to embark on this line will lead to the breaking up of the various provinces and create a far more dangerous situation in the future than at present.

'If such a process were to be adopted, it would strike at the root of the administrative, economic and political life of the provinces which have for nearly a century developed and built up on that basis and have grown and are functioning under the present Constitution as autonomous provinces.'

BEWARE OF THE TRAP

'It is a mistake to compare the basic principle of the demand of Pakistan and the demand of cutting up the provinces throughout India into fragmentation. I do hope that neither the Viceroy nor His Majesty's Government will fall into this trap and commit a grave error.

'It is obvious that if the Hindu minorities in Pakistan wish to emigrate and go to their homelands of Hindustan they will be at liberty to do so and vice versa those Muslims who wish to emigrate from Hindustan can do so and go to Pakistan; and sooner or later exchange of population will have to take place and the Constituent Assemblies of Pakistan and Hindustan can take up the matter, and subsequently the respective Governments in Pakistan and Hindustan can effectively carry out the exchange of population wherever it may be necessary and feasible.

'The Congress propaganda is intended to disrupt and put obstacles and obstructions and difficulties in the way of an amicable solution. It is quite obvious that they have put up the Hindu Mahasabha in Bengal and the Sikhs in the Punjab, and the Congress Press is inciting the Sikhs and misleading them. The Sikhs do not stand to gain by the partition of the Punjab but they will be split into two halves. More than half of their population will have to remain in Pakistan even if a partition of the Punjab takes place according to their conception, whereas in Pakistan, as proposed by the Muslim League they will play, as one solid minority, a very big part. We have always been very willing to meet them in every reasonable way.

'Besides, the White Paper of February 20 lays down that power will be transferred to authority or authorities which will be made in a manner that will be smooth and create the least amount of difficulties and trouble.'

CLEAR-CUT ROAD

'If power is to be transferred to various Governments it can only be done successfully to the Pakistan Group and the Hindustan Group which will establish stable, secure Governments and will be able to run these Governments peacefully and successfully.

'The transfer of power to Pakistan and Hindustan Governments must mean a division of the defences as a 'sine qua non' of such a transfer and the defence forces should be completely divided—and in my opinion can be divided before June 1948—and the States of Pakistan and Hindustan should be made absolutely free, independent and sovereign. This is a clear-cut road and the only practical solution of India's constitutional problem.'—API
35. India’s Relationship with the British Commonwealth

Letter from Archibald Nye to Louis Mountbatten, 2 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/152, Acc. No. 3467, NAI.

MADRAS GOVERNOR’S CAMP
Guindy

My dear Dickie,

In the published statements of the British Government we have said that India is at liberty to choose whether she will remain within the British Commonwealth or out of it, but the Prime Minister has usually added that he hopes she will decide to stay in. I notice that Mr Alexander has made a few speeches recently much on the same lines, and when I was at Delhi in the middle of April I got the general impression that whilst nobody had any intention of proposing to India that she should remain in the Commonwealth, nevertheless if she of her own free will suggested that she do so, that we would be prepared to say ‘yes.’ In short, there seems to be a tacit assumption that it would be, if not in our own interest, at any rate to the mutual benefit of both countries, for India to remain within the Empire.

I have given a good deal of thought to this subject and I have very grave doubts if this tacit assumption is justified. I wonder if anyone has really made a cold, detached, analytical examination of the subject, whether, for example, the Chiefs of Staff have really considered what is involved, whether our own Cabinet has ever really weighed up the pros and cons. I very much doubt it.

It seems to me that in this changing world strategy is changing, and we must no longer ally ourselves to what in the past may well have been principles, but what today are mere shibboleths. We must align our thoughts to the changes which are taking place and, in particular, to the shrinking of our Empire, and we must have regard to the realities of the world situation as it confronts us today, or rather will confront us tomorrow.

No informed person can dispute that the only real potential danger to world peace in the next few decades comes from Russia. I use the word ‘potential’ because I am no alarmist and I do not think Russia is likely to go to war during, say, the next ten years. If Russia is a threat to the world in general, placed where she is geographically, she is a threat to India in particular, in fact in the foreseeable future, I think it fair to say that the only real threat to India is from Russia.

There has been so much talk about the gallantry of the Indian troops and the leadership which they have shown that there is a danger of people assuming that it follows that, given a little time, the Indian armed forces will be very strong. But the military strength of any country is relative, that is, relative to the threat which confronts it, and on that basis India (vast though its territory, enormous though its numbers, brave though its people) will be unquestionably the weakest military country in the world. Putting aside its problems of turning captains into majors-general overnight and ignorant coolies into highly qualified technicians, it has no scientific organization nor the knowledge that goes with it. It has no research organization nor the people qualified to undertake research. I doubt indeed if it will be able to provide the money for such an organization. It is, therefore, lacking in the very first requirement for any modern army. Secondly, its industrial potential is and will be for a very long time virtually non-existent. It will therefore be quite incapable of maintaining armed forces in action. Indeed, in brief, one may say that of all the numerous requirements which go to make for military efficiency, India will possess but one, that is, the courage of its people, and this unfortunate country finds itself on the border of Russia, the strongest military power in the world. If Russia chose to invade India, it would virtually be the process of taking toffee from a child. These poor people would in effect go forth to battle equipped with a loin cloth and a spear.

And if it becomes necessary to introduce some form of Pakistan, the situation of Hindustan is (if indeed that is possible) even more powerless than that of a unified India. Not only would the existing defence forces be truncated, but the natural frontiers of India (whether NWFP belongs to Hindustan or Pakistan) would be in the hands of a potentially hostile State who could quietly penetrate into the plains of India and place themselves in time of peace in a perfect ‘jumping off position’.

In past wars India has contributed man-power and materials of war, but in a new war where an invader will move with such rapidity, what hope is there of India being able to contribute anything to the common good?

There is one other aspect which merits some consideration. Our strategic interest is not so much that we ourselves as an Empire should possess this, that or the other country, but that we should deny to our potential enemies territory from which they could threaten our sea communications. An enemy in possession of India could undoubtedly threaten our communications, but we have to face cold hard facts. There is nothing that we could do to prevent Russia occupying India if indeed Russia wishes to do so, and India remaining within the Empire will not help one iota.

Surely it follows that if we take India into the British Commonwealth of Nations, we are taking, at least from the defence point of view, an ailing child who has literally nothing whatever to offer but who, on the other hand, constitutes a grave liability. We have seen two major wars in our lifetime. The one thing that our Empire needs is the means to recuperate from these awful losses—peace. How can we contemplate the risk of being involved in another war, by taking on this grave liability for the defence of India?

I have little doubt that amongst the realists in this country, these facts are beginning to be recognized, perhaps not in their stark reality, but sufficiently for the leaders to ponder and ask themselves whether there is a prospect of India achieving independence today and losing it tomorrow. I feel quite sure that a man like Jawaharlal Nehru, an interesting combination of a clear-headed realist and a not-so-clear-headed idealist, must be well aware of this menace which is hanging over this country. It must be quite apparent to him that the possibilities ahead of India are simply immense if only she can get security. I have little doubt that despite his published statements, many of which are bitterly anti-British, in fact he has many sentimental, cultural and emotional ties with our country and he realizes, indeed he cannot fail to realize, the great benefits which would accrue to India if she can remain in the Commonwealth, and indeed his only problem is how this could be done, consistent with some of the past statements of Congress.

It seems to me that there is, therefore, a distinct possibility in the near future that we may be faced with a request for India not to take its place formally as a member of the British Commonwealth, but for proposals to be put up which in effect would guarantee India all those advantages which accrue to members of the British Commonwealth, whilst at the same time preserving for her some form of independence. In other words, we may be asked to make a bargain. From what I have said it is evident that in my view the responsibility which we may be asked to undertake is so heavy, and its potentialities so grave, that it may well jeopardise the safety of our Empire. If we are to be asked to undertake such risks, surely we must know what India has to offer in return? I have discussed this question with many intelligent Indians and the only answer I have ever received is, ‘We have trade to offer’. But a closer examination will show that such a claim simply cannot hold water. Except for those ties of race, of affection and of loyalty to the Crown, and for certain preferences of mutual benefit to those concerned, we get no specific trade advantages with countries merely because they are within the Empire. Trade follows certain natural channels. It is unquestionably true that it is of vital importance to us to be able to find a wide and increasing market for our goods in India. It is equally true that if India is to live, let alone develop, she must import the type of goods which we provide. It is true she can import them from countries other than ours, but I have little doubt that for a variety of reasons too detailed to specify, a large proportion of India’s trade will continue to be done with England, and if there was any unwillingness on her part to do so, the existence of the sterling balance would determine matters for very many years to come. It follows, therefore, quite clearly that India has nothing whatever to offer in exchange for any help we may be asked to give in the way of defence obligations. In the foreseeable future, India cannot conceivably be anything other than a weakness and an anxiety to other members of our Commonwealth.

I think that people like you and me who have recently come to India not only with no prejudice against this country but with a passionate desire to do all we can to atone for the mistakes we have made (whilst being justly proud of our achievements) may be perhaps a little inclined to lose our judgment. We are so anxious to go more than half way to meet our Indian friends, indeed as the Americans say, ‘To lean over backwards,’ so anxious to hold out a helping hand wherever we can, that we run the risk of being perhaps a little impetuous. I would beg of you to restrain your boundless enthusiasm and, in an endeavour to do what is best for this country, not to overlook what is good for our own Commonwealth.

Yours sincerely,
Archibald Nye

36. Partition of Punjab and Bengal Opposed by Jinnah
Letter from M.A. Jinnah to Winston Churchill, 2 May 1947

10 AURANGZEB ROAD,
NEW DELHI, INDIA,

Dear Mr Churchill,

I thought I should send you the accompanying statement that was issued by me recently, as perhaps your attention may not be drawn to the full text.

I hope you will give very careful consideration to it, as I understand His Majesty’s Government are about to take their decision regarding the grave issues that are facing us.

Yours sincerely,
M.A. JINNAH

Rt Hon’ble Winston S. Churchill,
Leader of the Opposition,
Houses of Parliament,
London.

---

1 For the full text of this statement, see report in Dawn, 1 May 1947 earlier.
37. Appeal Not to Partition Punjab
Record of an Interview between Rajkumari Amrit Kaur and Louis Mountbatten, 3 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 193, NMML.

TOP SECRET

She told me how very distressed Mr Gandhi had been that the highly secret information of his difference of opinion with some of the Congress leaders, over the plan he had outlined to me when I first saw him, should have leaked out to the Press. He was highly indignant at these leakages, and she knew he would be in sympathy with my indignation at the leakage and blackmail in the Hindustan Times today.

She told me she was herself a Punjabi, and appealed to me not to agree to the partition of the Punjab.

I pointed out my position, and said that the very last thing I wanted was partition in any part of India. I asked her whether an offer of independence to the Punjab would save its unity. She felt that it might be a solution, and said she would recommend it to Mr Gandhi.

She urged me on no account to fall into the trap of making a decision on behalf of the British Government which would ultimately be regarded as a very wrong decision should it be in favour of the partition of India.

I thanked her for this advice, and told her that I had been alive to this point of view from the very beginning and that this was my policy—to base the final decision on the will of the people of India.

38. Divided India Would Be Followed by Fragmentation of States
M.K. Gandhi’s Talk with Kiran Shankar Roy, 3 May 1947

Bhangi Nivas, New Delhi

If the British want to give us swaraj after large-scale massacre and migration of population, we do not want it. Jinnah Saheb has stated that full protection will be given to the minorities in Pakistan but it is only a verbal assurance and has not been put into practice. It therefore becomes the duty of the British to remonstrate against the injustice being done to the minorities. The Viceroy should issue a statement to the effect. But I don’t see any move in this direction. Maybe, I am growing old and becoming senile. I am, therefore, left all alone to plead for my line of thinking. Gurudev’s bhajan—Ekla chalore—is my only consolation. Now my only wish is to sacrifice myself in this effort. If nothing else, God will at least grant me this wish. Remember, if you divide India today, tomorrow provinces and states will be fragmented into smaller parts. And thus Rajputana, Gujrat, Bihar, Delhi, Maharashtra and the Punjab also will follow suit. We might escape its consequences because we are on the brink of death but generations to come will curse us at every step for the kind of swaraj we shall have bequeathed to them.
Towards Freedom: 1947

39. ‘Their Latest’
Editorial from Dawn, 4 May 1947.

If as the Supreme Commander of South-East Asia Lord Mountbatten had left any ‘war strategy’ unlearned, now is the time to complete his education! All he has to do is to watch the big guns of Hindu propaganda turn now on one ‘enemy’ and now on another, with carefully worked out timing. The broadside against the territorial integrity of Pakistan was accompanied by point blank fusillades at League leadership, particularly the Qaed-e-Azam. The objective on this ‘perimeter’ was of the nature of ‘softening operations’. The new stunt of the dismemberment of Bengal and the Punjab was to be given the appearance of a settled fact; the Muslim League was to be demoralized into giving up the Pakistan demand. Success having been far from conspicuous on this front, new strategy has been evolved with none else than Lord Mountbatten as the target. The first volley has been fired from Mr Birla’s gun-turret. Says his paper: ‘For the first time since Lord Mountbatten assumed Viceroyalty the feeling that he may not be playing fair has come among some Congressmen and Sikh leaders’.

Whether this formidable shell manufactured in the Hindustan Times Ordnance Factory ‘By Our Special Representative’ has registered a hit or a miss in Viceroy’s House is not known. After all, one who has been a Supreme Commander presumably keeps his defences properly manned. In fact, a Viceroy with the drive, resourcefulness and record of war service such as Lady Mountbatten has, should be able to keep the Viceregal defences also well womanned. We do not imagine, therefore, that these gun-men of the Congress will get much change out of the present occupant of Viceroy’s House through tactics such as these. Nevertheless, this should make Lord Mountbatten’s knowledge of men, matters and methods grow from more to more.

And why all this hullabaloo that the Viceroy is about to be unfair to Congressmen and Sikhs? The reasons given are (1) his ‘reported attitude towards the Frontier Ministry’, and (2) his ‘plan to divide the Punjab into 12 non-Muslim and 17 Muslim districts thereby dealing a blow to Sikh interests’. With regard to the first, we do not wish to anticipate events which are moving fast; but assuming that the Viceroy is about to take certain decisions in the interest not only of peace and tranquility but also of justice and democracy, which may lead to the exit of the present leader of the Frontier Ministry, why should it be an act of unfairness? The answer of course is that the Congress (which means the Caste Hindus), like the King, can do no wrong. What it says is necessarily right, what it demands must be necessarily conceded. Anyone who disagrees is unfair, unreasonable, intransigent, reactionary and all manner of other things. The Frontier Ministry may have become a political scare-crow which does not even scare the masses of people in the Ministerial landscape must be rid of this ugly anachronism; by all canons of democratic Government fresh elections may have become inevitable and imperative. But none shall intervene to set the wrong right because the Congress will not have it. Lord Mountbatten must forget what he saw, heard and felt during his recent visit to that troubled territory; he must instead see through Congress eyes, hear through Congress ears and learn through the Congress mind. If he does not do so, the multi-millionaire-controlled Congress Press will ransack the English dictionary for all the uncomplimentary adjectives and hurl them at his undevoted head.

As regards the ‘great injustice’ which Lord Mountbatten is reported to be contemplating, namely giving only 12 districts of Pakistan to Hindustan, how cleverly does Hindu propaganda divert attention from the fact that if even a single district of the Punjab is taken away from the Muslim national State it will be an act of gross injustice not to the Hindus and Sikhs but to the Musalmans! What Hindu propaganda is obviously attempting to achieve is to make sure that at least these 12 districts are annexed by the Hindus, and to that end they are putting their demand much higher and condemning the Viceroy in advance for not agreeing to that monstrous proposition. If indeed it is true that division of the Punjab has been recommended by Lord Mountbatten on the basis of only 17 districts remaining in Pakistan, it is the Muslims who must bestir themselves and prepare to resist the outrage at any cost. The Muslim nation cannot consent to a single tehsil belonging to its homeland being severed from it and given away to Hindustan. If, such a mutilation of Pakistan is attempted, Britain may well write off peace from the Indian sub-continent for endless years to come. In that event we clearly foresee a prolonged struggle for the preservation of the territorial integrity of the Muslim State. Where it will lead to we dare not predict. It is for Lord Mountbatten to take all these factors into account before finally making up his mind. The Muslim mind has, of course, been made up long ago.

40. Gandhi on Partition, British Withdrawal and Indo-British Relationship

M.K. Gandhi's Interview to Reuters, 5 May 1947

_CWMG_, Vol. LXXXVII, pp. 415-17.

DOON CAMPBELL: Is the communal division of India inevitable? Will such division solve the communal problem?

GANDHIJI: Personally, I have always said 'No', and I say 'No' even now to both these questions.

Do you subscribe to the opinion that Britain will be morally obliged to stay on in India if the outstanding Hindu-Muslim differences have not been resolved by June, 1948?

This is a question that had never been put to me before. It would be a good thing if the British were to go today—thirteen months means mischief to India. I do not question the nobility of the British declaration, I do not question the sincerity of the Viceroy, but facts are facts. Neither the British Cabinet nor the Viceroy, however outstanding he may be, can alter facts. And the facts are that India had been trained to look to the British power for everything. Now it is not possible for India to take her mind off that state all of a sudden. I have never appreciated the argument that the British want so many months to get ready to leave. During that time all parties will look to the British Cabinet and the Viceroy. We have not defeated the British force of arms. It has been a victory for India by moral force. Assuming, of course, that every word of what has been said is meant to be carried out, then the British decision will go down in history as the noblest act of the British nation. That being so the thirteen months' stay of the British power and British arms is really a hindrance rather than a help because everybody looks for help to the great military machine they have brought into being. That happened in Bengal, in Bihar, in the Punjab, and in the North-West Frontier Province. The Hindus and the Muslims said in turn: 'Let us have the British troops.' It is a humiliating spectacle. I have often said before but it does not suffer in value through repetition because every time I repeat it, it gains force: the British will have to take the risk of leaving India to chaos or anarchy. This is so because there has been no home rule; the [rule] has been imposed on the people. And, when you voluntarily remove that rule there might be no rule in the initial state. It might have come about if we had gained victory by the force of arms. The communal feuds you see here are, in my opinion, partly due to the presence of the British. If the British were not here, we would still go through the fire, no doubt, but that fire would purify us.
Towards Freedom: 1947

What sort of Indo-British relationship do you envisage after June, 1948?

I envisage the friendliest relationship between Britain and India assuming that a complete withdrawal takes place with complete honesty behind it—no mental reservations of any kind whatsoever.

Does the clause incorporated in the Draft Constitution on the abolition of untouchability in itself represent a great reform?

No. That clause does not represent a great or any reform. It registers the fact that a great revolutionary reform has taken place in Hindu society. I confess that untouchability has not yet been pulled out root and branch from the soil. Like the evil effects of the British connection, those of untouchability, a much older institution, do not disappear in a flash. It may take some years, perhaps, before a stranger coming to India can say there is no untouchability in any shape or form.

Do you believe the United Nations Organization, as at present constituted, can maintain a lasting peace?

No. I fear the world is heading towards another showdown. It is a fear that permeates many minds. But if all goes well in India, then the world may have a long peace. It will largely depend on the manner in which India takes it. And that will depend largely on British statesmanship.

What is the solution to the Palestine problem?

It has become a problem which is almost insoluble. If I were a Jew, I would tell them: 'Don't be so silly as to resort to terrorism, because you simply damage your own case which otherwise would be a proper case.' If it is just political hankering then I think there is no value in it. Why should they hanker after Palestine? They are a great race and have great gifts. I have lived with the Jews many years in South Africa. If it is a religious longing then surely terrorism has no place. They should meet the Arabs, make friends with them, and not depend on British aid or American aid or any aid, save what descends from Jehovah.

41. HMG Should Avoid the Term ‘Partition’

Extract from a Letter from Horace Alexander (Probably to Agatha Harrison), 5 May 1947

NEW DELHI

...‘I want to get across certain things while Ismay is in London, very urgent for those who may be preparing statements or speeches.

First, don't be too worried about Gandhi's Reuter statement. Quite frankly, I think he confuses the inviolable human unity of India with things like political frontiers. But it's all right. He knows he has failed to convince his Congress colleagues, and he returns sorrowful to his heroic work in Bihar—turning his back gladly on the unrealities of Delhi.
Secondly, let the word partition be avoided at all costs. Division is a word that does not arouse the same passions, though for practical purposes it means the same.

Third, there must be no hanky-panky about the NWFP?

42. Gandhi’s Thoughts on Pakistan

M.K. Gandhi’s Talk with Local Muslims in New Delhi, 7 May 1947

Asked ... whether Pakistan would die a natural death if conceded, Gandhiji’s reply was:

Can you describe Pakistan to me? What reply can be given to an unknown premise? I have tried to understand what it is and have failed. And if the Punjab and Bengal today are hall-marks of Pakistan, then it can never exist.

I cannot understand the meaning of Pakistan. Should Pakistan be attained after so much blood-shed? I am the lone follower of my ideas. Maybe, my intellect is deadened by old age! Still, how can I help mentioning the facts? Since I regard myself as a servant of the nation I would be betraying the faith of the people if I did not express what is in my heart. Personally I will say that the matter concerning the partition of the provinces should be decided by us peacefully after the British have withdrawn and with mutual consultation. Why should we have the British between us? Keeping them between us is an indication of our cowardice and mutual lack of trust. Is it a matter of any credit if two brothers take their quarrel to a third man and seek judgment from him? Moreover I am surprised that no one stops to think that the British would exploit to their advantage this weakness of ours. Looking up to the British for every little thing dissipates our strength and cripples us. I would say even with regard to the Princely States that they are in such a helpless state that I pity them. The British were their protectors. Now, if they want to be happy they will have to be part of India and become servants of the nation handing over their powers to the people....

There was a time when Great Britain was considered the Empress of the Oceans. There was none to contest her claim. Hence if Britain maintains true and honest friendship with India, she will attain the highest moral stature and the world will bow before her. Not only that, she will attain a position even higher than that of an Empress and all countries will have to look to her to shape the future of the world. This is because I know from experience that the British do possess these qualities and powers. I have lived among the British for many years and a large number of Englishmen and women are my friends.

I have passed some of the best years of my life among them and I have always voted against the name of ‘Perfidious Albion’ for them and have preferred to subscribe to Cowper’s well-known verse ‘Hypocrisy is an ode to virtue’. But Britain has yet to rise to those heights.

43. ‘Gandhiji Meets Mr Jinnah: League Leader Harps on Pakistan’

The meeting between Gandhiji and Mr Jinnah, which took place on Tuesday evening lasted over two hours and 45 minutes. Gandhiji arrived at Mr Jinnah’s house punctually at 5.30 p.m. and was received at the gate by Mr Jinnah’s secretary.

After the meeting, Mr Jinnah issued the following statement to the Press which, he said, had the approval of Gandhiji: ‘We discussed two matters. One was the question of division of
Towards Freedom: 1947

India into Pakistan and Hindustan and Mr Gandhi does not accept the principle of division. He thinks that division is not inevitable whereas in my opinion not only Pakistan is inevitable but this is the only practical solution of Indian political problem.

'The second matter which we discussed was a letter which we both have signed jointly appealing to the people to maintain peace and we both have come to the conclusion that we must do our best in our respective spheres to see that appeal of ours is carried out and we will make every effort for this purpose.'

Gandhiji left Bhangi Colony for Mr Jinnah’s residence immediately after the Working Committee had concluded its emergency session which lasted about two hours. Eight members of the Working Committee—Acharya Kripalani, Pandit Nehru, Sardar Patel, Maulana Azad, Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, Mrs Sarojini Naidu and Mr Shankerrao Deo—attended the session. Gandhiji was present at the meeting throughout. Mr Jagjivan Ram and Qazi Attaullah Khan, Frontier Congress leader, attended the meeting by special invitation.

The unexpected decision to call a meeting of the members of the Working Committee present in Delhi, is believed to have been taken only a few hours before the Committee met.

Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru had prolonged discussions with Gandhiji on Monday night. Four top-ranking Congress leaders, Acharya Kripalani, Maulana Azad, Dr Rajendra Prasad and Mr Shankerrao Deo, called on Gandhiji on Tuesday morning, presumably to discuss the proposed meeting between him and Mr Jinnah....

44. Nehru and Patel Willing for a Form of Early ‘Dominion Status’

Telegram from Louis Mountbatten to H.L. Ismay, 8 May 1947

I would like you to distribute copies of V.C.P. 40 to the Cabinet Committee and inform them that Patel and Nehru have now themselves indicated through V.P. Menon a desire for a form of early Dominion Status (but under a more suitable name) at least until a new Constitution has been fully framed which is unlikely to be for some considerable time after June 1948.

2. We shall spend the weekend working out details with Nehru and obtaining Patel's concurrence. A further telegram will be sent to you on Sunday.

3. If this comes off it will not only produce a sporting chance of the main Union of India remaining indefinitely in the Commonwealth; but will also get over the difficulty of Jinnah having already indicated Pakistan's insistence on not being kicked out of the Empire. It will also largely solve the problem of those Indian States which refuse to join a Constituent Assembly.

4. I know that at the time that you and Abell left it did not seem that this scheme could be pulled off but the situation has been completely changed by Patel and Nehru coming forward themselves. This is the greatest opportunity ever offered to the Empire and we must not let administrative or other difficulties stand in the way. I rely on you both to give this your full backing.
45. Partition of Punjab and Bengal Is ‘Wrong in Every Case’
Letter from M.K. Gandhi to Louis Mountbatten, 8 May 1947

ON THE TRAIN TO PATNA

Dear friend

It strikes me that I should summarize what I said and wanted to say and left unfinished for want of time, at our last Sunday’s meeting.

I

Whatever may be said to the contrary, it would be a blunder of the first magnitude for the British to be a party in any way whatsoever to the division of India. If it has to come, let it come after the British withdrawal, as a result of understanding between the parties or of an armed conflict which according to Quaid-e-Azam Jinnah is taboo. Protection of minorities can be guaranteed by establishing a court of arbitration in the event of difference of opinion among contending parties.

2. Meantime the Interim Government should be composed either of Congressmen or those whose names the Congress chooses or of Muslim League men or those whom the League chooses. The dual control of today, lacking team work and team spirit, is harmful for the country. The parties exhaust themselves in the effort to retain their seat and to placate you. Want of team spirit demoralizes the Government and imperils the integrity of the services so essential for good and efficient government.

3. Referendum at this stage in the Frontier (or any Province for that matter) is a dangerous thing in itself. You have to deal with the material that faces you. In any case nothing should or can be done over Dr Khan Saheb’s head as Premier. Note that this paragraph is relevant only if division is at all to be countenanced.

4. I feel sure that partition of the Punjab and Bengal is wrong in every case and a needless irritant for the League. This as well as all innovation can come after the British withdrawal, not before, except always for mutual agreement. Whilst the British power is functioning in India, it must be held principally responsible for the preservation of peace in the country. That machine seems to be cracking under the existing strain which is caused by the raising of various hopes that cannot or must not be fulfilled. These have no place during the remaining thirteen months. This period can be most profitably shortened if the minds of all were focussed on the sole task of withdrawal. You and you alone can do it to the exclusion of all other activity so far as the British occupation is concerned.

5. Your task as undisputed master of naval warfare, great as it was, was nothing compared to what you are called to do now. The single-mindedness and clarity that gave you success are much more required in this work.

6. If you are not to leave a legacy of chaos behind, you have to make your choice and leave the Government of the whole of India including the States to one party. The Constituent Assembly has to provide for the governance even of that part of India which is not represented by the Muslim League or some States.

7. Non-partition of the Punjab and Bengal does not mean that the minorities in these Provinces are to be neglected. In both the Provinces they are large and powerful enough to arrest and demand attention. If the popular Governments cannot placate them, the Governors should during the interregnum actively interfere.

8. The intransmissibility of paramountcy is a vicious doctrine, if it means that they can become sovereign and a menace for independent India. All the power wherever exercised by the British in India must automatically descend to the successor. Thus the people of the States become as much part of independent India as the people of British India. The present Princes are puppets created or tolerated for the upkeep and prestige of the British Power. The unchecked powers exercised by them over their people is probably the worst blot on the British Crown. The Princes under the new regime can exercise only such powers as trustees can and as can be given to them by the Constituent Assembly. It follows that they cannot maintain private armies or arms factories. Such ability and statecraft as they possess must be at the disposal of the Republic and must be used for the good of their people and the people as a whole. I have merely stated what should be done with the States. It is not for me to show in this letter how this can be done.

9. Similarly difficult but not so baffling is the question of the Civil Service. Its members should be taught from now to accommodate themselves to the new regime. They may not be partisans taking sides. The slightest trace of communalism among them should be severely dealt with. The English element in it should know that they owe loyalty to the new regime rather than to the old and therefore to Great Britain. The habit of regarding themselves as rulers and therefore superiors must give place to the spirit of true service of the people.

II

10. I had a very pleasant two hours and three quarters with Quaid-e-Azam Jinnah on Tuesday last. We talked about the joint statement on non-violence. He was agreeably emphatic over his belief in non-violence. He has reiterated it in the Press statement which was drafted by him.

11. We did talk about Pakistan cum partition. I told him that my opposition to Pakistan persisted as before and suggested that in view of his declaration of faith in non-violence he should try to convert his opponents by reasoning with them and not by show of force. He was, however, quite firm that the question of Pakistan was not open to discussion. Logically, for a believer in non-violence, nothing, not even the existence of God could be outside its scope.

Rajkumari Amrit Kaur saw the first eight paragraphs, the purport of which she was to give to Pandit Nehru with whom I was to send you this letter. But, I could not finish it in New Delhi. I finished it on the train.

I hope you and Her Excellency are enjoying your hard earned rest.

Yours sincerely,
GANDHI
46. Nehru’s Apprehensions regarding the New Proposals for Transfer of Power

Extract from a Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 10 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/151, Acc. No. 3819, NAI.

SECRET SIMLA

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Thank you for your two letters dated 10th May which I have just received. As suggested by you, I am trying to get a meeting of the Congress Working Committee convened for the 16th or 17th May in Delhi. I have telephoned to Sardar Patel to this effect and I hope he will make the necessary arrangements Gandhiji and Dr Khan Sahib are also being invited.

2. I am myself anxious that there should be no avoidable delay in coming to decisions and giving effect to them. I am anxious, however, that in our hurry a wrong step might not be taken which might lead to greater delay. I have been giving a great deal of thought to what you have told me and I find that my mind is not at all clear about the various possible developments. Apart from the original proposals which were put forward somewhat vaguely, there are now other suggestions in addition which introduce a great deal of complexity to the problems we have to face. Each step acts and reacts on the other and we have to consider carefully what the final outcome might be. I confess that I do not see much light and many things trouble me....

4. You will have seen Gandhiji’s reactions and an interview that Sardar Patel gave yesterday. I doubt that the former should be given due weight, though in regard to some details it does not fit in with the general Congress viewpoint. Sardar Patel’s interview is a clear expression of the Congress viewpoint.

5. What I fear is that if the new proposals are not generally agreed to and are a marked departure from the position which flowed from the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme, they will result in producing a very great deal of uncertainty in the public mind. This will be unfortunate from every point of view. The Cabinet Mission’s Scheme at least produced some certainty. If it cannot be applied in toto, it might be varied to suit the exigencies of the situation. Another landmark which brought some certainty was the declaration of February 20th. If anything happens to shake that feeling of certainty, there will be complete instability in the country. The new proposals, therefore, should fit in as far as possible, subject to necessary variations, with the position as it has been thus far.

Yours sincerely,

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

47. V.P. Menon’s Scheme for Transfer of Power

Extract from Minutes of Viceroy’s Eleventh Miscellaneous Meeting, 10 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 196A, NMML.

Item 1

THE EARLY TRANSFER OF POWER ON A DOMINION STATUS BASIS

His Excellency the Viceroy explained that Rao Bahadur Menon had been working on a scheme for the early transfer of power on a Dominion status basis long before he (His Excellency) arrived in India. He said that he would like to give Rao Bahadur Menon an opportunity of explaining the outline of this scheme to himself and Pandit Nehru together.

RAO BAHADUR MENON said that he had mentioned the scheme to Pandit Nehru the day before; and also about four months previously to Sardar Patel. Both had appeared extremely anxious for the early transfer of power. Sardar Patel had the previous day issued a statement advocating that power should be transferred as soon as possible on a Dominion status basis. The scheme which he had prepared made arrangements for this in the alternative events of there being an united India and of there being two separate States—the Union of India and Pakistan.

RAO BAHADUR MENON explained that the Instrument under which the transfer would take place would be the 1935 Government of India Act with suitable modifications. The modifications which he envisaged were broadly as follows:

(a) The Secretary of State, the India Office, and the special powers of the Governor-General and the Governors would disappear.

(b) The Constituent Assembly would assume many of the responsibilities of the present Central Legislative Assembly.

(c) There would be a Constitutional Governor-General of either United India or of the two States.

(d) Governors would be appointed by the Governor-General on the recommendation of the Central Authority or Authorities.

(e) In the event of partition, there would be a joint council to deal with matters of common concern between the two states; but there would be no interference by either State in the affairs of the other.

(f) The preamble to the Act which would put these arrangements into force would contain reference to the Constituent Assembly and to the fact that these were interim arrangements until the new Constitution had been framed. This might not be finished until after June, 1948.

(g) The word ‘Emperor’ would have to be dropped from the title ‘King Emperor’. It would be revoked in an Order in Council by His Majesty.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY pointed out that at present June, 1948 was the latest possible date for the transfer of power. Under this scheme the transfer of power would take place much earlier. He considered that there should be a distinct target for the end of the interim period proposed under the scheme and had in mind that this target might be the completion of the framing of the Constitution and the holding of new elections thereunder.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that, whereas it seemed to him that it would be a fairly easy matter, so long as HMG agreed, to transfer power at a very early date on a Dominion status basis to the Union of India, there would be no authorities for some time in Pakistan to whom to transfer. He asked whether it would be possible for a Constitutional Governor-General of the Union of India to continue to exercise the special responsibilities of the Viceroy in Pakistan. RAO BAHADUR MENON said that he considered that this would be possible constitutionally. He pointed out that it might take eight or nine months for Pakistan to set up an Executive.

PANDIT NEHRU said that he considered it very desirable that there should be a transfer of power as soon as possible on a Dominion status basis. Congress had made a proposal to this effect at the beginning of the war. He would show His Excellency the statement which had been made.
The proposal had been repeated since. The basic reason for wanting an early transfer of power, apart from the desire of the Indians to control their own affairs, was that any developments in India would not otherwise take place properly. The present system of frequent references to HMG produce the psychology of always looking elsewhere for decisions; of continual bidding by the different parties; of a lack of reality; and of an absence of self-reliance. At present there were continual references to the British Cabinet, who were doubtless trying to do the fair thing but who could not be in full possession of the psychological background in India. Their mental processes were, in his opinion, inclined to be too legalistic and logical.

PANDIT NEHRU said that the only real difficulty in his opinion was the possibility of India being divided and Pakistan coming into existence. The normal course would have been for the Government of India Act to have continued subject to modifications and for any Dominion Government formed in India to continue to function for the whole of India. But it was now clear that facilities would have to be given for any part of India which did not wish to remain within the Union to separate. He considered that the Cabinet Mission Plan should be adhered to subject to the major variation that Provinces should be given the option to opt out of the Union. He considered that Provinces should be given an opportunity to see the new Constitution before given the chance of separation. It was in his opinion wrong to put the process of partition first. The proper thing would be that this choice should come when the broad outlines of the future Constitution were decided. According to precedent and practice that would be the more correct procedure. It was very difficult for the normal voter to decide the issue of Partition first except on an emotional basis.

PANDIT NEHRU said that he did not think that the process of granting Dominion status to one part of India before the other would give rise to any great complications. He supposed that this was theoretically possible. He presumed that as soon as a suitable authority had been set up in Pakistan power would be handed over. He also agreed with the point made by Rao Bahadur Menon that on the Joint Council there should be no interference by either State in the affairs of the other.

PANDIT NEHRU said that he did not, however, agree with Rao Bahadur Menon’s estimate of the period involved. He had no doubt that the broad features of the Constitution of the Union of India would be prepared by July. The details would take another month or so to fill in, but it would be possible to proceed on the broad features, and electoral machinery could begin to function. It would take at the most six months or a year before the elections were held. Once power had been transferred it was up to the Government of the Union of India to arrange for all consequences of the transfer. The length of the interim period would depend on what arrangements were made. It might be felt desirable and more convenient not to put a final end to the interim period by June, 1948. But from the psychological point of view it was very dangerous at the present time to hint that the period might be prolonged thereafter. He considered that the interim period might well in fact come to an end when the elections were held, but it would be dangerous to say so at the present stage.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he did not consider that the target for the end of the interim period should in any way be connected with June, 1948. That had originally been the target date for transfer of power; and it was hoped to bring the transfer forward by almost a year.
PANDIT NEHRU gave his view that if the end of the interim period and the further decisions which would then be required were connected with specific contingencies, suspicion would be created. He considered that the end of the interim period should rather be connected with further arrangements in regard to Indo-British relations. Then the issue would be dealt with on the background of the future. He did not feel that this should be compromised by limitations.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY reiterated his view that the end of the interim period should be connected with some specific event. Possibly, if the new elections were not a suitable event, reconsideration or ratification by the newly elected Government might be. He pointed out that one of the main advantages accruing to India would be the retention of British officers. It was essential to have a new target date to work for by which they would be phased out.

PANDIT NEHRU said that he did not oppose His Excellency’s viewpoint fundamentally, but to say that the date of June, 1948 had been scrapped would certainly create suspicion.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY pointed out that the Governor General would also have to have a specific date towards which to work. He added that if the target date related to reconsideration of Indo-British relations alone there might be considerable agitation for such reconsideration to take place immediately. He had in mind the name of Jay Prakash Narain in connection with such agitation.

PANDIT NEHRU said that he also of course wished to avoid such agitation but felt that it would be more likely to be directed against the idea that Congress leaders had consented to a semi-permanent form of Dominion status. He went on to say that Jay Prakash Narain had been behaving in a very irresponsible manner recently, but he was an intelligent and honest man. He, Pandit Nehru, had no doubt that Jay Prakash Narain would play an important part in India in the future. He thought that he could bring Jay Prakash Narain round to accepting a certain line of action but it would be essential for the latter to be able to see matters developing and to have faith in the development. He must see no opportunities for domination or exploitation. Once, however, the new Dominion status began to function a new atmosphere might well be created.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he agreed with Pandit Nehru but felt that his own object would be better served by indicating the end of the interim phase. If Jay Prakash Narain was suspicious of Pandit Nehru’s motives, this suspicion might be allayed after a definite date of termination was laid down.

PANDIT NEHRU gave his opinion that the possibility of Pakistan being set up and the position of the Indian States as separate entities might produce an element of confusion and disruption. It would be of the greatest importance to maintain the closest relations between Pakistan and the Union of India and with the States. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that it might be possible that a Governor General might be able to help with these problems. If, however, the States thought that the period of Dominion status was to be indefinite they would on account of their dilatory methods never make up their minds.

PANDIT NEHRU said that he saw the force of His Excellency’s arguments and was ready to agree that it might be desirable that the target date of termination of the interim period should be linked up with the formation of a new Government after elections. He went on to explain that, over the last many years, there had been a tremendous sentiment in India in favour of complete independence. The words ‘Dominion status’ were likely to irritate because of past associations—although in theory it could be shown that Dominion status was equivalent to complete independence. Such fine points were not, however, considered or understood by the majority of the people. He was afraid that such phraseology might mean to many the continuation of indirect domination. He himself was most anxious, apart from sentimental reasons, to have the closest possible relations with the British Commonwealth, but he was not clear himself what form these relations would take. He thought and hoped that it would be possible for the relations to continue without the offending phraseology. He did not intend to talk about ‘Dominion status’ openly because of the many suspicions. He wanted to prepare the ground. The world was changing and the problem must be looked at in that context.

Pandit Nehru pointed out that under any form of Dominion status India would always have the power to leave the Commonwealth when she wished.

His Excellency the Viceroy agreed with this and pointed out that this fact should be emphasized as well as the target for the termination....

48. Discussion about Transfer of Power in Simla

Extract from a Letter from V.P. Menon to Vallabhbhai Patel, 10 May 1947

Simla

My dear Sardar,

I am sorry I could not write to you earlier. Ever since I came here on Wednesday last, I have been very busy, practically living in Viceregal Lodge. The immediate business was the amendments suggested in HMG’s announcement. You are already aware of the substance of the announcement. There is no departure in the substance, only in the wording. The decision is that the legislatures of the Punjab, Bengal and Assam, divided according to Muslim and non-Muslim districts, should choose whether they would desire partition. For this purpose, the number of representatives to be chosen will be 4 per million of population and not 1 per million. The intention is to get a larger number of elected representatives as otherwise, on the Cabinet Mission’s Plan, two members out of three in Sylhet will decide the issue of separation from Assam.

The paragraph in which you are most interested is that relating to the position of the NWFP. I attempted a draft in private consultation with Panditji [Nehru], though he made it quite clear that he was not in any way to be brought into it. The proposal I put forward was that the decision whether the NWFP should join the Indian Union or join the proposed Pakistan should be left to the last possible minute. After the provinces of Bengal, Punjab and Assam have decided on the issue of Pakistan, a referendum of the existing electors to the Provincial Legislative Assembly in the NWFP should be held. This referendum should be under the supervision of the Governor-General and after consultation with the provincial Government. It is very difficult to deny putting the issue to the electors and unless a decision is taken by the province, progress will be held up all along the line. The important consideration from your point of view is that it should not be related to the existing agitation. I know that HE would be prepared to go to the farthest extent to meet the Congress point of view in this respect. I have this morning attempted another draft on the basis of my proposal which [Sir Eric] Mieville is taking to Panditji. It will be telegraphed to the Secretary of State today because the final approval of the Cabinet will be taken to the draft announcement tomorrow morning.

The plan was to call a meeting of the five, namely, Panditji, yourself, Jinnah, Liaquat Ali and Baldev Singh on the 22nd. This programme has now been advanced because Parliament is rising for the Whitsuntide recess on 22 May. The programme which has now been agreed is this. Ismay arrives on the 16th evening; on the 17th at 10.30 the conference meets: at that conference HE makes one more effort for the acceptance of the Cabinet Delegation’s Plan. In all probability Jinnah will reject it. Then HE will give you five a copy of HMG’s Plan. This you will take with you for consultation with the Working Committees and a meeting will take place again the next day to ascertain your views on important points. HE will also meet on the 17th some representatives of the Indian States to tell them what is going on. On the 18th, HE will hold a further meeting and go through the Plan paragraph by paragraph and finally telegraph to the Secretary of State the views expressed at the conference. This will be considered by HMG on the 19th and a decision will be communicated to HE on the 20th. HE will again summon the leaders at 5 o’clock on Tuesday, 20 May, and tell them of any alterations which may have been made in the Plan. The announcement will be made in Parliament on Tuesday the 20th followed up by HE’s broadcast.

HE also asked me to discuss with Panditji the plan of parting with power early on the basis of a Dominion Status constitution. I attach a copy of a note which embodies the result of my conversation with Panditji. But when Panditji saw HE on the 8th, he gave HE the impression that he went back on what he told me. I then suggested to HE that it would be better to have a further meeting with Panditji. Accordingly, Panditji, HE, Mieville and myself had a discussion today. A detailed report is being prepared. I will show it to you when I come back to Delhi. The important points that were raised are as follows:

1. Dominion Status: Panditji agreed that it was essential that transfer of power should take place as early as possible. I mentioned at the conference the statement which you made on this question yesterday. There was some discussion as to how this period could be described. Ultimately it was decided that this interim constitution on a dominion basis should last till India was in a position to decide on the new Indo-British relationship after a Government under the new constitution was formed. This is quite satisfactory. In this connection Panditji raised the question whether it would not be possible to defer the question of partition till the existing Constituent Assembly had drafted a constitution so that, before any unwilling part of the country decided to remain separate, it would have an opportunity of seeing the new constitution. HE replied that this would mean delay and uncertainty. He stressed that we should not now delay the question of partition, which was in the best interests of India because he was sure that the truncated Pakistan, if conceded now, was bound to come back later. On the other hand, if there was delay, the uncertainty might lead to renewed agitation on the part of Jinnah and consequent deterioration in the political atmosphere. I agreed with HE’s observations because our slogan should now be ‘divide in order to unite.’

HE once suggested to me that he should invite you to Simla. When the conference was over, he told me that he should discuss the Dominion Status issue with you immediately on his return to Delhi. But I told him that before Ismay left London we should put the matter to HMG and start them working on the plan. I further suggested that there would not be any difficulty, in the event of partition, in giving Hindustan complete autonomy on a dominion basis, leaving Pakistan to take the same position when it was ready to do so. But, to tie both of them to the same yoke would create difficulties for all concerned. I am pressing as hard as I can for parting with power at the earliest possible date. HE is on my side but I am not quite sure about his other Advisers. I hope I shall succeed if you also weigh in heavily on my side as Panditji did today.

Two things you have contributed have really anticipated the Muslim League moves. The first one was your agreement to the partition of the Punjab. This has put a stop to Jinnah’s vague cry of Pakistan. Muslims have now started considering seriously whether Pakistan as such is practicable if it involves division of the Punjab and Bengal. This may lead to sober judgment when the time comes. Secondly, the Muslim League thought that you would stand firm on your Independence stand and therefore they tried to win over the British by professing readiness to accept Dominion Status for Pakistan. (Bhopal is behind this move.) By your statement yesterday and the Congress Working Committee’s resolution, which you were responsible for passing, you have stopped this also. On the whole, I feel you are in a strong position now.

2. HE also raised the question of a Defence Council and the machinery to be employed to keep defence more or less on a unified basis for the time being and to divide it gradually in the event of division becoming inevitable.

3. You remember you wrote a letter to HE about getting an assurance from Jinnah that he would accept a truncated Pakistan. The same issue was raised by Panditji. HE was quite categorical; he said he knew how to deal with Jinnah if he repudiated the understanding which he gave HE that he would accept a truncated Pakistan. Panditji suggested that it would be better to get a written assurance from Jinnah. But HE made it quite clear that if Jinnah attempted to lead him up the garden path, Jinnah would find HE tough enough.

4. The next question Panditji raised was the possibility of civil commotion in case a truncated Pakistan was conceded to the Muslim League. HE told Panditji that he was going to write to the Governor of Bengal to suggest that whatever measures were required to cope with the situation should be taken even if the Ministry did not co-operate; and that his intention was to move two or three brigades to the Punjab and an equal number to Calcutta.

5. The paragraph in the announcement about the NWFP was then discussed, and, as I told you before, this paragraph is now being agreed with Panditji....

HE then asked Panditji to arrange for the [Congress] Working Committee to be in Delhi on the 17th and also that Khan Sahib should be summoned.

....The final version of HMG’s statement is expected either this evening or tomorrow morning. I think I will show it to you on my return. I shall fully brief you before you go to the conference.

Yours sincerely,

V. P. Menon
Chapter 16. Making of the 3 June Plan

1. ‘Sardar’s Solution for Political Impasse’

Extract from a Report from Bombay Chronicle, 10 May 1947.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel declared today that the current British policy of ‘remaining neutral but holding power is a way of propagating civil war’ and asserted India’s political impasse would be broken at once if power were transferred to the Central Government ‘as it now stands.’

The Home, Information and Broadcasting Member said in an interview that functioning of India’s Interim Government as a Dominion Government ‘with the Viceroy standing out’ would have two immediate results.

1. ‘There would be peace in the country within a week. Those who commit acts of violence do so because they feel there is no strong Central Power to check them. With Dominion Status, the Central Government would form a strong Centre and would have the necessary power to put down disorder.’

2. ‘Lacking interference by a third party to whom either side could appeal, the Congress and the Muslim League would settle their differences at once. If there are conflicts in the Cabinet over a question, the majority would rule.’

CONGRESS–LEAGUE SETTLEMENT

Particular significance was attached to Sardar Patel’s statement in the light of a reliable report the Viceroy had sent word to His Majesty’s Government that some action must be taken quickly in India to avoid a situation ‘no one could control’ and in view of Mahatma Gandhi’s recently reiterated opposition to division of India.

Sardar Patel did not predict what type of settlement might be expected between the League and Congress over the issue of Pakistan if such a step were taken by the British Government. However, he said the Congress would not force any unwilling group or area.

He did say that Section 93 ‘would vanish in the Punjab’ and the Congress and League would agree ‘possibly to a coalition government.’

In the North West Frontier Province, where the League has carried on an agitation against the Congress Ministry for more than two months, Sardar Patel said, ‘the Ministry would remain. The election was fought only last year on the issue of Pakistan and Congress won.’

Sardar Patel characterized the present situation in India as serious and said one of the grave problems was that of private armies now being raised and equipped.
TWO ALTERNATIVES

As an alternative in the event the British decided India must be divided, Sardar Patel suggested that power be transferred to the Constituent Assemblies, saying the Muslim League already has a plan for a separate Constituent Assembly.

‘The other way is much easier,’ he added, ‘Transfer power to the Central Government. Let the Viceroy stand out and not interfere. Then you have a strong Centre which would be capable of dealing with the problems facing the country, particularly in such places as the Punjab and the North West Frontier Province. Immediately there would be peace in the country.’

Sardar Patel reiterated the Congress stands for the May 16 statement ‘in toto’ and ‘in spite of its weakness Congress would like to have a strong Centre. It is absolutely essential that there be a strong army for defence and a strong Central Government.

‘The Congress position always has been that it will not coerce any group or area which does not want to remain. At the same time it will not be coerced by any group or community. Congress has accepted that principle since the Cripps Talks in 1942.

‘Therefore, if the League insists on partition of India, the same grounds on which it insists on partition apply in the Pakistan areas.’

JINNAH PLAYING DANGEROUS GAME

Sardar Patel remarked that ‘it is a dangerous game that Mr Jinnah is playing’ pointing out that the separation of Burma from India required two years. ‘And we had nothing in India’, he added.

He predicted it would take a long time, perhaps years to divide the Indian army, let alone separate communications, rail, roads and similar interlocking services which span India.

Of the Muslim League President Sardar Patel said that except for the League’s temporary acceptance of the Cabinet Mission Plan, Mr Jinnah’s position has remained the same.

‘We asked him to refer the question to the United Nations Organization’, Sardar Patel said. ‘He said “no”. We asked him to arbitrate. He said “no.”’

2. Nehru Fears the ‘Throwing Overboard of the Basic All-India Union’

A Note by Jawaharlal Nehru on the Draft Proposals, 11 May 1947

I have very carefully considered, in the short time at my disposal, the papers shown to me. They are of such far-reaching implications that it is difficult for me to deal with the subject adequately, and in any event a full consultation with my colleagues would be necessary. But as time is limited and any delay in a clear expression of opinion might lead to further steps being taken which may have grave consequences, I am giving below my immediate reactions.

2. Although I have had no opportunity of consulting my colleagues, I am quite clear that my reactions will be shared by them probably in a stronger measure. The first consideration of the papers produced a devastating effect upon me. The picture presented by the proposals was an ominous one and the whole approach to them appeared to me to be dangerous. Not only do they menace India but also they endanger the future relation between Britain and India. Instead of producing any sense of certainty, security and stability, they would encourage disruptive tendencies everywhere and chaos and weakness. They would particularly endanger important strategic areas.
Towards Freedom: 1947

3. It is stated in the proposals that they have taken shape after full consultation with political leaders in India. That might lead people to think that they have the consent of those leaders. This would be completely wrong in so far as all leaders are concerned except possibly the Muslim League leaders. In our consultations we had proceeded on the present basis of the Cabinet Mission’s plan and the statement of February 20th. Owing to stress of circumstances we had agreed to vary this basis to a certain extent, but the general approach continued to be the same. This variation consisted in the acceptance of the fact that certain Muslim majority areas might go out of the Union if they so willed. The Union was still the basic factor. In the new proposals the whole approach has been changed completely and is at total variance with our own approach in the course of recent talks. The proposals start with the rejection of an Indian Union as the successor to power and invite the claims of large numbers of successor States who are permitted to unite if they so wish in two or more States.

4. I have no doubt whatever that the announcement of this new policy and proposals by His Majesty’s Government would provoke wide and deep resentment all over the country and no responsible leader of Indian opinion outside the Muslim League would be able to persuade the country to accept or even to acquiesce in them. It seems to me, therefore, essential that His Majesty’s Government should be left in no doubt as to the total unacceptability of and opposition to both these proposals and the approach made in them, and also to the consequences which are bound to follow if His Majesty’s Government were to persist in them.

5. Hitherto all British proposals and indeed all discussions have been basically on a United India, the inroads into such unity being confined either (a) to weakening the Centre and giving some sort of Group autonomy or (b) to giving the freedom to certain areas, which are demonstrably against joining the Union, to create themselves into separate States. The Cabinet Mission considered every aspect of a totally divided India and rejected it. Those considerations remain unchanged and indeed the disorder and violence of recent months add further weight to those considerations.

6. It must be remembered that the British Cabinet plan was accepted by all in India with the sole exception of the Muslim League and even the League had not at all times rejected it. Even today the League is prepared and continues to reap such advantages as it obtained for itself by joining the Interim Government on the basis of acceptance of the plan. The throwing overboard not only of the plan but all its basic conceptions namely the all-India Union and provincial independence to the utmost within that Union appears to be totally at the instance of one party alone in India. The Muslim League vetoes the plan and His Majesty’s Government, therefore, throw it overboard. This step can only confirm the conviction widely held that no plan of His Majesty’s Government can be accepted or proceeded with in the hope that His Majesty’s Government will hold to it.

7. The present proposals virtually scrap the Constituent Assembly which includes all elements excepting the Muslim League, and deprive the Constituent Assembly of its essential character and reduces it to a body for preparing a scheme for the Union which these proposals negative.

8. This involves a complete going back by His Majesty’s Government on its previous decisions in that (a) it throws overboard the Cabinet plan or at any rate its basic conception, (b) it violates its repeated pledge that it will not permit one party to exercise a veto, (c) it scraps all that has been done under its own scheme and by arrangements made by the Governor-General himself to implement it.

9. It appears to me that the inevitable and obvious consequences of the proposals and the approach in them are (a) to invite the Balkanization of India, (b) to provoke certain civil conflict and to add to violence and disorder, (c) to a further breakdown of the central authority which alone can prevent the chaos that is growing, (d) to demoralize the army, the police and the Central Services.

10. The proposal that each of the successor States is to conclude independent treaties, presumably with His Majesty’s Government also, which follows if the all-India Union is rejected as a basis and sovereignty reverts to the provinces, is likely to create many ‘Ulsters’ in India. This will be so considered by the people and deeply resented. The consequences of such resentment will be to add to the suspicions that exist and to create an almost unbridgeable gulf between National India and the British people in the future. The ‘Ulsters’ will be looked upon as so many British bases on Indian soil, possibly having British garrisons.

11. The approach to the Princes may be logical and consistent with the unfortunate position in respect of paramountcy. It shows, however, an obvious shift of emphasis and is a definite invitation to at least the major States to remain independent kingdoms, presumably as feudatories or allies of Britain. Also it is a definite incitement to them to play off Pakistan against the rest of India. This new emphasis will let loose in the States those forces which our moderate counsels and the hopes of their being part of an Indian Union are keeping somewhat in check. People’s organizations everywhere demand union. The Rulers may resist them and will be encouraged to do so by this new emphasis in the proposals. In the States themselves there may well be civil war.

12. The proposals in respect of the Indian States also reverse the approach in the Cabinet plan wherein it is obviously indicated that the all-India Union is a Union of States as well, though their union under one Centre must be by voluntary accession. Machinery for this was provided in the Negotiating Committee.

13. The acquiescence on our side to the split-up of certain areas, which are predominantly League in their loyalty, was in no ways an acquiescence in throwing overboard the all-India basis of future settlement. It was only a stretching of the Cabinet plan to make opting out operable now and an adhesion to our oft-repeated policy that we do not wish to coerce any part of India. Further the partition of provinces to which we agreed also was for the same reasons, and we hold that such partition is consistent with an all-India Union of both separated parts with the retention of separate identities. If so desired by these parts they could go out of the Union.

14. It follows, therefore, and this has to be emphasized as His Majesty’s Government appears to imply that we have acquiesced in a rejection of the Cabinet plan and in making the Union a later step by self-determination. We have not agreed to anything of the kind and any step that we have taken, often against our will and against the presence of national feeling in India, is to accept more and more completely the Cabinet plan which provides for the basic all-India Union.

15. It is difficult to go into the details of the proposals in the time available and within the compass of a note. But I might mention that the proposal about the so-called self-determination about Baluchistan seems to me to be preposterous. It leaves the future of that province to one man chosen by a group of Sardars and nominated persons who obviously represent a vested semi-feudal element. Baluchistan has an importance also as a strategic frontier of India and its future cannot be dealt with in this partial and casual manner.
16. If Assam has to surrender a part to Bengal, and we are not opposed to this if the people concerned so wish, it stands to reason that some such procedure is equally applicable to parts of Sind.

17. The proposals about the North-West Frontier Province in various forms have been repeatedly discussed by us and I have pointed out to you our strong objection to anything which places a premium on violence and may well invite civil war. We have agreed that the Frontier Province, like other areas, should be given full opportunity to express its own opinion about the future. But this must be done at the proper time and in the proper context in common with other parts of India. Otherwise that assessment of opinion itself may be defeated apart from other consequences. In effect the present proposal implies a decision by His Majesty’s Government that the province must reverse or at least be given an opportunity to reverse its present decision which is to remain in the Constituent Assembly. The sole reason for this appears to be the violence and rapine carried out recently in the province by adherents of the Muslim League or others. That violence has not stopped despite Mr Jinnah’s appeal. This may mean that the violent elements are not in control of the League or that the League leaders are not anxious to stop them. The proposal about the Frontier spotlights the province and proceeds on the assumption that extra-constitutional violence can declare null and void previous and recent decisions arrived at by constitutional procedure.

18. In regard to the treaties with the tribes of the Frontier, these are presumably with the Government of India. We recognize the independence of the tribes and their freedom to make treaties as they like. But even in the case of a properly constituted State on the frontiers of a country and integral to its defence and territorial integrity, the alliance of such a State with another party is recognized as being the concern of the given State with which it has been associated. In the present case this would be India. To give public assurance to the tribes that they can have treaties with whomsoever they like is to invite them to profit by internal difficulties in India and also to create a situation in the Indian frontier which menaces India as well as neighbouring areas in Asia. The Tribal and Frontier areas have been maintained by the expenditure of vast amounts of money from all-India because of strategic and other reasons. Further, if the North-West Frontier Province remains with the Union, an alliance between the Tribal Areas and another State will create grave difficulties for the North-West Frontier Province and India as a whole.

19. His Majesty’s Government wishes to declare that the sole purpose of the procedure indicated in the proposals is to ascertain the wishes of the people of India and to transfer power with the least possible dislocation. These purposes will not be advanced or even achieved by the proposals. As I have indicated above, the proposals will encourage chaos and disorder and the belief that violence pays will prevent any proper assessment of opinion. Before the people choose they must have a proper picture as to what they are to choose. Two or three vague proposals without this clear background will produce confusion and may share the character of merely demagogic appeals. The transfer of power, instead of being made without dislocation, will be obstructed by violence, by a mass of complications, and by the weakness of the Central Government and its organs.

20. If there is to be any genuine assessment of opinion, the only practicable way is for two constitutions, two appeals and two prospects to be placed before the people. This means that (a) the Constituent Assembly must proceed with the constitution-making on the basis of an all-India Union with full freedom for provinces and effective guarantees for all, (b) equally the League can prepare its own schemes and present its own proposals on an equal level, (c) the two constitutions may be presented to all the provinces of India on a plebiscite basis on such terms as are agreed upon.

21. Until these decisions are made, the Government of India must remain as one. In view of impending British withdrawal, the Coalition forming the Central Government must be a Cabinet with joint responsibility based upon full Dominion autonomy. It may be made clear that the Central Government will not take any steps to prejudice self-determination or subsequent partition and such other guarantees as are necessary may also be given so as to assure the League in regard to certain agreed matters. It may, for instance, be stated that in regard to certain questions they should not be decided by a mere majority in the Cabinet. Some machinery for adjudication in regard to these questions can be set up.

22. This has become a very long note hastily prepared and yet it has not dealt fully with all the aspects of the problem. As I have said above, the fullest consideration by all concerned is necessary before any commitments can be made. It is obvious that there can be no imposed solutions of our problems and any attempt to do so will lead to further difficulty. Whatever the views of my colleagues might be in regard to various details of the proposals, I have no doubt that their main reaction will be as I have indicated above. That is that they cannot accept these proposals and they are not prepared to acquiesce in the throwing overboard of the basic all-India Union or to accept the theory of provinces being initially independent successor States.

3. ‘Speed Is the Essence of the Contract’: Mountbatten’s Plan

Telegram from Louis Mountbatten to H.L. Ismay, 11 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/153, Acc No. 3467, NAI.

IMMEDIATE

1. I had a long and satisfactory meeting with Nehru, Mieville and V.P. Menon yesterday (the minutes are being sent to you) on the possibility of an early transfer of power on a dominion status basis.

2. I want you, before you leave London, to explain the way my mind is working, as outlined in this telegram, to HMG and to find out what the reactions are. I would like you to obtain HMG’s general approval to the line which I am taking. You must make them realize that speed is the essence of the contract. Without speed, we will miss the opportunity. I have just received your 6046 of 10th May with which I am delighted.

3. Date.

I am convinced that, in order to have the best chance of obtaining our long-term object, the grant of Dominion Status must take place during 1947.

4. Advantages.

The advantages which would accrue to India through an early transfer of power and remaining within the Commonwealth are obvious enough. I consider that the main advantage which the United Kingdom would gain are briefly:

(a) the terrific world-wide enhancement of British prestige and the enhancement of the prestige of the present Government.

(b) the completion of the framework of world strategy from the point of view of Empire defence.
(c) the early termination of present responsibilities, especially in the field of law and order, which was stressed by Patel in his statement to the press on Friday. See my next telegram.

(d) A further strengthening of Indo-British relations which have enormously improved since the statement of 20th February.

The instrument under which the transfer of power would take place would be the 1935 Act with certain modifications. For instance, the Secretary of State, the India Office, and the special powers of the Governor-General and the Governors would disappear. One constitutional Governor General could serve both parts of India. Governors would be appointed by him on the recommendation of the central Executives.

6. Difficulties.
There are difficulties which have got to be met. The main ones are
(a) Defence and
(b) The complications resulting from the partition of India.

7. Defence.
(a) British Forces.
I consider that the British Army should be phased out as soon as possible after the transfer of power. Until this process is completed, I should have to be given special powers in relation to the employment of British troops. The elements of the RAF at present planned to remain in India should do so, being transferred on loan to the RIAF.

(b) Indian Forces.
(i) The process of nationalization of the Army would be slowed down. The period of compensation for British officers would be extended until such time as they can be released under a new plan.
(ii) If partition of the Army is insisted upon, the process would take place in an orderly manner under a planned programme.
(iii) During the interim period there would be a Defence Council consisting of myself as Chairman and one representative each from the Union of India and Pakistan.
(iv) Defence Headquarters would also eventually be split. Until this process was complete it would be under the Defence Council.

8. Complications resulting from partition.
It is obvious that the Union of India will be ready to receive power before Pakistan. It may take 6–8 months for the latter to set up an executive for this purpose. I am, however, assured that the former need not wait upon the latter, and that I could be Constitutional Governor-General of the Union and my existing power could remain meanwhile for Pakistan.

9. Nomenclature
(a) It is apparent that the words ‘Dominion status’ have an unfortunate association here. I would be grateful for any bright ideas you may come across to get over this difficulty.

(b) The word ‘Emperor’ would have to be dropped from His Majesty’s present designation of ‘King-Emperor’.
10. Further steps.
   I intend to see Patel about all this as soon as I get back to Delhi. I will not talk to Jinnah about it until after the announcement of the plan; and, although his reactions to anything are always quite unpredictable, he has already hinted strongly that Pakistan will wish to remain within the Commonwealth and therefore I do not anticipate any trouble as far as he is concerned.

11. Please circulate copies of this telegram and VCP 40 to Cabinet Committee. You may use my 28-SC of 8th May as you think fit.

4. ‘League Will Resist Transfer of Power to Centre’

New Delhi, Saturday.—The Finance Member Mr Liaquat Ali Khan, stated tonight that Mr Vallabhbhai Patel’s proposal that power be transferred by British to the Interim Government as it now stands was ‘obviously intended to torpedo the Muslim demand for Pakistan.’

The Finance Member who is also General Secretary of the All-India Muslim League, added in an interview that ‘I should like to make it absolutely clear that whatever the alleged difficulties may be, the Muslims will never accept any solution of the Indian problem except on the basis of an independent and sovereign Pakistan.’

BRUTE MAJORITY

Mr Liaquat Ali Khan added that the League would resist any such transfer of power, adding that the Interim Government ‘was formed under the present Constitution and any alteration in that basis will in fact mean the rule of the Hindu Congress at the Centre.’

Mr Patel has been quite frank about it where he says that ‘if there were any conflicts in the Cabinet over any question, the majority would rule.’ This dictum of Mr Patel’s can easily be understood when it is remembered that his party has and will, in the present Cabinet, continue to have, this brute majority.

...‘Sardar Patel is yearning after a strong Central Government and he can hardly conceal his sinister desire to work the Congress machine of oppression with full force in all the provinces, particularly the Punjab the NWFP and other Muslim provinces.’

Mr Patel said the present situation in India was serious and that one of the problems was that of private armies being raised and equipped.

Mr Liaquat Ali Khan commented ‘Mr Patel needs hardly to be told that this grave situation over which he has expressed concern is being created by no other than the Congress and other Hindu and Sikh organizations. It appears from Mr Patel’s statement that he does not approve of the raising of private armies, but his profession is belied by the practice of his own party.’

5. Jinnah Rejects Patel’s Proposal
   Statement by M.A. Jinnah, 11 May 1947
   IOR, R/3/1/153, Acc. No. 3467, NAI.

My attention has been drawn to an interview given by Mr Patel to the A.P.A. His solution comes to this: that all power should be immediately transferred to the Central Government as it now stands and strong Central Government will then be able to maintain peace in the country; and the Viceroy and every other authority under the present constitution should stand out and the Government of India Act of 1935 should cease to function. And then Mr Patel says, if there will be any conflict in the Cabinet over any question, the Congress brute majority will rule both in the Cabinet and the present existing legislature. Then he will proceed with the existing administrative machinery, which is to be handed over to him throughout the country, with the Police and the armed forces including the British troops, to put down everybody in the country and crush particularly the 100 million Mussalmans. This is his prescription and way of keeping peace.

I note that he has now developed a sudden affection for ‘Dominion Status’ and ‘Dominion functions’. I wonder what has happened to the recent Resolutions passed by the Congress at its Sessions only a few months ago and the sister body, which the rump Constituent Assembly has now become, which is run by the Congress authoritative caucus, where they passed Resolutions solemnly deciding that India shall be an independent sovereign republic. The Muslim League will never agree to such a monstrous proposal as the one put forward by Mr Patel, to restore peace, which is only a dream of his.

Then he says that in case the British decided upon the division of India, power should be transferred to the Central Government and let the Viceroy stand out and not interfere, and he will have a strong Centre capable of dealing with the problems facing the country. This makes neither sense nor logic. If the British decide that India must be divided and it follows that the armed forces must be divided and power transferred to the divided parts then the Central Government must be dissolved and all power should be transferred to the two Constituent Assemblies formed and representing Pakistan and Hindustan. Mr Patel says the Congress has always proclaimed that it will not coerce any group or area which does not want to live with Hindustan, but what is the use of saying the Congress has proclaimed it will not coerce any group or area and all the time threatening those who want to separate with all sorts of consequences and obstructing and making it more and more difficult for them to separate in a friendly way.

It is quite obvious that Mr Patel and the Congress say that they will not compel any group or area to remain in Hindustan or use force but they are just the contrary. Why not agree? But now a new stunt has been started; that if you want division they will accept it, but we are told that it will result in the division of the Punjab and Bengal. This is another sinister move and he threatens that if non-Muslims are forced into Pakistan there will be civil war. Mr Patel cannot see that the demand for the division of India is based on the fundamental principle that we already have our national homelands, where we want to establish a national State. It is based entirely on a different principle as I have recently pointed out in a Statement of mine, whereas this new Congress stunt—the partition of Bengal and the Punjab—is started on the ground that the non-Muslim minorities there will not receive fair treatment from the Government of these provinces because the Muslims will be in a majority. The same argument applies with much greater force with regard to the Muslims and non-Caste Hindus in Hindu majority provinces, especially because the Muslims form a much smaller minority than the Hindus in Punjab and Bengal. This must lead to the fragmentation of several provinces—and this cannot be supported morally—and it is absolutely destructive—because it will lead to seriously breaking up the provinces economically; splitting up the Hindus and Sikhs and politically not only dangerous for the present but more so in the future.
The next point Mr Patel referred to was that division of India would be difficult to carry out by June 1948 and he visualized, perhaps, years to affect the division especially the army and emphasizes that the division of the army would cause delay. It is difficult for me to believe that His Majesty’s Government has fixed the deadline of June 1948 at random. The issue of division of India has been before us since 1940 and the question of the division of defence was discussed threadbare with the Cabinet Delegation in March last year and for months before their departure. Since then the alternative of division of India has received the closest attention of His Majesty’s Government and the army authorities. And when the White Paper of 20th February contemplated one of the alternatives that power is to be transferred to the provinces, surely they could not have overlooked the question of defence. Transfer of power without division of the armed forces is meaningless.

Besides, I see myself no difficulty in dividing the armed forces for Pakistan and Hindustan.

Lastly, Mr Patel wants to make out that he is all sain of reasonableness and that I am the devil. He says ‘we asked him to refer the question to UNO. He says no, and we asked him to arbitrate, he again says no.’ Either Mr Patel has not got a good memory or he deliberately wants to mislead the people in India and abroad. Last August Mr Patel accused me of what he called intransigent attitude on my part and in reply I pointed out that the demand of Pakistan was based on the right of self-determination, which is the birthright of Mussalmans and it is not and cannot be a justifiable issue. Any intelligent man would understand that the right of self-determination is an inalienable right of a nation and the recognition of the sovereignty of the people of that nation by a democratic process and it cannot be made the subject of vote of two nations Hindus and Muslims and such a process if adopted, the result is a foregone conclusion because there is a brute Hindu majority of 3 to 1. Nor can it be made subject of arbitration by any other means authority. Mr Patel knows it but he is repeating this song to confuse people here and abroad by misrepresentation.

6. Congress President Represents Congress
   Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 13 May 1947

17 YORK ROAD, NEW DELHI

May I suggest to you that in any conferences to which party leaders are invited, the President of the Congress should also be invited? He represents the Congress formally and officially. Others may be prominent Congressmen, but they have other capacities also and cannot be said to represent Congress formally. If the Congress President is not invited on such occasions, certain misapprehensions arise in the public mind and needless difficulties are created.

Yours sincerely,
JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
My dear Asaf,

...4. As you must know, on June 2nd we are supposed to be meeting the Viceroy to learn from him what the tentative proposals of the British Government are in regard to further changes. No proposal of the British Government has much validity unless it is accepted by us. I cannot say now exactly what these proposals are likely to be and what our reactions to them will be. Mountbatten's approach is friendly and he wants to go ahead fast. But the India Office crowd and the British Cabinet still move in the old grooves. They are completely out of touch with recent developments in India, but they consider themselves experts who can lay down the law, especially Stafford Cripps.

5. The British Cabinet's Scheme of May 16th has, in fact, been functioning so far as we are concerned. The Constituent Assembly has been meeting and will, I hope, finish its work within a few months. Nevertheless, the Muslim League's boycott has prevented the Scheme from coming into full operation.

6. Meanwhile the situation in northern India and in Bengal is tense and volcanic. There is talk all round of civil conflict on a big scale and arms are being smuggled and manufactured. With this background some little spark may lead to a big blaze.

7. Because of all this we came to the regrettable conclusion that it is better to offer a division of those parts that want to go away from the Union of India. This inevitably involves a partition of Bengal and Punjab. There is at present a tremendous demand for this partition from the Hindus and Sikhs and this is being thoroughly opposed by the Muslim Leaguers. It is a curious reversal of the previous position. Suhrawardy goes about proclaiming that Bengal is one Nation. So also Shaukat Hayat Khan and Feroz Khan Noon declare that the Punjabis are one and cannot be separated. The two-nation theory evidently does not work in Bengal and Punjab.

8. I imagine that one of the alternative proposals of the Viceroy will be to give the right to provinces or parts of provinces to opt out of the Union or rather the proposed Union. Some machinery will be devised for this process which will enable Bengal and Punjab to be divided if the parts so desire it. Whether one likes this or not, this does give a large measure of self-determination to the people concerned. The Muslim Leaguers are for the first time up against the difficulty of having to choose between a truncated Pakistan with Bengal and Punjab divided and no Pakistan at all, that is joining the Union of India on the Cabinet plan basis.

9. I imagine that the former course is likely to be adopted whether the Muslim League agrees to do so or not, that is to say if they reject finally, as they are very likely to do, the Cabinet Mission plan. Once these decisions are made, they will be given effect to firmly.

10. There is also some talk of a transfer of power on the Dominion basis as far as possible, that is to say long before June 1948. The Dominion basis will, of course, only last till June 1948 and it will be up to us to lay down the terms of our relationship with England then. This must be on the basis of an Indian Republic though we may continue to have close contacts in many ways with England and the British Commonwealth of Nations. Much will depend on what happens in the course of the next year.
11. I have given you some brief idea of the possible shape of things to come, but you must appreciate that this is all vague and uncertain and you should keep it to yourself. The overriding factor today is the violence in the air and the possibility of a big-scale conflict in northern India. Whatever happens, we shall face it firmly.

Yours affectionately,
Jawaharlal Nehru

8. Report on Bihar Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bihar for the First Half of May 1947, c. Second half of May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

...MUSLIM LEAGUE.—A section of the Muslim League has been busy with the ‘Partition of Bihar’. It is reported that in the Muslim area has been included the Patna and Purnea districts, South Bhagalpur, South Monghyr, Jehanabad and Nawadah Subdivisions and a portion of the sadar subdivision of the Gaya district. The Muslims of these areas will form a Union with Jharkhand creating an Independent Sovereign State.

Mr Jaffar Imam, the President of the Provincial Muslim League, has issued an appeal for two lakhs of rupees for organizing branches in different parts of the Province. It is reported that a sum of Rs 3,000 has been sent to the Punjab Provincial Muslim League for relief.

The League is still withholding co-operation in the matter of relief and reconstruction. In the Monghyr district there has, however, been a split. The extremist section is losing ground and there is a marked desire now among the Muslims in Tarapur to get their houses reconstructed as quickly as possible with Government assistance.

The League is now busy with making preparations for the Provincial League Conference at Kishanganj in the Purnea district. The Provincial Government have banned processions and drillings of volunteers which has agitated the Muslim League....

9. Nehru Suggests Changes in the Draft Plan

Note by Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 16 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/150, Acc No. 3465, NAI.

SECRET

NOTE

1. The Congress fully accepted the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme of May 16, 1946, and has since acted in accordance with its provisions. We stand by the Scheme still and we think that this should continue to be the basis of any change in the future. The Interim Government itself is an outcome of this Scheme.

2. While the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme of May 16th has been functioning and been acted upon, it is true that the Muslim League has kept away from it. For the sake of a settlement with the League we are prepared to accept variations of the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme though it must be understood that fundamentally that Scheme continues to function.
3. It is in this context that we have considered the plan which HMG propose to put forward. This plan, as we understand it, is a continuation of the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme with suitable variation to fit in with the existing situation and in order to bring about an abiding settlement. We accept this plan generally but our acceptance is strictly subject to the other parties agreeing to it as a final settlement and that no further claims are put forward.

4. In the event of the Muslim League not agreeing to this plan, we must adhere strictly to the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme of May 16, 1946, under which the Interim Government was formed. In this Interim Government there is no place for those who finally reject the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme.

5. In accepting generally the plan which HMG propose to put forward, we should like to point out that in the event of the various partitions mentioned in that plan taking place, it follows that the clause in the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme in paragraph 19 dealing with major communal matters has no further significance.

6. We would like the following variations made in the draft of the plan. These do not affect the essential nature and purpose of the plan.

(a) Paragraph 1 should read as follows ‘On February 20, 1947, HMG announced their intention of transferring power in British India to Indian hands by June 1948. HMG had hoped that it would be possible for the major parties to cooperate in working out of the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme of May 16, 1946, and evolve for India a constitution accepted to all concerned. This hope has not yet been fulfilled. HMG are, therefore, faced with the task of making further efforts to implement their intention of transferring power including such variations of the Scheme of May 16th and the adjustments consequent to them as would enable the major parties to cooperate in a peaceful transfer of power.’

(b) Paragraph 3. The reference to agreement with political leaders would be justified if there is a final settlement and all parties agree.

(c) Paragraph 4 should run thus: ‘It is not the intention of HMG to interrupt the work of the existing Constituent Assembly, and HMG trust that, as a consequence of this announcement, the Muslim League representatives of those Provinces a majority of whose representatives are already participating in it, will now take their due share in its labours.’ The rest of the paragraph will remain as drafted.

(d) Paragraph 7 is by no means clear. We do not object to it, but as drafted it may create all manner of difficulties.

(e) Paragraph 9. Who will decide the composition of the Boundary Commission? It should be stated quite clearly that the Boundary Commission will have to take into consideration many other factors also apart from the nature of the population.

(f) Paragraph 11. As stated in this paragraph, the referendum will be held in consultation with the Provincial Government. We cannot answer for the Provincial Government or commit it, but we are prepared to request them to agree to this procedure.

(g) Paragraph 13. There is a reference to the contiguous Muslim majority areas of Districts adjoining Sylhet. This reference seems to be unnecessary. The Boundary Commission will certainly have to take such matters into consideration not only in Assam but also in Sind.
(h) Paragraph 16. This seems to be unnecessary here. We do not object to the idea underlying it, but it will be for us to consider later what is the best form of giving effect to it.

(i) Paragraph 19. We suggest that only the first three lines of this paragraph should remain and the rest should be deleted; further that the following addition be made after ‘Indian States’ in the 3rd line: ‘as stated in the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme of May 16, 1946’.

(j) Paragraph 20. In line 8 after ‘new Constituent Assembly’ add ‘if formed’.

7. We have not seen the appendix giving the list of districts. As we have pointed out previously, the position of the Sikhs in the Punjab is a very difficult one under the scheme and every effort should be made to ease the under the situation for them. A suggestion was made and apparently accepted that in Gurdaspur District and others similarly situated the Hindu and Sikh representatives should go to the Eastern Punjab group and the Muslim representatives should go to Western Punjab. This may not be very logical, but it approaches somewhat a juster solution. It would be desirable to say something in the course of the document that the Boundary Commission should give due weight to all the factors and considerations advanced by various groups before coming to a decision; further that the notional division is entirely temporary for a particular purpose and no more.

8. There is no mention in the document of the Chittagong Hill areas which are predominantly Hindu and Buddhist. These are Excluded Areas lying to the east of East Bengal. They have nothing in common with Chittagong District or with East Bengal. They will naturally line up with some of the Hindu States to the north of them and possibly with Assam.

9. No mention is also made of other territories like the Andaman Islands. These also will naturally go with the Union of India.

Jawaharlal Nehru

10. Position of Assam in the Negotiations for Transfer of Power
Letter from Louis Mountbatten to Vallabhbhai Patel, 16 May 1947
SPC, Vol. IV, p. 35.

The Viceroy’s House
New Delhi

Dear Sardar Patel,

Thank you for your letter of 1 May about the Cabinet Mission Plan, which I delayed answering until I had gone into the matter while at Simla.

2. It has always been clear that the Cabinet Mission Plan provided that the representatives of certain provinces should sit together in sections, and that those sections, operating by a simple majority vote, should have two main tasks:
   (i) to frame constitutions of provinces comprising the sections; and
   (ii) to decide whether or not to set up a group government under a group constitution.

3. Provinces would acquire the right to opt out of a group (if the section decided to set one up) only after the first elections held under the new constitution, which had been framed by the section. There was never any question of the constitution being referred in the first instance to existing legislative assemblies for approval.

4. There always was inherent in this plan the risk that a provincial constitution might be rigged by the majority in a section; in the case of Assam, there undoubtedly has been a fear on the part of the present Assam Ministry that a constitution devised for Assam by Section C would be such as would in effect put them out of office. The answer to this is that they must trust the majority in Section C not to abuse its powers, in the same way as that majority in Section C would have to trust the Congress majority in the Union Assembly not to abuse its power in regard to the federal subjects, and other things.

5. This matter is of course most important from the point of view of both the major parties; and if only the position could be fully accepted and appreciated, there would still be a chance that the Cabinet Mission Plan could be made effective.

Yours sincerely,
Mountbatten of Burma

11. ‘Announcement of HMG’s Plan on May 17’

New Delhi, Saturday—All speculation has been set at rest by the announcement this evening from the Viceroyal Lodge, Simla, that the British Government plan for the transfer of power to Indian hands will be made known on May 17.

Lord Mountbatten will present the plan at the Viceroy’s House in New Delhi to five leaders from British India headed by Pandit Nehru and later to the members of the States Negotiating Committee on behalf of the Indian states.

The wording of the ‘communique’, issued this evening suggested that the proposed meeting will not be a round table conference since the plan is in the nature of an ‘award’.

The Viceroy is expected to appeal to the leaders concerned to accept the award and thus help relieve the tension in the country.

The communiqué runs: His Excellency the Viceroy has invited the following leaders to meet him at the Viceroy’s House, New Delhi at 10.30 a.m. on Saturday, May 17.

PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
MR M.A. JINNAH
SARDAR VALLABHBHAI PATEL
MR LIAQUAT ALI KHAN
SARDAR BALDEV SINGH

He has also invited the representatives of the Indian States who were on the States Negotiating Committee to meet him, on the afternoon of that day.

The purpose of these meetings is to present to them the plan which HMG has now made for the transfer of power to Indian hands....
12. Nehru Comments on the Revised Draft Announcement

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 17 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/150, Acc No. 3465, NAI.

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

V.P. Menon has shown me the latest draft announcement as well as draft proposals for the transfer of power during the interim period. I have made certain comments to him in regard to them. I repeat these points below so that they may be before you in writing for facility of reference.

Draft Announcement

Paragraph 1. There has been some improvement. But I must say that I dislike the last sentence. There is no point in it and it is somewhat of an irritant. As a matter of fact, there has been an agreement between the Congress and HMG on the basis of the Plan of May 16th as well as their declaration of December 6, 1946. It might be said that all parties in India have accepted and agreed to this with the exception of the Muslim League. To go on laying stress on political parties being unable to reach an agreement is neither fair nor completely correct. In any event, it is not a very tactful approach to the problem. I still think that the change I suggested in paragraph I would improve it.

Paragraph 4. There has been a considerable change in this for the worse. Yesterday we were told that our suggestions had been accepted. Instead of that the whole structure of the sentence at the beginning has been changed laying emphasis on the exception rather than the rule. That exception has been dealt with separately later on in the document and there is no need to emphasize it right at the beginning of the paragraph. This emphasis leads to a wrong approach to the problem. It must be remembered that the Constituent Assembly has been functioning on the basis of an agreement with HMG and in accordance with their plan of May 16, 1946. That is the basic theme. In view, however, of certain developments, it is proposed to make certain changes which are enumerated later on. Those changes apply ultimately only to the areas deliberately choosing to opt out of the purview of the Constituent Assembly. I suggest therefore, that the wording I had recommended in my note yesterday for paragraph 4 should be kept. The present wording is not even in conformity with the original draft.

Paragraph 7. I fear that there is still lack of clarity. But I do not press this point any more as I have no objection to the intention behind this paragraph.

Paragraph 9. In this a reference is made to the demarcation of boundaries of the two parts of the Punjab on the basis of Givdavar circles. I do not know what these circles are. But I am told that our Sikh friends do not approve of this provision.

Paragraph 13. I notice the change made. As there is a reference in this paragraph to ‘contiguous Muslim majority areas’ and district adjoining Sylhet, I do not see any logic how the same principle might not be borne in mind regarding that part of Sind which adjoins Kutch and Jodphur. This is the Thar Pakar area which is largely desert, but which contains one town Umarkot. The area is big enough in the map, but is very sparsely populated. I realize the difficulties you pointed out yesterday and I have no wish to press for any addition to the document in regard to this matter. But I hope that you will bear this in mind so that when final changes have to be made this matter should also be considered.
Paragraph 14. End relating to the Sikhs. This is an addition. I think it is desirable that special reference be made to the Sikhs. But whether this paragraph will please them I rather doubt. The last sentence is not wholly correct. It is, of course, impossible to keep any group together 100 per cent in a scheme of partition. But it must be possible to meet many of the Sikh demands by certain variation of the boundary line. As the paragraph stands, I think it will serve no useful purpose and had better be omitted.

All as us sympathize very greatly with the Sikhs and would like to help them as much as possible in their predicament. But I do not feel competent, in a matter affecting them intimately, to say anything on their behalf or to commit them.

Subject to the remarks I have above, I am prepared to agree to the draft announcement. My remarks do not relate to any basic provision in the announcement but rather to the wording of it. Naturally my general acceptance to this draft and the proposals contained therein can only be, at this stage, a personal acceptance. I shall place the matter before the Congress Working Committee when they meet, and urge them to accept these basic provisions.

May I, however, make it clear again, as I have done previously on several occasions, that this acceptance is bound up with the acceptance of others also. That is to say, if there is a settlement on this basis, we accept these proposals for the sake of the settlement. If there is no clear settlement then there is no point in our accepting these proposals and in that event we revert to the Cabinet Mission’s Plan of May 16, 1946.

That plan is, in fact, a kind of an agreement between HMG and all others in India except the Muslim League. We would have liked that Plan to remain in its entirety. But with a view to a complete settlement of claims and to the establishment of peaceful conditions, we are prepared to agree to a variation of the Plan as suggested in the draft announcement. A real settlement and an abandonment of further claims is an essential part of the scheme. Without this the proposals fall.

Proposals for Transfer of Power during the Interim Period.

It is essential that there should be a transfer of power by convention or agreement simultaneously with these proposals. The present position is an intolerable one when there is no real responsibility anywhere and the situation deteriorates rapidly. If the proposals in the draft announcement are agreed to then no further apprehension should remain in the minds of the Muslim League about any abuse of power or authority against them. In order, however to remove any lingering apprehension it may be said that the Governor-General will retain this over-riding power to safeguard the legitimate interests of minorities.

While we shall welcome any Parliamentary legislation for the interim period, this is really a matter for HMG to consider as how best to give effect to the transfer of power. What we are more interested in is the immediate transfer by convention so that the present situation might be dealt with adequately and adjustments made immediately to fit in with the future.

In the draft proposals for the transfer of power it should be remembered, first of all, that these are for the interim period only and do not in any way, take away from the announcement of February 20, 1947. The future set up will necessarily be determined by the authorities functioning in India or by the Constituent Assembly. The principal thing we are aiming at now is not only to create suitable conditions in India which will fit in with the interim period, but also to create a psychological atmosphere of friendship between India and England which will enable us to decide in a co-operative manner about our future relations.
Reference is made in these proposals to the transfer of power being on the basis of the Government of India Act 1935. It is inevitable that we should proceed on the basis of the existing structure subject to changes necessitated by the transfer of power. But the Government of India Act is a very complicated structure and some provisions of it may later come in our way. It is to be clearly understood that power to change this Act during this interim period will vest with the authority in India. Naturally we will not desire to make changes for a brief period but the power should be there in case of need.

I do not know what Parliamentary legislation might be passed by HMG. Without knowing its provisions fully it is obvious that we cannot commit ourselves to it as none of us are parties to it.

I accept generally the draft proposals for the transfer of power subject to the clarification given above. In paragraph 5 I should like to add at the end ‘or till other arrangements are made’. This is merely to guard against the prolongation of the period contemplated in the paragraph.

We agree to the proposal that during this interim period the Governor-General should be common to both the States, if there are to be two States. For our part we shall be happy if you could continue in this office and help us with your advice and experience.

There is one important matter which so far has not been discussed, but which cannot be ignored. There should be some clause in our agreement to the effect that neither the Union nor the parts of India outside the Union forming a separate state shall be entitled to permit bases, extra territorial rights, or other infringements of the sovereignty of their territories by any outside state or power. Some such agreement must be made between two States in India for their mutual protection.

We have discussed various schemes and proposals which involve a partition of India. With great regret and in considerable agony of spirit we have agreed to these proposals because we earnestly desire a peaceful settlement of our problems and the least compulsion on any group or area. As you know we have stood for a united India and we have worked for it for the greater part of our lives. The partition proposed is not of our seeking. Our part in this proposed partition is only this that if there is to be a partition according to the will of the people, there should also logically be a partition of certain provinces. We have further agreed to certain territorial adjustments because HMG has apparently decided to hand over power only to a divided India. Because of our anxiety to have power handed over and because of our belief that the present situation urgently demands this, we are prepared to agree to the proposals made on behalf of HMG. But we would greatly prefer to stand for a united India as well as to continue to abide fully by the Cabinet Statement of May 16th. If there is no real settlement on the basis of the proposals now made and no handing over of power in accordance with them, then inevitably we stand for a united India and the Cabinet Statement of May 16th.

May I say how grateful I am for all the trouble you have taken in this matter. It is largely because of your personality and our faith in your sincere goodwill for India, that we have proceeded so far. I earnestly trust that we shall see some (?) light soon and put an end to the horrors that are disfiguring India.

I have consulted Sardar Patel and this letter generally represents his views also.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru
Towards Freedom: 1947

13. Interim Government to Continue as Before

Extract from a Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to V.K. Krishna Menon, 17 May 1947

My dear Krishna,

...2. We had another two hours with Mountbatten today. So far as the draft statement is concerned, various changes were incorporated which I had suggested. In regard to one or two other matters, he said that he would put them up before HMG. He has still to face a tussle with Jinnah this evening and possibly he might see us again after dinner tonight. I do not know what the final outcome will be.

3. Regarding the proposals for the transfer of power, I found an entirely new draft different in many ways from the one we saw this morning. It was a little briefer. The main point of difference was the entire exclusion of the last paragraph which dealt with the Interim Government being treated as a Dominion Government by convention subject to the Viceroy retaining his overriding power to safeguard the interests of minorities. It was obvious that this had been deleted at Jinnah’s instance. We took strong exception to this and in fact had a somewhat heated argument. Mountbatten, almost for the first time, took up an entirely contrary view and said that he thought we were unreasonable in insisting on this even to the point of breaking when it was only a question of two or three months. Both Vallabhbhai Patel and I pointed out that this had been a vital matter ever since we came into the Interim Government. Indeed we had come in on this very basis and I would never have formed the Government except on that basis. Soon after the Muslim League Members came in, this issue became a vital one and had ultimately led to our threatening resignation or the removal of the Muslim League Members. This again led to our being summoned to London early in December. Again in January this issue became critical and because we made it clear that we could not continue, other developments took place which led to HMGs statement of February 20th and the change in the Viceroyalty.

4. So this particular issue has dominated the situation during the past nine months and it must be solved. In the new context, when there might be partition within a few months and a transfer of power, it is still more absurd for the present set-up of the Interim Government to continue. We were not objecting to the individuals in it, but rather to their lack of cooperation with each other.

5. I even told Mountbatten that if this matter was not settled satisfactorily, it might be difficult for us to continue in Government. This business of giving in to Jinnah when everybody else thought otherwise was an intolerable imposition.

6. Mountbatten, to my surprise, opposed us completely and said that the world would consider us completely wrong in our insistence on this issue. It would mean that we wanted to crush the League during these coming two or three months and possibly to interfere with their particular areas to their disadvantage.

7. I pointed out that this was completely wrong as we did not wish to interfere with those areas and we were prepared to allow the Viceroy to safeguard the interests of those areas as well as of minorities in general during this period. All we wanted was a free hand for the rest of India.

8. So the argument went on and Mountbatten made some rather fantastic proposals about each Department of Government having some kind of under-study belonging to the other group who could serve as a check on any wrong action. Another proposal was that there might be separate Ministers for the separated areas.

9. Ultimately we did not press for the inclusion of a specific paragraph about the Interim Government functioning by convention as a Dominion Government because he said that would mean a complete break at this stage. But we told him that this matter must be explicitly and firmly put to HMG because we did not want any misapprehension about it. There was likely to be trouble later if it was not settled now. Mountbatten said he would do so and further that so far as he was concerned he would see to it that we functioned more or less as a Dominion Government. By that presumably he meant that he would not interfere himself. But that was not the point at all. Anyhow he said he would think about it and he asked the wise man V.P. Menon to cogitate also.

10. This afternoon, before I saw Mountbatten, I sent him a letter more or less covering the various points that had arisen. I enclose the copy of that letter.

11. V.P. Menon is coming to see me tonight to tell me of the latest developments in regard to the Quaid-i-Azam. There is a possibility of our being sent for by the Viceroy also tonight. ... Yours affectionately, Jawaharlal

---

Viceroy’s Conference Paper No. 49, 17 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 208, NMML.

I have examined the copy of the ‘Draft Announcement’ furnished to me by you a couple of days ago. As you are pressed for time and you wanted me to give you my suggestion, I have, under high pressure, complied with your wishes, specially, as I was given to understand, that you are leaving on Sunday morning.

I. INTRODUCTION

1) With regard to paragraph 1, I wish to state that the Muslim League has finally and definitely decided that they cannot accept the Cabinet Mission’s Plan of May 16, 1946.

2) Paragraph 2 is, as far as I can ascertain, substantially correct and, in view of what I have stated in paragraph 1, it is immaterial.

3) With regard to paragraph 3, so far as I know there is no agreement and His Majesty’s Government through you as their representative are proceeding to transfer power in accordance with the White Paper of 20th February, 1947. As regard the statement ‘nor is there anything in this Plan to preclude negotiations between communities for an united India’, the Muslim League has already decided that India must be divided and Pakistan should be established.

II. THE ISSUES TO BE DECIDED

4) I cannot agree that the present existing Constituent Assembly should be allowed to continue. Because, in my opinion, it is ab initio invalid, but I agree that two independent Constituent Assemblies should be established one for Pakistan and the other for Hindustan; and all power and authority should be transferred to the Pakistan and Hindustan Constituent Assemblies.

III. BENGAL AND THE PUNJAB

5). The Muslim League cannot agree to the partition of Bengal and the Punjab. It cannot be justified historically, economically, geographically, politically or morally. These provinces have built up their respective lives for nearly a century, administratively, economically and politically, and the only ground which is put forward for the partition is that the areas where the Hindus and Sikhs are in a majority should be separated from the rest of the provinces, on the ground that the Caste Hindus and Sikhs don’t want to be under a government in which the Muslims will be in a majority.

The same can be urged by the Muslims and others that they don’t want to be under a Government in which the Caste Hindus are in a majority and therefore other provinces should also be partitioned. It may be noted that there will be nearly 25 million of Mussalmans under the Hindu Government in Hindustan and millions of other communities such as the Scheduled Castes, the Christians, Adibasis and Tribes. The principle underlying the demand for establishing of Pakistan and Hindustan is totally different and I have already sent my Statement to you which I issued on the 30th of April, copy of which has also been sent to the Prime Minister. The Muslim League therefore cannot agree to the partition of Bengal and the Punjab and I do hope that His Majesty’s Government, when they examine this demand will not accept it and that you and His Majesty’s Government will both, in the name of justice and fairplay not submit yourselves to this clamour. For it will be sowing the seeds of future serious trouble and the results will be disastrous for the life of these two provinces and all the communities concerned.

In this connection I may draw your fullest consideration and earnestly press upon you that if you take this decision—which in my opinion will be a fateful one—Calcutta should not be torn away from the Eastern Bengal. It has been the heart of Bengal and the Province has developed and grown round this capital of Bengal which was for decades the capital of India before Delhi was established as capital. Merely because the majority of the Caste Hindu vocal section desires Bengal to be partitioned—for in Western Bengal there are 34 per cent Muslims, and out of the remaining 66 per cent the Scheduled Castes are 63 per cent and Caste Hindus 37 per cent, which is less than one third of the total population of the Western Bengal. I have every reason to believe that the Scheduled Castes are strongly opposed to the Partition of Bengal because they rightly say that they will be divided into two parts, one at the mercy of the Caste Hindus in Western Bengal and the other at the mercy of the Muslims in Eastern Bengal. They dread the Caste Hindus and it is well-known that they have suffered economical and social tyranny at the hands of the Hindus for which there is no parallel in the world. But if, unfortunately, partition is decided upon and Eastern Bengal is deprived of its only port of Calcutta which has developed its present position, in no case should it be allowed to go with the Western Bengal, otherwise it will follow as a corollary that Western Bengal will go into Hindustan and His Majesty’s Government will be making the present of one great port to Hindustan. In any event, if worst comes to worst, Calcutta should be made a free port.
Paragraphs 6, 7 and 8

These paragraphs relate more to procedure on the assumption that the issue of partition is decided upon and that these two provinces of Bengal and the Punjab should be cut up into two. I cannot say that the procedure laid down is satisfactory. The one governing principle which has been accepted by you is that the real will of the people of the part that wants to separate should be ascertained and the inhabitants of that part must be given every facility to give their verdict freely and fairly and this can only be done in a satisfactory manner by a plebiscite or a referendum, no doubt on the basis of 1941 census. I may point out that having regard to the Communal Award, which was modified by the Poona Pact in tragic circumstances, the Scheduled Castes have been completely left at the mercy of the Caste Hindus in the Electorates. Besides, owing to the well-known fact that the Scheduled Caste are socially and economically so weak that even in the present electorates their number does not reflect the real strength of the population. Illiteracy and poverty are rampant amongst them and they are not qualified to come on the electoral rolls having regard to the present standard of franchise which is laid down. Therefore, great danger lies in a decision being taken on the question of separation of the Western Bengal from Eastern Bengal without any effective voice of the Scheduled Castes, being secured.

9) With regard to paragraph 9 and taking paragraph 5 along with it, Punjab and Bengal provinces will be divided according to administrative districts as laid down in the Appendix, and paragraph 9 says, ‘for the purpose of deciding the issue of partition, Bengal and the Punjab provinces will be divided according to administrative districts as laid down in the appendix’. These appendices have not been furnished to me along with ‘the Draft Announcement’ and this is not a satisfactory position and will convey a totally wrong impression to the public. I, however, note that paragraph 9 proceeds on to say that ‘for the purpose of a definitive partition of these provinces a more detailed investigation of boundary question will be needed as soon as the decision involving partition has been taken for either provinces a Boundary Commission will be set up, the membership and terms of reference of which will be settled in consultation with those concerned. Until the report of a Boundary Commission has been put into effect, the provisional boundaries indicated in the Appendix will be used’. I have already said that I have not got the appendix but if the object is to ascertain contiguous majority areas of Muslims and non-Muslims, I would press upon you to lay down clearly that: the Boundary Commission will be instructed to demarcate the boundaries of the two parts of the Punjab on the basis of ascertaining contiguous majority areas of Muslims and non-Muslims down to Girdwara circles, and that similar arrangement will be made in the case of Bengal.

V. NWFP

With regard to the paragraph 11, I cannot agree that there should be any consultation with the provincial Government. Besides there is no indication as to what will be the position of the provincial Government and the present Ministry in the NWFP, if the referendum results in the verdict that NWFP wants to join the Pakistan Constituent Assembly, because after the verdict in favour of Pakistan, the present Ministry cannot be allowed to carry on the administration of the Province.
VI. BRITISH BALUCHISTAN

12) I may point out that about 90 per cent of the population of British Baluchistan is Muslim and even the present elected member of the Constituent Assembly under the Cabinet Delegation scheme from British Baluchistan is a Muslim Leaguer and has not taken his seat in the existing Constituent Assembly.

If, however, a fresh representative were to be chosen then some truly representative, democratic machinery which will ensure free and fair expression of the view of the people, should be set up for the purpose.

VII. ASSAM

Assam is neither a Muslim province nor a Hindu province. The district of Sylhet and the areas adjoining the district and contiguous to Bengal are predominantly Muslim. In the event of partition of Bengal, Sylhet District and other Muslim majority areas of Assam contiguous to Bengal should be amalgamated to the Eastern Bengal. Here again we want to get a true verdict, free and fair, of the inhabitants of those areas. I am not in a position to say whether the procedure that you have laid down will secure the object and it requires further examination. I may also point out here that it is difficult for me to understand how the rest of the Assam province will in any case continue to participate in the existing Constituent Assembly, or a new Hindustan Constituent Assembly.

I would further like to add that in case Bengal is partitioned those areas of the Purnea district in Bihar which are contiguous to Eastern Bengal and have a Muslim majority should be amalgamated with Eastern Bengal.

15) It is not quite clear to me when it is stated that these representatives (which are stated in paragraph 14) ‘will either join the existing Constituent Assembly or form a new Constituent Assembly according to the mandate given to them by the areas concerned’. For up to this state in your proposals there are only two Constituent Assemblies contemplated.

IX. TRANSFER OF POWER

16) With regard to paragraph 16, all power including Defence, Foreign Affairs, Finance and Communications and all other matters which are now dealt with by the Central Government or His Majesty’s Government, should be transferred to the Constituent Assemblies of Pakistan and Hindustan.

XI. THE TRIBES OF THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER

18) It is not clear as to who will be the appropriate successor authorities to negotiate with the tribes of the NWFP of India. It must be made clear and in my opinion it can only be the Pakistan Constituent Assembly.
15. Acharya Narendra Deva Opposes Partition

Extract from a Press Interview Reported in National Herald, 19 May 1947

The Socialist leader declared: ‘I stand for the unity of India and I am opposed to its partition. Even if any part of the country was separated we should treat this arrangement as temporary and should never relax our efforts for a reunion. A divided India would be a prey to foreign aggression and would not be able to get rid of British imperialism completely.

‘When I speak of united India I also mean the absorption of all the Indian states within the Indian union. It is clear that so long as a single state remains outside the union or so long as the people of a single state do not achieve their freedom India cannot be said to be completely free. It is, therefore, obvious that even after June 1948, the objective of the Congress would not be achieved in full. Those who say that the struggle is over are wrong and have no correct appreciation of the task that lies ahead. I refer here only to the political aspect of our struggle. The economic struggle of the masses has yet to be fought and won.’

Acharya Narendra Deva referred to the demand for the partition of the Punjab and Bengal and said that it was made only because the League demanded Pakistan. If the demand for partition of India was justifiable, the other demand for partition of certain provinces became irresistible. All areas that were eager to remain in the Indian union had to be accorded the right to do so and those who believed in Indian unity could not but welcome such a move.

16. Questions about the Transfer of Power

Extract from a Letter from Doon Campbell to K.H. Khurshid, 20 May 1947

REUTERS LIMITED

4 PARLIAMENT STREET, NEW DELHI

Dear Mr Hasan,

Enclosed the set of questions I mentioned over the phone the other day. I would much like to have had the list in sooner but preoccupation with affairs in North India delayed their submission....

I do hope Mr Jinnah will feel disposed to answer some, if not all of, the questions.

Hoping to hear from you.

Yours sincerely,

A. DOON CAMPBELL

Enclosure

REUTERS LIMITED

4 PARLIAMENT STREET, NEW DELHI

19 May 1947

1. What sort of relationship do you envisage between Pakistan and Hindustan?
2. How would you divide the armed forces? Do you envisage a defence pact or any other kind of military alliance between Pakistan and Hindustan?
3. Do you favour a federation of Pakistan States even if there is to be partition of the Punjab and Bengal?
4. Will you demand a corridor through Hindustan connecting the Eastern and Western Pakistan States?
5. Do you envisage the formation of a Pan-Islamic State stretching from the Near and Middle East to the Far East after the establishment of Pakistan?
6. On what basis will the central administration of Pakistan be set up? What will be the attitude of this Government to the Indian States?
7. In general terms what will be the foreign policy of Pakistan? Will it apply for membership of the United Nations?
8. On which major power is Pakistan most likely to lean?
9. What sort of relationship do you envisage between Pakistan and Britain?
10. What are your views in regard to the protection of minorities in Pakistan territories?

17. Discussion in London on Issues Related to Transfer of Power

Extract from the Minutes of the Meeting of the Cabinet India and Burma Committee in London, 20 May 1947

...Minute 2

Proosals for the Transfer of Power on the Basis of Dominion Status

VISCOUNT MOUNTBATTEN emphasized that any announcement on this matter must make it clear that power would be transferred not later than the early autumn of 1947 instead of in June 1948; and that the Governor-General and any British officer who remained in India did so at the request of the Indians themselves. It would take about two months to withdraw British forces and this process should begin as soon as power was transferred. The only European members of the Defence Services to remain would be such army and naval officers as the Indians themselves required and as might volunteer to continue to serve, and any essential units that the British Government was prepared to let India have on loan.

The Viceroy said that, according to information which he had just received, it appeared that Mr Jinnah was still not prepared to commit himself in writing on the question of Dominion status for both parts of India. He had made it clear to a number of people that he wanted Dominion status for Pakistan, and that he wanted him (the Viceroy) to remain as Governor-General after June, 1948, so as to act as an arbitrator in the division of Central functions, etc. Pandit Nehru had agreed in writing (I.B. (47) 73) to a constitutional Governor-General acting as arbitrator in matters of common concern between the two independent States. It now seemed that Mr Jinnah was unwilling to pursue the subject at all until after the announcement had been made on 2nd June. The Viceroy thought that Mr Jinnah’s objections to a common Governor-General for both States were:

(i) that he would be resident in Delhi; and
(ii) that, when he (the Viceroy) left, Congress would attempt to secure one of their own nominees for the post.

What Mr Jinnah really wanted was that Pakistan should have Dominion status and that Hindustan should leave the Commonwealth. The Viceroy thought that both parties should be offered Dominion status before the end of 1947 and, if they did not agree to this, both should become independent. He wanted clear guidance from the Committee on this point, and their full support in taking this line if Mr Jinnah proved to be recalcitrant.

The Viceroy informed the Committee that the Governor of Bengal was apparently meeting with success in his efforts to secure that Bengal should remain united, and that it might therefore be possible to remove all reference to Bengal from the statement. If Bengal were to become independent, however, this would presumably involve the establishment of a third Dominion, with all the further complications which that would involve; several of the larger States might also wish to become separate Dominions....

Minute 3

Future of the Present Interim Government

VISCONT MOUNTBATTEN raised the question of the arrangements to be made for the conduct of the Interim Government during the period between the decision to partition India and the enactment of legislation in the United Kingdom providing for the transfer of power to two states on the basis of Dominion status. Both Pandit Nehru and Sardar Patel had told him that, unless Congress could be given full control over the Hindustan area during this period, Congress Ministers would feel bound to resign from the Interim Government. There was no doubt that the Congress Ministers were becoming increasingly dissatisfied with the working of the Interim Government. They believed that their agreement to the participation of the Muslim League in the Interim Government had been obtained on the understanding that the League would in return participate in the deliberations of the Constituent Assembly; they were now convinced that the League’s sole purpose in entering the Interim Government had been to prevent it from working effectively. The Interim Government had, perhaps, worked more successfully than Congress would admit, but there was little doubt that both parties had shown themselves primarily concerned to forward their own interests. The best arrangement would, of course, be for the Interim Government to continue while provisional governments were established for Hindustan and Pakistan and for its functions to be gradually transferred, either to the new Governments or to the suggested Functional Boards. There was no prospect, however, that the Congress leaders would agree to this procedure or could secure the support of their party for it. In these circumstances, there appeared to be two possible courses to follow—

(a) Once the decision to partition had been taken, two Cabinets might be formed in Delhi with complete responsibility for Hindustan and Pakistan affairs respectively. These Cabinets would meet jointly under the Viceroy for consideration of central matters of common interest to both areas. This arrangement would, of course, involve the duplication of each of the existing Ministries.

(b) The existing form of the Interim Government might be maintained, but each Minister would have a deputy, representative of the opposite party, who would understudy him.

The Viceroy said that he would wish to have the advice of Ministers whether interim arrangements on these lines could be adopted, and, if necessary, enforced, without need for amendment of the Government of India Act, 1935.

The Committee thought that arrangements of the kind at (a) above could be adopted by convention, but that such action would have to be validated in subsequent legislation.
The Committee:
Invited the Secretary of State for India to arrange for officials to prepare, in the light of the Committee’s discussion and in consultation with the Reforms Commissioner of the Government of India, detailed proposals for interim arrangements for the administration of the Government of India during the period between the decision to partition and the enactment of United Kingdom legislation to provide for the transfer of power.

Minute 4

Mr Jinnah’s Request for a Referendum in Bengal and the Punjab

VISCOUNT MOUNTBATTEN referred to the request made by Mr Jinnah in his note of 17th May (Annex A to I.B. (47) 73) that a referendum should be held in Bengal and the Punjab to determine whether or not these Provinces should be partitioned. The Viceroy had not felt able to accept this proposal which would, in his view, achieve no useful purpose and would merely result in delay. He had, however, promised Mr Jinnah that the matter would be submitted for consideration by Ministers.

The Committee:
Agreed that Mr Jinnah should be informed that his proposal for a referendum in Bengal and the Punjab was not acceptable to His Majesty’s Government.

Minute 5

Request for Boundary Adjustments

VISCOUNT MOUNTBATTEN informed the Committee that three important proposals for boundary adjustments had been made by the Indian leaders. In his note of 17th May (Annex A to I.B. (47) 73) Mr Jinnah had proposed that, if Bengal was partitioned, those areas of the Purnea district in Bihar contiguous to Eastern Bengal should be amalgamated with it; Pandit Nehru had suggested that a small part of Sind should be transferred to Jodhpur State; and Sardar Patel had suggested that part of Kutch State should be transferred to the Bombay Presidency. Acceptance of these requests would open the door to innumerable demands of the same kind; they also raised the principle whether part of British India might be transferred to an Indian State.

The Committee thought that these were not matters on which decisions should be taken at this stage. Any boundary adjustments of this type should be a matter for settlement after the transfer of power, either by agreement between the parties concerned or under decisions by the appropriate Boundary Commissions.

18. Jinnah on the Revised Draft Announcement

Letter from M.A. Jinnah to Eric Mieville, 21 May 1947

Dear Sir Eric,

You sent to me a copy of the revised Draft Announcement in the form in which the Viceroy took it to London for consultations; and also you personally delivered to me in the afternoon of 20th of May at about 5.30 the full text of what purports to be Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru’s letter of 17th May and also his letter of 19th May, with regard to the two proposals for the transfer of power marked A and B.
I have given my full consideration to these and as arranged, I am sending herewith, within the time you had suggested, my note which please communicate to His Excellency Lord Mountbatten, who is now in the United Kingdom.

Please acknowledge receipt and oblige.

Yours sincerely,

M.A. JINNAH

Note by M.A. Jinnah on Jawaharlal Nehru’s Letter on the Revised Draft Announcement

21 May 1947

Sir Eric Mieville personally handed over to me what purports to be the full text of Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru’s letter dated 17th of May 1947, addressed to His Excellency Lord Mountbatten; and also what purports to be a copy of Pandit Nehru’s letter of the 19th of May addressed to Captain Brockman.

I have carefully gone through them and I find that in the letter of 17th May the Congress acceptance is subject to more conditions and clarifications than it appeared from the extracts of his letter that were furnished to me and with which I had to deal in my note forwarded to Sir Eric Mieville on 19th of May....

The Muslim League will never agree to any change in the position, functions, or powers of the present Interim Government either by convention or otherwise, but that it must be dissolved as soon as two Constituent Assemblies are formed; and all power should be transferred to them immediately as it was originally laid down in paragraph 16 of the Draft Announcement.

I may add that His Excellency Lord Mountbatten’s efforts will secure full justice to the 100 millions of Musalmans. I am not in the habit of flattering anyone, but I must say that throughout our discussions and examination of the various points, I was impressed by the high sense of integrity, fairplay and impartiality on his part and, therefore, I feel that Lord Mountbatten will succeed in his great mission.

And finally with reference to the revised Draft Announcement furnished to me on the 20th of May, I find, among others, that with regard to Bengal and the Punjab no change has been made in spite of my very strong objections to the partition of Bengal and the Punjab embodied in my note of 17th May. I can only reiterate all that I have said in that with regard to the partition of Bengal and the Punjab and I adhere to the views expressed therein.

M.A. JINNAH

19. Partition of India Implies Partition of Punjab

Telegram from Eric Mieville to Louis Mountbatten, 21 May 1947

JOR, R/3/1/150, Acc. No. 3465, NAI.

IMMEDIATE

SECRET

No. 1107-S. I have received this afternoon following letter from Baldev Singh.

Begins. I have seen the revised draft announcement enclosed with your letter of 20th May and regret to point out that the Sikh point of view has not been fully met even now. I would particularly draw your attention to the following 4 points:

No. 1107-S. I have received this afternoon following letter from Baldev Singh.

Begins. I have seen the revised draft announcement enclosed with your letter of 20th May and regret to point out that the Sikh point of view has not been fully met even now. I would particularly draw your attention to the following 4 points:
(1) It must be recognized that if India is to be divided, then the partition of the Punjab has to be effected to meet principally the demand of the Sikhs who, being one of the three major communities, are determined as a community not to be included in a Muslim dominated or Pakistan territory.

(2) In order that the work of the Boundary Commission may not be prejudiced or obstructed ‘the notional division’ of the Punjab must include in addition to the 12 enumerated districts, the two districts of Gurdaspur and Lahore as well.

(3) For the same reason, when interim zonal ministries are formed the territory of the Eastern Punjab must include in addition to the two Divisions of Ambala and Jullundur, the three districts of Lahore Division as well, namely, Gurdaspur, Amritsar and Lahore.

(4) Para. 7 of the Draft Announcement is not clear. It seems to imply that on a demand from even a Single Member of the Punjab Legislature, who may be a Muslim, the entire Legislative Assembly will meet and decide—

(a) whether Punjab is to remain united, and
(b) which Constituent Assembly the Province would join as a whole.

Under this procedure as the wording of this para. stands, the Muslims who are in an absolute majority in the Legislature will force non-Muslims both to remain united and to join the proposed separate Constituent Assembly contemplated in para. 4(b) of the Announcement. This amounts to giving a veto to the Muslim majority in the Legislature. Para. 7 must therefore be redrafted and state clearly that this joint meeting of the Legislative Assembly as a whole can in no event prejudice the non-Muslim case for the partition of the Punjab whether India is divided or remains united and further that no vote in such a meeting shall compel the Eastern non-Muslim Punjab to form part of the separate Muslim dominated Constituent Assembly.

I would request you to communicate the above to HE in London immediately to clarify the ambiguity as in (4) above and in order that a complete picture is before His Majesty’s Government when it is considering the final decision. Ends.

I have written to him and explained the position regarding para. 7 of the draft announcement.

20. Pakistan as Jinnah Saw It

Jinnah’s Reply to Questionnaire from Doon Campbell, Reuter’s Correspondent, 21 May 1947

Question 1: What sort of relationship do you envisage between Pakistan and Hindustan?

Answer: Friendly and reciprocal in the mutual interest of both. That is why I have been urging that let us separate in a friendly way and remain friends thereafter.

Question 2: How would you divide the armed forces? Do you envisage a defence pact or any other kind of military alliance between Pakistan and Hindustan?

Answer: All the armed forces must be divided completely, but I do envisage an alliance, pact or treaty between Pakistan and Hindustan, again in the mutual interest of both and against any aggressive outsider.
Question 3: Do you favour a federation of Pakistan States even if there is to be a partition of the Punjab and Bengal?

Answer: The new clamour for partition that is started by the vocal section of the Caste Hindus in Bengal and the Sikhs in particular in the Punjab will have disastrous results if these two provinces are partitioned and the Sikhs in the Punjab will be the greatest sufferers; and Muslims under contemplated Western Punjab will no doubt be hit, but it certainly will deal the greatest blow to those, particularly the Sikhs, for whose benefit this new hare has been started. Similarly in Western Bengal, Caste Hindus will suffer the most and so will the Caste Hindus in Eastern Punjab. This idea of partition is not only thoughtless and reckless, but if, unfortunately, His Majesty’s Government favour it, in my opinion it will be a grave error and will prove dangerous immediately and far more so in the future. Immediately it will lead to bitterness and unfriendly attitude between Eastern Bengal and Western Bengal and same will be the case with torn Punjab, that is, between Western Punjab and Eastern Punjab.

Partition of the Punjab and Bengal, if effected, will, no doubt, weaken Pakistan to a certain extent. Weak Pakistan and a strong Hindustan will be a temptation for the strong Hindustan to try to dictate. I have always said that Pakistan must be viable and sufficiently strong as a balance vis-à-vis Hindustan. I am, therefore, deadly against the partition of Bengal and the Punjab and we shall fight every inch against it.

Question 4: Will you demand a corridor through Hindustan connecting the Eastern and Western Pakistan States?

Answer: Yes.

Question 5: Do you envisage the formation of a Pan-Islamic State stretching from the Near and Middle East to the Far East after the establishment of Pakistan?

Answer: The theory of Pan-Islamism has long ago exploded, but we shall certainly establish friendly relations and co-operate for the mutual good and world peace and we shall always stretch our hand of friendship to the Near and Middle East and the Far East after the establishment of Pakistan.

Question 6: On what basis will the Central Administration of Pakistan be set up? What will be the attitude of this Government to the Indian States?

Answer: The basis of the Central Administration of Pakistan and that of the units to be set up will be decided, no doubt, by the Pakistan Constituent Assembly. But the Government of Pakistan can only be a popular, representative and democratic form of Government. Its Parliament and Cabinet responsible to the Parliament will be both finally responsible to the electorate and the people in general without any distinction of caste, creed or sect, who will be the final deciding factor with regard to the policy and programme of the Government that may be adopted from time to time.

As regards our attitude towards the Indian States I may make it clear once more that the policy of the Muslim League has been and is not to interfere with the Indian States, with regard to their internal affairs. But while we expect as rapid a progress as possible in the various States towards the establishment of full responsible government, it is primarily the concern of the ruler and his people.

As regards the position of the States in the light of the announcement made by His Majesty’s Government embodied in the White Paper of 20th February, I wish to make it clear that the States are at liberty to form a confederation as one solid group or confederate into more than one group, or stand as individual States. It is a matter entirely for them to decide. It is clear, as far as I can understand, that Paramountcy is going to terminate and, therefore, they are completely independent and free. It is for them to adjust such matters as there may be by virtue of their treaties and agreements with the paramount power. They must consider as completely independent and free States, free from any paramountcy, as to what is best in their interest, and it will be open to them to decide whether they should join the Pakistan Constituent Assembly or the Hindustan Constituent Assembly, for there must be and will be two sovereign Constituent Assemblies of Pakistan and Hindustan.

Question 7: In general terms what will be the foreign policy of Pakistan? Will it apply for membership of the United Nations?
Answer: The foreign policy of Pakistan can only be for peace and friendly relations with all other nations and we shall certainly play our part in the membership of the United Nations.

Question 8: On which major power is Pakistan most likely to lean?
Answer: The one that will be in our best interests. It will not be a case of leaning on any power, but we shall certainly establish friendship and alliances which will be for the benefit of all those who may enter into such alliance.

Question 9: What sort of relationship do you envisage between Pakistan and Britain?
Answer: This question can only be decided by the Constituent Assembly of Pakistan and, as I understand the situation, relationship between Pakistan and Britain can be established which will be really beneficial for both. Pakistan cannot live in isolation, nor can any other nation do so today. We shall have to choose our friends and I trust, wisely.

Question 10: What are your views in regard to the protection of minorities in Pakistan territories?
Answer: There is only one answer. The minorities must be protected and safeguarded. The minorities in Pakistan will be the citizens of Pakistan and enjoy all the rights, privileges and obligations of citizenship without any distinction of caste, creed or sect, and I have no doubt in my mind that they will be treated justly and fairly. The Government will run the administration and control the legislative measures by its parliament and the collective conscience of parliament itself will be a guarantee that the minorities need not have any apprehensions of any injustice being done to them.

Over and above that, there will be provisions for the protection and safeguard of the minorities which, in my opinion, must be embodied in the Constitution itself. And this will leave no doubt as to the fundamental rights of the citizens, protection of religion and faith of every section, freedom of thought, expression and association and protection of their cultural and social life.

M.A. JINNAH
21. Muslim League’s Demand for a Corridor Not Genuine

Extract from a Letter from Govind Ballabh Pant to Vallabhbhai Patel, 22 May 1947

Naini Tal

My dear Sardar Sahib,

... I also hear that Mr Jinnah has issued a statement not only opposing the proposed partition of the Punjab and Bengal, but also demanding a corridor between Punjab and Bengal via UP and Bihar. If this is true then even the acceptance of the demand for division of the country will not bring us peace. The League seems to be spoiling for a fight. Whether that is their genuine wish and attitude or a mere pose it is difficult to say.

I hope you have been able to find a little rest at Mussoorie. You will have a particularly strenuous time of it on the return of the Viceroy.

It is just possible that I may see you even before the date fixed for the meeting of the Working Committee.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

G.B. Pant

22. Partition a Final Decision

Extract from Minutes of the Meeting of Cabinet India and Burma Committee, 22 May 1947

...The Committee then considered what policy should be followed in the event of either party refusing to accept the scheme for the transfer of power set out in the proposed announcement.

VISCOUNT MOUNTBATTEN said that, in that event, a decision would have to be made between four possible courses. Power might be handed over to the Interim Government; power might be transferred to the Provinces: the scheme contained in the announcement might be imposed as an Award: or the whole question might be referred to the United Nations. The Congress leaders would no doubt ask for the adoption of the first of these courses. They would argue that they had accepted the Cabinet Mission plan and that the arrangements proposed in the announcement were no more than a modification of it, under which the Provinces could opt out of the Union immediately instead of in ten years’ time. The refusal of the Muslim League to accept the scheme would therefore be regarded by the Congress leaders as justification for strict adherence to the Cabinet Mission plan and for the immediate handing over of power to the Interim Government. But he did not think that Congress could be regarded as having accepted the Mission’s plan, and, in fact, transfer of power to the Interim Government would be neither advisable nor practicable. In his view, the only possible course would be to carry through the scheme contained in the announcement, whatever attitude the Muslim League might adopt. The view of the Governor of the Punjab was that any attempt to impose partition of that Province would involve bloodshed, but no solution could now be found which would not result in some disorder. He did not, however, believe that Mr Jinnah would ultimately prove completely recalcitrant, though it seemed doubtful whether he could be brought to agree to accept any plan as a final settlement. The greatest danger was that the Muslim League would adhere to their demands for full Pakistan as the inalienable right of Muslims, but at the same time acquiesce in and operate the plan. The Congress had undertaken to accept only if other parties accepted the plan as a final settlement. The adoption of such an attitude by the League might therefore lead to the withdrawal of Congress support for the plan.

The Committee shared the Viceroy’s view that there could now be no question of attempting to carry out the Cabinet Mission’s plan; the only course was to adhere to the plan contained in the proposed announcement, even if one of the parties should refuse to accept it. They thought that Mr Jinnah might be persuaded to adopt a more reasonable attitude if it could be indicated to him that the consequence of refusal would be a settlement less favourable, from his point of view, than that contained in the announcement. For instance, it could be pointed out to him that the proposals in their present form were very unfavourable to the Sikhs and that, if the Muslim League refused to accept the scheme, it would be necessary to arrange for the partition of the Punjab on a basis which would be substantially less favourable to the Muslims. He might also be reminded that, if the Muslim League boycotted the scheme, the only result would be that the Congress Party would have an effective start in building up a strong and well organized Hindustan. If, on the other hand, Congress threatened to withdraw their agreement, it could be pointed out to them that the decision was a final one on the part of His Majesty’s Government, and they could be asked whether they themselves accepted partition as a final and permanent solution.

23. Need for Immediate Transfer of Power

Extracts from a Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Agatha Harrison, 22 May 1947

_Mussoorie_

My dear Agatha,

...For the present, however, we are in a sorry mess and the most ghastly reports reach us of what is happening in Lahore or Calcutta or elsewhere. There appears to be a general disintegration of the administration and nobody seems to be completely responsible for it. I am more sure than ever of the rightness of what Bapu said last year that the first thing to be done is an immediate transfer of power to some Indian authority. The British civil servants neither want to deal with the present situation effectively nor are they capable of it. They feel that they have to go anyhow pretty soon, so why should they bother. There is often also a secret satisfaction that India is going to pieces. India will not go to pieces whatever happens though there may be difficulties and troubles ahead. But we are going to have a bad time and this will continue till some strong and determined authority can deal with the situation. The present authority cannot and will not....

Yours sincerely

Jawaharlal Nehru
24. Dominion Status for India

Record of Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Winston Churchill, 22 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 193, NMML.

After my meeting with Mr Churchill and the Opposition leaders (Mr Eden, Lord Salisbury and Sir John Anderson), I received a telephone message from Mr Churchill that the Opposition had agreed that they would facilitate legislation on the basis of this discussion. They now wished to discuss the matter further with me.

I therefore went round and saw Mr Churchill in bed. He handed me a copy of the letter that he had written to the Prime Minister, which is attached, and was extremely pleasant about what had been achieved in India in a short while. But he was extremely vitriolic about my predecessor.

He said that he hoped to get Indian matters dealt with on a bi-party basis. If I could achieve Dominion status for both Hindustan and Pakistan, the whole country would be behind us, and the Conservative Party would help to rush the legislation through.

He then asked me if I foresaw any difficulties, particularly with Mr Gandhi. I told him that Mr Gandhi was unpredictable, but that I doubted whether he would create any difficulties which could not be dealt with by Patel and Nehru.

He asked me whether I had received a letter from Nehru accepting Dominion status if power was transferred this year. I replied in the affirmative and added that I had given a copy to the Prime Minister. I pointed out that I had been unable to obtain a similar written assurance from Mr Jinnah. Mr Churchill expressed great surprise: ‘By God’, he said, ‘he is the one man who cannot do without British help’. I pointed out that Mr Jinnah’s methods of procedure could not be predicted by logic, and I told him that I must have a definite line of action to pursue in the event of his refusing to make up his mind about Dominion status. I told him that I proposed to inform Mr Jinnah that in that case we could go ahead with the transfer of power this year on a Dominion status basis for Hindustan with an option for Dominion status to be taken up at any time by Pakistan. He told me that the Conservative Party might not agree to the passing of legislation under those terms, and that he might, in fact, have to oppose this. I then asked him if he would advise me how I should proceed if Jinnah was intransigent.

He thought about this for a long time and finally said: ‘To begin with you must threaten. Take away all British officers. Give them military units without British officers. Make it clear to them how impossible it would be to run Pakistan without British help’.

I agreed to try and follow some such policy, but said that we could not escape the fact that ultimately I must be authorized not only to threaten, but also to implement the threat of a transfer of power without Dominion status. I pointed out that if I could not do this, Jinnah might hold out indefinitely, and that we might then lose both Hindustan and Pakistan.

This shook Mr Churchill and he asked me to obtain the Prime Minister’s approval to my seeing Mr Anthony Eden, Sir John Anderson, Mr Harold Macmillan and Lord Simon in the near future, and to discuss this very point.

I told him that Mr Godfrey Nicholson wanted to see me and he told me on no account to see him. He added that he was ‘a very unsound Conservative with sentimental ideas about India’, and he advised me to reply that if he wished to see me, then he should apply through the Prime Minister’s Private Secretary.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Finally, he asked me to advise the Prime Minister to tell the other Dominions what was going on, so that they could get in touch with the prospective Indian Dominions and possibly help them to come in on a reasonable basis.

He authorized me to give Mr Jinnah the following message: ‘This is a matter of life and death for Pakistan, if you do not accept this offer with both hands’.

Finally he suggested that if I were appointed Governor General of Hindustan and Governor General of Pakistan, I might adopt the title ‘Moderator’, which at one time had been suggested by the late President Roosevelt, instead of the title ‘Viceroy’.

Enclosure

Mr Churchill to Mr Attlee

SECRET

HOUSE OF COMMONS,
21 May 1947

My dear Prime Minister,

I have now had an opportunity of consulting my colleagues upon the terms of a possible settlement in India which you and the Viceroy put before us last night.

As a result I am in a position to assure you that if those terms are made good, so that there is an effective acceptance of Dominion status for the several parts of a divided India, the Conservative Party will agree to facilitate the passage this Session of the legislation necessary to confer Dominion status upon such several parts of India.

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

WINSTON S. CHURCHILL

25. Division of India Inevitable

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Ashrafuddin Ahmad Chowdhry, 23 May 1947

Mussoorie

My dear Mr Ashrafuddin Ahmad Chowdhry,

I am sorry for the delay in answering your letter of April 30th. I can hardly discuss the vital questions you refer to at length in a letter. I do not think we have given up any fundamental principle for which we stood. But it is true that the events that have taken place during the last nine months have made us think realistically of the problems before us. It is no good talking in terms of slogans when decisions have to be made.

The Congress has stood for the Union of India and still stands for it. But we have previously stated that we are not going to compel any part against its will. If that unfortunately leads to a division, then we accept it. But inevitably such a division must mean a division also of Bengal and Punjab. That is the only way to have a united India soon after. If we can have a united India straight away without such division, that will, of course, be very welcome.

I do not quite understand what you mean by saying that I should direct the members of our organization to face all eventualities in a courageous manner. Indeed I have tried to do so to the best of my ability. I might inform you that I do not spend very much time with day-to-day files. I am much more concerned with the present and the future of the country.
Making of the 3 June Plan

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

26. ‘How Disaster in India Can Be Avoided’
Extracts from a Report from The Statesman, 23 May 1947.

Bombay, May 22.—Sir Homi Mody, former member of the Viceroy’s Executive Council, said in an interview in Bombay today that the questions involved in the division of India were so many and so complex that the deadline of British departure would not see anything like their solution.

‘It is of paramount importance therefore’, he said ‘that a machinery be jointly set up by Hindustan and Pakistan capable of functioning for a period of years, for dealing with the problems that will arise. The consequences might, otherwise, be disastrous’.

Sir Homi Mody was joint author with Dr John Matthai, now Transport Member of a memorandum on the economic aspects of Pakistan which they had submitted to the Sapru Committee of which they were members. The main conclusion of the memorandum was that Pakistan was feasible from financial point of view but that for any successful scheme of separation some system of effective and continuous co-operation in matters relating to defence and economic development was an ‘indispensable pre-requisite’.

Only Way Out

Asked whether his conclusion of 1945 still stood valid he added: ‘I have no desire to enter the lists on either side, but it seems to me an inescapable conclusion that a division of India would weaken both Hindustan and Pakistan and reduce the importance of this sub-continent in the eyes of the world. It may be that political peace is not be to obtained otherwise and from that standpoint, division is the only way out but it is essential that we have a clear appreciation of the price that will have to be paid for it’.

27. ‘Corridor Demand Untenable: Rajen Babu’
The Tribune, 24 May 1947.

NEW DELHI, May 23.—Dr Rajendra Prasad, President of the Constituent Assembly, said here today that Mr Jinnah’s demand for a corridor to link up the north-eastern and north-western Pakistan areas was untenable.

Answering the question whether he thought Mr Jinnah’s demand was right and feasible, Dr Rajendra Prasad in an interview said: ‘I do not think there is any case for a corridor. In any case, the rest of India can never agree to it—that means cutting through the Punjab, Delhi, the United Provinces, Bihar and part of Bengal, and a distance of nearly 1000 miles right through mainly non-Muslim areas. The United Provinces have only some 15 per cent of Muslim population and Bihar only 12.’

Dr Rajendra Prasad said he hated a division of the country, but emphasized that if there was to be a division then we have to insist upon a division of the provinces of Bengal and the Punjab.
Asked whether he thought a referendum would be necessary to decide upon the basis of partitioning these provinces, Dr Rajendra Prasad said 'I do not know if a referendum will be required because the views of the... which would like to be separated from Pakistan can be taken to be more or less unanimous. I have no doubt in my mind that there is no difference of opinion worth considering.'

If division became inevitable, he added, division of the armed forces would also become necessary.

28. Jinnah Rejects the Proposed Draft Announcement

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Eric Mieville, 25 May 1947

My dear Sir Eric,

Thank you for your letter of the 22nd May sending me copies of Mr Jinnah’s two notes to the Viceroy dated 19th May and 21st May. I received these last evening at Mussoorie. I am on my way back to Delhi where I hope to reach tomorrow morning. I am anxious, however, to convey to you my reactions to Mr Jinnah’s notes. I do not know what is happening in London except from the conflicting and unauthorized accounts appearing in the newspapers. It is clear, however, that Mr Jinnah’s notes and the attitude he has taken up in them make a vital difference to the talks we have had so far with the Viceroy.

2. So far as we were concerned we gave our views on the draft announcement as well as in regard to the proposals for the transfer of power, without any reference to what Mr Jinnah had said on the subject. Indeed we did not know except rather vaguely and informally what his reactions had been. We had been told that he had more or less agreed to the fundamental basis of the various proposals.

3. In effect we had accepted the revised draft announcement as well as the other proposals. But we had made it clear that there was no point in our accepting them unless they were the basis of a settlement and no further claims would be put forward. If the Muslim League did not accept the very structure of those proposals, then there can be no settlement on that basis and the proposals fell through. We were not prepared to have a one-sided acceptance of them.

4. I was not aware that Mr Jinnah was only prepared to give anything in writing after he had seen what we had said on the subject. Mr Jinnah’s note of the 19th May is chiefly an argument for being unable to say anything definite without seeing the full text of my letters addressed to the Viceroy. His note of the 22nd May is an argumentative criticism of various things said. I shall not go into any of these details as I think I have made our position quite clear in the course of my previous letters. It is clear, however, from what Mr Jinnah says that he does not accept the very basis of the proposals with regard to the partition of Bengal and the Punjab. In the course of a press interview he has gone much further and stated that he will resist any such partition. He has also added a demand for a corridor from the North-West to the North-East.

5. It is obvious that these demands and assertions are in complete negation of the basis of our talks with the Viceroy and the proposals and drafts that emerged there from. We are thus left exactly where we were when the talks started, or rather we have gone back because thus far there had been no authoritative mention of a corridor such as Mr Jinnah has now stated. In view of the attitude taken up by Mr Jinnah, we cannot give a one-sided agreement to any proposal. which does not lead to a full settlement. I have tried to make this perfectly clear in my previous letter and I wish to emphasize this again so that there might be no doubt in regard to it.

6. The consequence of Mr Jinnah’s rejection of the main proposals in the draft announcement is that we must necessarily fall back upon the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme of May 16, 1946. We have adhered to this and have been functioning in accordance with this in the Constituent Assembly and otherwise. It is quite clear that there can be no partition of any part of India unless this is done on a logical basis taking into consideration the views of the people concerned in particular areas. We all know the passionate objection in Western Bengal and Eastern Punjab to being excluded from the Union of India. The only alternatives, therefore, are: the inclusion of the whole of Bengal and the Punjab in the Union or the exclusion of Western Punjab and Eastern Bengal from the Union. Since the latter is objected to by Mr Jinnah, only the former course remains to be followed in accordance with the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme.

7. Mr Jinnah’s notes are confused and lack clarity, except for the fact that he seems to object to most things. In regard to one matter, however, that is our desire that the Interim Government should be immediately treated by convention as a Dominion Government subject to the Viceroy’s overriding authority in regard to the protection of minority interests, Mr Jinnah has expressed strong disagreement. This has nothing to do with the draft announcement. But, as we have stated previously, it is a vital matter for us. The present position has given rise to an enormous amount of trouble. I do not see how it can possibly be carried on in future even for a brief period, more especially when other changes are envisaged. We attach the greatest importance to this and I really do not see why Mr Jinnah or the Muslim League should object to it when their particular interests are safeguarded and kept under the Viceroy.

8. Mr Jinnah also objects to my saying that HMG’s announcement of 20th February 1947 should not be affected in any way by any other proposals or the implementation thereof. Surely it is nobody’s contention that this announcement of HMG should be scrapped. What the future relationship of England and India should be, is a matter for our joint consideration later on. That will depend to a large extent on what happens during the next few months and the reaction in the public mind to it.

9. Mr Jinnah further says that he is unable to understand what is meant by my stating that any Act of the British Parliament conferring Dominion Status on India during the interim period may be varied by the authority in India. I thought that Dominion Status necessarily carried this right; otherwise it is not Dominion Status.

10. During the past few years it has been our repeated experience that Mr Jinnah does not commit himself to anything and does not like coming to a settlement. He accepts what he gets and goes on asking for more. We have arrived at a stage when this kind of thing will do good to nobody, and we are not prepared to have one-sided commitments in future. While these talks for a settlement are going on, the Muslim League has been carrying on aggressive ‘Direct Action’ movements involving violence of the worst type. Mr Jinnah, in spite of the appeal for peace made by him, has countenanced and encouraged these movements. This is not the way to a settlement and we are not prepared to agree to anything or to commit ourselves in any way unless this campaign of violence ceases and a settlement is arrived at.

11. I am anxious that there should be no misunderstanding about our attitude in the Viceroy’s mind or in the mind of HMG. I would, therefore, request you to inform the Viceroy and HMG immediately of our strong feelings on this subject and our reaction to Mr Jinnah’s notes.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru
29. ‘Jinnah Cannot Be Taken Seriously’
The Hindustan Times, 27 May 1947.

Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Home Minister in the Interim Government, characterizes Mr Jinnah’s recent demand for a corridor as ‘such fantastic nonsense as not to be taken seriously at all.’

Sardar Patel, in a telegraphic answer to a question put to him by the United Press of America as to whether a corridor is practicable and whether the Congress would agree to it, says: ‘The idea of a 1,000-mile-long corridor through a hostile non-Muslim area on the face of it is such fantastic nonsense as not to be taken seriously at all. The demand itself discloses the sponsor’s (Mr Jinnah’s) lack of confidence in the Pakistan scheme.’

Answering another question about the possibility of a sovereign Pakistan making agreements with foreign Powers without reference to Hindustan, Sardar Patel says: ‘The need for joint consultation on matters of defence and external relations has already been conceded by Mr Jinnah. It is, therefore, inconceivable that concessions of extra-territoriality or external arrangements will be made without consultations with Hindustan. Such action will be regarded as hostile.’

30. ‘Britain Has No Right to Change Map of India’
The Hindustan Times, 27 May 1947.

Mahatma Gandhi urged every patriot and certainly the British Power to face out the worst violence and asked the British to leave India as it can be left under the Cabinet Mission’s plan of May 16 of last year, addressing the prayer meeting at Bhangi Colony on Monday evening.

Gandhi expressed the hope that ‘free India will not give the world an additional object lesson in violence with which it is already sick almost unto death.’

Gandhi added that it was not for the British Power to change the map of India. The British must withdraw on or before the promised date.

Recalling his remarks on Sunday that it was unbecoming on the part of Indians to look to London for what the British Cabinet thought of the future of the country, Gandhiji said: ‘It is not for them to give us liberty. They can only get off our back. That they are under promise to do. But for keeping India and giving it shape, we have to look to ourselves.

‘I promised to tell you how we were to do it. In my opinion we are unable to think coherently whilst the British power is still functioning in India. Its function is not to change the map of India. All it has to do is to withdraw and leave India, if possible, carrying on in an orderly manner. British Power must withdraw on or before promised date, even if the country is left in chaos.’

No Vital Change Possible

‘But there is an additional reason why no vital change in the shape of Hindustan is possible in the present state of the country. There is the joint statement issued by the Qaid-e-Azam and me. It enunciates a sound principle that there should be no violence employed in the pursuit of political aim.’

‘If in the teeth of that document the country continues the mad career of violence of the worst kind and the British power is weak enough to submit to it in the vain hope that after the mad thirst in quenched, things will run smooth, it would have left a bloody legacy for which not only India but the whole world will blame her. We will then have learnt the cruel lesson that everything was to be got if mad violence was perpetrated in sufficient measure.

'I would therefore, urge every patriot and certainly the British power to face out the worst violence and leave India as it can be left under the Cabinet Mission document of May 16 of last year.'

British Presence Demoralizing

'Today in the presence of the British power we are only demoralized by the orgy of blood, arson and worse. After it is withdrawn, let me hope we shall have the wisdom to think coherently and keep India one or split it into two parts or more. But if we are bent upon even then on fighting. I am sure we will not be so demoralized as we are today, though admittedly all ... carries with it some amount of demoralization. I shall hope against hope that free India will not give the world an additional object lesson in violence with which it is already sick almost unto death.'

Right to Pray

Earlier in his speech, Gandhiji repeated what he said on Sunday that public prayer was a precious privilege. It could not be lightly thrown away—it was a good thing to pray even though wrongly, whilst there was danger of the objector being molested. But by your exemplary and repeated response to my appeal you remained perfectly and deliberately passive. So when I saw that our restraint was being abused I adopted another course on Sunday. And I was glad that the objecting sister no longer persisted in the vocal objection whatever might have been the state of her mind. I trust that the same decorum would be continued. That is the least that laws of public prayers demand. I would ask you also, whenever such objection occurs again on the one hand to go on with your prayer and on the other to be wholly tolerant and kind to the objectors—Reuter.

31. “Inshallah We Shall Have Corridor”: Nishtar’s Address at League Meeting in Muzaffarnagar

MUZAFFARNAGAR, Monday.—‘The North-Western and the Eastern Zones of Pakistan will be but two parts of the same Government and there must be, and we will have it “Inshallah”, a corridor to connect the two. The Frontiers of these parts of Pakistan cannot be decided by either the Hindus or the British, but they will be determined according to our needs and our wishes,’ declared Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar, the Communications Member, while addressing a mammoth public meeting, held here on Sunday night, under the Presidentship of Hazrat Maulana Shabbir Ahmad Usmani, President of the All India Jamiat-ul-Ulema-i-Islam.

The meeting was organized by the Muzaffarnagar district and City Muslim League and the local Muslim Students’ Federation jointly.

Sardar Nishtar said: ‘We want a friendly settlement as between two brothers. There has been too much of bloodshed and many innocent lives have been lost. Such loss of human life does in no way help anybody in arriving at a settlement. We want peace but an honourable peace.’...
CONGRESS CLAMOUR

Referring to the clamour from the Congress Chiefs against the corridor demand so rightly put forward by Mr Jinnah, he said that it had ever been the policy of the Hindus to keep the Muslims divided among themselves. Now that the Muslims are getting a Sovereign State of their own, they want the two parts of that state to remain unconnected with each other.

‘But remember,’ added Nishtar, ‘iron and magnet can never remain away from each other. The two zones of the Pakistan State will come close to each other, irrespective of whether the Hindus like it or not.’

DISPUTED CHILD

Hazrat Maulana Shabbir Ahmad Usmani, in his address, referred to the Hadith regarding the Prophet Sulaiman ordering a disputed child to be divided into two and the two parts being handed over to the two claimant ‘mothers’ and the real mother offering to give up her claim to the child and said that this argument was used against the Muslims’ demand for the partition of India, some time ago, by the Hindus. ‘They should have then handed over the whole of India to the Muslims. But now they want the provinces of Bengal and Punjab also to be divided. Then let there be more divisions. Let every district, every village, every mohalla, and perhaps every street be divided. We have not yet been amputated but even if, despite our efforts to the contrary, we are amputated, we will see that we are soon up and doing, kicking and alive,’ he continued. He cited the case of the tribal belt, where the Pathans, though poor, never bartered away their freedom for worldly gains. Freedom is their first consideration.

The Maulana made a stirring appeal to the nationalist Muslims to join the ranks of the Muslim League. He was prepared, even at this stage, for a joint conference of the Ulemas in which they could have their objections to Pakistan answered.

The Mussalman, added the Maulana, never cared for his life. As long as this disregard to life remains, he is living; but he should not invite trouble through his weakness. He can sacrifice his life, but he should not allow himself to be murdered in cold blood.

He quoted again from the Holy Hadith that some Muslims who had come to the Holy Prophet in a very poor famished condition had not sold away their swords to procure food for them, although they had been hungry for many days. The enemy was getting himself ready for wiping the Muslims, who should be ready for their defence and they can do it only by joining the Muslim National Guards....

Dehradun, May 26.—‘India is awake and full of life today, and that is why although the country has not attained independence it has begun to rank among the greatest countries of the world,’ said Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, addressing a crowded gathering of Congress workers last evening.

The credit for this was due to Mahatma Gandhi, said Pandit Nehru, because he was not only a great political leader but one who had infused courage into the people and made them bold.

Referring to the Pakistan demand he said that the Congress opposed it on principle and stood for a united India. It now demanded division of Bengal and the Punjab also on the same principle. ‘Those who are clamouring for partition will themselves see how impracticable and economically unsound that is’, declared Pandit Nehru.
He added: ‘Many problems, some intricate, though essential, such as controls, and some very distressing such as the communal situation, are facing us, but bigger ones, such as national independence and bearing responsibility for the future governance of the country, must have priority.

‘Circumstances which induced us to form the Interim Government have entirely changed now and had later developments been foreseen by us, we would have perhaps refused to accept the offer. Old slogans which helped us to drive the Britishers away from India have grown useless and out of date. Our fight is not yet over.

‘But we should strengthen the Congress with renewed enthusiasm and direct national dynamism, still intact, to right channels. The division of the Punjab and Bengal has brought realism to League politics but what is in store for us in future no one can say...’

33. Congress Deliberations on HMG’s Statement

AICC Papers, File No. G-43/1947, NMML.

A meeting of the Working Committee or the Congress held at Bhangi Colony, Delhi on 31st of May 1947 at 3 p.m.

Mahatma Gandhi was present at the meeting. The following members and invitees were also present:

1. Acharya Kripalani,
2. Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan,
3. Mrs Sarojini Naidu,
4. Dr Prafulla Chandra Ghose,
5. Mrs Kamaladevi Chatopadhyaya,
6. Mr R.A. Kidwai,
7. Sardar Patel,
8. Moulana Azad,
9. Pt Jawaharlal Nehru,
10. Dr Rajendra Prasad,
11. Syt Shankarrao Deo,
12. Acharya Jugal Kishore,
13. Sardar Pratap Singh,
14. Syt Rajagopalachari,
15. Raosaheb Patwardhan,
16. Syt Jai Prakash Narain,
17. Jairam Das Doulatram,
18. Dr Khan Saheb,
19. Sardar Baldeo Singh,
20. Syt Jagjivan Ram,
21. Dr Pattabhi Sittarammayya,
22. Dr Mathai,
23. Syt Bhabha,
Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru gave a brief account of the political negotiations with the Viceroy since the last meeting of the Working Committee. Panditji also stated that some correspondence had passed between him and the Viceroy, the gist of which he said he would give in a note the next day.

On the question being raised as to why the President of the Congress was not invited to the proposed conference with the Viceroy on June 2nd while the President of the League was, Panditji said that he had raised that question with the Viceroy and was informed that the latter had intended to invite him separately. The Committee however felt that as it was evident that the Viceroy was going to meet the representatives of the main political parties at a Joint Conference, it was desirable and proper that the Congress President should also be there. Panditji stated that he would again draw the attention of the Viceroy to this omission, and convey to him the feelings of the Working Committee.

The meeting thereafter adjourned to meet on the 1st June at 3-30 p.m.

The adjourned meeting of the Working Committee was held at the Bhangi Colony on 1st June at 3-30 p.m.

Mahatmaji, all the members of the Working Committee and other invitees were present.

Pt Jawahar Lal Nehru read out the note containing the gist of his talks and correspondence with the Viceroy. There was a general discussion on the points stated in this note. Syt Jai Prakash Narain raised the question whether the Working Committee was justified in committing itself in its letter to the Viceroy dated the 1st of May to the principle of partition of India without any previous reference to and sanction of the AICC.

The President and Sardar Patel pointed out the difficulty of consulting the AICC at every stage specially negotiations like the present were going on between the Working Committee and the Viceroy. They said that the stand which the Working Committee had taken flowed out of the resolution of the AICC passed at its various meetings since 1942 August. The Working Committee, they said, would however face the AICC and explain to it the circumstances under which the Working Committee had to take the present decisions.

The Committee adjourned to meet on the 2nd June at 3 p.m.

The meeting of the Working Committee was held in Bhangi Colony at 3 p.m. on the 2nd.

Mahatmaji, members of the Working Committee and other invitees were present.

Pt Jawahar Lal Nehru gave a brief account of the proceedings of the conference with the Viceroy this morning. HMG’s statement, which was handed over to the Presidents for consideration by their respective Working Committees, was placed before the Committee. As the Viceroy wanted a reply before 12 midnight, the Committee authorized Pt Jawahar Lal Nehru in consultation with Acharya Kripalani, Sardar Patel and Pt Govind Ballabh Pant to draft a reply on the basis of discussions which took place in the committee, and to place the reply before the Working Committee at 8 p.m. for its approval.

The draft of the letter prepared by Pt Jawahar Lal Nehru and others was read.

Mahatmaji gave his reactions to the statement of HMG and to the draft letter. He said that though he did not agree with the decisions of the Working Committee regarding the division of India, he did not want to take any step which would stand in the way of the Working Committee in implementing its previous decision. He however pointed out that there was still some scope for further clarification, and he suggested that Clause 20 relating to the right of the parts to decide to remain or not within the British Commonwealth should be clarified and the Govt should be informed that the Congress does not want that any deferential treatment should be meted out to any seceding part of India. He also wanted that a written and categorical assurance should be forth-coming from the Muslim League that it accepts the statement as a final settlement and will not make any further claims beyond what is conceded in this statement.

After a general discussion the draft letter was approved, but it was referred to the Committee to redraft it in the light of the suggestions made by Mahatmaji.

The meeting of the Working Committee then adjourned to 3rd June at 3 p.m.

The adjourned meeting of the Working Committee was held at 3 p.m. at the Bhangi Colony.

I. The President gave a short account of the proceedings of the Conference held by the Viceroy in the morning.

II. The Committee decided to call an urgent meeting of the AICC in Delhi on the 14th and 15th June to consider HMG's latest statement of June 3rd.

III. At the suggestion of the President, the Working Committee decided that in view of the developing political situation the consideration of the draft constitution of the Congress by the AICC should be postponed, and that the AICC office should adopt such of the rules proposed in the interim report of the draft Committee as would be necessary to maintain a stricter discipline in the Congress and to root out corrupt practices....

34. Tribal Jirgas in Baluchistan Should Be Consulted

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 31 May 1947

IOR, R/3/1/155, Acc. No. 3469, NAI.

17 York Road, New Delhi

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Mr Abell has written to me asking me to send proposals for obtaining a representative for Baluchistan. I have no particular proposal to put forward at this stage. I was under the impression that the first thing to be done was to ascertain the wishes of the people of Baluchistan regarding the position of that Province in the future set-up of India. This too becomes necessary in the event of certain changes taking place in regard to the Punjab and Bengal.

2. You suggested to me in Simla, I think, that possibly a way of ascertaining the wishes of the inhabitants would be to send a Commission to meet the full Jirgas of the various Tribes and to report on their reactions to the proposals made. I am inclined to think that some such procedure might be feasible and desirable. A Commission might be appointed consisting of suitably chosen senior judicial officers and possibly representatives of the External Affairs Department. This Commission should arrange for full meetings of the Jirgas and attend them explaining the points at issue. They may or may not take votes. They should really find out the general sense of each meeting and report accordingly. If necessary the Commission should split up into smaller sections to meet some of the Jirgas.

3. The point is that they should consult as large a number of people as possible and not confine themselves to the selected few of the Shahi Jirga.

4. As regards the people of Quetta Municipality, it should be possible to take a referendum of them or at any rate of the voters in the Municipality.
5. The Commission should submit a consolidated report giving their views of what the people of Baluchistan desire in the matter. They should also suggest the best means of representation in the Constituent Assembly.

6. I discussed this matter today with Sir Geoffrey Prior, the AGG in Baluchistan, and he seemed to think that the method of appointing a Commission to ascertain views would be feasible.

Yours sincerely,
JAWAHARLAL NEHRU

---

35. Independence at the Cost of Unity Will Be Dark
M.K. Gandhi’s Conversation with Manu Gandhi, 1 June 1947
_CWMG_, Vol. LXXXVIII, pp. 50–2.

The purity of my _yajna_ will be put to the test only now. Today I find myself all alone. [Even the Sardar and Jawaharlal] think that my reading of the situation is wrong and peace is sure to return if partition is agreed upon. The Viceroy is a nice and intelligent man. They did not like my telling the Viceroy that even if there was to be partition, it should not be through British intervention or under the British rule. They wonder if I have not deteriorated with age. But if I did not show myself as I am, I would prove a hypocrite. And I must speak as I feel, if I am to prove a true and loyal friend to the Congress. Never mind if I am not a four anna member of the Congress. But they all come and consult me, seek my advice. Similarly I am also a friend of the British. I must therefore tell the British what is good for them. Else, of what use is my being their friend? If I did not show myself as I am, I would prove a hypocrite. And I must speak as I feel, if I am to prove a true and loyal friend to the Congress. Never mind if I am not a four anna member of the Congress. But they all come and consult me, seek my advice. Similarly I am also a friend of the British. I must therefore tell the British what is good for them. Else, of what use is my being their friend? If I were to prove my true and loyal friendship to them it becomes my bounden duty to lay bare the facts before them and show them the right way, regardless of whether my advice is appreciated or resented. I see clearly that we are setting about this business the wrong way. We may not feel the full effect immediately, but I can see clearly that the future of independence gained at this price is going to be dark. I pray that God may not keep me alive to witness it. And I have left you in this vast field to fend for yourself. I have done it with full deliberation because you share my burden in this sacrifice although you are a little girl with no experience of life. In order that God may give me the strength and wisdom to remain firm in the midst of universal opposition and to utter the full truth, I need all the strength of purity that you will have in your sincere work, whether in thought or act, while waking or asleep or even when you are not conscious of yourself. In the matter of devotion or purity, or in treading the path of truth years hardly count; what is needed is spiritual strength. Wasn’t Prahlad very young? Had little Dhruva attained a mature age? But they had the strength to tread the path of truth. Moreover, a man may grow old and yet be a fraud. But somehow in spite of my being all alone, in my thoughts, I am experiencing an ineffable inner joy and freshness of mind. I feel as if God himself was lighting my path before me. And it is perhaps the reason why I am able to fight on single-handed. People now ask me to retire to Kashi or go to the Himalayas. I laugh and tell them that the Himalayas of my penance are where there is misery to be alleviated, oppression to be relieved. There can be no rest for me so long as there is a single person in India whether man or woman, young or old, lacking the necessaries of life, by which I mean a sense of security, a life style worthy of human beings, that is, clothing, education, food and shelter of a decent standard. I said the same thing to Sarat Babu yesterday. I cannot bear to see Badshah Khan’s grief. His inner agony wrings my heart, but if I gave way to tears it would be cowardly and, stalwart Pathan as he is, he would break down. And I don't want him to break down. But maybe all of them are right and I alone am floundering in darkness. The more you remain vigilant and cheerful by maintaining good health the more you will influence all that I do.

I shall perhaps not be alive to witness it, but should the evil I apprehend overtake India and her independence be imperilled, let posterity know what agony this old man went through thinking of it. Let not the coming generation curse Gandhi for being a party to India's vivisection.
But everybody is today impatient for independence. Therefore there is no alternative. This is like eating wooden laddoos, if they eat it they die of colic; if they don't they starve.

36. Congress Accepts Division

A Letter\(^1\) from M.K. Gandhi, on or after 2 June 1947

\(^{CWMG, Vol. LXXXVIII, p. 63.}\)

Probably no one is more distressed than I am over the impending division of India. But I have no desire to launch a struggle against what promises to be an accomplished fact. I have considered such a division to be wrong and therefore I could never be party to it. But when the Congress accepts such a division, even though reluctantly, I would not carry on any agitation against that institution. Such a step is not inconceivable under all circumstances. The Congress association with the proposed division is no circumstance warranting a struggle against it of the kind you have in mind. Nor can I endorse your attack upon the British. They have not in any way promoted or encouraged this step.

\(^1\) The addressee, in his letter, had said: 'The British are quitting India but leaving it divided... In case you launch a struggle against the division of India on communal or Indian States basis ... I respectfully offer about one lakh ... disciplined volunteers loyally to carry out your orders.'

37. Reactions to HMG's Proposals

Letter from J.B. Kripalani to Louis Mountbatten, 2 June 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 157, NMML.

6 Jantarmantar Road
New Delhi

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

The Congress Working Committee have considered the statement which HMG propose to make tomorrow and a copy of which you were good enough to give me this morning.

2. The proposals contained in this statement are of far reaching importance and affect the whole future of India. These envisage the possibility of certain parts of India seceding from the rest.

3. As you know, the Congress has consistently upheld that the unity of India should be maintained. Ever since its inception, the Congress has worked towards the realization of a free and united India. Any proposal, therefore, which might bring about separation of a part of India from the rest is painful to contemplate and, in the opinion of the Congress, is harmful to all the parties concerned. Such a proposal would normally have to be considered by the All-India Congress Committee. The Working Committee would make its recommendations to that Committee, but the final decision would rest with the All-India Congress Committee, or the full session of the Congress itself.

4. We have realized, however, that in the peculiar and abnormal situation of today it is not possible to delay matters and decisions have to be reached rapidly. There has been far too much uncertainty in the country and this has led to instability and to violence on a large scale. We have also appreciated that the negotiations that have been going on for some time between you and Indian leaders had of necessity to be secret.

5. My Committee considered the principles underlying the present proposals about a month ago and generally accepted them. This acceptance was conveyed to you in paragraph 12 of the letter dated 1st May 1947 which Shri Jawaharlal Nehru wrote to you.

6. As we have stated on many occasions, we accepted in its entirety the Cabinet Mission’s Statement of 16th May 1946 as well as the subsequent interpretation thereof dated 6th December 1946. We have indeed been acting in accordance with it and the Constituent Assembly which was formed in terms of the Cabinet Mission’s Plan has been functioning for nearly six months. We are still prepared to adhere to that Plan. In view, however, of subsequent events and the situation today, we are willing to accept as a variation of that Plan the proposals now being made.

7. I do not wish to enter into any detailed examination of the proposed statement of HMG. It has been produced after considerable consultation and I am desired to say by my Committee that we are prepared to accept it and to recommend to the All-India Congress Committee to do likewise. We do so in the earnest hope that this will mean a settlement. We feel that the situation in India, political and economic, as well as communal, demands more than ever a peaceful approach to all our problems. These problems cannot be solved by methods of violence, and there can be submission to such methods.

8. While we are willing to accept the proposals made by HMG, my Committee desire to emphasize that they are doing so in order to achieve a final settlement. This is dependent on the acceptance of the proposals by the Muslim League and a clear understanding that no further claims will be put forward. There has been enough misunderstanding in the past and in order to avoid this in the future it is necessary to have explicit statements in writing in regard to these proposals.

9. We believe as fully as ever in a united India. The unity we aim at is not that of compulsion but of friendship and cooperation. We earnestly trust that when present passions have subsided our problems will be viewed in their proper perspective and a willing union of all parts of India will result there from.

10. There are some matters, however, to which I should like to draw your attention. My Committee realize that the proposals being put forward may result in injury to the Sikhs unless great care is taken and their peculiar position in the Punjab is fully appreciated. We are aware that HMG and you are anxious to protect all legitimate Sikh interests. The matter will have to be considered by the Boundary Commission provided for and we earnestly trust that all other factors, apart from population, will be taken fully into consideration. The Sikhs have played a vital role in developing a considerable part of the Punjab. They have been pioneers in the canal areas and have converted by their labours the desert into the richest part of the Punjab. It has been made clear in the document that the notional partition is of a purely temporary character and the final boundaries will be determined by the Boundary Commission.

11. In the last sentence of paragraph 9 it is stated that ‘until the report of the Boundary Commission has been put into effect, the provisional boundary as indicated in the appendix will be used’. It is not quite clear to what this refers and what the use will be. It is well-known that the notional division ignores other important factors and that the Sikhs are distressed by it. If any further use is made of this notional division for administrative or other purposes, this will inevitably affect the final division and will give rise to a great deal of apprehension in the minds of the Sikhs. We would, therefore, urge you not to apply that notional division for any administrative purpose during the interim period. This would be in keeping with the spirit of the document and with what you conveyed to us this morning.

12. In paragraph 11 of the Statement reference is made to a referendum in the NWF Province. There has been a growing demand in the Province for independence and subsequent decision as to their relation with the rest of India. The referendum should also provide for this.

13. In paragraph 20 of the Statement, which we are told is an addition to the original draft, the last sentence refers to the right of the Constituent Assemblies to decide in due course whether or not India or any part of it, will remain within the British Commonwealth. It seems to us extremely undesirable and likely to lead to friction if the relations of Britain with the Indian Union and the seceding parts of it are on a differential basis. We should, therefore, like to make it clear that we cannot be consenting parties to any such development.

14. In view of the importance of the proposals and decision being made, my Committee intend to convene a meeting of the All-India Congress Committee at an early date. They propose to recommend the acceptance generally of the Statement of HMG as a settlement of our political and communal problems.

Yours sincerely,
J.B. Kripalani

38. Gandhi’s Reactions to His Majesty’s Statement
M.K. Gandhi’s Speech at the Meeting of the Congress Working Committee at New Delhi, 2 June 1947
CWMG, Vol. LXXXVIII, p. 61.

Mahatmaji gave his reactions to the statement of His Majesty’s Government and to the draft letter. He said that though he did not agree with the decisions of the Working Committee regarding the division of India, he did not want to take any step which would stand in the way of the Working Committee in implementing its previous decision. He however pointed out that there was still some scope for further clarification, and he suggested that Clause 20 relating to the right of the parts to decide to remain or not within the British Commonwealth should be clarified and the Government should be informed that the Congress does not want that any differential treatment should be meted out to any seceding part of India. He also wanted that a written and categorical assurance should be forthcoming from the Muslim League that it accepts the statement as a final settlement and will not make any further claims beyond what is conceded in this statement.
Dear Lord Mountbatten,

I have discussed with Sikh leaders the Statement which HMG propose to make tomorrow, a copy of which you were good enough to give me at this morning's Conference.

The proposals in the Statement are of far-reaching character, envisaging the possibility of a division of India into two sovereign States in both of which the Sikhs will have vital stakes. As you know, we as a community have always stood for a United India and all we have desired is that our particular interests should be adequately safeguarded. The plan now made implies that a substantial area, where a sovereign State based ostensibly on Islamic principles is likely to be established as conceived by the spokesman of the Muslim League. The Sikhs have been unable to obtain any coherent and acceptable guarantee of their security in such a set-up and are therefore unable to contemplate being forced into it against their will. I have made this clear to you. Recent happenings in the Western Punjab have further proved that we can expect no security whatever under Muslim domination.

You will therefore appreciate the anxiety of my community and their demand that in the event of the division of India as contemplated, the plan must be so devised as to ensure that Sikhs as a community are not subjected to irreparable injury.

I must say that judged by this simple test the plan as it stands is far from satisfactory. My Sikh friends and I, however, do appreciate that the principle of the partition of the Punjab has been accepted and the anxiety you have expressed to help the community. There are certain matters in this connection which I consider it my duty to bring to your notice. These are:

(i) In para 9, the last sentence of which reads: ‘Until the report of a Boundary Commission has been put into effect, the provisional boundaries indicated in the appendix will be used’ it is not clear what this refers to and in what respects this boundary is to be used. In this connection you will remember that in my previous letters, I have insisted that nothing should be done to prejudice our case before the Boundary Commission. My fear was that the proposed notional division would prejudice the final partition of the Province. I now see it has been made clear that the notional division is purely a temporary arrangement. If, however, it is used for setting up of Interim Ministries it will embitter communal relations and prove highly injurious to us, as I have already explained. Such interim Ministries functioning at the time when the Boundary Commission is also making its enquiries will make a fair examination of our case impossible. It is imperative therefore that till such time as the Boundary Commission has finished its work, no Interim Ministries in either part of the Punjab should be formed. If, however, it is considered expedient to form Interim Ministries, the Eastern Punjab should have in addition to the Divisions of Ambala and Jullundur, the three districts of Amritsar, Gurdaspur and Lahore in the Lahore Division.

(ii) The plan suggests that the Boundary Commission will take ‘other factors’ into consideration when making its enquiries. This is far too vague. It should be made... clear that these other factors include exchange of population with property and the basis of land revenue paid by non-Muslims. Special note should also be taken of the religious and cultural institutions of the Sikhs and the historic role played by them in the Punjab.

(iii) As the partition of the Province has been necessitated to meet the Sikh demand clear instructions should be given to the Boundary Commission to ensure that as large a percentage of Sikh population as possible is included in the Eastern Punjab.

I should like to bring to your notice that though assurances have been given to us that we shall have equal rights with the two other major communities for the safeguard of our communal rights and privileges, nothing tangible has so far been done to give effect to these assurances. Our community is now in danger of being riven in two. We have so far not been assured equal rights with others in either the existing or the proposed new Constituent Assembly. We request you to see that this is done.

You mentioned during the Conference that in the interests of India, the Cabinet Delegation Plan of May 16, 1946, was still the best solution. You know the conditions on which the Sikhs provisionally accepted the Plan and joined the Constituent Assembly. If the major parties now revert to this Plan, the Sikhs will be prepared to accept it only if they are given the same right in communal matters as has been accorded to the other two major communities.

Finally, my Sikh friends and I accept the principle of division as laid down in the plan with the hope that in order to make it fully acceptable to my community, care will be taken to meet the views expressed in this letter when framing the terms of reference for the Boundary Commission.

Assuring you of my endeavour to help you in solving the difficult problems, I remain.

Yours sincerely,

Baldev Singh

40. ‘Gandhi’s Latest on India’s Unity Is Very Late—Pir Ilahi Bakhsh’

BANGALORE, Saturday.—‘I am really amused to see the statement of Mr Gandhi, regarding the unity of India, which I believe is positively very late in the day, says the Hon’ble Pir Ilahi Bakhsh, Education Minister, Sind, in a statement to the “Orient Press of India”:

‘Mr Gandhi as most of us know, had himself been a party to the talks with the Viceroy and other leaders regarding the partition of India on the basis of Pakistan and Hindustan. He has in fact never uttered a single word against the establishing of an independent State of Pakistan, although in the beginning he did oppose this proposition, but when it actually became inevitable to accede to the demand of partition by Muslims, he showed his acquiescence by his alliance which usually amounts to consent in the Indian parlour.

‘If I mistake not Mr Gandhi had agreed to this part of partition in black and white and had also signed the agreement, which was negotiated by the Nawab of Bhopal. But unfortunately he was compelled later on to back-out from the agreement by his lieutenants. Thereafter, he has spoken nothing whatever against the division of India on Pakistan and Hindustan basis.

‘It is really surprising that Mr Gandhi should throw bomb-shell at the eleventh hour when practically every one has accepted the partition of India. Is it not really very strange that a great leader of Mr Gandhi caliber should act in this way?’
PAKISTAN INEVITABLE

‘Mr Gandhi knows that Pakistan is going to be established—rather it has already been established and there is no power on earth to stop it. The Musalman is determined to have his own independent national home, whether Mr Gandhi or the Congress likes it or not. It is inevitable and as such it must come. To this every body has to submit willingly or otherwise. There is in fact no other go than to have the partition of India on the basis of Pakistan and Hindustan. ...

‘How can Mr Gandhi say that it is not the function of the British to divide India when he has himself been accepting his awards and carrying on negotiations towards this end? We do agree with Mr Gandhi that the British should withdraw as early as possible and it may be, that his stay is the root cause of our disruption, I am certain, we shall be able to settle out differences later on whether willingly or otherwise. But how can Mr Gandhi ask the Britisher that it is not his business to solve the Indian problem, in view of the fact that the Britisher has practically finished his work and he has to make a formal announcement to this effect very soon.

‘Let me request Mr Gandhi that he should be a realist and accept the inevitable in good grace. Since he does not want the British to interfere with the Indian problem, let him make an attempt to come to terms with Qaed-e-Azam. If he is true in his professions, let him settle with Qaed-e-Azam, and stop the riot any further. But if he wants chaos and anarchy let me assure him that the Muslims are brave enough to face them boldly. Muslims do not dread death, which every human being has to accept, whether he wants it or not.’...
Chapter 17. Contending with Communalism

1. On Communal Violence in Punjab and NWFP
   Extract from a Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to M.K. Gandhi, 24 March 1947

   REVERED BAPU,
   New Delhi

   ...The situation in the Punjab is incomparable to what it was in Bihar. More than 50,000 people must have lost their lives. Still there are no signs of improvement in the situation. The situation in the Hajara district is most alarming. It is the fortress of the League and its word is like a writ there. In Rawalpindi and Multan districts, several villages have been turned to ashes. Both Hindus and Sikhs have been the victim of this wrath. But the Sikhs have suffered more. People fought with bravery. Many women jumped into wells and embraced death. People resisted with all their might and when they found themselves surrounded by the hostile crowd, they fought and died as suicide squads. Several people have fallen prey to the bullets. Punjab is still restive. Now the military has been posted there. Hence uneasy peace is visible on the surface. But it is unimaginable when it will burst out again. Its spark may reach up to Delhi though we may possibly be able to control the situation. But I cannot write more of it through a letter....

   VALLABHBHAI’S PRANAM

   Mahatma Gandhi
   Camp: Patna.

2. Demand for Strict Government Action against Muslims
   API Report of a Statement by L.B. Bhopatkar, 1 April 1947
   Home Poll (I), File No. 33/11/47, NAI.

   THE ASSOCIATED PRESS OF INDIA
   (Inland News Telegram)

   For Press advice
   Poona No. 3. (General) Poona, April 1

   Mr. L.B. Bhopatkar, president of the Hindu Mahasabha, in an interview today called for stringent measures to be taken by the Government in the country to ‘crush in its inception the pre-planned civil war launched in the country by the Muslims’, he demanded a speedy disarmament of the Muslim population, especially in the rural areas in Muslim majority provinces as also others and thorough overhauling of the police in the provinces. He said from what he knew there was still going on smuggling of arms on a wide scale aided by ‘elements which better be left unnamed’.

Mr Bhopatkar, who returned from a tour of the disturbed areas in the Punjab, said ‘from what I saw in the Punjab and learnt about the outbreak in other places, including the invasion of Assam by the Muslims, I am definitely of the opinion that the atrocities committed, so far, are the outcome of a regular civil war planned before hand. It is to be particularly noted that the Muslim rioters and raiders are armed with Tommy guns, rifles, pistols and spears. They have practically liquidated all the Hindus and Sikhs in most of the western districts of the Punjab and the adjoining districts of the Frontier Province, and after looting their properties burnt their houses. Added to this they have converted thousands of Hindus and Sikhs and carried away hundreds of young girls and women’.

Mr Bhopatkar urged the Hindus and Sikhs to ‘realise the gravity and extent of the menace and be prepared to meet it fully armed for that purpose. Unless this is done and provincial Governments do their duty.’ He added, ‘evil days are in store for Hindu and Sikhs in all the provinces of the country’.—API

3. ‘Vivisect Pakistan’

Statement by V.D. Savarkar, 2 April 1947

BUT ALL THIS OR ANY OTHER JUGGLERY WILL FAIL TO HELP HINDUDOM IF WE DO NOT EMPHATICALLY DECLARE IT AND MANFULLY ACT UP TO THE RULE THAT THE MOSLEM MINORITY IN HINDU PROVINCES SHALL BE GIVEN THE SAME TREATMENT AS IS METED OUT TO THE HINDU MINORITY IN MOSLEM PROVINCES. THE VERY FACT THAT JINNAHJI, GANDHIJI AND HIS SHAHID SAHIH ARE PERCEPTIBLY IRRITATED BY THESE PROPOSALS DOES IN ITSELF PROVE THAT THEY ARE MOST LIKELY TO BENEFIT HINDUDOM AND UNDERMINE MOSLEM DESIGNS. CONSEQUENTIALY INTENSE AGITATION AND ACTION SHOULD BE RESORTED TO BY US FORTHWITH TO EFFECT IT ALL.’

4. Appeal for Upholding Communal Peace

Extracts from Record of Interview between Louis Mountbatten and M.A. Jinnah, 8 April 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

The meeting lasted from 6 to 8 pm.

I asked Mr Jinnah whether he would be willing to join with the other high commands in issuing an appeal for no further provocative acts which could lead to bloodshed. He asked me if I had seen in the newspapers an account of his speech in Bombay. I admitted I had, and acknowledged that he had already appealed for a truce; but I pointed out that a unilateral appeal appeared to me to be almost valueless, since the other side could always force bloodshed by their actions. He agreed and said that if I wished him to join in an appeal for a truce against provocative action and bloodshed, he would be prepared to do so. (As both Pandit Nehru and Sardar Baldev Singh had told me that their own high command would be prepared to do the same, this is a hopeful sign.)

Mr Jinnah explained the origin of ‘Direct action’, and said that until he had resorted to ‘Direct action’ the League position was becoming more and more insecure, but he denied that they had ever instigated bloodshed anywhere, though it could perhaps be said that they had created the situation in which Congress had started bloodshed (not Mr Jinnah’s exact words, but he said something to that general effect)....

5. Joint Plea for Communal Harmony

Note by Eric Mieville about His Interview with M.A. Jinnah, 11 April 1947

YOUR EXCELLENCY

I saw Mr Jinnah for half an hour this afternoon. He was at his very best. He started by recalling the luncheon party at which we were both present at Buckingham Palace last December and told me how much he had enjoyed it. He said that his enjoyment was enhanced by the fact that on talking to the King he found that His Majesty was pro Pakistan. On talking to the Queen after luncheon he found that Her Majesty was even more pro Pakistan, and finally when he had a conversation with Queen Mary he found that Her Majesty was 100 per cent Pakistan! I replied that I was sorry that their Majesties had acted in such an unconstitutional way as to express their opinions on political matters connected with their Indian Empire, at which he laughed quite a lot.

After a few remarks on Pakistan we got down to the draft statement which Your Excellency handed to him yesterday deploiring the bloodshed and acts of violence throughout the country. He started by saying that in many of his speeches he had condemned such violence in far stronger terms than set out in the draft. I then pointed out to him that the whole object of the draft was that it should be signed both by him on behalf of the Muslim League and by Mr Kripalani as President of Congress. He replied that he did not think Mr Kripalani’s name would carry any weight with the masses and in fact the only name that would do so in addition to himself was Mr Gandhi’s. He then said that I could tell Your Excellency that if Mr Gandhi would put his signature to such a statement, as to the exact terms of which he was not particular (he quite liked the draft statement as set out but thought perhaps some amendments would be necessary) he would be perfectly ready to sign it himself.

He finally said that he must be frank and tell me that such a suggestion had been made by Lord Wavell on the occasion of the Calcutta riots and on that occasion Mr Gandhi had refused to sign on the grounds that he was no longer an active member of the Congress Working Party and that he held no official position at all. He did not know what Mr Gandhi’s reactions would be in this case but repeated that so far as the masses were concerned he thought that from the Congress angle Mr Gandhi’s was the only name that would carry the necessary weight.

E. Mieville
Towards Freedom: 1947

6. Statement against Communal Violence

Telegram from G.E.B. Abell to Hugh Dow, 13 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 110, NMML.

795-S. Please see that following Private and Personal message from Viceroy is given to Gandhi on his arrival in Patna tonight:

I so much enjoyed our talks during the past ten days and hope you have had a good journey.

Mr Jinnah is perfectly ready to sign statement deploring acts of violence etc. which you signed before you left Delhi provided that your and his signatures are the only ones that appear on the document. As you mentioned that you thought Mr Kripalani’s signature might also be added, though I gathered that you did not make this a stipulation, I am not issuing statement until I hear from you. Pandit Nehru is agreeable to leaving matter to my discretion, but I feel I must have your views. Unless statement bears your signature alone Mr Jinnah will not sign. May I therefore appeal to you to agree. Please reply urgently.

7. Massacre of Innocent People Must Stop

M.K. Gandhi’s Talk with Members of the Muslim League, 14 April 1947

I firmly believe that if only the British quit India, we would almost be united. Why cannot the Muslim League see that the first thing for all is to end India’s slavery? We may talk about partition after that. Either the Muslims regard India as their home or they do not. If they do, then this senseless massacre of innocent people should stop, the British should be made to quit and our own Government set up. We can then settle the question of partition by mutual persuasion or fight it out amongst ourselves, if necessary. But I do not understand why thousands of innocent people are being killed treacherously. And if the Muslims do not regard India as their home, the question of Pakistan does not arise.

The Muslim League friends replied that they also condemned such killings. Bapu said:

Then you should issue a statement to that effect on behalf of the local Muslim League and write to Jinnah Saheb. That would be true service rendered to the Muslim League, and thus you will not be subjected to unwarranted suspicion.

[From Gujarati]

8. Gandhi, Jinnah, and Kripalani Must Sign the Appeal for Communal Peace

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 14 April 1947

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

This afternoon Sir Eric Mieville informed me by telephone that you had received the following telegram from Mr Gandhi:

New Delhi
Just received your message. Many thanks. I had comparatively quiet journey. I am of opinion that President of Congress should also sign. You should know reason for the exclusion of President of the Congress. However I leave final decision to you and Panditji.

This has placed me in a somewhat awkward position. The proposal that the statement should be signed by Mr Gandhi, Mr Jinnah and Mr Kripalani was originally made by you, I think. I do not know if you had mentioned it previously to Mr Jinnah; but I gathered that he had agreed to this and laid special stress on Mr Gandhi signing it. Mr Gandhi consented to do so. Now for some special reason Mr Jinnah insists on the exclusion of the Congress President’s signature. As Mr Gandhi points out in his telegram, the reason for this should be obvious. Apart from the reason, it involves a certain discourtesy to the Congress and the Congress President. It may also lead to some misunderstanding in the public mind.

2. I take it that it is your desire, as it is ours, to produce the maximum effect on the public mind. That would have been achieved by these three signatures. I am quite sure that the absence of the Congress President’s signature will make a difference. So far as we are concerned, I had told you previously that we are all prepared to sign. Even now if it is considered feasible, some or all of the Members of the Interim Government could sign it, in addition to Mr Gandhi, Mr Jinnah and Mr Kripalani.

3. Mr Jinnah has often stated that Mr Gandhi does not represent the Congress organization. He is in a sense correct. Why then does he want Mr Gandhi’s signature in his individual capacity and wish to exclude the Congress organization as such? Presumably because he wishes to emphasize not the organizational character of the signatures but the fact that, according to him, Mr Gandhi represents some kind of Hindu India and Mr Jinnah some kind of Muslim India. Mr Gandhi, of course, represents no such thing whatever Mr Jinnah may represent. In such matters we have to proceed on an organizational basis plus, if necessary, the addition of some name of authority and importance. We dislike greatly this approach of Hindu and Muslim India.

4. I have consulted both Mr Kripalani and such other of my colleagues as are available here and all of them dislike very much this suggested change in the procedure. It becomes a little difficult for us to act when a certain proposal is made to which we assent and then this has to be changed because Mr Jinnah changes his mind or is otherwise not agreeable. At the same time we are exceedingly anxious that everything should be done which might help in putting an end to the violence and conflict that is going on. We realize the value and importance of Mr Jinnah putting his name to the document and we would not like to come in the way of any such appeal being made. Our difficulty is that it is quite clear that Mr Gandhi himself strongly disapproves of the exclusion of the Congress President’s signature. He has cast the burden on you and me to decide.

5. In view of the considerations I have placed before you above if you can find some proper and honourable way out of this impasse, I shall be grateful. If that is not possible, then I must leave it to your judgment and final decision as to what should be done. I shall abide by that.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru
9. ‘Gandhi and Jinnah Denounce Violence’

The Tribune, 16 April 1947.

NEW DELHI, April 15.—Mahatma Gandhi and Mr Jinnah have denounced violence in a joint appeal issued today on the Viceroy’s initiative. A communiqué issued from the Viceroy’s House today says:

‘On His Excellency the Viceroy’s initiative and at his specific request Mr Gandhi and Mr Jinnah signed the following declaration and authorized its publication:

‘We deeply deplore the recent acts of lawlessness and violence that have brought the utmost disgrace on the fair name of India and the greatest misery to innocent people irrespective of who were the aggressors and who were the victims.

‘We denounce for all time the use of force to achieve political ends and we call upon all the communities of India, to whatever persuasion they may belong not only to refrain from all acts of violence and disorder but also to avoid both in speech and writing any incitement to such acts.’

M.A. Jinnah

M.K. Gandhi

(15-4-47)

10. ‘A Parsi Approach to Hindu-Muslim Compromise’

Letter from Jal K. Wadia to M.A. Jinnah, 17 April 1947

275 BOW BAZAR STREET, CALCUTTA

Dear Mr Jinnah,

Hereewith attached is a proposal drawn up by me in an attempt to find a way for Hindu-Muslim compromise. I forward, though hesitatingly, the same to you for your consideration, being situated as I am in a humble position.

Though expert players know the game fully, yet during the actual play a humble wayfarer at times can see more of the openings. This viewpoint has encouraged me to send the proposal to you. Please excuse me for the liberty taken of approaching you.

If at any time my humble services are required in this connection, I shall readily respond to your call in the interest of my country and shall act to the best of my ability in the then circumstances permitting me.

Copies of this proposal are also [being] forwarded to HE the Viceroy, Mahatma Gandhi and Mr Nehru for their consideration.

I have not released my proposal to the press and, before I do so, I shall await your kind reply and also those from the above-mentioned leaders.

Yours faithfully,

J.K. WADIA

L.D.Sc.
Enclosure

A PARSİ APPROACH TO HINDU–MUSLİM COMPROMİSE

The Parsis are peace-loving people and they have lived in India ever since their landing in this hospitable country in complete harmony and brotherhood with all communities. They have always regarded all Indians as their own and never hesitated to sacrifice what they could in the service of their countrymen. Today their hearts rend [sic] in pain and agony when they see their own people cutting each other’s throat in utter hatred and distrust. In their eyes Hindus, Muslims or Sikhs are the same and regard their sufferings as their own. They appeal once again to these great communities to stop this slaughter. With this view, an approach is being made towards the Hindu–Muslim compromise. It is hoped that this appeal will not fall on deaf ears.

The Congress ideal of a United India, if it can be attained and maintained by all the Indians, can make this country a leading power not only in Asia but in the world. But, unfortunately, communalism, which is deeply rooted in all the communities in India, has created much suspicion and distrust to achieve the ideal. The suspicion and distrust created between the two major communities will, it is feared, bring untold calamity and weakness to India if the Congress ideal is persisted in without taking communalism into consideration.

Divided India, as demanded by the Muslim League, if made into a permanent settlement, will, it is believed and feared, make this country the Balkans of Asia, and will ever become the political chessboard of the leading powers that are infested with Imperialism. This country then will ever be weak and ever in danger of foreign aggression, either economic or military. It will be better for the Muslims and the Hindus and all other communities if complete separation is avoided....

The communal strife that is rampant all over the country will, if not checked, lead the country to a civil war or continued slavery under the foreign power in the name of the preservation of law and order. The threatened civil war must be prevented at all costs as it will bleed the country to utter weakness and to the death of independence....

Civil war then must be prevented at all costs and a compromise will be beneficial to both of them....

The proposal is based on a ten-year trial... During this period an attempt must be made to get rid of communalism completely and to ensure and preserve complete freedom of all communities, including the minorities. The followers of Gandhiji may of course attempt with all vigour to work out his ideal of one community, not by diplomatic duplicity or coercion or in any tricky way but by love, sincerity, faith in God, and sacrifices by one and all, beginning with the major communities. If this ideal is not accomplished during this period but is on the way and hoped to be accomplished then, with common consent the trial period may be extended. But if it turns out to be a total failure then, with or without foreign help, the division of India may be made. During this period all communities should be cautioned against foreign interference.

In this proposal there are Central Government and Provincial Governments with no grouping as proposed by the Cabinet Mission. The Provincial Governments should be given complete autonomy with very wide powers. The Central Government should have a minimum of subjects. During this trial period, the Provincial Governments under the guidance of the Central Government should lay out such policy, whether educational, political, economic or commercial, that they may attempt completely to get rid of communalism, including suspicion and distrust—the greatest obstacle in the path of freedom and progress. All minorities must live without fear of being superseded and subjected to dependence and curtailment of freedom by the major community.

At the Centre, the allocation of seats should be done without taking into consideration the ratio of population....

With this consideration the seats should be divided in the ratio of 5:5:1. The two major communities get five each and the minorities, for example, Sikhs, depressed classes, Parsis, Anglo-Indians, and others, get one each.

As the joint electorate will not be acceptable till communalism is gotten rid of, separate electorates for all the communities should stay. For the good of India, the Congress, who have already made many sacrifices, should also make this sacrifice. Besides, they have very often expressed that as soon as freedom is won, the Congress will be dissolved. If this is going to be true then their claim of representing other communities will not arise when India is independent. The Hindu or Muslim seats should be equally divided among all the provinces so that each province may be sufficiently represented to protect the interests of the two communities. As regards other minorities, such as Parsis, Anglo-Indians, Sikhs, and others, the seats may be allotted to that province where there is the largest population of the particular minor community. The relaxation may be given to elect their representative from any other province whenever it is so desired. Facilities may also be provided to the members of the respective community residing in other provinces to take part in the election. Power should also be given to every province to adopt at any period the system of joint electorate, and this must be done not by the elected bodies but by the willing consent of the people of each community. They may also be given the power to form closer relations with any province or provinces in matters of education, commerce, communications and economics.

Portfolios at the Centre should be divided and grouped according to their importance and the important ones should be equally divided among the two major communities. Any important portfolio, if it is to be given to the member of any minor community, should be done with the consent of that major community which may have the right over it. The rest of the portfolios may be divided among the other communities. The important portfolios may be reshuffled between the two communities at the end of five years. The presidential chair should go preferably to a minor community in the beginning, elected by joint electorate. As to the Constituent Assembly, let each province have its own such Assembly, besides the one for the Centre, to draw up their own system of government.

Bengal and the Punjab have created a problem...In each of these two provinces there should be two Governments under one Provincial Government. The seats in the Provincial Government should be divided on the same basis as in the Central Government, that is, equal seats to Hindus and Muslims with seats to other minorities in the respective provinces. In the Punjab, the Sikhs should be included in the Hindu seats. These two provinces should have power to abolish partition whenever the people of the respective provinces so desire.

In the end it is hoped that this approach made by a Parsi, impartial and free from any prejudice, will be duly considered by the leaders.

J.K. WADIA
My dear Lord Mountbatten,

I received your letter No. 1427 dated the 19th April yesterday afternoon on my return from Bombay after my Gujarat tour.

2. In the message which I sent to the All India Newspaper Editors’ Conference, I had already appealed to the Editors to assist Government in dealing with the difficult times through which we are passing. When I was at Surat, I received a suggestion from my Secretary that I should send another message to the Conference to take action regarding the appeal issued by Gandhiji and Jinnah. Since the League Press is not represented in the Conference, I thought it futile to make a suggestion to the one side only to follow up the appeal. I am, therefore, issuing another message to all newspapers asking them to print the Gandhi-Jinnah appeal repeatedly in a prominent position, and particularly at any time when local tension or similar circumstances require it. A copy of my message is enclosed for your perusal.

3. The All India Radio are being instructed similarly to use the appeal at frequent intervals, and in particular in their rural programmes which reach listeners who may not be able to read the newspapers. A letter is also going to all Associations of Film Exhibitors urging them to ask of their members to use the appeal on a cinema slide in various languages to be shown in intervals or at other appropriate times in their programmes. Finally, an Express letter is going to all Provincial Governments informing them of the action taken by us and suggesting that they should produce posters and leaflets in the languages of the provinces and give them the widest and most prominent distribution possible.

4. If you consider that my Department can be useful in any other way in this direction, please let me know, and I shall see that the needful is done.

5. But I feel I should be failing in my duty and be untrue to myself, if I concealed my innermost conviction that unless and until the Muslim League is compelled to withdraw its ‘Direct Action’ Resolution and this step is followed up by active attempts to keep its followers in check and under control, the necessary psychological atmosphere in which the appeal could strike a responsive chord would be completely lacking, and the appeal itself would not serve much useful purpose. It is futile to expect an ordinary man in the street to exercise restraint or to make any positive contribution to the restoration of feelings of amity if incidents are happening which outrage and inflame public opinion. After reading an account of the wholesale murders, looting, arson and forced conversions of non-Muslims in Dera Ismail Khan, there would indeed be few among them who would be able to pay any attention to an appeal to eschew violence. I am enclosing a typical example of the letters which I received from different corners of India together with the cutting to which the writer refers. I am also sending you another cutting which gives the allegations in greater details. Such are the events on which the mass mind is being fed and such is the reaction which is being produced. While untold sufferings and outrages are being perpetrated on non-Muslims and minorities are being systematically eliminated in the Muslim majority areas and organized wholesale preparations are being made to ‘capture’ the Province of Assam, without any corresponding effort on the part of the League leaders to deal with their followers on the spot, in contrast Gandhiji is buried in the midst of his self-imposed mission in Bihar calculated to assuage the feelings of Muslims in regard to a tragedy which overtook them six months ago and which was quelled under the active intervention of Congress Members of the Interim Government within a week. The signature of Mr. Jinnah on the appeal is a mockery if he does not himself feel the urge to visit the areas such as Dera Ismail Khan, Rawalpindi and Multan which are, or have been, the scenes of orgies of murder, arson and loot. If he is sincere in his appeal, his place is quite clearly in the Frontier to restrain his followers and not in Delhi.
Towards Freedom: 1947

6. Ever since you assumed office and I had my first interview with you, I have been pressing upon you the need for urgent action. While I do not deny that the signature of Mr. Jinnah on the truce would be a creditable achievement, if sincerely followed up, I feel that the time which we are letting slip and every day that these tragedies are being perpetrated without securing positive action such as I have suggested above, would make the success of your mission more remote than ever. You have already acquired a reputation for being a man of quick decision and action and a person possessed of a great sense of urgency. India has also been impressed by the earnestness of purpose and the message of goodwill underlying your first speech on the assumption of office, but the sands of time are running out and I hope you will believe me when I say that the man in the street is already commenting that a month has elapsed, while bestiality still prevails in the NWFP and parts of Punjab and Bengal. I shall appeal to you with all the earnestness at my command to create, by securing a firm and positive action from the League such as I have stressed above, a psychological atmosphere in which the excellent appeal issued by both the leaders will touch the hearts of the people. Therein lies the only chance of putting an end to the tension and the insecurity, which poisoned the atmosphere, ever since the passage of the ‘Direct Action’ Resolution in July and the first sample of its enforcement on 16th August 1946, has created and continued to promote, and, which the attempts of the League, after the declaration of the 20th February, to ‘capture’ the Provinces of Assam, NWFP and the Punjab have accentuated, and to the resultant tragedies which have overtaken thousands of men, women and children.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

12. ‘Communal Troubles Must Be Stopped at Once’

Extract from the Inaugural Address by Jawaharlal Nehru at UP Political Conference at Mau, 20 April 1947

...The country is facing two major problems, economic and communal. Economic problems will have to be faced even after freedom has been won, but the communal problem has to be solved immediately. It must be made clear that the communal quarrels lead us nowhere. Pakistan cannot be achieved by resort to force and violence....

People should keep calm in the face of provocation and should not resort to inhuman deeds. As regards the disturbances in Noakhali, Bihar, Punjab, Frontier, Bombay city and some places in UP it is an extremely distressing fact that men have behaved like beasts. When men degrade themselves to the level of beasts, it badly reflects on the nation to which they belong. If anyone thinks that by such villainous violence political ends will be achieved, it is a grave and a sad mistake.
It is India’s misfortune that communal troubles are taking place at a time when the country should stand united. Those who are resorting to force for achieving political ends are very much mistaken. Such methods will not help them. India cannot force any part of it to remain in the Union, but such bits of it as want to get out have no right to break away other parts which do not want to do so. Moreover, in the world of today, small countries have no future until they align with a big one. Therefore the loss will be of Pakistan if it wants to keep out of Hindustan.

The Muslim League can have Pakistan if they wish to have it, but on the condition that they do not break away other parts of India which do not wish to join Pakistan. I hope that the promoters of Pakistan will realize their mistake soon. Breaking away from the rest of the country will not help them.

It is a matter of shame that people who have fought the British Government so bravely are quarrelling among themselves on a very low level, stabbing each other in lanes like cowards. Gandhiji has been preaching nonviolence for the past 30 years. But I am glad that Mr Jinnah also adheres to a belief against violence. I hope those who follow Mr Jinnah will give up the use of violence....

British rule is going and has got to go and it will soon go. It will be a great event but our responsibility will also increase a hundred-fold. It is this that you must realize and rise to the occasion. The greatest need is to keep united at present when the British are leaving the country and Indians have to take power from their hands. I am fully aware of your difficulties but would ask you to realize that great changes are taking place in the country. Times like these are necessarily accompanied by disruption of the smooth functioning of life. People must have patience. There is no justification to lose heart. India is in the midst of a mighty revolution....

13. Patel Comments on the Gandhi–Jinnah Appeal
   Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to M.K. Gandhi, 21 April 1947

REVERED BAPU,

Received your letter at Bardoli. I had gone to Bombay and Gujarat for five days. In Bardoli, Kishorlalbhai, Swami, Narharibhai and others were there.

In North-West Frontier Province both Hindus and Sikhs are butchered.

In Calcutta also the condition of Hindus is worsening.

I did not like the appeal published in paper in yours and Jinnah’s name. It is against your understanding. But now what can be done? I was not here.

I am trying about Kashmir. I will let you know if something good emerges from it.

Vallabhbhai’s Pranam

Mahatma Gandhi,
Camp: Patna.
14. ‘No Solution on Basis of Pakistan’

The Tribune, 23 April 1947.

SULTANPUR, (Oudh) April 22.—I heartily endorse the peace appeal issued by Mr Gandhi and Mr Jinnah. It is no doubt early to say what effect it will produce on the prevailing discontentment in India, but its ultimate effect depends upon the spirit in which it is taken, said Mr Ali Zaheer, a former member of the Interim Government and President of the All-India Shia Political Conference in an interview.

He added: ‘The events that are taking place in the Frontier are by no means communal, but they are a tussle between the Jinnah dominated League on the one hand and the Congress on the other. The bloodshed that is prevailing in different parts of India can stop in a minute if Mr Jinnah is sincere about it. Every thing is good on paper, but goodwill can only be restored if leaders of different political parties really strive for it. I refuse to believe that the masses have got out of control. Mr Jinnah has as much hold on Muslim League masses as Mr Gandhi has on Hindu masses.

‘The present atmosphere is undoubtedly charged with suspicion and mutual distrust but we will have to adjust ourselves in view of the impending transfer of power by the British. To whom the British Government is going to hand over power in June 1948 is too early to forecast....I doubt very much if agreement can be reached on the basis of Pakistan. We must, however, endeavour to achieve peace among the rival communities and then solve our problems in a dispassionate atmosphere.’—API

15. ‘Momin Conference President Suspended: Irresponsible Statement’

The Tribune, 23 April 1947.

ALLAHABAD, April 21.—The working committee of the All-India Momin Conference which met here since yesterday, in a resolution, passed today severely criticized the statement issued by Mr Zahir-ud-Din, the President of the Conference on March 19 last advising Momin to join the Muslim League against the accepted creed and policy of the Momin Conference.

The working committee has suspended Mr Zahir-ud-Din, the President of the Conference and has demanded from him an explanation by May 10 for the ‘unauthorized’ statement issued by him. The committee has reserved further action against Mr Zahir-ud-Din pending his explanation.

Mr Abdul Qayum Ansari, Vice President of the Conference and a Minister of Bihar Government, has been elected Acting President owing to the suspension of Mr Zahir-ud-Din by the working committee.

The following is the full text of the resolution passed by the Working Committee of the All-India Momin Conference.

‘The Working Committee of the All-India Momin Conference expresses its deep sense of resentment, indignation and abhorrence at the wholly irresponsible and uncalled for statement of Mr Zahir-ud-Din, the President of the All-India Momin Conference, which he has issued to the press on March 10, 1947, in which he has completely allied himself with the Muslim League and supported the demand of Pakistan and has advised the Momins to join the Muslim League against the accepted creed and policy of the Momin Conference.'
In the opinion of the committee, Mr Zahir-ud-Din, by his hasty and thoughtless act, has not only gone against the very fundamentals of the Momin Conference, of which he was the President, but has sought to lower and undermine the prestige and position of the Momin Conference which it has acquired through the service and sacrifice of the Momin nation in the estimation of the world.

Further the committee strongly feels that Mr Zahir-ud-Din by his improper and inconsiderate statement has placed the Working Committee in a very awkward, peculiar and difficult position. The committee is fully conscious of his constitutional position, but at the same time his undemocratic and unconstitutional activities have left no alternative for the Working Committee but to take very serious and drastic steps in the matter in order to vindicate and re-establish the position of the Momin Conference.

The committee after careful consideration of every aspect of Mr Zahir-ud-Din’s statement, the situation created by it and the incalculable damage and injury already caused and likely to be further caused by such acts of his to the interests of the country in general and that of the Momin nation in particular, considers it to be its painful but obligatory duty to take the extraordinary step of suspending him forthwith from the position of the presidentship of the All-India Momin Conference and calls upon him to submit his explanation, if any, by May 10, 1947, after which date further action will be taken in the matter.

Hon’ble Mr Abdul Qaiyum Ansari was elected acting President of the All-India Momin Conference in place of Mr Zahir-ud-Din, President who was suspended from acting as such.—API

16. Criticism of Congress Policy towards the League

Extracts from a Letter from Ashrafuddin Ahmad Chowdhary to Vallabhbhai Patel, 30 April 1947

My dear Friend,

The latest developments in the political situation of the country appear to be most uncertain and confusing. I would request you most earnestly to let me know clearly the fullest implications of the resolution regarding the division of the Punjab. This significant resolution of the W.C. has encouraged the executives of the Bengal Provincial Congress to formulate a resolution regarding the division of Bengal. May we know what is the fundamental basis of the resolution of this nature? Is it not adopted on religious basis? If so, you accept the theory and principle of Pakistan however limited by its geographical area... the Congress Muslims differed from the League fundamentally on the issue of Pakistan. Now by adopting the resolution of the division of the Punjab and indirectly of Bengal, you have conceded the demand of Pakistan. After the adoption of this resolution what may be our reason to keep aloof from the League organization?

Since the August killing, the Working Committee of which you are one of the leading figures has not given any direction on working scheme to counteract this barbarous activities of the League. You have simply succumbed to this goondaism and unsocial activities of the League organization at every stage. I feel, at the Congress claim to represent all sections of Indian people, it should have long come forward to defend the hearth home and honour of innocent Indian men and women in an organized manner. Instead, you have become only an onlooker of this dreadful drama which is being performed on the stage of India from one end to the other. You are only trying to appease the League at every stage of this painful drama. You have failed miserably to discharge your duties and obligations to the millions of Indian people by your weak kneed policy.... Would you please cry a halt to this policy of yours and give a lead to the Congress men in India by organizing them to defend themselves from hands of League hooligans?.... From all indications available it appears you have agreed to the division of India into several sovereign states call it Pakistan or Hindusthan. We cannot yet persuade ourselves to accept such a scheme which we consider to be absolutely detrimental to the best interests of Indian people including those who call themselves Muslims. Why should the innocent Hindus and Muslims be victims for nothing? It is a fight between the Congress and League organizations. If it is inevitable which appears to be so let the members of two organizations fight it out amongst themselves with whatever arms each can secure and decide the issue once for all. Neither the League people nor the Congress people as a whole understand the nonviolent gospel of Gandhiji. You desire a peaceful transfer of power from the hands of the British Govt, but how can that happen when the British is determined to throw you in the arena of fratricidal war. Pray, therefore do not for Heaven's sake run after this mirage of peaceful transference of power.

Some of you are holding the Interim gadi of Govt and think that you have no duty now to direct the members of your organization to face all eventualities in a courageous manner. You appear to be busy with the day to day files of the Govt when the whole country is burning. May I appeal to you with all the earnestness that I can command to gird up your loins and organize the Congress in a befitting manner to meet courageously the unsocial menace of the League.

I am expressing in this letter my deliberate views on the problem facing us today. I am serving the country through the Congress since the last 27 years and therefore claim the best considerations of my views by you as leaders of the organization to which we all belong.... With best wishes and prayer to Allah to guide you aright at this critical juncture of Indian history.

With kindest regards,

Yours very sincerely,
Ashrafuddin Ahmad Chowdhary

---

1 This letter was forwarded by Patel to Kripalani whose reply is reproduced as Document No. 20 in this chapter.

17. Communal Propaganda: The Scheme of Pakistan

Extract from Correspondence in Intelligence Bureau, Home Department, April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 37/2/47, NAI.

Home Member’s Office

Intelligence Bureau,

(Home Department)

With reference to D.I.B. u.o. No. 3/YM/47-P, dated 14.3.47 a book similar to the one entitled ‘Khilafat Pakistan Scheme’, but printed in a different place, is forwarded herewith. This book, which was obtained from Karachi, is not a new publication, but appeared two or three years ago.

E.J. Beveridge
Assistant Director (S).
7/4/47

Home Department (Mr Porter)
D.I.B. u.o. No. 3/Y.M./47-P, dated 7 APR 1947
Encl. 1 Attached.
MV. 5/4/47
Submitted with papers.

2. The book has been read in office. It is the same book that was reviewed in the article in the Purushartha, and its synopsis given therein, though it does not cover all its objectionable features, is correct. It is a most objectionable book. Its theme briefly is that the ideal of every true Muslim is world conquest by war and violence, that the preparations to this end should be secret, that the worst man among Muslims is better than the best among non-Muslims, that nobody who is not a Muslim is fit to be called a man, that the interests of non-Muslims are worth nothing where Muslim interests are concerned, that the only criterion of virtue is the promotion and spread of Islam, and that non-Muslims do not deserve to live except as slaves of Muslims.

J. Bedekar
9/4/47

... H.M.

H.M. considers that any steps against the publishers and printers of this pamphlet will unnecessarily secure publicity for it, whereas it appears that the pamphlet has received practically no publicity and has probably been forgotten altogether even by those who may have received it. H.M. is, therefore, writing to the Home Minister, Bombay, that he does not consider that any notice need be taken of this pamphlet.

17/4/47
V. Shankar
Private Secretary.

Full translation of an article headed ‘The Scheme of Pakisthan’ published in the Purushartha, a Marathi monthly published in the Aundh State, for August 1946.

The matter placed within brackets in the following translation does not occur in the original except where otherwise indicated by a note in the margin.

The Scheme of Pakistan

(Review)

The Musalmans of the League want Pakistan. Pakistan means a ‘holy place’, a completely independent Raj of the Musalmans. League leaders have placed their scheme before the public by publishing a number of small and big books about the Pakistan scheme. The gist of this scheme is to form a Western Croops [sic] of the Provinces of ‘Sind, Punjab, Baluchistan, NW Frontier Province and Kashmir’ and establish an independent Muslim Raj there. Similarly, in the East, ‘Bengal and Assam’ should be formed into a group and independent Muslim Raj be established there. Not only should there be no control of the Indian Central Government on these two Pakisthani States, but also the corridor joining these two States should be under the control of the Pakisthani Government.

Moreover, several Leaguers are also writing that the Nizam’s Dominion in the South is already a Pakistan. It should be included in Pakistan because the ruler... the Nizam State is a Musalman. Kashmir must be included in Pakistan because the Muslim subjects there are in a majority. The reason of the majority of the subjects be applied only to Kashmir and the standard of the ruler’s caste should be applied to Nizam Hyderabad. After this some have gone even to the extent of (demanding) that several small Pakisthani States should be formed in India. Leaving aside these extreme views all Leaguers are unanimous on the point that the above-mentioned Provinces in the West and the East should be considered as independent Pakisthani States.

It must be considered how the idea of an independent State, which was absent till yesterday, arose to-day in the minds of the Muslims, born in India, speaking Provincial languages and wearing Provincial dress till yesterday. Why have these people begun to say to-day that their language is Arabic-mixed Urdu, that their cap is the Turkish cap, that their holy place is in Arabia and that they are not Indians? Even if independent States of Pakistan are formed in the West and the East, what about the (fate of) half of the Muslims who remains in Hindustan? Muslims of what place speak Arabic-mixed Urdu and even if such a language is deliberately cultivated, can the dealings of the Muslims, who are mixed up with the Hindus of all Provinces, be carried on with that Urdu? But the Leaguers have decided not to think of all the difficulties. It is their definite opinion to-day to establish independent Muslim Raj called Pakistan at all costs.

Books on their scheme have been published in English and also in Urdu, and several Hindu thinkers have considered the possibility or otherwise of this scheme, and almost all non-Muslim writers generally have declared the Pakistan Scheme to be harmful from the economic point of view and impossible from the point of view of defence, and thus to be worthless. Some say, as Pakistan can never be safe, grant it, so that the Muslims will know by experience alone that Pakistan is impracticable and then they themselves will come and join the Central Government.

Such different views of Muslims and others have been published up to now. All these need not be considered together. That would be a waste of time.

However, the Muslims are only our own brothers. They are our countrymen, as they are born in our own country, hence it is proper that we should get ourselves acquainted with their views. For this purpose, we are reviewing here in this article an important book of theirs so that the readers may know the ideology at the root of Pakistan.

‘Khilafat—Pakistan-Scheme’

This book has been published one year ago by the ‘Punjab Muslim Students Federation’ at the ‘Lion Press, Lahore’ (Punjab). Its price is eight annas and it is available only to the Muslim public. Its language is pure Urdu and the script also is Urdu. As it contains the main thoughts on Pakistan and for the reader to know these thoughts, we give here those thoughts briefly, but Khilafat—the Ideal of Pakistan

1. 'The Muslim League is the largest representative organization of the Musalmans, but since even this organization is working only on the lines of Mr Gandhi’s non-violence and satyagraha it has still not taken to the pure ideology of the Musalmans. The way of us, the Musalmans, is to cause all sorts of “antagonism” and our method is to “bring about revolution by offering opposition”. It is not our practice to go by an open and constitutional path. Freedom, the protection of our rights and the prestige of the community cannot be obtained as gifts from others.... The community which has capability can keep all its rights safeguarded without asking for any one’s order without begging for any one’s mercy, without vilifying any one, with our own efforts and by becoming independent ourselves’....

3. ‘According to Islam the Musalmans in all the countries and all the Provinces are one and there is no difference among them. Why are we then thinking only about the Musalmans in India? The answer to this is that once we have room for planting our feet independently and our feet are firmly planted in those Provinces where we are in the majority, then we shall find it easy to turn attention to people in other provinces.’

4. ‘When the League firmly plants its feet in the Group of the Eastern and Western Provinces, where the Muslims are in the majority, and the power of ruling over them comes into our hands, then we can easily accomplish our object (lit. task) by surrounding the people of other religion—the Hindus—from both sides and by encouraging the Musalmans there. This ideology exists primarily behind the idea of Pakistan. After our feet are firmly planted in the Punjab and Bengal, our programme will be to gradually encourage Musalmans in other provinces and make them create riots and in this way to constantly keep up our aggressive policy.’

Scheme

5. ‘There are four kinds of places in the world (1) Darul-Islam = the house of Islam, (2) Darul-Kafir = the house of the Kafir, (3) Darul-Salam = the safe place where Islam is professed and (4) Darul-Harab = where there is no Islam, the country of the Kafirs. To cover the entire universe with our religion is the goal of our scheme. That there should be no kafirs on this earth and that only Islam should pervade everywhere is desirable for us. This is the ideological foundation of the Scheme of Pakistan’....

8. ‘(The question as to) how the Muslims are superior to non-Muslims is not going to be answered in Legislative Council or (Round table Conference), that has already been answered several times in the past on the extensive maidan of Panipat and will be answered in future also at a similar place if any one wants it.’

9. ‘Just as it is right that animals and plants should be sacrificed for the life of man, on the same principle the every kind of sacrifice of those of other religions for the benefit of the Muslims is quite just and right. Just as it is not right to give unnecessary trouble to animals, but when the interests of man and beast begin to clash against one another, it is only proper that the beast should be sacrificed for the good of the man, in accordance with the same principle, none should give unnecessary trouble to non-Muslims, but when the interests of the Muslims and non-Muslims will clash, then it is only just that others should be sacrificed for the sake of the Muslims. True, it is improper to cut the throat of a hen, but when a man feels hungry and feels like eating it, then it must be cut for the sake of a man. This should also be taken in the same way.’...

11. ‘No one should think from this that the Muslims are going to enjoy themselves by sacrificing others. It is not at all so. When the time comes for waging war for the sake of Islam, the Musalmans also gladly sacrifice themselves by declaring ‘Jehad’ and they also regard that by doing so they attain martyrdom.’

12. ‘We attach no value absolutely to the interests of other people when the interests of the Musalmans are involved. The question before us today is how to bring about the uplift of the Musalmans and how to destroy if necessary, the strength of others for doing that. Though man is superior, if he falls among a herd of wolves, they will eat him up. In the same way, if the Musalmans of India merge into the majority of the Hindus, they will perish. Not only this, but if all Indian Musalmans do not draw up a scheme and go on that scheme, even then they will perish. That is why we have drawn up this scheme of Pakistan for the uplift of the Musalmans.’...

14. ‘We shall never beg from any one. We all Musalmans are the protectors of this world and God has appointed us as the Darogas on this earth. The land of our khuda (God) is the triangular piece of the golden land. Till two hundred years ago we Musalmans had the pride of wielding authority over it. Till the year 1860 there was over this country the rule of our shariyat (the Islamic law). We are to-day considering what part of this country will come amicably into our hands from the hands of traitors.’

15. ‘As extensive and as integral a part of the territory in India, where the Musalmans may be in a majority, must remain only under the control of the Musalmans. Some Musalmans outside will remain under the control of those of other religions, but we cannot help it to-day.’

16. ‘Cast a glance over the map of India, there is a State of ours in Southern India. It has not survived on the strength of our majority, but it exists because of its own former glory. If we try just to-day to paint that State with our Islami colour, it would be to our own detriment to do so just to-day. Thereby all our future plans will collapse completely. Therefore, it is the only proper course to allow it to remain as it can to-day. So long as we cannot plant our feet firmly in our majority provinces, so long we should not start our work vigorously in other places.’

17. ‘The territory between the Ganges and the Jamna and the adjoining territory are such that there is our majority. The Provinces of the Punjab and Bengal are not joined together. They are far distant from each other. Being distant they cannot meet each other. Only for the above reason we must get the Ganges–Jamna tract in the UP that joins the Punjab and Bengal. Lucknow is the father of our Urdu language, while Agra is our centre of historical importance. Delhi is the living place of our Empire itself. That is why, it is only proper that the territory of Bengal along with the corridor of Delhi, Agra, Lucknow, from the Punjab should remain only under our authority.’

18. ‘Only the Musalmans are the perfect (lit. fully elevated) men. It is, therefore quite obvious that only the Musalmans will have the right to vote in Pakistan. If the Musalmans instead of doing any piece of work themselves entrust it to others, then that work will be given to others in Pakistan. The Government in Pakistan is going to be a combination of democracy and dictatorship: This is called Khilafat.’

19. ‘In our Government the Prime Minister shall be only a Muselman, he shall be called “Amir-ul-Mominin” (Chief Amir of Muslims). He shall be invested with full powers in respect of Government and religious administration.’
20. ‘It is the duty of every Musalman to wage a religious war by sacrificing his all for the sake of his religion. There can be various types of fighting according to the strength of each. All our strength will be for the protection of Islam and for fighting with Kafirs those who may not be able to meet their expenses in (doing) this, will be paid adequate salaries by the Pakistan Government. Those non-Muslims who will join this army for the above purpose—for the protection of Islam—will not have to pay communal tax. (Others, because they are not Musalmans, will have to pay poll-tax).’

21. ‘There shall be a separate Department for the propagation of Islam in the Pakisthani Raj and all the forces of the entire Raj shall always be ready behind it. All sorts of concessions will be available for this Department.’

22. ‘Under the Pakisthan State there shall be no taxes except Zakat (fortieth part of the savings payable only by Muslims), Jesiya (poll-tax) and ... (Islamic tax). All the land will be regarded to be belonging to the Khalifa of Pakistan. In Khilafat Pakistan there will be no zulum on non-Muslims. Levying the Jesia on them is not to practice zulum on them. If non-Muslim embrace Islam or join our army and are prepared to offer their lives for carrying on the propagation of Islam, they shall not have to pay this tax. Similarly, those Musalmans who will not carry on the propagation of Islam, shall also be taxed. Therefore, it is not true to say that there will be zulum practiced on others by this arrangement.’

[Jesiya is a tax to be levied on the kafirs (A capitation tax levied by Muhammadans on infidels). The remaining two taxes are to be levied on income.]

How Will the Work Be Carried On?

23. ‘When we shall get a separate territory in India for our Khilafat—Pakistan and our foot is firmly planted there, then we shall start plants for wielding authority over the whole of India which we had wielded in the past.’

24. ‘The advice not to indulge in riots has had a most undesirable effect on our Musalman community. Our tenacity has been lost because of this propaganda. If we bring that tenacity into our community it will be impossible for others to scheme against us.’

25. ‘The Congress and he who is called ‘Mahatma’ are doing the work of dividing the Musalmans in India. They are incessantly trying to destroy our Khilafat and Pakistan movement and merge all Musalmans in one nationality of India.’

(Pakistan scheme ends.)

Editorial Commentary

The main trend of thought in the book ‘Pakistan scheme’ is given above very briefly, but without omitting a single point and without adding anything of our own. These books are sold in the Punjab only to the Musalmans. They are not sold to others. We secured them with efforts and have placed before the readers the thoughts therein. These books have spread much in the Punjab, Sind and other parts wherever the Musalmans stay, and all the programme of the League is carried on, and is going to be carried on also in future, in accordance with this ideology. 50 years ago they had put forward only the question of music before mosques. At that time they had not taken even the name of Pakistan, that has come forward to-day after 50 years. Their knack of advancing forward by taking each step gradually according to their fixed plan and setting firm the step taken, is highly commendable. 50 years ago they put forward only the question of the music before mosques. Even then they were decided on what to do in future. But because it was improper to put it forward at that time they had kept it a secret for so many years. This restraint of theirs is really praise-worthy. The readers should recall to their minds their movements during the past 50 years so that they will come to know that their movement is continuing steadily with a fixed ideal. They assimilate whatever is obtained and are taking steps forward patiently. To constantly keep on organizing themselves and take a step forward, this practice of theirs is going on ceaselessly for 50 years.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Late Maulana Shaukat Ali had once remarked: ‘I consider even an insignificant Musalman to be superior to “Mahatmaji”’. Mahatmaji had also justified those remarks. The readers should look up the same sentence here in the 7th paragraph. From this it can be known how their ideology is.

Although this book was published in this form last year, these articles were first published in 1939 in the ‘Civil and Military Gazette’ of Lahore, and again in ‘The Times of India’ of Bombay in the same year. Thereafter, these thoughts were once again published in book form. Thus four editions of this writing were printed. They have given such (a wide) publicity to this book. However, the readers should note here that Government has not launched any prosecution against these author and publisher for spreading communal hatred. If a Hindu publishes such thoughts, other Hindus will certainly condemn that, but besides he will not fail to get imprisonment under section relating to promoting enmity between communities. But nothing of this kind has happened to this author; so much are these thoughts being fondled by Government.

Look at the 15th paragraph above, they have to give Islami colour to Nizam Hyderabad. This is the aspiration of Pakistani leaders. But after they set their feet firmly in the Punjab and Bengal, they are going to implement the scheme for forcible conversion of religion on the Deccan (lit. south) Hyderabad. That will not come forward now, of course, this ghost of Pakistan is not going to be satisfied if they secure the Punjab and Bengal, but it is going to increase thereafter on a larger scale. Those who say that religion has place in politics should necessarily pay attention to this. We also really feel that religion should have no place in politics; but so long as one community makes its own organization by sheltering behind religion and wishes to establish the rule of its own religion in future by causing religious revolution and says that others will not have the franchise, and (when) that community has already won 450 seats out of 500 seats for persons of their own views in the last election, and (which community) has already introduced Nadirshahi at Aligarh and Ahmedabad. When one community becomes overbearing in the name of religion, others must also organize themselves to such an extent as at least to carry out self-defence. Otherwise others have no safety. It is a fact that the Government concerned has not been able so far to give protection to Hindus at Aligarh and Ahmedabad in spite of its good intentions.

In the friction between the liberality of the Hindus and the selfishness of the Leaguers the Hindus have no saviour, such has been the situation. Therefore, it is most necessary here to suggest that the Hindus should not adopt an aggressive attitude, but that they should organize themselves at least for protecting themselves.

The community, which draws up its Scheme and by an aggressive policy according to that scheme keeps on overriding others continuously for 50 years, cannot be satisfied by (making) generous gifts (to it). Because, all that was worth giving such as Khilafat movement, blank cheque, parity, etc., has been given. That has not lessened (subdued) their aggressive policy, but, on the contrary has increased. So it is now proper for the Hindus to form their own organization which will be capable of protecting themselves. It is not thought that any one can give anything more then a blank cheque. This is the limit of generosity. But what did that achieve?

There is now no need to review this book any further. Every sentence in it expresses the mind of the League. However, the Hindus, instead of adopting an aggressive policy, should adopt a defensive policy, and at least show by action that they shall not be lost.

There are two ways for settlement for peace. The first way is to please the other party by generosity. That was resorted to during the past 25 years. It had no desired effect on the Leaguers. Not only this but they have taken the maximum possible advantage of that every time. The time has now come for following the second course for ensuring self-defence. Self-defence is the birth-right of every one. Self-defence does not mean aggression on others. When the aggressive people of the League will realize that the Hindus have become capable of defending themselves and that they will not now sink down with force, only then a change in their aggressive policy is possible and thereafter alone all can live happy and contented.

Every man has the right of self-defence from his birth. The Hindus were not using that right up to now. They were committing this offence. They should not commit that offence hereafter. This is the only way of peace and amity that now remains. So long as the Hindus are not able to protect themselves, so long they will not have protection.

At present some are suggesting that thousands of men should be prepared to die peacefully without striking, go and stand before the aggressors of the League and gladly die after being stabbed with their knives. (They) should give them as many victims as they want to take, so that the soul of the League will be pacified, and then peace would reign everywhere. But this pious remedy will produce no effect whatsoever on those whose programme itself includes a definite scheme for reducing the population of others and draws up a scheme also for swelling their own population by any means whatsoever. If the experience of the past 65 years is taken into consideration it is clearly apparent that this experiment will not bring success. However, those who believe in this experiment may give as many thousands of victims as may be taken. (And) see what happens after offering the victims. Even if it is decided to offer victims in such a manner, there is no reason for delaying the drawing up of the programme, that is to be drawn up for the Hindus themselves to become capable of protecting themselves. Because, we do not at all come in the way of offering victims.

Those who want to offer themselves as victims should raise their own ‘Sacrifice-corps’. No one should deter them from that task. But others also should not dissuade those who want to be capable of protecting themselves. These should form their ‘Defence Corps’ and do whatever they can for protecting themselves.

After the administration of the Provinces, which are to go into the hands of the League, passes into the hands of the League, and their seat there becomes firm, even greater ravages than these will have to be faced. The Hindus must become capable of protecting themselves by organizing themselves at least to such an extent that they will be able to withstand that aggression and remain alive. There is now no alternative left except that.

D.O. No. 2174/5-Poll SECRETARIAT
Bombay, 25th April 1947
Towards Freedom: 1947

My dear Sardar Vallabhbhai,

Thank you for your demi-official letter of the 17th instant regarding the booklet ‘Khilafat Pakistan Scheme’.

We agree with the views expressed by you in respect of the booklet and are now not taking any further action in regard to it.

Yours sincerely,

Morarji Desai

1 India.

2 Traitors = the British and Hindus (Congress).

3 Nizam's Dominions.

4 This means, democracy will be for the Musalmans, while dictatorship for others. For the sake of Khilafat thousands of Hindus and their Shankaracharyas had gone to jail (in 1920), this is the reward they will now get for that.

5 Hindus will have no right over land.

6 In English in the original.

18. Communal Outlook of Congress Ministry in Bombay Denied

Extract from an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and B.G. Kher, 3 May 1947 Mountbatten Papers, File No. 193, NMML.

I asked him what truth he considered there had been in the Muslim League charges that the Congress Government in Bombay between 1937 and 1939 repressed the Muslims. He refuted this charge heatedly, and said that the only three points that had ever been brought up were:

(a) That Muslim children in schools were obliged to sing the Hindu national song.
(b) That the Congress flag was hoisted on public buildings.
(c) That textbooks supplied by the schools had chapters on Christ, Mahomed, Buddha, etc., devoting an equal amount of space to each, and causing offence to the Muslims through the juxtaposition of Mahomed and other religious figures.

He said that the action his Ministry had taken was:

(a) To order that if even one member of a class objected to the singing of the song it was not to be sung.
(b) To direct that if anyone objected to the hoisting of the Congress flag it was not to be hoisted.
(c) As regards this point Mr Kher explained that these textbooks were issued on the authority of a Committee of which a Muslim was Chairman, and was a matter for local authorities.

He assured me that beyond that, nothing harmful had been done to the Muslims and that they had been well treated. He said that they were also being well looked after now, and he did not think they had any genuine cause for complaint.

I congratulated him on having a quiet Province, and asked him to give me an account of the communal troubles that there had been.

He said that they had been relatively small in extent, and that his Government had passed a law to the effect that the opposite community was to pay for the damage to property of the other community, and this had had a most salutary effect both in reducing the damage and in encouraging the members of both communities to join together to put out fires, etc.
Contending with Communalism

I told him I thought this should be a general law in all provinces, and he told me he had made this proposal to the other Provincial Premiers at their recent meeting, and that they thought it was a very good idea.

He confirmed Mr Patel’s story that the previous Inspector-General of Police in Bombay had been entirely unsatisfactory, but not for the reasons given by Mr Patel, namely that he was pro-Muslim, but because he was soft-hearted and fell over backwards in trying to be fair to minorities. When finally he (Kher) was able to convince the Governor that he should go, the new IG had restored complete law and order in Bombay within three days, and there had been no serious trouble since....

19. ‘League Leader in No Reasonable Frame of Mind: Mohan Lal Saxena’s View’

NEW DELHI, May 10.—Mr Mohan Lal Saxena, MLA (Central) in a statement to the press says:

‘The father of the nation and the father of the two-nation theory have met once again and dispersed. One wonders what useful purpose these meetings serve except to tickle the vanity of the League leader, who enjoys the courtesy of receiving the old man at the entrance and to raise fresh hopes in the hearts of Gandhiji’s followers.

‘Mahatma Gandhi has his own approach to questions as also his own way of doing things and he was at pains to assure his colleagues who did not approve of his meeting Mr Jinnah that thereby he had secured a veto to all forms of violence to achieve political ends. But the lengthy statement which Mr Jinnah has been pleased to issue upholding the decision of the NWFP League to continue their present movement belies that expectation.’

NWFP Movement

‘Who does not know that the League movement in the NWFP is wholly communal? Did it not start with the demand of the restoration of a Sikh woman who had been forcibly converted and married to a Muslim after her husband had been done to death during the communal riots? Not only that, even Abdul Qayum Khan, the Leader of the League Party in the Legislature, had supported the demand at a public meeting held in defiance of Section 144. Again, I am reliably given to understand that even during the visit of Lord Mountbatten, the demand for the restoration of the said Sikh woman was reiterated.

Hundreds Killed and Converted

‘Is it not a fact that hundred of members belonging to the Hindu and Sikh minorities in the province have been killed, looted and forcibly converted as a result of this very movement which he has laboured to prove to be political and in defence of civil liberties and which is now to be carried on with his blessings? And Mr Jinnah has the cheek to compare it with the civil disobedience and other non-violent forms of activities of the Congress which till now he has repeatedly denounced and condemned.’
Inflamatory Speeches

'It lies ill in his mouth to say that the Direct Action contemplated by the League resolution visualized mass civil disobedience when speeches were delivered under his very presidency by his lieutenants eulogizing the acts of Chengiz Khan and Halakoo and it was deliberately made out that jail going was unmanly and sinful and further subsequent to the passing of the resolution, Muslim League leaders went about talking throughout the country in the same strain and holding out threats to the Nationalist Muslims, and the minorities, and unrestrained by Mr Jinnah. Even now Mr Jinnah, in his long statement, has no word of condemnation for the forcible conversion and marriage of the poor Sikh woman and similar other acts.'

Challenge to Jinnah

'He has referred to the disastrous activities of the Congress since 1921, but I respectfully challenge him to cite a single instance where innocent men, women and children were so brutally treated or, in the case of any misguided act on the part of the public, it did not bring the severest possible condemnation from Congress leaders.

'Mr Jinnah has in the end pressed for fresh elections in the NWFP but he has cleverly avoided mentioning Pakistan for he knows that only a year ago the elections were fought and lost on this one issue.

'I am sorry that Mahatma Gandhi's methods have failed to convert Mr Jinnah or bring him down from the high horse he has been riding. He will not come into a reasonable frame of mind unless he is made to realize that it would not pay any longer to play the dangerous game he has been playing and also that two can play at it.'

Leaguers in Hindustan

'The Congress Working Committee has done the right thing in taking the first step in that direction by demanding for the partition of the Punjab and Bengal on those very grounds on which Mr Jinnah wants Pakistan. This move has made Suhrawardis and Mamdots think and sing in a different tune.

'What is still further needed, is that the Muslim Leaguers of the so-called Hindustan provinces which have supplied the leadership to the League should be made to understand that with the establishment of Pakistan on the basis of the two-nation theory of their leader, they should be prepared to be treated as aliens in the provinces where they have been born and bred up where their fore fathers have lived for generations and where their remains would be buried till the Day of Judgment.'—API.

20. Congress Is Non-violent and Non-communal

Letter from J.B. Kripalani to Ashrafuddin Ahmad Chowdhry, 13 May 1947
AICC Papers, File No. CL-8/1946, NMML.

Dear Friend,

Your letter of the 30th April was directed to me by Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel. He thinks you have raised some fundamental question of Congress policy. I do not see what fundamental question you have raised. It is difficult for me to separate your question from the many denunciatory adjectives you have thought fit to use against the organization to which you owe allegiance.
The Congress has always declared that it will not coerce any area to join the Indian Union against its expressed wishes. This in concrete terms means that if the Muslims in their majority areas want what the Muslim League calls Pakistan, the Congress, consistently with its declared policy and its creed of non-violence cannot resist this demand. The Muslims of India are today organized by and under the League. There are other organizations that also claim to speak for the Muslim community. But such organizations have not captured, I am sorry to say, the mass-mind. The nationalist Muslims have no hold on this mass-mind. Under these circumstances if the bulk of the Muslim community want the division of the country and the British Government that hold sway in India today, back up this communal demand I do not see how the Congress can resist it. It cannot surely be resisted by non-violent means. It may be resisted by violence. But the Congress creed precludes it from using violence. Moreover any use of violence will fall most heavily on the innocent of the communities who are our own country men and for whom the Congress has worked for the last three quarters of a century.

You say in your letter that the quarrel is between the Congress and the League but have you observed that when violence is used it is not the members of the League or the Congress that are slaughtered but the innocent of the two communities, who have often nothing to do with either the one or the other organization. In the Frontier the quarrel is between the Congress ministry and the League and yet when actual violence is used its victims are exclusively the innocent Hindus and Sikhs who are not Congressmen. In Behar many innocent nationalist Muslims were slain in the riot. When actually violence begins it takes exclusively a communal character. It is a fight between Muslims on the one side and the Sikh and Hindus on the other. I do not see where the Congress comes in anywhere here. The Congress may have been guilty of many sins of commission and omission but it has never been a communal organization. In all its dealings with the League, Mahatmaji and the Working Committee have always been guided by the leading nationalist Muslims in the Congress. In its policy towards the Muslims or the League the Congress was first guided by the Ali Brothers and then by Dr Ansari and Maulana Abul Kalam Azad. After the death of Dr Ansari it has been guided by the Maulana Sahib and Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan. What more could it do?

All that the Congress seeks to do today is to rescue as many areas as possible from the threatened domination of the League and Pakistan. It wants to save as much territory for a Free Indian Union as is possible under the circumstances. It therefore insists upon the division of Bengal and Punjab into areas for Hindustan and Pakistan respectively. I do not see what else the Congress can do under the circumstances. The division of India is not of your seeking. The sin of it must lie on the shoulders of the Muslim League that has misguided the Muslim community.

Yours sincerely,
J.B. Kripalani

Sri Ashrafuddin Ahmad Chowdhry
PO Suiganj,
Tippera (Bengal)
21. Need to Strengthen Police Force

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Prime Ministers of Congress-administered provinces, 15 May 1947

MY DEAR PRIME MINISTERS,

I am sure the increasing communal tension and the probability of its accentuation in the event of an announcement regarding transfer of power, if it is not wholly satisfactory to the Muslim League, will have attracted your attention already. I feel, however, that urgent consideration should be given to the consequences which might ensue and the measures which should be taken both to forestall or deal with them, should situation so demand.

Recent events in the Punjab and the Frontier and the aggressive attitude adopted by the Muslims in other Provinces indicate a possible very serious challenge to law and order in the coming months. It would be risky to rely entirely on the Armed Force to deal with such a contingency. It is quite likely that these forces would have demands elsewhere, which might seriously affect their mobility as well as availability. It is, therefore, necessary that you should immediately review your Police strength with a view to augmenting it or its equipment in order to deal with any such situation. Should you feel that the forces at your disposal are inadequate or need arming, I suggest that you should take initial action to this end at once; and, if necessary, recruit a sufficient number of special Armed Police to supplement the existing forces. It is essential that the Police Force should not only be well-equipped, but its discipline and morale should also be of the highest standard. Vigorous action must, therefore, be taken to deal with any signs of indiscipline or any attempts on the part of any Party or Organization, subversive of such discipline. The loyalty of the Police must be ensured and no impression should be given that there is lack of confidence either in its integrity or dependability. Between the Ministry and the Police Force as also the general administrative machinery, there should be a feeling of mutual confidence and trust. It is needless to say that Ministerial interventions in petty matters, which will have the effect of undermining the loyalty and morale of the Force or between the Service and its superior officers, should be avoided at all costs.

The Conference preceding the issue of the Declaration has now been postponed to the first week of June. The critical period, in my view, would come about some time after the issue of the Declaration. Time is, therefore, short; but I hope you will be able to adopt substantial measures by the time.

Yours sincerely,

VALLABHBHAI PATEL

The Prime Ministers of Bombay, CP and Berar, Madras, Assam, Orissa, Bihar and UP

22. ‘Arms Check-up in Cawnpore’

CAWNPORE, May 21.—In view of the tense situation in Cawnpore, the District Magistrate of Cawnpore, has decided to check up all arms and ammunition in the district of Cawnpore.
The District Magistrate by an order has directed every person in possession of a duly licensed gun, rifle, revolver, pistol or any other kind of fire-arm to report to the Sub-Divisional Magistrate, Bilhaur, within a week of the publication of this order, the total amount of ammunition which he possesses.

The public has also been warned that searches are liable to be made if it is suspected that the information given is wrong.—API.

23. ‘Gandhiji’s Advice to Sindh Hindus’

Gandhiji’s timely clarification of his advice to Sindh Hindus has heartened them to face the future with courage and fortitude. Asked to clarify his advice that Sindh Hindus should migrate in the event of partition, Gandhiji told Bhai Pratap Dayaldas of Hyderabad who met him at New Delhi:

‘I said that you should suffer bravely, but non-violently unto death. But if you cannot do that and must take a disgraceful surrender of all, including honour, your womenfolk and religion, in that case, the only and safe proper course for you to take is migration, not singly, but of all the Hindus and other non-Muslims.’

To a further query as to what would be the plight of the minorities in Sindh in the case of a partition of India, Gandhiji replied:

‘That question is to be fought out in the Constituent Assembly, but I am certain that all protection that is humanly possible will be stipulated for. You must not be weaklings.’...

24. Anticipation of Communal Trouble in Assam

Telegram from Akbar Hydari to Jawaharlal Nehru, 30 May 1947

In months ahead I apprehend three possible sources of trouble.

1. Mass incursions from outside province joining excited elements within;
2. Communal trouble aggravated in certain parts by communist incitement to disorder; and
3. If one and two materialise trouble from tribal side. If one or other of these possibilities actually happen on a big scale or if we are faced with all three more or less together one leading to the other, present armed strength at disposal of Province will not be sufficient to deal with situation effectively. This amounts to 2,850 armed police including jail force and five battalions that is 62 platoons of Assam Rifles. From indications I have had it seems military aid from Central Government who have themselves grave responsibilities in other areas would be difficult to provide and even if provided might come too late to prevent widespread loss of life and destruction of property. Prudence dictate Assam being assisted to take measures herself to meet menace.

2. To meet this situation I request sanction to increasing strength of Assam Rifles as soon as possible by 38 platoons...

25. Demand for United India with a Strong Central Government

Statement by V.G. Deshpande, President, All India Hindu Students Federation, 31 May 1947

Mr V.G. Deshpande, President, All India Hindu Students’ Federation has issued the following statement with regard to the modifications in the demonstration to be staged on the 2nd June 1947:

‘On representation from the District Magistrate and the local officials that the communal situation in Delhi has become tense and demonstration before the Viceroy’s House would further deteriorate the situation, we have modified the plan of demonstration on the 2nd June. Instead of demonstration before the Viceroy’s House there would be a complete Hartal in Delhi and a public meeting in Dewan Hall at 4 P.M. the same day in order to record Hindu India’s opposition to vivisection of Hindustan in any shape or form.

‘We are opposed to conceding Pakistan whether it is full-fledged Pakistan of Jinnah’s type or the trunketed [sic] Pakistan which is an illegitimate child of Rajaji. We are opposed both to sovereign Bengal a creation of the unholy alliance between Sarat Bose and Surhawardy [sic] and the sovereign Pathanization of Khan–Khanna axis. As an alternative we do not support Cabinet Mission Scheme which also is a paraphrase of Pakistan. We stand for United India with a strong Central Government powerful enough to interfere in Provincial matters and readjustment of the present Provinces of Punjab and Bengal to suit the changed conditions.’
My dear Lord Mountbatten,

I am sending herewith a copy of the report which has appeared in the Dawn of the speech of my honourable colleague, the Minister of Health, at Patna.

2. I am sure you will agree with me that it is most improper and thoroughly objectionable in its attack on the provincial administration. I thought that, after the manner you proposed to tackle Nishtar about his speech condemning the Frontier administration, such things would not recur, but this one beats the rest and I feel that if the Provincial Government had externed or arrested him for making this sort of speech, I for one would certainly have upheld their action. If such things go on, I shall have the greatest difficulty in persuading the provincial administrations concerned to restrain their hands.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

ENCLOSURE

EXTRACTS FROM A SPEECH BY GHAZANFAR ALI KHAN
AS REPORTED IN DAWN ON 1-6-47

‘Brethren, I wish to assure you that even though I could not personally come here during those days, my heart and my full sympathies were with you as fellow Muslims.

‘In the Punjab, about which I can speak with intimate knowledge, a wave of horror went throughout the province and the nature and extent of the crimes that were committed against the weak minority here earned unbounded sympathy for the sufferers. There was grave danger of a sudden outburst of Muslim feelings in the Punjab, which would have taken an ugly turn, but this danger was averted only by the strict discipline maintained by the Muslim Leaguers. Even our women workers insisted on sending a special deputation to succour and console their unfortunate brethren and sisters. A deputation of Muslim women accordingly toured Bihar under the leadership of Begum Tasadduq Hussain, one of the two women members of the Punjab Assembly.

‘Recently I saw a Press statement issued by the Premier of Bihar giving the number of firing carried out by the police before Sardar Nishtar and Pandit Nehru visited this province. Technically the statement may or may not be correct. For instance, the Premier would be correct in his statement even if here and there the police party fired a few rounds only to help rioters, which I am told was exactly what happened...’ He said there were fundamental differences between the Muslims and the Hindus. ‘People like Mahmud Ghazni and Aurangzeb are our national heroes but they are considered by the Hindus as their greatest enemies. Similarly, Shivaji is considered by us as our arch-enemy but is revered by them as a national hero. What we eat away is considered by them the greatest god.’
Chapter 18. Communalism: Provinces

A. Bengal

1. Worsening Communal Violence in Calcutta

Telegram from N.C. Chatterjee to S.P. Mookerjee, 28 March 1947
AIHM Papers, File No. C-136, NMML.

INDIAN POSTS AND TELEGRAPHS DEPARTMENT

POSITION CALCUTTA CITY SIMPLY INTOLERABLE STOP CITY POLICE COMMUNALISED STOP DEPUTY COMMISSIONER OF NORTH AND SOUTH DISTRICTS ARE MUSLIMS STOP MUSLIM NATIONAL GUARDS PERMITTED TO POLICE THE MAIN THOROUGH FARES CAUSING GREAT APPREHENSIONS STOP HINDUS IN VARIOUS AREAS BEING PERSECUTED AND TORTURED STOP MUSLIM HOOLIGANS NOT BEING ARRESTED
NOR PROPERLY DEALT (50) WITH STOP MILITARY NOT YET CASSED [sic] STOP SITUATION DETERIORATING STOP PRESS GAGED [sic] STOP NEWS NOT REFLECTING REAL SITUATION UNLESS CENTRE INTERVENES AND TAKING IMMEDIATE STEPS APPREHEND SERIOUS DISTURBANCES THROUGHOUT BENGALE SPECIALY IN EASTERN DISTRICTS STOP

----- NC CHATTERJEE PRESIDENT HINDU MAHASABHA-----LN137

2. ‘Military Open Fire on Calcutta Rioters’

Extract from a Report from The Hindustan Times, 1 April 1947.

CALCUTTA, March 31.—Twenty-eight incidents mostly confined to North, East and Central Calcutta were reported last night and up to 10 p.m. today. ‘The police and military fired 56 rounds in connection with arson, rioting and attacks,’ states a Press note issued by the Bengal Government. ...

Forty two persons are reported to have been injured and five killed since yesterday night, adds the press note.

There was some tension in Howrah as a result of about 20 incidents which occurred in Malipanchgora, Howrah, Bali and Shibpore thanas. These included 12 cases of arson. More than 100 rounds were fired by the police and military.

Curfew has been imposed in the police station areas of Shibpore, Bali, Jogacha and Sankrail, in Howrah. It will be operative from 7 p.m. to 7 a.m. Curfew is already in force in the police station areas of Golabari, Howrah, Malipanchgora and parts of Bantra. ...
3. Report on Bengal Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bengal for Second Half of March 1947, 3 April 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

I—Political

1. The larger political questions which tended to dominate the political scene during the first part of the month have been pushed into the background with the recrudescence of communal trouble in Calcutta and Howrah during the present period. The disturbances themselves, essentially communal in character, would be referred to in greater detail in the Communal section.

2. Despite attempts, subsequently made, to link the disturbances with Pakistan Day on the one hand and the visit of Master Tara Singh to Calcutta on the other, there seems to be no adequate grounds for holding that the disturbances were in any way directly connected with these events: they can be adequately and sufficiently ascribed to the present communal tension and the likelihood of trouble breaking out on the smallest provocation. It is possible, however, to draw certain conclusions from the troubles now in progress. Started by the Muslims living in one of the most notorious bustees in North Calcutta the incidents themselves have come as an unpleasant surprise to all political parties, for it was the policy of none of them to have a recurrence of such troubles at this stage. It was certainly not the policy of the Communists who were anxiously looking forward to making the threatened general strike on the 28th March a success and whose activities are seriously hampered by communal strife, a rigid enforcement of the 144 order and imposition of the curfew. Neither was it the policy of the Muslim League or the Congress who have both denounced the recurrence of trouble and who have worked to prevent its spread. All parties have, in fact, been united in desiring that the troubles should end forthwith and considerable efforts have been made by political parties to bring about a cessation of the incidents. A disquieting fact, already brought prominently to notice during the troubles of August to October last year, has been the complete inability of political leaders to control situations such as the present. The ability of the irresponsible elements to distract the life of the city by stabbings, arson and looting is a most disquieting factor for the future.

3. In the face of the communal tension and immediate politico-communal problems in the provincial sphere the wider problems in the all-India field have been given less and less attention. Generally speaking all parties are suspending judgment and waiting on the decision to be taken by their political leaders at the Centre.

4. Efforts still continue in Hindu circles to focus attention on the question of the separation of West Bengal and to keep this problem prominently before the notice of interested persons. It is to be presumed that advantage will be taken of the recurrence of trouble in Calcutta and Howrah to emphasize the desirability of separating off from the Muslim section of the Province. The Burdwan Commissioner reports that the movement has been gaining strength in West Bengal and that agitation in its favour is going on in all the districts of the Division in spite of the declared opposition of Mr Gandhi and Mr Sarat Chandra Bose. Local Congress organizations have been active in support of the movement, as also the Hindu Mahasabha. The proposal to hold a meeting early in April at Tarakeswar sponsored by the Mahasabha will undoubtedly focus attention on this problem to a still greater degree. During the period several meetings have been held in support of the proposal, notably a conference convened by “Major-General” A.C. Chatterjee at which a proposal was made to form a committee which would include N.C. Chatterjee and Shyamaprasad Mookerjee of the Mahasabha, to conduct the movement for the partition of Bengal.

5. The visit of Master Tara Singh to Calcutta during the period had several purposes, not only the raising of funds for rehabilitation work in the Punjab but also to ensure that the Hindus and the Sikhs in Bengal remained firm in their demand for partition of the Province. Such activities are reported to have been much resented by the Muslims in Calcutta, the view being taken that partition would be part of the Congress Hindu Mahasabha move to crush the Muslims in their aspirations.

6. Pakistan Day was celebrated in Muslim circles on the 23rd. Considerable fears were entertained before that date that communal disturbances might break out as a result of the holding of meetings and processions and steps were taken to ensure that public meetings were avoided in those areas where prohibitory orders were in force. The day passed off without incident throughout the Province. In Calcutta flag hoistings on houses and shops, private meetings and illuminations were the main features of the celebrations. The most numerously attended meeting was held at the Muslim Institute where 3,000 were present and resolutions were passed reaffirming the faith of the Muslims in the ideals of Pakistan. In Dacca the Pakistan Day was particularly widely celebrated. In Chittagong the Day was celebrated throughout the Division and while there were apprehensions of trouble in Chandpur and parts of Noakhali adequate precautions were taken and the celebrations passed off smoothly. Special efforts were undoubtedly made by the Muslim leaders to avoid any semblance of provocation and to abide by the instructions issued by Mr Jinnah....

II—Communal

13. The communal situation, outwardly comparatively quiet during the last few weeks, deteriorated considerably in Calcutta and Howrah from the 25th onwards. Prior to the outburst of trouble on the 25th there had been trouble on the 16th following the explosion of two crackers late at night. Stoning of passing vehicles ensued and several stabbings occurred. Conditions returned to normal following the intervention of the police. On the 25th, however, following the rumour, subsequently found to be false, that a Muslim woman and a Muslim boy had been killed there was fresh outburst of communal trouble. Muslims of the notorious Kalabagan bustee area started the trouble and on that night the police had to open fire on five occasions, tearsmoke being used twice. The incidents had been confined almost exclusively to the nine police stations of Central and East Calcutta; the southern parts and the extreme northern parts of the town have been hardly affected at all during the period under report. Some incidents have been reported during the period, resulting in 43 being killed and 351 wounded. The incidents have taken the form of stabbings together with a number of riots, cases of arson, looting and acid throwing. The military were called in on the night of the 28th and have dominated two police-stations and are patrolling vigorously a third. Despite considerable efforts of Peace Committees and political leaders it has not been possible to bring the situation under control. Transport has been affected to some extent and considerable tension exists in the affected areas. During the first few days of the disturbances there was no appreciable effect on the conservancy services in the town but towards the end of the period the usual demand, bound to grow in intensity, for guards on conservancy and ration vehicles is being made.
14. Fortunately the disturbances have not spread to 24-Parganas and Hooghly but Howrah has been affected, and following a deterioration in the situation the military were called in there to assist the police on the night of the 30th. The incidents there which have included 38 cases of arson and 10 cases of looting have resulted in 18 deaths and 35 injuries; a feature of the situation in Howrah has been the use of modern weapons by members of both communities.

15. Elsewhere in the Province there have been, as yet, no repercussions following the outbreak of trouble in the Calcutta area. In the Burdwan division outside Howrah town the situation is generally quiet and Midnapore is reported to be almost normal. In the Presidency Division the only trouble centre at the moment is Santipur where orders under section 144 still remain in force. In North Bengal the only incident of importance has been the outbreak of hooliganism on communal lines in Bogra. There has fortunately been no further deterioration in the communal situation in East Bengal though feeling everywhere continues to be strained. The National Guards have been much less in evidence in Chittagong town following deterrent action by the National Guards provincial leader with a corresponding improvement in the situation. In Noakhali and in the Chandpur subdivision of Tippera, however, the release on bail of many of the accused persons in riot cases has led to panic among the Hindus and incidents, indicative of communal tension, have been reported from both the Noakhali and Tippera districts.

4. Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha Conference at Tarakeshwar
Draft Resolution by Ashutosh Lahiry, 6 April 1947
AIHM Papers, File No. P-107, NMML.

Resolution I
Whereas the League Ministry of Bengal has failed to assure safety and security of life, property and honour of the Hindus of Noakhali and have persistently refused to take such steps as may have a chastening effect on the aggressive goonda element of the District such as apprehension and punishment of murderers, abductors, looters etc., imposition of punitive tax or collective fines, administration of relief in adequate measure to the oppressed and despoiled Hindus; and whereas this sinister policy on the part of the ministry has been an encouragement to the Goonda element and has made it impossible for the Hindu refugees to return to their home district and for those who returned, to stay and live with self-respect and safety; and to be forced again to abandon afresh their home, with the result that the entire district of Noakhali and part of Tipperah are now threatened, even after six months of the tragic occurrence, with whole-sale evacuation and desertion of their home and property, reducing about two lakhs of Hindu population to a state of utmost helplessness,

2) Whereas the League Ministry has failed even to utilize for relief the sum of rupees three crores sanctioned by the Government of India out of which only sixty lakhs have been distributed to the sufferers—which have amply demonstrated the callous and anti-Hindu attitude of the Government.

3) Whereas the League Ministry with the aid of State funds has been assisting settlement of Bihar Muslims in Bengal and have diverted for this purpose substantial amount of money which should have been primarily devoted for the alleviation of the sufferings and for the uplift and development of the sons of the province and whereas this has created a sense of great insecurity amongst the Hindus of the province.

4) Whereas the League Ministry has been importing Pathans and Frontier people for enlistment in the armed police forces, depriving the inhabitants of the province of opportunities for service which rightfully belong to them, and whereas this mischievous policy is inspired with the sole object of creating a militant Communal armed force for suppressing the legitimate rights and interests of the Hindus.

5) Whereas the League Ministry has been enacting exproscriptory legislation such as waste lands bill etc, which is designed virtually to confiscate large tracts of land owned by the Hindus with evident objective of moslem outsiders being settled on them, and whereas the League Ministry has been systematically using Governmental authority for facilitating the establishment of Pakistan with complete disregard for the interest of the 45 per cent of the Hindu population of the province.

6) Whereas the League Ministry has demonstrated its utter incapacity to maintain law and order and assure safety to the peaceful citizens and has been regularly encouraging the ruffian elements by failing to bring to justice thousands of persons guilty of heinous offences, who have made life in Calcutta and various other parts in Bengal almost insufferable.

i. This Conference of the Hindus of Bengal asserts that, the League Ministry has completely forfeited the confidence of the Hindus and that any further continuance in power of this Ministry is bound to lead to far more disastrous consequences and province-wide chaos and confusion and the conference therefore demands that the ministry be immediately removed.

ii. The Conference expresses its determination not to submit any longer to the domination of purely Communal Ministry, which has brought about untold sufferings to the Hindus of the Province and which has paralysed normal life for years and has made it difficult for Hindus to live and to carry on their usual avocations with self-respect and security. The Conference, therefore, urges on the Hindus of the Province to resist the continuance in power of such a Communal Ministry by all peaceful means.

iii. The Conference desires to impress on the Hindus that it is an act of shameful treachery for any Hindu to be associated with such an obnoxious Ministry and calls upon the Hindu Ministers to resign in the common interest of the country. The present Hindu Ministers have been guilty of desertion and betrayal, and they are helping to maintain an erroneous appearance of the Ministry being non-communal. Hindus can no longer permit this false show to continue, without gravely endangering their vital interests. The Conference therefore, urges on the Hindus to take appropriate action for securing the resignation of the Hindu Ministers.

iv. The Conference is of opinion that the Hindu members of the Legislature have been incapable of rendering any useful service to the Country by their active participation in the work of the Legislation and have failed to achieve the purpose for which they have gone to the Legislature. The time has now arrived when they should withdraw from the Legislature and leave to the Moslem members the sole responsibility of such legislation as the Ministry proposes to enact and tear off the false mask of legislation being carried through with the joint deliberation of Hindus and Moslems alike. The Conference therefore, calls upon the Hindu members to forthwith withdraw from the Legislatures.
v. The Conference is of opinion that at this critical period when the future of the Hindu inhabitants of the province is so gravely imperilled, it is essential that all shades of political opinion that are opposed to the suicidal policy of the League Ministry should combine and create a common front and make united efforts for carrying to fruition the policy and programme outlined above. The Conference, to this end invites the co-operation of all such groups and parties.

vi. The Conference declares that a day of mourning be observed throughout Bengal on the 20th of April with a view to galvanise public opinion and prepare the country for the effective execution of the programme.

vii. The Conference authorizes the president to form a Council of Action and to take such other steps as may be necessary for the purposes stated above.

Resolution II

The Conference enjoins on the Hindus to speedily form Hindu militias called ‘Hindusthan National Guards’ or Hindusthan Rastra Sena in every Union of the Province with a view to defend the interests of the Hindus and maintain peace and tranquility within their jurisdiction.

5. ‘Migrate from Noakhali: Gandhi’s Advice to Hindus’

Dawn, 9 April 1947.

Mr Gandhi, replied to complaints of increasing lawlessness in Noakhali section of Bengal on Monday in New Delhi that ‘case seems to be for exodus or perishing in flames of fanaticism’.

Mr Gandhi said that he left his walking tour of Noakhali and the trip of Bihar at the behest of the new Viceroy, Lord Louis Mountbatten for discussions about Britain’s exodus from India by June next year. On Monday, he made public telegrams from Congress workers in Noakhali in which they described attempts to burn persons alive.

After wiring to consult among themselves and decide whether the Hindus should leave the predominantly Muslim area of Noakhali, Mr Gandhi sent this telegram to the Bengal Prime Minister, Mr H.S. Suhrawardy. ‘I continue to receive doleful wires about prompt action. I am publishing wires. Gandhi.’

Satish Chandra Das Gupta, Bengal Congress worker, was quoted as saying that there had been five cases of arson since March 23.

Mr Gandhi replied to him: ‘Case seems to be for exodus or perishing in flames of fanaticism.’—APA.

6. ‘Gandhi’s Telegrams on Noakhali Responsible for Fresh Troubles in Calcutta: Suhrawardy’

Extract from a Report from Dawn, 11 April 1947.

Calcutta, Thursday.—Bengal Premier, H.S. Suhrawardy said here today that Thursday’s ‘sharp recrudescence of trouble in Calcutta was the direct result of the publication of Mr Gandhi’s telegrams on Noakhali.’

He explained that such telegrams create a panic in the public mind ‘making it falsely appear that the whole firmament was falling down.’
The premier said that the 25-hour curfew imposed in some of the areas in Calcutta ‘under my orders is only the first instalment of the more drastic steps I am determined to take on misbehaving sections.’

Mr Suhrawardy said that if the Indian problem was to be settled at all by ‘open fight, let it be said so and get started,’ and added he found ‘no use in these indisciplined indiscriminate assaults.’

The Bengal Premier said that wide and mass arrests would not always be a satisfactory solvent of the trouble. ‘Firstly so long as there are persons to bail them out and secondly so long as the public mind does not set itself definitely against such communal disturbances.’

Noakhali Officers Summoned

Mr Suhrawardy indicated that he has summoned the District Magistrate of Noakhali, the district superintendent of police and the deputy inspector-general of police of the Chittagong division for a conference with him in the Secretariat on the situation in Noakhali.

The Premier said he was going to tell them that ‘nothing untoward should happen in their jurisdictions and that they will be held responsible for any recrudescence.’

7. Adjust Bengal Assembly Dates according to the Constituent Assembly Session

Telegram from Kiran Shankar Roy to Vallabhbhai Patel, 12 April 1947

SPC, Vol. V, pp. 55–6.

Calcutta

THE BENGAL GOVERNMENT DESPITE REPEATED REQUESTS WANTS TO CONTINUE AFTER SHORT ADJOURNMENT ASSEMBLY SESSION FROM 18TH INSTANT TILL JUNE ACCORDING TO INFORMATION AVAILABLE NOW. INTENSE RUSHING THROUGH MANY HIGHLY COMMUNAL AND CONTROVERSIAL MEASURES IN PRESENT TENSE ATMOSPHERE. TWELVE BENGALESE ASSEMBLY MEMBERS ARE ALSO CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY GENERAL MEMBERS OUT OF WHOM TEN BELONG TO OUR PARTY. ALL SUCH MEMBERS WILL HAVE TO BE ABSENT FROM BENGALESE ASSEMBLY TO ATTEND CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY SESSION. EXTREMELY UNFAIR IF ASSEMBLY SITTINGS NOT ADJUSTED IN ACCORDANCE WITH CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY SITTING. WROTE GOVERNOR REQUESTING PROROGATION WHICH IS UNDER CONSIDERATION. SEEK YOUR INTERVENTION.

KIRAN SHANKAR RAY

LEADER CONGRESS ASSEMBLY PARTY BENGAL

8. Report on Bengal Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bengal for the First Half of April 1947, 17 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI

II—Communal

11. The communal situation in the Province has inevitably been coloured by the continuance of the disturbances in Calcutta though fortunately there have been few outward manifestations of communal hatred in the districts during the period.
12. In Calcutta some improvement in the general situation was noticed during the first half of the period, but unfortunately there has been a marked setback during the last half of the period following the throwing up [sic] of a bomb at one of the relief lorries of the Muslim Relief and Defence Committee, resulting in the death of one and serious injuries to other occupants of the lorry. Apprehension and tension are widespread and though efforts are being made to continue the ordinary life of the city the conservancy and bus services have been intermittently affected as also the trade and commerce of the city and there is a general feeling of unease. In particular the situation in the Taltola and Bowbazar areas has been particularly unsatisfactory and stringent measures, including the imposition of curfew for 24 hours at a time and even longer, have had to be taken to control those areas. The actual incidents reported to the police during the period have been 208, resulting in 21 deaths and 149 injuries. The work of maintaining law and order and the restoration of confidence has been very considerably hampered by the attempt to spread communal feeling among the Muslim and Hindu members of the armed police and the demands that have been made for the posting of pickets in the city on a communal basis.

13. It is fortunate that in West Bengal the communal troubles in Calcutta have hardly spread beyond Howrah town. In Howrah itself there has been considerable improvement since the beginning of the fortnight, and the military were withdrawn on the 4th of the month. Recently only sporadic incidents have been reported—the total number during the period being 145 resulting in the death of 7 persons. The problem of the arrest of the goonda elements in Howrah town has been taken up in earnest by the police and another encouraging feature has been the fact that public morale has remained high: in spite of the disturbances transport services have continued to operate and shops have remained open.

14. The only serious communal incident in the Division outside Howrah town was clash in the Angus Jute Mill’s coolie lines on the 7th April when the armed police had to open fire in self-defence and killed 5 persons and injured 19.

15. In the presidency Division there has been some tension in the district of Jessore where Mr Thakur, the Scheduled Caste Congress MLA of Faridpur and a member of the Constituent Assembly, had been holding meetings of Namasudras, one of which was attended by some 10,000 persons at which Mr Thakur was given a blood tilak. Thanks to the efforts of the local authorities, arrangements have been made to re-establish feelings of security and neighbourliness between the Namasudras and the Muslims. The only other incident of note in the Presidency Division which might well have developed into something much more serious but fortunately did not do so was a communal riot in the district of 24-Parganas following an election brawl which resulted in nine deaths.

16. In North Bengal though the communal tension is still considerable there has been no incident of note. In the Dacca Division though incidents are reported to have been few it is obvious that the general atmosphere is not healthy.

17. In the Chittagong Division tension continues in the Noakhali district. A disquieting feature of the general situation has been the failure of the police to arrest the large number of absconders and considerable delay in the submission of charge-sheets. Stringent action is being taken to bring home to the Muslims that no further recrudescence of communal disturbances will be tolerated; the general requirements of the General Administration and the Police to achieve this end are being reviewed. The economic boycott of Hindus in the area is said to be disappearing but against this the Muslims are now reported to be demanding exorbitant rates for their labour. The situation in Tippera generally shows improvement though the District Magistrate does report that in the Chandpur area the Hindus are still being threatened and cases of arson continue.

9. Congress Members Should Resign from Bengal Provincial Legislatures

Letter from Benod Behari Sen to the Secretary, All India Congress Parliamentary Board, 19 April 1947

Noakhali

Dear Sir,

I beg to forward herewith a copy of the resolutions adopted in a meeting of the Noakhali District Congress Committee held on 18-4-47.

Yours faithfully,

Benod Behari Sen

The Secretary
All India Congress Parliamentary Board
New Delhi

ENCLOSURE

Noakhali

RESOLUTION NO. I

Whereas the present Muslim League administration in Bengal is being carried on with the deliberate object of carrying out the Muslim League programme of direct action and, thereby, strengthening the fight for Pakistan at the cost of the lives and properties of the minority communities and the honour of the womenfolk, this meeting expresses its want of confidence in the present Ministry.

In this state of things, the Noakhali District Congress Committee urges upon the Congress authorities to ask the Congress members of the Bengal Provincial Legislatures to resign forthwith therefrom and to chalk out a definite programme of action against the present administration for its overthrow.

RESOLUTION NO. II

This committee is definitely of opinion that the Governor of Bengal has lamentably failed in the discharge of his special responsibilities for the protection of the minorities and as such this committee urges on the Governor-General and the members of the Interim Government to intervene in the affairs of the Bengal Provincial Government.
10. Demands for the Removal of Punjabi Muslim Policemen

Letter from Asstt. Secretary, Noakhali Rescue, Relief and Rehabilitation Committee to Vallabhbhai Patel, 21 April 1947

Dear Sir,

As directed by the committee I am sending to you copy of a joint statement issued by Mr N.C. Chatterjee, M.A., Bar-at-Law, president, Provincial Hindu Mahasabha, and Mr K.N. Dalal, president, Noakhali Rescue, Relief and Rehabilitation Committee, regarding the present situation in the district of Noakhali after making an extensive tour in the affected areas, for your information.

Yours faithfully,

Asstt. Secretary
Noakhali Rescue, Relief and Rehabilitation Committee

ENCLOSURE

RESOLUTION OF THE COMMITTEE ADOPTED ON 18 APRIL 1947

The gruesome acts of rape and molestation of women and other bestial barbarities committed by the Calcutta policemen newly imported from the Punjab, have forced even the most peace-loving citizen towards a point of desperation. The animal behaviours of these uniformed goondas as manifested at Jugipara Lane and 100 Harrison Road have only justified the public apprehensions that were expressed at their motivated importation from the Punjab. The committee therefore demand that an enquiry be immediately made jointly by the non-communal officials and eminent non-officials of the aggrieved community into these dastardly acts and to make arrangements for meting out exemplary punishments to the culprits. The committee further demand that these unwanted recruits from the Punjab be forthwith removed from service and from the province.

As the committee have found that the presence of the newly recruited Punjabi Muslim sepoys in the Hindu areas creates a sense of terror rather than of security, they demand that the rate-payers’ money must not be wasted on the recruitment of these men. The committee therefore record their emphatic protest against the ominous advertisements that are being issued by the Commissioner of Police for recruitment of the Punjabi Muslims as sepoys in the Calcutta Armed Forces. The committee request His Excellency the Governor of Bengal to immediately intervene in this matter and to publicly declare that these unwanted incumbents would be forthwith removed and their further recruitment stopped. The committee in the last place must reiterate that the communal Ministry of Bengal by importing these beastly elements in Calcutta’s police force have once more proved that they have no right to remain in charge of administration of the province as a whole.

Resolved further that the views herein expressed be intimated to His Excellency the Governor of Bengal, the Chief Minister of Bengal, His Excellency the Governor-General of India and to the Vice-President and the Home Minister of the Government of India.
11. Reveal Plan of Action

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Benod Behari Sen, 23 April 1947

Dear Friend,

I have received your letter dated 19th instant along with a copy of the resolutions of your committee. I do not know whether your committee is serious and whether they have weighed the consequences of any action that may be taken in order to give effect to these resolutions. I do not think that what has happened in Noakhali during recent months would have happened at all if your committee had the strength of putting into effect such resolutions. It is, therefore, hard for me to believe that there is any seriousness in this affair. If these resolutions mean a mere bluff it is sure to injure the cause of the people of Noakhali. If the committee means business I would like to know the plan of action that is contemplated.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

Shri Benod Behari Sen
Secretary, Noakhali District Congress Committee Noakhali (Bengal)

12. ‘Hindu Sabha Hartal Has No Justification’

Calcutta, Wednesday

‘This hartal has clearly been called for a political purpose just to pretend before a credulous public that the present Government are oppressing the Hindus and, therefore, there is no other alternative but the partition of Bengal,’ observed Mr H.S. Suhrawardy in a statement in the Bengal Legislative Assembly today.

The hartal was called today by the Bengal provincial Hindu Mahasabha in many parts of Calcutta as a protest against alleged police excesses.

The Bengal Legislative Assembly met today with empty opposition benches. The only opposition member present in the house was Mr Amar Krishna Ghosh, General Secretary of the Congress Assembly party.

‘It will not wash. In fact this present hartal has shown how very baseless are such arguments advanced by the protagonists of the Hindu Mahasabha and how attempts are made to take political advantage of the slightest incident and even to create grievances for purposes of political propaganda.

‘Can anyone doubt that a hartal called under present conditions was fraught with grave possibilities of disturbance and lawlessness, and yet a political organization gaily enters the field and calls upon all persons to observe a hartal with the fullest knowledge that it will be accompanied by violence and intimidation....’
13. Grant of Additional Legal Powers to the Armed Forces

Letter from Additional Secretary, Government of Bengal, Home Department, to Secretary, Government of India, Defence Department (Army Branch), 28 April 1947

Home Poll., File No. 184/47, West Bengal State Archives.

Calcutta

Sir,

I have the honour to address you on the subject of the grant of additional legal powers to the armed forces now operating in Bengal in aid of the civil power.

2. Experience of the disturbances that have been a feature of conditions in Calcutta in recent months and which are now present in the city has shown that if the full benefit of the services of the troops, operating in aid of the civil power, is to be obtained it is essential that certain additional legal powers, as detailed below, should be made available by ordinance to them in those areas of the Province declared by the Province Government under the provisions of the proposed Ordinance to be in a disturbed state:

(a) Power to arrest for breaches of a curfew order:
It is not always possible for a military patrol to be accompanied by a police officer and a magistrate and, as the law stands at present, it is not legal for a military patrol to arrest a person found on the streets for the mere breach of a curfew order, whether promulgated under section 144, CrPC or under section 9D of the Bengal Special Powers Ordinance, 1946 as enacted and continued in operation by Bengal Act I of 1947 (copy enclosed). On the other hand it is clearly essential that a curfew order, once promulgated, should not be flouted with impunity in the areas dominated by the troops. To remedy this defect, it is proposed that military personnel of the rank of NCO and above should be given the power to order the troops under their command to arrest without warrant and produce as soon as possible after arrest before a police officer anybody found committing a breach of a curfew order.

(b) Power to order the search of persons in accordance with the provisions of section 17A of the Bengal Special Powers Ordinance, 1946 as enacted and continued in operation by Bengal Act I of 1947. The power under this section was taken by this Government to enable the police to meet the menace of the dagger and the acid bomb. It is not always possible for a police officer to be present with every military formation but searches of the kind provided for by this section have been proved to be of such value that it is considered essential that Viceroy’s Commissioned Officers and King’s Commissioned Officers should have the power to order the troops under their command to carry out searches of the nature provided for by this section in the absence of the police.

(c) Power to enter a house and search therein in order to arrest without warrant persons who have committed or have attempted to commit in their view from such house the following offences—307 IPC (attempt to murder), 324 IPC (voluntarily causing hurt by dangerous weapons or means), 325 IPC (voluntarily causing grievous hurt), 326 IPC (voluntarily causing grievous hurt by dangerous weapons or means), 332 IPC (voluntarily causing hurt to deter public servant from his duty), 333 IPC (voluntarily causing grievous hurt to deter public servant from his duty) and arrest and produce such persons as soon as possible as after arrest before a police officer. As the law stands at present, it is not possible for a military patrol, unaccompanied by a police officer or a magistrate, to enter a house and search therein and arrest without warrant a person detected firing at, bombing or otherwise attacking within the view of the military patrol persons in the street, whether military or otherwise. In the present conditions and in view of the fact that it is not always possible for every military formation to be accompanied by a police officer or a magistrate, it is considered essential that military personnel of the rank of N.C.O. and above should have the power to order military detachments under their command to enter a house for the purpose of searching and arresting a person seen to have committed one or other of the above mentioned offences, without suffering the delay involved in waiting for the arrival of the police.

I am now to request that the Government of India will, at a very early date, favourably consider the above proposals, which have been discussed with and have the concurrence of the Headquarters, Bengal and Assam Area, and move the Governor-General to promulgate, under section 72 as set out in the 9th Schedule to the Government of India Act, 1935 an Ordinance to give effect to these proposals.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant

P.D. Martyn
Additional Secretary to the Government of Bengal

Home Poll, File No. 38/1947, West Bengal State Archives.

The communal situation in Calcutta continues to usurp the largest measure of attention. The joint appeal issued by Mahatma Gandhi and Mr Jinnah, though supported by almost all sections of the press, has different reactions. The Hindu press finds nothing new in the appeal so far as Mahatma Gandhi is concerned and dwells upon the fact that he has all along been an apostle of Hindu-Muslim amity. As regards Mr Jinnah’s part in the appeal, some of the Hindu papers consider it to be of outstanding importance, Ananda Bazar Patrika commenting as follows, ‘It has been made clear by the statement that there is no political object behind lawless acts and acts of coercion done in any part of the country. These are only organized or individual acts of goondaism. The value of Mr Jinnah’s signature will be proved by the extent to which it influences Mr Suhrawardy’s administration.’ Other Hindu papers such as Swaraj observe, ‘Mr Jinnah and his colleagues have characterized brutal violence in the attacks on another community as the war of liberation of the Muslim nation. After encouraging indirectly anti-social activities in this way it is sheer hypocrisy to issue the message of peace in a public statement.’ Azad is inclined to think that this appeal ‘will not bring about lasting peace and prosperity in the country’ for ‘undivided India has to-day proved to be a thorn in the path of peace and independence.’ The statement issued by the Hon’ble the Chief Minister endorsing Gandhi-Jinnah appeal attracts high praise from Statesman but the Hindu press persists in bringing forward the charge if insincerity against it and expresses the opinion that 'Mr Suhrawardy's appeal and requests are bound to fail.'
Communalism: Provinces

In connexion with the economic situation, the police finds themselves between two fires. On the one hand there is the Muslim Press directing its volleys against the Hindu police coming out with tales of alleged atrocities committed by them on the other hand the Hindu press keeps up an almost unceasing fire at the armed Punjabi Police. In all this welter and confusion of stories, a house in Harrison Road comes into very great prominence. Alleged excesses committed on the inmates of this house by some members of the Punjabi armed police call forth a series of extremely better articles from a number of Hindu newspapers inveighing very strongly against the callousness of Government and inviting the Hindus to prepare for their own defence. The Muslim section of the Press generally regards the story of 100, Harrison Road as a 'fantastic fabrication' maliciously concocted with a definite ulterior motive.

Certain press instructions including pre-censorship of news and comments relating to police excesses, warmly supported by the Muslim section of the Press, are characterized by the Hindu papers as gagging and evoke much hostile criticism. The adjournment motions moved in the legislature in this connexion come in for consideration notice, the statements made by the Hon'ble the Chief Minister and other Government spokesmen carrying little conviction to the Hindu papers which generally remain inflexible in their attitude.

Minor interest is attached to some other questions. The absence of His Excellency the Governor from the Governors' Conference comes to be the subject of some unfavourable comment. 'Is not his absence shrouded in mystery,' asks Yugantar. Swaraj does not know 'from what illness he is suffering,' but has no doubt that 'it had done him a friendly service.' The resolutions passed by the Bengal Provincial Congress demanding removal of the Punjabi police and of the present Ministry and formation of regional ministries get a large measure of support from the Hindu session of the Press. The resignation of Lord Pethick Lawrence before the transfer of power was complete is, according to Matrihbumi, 'not without meaning'. In the opinion of Azad, 'people of India should remember him as one who did not hesitate to resort to falsehood in order to obtain the support of a party and was also guilty of breach of trust.' The Bengal Congress Assembly Party Memorandum to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru finds favourable notice from the Hindu Press—which speaks of corruption, inefficiency and waste of public money under the League Ministry in Bengal. The Muslim Press generally lends strong support to the State Acquisition and Tenancy Bill. The Hindu Press, however, is inclined to find in it a proof of the communal mentality of the Ministry and doubts that it is really meant for the benefit of the masses. It further makes the point that the present transitional period is hardly suitable for the introduction and passage of a controversial bill of this nature.

SA

15. Communal Disturbances in Calcutta

Telegram from A.K. Ghosh and Bejoysingh Nahar to Louis Mountbatten, Jawaharlal Nehru, Vallabhbhai Patel, Kiranshankar Roy, Surendramohan Ghosh, 29 April 1947

COMMUNAL TROUBLES IN CALCUTTA CONTINUE UNABATED. SITUATION IN THE MOFUSSIL ALSO FAST DETERIORATING. PRESENCE OF CONGRESS MEMBERS OF BENGAL LEGISLATURE ESSENTIAL IN THEIR CONSTITUENCIES. MANY MEMBERS ABSENT FOR CONSTITUENT ASSEMBLY. FAR-REACHING BILLS OF HIGHLY COMMUNAL AND CONTROVERSIAL NATURE BEING RUSHED THROUGH THE LEGISLATURES WITHOUT PROPER NOTICE AND ADEQUATE CONSIDERATION. SITUATION WILL GROW WORSE IF THESE BILLS BE TAKEN UP NOW. CONGRESS MEMBERS OF THE BENGAL ASSEMBLY AND COUNCIL SOLICIT YOUR EXCELLENCIES IMMEDIATE INTERVENTION FOR PROROGUING THE HOUSES.

A.K. GHOSH
GENERAL SECRETARY CONGRESS ASSEMBLY PARTY
BEJOYSINGH NAHAR
SECRETARY BENGAL CONGRESS COUNCIL PARTY

16. ‘Realization of Collective Fines’
   Extract from a Report from Morning News, 1 May 1947
   Home Poll, File No. 215/47, West Bengal State Archives.

The realization of collective fines in Calcutta, notified from time to time, has commenced from April 17, 1947. Persons liable may pay their fines in cash to the authorized officers at the collection centres (local thanas) between 10 a.m. and 1 p.m. on the dates specified in the demand notices.

In the case of fine of Rs 50 and above, challans have been issued with the demand notices. The payees may also credit the amount at the Treasuries at Alipore and Calcutta Collectorate.

Collective fines may also be paid at the Collective Fines Office at Anderson House (top floor), Alipore, between 11 a.m. and 1 p.m. on open days. Failure to pay as in the notice of demand will be followed by issue of Warrant for the levy of the fine.

If any person liable for a portion of the collective fine wishes to file any objection, he may apply in the special form obtainable at the Collective Fines Office, Anderson House, (top floor), Alipore. Such objection will not be considered unless it is accompanied by a copy of the challan or of the receipt, showing payment of the fine, together with any other evidence in support of the grounds of objection. The petition of the objection has to be addressed to the Special Officer, Home (Political) Department, at the above address. If the objection is allowed the fine paid will be refunded in accordance with the orders passed.

17. Report on Bengal Province
   Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bengal for the Second Half of April 1947, 3 May 1947
   Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

I—Political

The latest developments in the general politico-communal situation in Calcutta have continued to give cause for the greatest unease and the general picture of the situation in the Province as a whole, taking into consideration the political forces at work and the declared intentions of political leaders, must be regarded with disquiet.

2. In Calcutta the fortunately sporadic but nevertheless determined employment of bombs, revolvers and acid has become a daily feature of events—a feature which must be accepted as marking a very definite stage in the campaign that may be expected to be waged in the months to come for political recognition and freedom.

3. In spite of impassioned appeals for unity and peace the closing of the ranks of the various political parties has been more and more emphasized and threats of dissociation with the present regime have been more and more frequently heard while attacks on Government and its servants have become more violent. Present tendencies, in fact, continue to emphasize very clearly indeed the complete helplessness of the leaders of all political parties to control the members of the various communities in the situation in which the Province finds itself at present, while the openly expressed inability of members of the various communities to ‘get together’ to bring about any sort of settlement in the city emphasizes the fundamental unwillingness and inability to co-operate and the increase of communal discord.

4. Needless to say the Hindu section of the community, bitterly hostile as they are to the present regime, has taken the fullest political advantage of the present troubles in their campaign for the achievement of partition and their attempt to bring about the downfall of the present system. The partition movement, in fact, referred to as a likely major development in recent reports, has taken hold of the imagination of large sections of the Hindu community, and present indications are that partition has been accepted as inevitable by large sections of the same community. Admittedly this view is far from unanimous and certain Hindu organizations taking their cue from Mr Sarat Bose—the Forward Bloc, the Revolutionary Socialist Party—are attempting to prevent the proposal so actively sponsored by the Mahasabha and the Bengal Provincial Congress Committee. The local Muslim League organizations, too, have attempted in recent weeks to counter the agitation by several offers including that of a sovereign united larger Bengal, sponsored by the Chief Minister, but from information available it does not appear that to the Hindus of West Bengal and even to large sections of the Hindus of Eastern Bengal the counter proposals are likely to prove acceptable.

5. From West Bengal itself it is clear that the proposed partition continues to be the centre of attraction in the political field and the general consensus of opinion in this area is one of overwhelming support for the proposal. A number of meetings have been held, including one attended by some 1,200 persons of Bankura in support of the idea. Fortunately, though the movement is growing it has remained perfectly peaceful as yet though the proposal to raise thousands of volunteers in support of the scheme, if successful, may give rise to trouble later. In the Presidency Division, too, despite the Communists and Forward Blocists, the movement is receiving support and in Dacca the subject continues to be the chief consideration in political quarters. Even in Chittagong the agitation continues to grow with signs that the Muslims are becoming reconciled to the idea. In Calcutta itself considerable publicity has been given through organized parties and a number of meetings, notably one attended by some 2,000 persons with Mr N.C. Chatterjee as President, have been held advocating the proposal.

6. In the capital, however, the main political issue of the moment has been submerged in the politico-communal incidents that have followed each other with quick succession. The highlight on the political side has undoubtedly been the hartal staged on the 23rd, the alleged purpose of which was to protest against police excesses in Calcutta. The CPI, TUC, Marwaris and Mahasabha interests were prominent in staging this demonstration which was utilized to stress the need for organizing Hindu defence against the alleged anti-Hindu pro-Muslim policy of the Ministry. The proposal was actively supported by the student movement notably the Forward Bloc Students’ Bureau who have been for some time attempting to agitate in a violent manner against the introduction of additional Muslim police into the city. On the day itself all the shops, daily markets, cinemas, jute presses and educational institutions in Hindu localities in the town and suburbs were completely closed. Employees of almost all the Banks and mercantile firms absented themselves from work. The attendance at Government offices was extremely small. All public conveyances except for a few trams and buses, taxis, rickshaws and carts did not ply. Attempts to bring out trams were frustrated by brick batting by miscreants. The success of the hartal in large quarters of the city was complete and is reported to have very seriously perturbed sections of the Muslim League. In Muslim quarters, however, trade and commerce were carried on normally, but for the absence of transport.

7. The pressing needs and problems first of the capital and then of the Province itself have almost entirely diverted attention from the all-India field of politics, though there has been a very acute realization that the future of the Province may already have been decided over their heads in favour of a partition....

II—Communal

15. In the Bengal of today political and communal matters are indistinguishable and the remarks relating to the political situation thus apply to the communal situation which must be regarded in Calcutta as in every way unsatisfactory. Apart from Calcutta itself including Howrah town, the situation in the rest of the Province though outwardly not disturbed barring a few minor incidents must yet be regarded as potentially dangerous.

16. The closing of the ranks of the political parties, the realization that with freedom within their grasp every nerve must be strained to gain advantage over political opponents and for this purpose to take advantage of if not actively to sponsor and support communal disturbances have all played their part in bringing about a deterioration in the situation in Calcutta particularly since the hartal of the 23rd. Statistics indicate that during the period there have been 321 incidents resulting in 42 deaths and 368 injuries. As will be apparent from the figures, the incidents themselves have only been spasmodic and have not affected large sections of the city at all though, on the other hand, the comparatively small affected area of the initial stages of the disturbances late in March has now been enlarged and at present the curfew orders cover 13 out of the 26 police-stations of the city.

17. The period has been characterized by a definite campaign against Government and its officers, particularly the armed police sponsored by the Hindu opponents of Government and met by counter-attacks against the Hindu section of the armed police by the Muslim populace. The attacks on the police—by Muslims on the Gurkhas and by Hindus on the Punjabi Muslims—have been frequent and determined—attacks which were not a feature of the August disturbances and must unquestionably be ascribed to political causes. An ominous feature has been the increasing use of firearms and acid—by the members of different communities on each other and on the police. Large scale searches have resulted in acid, ammunition and weapons of various kinds being discovered both in bustees as well as in the houses of respectable persons. Stringent measures have been taken to localise the disturbances and arrest their course. Following the incidents referred to above 1,299 arrests have been made. The imposition of a curfew has been found to be most effective in controlling the situation during the night and this weapon has in consequence been freely used and orders for the imposition of curfew for periods up to forty-eight hours (leaving short intervals for the obtaining of food) have been made where necessary. Large-scale searches have been carried out with a view to the rounding up of known bad characters, it being realized, however, that much of the present disorder has a political motive and failing an unequivocal determination by political persons of all grades to call a halt a cessation of the present troubles is unlikely. The isolation of certain parts of the city to members of the opposite community is more marked than ever with consequent disastrous effects on trade, commerce and life generally. Corporation services have been working with difficulty and business is hampered and at a standstill in many areas. The breakdown in the morale of the Gurkha armed police following a series of attacks on the Nepalese in the town and attacks by the Muslim section on the force itself has thrown an additional strain on the rest of the force partly met by the drafting in of Bengal Police reinforcements and the greater employment of the military who are now dominating seven police-stations in the city.

18. In Howrah town considerable tension still continues and here too there has been a marked tendency to use firearms and acid bombs. The number of killed (12) and injured (36) during the period shows an increase of the figures of the last fortnight. Very considerable vigour has been shown in the rounding up of bad characters.

19. As regards the general situation in West Bengal apart from Howrah a number of minor incidents have been reported from the other districts of the Division except from Bankura where, however, there is mutual suspicion and distrust and Birbhum where the relations between the two communities have remained outwardly friendly. Fortunately however despite the example of Howrah town no serious situation developed elsewhere though in the Katwa subdivision of Burdwan the partition movement is reported to have given rise to a certain amount of communal tension during the annual procession of local deities. Lack of incident but general mistrust and suspicion of one community towards the other has been noticeable in the Presidency Division. Similar is the situation in the Rajshahi Division where the movement in favour of partition has tended to increase the tension. It is unfortunate that there have been some incidents in Dacca towards the end of the period resulting in the imposition of a curfew order and the defence scheme but the most recent indications are that the situation is well under control.

In Chittagong the general situation has remained unchanged. Further reports of the molestation of Hindus by Muslims have been received from the Tippera district while the absence of similar reports from Noakhali, where such incidents are known to have occurred, is considered by the Commissioner to be disquietening. The left wing of the Feni Muslim League are reported to be holding secret meetings advocating the economic boycott of the Hindus....

18. No Law and Order in Calcutta

Letter from M.N. Saha to Rajendra Prasad, 4 May 1947
R.P. Papers, F. No. 6-I/45-6-7, NAI.

Calcutta

Dear Dr Rajendra Prasad,

I have to give you a piece of very bad news. Sir Jadunath Sarkar’s son, Dr Abani Nath Sarkar, was stabbed by an assassin on the footpath near the Church at Dhurmatollah—Esplanade junction at 6 p.m. when there was full daylight, and expired 36 hours later at the Medical College Hospital. Sir Jadunath felt the shock so much that he has aged considerably and his life has been shortened.
Dr Abani N. Sarkar was a brilliant student of the Calcutta University in Physics, and took his Ph.D. about 1926 in London. After that, he had operation of his tonsils, and became stone deaf. On account of this physical defect, he could not be confirmed in any job. He was for some time Reader in Physics in the Muslim University, Aligarh, and for some time served in the Meteorological Department. As he could not get any job, his father started for him a small press. He has two sons, 15 and 13. On the day of occurrence, he was returning from his press and looking for a train near the Church, when the assassin rushed from a lane, and made a 10’ long cut through the lower part of his belly and ran way. His cries brought an Anglo-Indian young man called Erich, and a number of Padres who were having their Sunday Mass in the Church. They rendered whatever aid they could on the spot, and hurried him to the Calcutta Medical College. He lingered for 36 hours and then expired. His parents and relatives had time to see him. He communicated to his father, in feeble writing before his father, that his assailant looked like a college student.

While Abani was being attended to in the Medical College, a Moslem goonda was brought to the same place in a dying condition. He had stabbed a Hindu, but was caught, and was so severely beaten that he was on the point of death. In his dying declaration, he said that he had sold his life for 25 rupees. He said that there was an organization which pays 25 rupees for every Hindu murdered, and 15 rupees for every Hindu wounded. This was overheard by the Padres and the Anglo-Indian boy, and the medical attendants. They could not make out the name of the organization. Whether the statement has been recorded is not known.

Several other prominent men have been murdered. As news is now censored by the Bengal Government, it is not possible to know all names. But one which has come to our notice is Mr S. Das, an electrical engineer and grandson of the late Sarat Ch. Das, Tibetan Explorer in 1880. He with his two cousins had gone to Park Circus, to their ancestral house which they had abandoned on account of these disturbances, and while removing certain valuables were set on by 6 goondas in open daylight with flashing knives. A sergeant rushed in, but Das was fatally stabbed, and his cousins escaped with some wounds.

This may give you some picture of Calcutta. There is no law and order, people are being murdered in broad daylight. Hindus had to abandon their houses in border areas. Most of these incidents are not allowed to appear in the papers. The areas infested by the assassins are well known, but no action is being taken against them.

Thousands of telegrams are being sent to the Central Government supporting partition, as that appears to be the only solution. But I am told by a high officer in the Telegraph Department that these are being withheld by orders of the Bengal Government in exercise of their emergency powers. The Department is now under Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar, and he is said to be trying hard to put communally-minded Moslem officers in key positions. So probably most of these telegrams are not reaching the Central Government.

I hope the members of the Interim Government will support the partition move, and thus save Bengal Hindus, and the city of Calcutta, from utter ruin which now faces them.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
M.N. Saha
19. Enquiries into Noakhali Riots
Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 7 May 1947

New Delhi

MY DEAR LORD MOUNTBATTEN,
I have seen reports in the Press that Suhrawardy refuses to publish the reports of officers who were appointed to make enquiries into the Noakhali disturbances. I feel that the Central Government would be interested in these reports. It is possible, however, that if a demand went from us, Suhrawardy would refuse.

The only other way we can obtain them is through HE the Governor of Bengal and I would be grateful if he could be requested to send a copy.

Yours sincerely,
VALLABHBHAI PATEL

20. Political Manoeuvrings Affecting Bengal Police Force
Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 7 May 1947

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,
I am sending herewith a copy of the report which the Director of the Intelligence Bureau has received from the Inspector-General of Police, Bengal. You will notice that ministerial interference in the actions of the police and in internal matters like transfers, and other things is seriously affecting the morale of the police force. The Director of Intelligence of the Defence Department has, in another connection, mentioned that in the event of any large-scale disturbance in Eastern India, the Army will be presented with an increased problem owing to the state of the police forces in Bihar and not Calcutta. It seems that our problem in Bengal would not be merely Calcutta, but all over.

2. Regarding Bihar police, I have had discussions with the Bihar Premier and will be writing to you separately.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

ENCLOSURE

28 April 1947

The police have continued to work satisfactorily in very trying circumstances and discipline has on the whole been good.

Morale outwardly appears to be high, but there are increasingly obvious circumstances which will inevitably tend to cause deterioration.

News of the police mutiny in Bihar was received with considerable interest but, though the events were freely discussed, there have been no apparent repercussions in Bengal. Posters issued by the CSP urging the Bengal police to follow the example of their brethren in Bihar have been found in one district. Copies of appeals addressed 'Bharatiya Police Bahinir Kachhe' have also been traced and seized from a private house.

Government's delay in issuing final orders on pay scales continues to involve unfavourable comment.

The ever increasing communal tension amongst the populace is inevitably having an adverse effect on unity in the subordinate ranks, which is in no way mitigated by Government's frequently repeated appeals to the people to restore communal harmony, possibly because these appeals have so far been ineffective. Officers and men are perturbed by the political considerations which influence the result of police action generally and which are viewed with considerable misgiving by all ranks. In Noakhali district there is a distinct feeling that vigorous action against the aggressor community will not meet with the approval of those in power. Needless to say, steps are being taken to endeavour to counteract this feeling, but circumstances make it difficult to eradicate the justifiable impression, which is gaining ground throughout the province, that the authority of superior police officers is being undermined. Ministerial intervention in such matters as transfers within a district, disciplinary action taken by competent authority and the normal investigation of crime has strengthened this impression. The authority of superior officers has always been highly respected in the past, and the undermining of such authority is viewed with dismay and alarm by officers and men, both Muslim and Hindu. There are indications that a situation has been created in which it has become possible for persons claiming responsibility to question subordinate officers regarding the ability of their superiors. All ranks of both communities (including officers of the IP) fear the results of communal favouritism which is likely to result from ministerial intervention in domestic matters and are apprehensive that merit will count for nothing in the matter of promotion and disciplinary action in respect of alleged offences. These circumstances are having an increasingly deleterious effect on the morale of the force as a whole.

S.G. Taylor
I.G. of Police, Bengal

21. Call for Peaceful Relations between Hindus and Muslims

M.K. Gandhi's Speech at a Prayer Meeting at Sodepur, 10 May 1947

Speaking at the prayer gathering Mahatma Gandhi addressed himself to two questions that were asked of him. In view of the sourness between Hindus and Muslims that seemed to be daily growing, was it possible for the two to become friends? He answered emphatically that the enmity could not last for ever. They were brothers and must remain so in spite of temporary insanity. But perpetual feud was not an impossibility between communities as it was not between two individuals. He hoped that that would not happen, for he prophesied that in that case they would bury the two religions in India and would sell their freedom for a mess of pottage.

The second question was, could partition of Bengal be avoided in view of the rising Hindu opinion in its favour. Gandhiji recognized the force of that opinion. He was not in a position to pronounce an opinion. But he could say without fear of contradiction that if there was partition, the Muslim majority would be responsible for it, and what was more, the Muslim Government that was in power. If he were the Chief Minister of Bengal, he would plead with his Hindu brethren to forget the past. He would say to them that he was as much a Bengali as they were. Differences in religion could not part the two. He and they spoke the same language, had inherited the same culture. All that was Bengal’s was common to both, of which both could be equally proud. Bengal was Bengal. It was neither the Punjab nor Bombay nor anything else.

If the Chief Minister could possibly take up that attitude, he (the speaker) would undertake to go with him from place to place and reason with Hindu audiences and he made bold to say that there would not be a Hindu opponent left of the unity of Bengal, the unity for which Hindus and Mussalmans had fought together so valiantly and undone ‘the settled fact’ of so powerful a Viceroy as Lord Curzon. If he were Suhrawardy he would invite the Hindus to partition his body before they thought of partitioning Bengal. If he had that sturdy love for Bengal and Bengalis, whether Hindus or Mussalmans, that love would melt the stoniest Hindu heart. As it was, fear and suspicion had seized the Hindu mind.

He could not forget Noakhali or even Calcutta, if all he heard was true, as it was equally true of the Muslim mind in Bihar and he had not hesitated to tell the Hindus of Bihar that they should remove all suspicion and fear from the Muslim mind. He believed in the sovereign rule of the law of love which made no distinction of race, colour, caste or creed. He was glad that he had in Quaid-e-Azam Jinnah a powerful partner in the belief, which was no secret from the world.

Amrita Bazar Patrika, 11-5-1947

22. Demand for Removal of Bengal Ministry

Extract from a Letter from K.C. Neogy to Vallabhbhai Patel, 11 May 1947

Simla

My dear Sardarji,

...The latest statement of [H.S.] Suhrawardy conveys a definite threat that Calcutta will be sacked and burnt in case the partition idea is favoured....

This statement of Suhrawardy’s reinforces the necessity of suppression of the present Ministry before any declaration favouring partition of Bengal [is] made. From one point of view, a demand for the enforcement of Section 93 of the Government of India Act in the case of Bengal may be considered to be inconsistent with the resistance that is being offered by the Congress to the same idea as put forward by the League in the case of the North West Frontier Province. There is, however, an essential difference between the two cases. In the case of Bengal, if the British Government’s attitude is to leave the decision as regards partition of the province to the free judgment of the people concerned, a partisan Government with a black record cannot be allowed to function, particularly in the face of its open threats of violence and wholesale destruction. A neutral authority must in all fairness be installed in Bengal if the expression of public opinion on the question of partition is to be free and uninfluenced by coercion and a campaign of murder and arson.

I came here on the 1st of this month in connection with the meetings of the Indian Railway Enquiry Committee, and am likely to go down to Delhi for a few days towards the end of June.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Being so far away from Calcutta and Delhi, I naturally feel very anxious about the developments that are taking place in the situation in Bengal. It is needless for me to say that all our eyes are turned towards you in the hope that you will not fail to take whatever action is possible to save Bengal and Calcutta from utter ruin and bloodshed.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

K.C. Neogy

23. Report on Bengal Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bengal for the First Half of May 1947, 17 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

... II. Communal.

14. Outwardly there has been an improvement in the situation during the period though the possibility of serious trouble developing anywhere, at any time, cannot be ignored. The disappointing situation in Calcutta referred to in the last report fortunately continued for only a few days longer and by the end of the first week a very definite improvement took place. Throughout the period 76 incidents were reported, resulting in 12 deaths and 63 injuries. This improvement has continued up to the time of writing. It is difficult, if not impossible, to give complete reasons for the marked decrease in the number of incidents, for it cannot be maintained that there has been any fundamental change in the mental outlook of the members of the two communities. Suspicion and distrust remain and movement and business generally are hampered by an unwillingness to enter areas of the town inhabited by the opposite community, the presence of the curfew in certain areas and a determination to return home as early as possible in the afternoon. Whatever may be the other reasons for the improvement in the situation, it is clear that one reason for the present improvement has been the very satisfactory results obtained from extensive cordonning followed by house searches and the systematic and liberal use of the powers given by the Special Powers Ordinance (now Bengal Act I of 1946) to search (in the manner known as ‘frisking’ in the USA) persons passing along the streets. The results from such searches have been most encouraging to the authorities: one search, for instance, resulted in the arrest of 55 persons many of whom were bad characters and the discovery of 13 knives and a big razor on the bodies of persons arrested. In these operations military co-operation was invaluable. A policy of systematic arrests following incidents has been pursued and during the period 821 persons were arrested excluding those arrested in connection with the curfew orders. As a result of the improvement it has been possible to lift the curfew in large areas of the city and to begin to withdraw the military according to a definite programme.

15. The improvement in Calcutta has not been followed by a similar improvement in Howrah where, allowing for difference of scale, the situation still cannot be regarded as satisfactory. The incidents—60 in number—have resulted in 8 deaths and 34 injuries. Features of the Howrah situation have been the increasing use of firearms and bombs, aggressiveness on the part of Hindus and attacks on the police. Fortunately, however, public morale continues to be high—shops are open and offices well attended. Searches up to date have had comparatively poor results though the arrest of bad characters continues: the use of firearms and bombs are held to indicate the emergence of a new class of bad characters from the bhadralog classes. Mixed pickets have done something to remove the prejudice in Hindu circles against the Punjabi Muslim constables and on the recommendation of local Peace Committees bodies of four volunteers—two Hindus and two Muslims—have been attached to each picket at certain posts.

16. Elsewhere in the Division, despite the situation in Howrah the communal situation has been quiet. The Presidency Division has been free from any trouble despite events in Calcutta. In North Bengal, too, no incident of importance has taken place. In Dacca as a result of stringent measures promptly taken by the local authorities, the trouble referred to in the last report has not spread; it is clear that there was a marked disinclination of the general populace to prolong the disturbances. In the Chittagong Division, the situation in the Chittagong district has remained satisfactory, though the Muslim National Guards are again involved in a case of hooliganism and a police case has been started against the offenders. In Tippera the Gandhi-Jinnah appeal is reported to have been unheeded and both in this district as well as in Noakhali petty persecution of the Hindus is the order of the day—in most cases the Hindus being too terrified to go to the police and content themselves by sending exaggerated reports to the Congress. In Noakhali where the situation has been exhaustively reviewed by the Commissioner during the early part of the period the situation is reported to be by no means healthy and the harassment of the Hindu population is still widespread. Peace Committees are supposed to have been formed in the affected areas but for the most part they now appear to be defunct and, in their place, Conciliation Committees, consisting of an equal number of leading Hindus and Muslims, are proposed.

24. Troops Needed for Safeguarding Calcutta

Letter from S.P. Jain to Vallabhbhai Patel, 23 May 1947

My dear Sardar Sahib,

I have the highest admiration for the manner in which you are conducting the affairs of India from the Centre at this most difficult and critical time. We all feel that it is only with your clear vision and farsighted leadership that India can hope to steer through the difficult present. I was at Delhi last week but I did not disturb you. I knew that you would be extremely busy. We are all anxious that the stand you have taken should be maintained as in that alone we find any gleam of hope for the future.

Calcutta is passing through anxious times. There is genuine apprehension that Muslims will attempt destruction of property on a vast scale. The policy and actions of the Ministry only aggravate the disconcerting and panicky feeling. Even at this most critical time, we find Bengal devoid of clear leadership. Unfortunate confusion is created by the existence of many leaders each ploughing his lonely furrows. It is imperative that the peace and security of the citizens should be guaranteed. It will be very desirable to keep sufficient troops near at hand in Calcutta to meet any emergency. You will no doubt recollect that the report that the Central Government would send necessary troops to Assam in the event of serious developments had a sobering effect on the Muslim agitators. I wish the report that two brigades have come to Calcutta [was] true. We are confident that this matter will receive your serious consideration.

With regards and best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

S.P. Jain

25. Measures Proposed to Prevent Trouble in Calcutta
Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to S.P. Jain, 1 June 1947

New Delhi

Dear Friend,

I have received your letter of 23 May 1947, and I thank you for the appreciation of the work that we have been doing.

We are aware of the apprehension felt by the non-Muslim population in Calcutta by the possible attempts at destruction of property by the Muslims, and we have taken all precautions to prevent such a catastrophe. You must have seen the broadcast of the Governor of Bengal who has spoken for the first time about his preparedness to meet with the situation and has assured the people that he will do his best to prevent destruction and vandalism. Enough force has been sent to Calcutta and there is complete preparation to meet with any situation that may arise.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

26. Report on Bengal Province
Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bengal for the Second Half of May 1947, 4 June 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

...II—COMMUNAL

14. The intense apprehension and unease in the political field has had its inevitable repercussions on the communal situation in Calcutta and though, fortunately, in the rest of the Province (apart from Howrah town), the communal situation has not been marked by any outward manifestations of communal hatred and dislike, in Calcutta the situation has taken a very definite turn for the worst. In the last report it was found difficult to ascribe any convincing reasons for the improvement that occurred during that period; this fortnight it is equally difficult to ascribe particularly convincing reasons for the deterioration that has taken place, beyond linking the deterioration with the intense political discussions that have taken place and the resulting apprehension that is undoubtedly present in all quarters as a result of the announcement to be made early in June. A further factor which cannot be ignored is the undoubted fact that, in Muslim circles, there is a very definite feeling that the continuance, if not intensification, of the present incidents is due to the unwillingness of the Mahasabha and other political parties to see peace restored in the city—for with peace one of the main arguments in favour of partition and the dissolution of the present Ministry would go. It is certain, too, that both parties apprehend trouble and, in fact, on the 25th the Imams of certain mosques warned the Muslims to keep themselves ready to defend themselves against the attacks which the Hindus would launch on 2nd June or as soon as His Excellency the Viceroy announces that the partition of Bengal will not be granted. It is perhaps significant in this connection that, following the house-search of a leading Mahasabha supporter, bombs and acid were discovered in his residence.

The degeneration in the Calcutta situation which has marked the whole period is reflected in the statistics for the period. Two hundred and seventy-eight incidents have been reported resulting in 37 deaths and 304 injuries. Police and military action has been fully maintained and as a result of the degeneration the military have had to be brought back in strength into the city and now dominate seven police-stations. House-searches and the ‘frisking’ of wayfarers in selected areas continue. The policy of swift arrests in the vicinity of incidents continues and during the period (sic) 1,806 persons were arrested, in addition to those arrested for breaches of the curfew orders. Curfew orders, imposed for extensive periods as the situation demands, have also continued to be one of the main weapons employed to bring the situation under control. The use of firearms and acid by members of the public continues to be a feature of the Calcutta situation and a number of serious incidents have occurred involving explosives and the use of guns by the public. The use of empty houses by miscreants as shelters from which to open fire has become a feature of the situation. A development which may have serious implications should still more serious trouble develop in June has been the switch-over of the trouble from the suburbs to the centre of the city notably in the police-stations of Taltolla, Bowbazar and Jorasanko.

15. In Howrah, on the other hand, there has been some improvement in the situation mirrored in the statistics of the period: the number of incidents being 39, the number of dead 7 and the number of injured 19. Public morale continues to remain high and following the improvement in the situation curfew orders have been considerably relaxed. Proposals are under consideration to relax them even further in the near future. The total number of arrests following incidents have been 181 and very considerable use has been made of the powers to cordon and search residential houses as well to ‘frisk’ pedestrians. On 22nd May, for instance, over 1,500 persons were searched in the streets under these powers though on this occasion as well as on other occasions without result. Disheartening though this lack of result has been, it is yet felt that the use of these powers has had a considerable deterrent effect on bad characters and has prevented them from moving about with knives and other weapons as freely as they would otherwise have done. The results of house-searches have been rather more successful notably on the 25th when a live bomb, two country made guns, acid and other weapons were recovered following a house-search, but on the whole, here too, searches have been notably less conducive of result than those in Calcutta where surprisingly effective action has been taken.

16. Fortunately communal incidents have been almost entirely absent elsewhere in the Province.

The partition movement has been responsible for some deterioration in communal relations in the district of Burdwan and tension in Bankura and Birbhum is also reported. The only overt act, however, took place in Midnapore where the relations between the Bihari Muslim refugees at Salbani and the local inhabitants, mostly Scheduled Caste Hindus, have been strained for some time as a result of petty incidents. The situation recently came to a head when the Garrison Engineer was attacked following the search of the camp for stolen furniture belonging to the M.E.S. Soon after the refugees set fire to three small villages in the vicinity of the camp. The villagers were at first restrained by local Congress leaders but eventually made a mass attack on the camp and set fire to it: the police were forced to open fire, nine persons being killed. Order has now been restored but there is considerable apprehension of serious trouble in the future....

27. Alternate Path to Hindu-Muslim Unity

Letter from Abhay Charan De to J.B. Kripalani, President, AICC, 17 June 1947
AICC Papers, File No. C-8/1946, NMML.

Calcutta

Dear Sir,

Ghose read with great care your speeches in the last meeting of the AICC at New Delhi and the following portion of your speech is of special interest to us. You have said among other things—'Even Mahatma Gandhi has not yet found a way of tackling the problem on a mass scale. When he taught non-violent non-cooperation, he had shown a definite method which we could at least mechanically follow. Today he himself is groping in the dark. His efforts in Noakhali... Mahatma Gandhi is saying that he is solving the problem of Hindu-Muslim unity for the whole of India in Bihar. It might be: but it is difficult to see how that is being done. There is no definite steps as in non-violent non-cooperation that led to this desired goal. That is why I am not with him today. Though Mahatma Gandhi could enunciate policies, that had in the main ... carried out by others who were not converted to his way of thinking.'

Mahatma Gandhi and yourself along with your many co-workers, are undoubtedly all very great souls and in comparison to that I am a street-fellow without any asset worth mentioning, but you may know the maxim that even from the very lowest creature, the greatest man can learn something as from the medicinal qualities of an insignificant herb great relief is sometimes obtained.

In that broad view if you kindly read my expressions given below, I think you may derive some great hint which can solve the very great problem you are all now confronted with?

I had before this, several times made attempt to see Mahatma Gandhi but in most cases I was not replied even to my requests and in some cases Raj Kumari Amrit Kaur replied that Mahatma Gandhi was very busily engaged and I can seek for another time to see him and so forth. The same reply was received even from Pandit Jawaharlal’s secretary and I don’t know what reply I can expect from your goodself.

Any way it is my duty to tell you something which is absolutely right and I pray to God that my attempt with you, may not be a failure.

The thing is that unless a man is a liberated soul, he is polluted with the following discrepancies, however great he may be. The discrepancies are as follows:

1) One is apt to commit mistake.
2) One is apt to accept the untruth as truth.
3) One is apt to deceive others in course of ordinary dealings.
4) One is apt to visualize or experience everything imperfectly, due to the imperfect senses.
But one who is a liberated soul is always immune from the above deficiencies. It is always right therefore to follow the way of thinking by persons who are transcendental to all the above mentioned defects. I can dare say, that Mahatma Gandhi, however great he may be, is not yet a liberated soul like great sages as Narada, Vyasa or like the Personality of Godhead Sree Krishna. It is therefore quite easy to understand that all his way of thinking is somehow or other polluted with the above mentioned four kinds of deficiencies.

An imperfect non-liberated soul, however great he may be in the estimation of many other non-liberated or conditioned souls, is always apt to commit the above four principles. As such all the non-standard and manufactured way of thinking may serve for the time being or for a certain period but it is not possible to drag any such time-serving method or imperfect way for all the time to come. I can dare say also therefore that Mahatma Gandhi’s non-violent non-cooperation might have been effective means to a certain end but that is not a perfect way to serve for all the time.

The perfect way is enunciated in the ‘Bhagwat Geeta’, that is enunciated by the Personality of Godhead. If you believe therefore in the ways of ‘Bhagwat Geeta’ and I think you must believe so as you profess to be a Hindu, you can take up the ways of ‘Bhagwat Geeta’ for solution of all your problems. You may induce at the same time Mahatma Gandhi or Pandit Jawaharlal (if possible) to take up this way of thinking without any unnecessary and dogmatic interpretations.

The ways of ‘Bhagwat Geeta’ can solve the question of Hindu-Muslim unity in a very simple and decent way. You will not then have to grope in the dark. The light is there in the most practical way but if you close eyes you cannot see to it. What all require to do is that we must first of all learn the way ourselves from the right authority and then put it into action for others. That is a privilege for one who is born in the land of ‘Bharatmata’ but unfortunately we look to outsiders more than to our own great men. The way of ‘Bhagwat Geeta’ is true for all the times, all the places and for all the peoples. We are prepared to prove this fact by all means and we can demonstrate the way in the most practical manner with immediate good results.

The ways of ‘Bhagwat Geeta’ will not only therefore prove effective in the matter of Hindu-Muslim unity but also it can help you and Mahatma Gandhi for a world unity in the most perfect way inconceivable by any human brain.

We wish that Mahatma Gandhi may kindly take up the way of thinking as enunciated in the ‘Bhagwat Geeta’ without giving much importance to his own, and preach the same for the benefit of one and all. If he does so, after knowing the same himself, many people in the world, what to speak of the Indian people, will follow him for a great achievement.

If you are therefore in right earnest to know the way as it is and in the practical way or for all practical purposes, then myself and a band of workers can render you our humble services in this connection without any obligation on your part. Awaiting your early reply with interest.

Yours faithfully,
Abhay Charan De
B. Bihar

1. Hindus Should Be Self-righteous

Extracts from M.K. Gandhi’s Bihar Tour Diary
Harijan, 23 March 1947.

5-3-‘47

As this was Gandhiji’s first visit to Bihar after an interval of seven years there was a huge gathering to greet him at the prayer meeting on the famous maidan of Patna.... He then referred to the mission which had brought him to Bihar, the occasion being Dr Syed Mahmud’s letter sent through his private secretary. He had flattered himself with the belief that it will be unnecessary for him to visit what he affectionately described as ‘his Bihar’ by right of service. But Dr Mahmud’s letter led him to think that all was not as well as it should be. He knew that what the Hindus of Bihar had done towards their brethren, the Muslims, was infinitely worse than what Noakhali had done. He had hoped that they had done or were doing all the reparations that were possible and that was in magnitude as great as the crime. That meant that if there was real repentance, they should prove the truth of the great saying, ‘The greater the sinner, the greater the sin.’ He hoped that the Bihar Hindus will not be guilty of self-righteousness by saying that the Biharis, who had forgotten in a fit of insanity that they were human beings, were drawn from the goonda elements for whom the Congressmen of Bihar could not be held responsible. If they adopted the attitude of self-righteousness, they would reduce the Congress to a miserable party, whereas the Congress claimed, and he had repeated the claim in London at the Round Table Conference he had attended, that of all the organizations in India the Congress was the only one organization which rightfully claimed to represent the whole of India, whether it was called French India or Portuguese India or the India of the States, because the Congress claimed by right of service to represent not only the nominal Congressmen or its sympathizers but also its enemies. Therefore, the Congress had to make itself responsible for the misdeeds of all communities and all classes. It should be its proud privilege to better and improve the moral, material and physical condition of the whole of India to entitle it to the proud claim it had made ever since its existence. As a matter of fact, it would be wrong even to say that there was not a single Congressman involved in the mad upheaval. That many Congressmen had staked their lives in order to save their Muslim friends and brethren was no answer to the charge that was justly hurled against the Bihar Hindus by indignant and injured Muslims who did not hesitate to describe the Bihar crime as having no parallel in history. If he was so minded, he would be able to show that there were to be found in history examples of human monsters having done crimes even worse than those of the Hindus of Bihar. But he did not want to be guilty of making comparisons and weigh the greatness of crimes in golden scales. On the contrary, a truly repentant man would never want to flatter himself by even thinking that he was not as bad as his predecessors. There was a legitimate place for rivalry in doing good and outdoing one’s predecessors and one’s own labours in the act of service. He was therefore grieved to find that there were thoughtless Hindus in all parts of India who falsely hugged the belief that Bihar had arrested the growth of lawlessness that was to be witnessed in Noakhali. He wished to remind them in forcible terms that that way of thinking and doing was the way to perdition and slavery, never to freedom and bravery. It was a cowardly thing for a man to believe that barbarity such as was exhibited could ever protect a civilization or a religion, or defend freedom. He was able from recent first-hand knowledge to say that where there was cowardice on the one hand there was cruelty on the other. The way, therefore, to take reprisals upon Noakhali was to learn how not to copy the barbarous deeds such as Noakhali had proved itself capable of but to return barbarism by manliness which consisted in daring to die without a thought of retaliation and without in any way compromising one’s honour. He warned the audience and through them the whole of India that if they really wished to see India independent in every sense of the term, they must not imitate barbarous methods. Those who resorted to such methods would find that they were retarding the day of India’s deliverance.

6-3-'47

Unlike the previous evening, Gandhiji walked tonight to the prayer ground in perfect peace through a passage lined by lady volunteers. The crowd had also become orderly. Gandhiji began his post-prayer address by complimenting the audience as well as Bari Saheb, the President of the Provincial Congress Committee, and his comrades for the orderliness which had been successfully maintained during the evening. While the Ramadhun was being sung there were some beats out of time. His advice was that they should practice more until both the tune and the time were in perfect unison.

A note had been handed to him reminding him that the Holi was on the following day and people would like to hear his opinion to how it ought to be celebrated. Gandhiji began by saying that he had no doubt in his mind that a religious ceremony like the Holi should never be marked by wild revelry, but by a disciplined effort to put oneself in communion with God.

There was a time, he continued, when the Hindus and the Musalmans lived side by side as peaceful neighbours. If things had today come to such a pass that they could not look upon one another as friends, let them at least not behave as enemies. There was fear among the Musalmans that the occasion of the Holi might be marked by renewed attacks upon them. It was surprising that he was hearing from them what he had heard from the Hindus in Noakhali and Tipperah and he felt ashamed to have to listen to the same tales in Patna as in Noakhali. He would, therefore, venture to say to his Muslim brothers in Bihar what he had said to the Hindus in Noakhali, namely, that they should shed all fear of man and trust God; but he knew that it was a counsel of perfection.

Cries of Vande Mataram, Jai Bharat or Jai Hind frightened the Musalmans today. Were the shouts of Bharat Ki Jai going to mean Musalman ki Kshai? It was a matter of shame that things had been brought to such a pass. He had been meeting several Muslim League friends, who, he felt, had opened their hearts before him and asked him if the Musalmans would not really be allowed to remain in a province like Bihar. The Muslim friends who were in the Congress like Dr Syed Mahmud had also expressed their uneasiness at the present situation. This terrorization of brother by brother, if it were true, was unbearable for him. Were they really going to return one act of madness by another? In that event India could only be drowned in a sea of blood.

Gandhiji was firmly of the opinion that this could never be our fate if we were determined to have it otherwise. His hope lay more in women kind who, he had ever maintained, were the living embodiment of ahimsa and of self-sacrifice, without which ahimsa could never be a reality. Gandhiji wanted everyone to celebrate the Holi in such a manner that every single Muslim felt that the Hindus had not only repented for what had been done to them but had also gathered love for them to an extent which outdid their previous sentiments. If the Holi was marked by this revival of the old friendly relations then indeed it would be a truly religious celebration.

There was one thing more which Gandhiji wanted to tell his audience in the hope that justice would be done wherever his voice could reach. It had been conveyed to him that there were Muslim women even now kept perforce in Hindu homes. If that were true and if, of course, such women were still living, he would expect every one of them to be restored to their homes. The miscreants should show true repentance and every Hindu should consider it his duty to impress upon them that they should repent and courageously face punishment for their misdeeds. If that were too much for them, he would at least expect the women to be restored to him or to Rajendra Babu in perfect safety.

It was not enough that the Hindus should express lip-repentance or compensate the sufferers by means of money. What was really needed was that their hearts should become pure and, in place of the hatred or indifference which was sweeping over them, love should reign so that under its glow every single Muslim man, woman and child felt perfectly secure and free to pursue his or her own religious practices without the least let or hindrance. Let us all, he prayed, make the Holi an occasion for the initiation of this relation between the two sister communities.

2. Reporting Communal and Political Situation in Bihar

Extract from a Letter from Hugh Dow to Louis Mountbatten, 25 March 1947

2. Reactions to HMG’s statement of the 20th February are still rather indeterminate in this province, where there are few politicians who have an all-India reputation, or are sufficiently capable of independent thought to deserve one. The Hindu press does not quite know how to take the Congress suggestion that the Punjab should be divided, and is also doubtful about the partition of Bengal, which seems implicit in the Congress proposal and has certainly been given an added impetus by it. I should say that local Hindu opinion is still very strongly in favour of ‘Akhund Hindustan’, and that those who give hesitant support to ideas of partition do so rather in the belief that it will show the complete unworkability of Pakistan than because they are prepared to contemplate the division of India into two independent states....

***

4. Mr Gandhi has been here since 5th March and is doing a certain amount of mild touring in the areas which suffered most from the riots.... On the whole, Gandhi’s visit to Bihar seems to be doing good, and he has been downright in his condemnation of those responsible for the riots.... Undoubtedly the presence of Gandhi in Bihar is doing much to reassure local Muslims, who feel that they cannot be subjected to further mass attacks while he is here. But I do not think that either Gandhi himself or the general body of Muslims feel that there has been anything like the change of heart in the Hindus that his discourses lay insistence on.
3. Gandhi Calls for Donations for Muslim Victims

Extracts from M.K. Gandhi’s Bihar Tour Diary

_Harijan_, 30 March 1947.

8-3-'47

Gandhiji said at the prayer meeting that he hoped the audience would forgive him for speaking always and exclusively on the theme which had brought him to Bihar. It had become his duty to listen to the tale of woe that the Muslim sufferers unfolded before him from day to day. One of them had come to him and complained that, even so recently as two days ago, things were pilfered from Muslim houses. If such was the case, it was most unfortunate and if it was at all general, it betrayed a lack of the spirit of repentance without which there was no possibility of concord between the two communities in Bihar, indeed in the whole of India.

The speaker, therefore, expressed his surprise that he had received a telegram warning him that he must not condemn the Hindus in Bihar, for, what they had done was purely from a sense of duty. He had no hesitation in saying that the writer did no good to India or to Hinduism by issuing the warning. He spoke as a Hindu having a living faith in his own religion and he claimed to be a better Hindu for claiming to be good Muslim, Christian, Parsi or Jew even as he was a Hindu. He invited everyone of his audience to feel likewise. And as such, he would forfeit his claim to be a Hindu if he bolstered up the wrong-doing of fellow Hindus or any other fellow being.

He claimed to do them a service by opening their eyes to their wrong-doing. They must not be carried away by the mischief, for instance, which was being done in the Punjab. If they were qualifying themselves as free citizens of India become free, they must not resort to wrong-doing on hearing of the wrongs perpetrated in other parts of India or anywhere else. Their and his duty was to imitate and assimilate whatever was good, no matter where found.

Now that he had been four days among them, he ventured to draw their attention to the duty they owed to draw their attention to the distressed Muslims, namely, that they should pay whatever they could toward the relief of the sufferers. He, therefore, invited them to give whatever they could towards that cause by way of a token of repentance. It was unfortunate that he had to remind them of the obvious thing. Many Hindu donors sent him donation for the sufferers in Noakhali, which he thought amounted to nearly three lakhs of rupees. Having received the remainder, he hoped that they would come forth with handsome donations. Naturally, every pie spent would be accounted for. They should not deceive themselves into the belief that now that they had a representative Government, they would do everything in the way of finances.

The more democratic a Government, the more it laboured under disadvantage in making use of public funds. Therefore, in a well-ordered society, the legitimate limitations which Government suffered from were only crossed by wise public donations.

10-3-'43 [sic]

Gandhiji then referred to a certain letter he had received from a very frank and honest friend. The letter had reminded him that the efforts for religious toleration that he had been making were all in vain for, after all, the quarrel between the Hindus and the Musalmans was not on account of religious differences but was essentially political in origin; religion had only been made to serve as a label for political distinctions. The friend had expressed the opinion that it was a tussle between United India on the one hand and India Divided on the other. Gandhiji confessed that he did not yet know what the full meaning of dividing India really was. But what he wanted to impress upon the audience was that supposing it were only a so-called political struggle, did it mean that all rules of decency and morals should be thrown to the winds? When human conflicts are divorced from ethical considerations, the road can only lead to the use of the atom bomb where every trace of humanity was held completely in abeyance. If there were honest differences among the people of India, should it then mean that the forty crores should descend to the level of beasts, slaughter men, women and children, innocent and guilty alike, without the least compunction? Could they not agree to settle their differences decently and in a comradely spirit? If they failed, only slavery of an unredeemable type could await them at the end of the road.

At this stage the audience near the dias became rather noisy and Gandhiji had to cut short his speech. Unlike other days he stayed on for the collection for the Muslim sufferers. He made a fervent appeal to the audience to untie their purse strings generously and contribute all that they possibly could towards the fund. Referring to the question whether the Muslims had contributed similarly for relief in Noakhali, Gandhiji said that it was indeed true that little had come to him from that quarter. But the reason, he believed, had been that he was now looked upon as enemy No. 1 rather than friend by the majority of the Muslim community in India. Yet even in Comilla, there had been a case where some Muslim and Christian friends had contributed more than Rs 800 along with a parcel of conch-shell bangles and vermilion for distribution among the Hindu women from whom such ceremonial signs had been forcibly removed during the disturbances....

1947

Gandhiji held his prayer by the side of the Mangles Talao in Patna city this evening. On his way, he had visited the village of Kumrahar where a prosperous Muslim family had been ruined by wholesale plunder. All books, furniture and other belongings had been destroyed, while a neighbouring masjid had been stripped of its wood work and then left practically in ruins.

Gandhiji referred in the beginning of his address to the decision of the British Government to quit India. The latter were a nation with a strong sense of reality; and when they realized that it did not pay to rule, they did not hesitate to withdraw their power over a country. This had been the course of British history in the past. If the British were going, as they surely were, what should be the duty of Indians at the same time, asked Gandhiji. Were we to return blow for blow among ourselves, and thus perpetuate our slavery, only to tear up our Motherland, in the end, into bits which went by the name of Hindustan and Pakistan, Brahministan and Achhutistan? What greater madness could there be than what had taken place in Bengal and Bihar, or what was taking place in the Punjab or the Frontier Province?

Should we forget our humanity and return a blow for a blow? If some misdirected individual took it into his head to desecrate a temple or break idols, should a Hindu in return desecrate a mosque on that account? Did it any way help to protect the temple or to save the cause of Hinduism? Personally, said Gandhiji, he was as much an idol-worshipper as an idol-breaker, and he suggested that the whole of the audience, whether Hindu, Muslim or any other, were also so, whether they admitted it or not. He knew that mankind thirsted for symbolism. Were not masjids or churches in reality the same as mandirs? God resided everywhere, no less in stock or stone than in a single hair on the body of man. But men associated sacredness with particular places and things more than with others. Such sentiment was worthy of respect when it did not mean restrictions on similar freedom for others. To every Hindu and Musalman, Gandhiji’s advice was that if there was compulsion anywhere, they should gently but firmly refuse to submit to it. Personally, he himself would hug an idol and lay down his life to protect it rather than brook any restriction upon his freedom of worship.

That required courage of a higher order than was needed in violent resistance. Gandhiji then narrated the story of Badshah Khan’s conversion to non-violence. The latter came from a tribe whose tradition was to return a blow for a blow, there being cases where blood feud had been handed down from sire to son. Badshah Khan himself felt that such endless reprisals only served to perpetuate the slavery of the Pathans. When he took to non-violence, he realized a kind of transformation coming over the Pathan tribes. It did not mean that every Pathan had undergone the transformation or that Badshah Khan who was endearingly called a fakir because he had won the heart of everybody by love and service, had himself reached the higher goal of non-violence. As far as he, the speaker, knew he (Badshah Khan) was every day nearing the goal because he realized the truth of it. It was this type of brave non-violence which Gandhiji wished the audience to imitate.

Gandhiji continued that he had come to Bihar in order to help the people in realizing the extent of the madness to which they had stooped. His object was to induce them to repent and thus undo the wrongs which had been perpetrated. The ruined houses of the Muslim family, he had just visited, had almost brought tears to his eyes. But he had steeled his heart and had come to teach the Hindu his duty towards his Muslim brother. True repentance required true courage. And Bihar, which had risen to great heights during the satyagraha in Champaran and which was the land over which the Buddha had roamed and taught, was surely capable once more of rising to heights from which it could radiate its effulgence over the rest of India. Only unadulterated non-violence could raise it to that status.

Gandhiji added that, in his opinion, the departure from the straight path of non-violence they had made at times in 1942 was very probably responsible for the aberration to which he had referred. He instanced also the spirit of general lawlessness which had seized them inasmuch as they dared to travel without tickets, pull chains unlawfully or in senseless vindictiveness, burnt zamindari crops or belongings. He was no lover of the zamindari system. He had often spoken against it; but he frankly confessed that he was not the enemy of the zamindars. He owned no enemies. The best way to bring about reform in the economic and social systems, whose evils were admittedly many, was through the royal road of self-suffering. Any departure from it only resulted in merely changing the form of the evil that was sought to be liquidated violently. Violence was incapable of destroying the evil root and branch.

Lastly, Gandhiji referred to a letter he had received from the Harijans asking him to visit their quarters and to live with them. He would have loved to do both the things; but he had to restrict himself to the mission that had brought him to Bihar. But having made himself a bhangi in thought and deed, he could never forget the Harijans. He was sorry to say that the latter were still suffering from any disabilities at all [sic] and that they did not get ready redress of their grievances....
4. Resettle Muslim and Hindu Victims

Extracts from M.K. Gandhi’s Bihar Tour Diary

_Harijan_, 6 April 1947.

17-3-’47

The gathering at Masurhi was, according to official estimates, more than thirty thousand and, during the _Ramadhun_, a very large section of the men and women present participated in the recital. Gandhiji began by congratulating the audience on that account. Then he told them that his Bihar tour had not been undertaken for pleasure, but on account of serious and grave reasons. He would visit those places where Muslims had suffered. His appeal to the Hindus was to show repentance by means of worthy and suitable acts.

During the mad days of November, women and children were remorselessly murdered, while men had also been done to death in such numbers as to put Noakhali in the shade, although events there had been of a sufficiently serious character. He expected the Hindus of Bihar to show true repentance and not merely shout _Jai_ or victory in his name. He not only expected them to contribute liberally towards the relief fund but what he expected them to do more was that they should come forward and confess at least to him the wrongs that they had done. This alone could bring him true peace of mind.

Gandhiji said that he had asked for reports of events from various sources. One of them stated that the initial aggression had been from ‘the side of the Musalmans. He was not at all concerned how the trouble actually started: the problem was, as the Hindus were in such overwhelming majority, how could they stoop so low as to indulge in murdering the innocents? True repentance, with the consequent reparatory action, alone could restore abiding peace between the two sister communities.

The report also accused the Government of indifference to wrongs suffered by the Hindus at the hands of the Muslims. Similar reports had also been received from Muslim quarters complaining of indifference to Muslim complaints. Gandhiji continued that he was slow to believe either report. A popular Government that was so indifferent or partial one way or the other could not exist for any length of time. The Government had already declared that they would presently appoint an impartial Commission to hear all complaints, examine the causes of the terrible disturbances and discover ways and means for avoiding repetition of the tragedy. They would also advise as to the reparation to be made to the sufferers. Let those who had sent their letters to him, he continued, be ready with their evidence to be put before the Commission. His was not the way of a judge or of a prosecutor. His was the humble role of a reformer and humanitarian. He had, therefore, to deal with known facts and invite offenders to repent for their follies....

21-3-’47

Gandhiji commenced with a reference to his visit to Garahwan village where men, women and children had been brutally done to death and asked those assembled before him to sit in mournful silence in sympathy with the deceased. He asked them to consider for themselves why innocent women and children had been killed. Was it to save any religion? No religion, Gandhiji emphasized, taught anyone to kill his neighbours. What was done was nothing but wanton destruction—he did not stop to think whether it was done from motives of self-interest or any other.
The houses which a few months ago were full of life, Gandhiji said, were now desolate and everyone knew about it. But then what was to be done next? People went to bathe in the Ganges, believing that their sins could thus be washed off. The ruins before them should remind them of the sin they had committed on helpless women and children and they should seek to expiate it by considering in what way they could redeem themselves. Gandhiji told them that they should clean the ruined houses and make them neat and habitable. They should also express to their Muslim brethren their repentance for the past occurrences and persuade them to return to their villages, telling them that then alone they would have peace of mind. It was possible that the Muslims might turn round and ask how they could go back and live in the houses where their kith and kin had been done to death. The Muslims, Gandhiji said, would be justified in saying so. But, if the guilty men or their relations could go to the Muslims with truly penitent hearts and assure them that what was past was past and would never be repeated, he was sure that even a stone heart would melt.

Amidst this mad upheaval, Gandhiji continued, there were men, like oasis in a desert, who risked the wrath of the violent mobs and saved many Muslim lives and Muslim property. Those people deserved congratulations, though they did not need any. If he did not go to them, Gandhiji said, it did not mean that he had not recognized their work. But he was in the nature of a doctor who went not to the well but to the suffering.

He had been told, Gandhiji proceeding said, that the Hindus had also suffered in the conflict. If there were any such, they too needed help and would be included in the relief.

Gandhiji mentioned that about fifty persons, who were wanted in connection with the riot cases, had surrendered the day after his arrival at Masurhi. He welcomed it and hoped that others who had, taken part in the riots would surrender to the proper authorities, making a clean breast of the crimes they had committed and taking whatever punishment might be given to them. If people had not the courage to surrender to the authorities, Gandhiji said, they could come to him or Badshah Khan or Major General Shah Nawaz with their confessions.

Lastly, Gandhiji referred to the fear entertained by the Hindus of Noakhali about preparations that were being made by the Muslims to observe Pakistan Day on the 23rd inst. A friend from Khadi Pratisthan had also come to him and explained to him that the situation in Noakhali was deteriorating. Gandhiji said that he had told that friend that he would not be persuaded to leave his post in Bihar at the present moment, for he believed that his mission, if fully successful in Bihar, would cast its effect on Bengal and perhaps on the rest of India. The Muslims of Bihar and the Hindus of Bengal should accept him as security for the safety of their life and property from the hands of the communalists. He had come here, Gandhiji said, to do or die. Therefore, there was no question of abandoning his post of duty till the Hindus and the Muslims could assure him that they did not need his services....

24-3-47

He then said he had visited Behrawan where Hindu houses had been damaged. He said that for him the Hindus and the Muslims were like two eyes, as Sir Syed Ahmed had said. Such isolated instances ought not to diminish the heinousness of the Hindus’ crime against the Muslims....

25-3-47

At today’s prayer meeting perfect silence was observed by the audience to the end. Gandhiji congratulated them for it. He told them that he had heard that the Hindus were boycotting the Muslims. If that was so, it was a bad omen. True repentance demanded true friendship in which there could be no room for boycott. Hence, if they were truly repentant, they ought not to boycott the Muslims. He then referred to a visit of Muslim League friends who were prepared to co-operate in every way in rehabilitation and he added that without the co-operation of the League friends in Bihar there could be no friendship which depended not on the bayonet but on mutual goodwill....

Lastly, he referred to a visit from Dome friends, whom it was the duty of every Hindu to befriend. They, he was told, were under a double disability. They were treated as out castes by the caste Hindus and as the lowest in the hierarchy of untouchables. This was a shame which the Hindus were bound to wipe out at the earliest moment, if Hinduism was not to perish.

5. ‘Bihar Riots: 16,032 Persons Accused So Far’

Dawn, 10 April 1947.

PATNA, Wednesday.— Mr Sri Krishna Sinha, Prime Minister, Bihar, in a written statement in reply to a question in the Bihar Legislative Council today disclosed that those Hindu accused persons against whom evidence was found satisfactory after investigation have been charge-sheeted to stand their trial in court.

Charge-sheets have been submitted up till now against 2,357 Hindus, against whom ‘prima facie’ evidence has been found on investigation. A large number of cases are still pending investigation due to the fact that the whereabouts of Muslim complainants and witnesses are not yet known and vigorous efforts are being made to trace them out in Bihar, Bengal and other places. The charges against these Hindu accused persons who have been charge-sheeted up till now comprise of murder, arson, loot and rioting.

So far 2,705 cases relating to communal trouble have been reported. The figure is likely to increase as old occurrences are reported now or any fresh occurrences take place. The total number of Hindu accused persons is 16,032 up till now. This figure is also likely to increase as fresh names of accused persons come up during the course of investigation.

From information available 3,308 Hindu have been released on bail so far. The figure is subject to fluctuation.

2,719 Hindus have been detained in custody. The figure is subject to variation. The number of cases in which bail has been refused is not yet available, but it is presumed that in the cases of all these 2,729 persons’ bail was refused.

Bail has been mostly allowed in bailable offences but there are instances in which bails have been granted in non-available [sic] offences mostly by the Sessions Court and the High Court.

In 907 cases investigation has been completed. Investigation in a large number of cases is almost complete and final forms will be submitted shortly.—API.

6. Hindus Continue Communal Fervour

Extracts from M.K. Gandhi’s Bihar Tour Diary

Harijan, 13 April 1947.

28-3-'47

At the prayer meeting Gandhiji began by saying that he had passed a very full and heavy day. The day was begun with a long meeting with the members of the local Muslim League at the bungalow of Mr Azharul Haq, local League leader. He was with them for over an hour and had a hearty chat with them answering all kinds of questions. Then he had a meeting at his residential quarters with Hindus and Muslims belonging to Jehanabad and the surrounding villages. He had then a meeting with the Congressmen which included members of the various Congress Committees. Later he met the members of the local Hindu Mahasabha. Finally he had a heart-to-heart talk with over 25 members of the police force on strike. Then at half past three again he visited the villages of Malathi, Gangasagar, Bola and Allahganj, in which Muslims had suffered badly.

Referring to his visit to the villages, Gandhiji said that naturally he was full of topics on which he wanted to speak and bespeak their attention. He was sorry to tell that Hindu repentance was not open and sincere enough to inspire confidence among the Muslims. He had told the afternoon meeting that it was open to representative Hindus who were present at the meeting to disabuse the Muslims of their suspicion. He was sorry to say that no one Hindu got up to give the needed assurance. He had not the heart therefore, to ask his Muslim hearers whether they (the Hindus) had cleansed their hearts. They were the injured party in Bihar and it was not open to anyone to expect a satisfactory answer from them unless the guilty Hindu party had led the way by repentance. There were yet ring leaders like Mathura Singh roaming about and successfully evading arrest. There was, therefore, little cause for wonder if the Muslims were afraid to return to their respective villages. Gandhiji said that he could not help feeling that the culprit could not long remain at large if the Hindu population did not give him shelter. He asked Mathura Singh’s friends and sympathizers to advise him to discover himself and face the consequences of his action. He would also like to tell him that it was no act of bravery for him to evade arrest. He was thus rendering a disservice to himself, his religion and his country. He suggested to the Congressmen, in whose midst the inhumanities were enacted, that they could not free themselves, unless they made every effort to include all the culprits to come out into the open to wash their guilt as publicly as they had committed the crimes.

Continuing, Gandhiji said that he had visited a mosque in the village Bola which was damaged during the disturbances. He was told that on the Holi day the mosque was again desecrated by some villagers who played Holi inside the mosque premises on the Holi day. If it was true, Gandhiji said, it was undoubtedly a notice given by them to the Muslims not to enter their homes even when they were rebuilt nor dare to visit the mosque. If this reported desecration on the Holi day was a fact, it was a bad omen for the Hindus, for Bihar and for the whole country.

Gandhiji went on to say that he had heard at the Muslim League meeting in the morning and at the meeting of the Hindus and Muslims in the afternoon that Mahant Bhagwat Das who was a member of the Bihar Legislative Assembly was himself a participator in the crime and was himself present at both the meetings. The speaker advised him whilst he was under suspicion to give up his membership. He was glad to say that Mahant Bhagwant Das, without a moment’s hesitation, welcomed the advice and promise at once to act up to it. He also added that he was in no way a participator directly or indirectly in the crime and that he was quite ready to face an open, impartial enquiry to be made by the Muslim League itself. If it was a sincere declaration, Gandhiji said, it was certainly a refreshing thing at a time when there was no real sign of sincere sorrow and repentance on the part of the Hindus in the affected areas. This he was obliged to say in spite of welcome letters of repentance to which he had made reference at the previous evening’s meeting....
7. ‘Bihar Tragedy: Ministry Decides Not to Appoint Enquiry Committee’

Dawn, 16 April 1947.

Patna, Tuesday.—I understand on the most reliable authority that the idea of setting up of even a one man enquiry commission to enquire into the Bihar tragedy has been given up on Monday. None in the world would be able to know what man did to man during the last disturbances in the province.

Disclosing this decision of the Bihar Government on such an important subject, a source in the closest touch with the Congress Ministerialist party said that the fact was that both the Governor and the Ministry did not want to set up a Commission whose findings would have unmasked their guilt of these tragic days.

GOVERNOR’S INDIFFERENCE

The Governor, he said, did not relish the idea of the appointment of any commission of enquiry because his indifference towards the maintenance of law and order in Bihar right from the days of the Beniabad riot and then his visit to Bombay on a pleasure trip at a time when mass frenzy in his province was at its height, would have been exposed, while the Congress Ministry did not really want to face exposures of its plan which they had put into effect for these disturbances, if any commission had taken up the work.

It may be mentioned here that the demand for the appointment of an independent commission of enquiry into the last tragic happenings was made by Muslims in all parts of India and it also figured as the first demand in the list of fourteen demands which the Muslim League Party put forward before the Ministry here.

During the debate on the no-confidence motion against the Bihar Ministry, the Premier had announced his decision to appoint such a commission without any further delay.

8. One’s Sin Is Everyone’s Sin

M.K. Gandhi’s Talk with the Representatives of Jamiat-Ul-Ulema at Patna, 17 April 1947

CWMG, Vol. LXXXVII, pp. 296–7.

BAPU: Instead of being anxious to find out how many Muslims were killed by the Hindus, your primary duty is to find out how many Hindus the Muslims had killed and where and persuade them not to commit such atrocities. Similarly you should go among the Hindus and serve them. You should assure them that all Muslims are not bad and thus remove their fear. If the nationalist Muslims of India did just this at the risk of their lives they would raise Muslims and Islam to greater heights and Khuda would shower His choicest blessings on them. But today who listens to me? If out of the four crore Muslims I could have only a hundred such brothers and sisters, they would be able to render great service to the forty crore Hindus and Muslims of India. Now, tell me, is anyone of you prepared to take up this mission?

What our brethren are doing is, of course, wrong but we never support them.

BAPU: It is our sorrow that we always think in terms of mine and thine. You should realize that a wrong committed by even a child of India is a wrong committed by each one of us. Till we imbibe this spirit, we shall not have peace.
9. Examples of Hindu Support to Muslim Refugees
M.K. Gandhi’s Speech at a Prayer Meeting, 29 April 1947
_CWMG_, Vol. LXXXVII, pp. 388–90.

BROTHERS AND SISTERS,

...A meeting was held at Atarpur at which a panchayat of the local Hindus and Muslims was formed. The head of the panchayat came to Patna and exhorted the Muslim refugees to go back to their homes. He told them that they should regard him as their friend as before and trust him. He assured them that he would protect them at the cost of his life. His words had some effect and some fifty Muslim families returned to their villages. They are now living there in peace and they no longer require police protection. The Government also provides them food through General Shah Nawaz. When he distributed the foodstuffs to the Muslims, the Hindus protested. They said the Muslims had suffered at their hands and so they would arrange for their food. And they have been doing it. The local Hindus are also helping the Muslims in harvesting their crops.

Shah Nawaz Saheb also went to Bir. A Muslim from that place went up to him and said that he wanted to return to his village. But he saw danger in going there. The General permitted him to go and, providing him a police escort, asked him to proceed without fear. But as he was going a few Hindus of the village Panchayat stopped him and asked why he had the police escort with him. The Muslim villager was scared. He said he was frightened to go alone. The Hindus said it was a shame on them that he should go under police protection. They urged him to trust them and said that they would look after his safety and he should not have the police to escort him. The Muslim villager was persuaded at last. He realized that the Hindus were after all his friends, and he sent back the escort.

The third thing is that there are also some Sikhs working with Shah Nawaz Saheb who are discharging their responsibilities very well. One among them is Lt Kartar Singh. He carried the beddings of the returning Muslims to their respective houses. The Muslims appreciated this gesture. They thought they need not be afraid of men who had been offering such services to them. When somebody died in one of the Muslim families, Kartar Singh dug the grave all by himself. This has been very largely removing the fear from the hearts of the Muslims. And the work is proceeding well. But that does not mean that things are going on equally well in all places. If, in all the places where the Hindus have committed grave crimes, work is done along the lines followed in these three places, the Muslims would certainly return to their homes. There is no doubt about it. The Government would of course rebuild the houses that have been destroyed or damaged. But you too should help in putting up the houses again.

All the houses should be ready by June. This is what Shah Nawaz Saheb also desires. Hence you must give your full help.

If all the Hindus here start treating the Muslims in a friendly manner, the fire that is raging today would be extinguished. This fire should be put out at once. If no attempts are made to extinguish the fire at its source it would reduce everything to ashes. Bihar is a big province. If all is well here Calcutta and the other places which are going through fire will return to normal.

I wish that when I return from Delhi your hearts would have changed so much that all the Hindus and Muslims of this place would be able to tell me that I need not stay here and that I could go back.
10. Protection for Every Citizen
Extract from a Letter from M.K. Gandhi to Syed Abdul Aziz, 29 April 1947
_CWMG_, Vol. LXXXVII, p. 381.

You are less than right when you say that 'the policy of the Government supported by you should help Muslims to decide either to surrender completely to the Congress or to abandon the Province for good'. My policy is no fire-arms to civilians in the ordinary course and perfect protection to every citizen, be he poor or rich. If I know anything of the Government of Bihar, they do not want Muslims or anyone else to surrender to the Congress or leave the Province for good.

11. Reports on Communal Situation in Bihar
Extract from a Letter from Hugh Dow to Louis Mountbatten, 29 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 28, NMML.

...4. Mr Gandhi is back in Bihar, ostensibly devoting himself to rehabilitation. I am very glad that he has been persuaded not to interfere further in the situation arising out of the police mutiny. There is a general feeling among the Muslim community that there is not likely to be another large scale massacre here so long as Gandhi is in Bihar, but I should hesitate to estimate the benefits of his presence among us much higher than that. He doesn’t appear to have much influence in inducing a real change of heart in his own community. The actual work of reconstruction, of rebuilding the houses destroyed in the riots, is, if anything, being impeded by his presence. Houlton, the Relief Commissioner, is getting very fed up with his job, and will soon be leaving it. He finds it difficult to get orders from the Ministers, who send him to discuss matters with Gandhi, who generally goes off at a tangent and makes some quite impracticable suggestion. The latest of these is that the ministry should acquire the lands of all Muslims who wish to leave the province.

12. 'Bihar & Noakhali—A Study in Contrast: Impressions of Mazhar Imam’s Bengal Tour'
Extracts from a Report in _Dawn_, 2 May 1947.

PATNA, Thursday.—AN emphatic assertion that there was perfect peace and order in Noakhali area as a result of the stringent measures taken by the Bengal Government and the good neighbourly feeling shown by the majority community has been made by Mr Mazhar Imam, MLA, Chief Whip of the Muslim League Party in the Bihar Assembly who returned here on Wednesday after an extensive tour of those areas undertaken by him with Bihar’s Development Minister, Doctor Syed Mahmud in company.

He further says that any propaganda to the contrary was dishonest and malicious was meant by the Hindu Press and the Congress leadership only to further their nefarious political designs against the Muslims and Bengal’s popular Government.

‘As regards the cases of loot, arson, murder etc., which were attributed to the communal frenzy of the majority community by Professor Nirmal Bose of Gandhi’s camp which unnerved even Mr Gandhi, I can confidently say they were no more than pure and simple criminal incidents in which both the Hindus and Muslims had suffered.
'When in the presence of Doctor Syed Mahmud, I asked the Professor if it was the Hindus only that had suffered and not the Muslims he asserted it was so but the diary of the Hindu Sub-Inspector of Police of Rangunj area of the period beginning from March 22 to April 22 told quite a different tale because out of a total of 98 such cases, 30 were the terrible sufferers at the hands of the element [sic] and in cases of burglary alone, 19 were Hindu and 12 Muslim and in those of theft, 30 Hindu and 4 Muslim, where as in the solitary one case of abduction that was reported, it was a Muslim that had suffered and not a Hindu....

'My visit to much maligned Noakhali area made me fully convinced how low the Hindu Press the Congress leadership can stoop to further their political game by blackmailing a certain person and how distortion of truth has become their daily bread to nourish upon, from which even Mr Gandhi cannot escape.

'Even if the Bengal Government had not done anything towards the refugees, I do not think that Mr Gandhi, the Congress or its Ministry in Bihar have the face to complain about it when they themselves are treating lakhs and lakhs of the Bihar sufferers in the most indifferent way and have not done anything yet tangible enough to relieve the distress of our people with the result that they are still running hither and thither in the province and thousands have perished in the meantime....'

13. ‘Transfer of Power Should Come with Peace’
Extracts from M.K. Gandhi’s Bihar Tour Diary
Harijan, 4 May 1947.

14-4-'47
In the course of his post-prayer speech at Bankipur maidan this evening Gandhiji said that he had heard disquieting news from Noakhali. Satis Babu and also Haran Babu had both informed him about the rapidly deteriorating situation, giving facts and figures. If what he had heard proved to be true, he might have to fast, since by going to Bihar while his work in Noakhali was still unfinished he had earned the right of fasting against misdeeds in Noakhali. That did not, however, mean that fasting was a certainty. He, however, felt bound to hint at the possibility.

Gandhiji also referred to his talks with the Viceroy at Delhi and said that both in public and private conversations the Viceroy declared that he was going to be the last Viceroy of India, and that also only up to June 30, 1948.

Gandhiji felt that the Viceroy was honest in his profession. The British were already preparing for transfer of power. Gandhiji felt that he realized that the transfer of power must be peaceful if Britain was to escape the charge that during her reign of more than a century she had brought up nothing but fight among ourselves. It was a sad sight that while freedom was almost within their grasp they were fighting among themselves. All the important members of the Congress, whether in the Interim Government or outside it, were trying their best to grasp freedom and to establish peace in the country, freeing it from at least the major portion of the evils of the old order.

15-4-'47
After the prayer Gandhiji said that while he was in Delhi he received letters from Bihar, some couched in thoughtless language, some in the language of praise and a few expressing doubt if he was ever returning to Bihar to finish his work. The last needed no reply. Praise was wholly unnecessary for one doing one’s duty as he was doing his. He, however, singled out one letter which he thought was based on pure ignorance. It doubted the wisdom of the speaker leaving his work in Noakhali and coming to Bihar at the instance of Dr Syed Mahmud and daring to accept his hospitality.

The critic forgot that Dr Mahmud was Gandhiji’s friend and that he had known Dr Mahmud’s father-in-law before he knew the late Brij Kishore Prasad of revered memory or Dr Rajendra Prasad. In his opinion Dr Mahmud had rendered a service to the Hindus and the Muslims of Bihar by bringing him to Bihar. For, if Bihar remained sane in the midst of possible madness throughout India, Bihar would raise India in the estimation of the world and leave to the world a singular example of sanity in the midst of surrounding insanity. This he had a right to expect by right of service and more so because the Bihar Hindus, however illiterate they might be, were votaries of Rama, the incarnation of all the good in the world. Although evil seemed at times to rule the world, the eternal truth was that the world lived so long as goodness resided even in one person. Evil was naught. If Bihar remained good in the midst of temptation, it was well with it, and well with the whole of India.

The insinuation that there was a sinister motive behind drawing him away from Noakhali, namely that the Noakhali Muslims might be free from his (Gandhiji’s) restraining influence, was too flimsy to bear examination. For, if he succeeded wholly in Bihar, it was impossible for very shame that the Noakhali Muslims should go mad...

17-4-'47

At the prayer meeting today Gandhiji drew attention to the fact that for the sake of the Muslim friends who wished to join the prayers—and the day had grown longer—the prayer time was advanced by fifteen minutes. He also warned those who were inclined to laugh at the selections from the Quran and other scriptures against the practice. They ought to cultivate the same regard for other religions that they had for their own. Not to do so was to belittle one’s own faith and expose it to attacks from without.

After the prayer he referred to the visits he had from Muslim friends who complained to him that in and about Bihar Sharif and Monghyr things were not quite favourable to the return of the refugees. If the information was correct, he was very sorry. The heat was so oppressive that he had not the heart to undertake arduous traveling during the hot weather but he would have no other recourse if the Hindus in those places had not the spirit of repentance and did not resume their friendliness towards their Muslim neighbours, no matter how few they were. It was suggested to him that arms should be issued to the Muslims who were in fear of their Hindu neighbours. Those who made such suggestions did not know him. He would not issue any license to the Muslims or to the Hindus for the purpose of self-defence. It was a sign of barbarity. He would even take away the arms from those who had them already. Their arms were a living faith in God and a stout heart born of that faith.

He had also a visit from the zamindars who, among other things, had complained of growing lawlessness among the peasantry and labour. He deplored the fact. It was a blot on the fair name of Bihar. Such lawlessness was criminal and was bound to involve the very peasantry and labour in ruin, let alone the zamindars who were after all a mere handful. He fervently hoped that the lesson of the past thirty years in the virtue of non-violence would not be lost upon the people of Bihar. He was quite prepared to say for the sake of argument that the zamindars were guilty of many crimes and of omissions and commissions. But that was no reason for the peasant and the labourer who were the salt of the earth to copy crime. If salt lost its savour wherewith could it be salted?

18.4-'47

...He next referred to the complaint he had received about a punitive tax that was levied. He felt that the State had no other alternative if the people would not give up the criminals. Nor could the State carry out mass arrests where hundreds and thousands were involved in shameful crimes. Punitive tax was then the only remedy. The only way by which the people could render the punitive tax unnecessary was to repent and undo the wrong done by voluntary labour and contributions. They should also approach the injured Muslims and request them to go back to their homes. They should assure them that they would regard them as their dear ones....

14. ‘Separate Ministries for Hindu and Non-Hindu Bihar Demanded’

Dawn, 6 May 1947.

By a correspondent

In the open session of the Division of Bihar Conference held at Gaya on April 19, 1947 under the Presidentship of Chowdury Abid Hussain, MLA (Central), the following resolutions were passed unanimously.

(1) In view of the historic fact that the present heterogeneous composite province of Bihar was hastily carved out from the Presidency of Bengal as a result of the annulment of partition of Bengal in 1912 and further in view of the historic ethnic, geographical, cultural, linguistic, topographical, economic and political division of the present artificial province, and whereas the caste Hindu dominated Congress Ministry has hopelessly and totally failed to protect the life, honour, property and religion of the Muslim minority of the province; and whereas the Congress Ministry has not conceded the just and simple demand of the Muslims for the consolidation of Muslim population and lands in selected pockets; and whereas the Muslims and other minorities can have no sense of security under the caste-Hindu dominated Congress Ministry, this Conference demands that the province of Bihar be forthwith partitioned into Hindu and non-Hindu autonomous provinces.

(2) This Conference demands that pending the division of Bihar into Hindu and non-Hindu autonomous provinces, separate Ministries be immediately formed for the Hindu and non-Hindu autonomous provinces and each Ministry be made directly responsible to the Governor.

(3) Resolved that a provisional Committee of Action of the Division of Bihar Conference consisting of the following gentlemen be formed to carry on the struggle for the division of the province and to prepare a comprehensive programme of work, President Mr Burhan Uddin Khan, MLA (Santhal Parganas); Vice-Presidents; (1) Mr Syed Mazhar Imam, MLA (Patna); (2) Mr Razi Uddin, MLA (Purnea); (3) Mr Karrar Hussain Rizvi, Pleader (Palamau); General Secretary: Mr Mahboob Ahmad Warsi, Pleader (Gaya); Joint Secretary; (1) Mr Sultan Mohammad Afzal (Patna) (2) Mr Nizam Uddin (Santhal Parganas) and (3) Mr S.M. Farooque, Pleader (Gaya).

The following were elected members: (1) Mr Maqbool Ahmad, Pleader, MLA Bhagalpore (2) Dr S.M. Farid, MLA Darbhanga (3) Mr Gholam Mohi Uddin,

(4) In view of the unjust and unfriendly attitude of the Congress and unequal allotment of portfolios between the two major parties in contravention of the solemn declaration of the British Cabinet Mission, this Conference demands there should immediately be formed TWO Interim Governments at the Centre. One in-charge of Pakistan province and the other in-charge of Hindustan provinces.

(5) This Conference demands that the Indian Army, Navy, Air Force, Ordnance Factories, Military plants, Establishments and stores be equally divided between the Pakistan provinces and Hindustan Provinces.

(6) This Conference fully supports the demand of the Adibassis for a separate autonomous province of Jharkhand.

15. ‘No Communal Bitterness in Bihar—Success of Gandhiji’s Mission’

Extracts from a Report from The Hindustan Times, 7 May 1947.

Patna, May 5.—A review of the communal situation in Bihar after the second visit of Mahatma Gandhi shows that the whole atmosphere has changed to one of goodwill and friendliness. Bitterness has vanished. Fraternal feelings have returned. Members of the majority community are in many ways making amends for their past mistakes. They seem to be anxious for the restoration of the good old days when their Muslim neighbours lived in full confidence with them.

The minority community has also not been slow to respond to this gesture. Muslim refugees are taking full advantage of the new rehabilitation drive launched by the Bihar Government and settling back in the villages.

In spite of Gandhiji’s efforts, politics stands in many places in the way of the friendly mingling of the two communities. Muslims in general have no doubt begun to realize that they have to live in this province Pakistan or no Pakistan. Still, many of them, belonging to the League school of thought, are holding back their support. Possibly it is the feeling of uncertainty about the future that is responsible for this attitude. They are watching hundreds of their co-religionists moving back to their original homes in the rural areas. It is, however, expected that they will finally join with the co-operating refugees when Gandhiji revisits Bihar to give the finishing touches to his peace mission.
16. Patel Opposes Enquiry Commission into Riots

Extract from a Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 8 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 28, NMML.

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

Please refer to your letter No. 1440 dated the 27th April 1947 and my reply thereto of the 28th April 1947 regarding the law and order position in Bihar. ...

5. As regards the appointment of a commission to enquire into the Bihar riots, I agree with the Governor and yourself that this step would be most inadvisable. I have exerted my influence to the extent I could to dissuade Gandhiji from pursuing this matter further, but the difficulty is created by the insistent demand of the League leaders, both inside and outside the Province. Suhrawardy has written and spoken to Gandhiji on this subject and Mr Jinnah, during his last interview with Gandhiji, also referred to this matter. In the circumstances, the best course may lie in delays and that I understand the Prime Minister is doing.

6. The Governor has been good enough to refer to my support to the Prime Minister in a strong line against the prominent members of the Congress Socialist Party and other individuals and measures undermining the discipline of the police force in the Province. You must know full well how anxious I am to exert myself to the utmost of my capacity to maintain peace and security in India. I hope you will convey to the Governor the pledge of my firm support to his Prime Minister in achieving this in the Province of Bihar.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

17. ‘League Leaders Should Have Gone to Noakhali to Make Muslims Repent—Dr Syed Mahmud’s Suggestion’

The Tribune, 8 May 1947.

Patna, May 6.—‘I wish that any front rank Muslim League leader, instead of entering into controversy about the comparative conditions in Bihar and Noakhail, had gone to Noakhail on a similar mission as of Mahatma Gandhi in Bihar of creating sincere repentence among the Muslims there with a view to bring about the restoration of old relations of brotherhood and harmony,’ says Dr Syed Mahmood, Minister of Development Bihar, in the course of a statement.

He says: ‘My attention has been drawn to a statement in the press by Mr Mazhar Imam, MLA (Bihar) about the present situation in Noakhali. There is no doubt that saner elements have begun to realize their own responsibilities and they all assured us that they would do their very best to exert their influence in restoring confidence and in curbing the unruly elements of this notoriously criminal district.

‘Mr Mazhar Imam, who visited Noakhali along with me, has done a public service by visiting Noakhali and by impressing upon the local Muslims that as members of the majority community it was their duty to protect the Hindus from the misdeeds of miscreants and to create conditions favourable to the restoration of complete confidence. It is however, to be regretted that he has tried to make political capital out of his visit, by making statements like this and by questioning the veracity of eminent men like Seth Satish Chandra Das Gupta and Professor Nirmal Bose who are held in high esteem. Mahatma Gandhi, in spite of very heavy demands on his time, has come to Bihar on the “do or die” mission so that Hindus in Bihar may realize their follies and try to undo the wrongs done to their Muslim brethren by doing their honest attempt to foster confidence and sense of security among the Muslims. I wish that any front rank Muslim League leader instead of entering into controversy about the comparative conditions in Bihar and Noakhali had gone to Noakhali on a similar mission of creating sincere repentance among the Muslims there with a view to bring about the restoration of old relations of brotherhood and harmony.

‘So long I refrained from making any public statement about my impression of Noakhali, as I was, and am still waiting to see how far the assurances given by the Muslims and the local officials there were being acted upon. The Hon’ble Chief Minister of Bengal has also assured me that he would do all that lies in his power to restore confidence among the Hindus of the affected areas and to put down lawlessness at all cost. He has already issued definite instructions to that effect. Time alone will show how far they succeed.’—API

18. Cow-protection and Role of Hindus and Muslims

Extracts from M.K. Gandhi’s Bihar Tour Diary for April 1947

Harijan, 11 May 1947.

Gandhiji having heard that some Hindus were whispering to one another that Muslims being beef-eaters were the natural enemies of Hinduism and were, therefore, fit to be destroyed. Gandhiji, therefore, devoted his remarks to the topic of cow-protection. He said that nearly forty years ago he wrote about it in Hind Swaraj in South Africa. He was from his childhood a devotee of the cow. He believed her to be the natural mother of prosperity. But he had expressed the opinion in Hind Swaraj that cow-protection societies were destroyers of the cow and not her protectors. To this view he adhered even today. True devotion to the cow required broad-mindedness and an accurate knowledge of the art and science concerning the protection of the cow. In no country on the earth were the cow and her progeny so ill-treated as in India which, strangely enough, was the only country where the cow was venerated. Their veneration, however, consisted of mere words and deadly quarrel with the Muslims over cow-killing. The very Hindus who quarrelled with the Muslims because they slaughtered the cow for the beef she gave were not ashamed to accept the mastery of the English who were known to be beef-eaters in a sense in which the Muslims never were. He had no quarrel with the Englishmen because they ate beef and as such he had none with the Muslims either. He was concerned with showing the great inconsistency of the Hindus who for the sake of money gladly served their English masters and quarrelled with the Muslims. Then they forgot that there were Hindus who gladly partook of beef. He had known orthodox vaishnavas who ate beef-extract when it was prescribed by their doctors. He reminded the audience of the fact that during the Khilafat days thousands of cows were saved from the Muslim knife. The late Maulana Abdul Bari used to say that if the Hindus helped the Muslims to save the Khilafat, the Muslims were bound to save the cow for the sake of the Hindus. From every point of view, therefore, he held that it was insensate on the part of the Hindus to be angry with their Muslim brethren because they ate beef and slaughtered cows. He quoted numerous instances to show the utterly inconsistent behaviour of the Hindus in this matter. He therefore, asked the Hindus to put their own house in order before it tottered to its ruin.
19. Call for Division of Bihar

Extracts from a Letter from Mahboob Ahmad Warsi to M.A. Jinnah, 19 May 1947

GAYA

Dear Sir,

In forwarding a printed copy of the resolutions passed in the Second Session of the Division of Bihar Conference held at Patna on the 11th May, 1947, under the presidency of Mr Mohammad Noman, MLA (Central), I have the honour to inform you that, according to the terms of Resolution No. 1, a deputation has to wait on you on behalf of the Division of Bihar Conference to impress upon you the imperative necessity of carving out 1/6th area in Bihar for the formation of a national homeland for the 50 lacs of helpless, unprotected and oppressed Muslims of the province.

I request you most earnestly to kindly fix a date for the deputation to meet you at New Delhi on or before the 30th of the current month and inform me of the same by wire.

Thanking you in anticipation,

With best regards and respects,

Yours faithfully,

M.A. WARSI

General Secretary

Division of Bihar Conference

....Enclosure

COPIES OF RESOLUTIONS PASSED IN THE SECOND SESSION OF THE DIVISION OF BIHAR CONFERENCE HELD IN THE ANJUMAN ISLAMIA HALL, PATNA, ON 11 MAY 1947, UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE BIHAR PROVINCIAL MUSLIM STUDENTS FEDERATION, UNDER THE PRESIDENCYSHIP OF MOHAMMAD NOMAN, MLA

1. Resolved that a deputation consisting of the following gentlemen with power to co-opt two more members be formed to wait on the Quaid-i-Azam, M.A. Jinnah, on behalf of the Division of Bihar Conference to impress upon him the imperative necessity of carving out 1/6th area in Bihar for the formation of a national homeland for the 50 lac helpless, unprotected and oppressed Muslims of the Province.
   (a) Mr Burhan Uddin Khan, MLA
   (b) Mr Mahboob Ahmad Warsi
   (c) Syed Mazhar Imam, MLA
   (d) Mr Mohammad Noman, MLA (Central)
   (e) Syed Mujtaba Ahmad

2. Resolved that the members of the deputation are empowered to select five experts to draw up a plan for the division of the province in the light of the resolutions passed in the Division of Bihar Conference at its last session at Gaya.

3. Whereas the people of Chhotanagpur and Santhal Parganas are nationally, culturally and linguistically distinct and different from those inhabiting other parts of Bihar; and whereas in these areas the Adibasis are 4,451,104, Muslims 810,680, Scheduled Castes 547,699, and Caste Hindus 3,887,694; and whereas the Adibasis and the Muslims together form the majority and most of the Scheduled Castes also support the demand for the separation of Chhotanagpur; and whereas the attitude of the present Congress Ministry of Bihar is inimical towards the Adibasis and the Muslims; this session of the Division of Bihar Conference therefore demands immediate establishment of the Jharkand Province and formation of a separate Ministry for the said province.

4. In view of the complete betrayal of the solemn promise made by the Premier of Bihar during the debate on the no-confidence motion moved by the Muslim League party in Bihar Assembly against the Congress Ministry of Bihar, that the Congress Ministry of Bihar would not force the Muslim refugees and sufferers of the last Bihar carnage to go back and settle in the same ruined, devastated and dangerous villages; and in view of the present policy of the Congress Ministry with regard to the rehabilitation of the Muslim refugees; the session of the Division of Bihar Conference demands of the Congress Ministry of Bihar to at once give up its present policy of forcing the Muslim refugees to go back to the same ruined, devastated and dangerous villages, for in the opinion of this Conference such a policy is fraught with grave danger to the Muslim life, honour, property, and religion and any expenditure incurred in connection with the rehabilitation of the Muslim refugees in such dangerous zones would be a sheer waste of public money.

5. In view of the fact that the much trumpeted peace mission of Mr Gandhi in Bihar hopelessly failed to produce any effect and there has neither been any change of heart on the part of the Hindus nor in anti-Muslim policy of the Congress Ministry of Bihar, this session of the Division of Bihar Conference cannot with any sense of responsibility advise the Muslim refugees and sufferers of the Bihar carnage to go back and re-settle in their original villages, for there being available no guarantee of their future safety and security they would always be exposed to danger. This session demands of the Congress Ministry to immediately accept the demands made by the Provincial Muslim League.

6. The Conference strongly condemns the Congress Government of Bihar for its high-handed and unconstitutional policy of shifting down [sic] the Muslim public opinion and depriving the Muslim public of Bihar of the facilities of correct Muslim news by banning the entry of the Morning News in the Province which is a further negation of granting civil liberties to the Muslim press by demanding securities by [sic] the other Muslim press such as the Sada-i-Aam and stopping subsidy of the Orient Press.

20. ‘Stocktaking in Bihar’

Extracts from an Editorial in Dawn, 29 May 1947.

The hell that was let loose in Bihar and which brought in its wake immense sufferings and privations on the members of the minority community did not succeed in extinguishing the spark of dignity that burns in the heart of every Musalman. The prolonged agony of the Muslims of Bihar, inspite of what it has meant to them in terms of physical hardships and tribulations, has neither damaged their morale nor undermined their confidence in themselves or in their brethren outside Bihar. A noble example of the moral and political resuscitation of Muslim Bihar—even though their physical wounds have not healed up—is the splendid response of the grief-stricken Muslims in the Bihar Muslim Political Conference where a lakh of them rallied under the banner of their national organization. It was not in a conventional sense that this first Conference of Bihar Muslims since the Bihar calamity took stock of the situation and grappled with grave problems confronting them.

A little reflection can give one an idea of the magnitude and enormity of these problems and of the situation resulting from what Mr Ghazanfar Ali Khan, who presided over the Conference, called the ‘amazing callousness with which the provincial administration treated those happenings.’ The Health Member in his characteristic emphatic manner dealt with the ‘criminally lenient, attitude of the Provincial administration towards the criminals,’ and made out a powerful case for an impartial enquiry into those blood-curdling when he said: ‘There have been loud and persistent cries for an impartial enquiry. The Congress Ministry has not yet, however, made any move to meet the demands or to vindicate its own position. This is, I dare say, nothing short of self-indictment by the Congress Ministry, more eloquent and conclusive than any indictments others could make.’ The strangest part of the performance or rather wilful negligence of the Congress Ministry which Mr Ghazanfar Ali Khan mentioned was the total non-imposition of any ‘collective fines even in those areas which are known to have taken a concerted part in these massacres.’ The policy of conniving at and abetting the deeds of the communal gangsters could not be taken to this absurd limit even by the most avowed champions of communal jingoism. The Bihar Ministry by their wilful disregard of the need of justice which they displayed have conspicuously added a chapter to the basic jurisprudence of the Jungle law.

If all that has happened in Bihar is to be forgotten—as Mr Gandhi in his puerile innocence would it should—what does the future hold in store for an unarmed and undefended minority of less than 15 per cent, which the brazen-faced ‘nationalism’ of the Bihar Congress would not touch with a pair of tongs? What store does the Bihar Ministry set by modern democratic values and the universally cherished conception of ‘equality of all citizens before law?’ The clear answer that emerges from the Ministry’s practice during and after the disturbances, as reflected in their criminal negligence of and callous indifference towards the problems of Muslim Bihar, is a definite ‘no’. And inspite of Mr Gandhi’s immense faith in the scrupulousness of his Bihar lieutenants and in their capacity to befriend the Bihar Muslims, the fact remains that they have shown scant regard for anything Muslim.

It was in these circumstances when frustration was writ large on Muslim Bihar that the Muslim Political Conference met and discussed the future of the Musalmans in that province. The Conference took note of the grave problem of the refugees and of their rehabilitation and rightly warned them against the activities of those who were working as concealed agents of the Ministry and popularizing the idea that they should return in their devastated villages even before the League’s demand that the Government should provide facilities for rehabilitation and give a guarantee of future security was conceded. The conference gave a positive lead to Muslim Bihar when it unequivocally and emphatically voiced the demand for the incorporation of the ‘District of Purnea and all such neighbouring places which have a Muslim majority’ in Bengal. Coming as it does at a time when the future of India is going to be decided in a matter of months, this opportune move will pave the way for the emancipation of about one million Muslims residing in Bihar’s Muslim majority area contiguous to Bengal, from the yoke of caste Hindu domination which will be a perpetual menace.

Extracts from M.K. Gandhi's Bihar Tour Diary

_Harijan_, 1 June 1947.

19-5-'47

Gandhiji addressed a huge but a perfectly quiet audience at Barh this evening. He congratulated the audience and the volunteers for the perfect order maintained. With the advent of their own Government the latter had to play the new role of builders of the nation, for which they required to build considerably on the constructive training received incidentally during their fight against the foreign Government because of the non-violent character of the fight.

His topic, however, for the evening, continued Gandhiji, was the great sin Bihar had committed and its atonement. He warned the people against falling into the snare of the seemingly plausible argument that in view of Muslim provocation, retaliation was inevitable and the only effective method of putting an end to it. To answer brutality with brutality was to admit one’s moral and intellectual bankruptcy and it could only start a vicious circle of which they had already seen so many manifestations. He could only say that if they continued their mad game, they would not be able to retain the independence that was coming.

Barh was one of those fortunate places which did not entirely go mad. But it could not escape the responsibility for the acts of those around it. It was difficult to estimate what India had already lost through madnesses like Bihar’s or what she might have to lose in future. The only way to escape the consequences of their acts was to show genuine repentance and thus lighten the heavy responsibility of Ansari Saheb, with which he had been entrusted by the ministry. The people should refuse to shelter criminals who had acted barbarously or who were still threatening the returning Muslims under the false belief that they had done something heroic. How it could be heroic, Gandhiji said, he failed to understand.

To the criminals Gandhiji said that as a mark of true repentance they should surrender themselves to the police and bear the punishment that might be meted out to them. Even otherwise it was in their interest to surrender, for if the Government and the police did their duty—which they must if they wanted to justify their existence—they would be arrested sooner or later. A voluntary surrender was bound to win them consideration from the court. What he had said, continued Gandhiji, should not be dismissed as a counsel of cowardice.

20-5-’47

This evening Gandhiji’s prayer was held at Hilsa, one of the worst affected areas in the riots. Addressing the gathering after prayer was over he said that it was a matter of great shame and sorrow. But the shame of the sin could be turned to good account by adequate repentance. All the religions that he had studied were full of instances proving the maxim: ‘The greater the sinner the greater the saint’. For the poignancy of the pain of the guilt enhanced the joy that a guiltless life brought with it. The speaker wished that the maxim could be proved true in the reformed life of the people of Hilsa. They would be repelled by physical dirt. Surely the repulsion caused by mental dirt which the insanity of the Hindus of Hilsa meant was much greater than the pain caused by any physical dirt however great. He was wondering, continued Gandhiji, how he could awaken genuine repentance in the hearts of the Hindus of Hilsa. It had been suggested to him that if he settled down in Hilsa and went from house to house, he would be able to effect the desired transformation. Although there was truth in the remark, he must own his physical weakness and consequent inability to follow the advice. They were none the better for his confession. He hoped, therefore, that his remarks would penetrate the hearts of the large audience and that they would invite the Muslim sufferers to return.

He had been told that many Muslims came to see the place and finding it unprepared left it. He expected them to help the process of renovation of the shattered houses. The rainy season was approaching. They should, therefore, be quick about their work. Till then it was their duty to accommodate the Muslims in their own houses as they would accommodate their own blood relations. The Hindus and the Muslims had lived like blood relations in Bihar before. There was no reason why they should not revive the old time.

If the Hindus showed the spirit of brotherliness, concluded Gandhiji, it would be good for Bihar, for India and the world.

21-5-'47

Gandhiji addressed a mammoth gathering at Bikram this evening. He congratulated the audience for the perfect quiet maintained throughout the prayer and the correct beating of time in the singing of Ramadhun.

He also congratulated them for keeping their sanity while insanity raged all round—thanks to the efforts of Congressmen and other Hindus. Still some tension did exist and many Muslims left the place out of fear. As the houses were intact, the problem of their repair did not arise. The Hindus could, however, clean up lanes and houses deserted by the Muslims and create such an atmosphere of hospitality that the Muslims would be forced to return.

Gandhiji next took up the thread of his talk at Hilsa where he had dropped it the day before. He had heard from various quarters that ever since the acceptance of office by the Congress it was abandoning its tradition of penance, sacrifice and service, so painfully built up during its glorious history of over 60 years, from its humble beginnings in 1885 to the present day when it had become a mighty organization having millions of followers. They said that it was fast becoming an organization of selfish power-seekers and job-hunters. Instead of remaining the servants of the public, Congressmen had become its lords and masters. The Congress was, moreover, torn by petty intrigues and group rivalries. What he said was true of all the provinces. If that continued, he was afraid Indians would not be able to retain the precious thing that was approaching. For that they required knowledge, understanding and purity of mind. If the Congress and the League did not retain the requisite purity and strength, they would find all power slipping from their hands. They could not hope to maintain it with the help of the bayonet like the British. All their power came from the people, who were the real masters, though they might not realize it at the moment. The Congress won their confidence through years of service. If it betrayed them, he was afraid, they would fall a prey to the white robed goondas of society in whose hands all power would pass.

He had come to Bihar for solving the Hindu–Muslim problem but things were so interrelated that he was forced to take up other issues as well. He had, therefore, dwelt on the corruption that was coming in the Congress. The Congress should be above party intrigues and be a symbol of unity and service of the whole of India....
22. ‘Chargesheet against Bihar Government II’

Extracts from a Report from Dawn, 3 June 1947.

It was urged upon the Government soon after the carnage that unless they wished to perpetuate the disastrous consequences of all that had happened, they must at once proceed to set up a specially effective and powerful machinery under pre-eminently conscientious and painstaking officers, at least half of whom must be Muslims, invested with extraordinary powers to carry on the difficult and huge tasks of apprehending the culprits, recovering the abducted girls and searching for the looted properties. In anticipation of the difficulties due partly to the abnormal conditions prevailing and partly to the corruption, which is only too rampant in the rank and file of so many departments of the administration, we tried to impress upon the Government that such a reliable and powerful organization assisted by an equally reliable detective corps, could alone deal with the situation effectively.

All these proposals were summarily rejected and the performance of these huge tasks was left to the usual Police methods. It was apparent to all keen observers that when monetary considerations could easily weigh with the Police, in addition to the usual sloth and indifference as well as the communal passions and inclinations of so many in the Police force, the afflicted and the impoverished minority had little reason to expect genuine sympathy and fair dealings and the prospects for justice were poor indeed. A few abducted girls have been rescued and some looted properties here and there recovered through the unusual efforts of some exceptionally conscientious and painstaking officers, but the failures of the Police in connection with investigation into the cases and searches for the abducted girls and looted properties are simply appalling.

Hundreds of the girls reported to have been abducted and kidnapped remain undetected and rumours have it that many of them have, by now, been transported across the borders of this Province and many others have conveniently been done away with. As a rule it has been the bitter and baffling experience of those who approached the authorities in this connection to find callous indifference and a general unwillingness to take full and appropriate measures as required by the difficulties of the situation. The aggrieved persons who were forced to abandon their homes and hearths and could hardly dare to venture into the country side, on appealing for the rescue of their dear ones, were peremptorily told by the authorities that they should give ‘exact’ information about the identity of the persons who abducted their women and about the present whereabouts of the abducted women, before the Government machinery could be expected to move.

The Government may or may not still be doing something in this connection, in their own leisurely way, but timely, appropriate and energetic actions could have saved the innocent women from a life of shame and slavery and many of them from a cruel and untimely death as well....

I shall not deal, here, with the devious and the diverse ways in which the aggrieved minority continues to be harassed and oppressed. The facts discussed are sufficient to bear out how recklessly the elementary principles of social justice and fair play are trampled upon in this Province. The complacency of the Governor of Bihar, the Viceroy and the British Government does not seem to have been disturbed by the calamitous happenings in this Province and apparently they have not deemed it necessary to intervene and use their special powers.

The representatives of the British Imperialism never hesitate to intervene when their own interests are threatened but they have been prevented by their ‘democratic scruples’ to do so when the life, honour and liberty of a whole community are shattered and when, indeed, the essential principles of the civilized existence and Government appear to have been cast away.

Section 93 Government in the Punjab has not only established an iron rule but is conducting its policy vindictively against the majority community there. For events much less dreadful in conception and execution and much less disastrous in consequences, all the resources of the State, Civil and Military, have been called up to inflict the most severe punishments on the majority community.

Are the British also of the view that different measures of justice are to be meted out to the different nations and communities in India? Are all the pains and penalties intended for the offending majorities of one nation or community only and all the measures of succour and support for the aggrieved minorities of another nation or community alone? Are these traditions of democratic freedom, social justice and civilized Government which the British Imperialists wish to leave as their legacy to India after quitting this Sub-Continent? These are the pertinent questions which we are constrained to ask at the end of this article.

23. Savarkar Congratulates Bihar Hindus
Statement by V.D. Savarkar, 11 June 1947

‘Hindus in Behar! I congratulate you on the Pan-Hindu patriotism and valour with which you did not only meet but did even forestall anti-Hindu aggression. You have thereby not only saved yourselves but even our Hindu brethren in adjoining provinces.

I am aware of the campaign of vilification and persecution carried against you by the Moslems and the Hindu Quislings all over India. In their eyes the blackest crime you committed consisted in the fact that you should have been deeply stirred by the atrocities committed on the Hindus in Bengal. They might as well condemn the hand for striking a serpent which only bit the toe! They conveniently forgot that Hindudom is an Organic National Being. If a Hindu gets ill treated as a Hindu in any part of the world it constitutes an insult to Hindudom as a whole and must be challenged by Hindus on any front convenient to them.

Again these very calumniators never found anything criminal in the fact that the Khan Brothers, Mr Jinnah, the Moslem Ministers in Sind and Bengal and even Gandhiji and Nehru—none of whom was a Behari—should have shuddered, got shocked, shed tears and made the cause of the Moslems of Behar their own. They seem to think that Moslems are justified in avenging even a just chastisement meted out to Moslems in any part of the world but if the Hindus in Behar feel the cause of the Hindus in Bengal their own they deserve for this crime to be bombed and bulleted en masse!

But I assure you, oh valiant Hindu sufferers in Behar, that millions on millions of Hindus all over Hindusthan have been blessing you as defenders of Hindu Faith and Hindu Honour precisely for this very fact that the Pan-Hindu Spirit which is descending down like an angel with a Godly message of hope, should have found such a splendid response in your thoughts and deeds.

I learn that Gandhiji has been exhorting that before the rains fall every Hindu householder in Behar should shelter some homeless Moslems under his roof and treat them as members of the family. That gentleman does not seem to think his life mission fulfilled by merely cutting off parts of our Motherland and handing them over to the Moslems to make room for their Pakistan. He wants now to turn every Hindu house into a bit of Pakistan and of Naokhali [sic] even before Mr Jinnah demands it all. I ask you to brush aside these exhortations as the ravings of a Monomaniac. If a Hindu has a corner under his roof and a morsel of food to spare let him shelter and feed some Hindu refugees from Bengal or the Punjab before the rains fall. For, they are indeed your brothers in faith, in flesh, in blood and essentially in the will to love and live together as brothers.

But above all, oppose tooth and nail the sinister attempt to allot separate areas to the Moslems in Behar to settle down. Beware of the fact that within a few years these Moslem areas would be claimed as stepping stones in the progress of the Pakistani corridor. Take care of the Congressite Ministry there, which may yield clandestinely to this Moslem demand at any moment. The Moslem refugees who want to return to their homes do not do so to oblige the Hindus there. They may quietly go back severally to their respective villages if it suits them or better still need not return at all to Behar.'

C. Bombay

1. Report from Bombay Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bombay for Second Half of March 1947, 3 April 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAT.

....3. Communal.—Serious communal riots broke out suddenly in Bombay City on the night of March 30th. The immediate cause is rather obscure but the following circumstances led to the outbreak. A Hindu pedestrian happened to be run over by a lorry at about 5.30 p.m. and it was rumoured that he was deliberately knocked down by a Muslim driver, though the actual fact was that he was knocked down by a Military lorry driven by a Christian. A pool of blood on the spot where he was knocked down continued to agitate the local inhabitants and gave currency to the false rumour. A ‘Ram Navami’ procession passed along this road peacefully and as soon as it terminated a mob of Hindu youths stoned a Masjid. This was a signal for mobs to appear and violence to take place. Within a few minutes nine Muslims and one Hindu were stabbed and some cases of arson were reported. At nearly the same time trouble broke out in two other localities. A victoria carrying three Muslims and one Hindu was held up, its occupants were brutally murdered and burnt. Thereafter the trouble spread to the usual localities. On this day there were 93 stabbing cases, six cases of arson, one of crude bomb and 5 of looting. In all 51 persons were killed and 124 persons were injured. The police opened fire on twenty occasions. In all 104 rounds were fired, injuring twelve persons including one woman who died later. On the next day 19 stabbing cases occurred of which seven proved fatal. There were also three cases of arson. Rigorous measures have been taken and the Military have been out since March 30th but have not yet come into action.

In Ahmedabad also the communal situation deteriorated on March 30th and there were two bomb incidents on that day, injuring three persons, and two stabbing cases on the next day.

Communal relations are still strained in Mahad, Mangaon and Roha Talukas of the Kolaba District and there have been occasional outbursts, though of a minor nature, namely, a masjid, a hay stack and a house were set on fire and two dargas and an idol were damaged. Also small incidents which took place in Panvel during the Holi festival on March 6th, such as stealing of grass and the burning of a cart have soured communal relations in that taluka.

At Malegoan in the Nasik District a clash occurred between Nationalist Muslims and Muslim Leaguers on March 23rd, when the former enraged by provocative speeches abusing Congress leaders, attacked a meeting of the latter with lathis and stones. As a result some persons were injured. The situation there is under control and no further incident has taken place....

2. Report from Bombay Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bombay for First Half of June 1947, 18 June 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/6/47, NAI.

....3. Communal.—The communal situation in Bombay City continued to give anxiety. A few stray cases of stabbing and minor incidents of assault, acid and stone-throwing were reported. The total number of casualties from the 30th March to the 15th June is 119 persons dead and 286 persons injured. During this period 1,276 persons were rounded up and 1,861 were arrested for breach of prohibitory orders. Collective fines amounting to Rs 19,700 were imposed on several localities.

There were a few incidents in the districts also. In Ahmedabad City, a small crude bomb was thrown on a mosque, but it did not explode. A collective fine of Rs 5,000 has been imposed in connection with this incident. In Kaira District, a serious Hindu-Muslim clash occurred at Sarsa over the question of playing music before a mosque and as a result 20 persons were injured one of whom died subsequently. In retaliation, some mischief-mongers of Bhalej attempted to set fire to a local temple but only a few steps of the wooden staircase were burnt. This situation at these two places, though tense, is well in hand. In Sholapur City six persons were stabbed on the 14th June, one of whom died. In Kolaba District, the newly introduced custom of performing ‘Satyanarayan Puja’ near a mosque at Neral led to a fracas between some Hindus and Muslims. As a result, a Muslim boy was slightly injured. The matter has, however, been amicably settled and the situation there is now quiet. With the approach of the monsoon, the social boycott imposed by Hindus on Muslims in Mahad, Mangoan and Roha talukas is gradually relaxing and communal tension in these talukas has considerably eased. However, there was a set-back in the situation in Mahad Taluka as a result of non-communal murders of two Gujars at Birwadi on the 5th of June. There was also some tension at Uran due to a small fight which took place between the imported Kachhi labourers and the local Hindus over the use of a well. The tension at these places is easing and the situation is now quiet.

Inter-Communal.—Some Caste Hindus and Harijans in Bombay City resorted to throwing of stones and sodawater bottles at each other and the police were forced to open fire on two occasions to disperse them. In all five rounds were fired as a result of which two Harijans were injured. The Caste Hindus also stabbed a Harijan and threw a bulb containing acid at a Harijan woman who received minor burns....
D. CENTRAL PROVINCES AND BERAR

1. Crimes Committed by Hindus of Jubbulpore Town

Extracts from a Letter from M.M. Burhanul Haq to R.S. Shukla, Undated [March 1947]

Jubbulpore

We are constrained and compelled to bring to your notice that aggressions of very heinous and criminal type are being committed by the Hindus of Jubbulpore Town. You have repeatedly and with vociferous voice on platforms and in press announced that you would take strong measures [again those] who would commit acts of violence [and that] you would do your best to suppress it and would not spare any community who takes the law into its own hands.

2. You have imposed Punitive Police Tax upon the Muslims at Burhanpur very recently because some trifling injuries are said to have been caused to some individual Hindus. You also did not spare this town of Burhanpur even in your days of Ministry in 1939. You also immediately, within a week, levied this Police Punitive Tax on 24.3.1939 again the Muslims of Biswa Chandore because one Congressman was alleged to have been murdered by Muslims, which was not found to be a fact later on by the court of law and you had to return back [sic] the amounts of Punitive Tax to the persons from whom it was collected.

3. All these measures, it seems, were only for the Muslim community and not for the Hindus. With what difficulty we are maintaining peace in Jubbulpore, you have no idea of it. Your Congress Government is meant only, it seems, to find fault with the Muslims by taxing [sic for imposing] the Punitive Tax only on the Muslim community. Though there were many aggressions in your days of previous government at Jubbulpore in which lives of Muslims were lost [sic] by the Hindus but you never levied the Punitive Tax against the Hindus who were ever the aggressors at Jubbulpore.

4. If you really mean what you say for the strong measures against the community, we want to bring to your notice that at Jubbulpore, on 1.3.1947, one Hindu, under a conspiracy, assaulted with a dagger four Muslims and one of them has succumbed to the injuries. This locality is a purely Hindu locality from Kamania Gate to Nimbard Ganj. These four fatal assaults were made during the day in a business locality, within a distance of two furlongs, completely populated by the Hindu community. The assailant was not even caught, when he continuously committed the assaults by dagger, by the Hindu community. This proves how far the Hindus are aggressors in the matter.

5. We approached, in a deputation, the District Magistrate of Jubbulpore to press upon him [the need] to take strong measures, like Punitive Tax, against the members of the aggressive community. He only laughed and by-passed [sic] us. It seems that he is here only to protect the Hindus and not the Muslims because he may be thinking that his masters belong to the aggressive community.

6. The result of this, by not taking strong measures against the Hindus, is that another brutal assault was made on the night of 18th March 1947 at about 10 p.m. on the Peshimam Hafiz Qudrat Ali Siddiqui of the Jehangirabad Mosque at Jubbulpore. This place is also in a Hindu locality. It is just close to the gurdwara of the Sikhs. The assailants are most coward goondas of the Hindu community, who, timidly, under a conspiracy, assaulted a religious head of the Muslims. It is very difficult, even for the Police, to trace out the assailants because the assault is made under the conspiracy of the Hindu community.

7. If you are true to your word and mean what you say, you would be pleased to take strong measures against the aggressors of the Hindu community of the locality concerned so that the contagion may not spread into a conflagration. If it happens so, you and your Congress Government will be responsible for it.

M.M. Burhanul Haq
MLA
President
City and District Muslim League

Hon’ble Mr Shukla
Premier, CP and Berar
Nagpur

2. Report from CP and Berar

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on CP and Berar for Second Half of April 1947, 6 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

....2. Communal—There was a communal clash in Jubbulpore town on the 24th of April, the result of a petty quarrel between a few Rashtriya Sewak Sangh youths and some Muslims boys in which two Muslims were attacked with lathis and stones. Later in the day, a Hindu cyclist who had nothing to do with the affair earlier in the day was knocked down and stabbed in the stomach; he died shortly afterwards.

There was another sudden outbreak of stabbing in Jubbulpore on the 28th, when four persons were stabbed, 3 Hindus and one Muslim, and one Muslim was hit with a lathi. Special precautions were immediately taken and a curfew was imposed. Orders under section 144 were promulgated prohibiting meetings and processions. The Goondas Act was enforced and 38 goondas were ordered to report themselves to the Police. Fortunately there were no repercussions as leaders of both communities spared no pains in helping in the maintenance of public order.

The murder of two members of a Kunjda (Muslim) family in a suburb of Saugor, although apparently due to private enmity and had no communal significance, caused widespread panic in Saugor town. All possible precautions were taken and the city has since returned to normal, except for stray cases of stone throwing which continue to occur at night.

Although there is calm on the surface, there is an undercurrent of tension and nervousness, some of it at least being due to the occurrences in the Punjab and the Frontier, which is likely to break out at unexpected places and in unexpected moments. This nervousness sometimes finds expression in unfounded rumours which are likely to cause further trouble. For instance, in the Drug [sic] district it was rumoured that the Hindus were getting together arms and quantities of sulphuric acid to attack the Muslims; again in the Sihora tahsil of the Jubbulpore district it was alleged that daggers and other weapons were being clandestinely prepared by Muslims for a general attack on Hindus. Peace Committees have been formed to trace these rumours to their source and deal with them. The two most prominent leaders of the Muslim League, namely, Syed Abdur Rauf Shah and Maulana Burhanul Haq are co-operating whole-heartedly with the authorities in maintaining communal peace. Except for these isolated incidents, the communal situation continues on the whole to be satisfactory....

E. Delhi

1. Communal Trouble in Delhi

Letter from W. Christie to A.E. Porter, 24 March 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 5/7/47, NAI.

D.O. No. 307 ST/CC
Delhi

Chief Commissioner
Delhi

My dear Porter,

As verbally reported to you last night, communal trouble arose yesterday afternoon as a result of some Sikhs in a jeep and a lorry accidentally injuring some Muslims near the Juma Masjid just before the Pakistan Day meeting was due to start. This resulted in a communal fracas in that area and also another incident opposite the Gurdwara in the Chandni Chowk. The serious casualties of yesterday were two dead and four injured, though a few with minor injuries were also treated, but not admitted to hospital. A curfew was imposed by the District Magistrate from yesterday afternoon until 7 a.m. this morning and had the desired effect of preventing further incidents throughout the night, but there have been some more scattered over the city this morning and the casualties up to the time of writing (noon) are five injured today. The District Magistrate has imposed the curfew from 6 p.m. to 7 a.m. for a week, has prohibited meetings for a fortnight, searches for knives, spears and other weapons are being successfully carried out and generally all precautions are being taken to prevent the trouble increasing or spreading. A pre-censorship order on communal riot news has also been issued by the District Magistrate and I have asked him to let me have a copy of it at once for submission to the Government of India for review as desired by the Government of India in connection with orders issued under the new Press Emergency Powers Ordinance.

2. The military were in position in the city in support of the civil power on account of yesterday being Pakistan Day, but to the best of my knowledge they have not so far had to be used to suppress any of the incidents.

Yours sincerely,

W. Christie

A.E. Porter, Esq CSI, CIE, ICS,
Secretary to the Govt of India,
Home Department, New Delhi.
2. Report from Delhi

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Delhi for the Second Half of March 1947, 5 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

...Communal. The grave disturbances in the Punjab had the inevitable result of heightening very dangerously the communal tension in Delhi. Refugees from the Punjab brought harrowing tales of atrocities and accounts in the press, particularly those from the special correspondents of the various papers, had a bad effect on the morale of people. The determination of the Muslim League to celebrate Pakistan Day on the 23rd March, as usual, had, therefore, even more than usual the prospect of trouble and that happened in spite of elaborate police and military arrangements. The sober right wing elements in the Muslim League were also anxious that there should be no disturbance of the peace and in that connection they had had to resist strongly their left wing. Unfortunately the Sikhs had begun parading about the city in jeeps and lorries armed with their large kirpans and the trouble started when one such jeep full of Sikhs followed by a lorry full of Sikhs, collided with a Muslim cyclist in front of the Jama Masjid. Clashes and stabbings continued for several days, but, thanks to the police and military precautions and the prompt imposition of the curfew no serious clashes took place after the first day. Five people were killed and thirty-five injured during the disturbances and there were also a few cases of arson. Before these disturbances broke out the Sikhs have been making elaborate defensive and offensive preparations and had sought the assistance of the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh which, however, declined to associate itself officially with the Sikhs. Since the disturbances broke, the Sikhs have been less aggressive as they have been somewhat concerned to find that they are being generally blamed for the beginning of the trouble.

A regrettable feature is that the public of Delhi have followed the public of the Punjab in alleging communalism amongst the Police. The complaints by the Muslims are mainly against Sikh police officers more than against Hindu police officers, and the Sikhs, on the other hand, complain against Muslim Police officers. The right of Sikhs to carry kirpans even during times of disturbances is greatly resented by the Muslims when they themselves are prevented by the orders under section 144 CrPC from carrying any arms, and even lathis.

The last two days have been free from any incidents but communal feelings are only suppressed as a result of the control imposed and if that control be relaxed they will inevitably break out again.

The serious communal disturbances in the rural area of Gurgaon have caused a good deal of alarm amongst the villagers in the southern portion of the district, but steps have been taken to reassure the people in that area....

3. Report from Delhi

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Delhi for the First Half of April 1947, 19 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

...Communal. The communal situation showed some improvement during the fortnight, but it has been necessary to continue the curfew at night owing to continuation of astray assaults. The total casualties upto the end of the period under report were 10 killed and 46 injured.
The disturbances in Gurgaon caused the situation in the rural areas to deteriorate and there were several occasions when rumours and panic nearly led to disturbances. Refugees from the Punjab also contributed to the prevailing alarm with their tales of suffering and loss, but a large number of them are now returning to their homes and the situation is consequently easing.

The Muslims have continued their propaganda against the carrying of kirpans by Sikhs. The extremist elements in the Muslim National Guards and the Bazm-i-Pakistan have been inciting Muslims to disarm the Sikhs forcibly and have been endeavouring to work up a movement to secure for the Muslims the right to carry swords. The administration in general and the Hindu and Sikh police officers in particular have been attacked by a number of Muslim speakers who allege that they have been pursuing an anti-Muslim policy. On the other hand, Sikhs and Hindus allege communalism by Muslim officers and in such conditions it is difficult to maintain unity and the morale of the forces.

There has been considerable excitement amongst the Muslims in connection with the cartoon entitled ‘Mohammad goes to the Mount’ which was published in the Hindustan Times last month. The apology published by the editor of the Hindustan Times has not been regarded as satisfactory by the Muslims, and an application has been made on behalf of the Muslims for the necessary permission to launch a prosecution.

Some objectionable speeches have recently been made in the Arya Samaj meetings where speakers have condemned Pakistan and criticized Congress leaders for their alleged appeasement of the Muslim League.

During the fortnight nationalist Muslims held a series of inconclusive meetings at some of which Allama Mashriqi, the leader of the Khaksars, was present. The object was to form a united Muslim front, but they have met with little success as their approach to Mr Jinnah did not have the result expected and there are also serious differences amongst them as to their correct policy in the present situation.

There has been considerable activity amongst the Sikhs not only in connection with the demand for the partition of the Punjab, but also as a counter to the Muslim propaganda against the carrying of kirpans. They have threatened serious consequences, if their right to carry kirpans should be withdrawn. On the other hand, there have been complaints amongst them of insufficient support financially or otherwise from rich Sikhs. Only two volunteers from Delhi could be found to go to Amritsar to take a pledge of service to the Panth in response to Master Tara Singh’s appeal. ...

4. Communal Trouble in Delhi
   Letter from W. Christie to A.E. Porter, 25 April 1947
   Home Poll (I), File. No. 5/7/47, NAI.

Chief Commissioner, Delhi
D.C. No. 430 ST/CC

Delhi

My dear Porter,

As there has been a recrudescence of communal trouble in the city in the last two days, as I mentioned to you personally yesterday afternoon, I think I had better recommence sending you a daily report until the matter subsides again. This report covers the 23rd and 24th instant.
2. No untoward incident occurred on the night of the 22/23rd instant and the shops opened as usual on the 23rd, but for no apparent reason 5 incidents took place that afternoon in Sadar Bazar, which is a very troublesome communal area, but which had been kept more or less free of incidents since the present trouble began on the 23rd March 1947. In addition to the 5 incidents in Sadar Bazar, a Muslim was found badly stabbed near Talkatora gardens, New Delhi on the 23rd morning and the Muslim of the mosque on the top of the Ridge in Civil Lines, Delhi was stabbed that evening. Both died. A 24-hour curfew was imposed in the Sadar Bazar area from yesterday morning, but between the lifting of the previous night's curfew and the imposition of the 24-hour curfew, 9 more incidents occurred in that area and 4 more occurred in other areas during the day as a result of which a 24-hour curfew has been imposed in the Bazar Sita Ram area also.

3. The casualties so far are as follows:

   23rd instant. 3 Muslims killed and 1 Muslim and 3 Hindus injured; total 3 killed and 4 injured.
   24th instant. 2 Muslims, 2 Hindus and 1 Sikh killed and 3 Muslims and 5 Hindus injured; total 5 killed and 8 injured.

   The total number of casualties since the trouble began on the 23rd March 1947 are as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Hindus</th>
<th>Sikhs</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Killed</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>6</td>
<td>1</td>
<td>22</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Injured</td>
<td>28</td>
<td>35</td>
<td>4</td>
<td>67</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

   None of these casualties have been caused by police or military action.

4. Searches and arrests have continued on an extensive scale.

   Yours sincerely,
   W. Christie

A.E. Porter, Esq, CSI, CIE, ICS,
Secretary to the Govt of India,
Home Department, New Delhi

5. Measures to Check Communal Rioting

   Resolution Passed by the Central Government Muslim Employees’ Association, 25 April 1947
   Home Poll (I), File No. 5/7/47, NAI.

   CENTRAL GOVERNMENT MUSLIM EMPLOYEES’ ASSOCIATION
   NEW DELHI
   RESOLUTION

   At a general meeting of the Central Government Muslim Employees’ Association held in New Delhi on Friday the 25th April 1947 the following resolution was passed:

   ‘In view of the cowardly murderous attacks on peaceful citizens of New Delhi, which has all these years been free from disturbances of any kind, particularly in the areas occupied by Government servants the insecurity of the life and property of these servants and their families caused thereby and the insufficiency and incompetency of the police in apprehending the culprits, this general meeting of the Central Government Muslim Employees’ Association resolve that—

1. The Honourable the Home Member be requested to take the following measures for their safety:
   (a) All those who have been imported into New Delhi after the Punjab disturbances and who are residing in Government quarters, Gurdwaras, temples and other places in New Delhi should be ordered to vacate these premises forthwith as they are a menace to the peace and tranquility of the city.
   (b) As the possession of kirpans by members of one community affords a direct encouragement for their use on the unarmed members of the other communities, as evidenced by incidents which have already taken place in New Delhi, every citizen should also be allowed to keep swords for self-defence.
   (c) Till action on (a) above is taken armed pickets should be posted in the areas of Gurdwaras and temples in New Delhi where these imported people are residing.
   (d) Effective arrangements should be made for catching culprits who use automobile vehicles in kidnapping lonely passersby.
   (e) Armed police and military, which should include an adequate representation of the Muslim community, should be deputed to petrol [sic] the areas occupied by Government servants.

2. The Honourable Member for Works, Mines and Power be requested to allot immediately compact blocks to the Muslim staff, reserving the Minto Road area for them.’

Copy forwarded to the Hon’ble Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Member, Home Department, New Delhi.

6. Culprits Must Be Apprehended

Secretary, Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee, Delhi, to the Home Member Forwarding a Copy of a Resolution Passed by the Sikhs of Delhi, 27 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 5/7/47, NAI.

This largely attended weekly gathering (Dewan) of the Sikhs held in Gurdwara Sisganj, Delhi on Sunday the 27th April, 1947 hears and views with regret the dastardly act of 15 or 20 Muslim brutes who mercilessly butchered S. Mohan Singh, overseer at Pul Bangash Delhi on 23.4.1947 and severely condemns the action of those goondas. This Dewan requests the authorities to apprehend the culprits and to punish them according to law. The Dewan also appeals to the Government to impose a punitive fine of at least of Rs 5,00,000 on the Muslim residents of that Ilaga and to pay the recovered fine as compensation and damages to the unfortunate widow and infant child of the deceased. In view of the continued assaults on Sikhs at Pul Bangash during the last 8 or 9 months the Sikhs also request the Government to post a permanent armed military picket at Pul Bangash at the cost of the Muslim residents of the Ilaga.

This Dewan requests the authorities to try that Muslim Police Officer for abetment of murder who saw the incident happening and inspite of S. Mohan Singh folding his hands in an appeal for help, went away in his lorry scornfully smiling. The Officer and his companion policemen should be summarily dismissed from service and the severest possible punishment awarded to them.

This Dewan sends heart-felt condolence of all the Sikhs of Delhi to the bereaved family and prays to God the Almighty to give peace to the soul of the Shaheed, to give power to the members of the bereaved family to stand this shock and to give the Sikh Sangat light and power to check such brutalities in future.

7. Political Nature of the Communal Disturbances

Letter from W. Christie to A.E. Porter, 28 April 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 5/7/47, NAI.

Chief Commissioner
Delhi

My dear Porter,

I am sorry that as I had other engagements all Saturday morning I was unable to get a report to you then on the communal situation. This report, therefore, covers Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

2. Friday was quiet, but on Saturday morning there were again a number of incidents in various areas such as the Nicholson garden in Civil Lines, Sadar Bazar, Kotwali, Lal Kuan and near the Irwin Hospital. They were all stabbing cases except for one near the Irwin Hospital where a Muslim youth, said to be the son of one of the officials of Rampur, who had run away from Rampur after having stolen his father’s revolver, shot at and wounded a Sikh. The two stories differ as to whether the boy first shot at the Sikhs, of whom there were three or four or whether the Sikhs attacked the boy first, but the boy is under arrest.

3. As a result of the various incidents that day 1 Muslim was killed and 3 Muslims, 2 Hindus and 1 Sikh were injured, a total of 1 killed and 6 injured, bringing the total to 24 killed and 72 injured.

4. Yesterday was quiet until the evening when another stabbing incident occurred in Police Station Hauz Qazi where a Hindu was attacked by two Muslims, and a Muslim was found fatally stabbed on Kingsway in Civil Lines.

5. Three Muslims previously injured by stabbing died yesterday.

6. Yesterday’s casualties were 1 Muslim killed and 1 Hindu injured plus 3 Muslims died of injuries previously sustained, bringing the total casualties to 20 Muslims, 7 Hindus and 1 Sikh killed and 28 Muslims, 37 Hindus and 5 Sikhs injured, a total of 28 killed and 70 injured.

7. Stringent curfew orders have had to be maintained in the worst affected parts of the city, and arrests and searches are going on. Excluding arrests merely for violation of the curfew and other orders under section 144 CrPC, the arrests so far made are:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Hindus</th>
<th>Sikhs</th>
<th>Total</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>U/S 107/151, CrPC</td>
<td>248</td>
<td>289</td>
<td>15</td>
<td>552</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>U/Ss of the IPC</td>
<td>37</td>
<td>5</td>
<td>13</td>
<td>55</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

8. The Senior Superintendent of Police reports that the carrying of kirpans, which are really full-sized swords, by Sikhs has become a real menace to the city. He says that almost all the murders and cases u/s 307, IPC in which Muslims are the victims, are very reasonably suspected, and in some cases actually known to have been caused by Sikhs with their kirpans. This is, to some extent, borne out by the casualty figures mentioned above as it will be seen that out of 48 Muslim casualties practically all of which were stabbings, 20 have died, whereas out of 44 Hindu casualties, also mostly stabbings, only 7 have died, and out of 6 Sikhs casualties 1 has died. The proportion of deaths in the case of Muslims is very high and the only assumption to draw in the circumstances is that the injuries are in a large majority of their cases, done by these large swords.
towards Freedom: 1947

9. Although the above is the position it is difficult to see what remedy can be enforced. The only remedy would be either to prohibit kirpans or limit their size to miniature ones of an inch or two, but an attempt to do either, particularly unilaterally for Delhi, would almost certainly only make matters worse as the Sikhs would openly resist any such order and jathas of Sikhs from the Punjab would be sent to Delhi to defy the order.

On the other hand, the insistent Muslim demand for permission for them to carry swords so long as the Sikhs are permitted to carry kirpans is equally impossible in present conditions as it would just lead to wholesale slaughter.

10. The main difficulty in putting down these present communal disturbances, as compared with communal disturbances in the past, is that they are linked to no specific occasion. In the past one knew that certain religious festivals were likely to result in communal outbursts but once these outbursts had been got under control, conditions usually rapidly returned to normal and remained so until some other religious festival. Now the outbreaks of communal disturbances are connected with no religious festival but are predominantly political and there is no saying how or when they will ultimately be stopped. They can temporarily be suppressed by force but that is no cure.

Yours sincerely,

A.E. Porter, Esq CSI, CIE, ICS,
Secretary to the Govt of India,
Home Department, New Delhi.

8. ‘Malik’s Peace Appeal to Hindu & Sikh Leaders’

Dawn, 7 May 1947.

In a statement issued on Tuesday from Delhi Mr D.M. Malik, Chairman of the Ad-Hoc Committee of the Delhi Provincial Muslim League appeals to the Hindu and Sikh leaders of Delhi to put their heads together and pool all their resources for the restoration of normal and peaceful conditions in the town.

He says: That the tragic events which have been taking place in Delhi for the last one and a half months have resulted in enormous loss of life and property to the people of Delhi, irrespective of their religion or political views.

As a result of these events which must be painful to every peace-loving citizen, the social and economic fabric of the city has been torn to pieces, entailing enormous hardship and suffering to all the people.

It will be no exaggeration to say that in the first City of India today no one feels secure even in the precincts of his house. This is a state of affairs, which I am constrained to say has disgraced the fair name of Delhi, which has been for centuries past not only the seat of the Government but also the centre of what may rightly be called Indian civilization.

That such a state of affairs should exist in Delhi, when the administration is completely in the hands of a Government in which all the political parties are represented is really deplorable.

It is all the more so because at this particular moment, the top most leaders of all the communities are in Delhi for negotiations with the Viceroy for a final and peaceful transfer of power to Indian hands.

I make bold to say that the law of the jungle which has prevailed for some time past does not help any political party in gaining its objectives and the realization of this fact must now be obvious to all concerned.

Why then should such ugly happenings continue to disfigure the fair name of this ancient city which by virtue of its present and past history should have been the model for emulation for the rest of the country?

Let, therefore, the leaders of Muslims, Hindus and Sikhs sit together, join their hands and pool all their resources to restore the glory that was Delhi.

9. Representation Protesting against the Highhandedness of Delhi Police

Letter from Secretary, Hindu Sahayata Samiti, to the Home Member, 9 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 5/7/47, NAI.

The Hon’ble Home Member
New Delhi
Sir,

A representation with signatures of over one lakh citizens (including Municipal Commissioners, Mir-Mohallas, Advocates, Doctors, Professors, great businessmen and others) of Delhi has been sent to the District Magistrate of Delhi protesting against the highhanded and repressive policy of Police against innocent Hindus in general and RSS (a peace loving organization) in particular, making it and its members as the special target. The representation is on the next page.

Yours respectfully,
Secretary

ENCLOSURE

The District Magistrate,
Delhi
Sir,

We the Hindus of Delhi beg to bring to your kind notice something which needs your immediate and serious attention.

While complaints have already been made to you in several ways by the representatives of the Hindus that the Police in the course of the disturbances in Delhi has made indiscriminate arrests of a very large number of Hindus in the various localities of Delhi and in doing so has also harassed them and in some cases even entered their houses in the absence of the male members and thereby interfered with their privacy. We note with great concern that the RSS, has now come in for special attention and attack by the Police. In this connection we may particularly draw your attention to the arrest of five persons of the Sangh recently made in the Civil Lines. These five persons are absolutely innocent yet the Police by arresting them is making every effort to implicate them. Again another arrest of a prominent member of Sangh has been made in Karol Bagh and the allegation is that his Motor cycle was seen several times moving about the city, a strange logic. It is how the Police has now directed its attention towards the Sangh. They have also searched the various offices of the Sangh and yet they have not found even a trace of anything incriminating. The Sangh as it is very well known to everybody who has followed its activities, since its inception has stood for the peaceful uplift of the Hindus. It inculcates among them spirit of brotherhood, sacrifice and service to make them good citizens and since the time it has started, it has never taken any part in any subversive or unlawful activities and yet it is simply strange to find, and which is perhaps due to the lying and poisonous propaganda carried on by the Muslim Press, that it is now in the bad books of the Government for no fault of its own.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Whereas we find everyday the Muslim National Guards parading in the streets with their Jeep, Uniform Dress and their flags, inciting Musalmans and organizing them. We also find them carrying on Parade and what is more perplexing is that on certain occasions they have also been found in large numbers in the District Courts holding their Parades, shouting slogans and then above all when their very creed stands for violence and terrorizing the Hindus and Sikhs, why is it that no action so far has been taken against them. In fact, it is their Organization and their propaganda that have been entirely responsible for all this atmosphere in the city as well as outside. In many places where searches have been made, arms of various kinds are said to have been discovered. Even their women in Burkas are working and yet the Police as well as the other local authorities have not taken any strong and organized step against them.

We, therefore, beg to submit that the authorities should show impartiality and fairness in their dealings. Otherwise if this state of affairs is allowed to continue and we the Hindus suffer, we may frankly inform you that it would have serious repercussions.

10. Report from Delhi

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Delhi for the First Half of May 1947, 19 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

My dear Banerjee,

This is my fortnightly report for the first half of May, 1947.

Political and communal. The departure of Lord Ismay, Chief of Staff of His Excellency the Viceroy, to London with the Viceroy’s report on his discussions with political leaders caused great interest and much speculation and so has the subsequent announcement of His Excellency’s own hurried visit to London prior to the Conference with political leaders on 2nd June. His Excellency’s own visit to London has, however, given rise to renewed hopes that something in the nature of a settlement between the main political parties, even if it only be on some, if not on all, major issues, may still be achieved. On the other hand, the conflicting claims of the Muslims for the whole of the Punjab and of the Hindus and Sikhs for the partition of that province have created a situation which is fraught with danger and it is generally felt that as soon as the announcement is made on the 2nd of June, rioting will break out on a large scale in a number of districts, if it has not already broken out before that. The recent recrudescence of serious trouble in Amritsar and Lahore has caused considerable alarm in Delhi, but it has not been unexpected. Meantime, it is obvious that the younger elements in particular in the main youth organizations of the three communities mainly concerned—Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs—are busy secretly preparing themselves for a savage civil war. Everyone who can get a licence for a fire-arm is prepared to pay fabulous sums for a weapon. It is unlikely that the announcement which will be made on the 2nd of June can please all the three communities concerned and, therefore, there is very real danger that it may be the signal for a further serious conflagration.

As a counter to the Sikh and Hindu propaganda for the division of the Punjab, the Muslim League has been demanding the inclusion of Delhi in Pakistan. The temporary Provincial Muslim League Committee is setting up sub-committees and mohalla committees to protect the interests of Muslims in cases arising out of the past disturbances and any future emergencies which may arise. The demand for the right of Muslims to carry swords is still being pressed and some of the extremist elements wish unconstitutional action taken to enforce the demand.

The Sikh leaders have been concentrating on trying to have one Sikh Volunteer Corps in place of numerous small bodies of Sikhs which exist at present; the new organization to be known as Shahidi Dal. More attention has been attracted however by rival organizations known as the National Volunteer Corps. Sikhs have also demanded the abolition of purdah owing to the recent arrest of a Muslim woman at the Delhi Railway Station carrying knives under her burqa.

The All India Dharam Sangh has continued its agitation on behalf of orthodox Hinduism with the aid of reinforcements from outside, and batches of sadhus have courted arrest daily in New Delhi by demonstrating in front of the houses of some Honourable Members, the Viceroy’s House, Council House etc. Few Hindus not directly concerned with the agitation have shown any inclination to support this movement.

The supporters of the Bengal Council of Action for the partition of Bengal also courted arrest on one occasion in New Delhi to draw attention to their demands and they threatened civil disobediences in Delhi if the statement be made on the 2nd of June does not promise the partition of Bengal. ...

11. Measures to Deal with Communal Disturbances in Delhi

Letter from R.N. Banerjee to W. Christie, 5 June 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 5/58/47, NAI.

My dear Christie,

Will you please refer to your Top Secret demi-official letter No. 674-ST/CC dated the 26th
May 1947 about measures taken for dealing with communal disturbances?

2. I am desired to say that Government regret that they are unable to agree to the indefinite continuance of Hony Magistrates whose removal has been decided on. Orders on this subject are, however, issuing separately.
3. I am also to request you to make up the deficiency in the present strength of the police with the least possible delay. In filling existing and future vacancies you should keep in view the main objective of mitigating communal maladjustment and, in order to achieve it, you should take in more non-Muslims in the first place until the population ratio is faithfully reflected in the composition of the Police Force. From this point of view Government do not regard as satisfactory the recruitment of 75 Hindus and Sikhs and 38 Muslims during the last three months.

4. I am also desired to add that the question of the recruitment of 200 ex-soldiers and of the application of the UP Ordinance to Delhi should be pursued separately. You should, therefore, send us formal proposals setting out in greater detail your case for recruitment of ex-soldiers and for the application of the UP Ordinance.

Yours sincerely,
R.N. Banerjee

W. Christie, Esq, CSI, CIE, MC, ICS,
Chief Commissioner,
Delhi.

F. NWFP

1. Political and Communal Situation in the Frontier
Minutes of Viceroy’s Third Miscellaneous Meeting, 16 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 196A, NMML.

SITUATION IN THE NWFP

His Excellency the Viceroy read out a telegram which had been received over the telephone during dinner, reporting rioting, looting and arson in Dera Ismail Khan. He said that he thought it would be a good opportunity, while all those present were in the house for a dinner party that they should discuss whether there was anything which could be done to ease the situation in the Province.

Sir Olaf Caroe said that he intended to see General Messervy at Rawalpindi on his way back the next day. He thought that the report might perhaps be rather alarmist, but if troubles spread to the rural areas then it would be a serious affair. A telegram on the previous day had said that half the city was burnt and this was very unfortunate, as it was the wealthiest city in the Frontier Province, a big centre of trade and had suffered very little from communal trouble in recent years. The last occasion was 1939 and previous to that in 1931, and on each occasion part of the bazaar had been burnt. He added that the population of the city was roughly 50–50 Muslim–Hindu, but that it was swollen during the winter months by tribesmen up to a number of say, 150,000 who came down to trade from as far as Afghanistan.

His Excellency the Viceroy asked if Sir Olaf Caroe would give a brief description of the situation in the NWFP. He said he felt sure that everyone would agree that at the present time, just before he hoped to make a recommendation to HMG about the final hand-over of power, it would be particularly unfortunate if the NWFP went the same way as the Punjab and became rife with communal trouble.
SIR OLAF CAROE explained that the trouble was caused by a Muslim League movement against the Government in the Province. He thought there was no substance at all in their complaints, but a number of excuses had been found to start trouble. The recent disturbances have, for example, been caused largely by the enforced conversion of a young woman and her transfer from one village to another. After her husband and father had been murdered, she was remarried to a Muslim and forced to embrace Islam. Finally she was brought to Peshawar City for protective custody where it was clear from the statement she made before a District Magistrate and in the presence of her new husband, that she wished to return to her relations from whom she had been removed by force. This case had been made into a bitter outcry against the Provincial Government and an excuse for civil disobedience on a large scale. More trouble had been caused after the burning of villages and collective fines which had been introduced in the Hazara district. Other excuses have been found to cause trouble and civil disobedience with the result that nearly all the Opposition Party in the Government [sic] and a large number of their supporters, have been arrested and were in jail.

SIR OLAF CAROE said that at the last election the votes between the two sections of Muslims in the Province had been almost equal but in his opinion there had been a swing against the present Government in the last twelve months. The movement against the Government now had, he felt, much behind it and although the tribes had been quiet up to the present they were busy organizing themselves on a scale which he had not seen in all his experience in the Frontier. The tribes were taking a keen interest in the NWFP and were saying that the present set-up there was unsatisfactory and should cease, but SIR OLAF CAROE said that he had told them that that was no business of theirs. They were undoubtedly excited by the happenings in the various districts, but although they opposed the present set-up, they did not wish to join in trouble on a communal basis. In fact, the Afridis made it quite clear at a recent Jirga that they would not have the Advisory Committee of the Constituent Assembly visiting them until Congress and the Muslim League had considered their differences and the Committee was fully representative of an united India.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY asked whether these were their own genuine opinions, or whether these thoughts had been put into the heads of the tribes by others.

SIR OLAF CAROE said he was sure that tribes held these opinions honestly and he had told them he would forward them to the proper quarter. PANDIT NEHRU said that the Advisory Committee referred to was dealing with widely different subjects and there was no question of the Committee going to the NWFP at present as it was obviously undesirable in the present state of affairs.

MR. LIAQUAT ALI KHAN said that he felt that the trouble in the NWFP and elsewhere was due to the fact that HMG had announced that they would hand over power in June 1948 without making a definite decision to whom power was to be handed over: the result was there was bound to be discord between the parties and that each would do their utmost to be in power in the Province when the terminal date was reached.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said this endorsed his view that there was not a moment to lose and that an early recommendation to HMG about the final turn-over of power was essential. He hoped that the decision would be acceptable to all parties and would prevent bloodshed in the future. In the meantime it was essential to avoid any further trouble in India. He felt that Sir Olaf Caroe had the most difficult job of all the Governors at the present time and he was anxious to send him back to his Province with some constructive advice and a firm policy which might be carried out during the crucial period of the next 6 to 8 weeks.

SIR OLAF CAROE said that he had considered recently whether it would be possible to hold elections in the NWFP at an early date. He was of the opinion that they could be held under the control of the present Government with the idea of giving it a fresh mandate or of finding an alternative Government. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that elections could not take place immediately, but would have to wait until after he had made his recommendations to HMG.

PANDIT NEHRU agreed that the elections would probably cause some disturbances if they were held now, but it was desirable to obtain the views of the people before the final turn-over of power was effected. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY thought that it might be helpful if the Governor issued a statement of such sort on his return to the Province. SIR OLAF CAROE agreed but thought it would be unnecessary to mention when the elections would take place or to say anything about the mechanics of carrying out the elections; he thought that the mere fact of announcing that elections would take place would be sufficient to ease the tension.

MR. LIAQUAT ALI KHAN thought that when elections were held, the authority in power at the time must be completely neutral. He thought it most undesirable that there should be one single party in power at the time of the elections. Possibly the Governor, who of course was completely impartial, could have the responsibility.

PANDIT NEHRU thought that impartial elections could be conducted by the permanent officials rather than by the Governor. He said that the proposal by Mr Liaquat Ali Khan meant in fact that the Government should be dismissed and that the Governor should take over control under Section 93. He thought that this was not helpful, would not result in impartial elections and would undoubtedly be bitterly resented.

SIR OLAF CAROE thought it was by no means necessary to go into Section 93 and drew attention to the Punjab elections early in 1946 when a Unionist Government was in power and were in effect practically swept out of existence. He thought, however, there were certain things which must undoubtedly be put right before elections were held and he added that one of the Governor’s special responsibilities was to see that the elections were conducted in a perfectly fair manner.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he did not think it was necessary to decide now the mechanics of carrying out the elections. He was much opposed to the Governor going into Section 93 and he suggested it might be possible to ensure fair elections by additional officials and observers being drafted to the Province. He asked whether the leaders present would be in agreement with him if the Governor was authorized to say on his return, that after the recommendation had been made to HMG about the transfer of power and before the transfer of power had been effected, elections would be held in the NWFP.

MR LIAQUAT ALI KHAN said that all that he wanted to make clear was that it must be fully understood that the machinery for the elections would be such that they would be held without any interference from anyone else. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he agreed but he was most anxious to avoid bringing in Section 93. PANDIT NEHRU said that he did not think, in view of the present situation in the NWFP that it should be announced at the present time.
that elections would be held. It would appear if such an announcement were made that the Provincial Government’s hand had been forced by the agitations that were taking place.

His Excellency the Viceroy thought that a statement might be linked not only with the Governors’ Conference, but with the statement which had just been issued denouncing violence. It might take the form of saying that at a suitable moment fresh elections would be held. Mr. Liaquat Ali Khan said that before elections were held it was essential to give an indication of the authorities to whom power would finally be transferred. Then would be the time to hold impartial and fair elections to ascertain the views of the electorate on their future. Sir Olaf Caroe thought that it would be possible to hold elections this summer, but that a start should be made now on the revision of the Electoral Rolls.

Some discussion then took place on the Pir of Manki. Sir Olaf Caroe said that he had advised his Chief Minister against his arrest and the Prime Minister had agreed. The Pir of Manki was undoubtedly the most sincere and the best leader of the Opposition. For a time he had confined his activities to normal Opposition tactics but when he announced he would hold a procession in Peshawar and demonstrate outside the jail he (Sir Olaf Caroe) had told the Prime Minister that he should consider carefully whether the time had now come for his arrest, in which case he would not stand in his way; and so he was arrested.

His Excellency the Viceroy suggested that the Pir of Manki might be released if it was agreed that a statement of the type which they had been discussing was issued. Pandit Nehru, however, thought this would have a bad effect and that he should not be released until the Opposition movement which he controlled had entirely ceased their activities.

Sir Olaf Caroe pointed out that the arrest of the Pir of Manki had had a great effect among the tribes who had been holding Jirgas and calling for his release. In fact, there was remarkable tribal unity being shown against the Government in this respect. He did not think that the Pir of Manki had been stirring up trouble or violence although since his arrest his followers had undoubtedly been doing so, but this was because he was not there to guide them. Pandit Nehru did not entirely agree with this and said that they had had evidence that the Pir of Manki had advocated methods other than peaceful ones, and had been inciting his followers to violence. Sir Olaf Caroe said that the Pir of Manki preachings had been directed almost entirely to the tribes and although they had been organizing to an unprecedented extent and holding Jirgas, they had so far not committed themselves to hostilities. In all his 25 years at the Frontier, he never remembered such feeling being displayed by the tribes. He considered that the Pir of Manki was an organizer and not an agitator and that any suggestion to the contrary was unfair to him. In fact, before he was arrested he had said that the movement would fail if it indulged in violence. He had very little doubt that if the Pir of Manki was released he would bring influence to bear to promote communal harmony.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that nothing which had been said by Sir Olaf Caroe had given the impression that the latter wanted to do anything but ensure peaceful conditions in the Province. In fact, he thought that the object at present must be not to hold elections, but to ensure a return to settled conditions, with a view to turning over the NWFP as peacefully as possible. He thought that the Government had failed in allowing such a state of turmoil to develop in the Province. It made the holding of elections in present circumstances unfair to either side. In fact, Sir Olaf Caroe said that he would not be prepared to forecast which side would win the elections at the present time.
PANDIT NEHRU said that he was sure that people who had come to see him from the NWFP were arrested on their return. The Governor expressed disbelief of this and said it would be unwise to listen to stories of this type. PANDIT NEHRU agreed that it was impossible to rely entirely on telegrams and letters, but they did give an indication of feeling in the Province. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that his own personal opinion was that the Pir of Manki should be released and that possibly he might be bound over to keep the peace, but he realized that the Provincial Government must decide the question of his release.

SIR OLAF CAROE said that administration in the NWFP was nearing the breaking point. The jails were all full at present and it was very difficult to retain control. He was attempting to deal with processions by using the minimum of force and great restraint had been exercised by the troops. The procedure was to arrest say 5 or 6 from each procession and persuade the remainder to disperse. Outside the cities there had not been much trouble except in the Hazara district where there was long standing communal antagonism which had lasted for the past 100 years. SIR OLAF CAROE said that he thought the solution might be to call off all processions although there could be no ban on meetings. But he felt that the greatest anodyne would be the proposed announcement that elections would be held, and that this must be coupled with a renewal of constitutional processes.

LORD ISMAY said that, as there seemed to be general agreement that some sort of statement should be issued, he had attempted to draft something and he read out what he had in mind. It was generally agreed that this would form a basis for further action.

After a discussion on the military situation in the NWFP, HE the Commander-in-Chief left the meeting.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY read out a further telegram No. 120-CB of 16th April which had just been received about the situation in DIK. He said that he thought that a statement on the lines proposed was essential. PANDIT NEHRU thought that any statement about fresh elections which was issued now would obviously be linked with the disturbances at DIK and would be interpreted as a success for the Opposition movement. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he quite saw Pandit Nehru’s point, but thought that the statement might be linked with the recent Governors’ Conference and with his assumption of the Viceroyalty three weeks ago. It might be possible to lay the emphasis on these two points and to take care not to associate the statement with the present situation. In fact he thought that now was the ideal time to issue such a statement. He thought Sir Olaf Caroe should go back to his Province and send for his Chief Minister at once. He should describe the talks he had had here and say that the Viceroy told him that no elections could be held while there were the present disturbances and the situation would have to quieten down first. He said that he did not think that he could send Sir Olaf Caroe back without any instructions and sit here himself doing nothing.

After further discussion it was agreed that Lord Ismay should draft a statement on the lines of the discussion during the meeting and that it should be considered by His Excellency the Viceroy in consultation with Pandit Nehru, Mr Liaquat Ali Khan and Sardar Baldev Singh at a short meeting before the Defence Committee Meeting on the next day.

(It was subsequently decided that Sir Olaf Caroe should not return at once to the NWFP but that Dr Khan Sahib should be flown to Delhi on 17th April for discussions with His Excellency the Viceroy, Pandit Nehru and the Governor).
2. ‘Half of the City of Dera Ismail Burnt’

The Tribune, 17 April 1947.

Peshawar, April 16.—Half the city of Dera Ismail Khan is burnt, according to information reaching Peshawar this evening.

The fires which started yesterday are reported to be under control now. The total number of casualties now is 10 killed and 22 injured.

It is reported that attempts at arson were made in Tank also.

The Frontier Government issued a communiqué at 2 p.m. which said that some of the fires which started yesterday were still burning. Extensive damage has been caused to the city, said the communiqué.

Troops are patrolling to-day. The situation this morning was stated to be under control.

Qazi Attaulla Khan, Revenue Minister and Mr Mehr Chand Khanna, Finance and Information Minister have reached Dera Ismail Khan by air.

It is understood they will return to Peshawar tonight.

Last night the village of Paron, near Dera Ismail Khan, was raided by unknown offenders, who indulged in arson and looting, says the communiqué.

It is understood three persons were killed in Paron and 21 shops and houses were burnt. Fires are still raging in the village.—API.

3. Report from NWFP

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on North West Frontier Province for the First Half of April 1947, 18 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

...2. Political and Communal—The Muslim League agitation has continued without any noticeable change in method, although in most Districts there was a decrease of intensity partly owing to the harvest season. Communal tension has also continued, and there have been one or two unpleasant incidents. The worst was an attack on a train near Kohat on April 2nd by men in Muslim League uniforms who boarded the train at Kohat and at a distance of 17 miles from Kohat killed seven Hindus and injured 13. A man and woman are still missing. There have been stray murders in Peshawar City and Kohat and bomb explosions in Nowshera and Kohat. Hindus and Sikhs have continued to leave the Province in large numbers. On the 14th April the Bombay Express left Peshawar Cantonment Station when a procession of women was sitting on the railway line about a mile away. They refused to leave and the train failed to stop with the result that 4 women were injured. The fact that the driver was a Hindu was spread abroad; and immediately after the incident there were various attempts at arson on Hindu property in Peshawar City. Fortunately not much damage was done except to a Cinema. In Dera Ismail Khan one Punjabi agitator and one local Muslim League leader made highly provocative speeches on the 14th evening. As the result of this rioting with arson and looting broke out on the 15th morning. Further reports are awaited at the time of writing.

It has been necessary on a number of occasions to make lathi charges and to use tear gas in Peshawar City. On April 8th several hundred Afridis marched down the Kohat Pass towards the Peshawar District apparently with the intention of demonstration on behalf of the Pir of Manki. They were turned back by the Political Tahsildar, Kohat. On April 14th about 120
Swathis entrained at Dargai for Nowshera before they could be intercepted. They demonstrated with others in Nowshera and then went on to Peshawar. On the whole, however, the news from the Tribal Areas is that, while generally sympathizing with the Muslim League, there is no present intention of disturbing the peace of the settled Districts.

The Red Shirts left Peshawar City on the evening of April 7th. No serious incident had taken place during their stay. There have, however, been minor clashes between Red Shirts and Muslim League sympathizers in Kohat District; and Congress meetings in Mardan District have several times been greeted with hostile demonstrations.

Hazara District has been kept comparatively peaceful only by the most rigid control in all the towns and by the use of road blocks. On April 9th a crowd, which had previously agreed to disperse, suddenly stoned the car in which the Assistant Commissioner had gone to meet them. Later the Deputy Commissioner with a party of troops was also heavily stoned when going to arrest the culprits in a village, and twenty rounds had to be fired, no casualties being inflicted, before the situation was brought under control....

4. 'Bannu City Sniped from Outside'

The Tribune, 20 April 1947.

Peshawar, April 19.—The Frontier Government issued the following communique this evening on the situation in the province:

'Some houses and shops in Tank are still burning and reports have come in of further trouble from the outlying villages of the district. The Revenue and Divisional Commissioner, NWFP, flew to Tank to-day to study arrangements for tackling the difficult refugee problem, which has been created. The Commissioner returned to Peshawar in the afternoon.

Cases of forcible conversion are reported from several villages, including Kalagor, Dhalla, Rodikhel and Mandra. Twenty-four casualties are reported from these villages and a number of persons have been kidnapped.

Bannu city was sniped from outside last night. The police and Frontier Constabulary who were in the "Morchas" returned the fire. Strong security measures have been taken today and troops are patrolling around the city area.

Two persons were wounded by shooting in Peshawar City to-day.

Earlier messages said:

The latest reports from Dera Ismail Khan describe the situation in Dera Ismail Khan tehsil as still serious. It is stated that some villages are involved in the trouble. In Tank town 1,500 refugees have been removed to police stations and other places of safety in the town. Colonel Mallam, Revenue Commissioner, Frontier Province has been sent to look after these refugees.

In view of the fact that some Powindhas, who were on their way to Afghanistan are alleged to have taken part in arson, looting and murder in D.I. Khan. It is understood that Government are contemplating to have some hostages from the Powindhas for their good behavior during their stay in the Frontier Province.

The main railway line near Cunningham Park between Peshawar Cantonment and Peshawar City measuring one foot was found damaged early yesterday morning. There was no serious dislocation but the traffic was delayed for about one hour till the line was repaired.

Bannu City was sniped at last night from outside the perimeter wall. The Frontier Constabulary and police returned fire. There was no casualty. The city remained quiet but tense yesterday, and the city gates were kept closed as a precautionary measure against mischief-mongers.
One Hindu is reported to have been shot in Peshawar Cantt. yesterday. From Hazara, information states that the local authorities have extended the curfew period for another week from 9 p.m. to 5.30 a.m.

5. ‘Dera Ismail Khan Quiet—Villages in Distress’

Peshawar, April, 20.—The Frontier Government’s last evening’s announcement about the release of political prisoners in the Frontier jails was described as a ‘friendly gesture in response to the recent Gandhi—Jinnah appeal’ by Dr Khan Sahib, the Frontier Premier, today at a press conference, where three other Ministers of the Frontier Cabinet—Mr Mehr Chand Khanna, Qazi Attaullah Khan and Khan Yahya Khan were also present.

The Premier appealed to the press to help Government in creating a peaceful and conciliatory atmosphere in the province.

Dr Khan Sahib added: ‘The Government has taken the opportunity to help the people of this province to bring about peaceful and healthy atmosphere in the Frontier and for that purpose they thought it necessary to release the political prisoners and thus help in bringing about actual goodwill and understanding. We hope our honest and sincere efforts will bring about good results.’

The Premier revealed that there were about four to five thousand political prisoners in the Frontier jails. The release of these prisoners in places like Peshawar would begin soon while the release of others in southern districts would follow as soon as conditions permit.

Describing the latest situation in Dera Ismail Khan district, Dr Khan Sahib stated that the city was quiet .... there were some reports from certain villages and Government was taking measures to stop the trouble there. Kulachi was also quiet. The Pawindhas, an Afghan migratory tribe took a leading part in the disturbances in Dera Ismail Khan and the Government was taking measures to find out and punish the culprits. The Government proposed to check all Pawindhas en route to Afghanistan at the border and would make thorough searches before they were permitted to leave for Afghanistan.—API.

6. Tribal Jirga Held at Mirali

Report of the Intelligence Bureau, H.D., 22 April 1947
External Affairs Deptt, File No. 9(71) NWA/47, NAI.

Copy of ISI Directorate No. 7074/NC/D of I/ISCI(ii) (a) dated 22nd April, 1947.

With reference to the civil intelligence report that a jirga held at Mirali had passed a resolution to the effect that the time for a holy war had come, HQ Northern Command report that Peshawar Intelligence Bureau has given the following additional information:

The Jirga, held at Mirali on 20 April, was addressed by the Faqir of Shewa, Mohd Jan Khan (Madda Khel) and representatives from the Karbobha and Bhittani families.

The Jirga, not fully representative, consisted of 400 Wazirs and Daurs from the following sub tribes, Bhaka Khel, Jani Khel, Mohd Khel, Sparkai, Tori Khel, Madda Khel and Daurs.

Pakistan was discussed and it was decided that, as the Congress Ministry had not resigned, Tribesmen were free to take any action they wished against non-Muslims. It was agreed that tribes... should not obstruct any gangs from moving through their territory, if they did, then the tribe concerned would have Rs 500 ‘Konra’ taken from it. It was decided that a fully representative Jirga of all the frontier tribes would be held at MAIDAN in TIRAH (Afridi territory) on 15 May ’47. The Jirga had neither the support nor blessing of the Faqir of Ipi, who ordered his lieutenants that they were not to attend.

2. HQ Northern Command, in commenting on the report, state that as a result of the resolutions passed raiding by gangs may increase in intensity; in fact, gangs have already started moving towards Bannu and there is panic in the city. There is little likelihood, however, of the situation assuming abnormal proportions until the results of the Jirga to be held on the 15 May are known. At present there are little or no indications of a Jehad.

Forwarded for information in continuation of this Bureau’s u/o No. 41/D.G./47, dated 15-4-47.

(W.F.M. Davies)
Assistant Director (F)

7. Communal Rioting in Rawalpindi

Note by Edwina Mountbatten to Louis Mountbatten, 25 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 84A, NMML.

The following is a precis of a conversation which Rajkumari Amrit Kaur had with my P.A. Miss Watson as I was unable myself to see her when she asked to come and talk with me. It is however following on other talks I have had with Rajkumari Amrit Kaur on similar matters which did not seem specific enough to put up to you.

Rajkumari Amrit Kaur a few days ago received a deputation of Hindus who came to see her from Rawalpindi and Mooltan and was very much concerned by what they told her. They were remnants of families who had mostly been wiped out (revolting details described) and many of the girls abducted. They had told her that even when it was known in which house these girls were, the remaining relatives were prevented from getting access by the police, whom she said were 80 per cent Muslim. The Military could take no helpful action because they were under the police. She inferred pretty clearly that appeal to higher British officials (it was gathered non-military) met with the attitude ‘You want the British to go, and this is the result which you will have to cope with yourselves’. She has written to the Governor of the Punjab about this and suggested that Indian officials who are neither Hindu nor Muslim should be brought in from outside the Province to help deal with the situation.

Rajkumari Amrit Kaur was personally very upset and evidently fully believed all the deputation had told her, though she did not know them personally.

8. League Must Withdraw Their Policy of Violence

Extract from the Viceroy’s Eighth Miscellaneous Meeting, 25 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File 96A, NMML.

ITEM 1 THE NORTH WEST FRONTIER PROVINCE

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY asked Sardar Patel what he thought of Mr Jinnah’s appeal, issued that day, to his supporters in the North West Frontier Province to maintain law and order.
Sardar Patel said that, in his frank opinion, he disliked it intensely, because it involved His Excellency. He went on to give his own account of how the troubles in the North West Frontier Province had started. The parents of a Sikh girl, he said, had been murdered; she had been forcibly converted and married to a Muslim; but had eventually come back and been given protection in Dr Khan Sahib’s own house. The Muslim League had passed a resolution demanding her return to them. The story of the other cause of the present troubles, Sardar Patel claimed, had started with the Government of India, at the instigation of the Government of the NWFP, imposing a fine on some tribes which had kidnapped an officer. This fine had been paid after a time and a second resolution of the Muslim League had been that the fine should be refunded. The Muslim League said that they were fighting for civil liberties—but no-one had denied them these. Now Mr Jinnah was asking that the disorders should stop ‘because The Viceroy would give justice’. But what injustice had there been?

Sardar Patel then quoted from a military intelligence report a sentence to the effect that the situation, though improving elsewhere, was tense in Peshawar because of Mr Nishtar’s visit and a speech by Malik Feroze Khan Noon, who had said that the Congress Ministry would be out in a week.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY pointed out that this speech had been made before (or simultaneously with) Mr Jinnah’s statement, in a far distant place, so could not be considered to have been co-ordinated with it.

Sardar Patel said that, if any violence by the Congress Government of the North West Frontier Province could be proved, he would hold himself personally responsible. But, unless the Muslim League withdrew their Direct Action threat, there would be a disaster. He added that he appreciated the efforts the Viceroy was making.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that Mr Jinnah had explained to him that the Direct Action resolution had never been passed by the Muslim League. Direct Action Day, on the 16th August 1946 had only been for them to consider a programme if Direct Action was to become necessary. He went on to say that he intended to see at Peshawar not only Dr Khan Sahib but also the Muslim League leaders. To the latter he would make it clear that it was his policy to support properly constituted Governments, and that he would use force against the Muslim League if their disturbances continued. It might become necessary to order fresh elections, but he would explain that he did not propose to consider such a step while the Muslim League behaved as they were now doing.

On the suggestion that the present Government did not command the support of the electorate, Sardar Patel stated that, in the one bye-election which had recently taken place in the NWFP, the Muslim League majority had dropped considerably.

9. Muslim League Plans to Carry Out a Demonstration

Extracts from a Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 26 April 1947

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

I would invite your attention to the Report of the Director of Intelligence (No. 108 Summary of Communal Incidents for 25 April 1947), a copy of which your office must have received from the Director of Intelligence. It appears that the Muslim League plan a demonstration on the day of your arrival in Peshawar, and that the reaction to the Government’s announcement regarding the release of political prisoners has been unfavourable.

2. This is further confirmed by the report of the Deputy Director, Intelligence, Peshawar, dated 24 April 1947, which has also been sent by the DIB to your office and which contains the news that the Pir of Manki is reported to have informed a crowd of 500 / 600 which had collected outside the police lines that the political prisoners were not going to agree to the decision taken by the Government and that the civil disobedience campaign should continue with the same vigour.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

ENCLOSURE I

SECRET
HQ INDIA COMMAND
(DIRECTORATE OF INTELLIGENCE)
NO. 108 SUMMARY OF COMMUNAL INCIDENTS FOR 25 APRIL 1947 (Up to 0900 hrs 25 April 1947)
COMMUNAL DISTURBANCES

SITUATION IN NWFP
According to reports from HQ Northern Command and Peshawar Area dated 24 April 1947, there has been increased Muslim League activity in Peshawar and Abbottabad. The situation in the rest of the province is quieter. The following was reported:

(a) Peshawar:
The civil intelligence sources in Peshawar in a report dated 24 April 1947 state that on the occasion of the celebration of Martyrs’ Day a crowd of over 40,000 persons assembled. The report adds that the Muslim League plan a demonstration on the day of the arrival of the Viceroy.

(b) Abbottabad:
The reaction to the Government’s announcement regarding the release of political prisoners has been unfavourable. The Muslim League’s civil disobedience has intensified and processions have increased in number. Section 144 has been imposed for a further fortnight from 22 April. Several women climbed the wall of Haripur Jail and planted the Muslim League flag. There have been three cases of attempted arson in Abbottabad. One company [4 Dogras] stood to in unit lines from 0800 hrs 23 April at 15 mins. notice.

(c) Dera Ismail Khan:
It is now confirmed that casualties, as a result of the Hindu refugees being ambushed at Parola (19 miles South of DIK), where one constable and eight Hindus [were] killed and one constable and eighteen Hindus [were] wounded. It is believed that a gang of Mahsuds was responsible. Reports are also being received that hostile gangs are moving in the direction of Bannu, possibly as a result of the directions of the Muslim League jirga held at Mirali on 20 April...
Dear Lord Mountbatten,

I am writing to you with some hesitation as I have nothing really new to put before you. But I am worried about the state of affairs round about D.I. Khan as well as the continuation of the aggressive activities of the Muslim League in the Frontier.

I had hoped that after the Gandhi—Jinnah appeal there would be a withdrawal of these movements. That might not have resulted in complete cessation of all aggressive activities but it would have had a powerful effect. There has been no such indication of stopping the movement and indeed there is an attempt to intensify it in the hope of forcing Government to take some action, which it otherwise might not do. That action, it is clearly stated, is resignation of the Ministry and an announcement of elections. Recent statements by prominent members of the Muslim League, including Members of the Interim Government, have been disquieting and in some cases very tendentious.

I greatly fear that if this kind of thing goes on there will be reaction on the other side. In any event to permit the continuation of these tactics to bring down the Ministry is likely to lead to very harmful results. These activities are being continued because it is hoped they will yield results soon. As soon as it is realized that they will not yield the results desired, they will gradually end. I am anxious therefore that there should be absolutely no misapprehension in this matter and that it should be made perfectly clear that such activities will not be allowed to influence events. Any kind of democratic Government would otherwise be impossible. What has happened in the Punjab will be repeated in a far more intense and dangerous form in the Frontier.

This I think is correct, whatever the appraisement of the present situation in the Frontier. In regard to that appraisement opinions may perhaps differ, but it is clear that a little more than a year ago the identical issues that are being raised today were raised at the time of the elections. The only real test of public feeling after a general election is a by-election. There has been one by-election recently in the Frontier. This was in regard to a Muslim League seat. It was retained by the Muslim League but by a much reduced majority. Indeed they came near losing it.

There is considerable danger in our misjudging the situation because of lots of violence and shouting. The people who support the Government do not and cannot indulge in unconstitutional and illegal activities. They have therefore to remain quiet while others do the shouting. On the 23rd March the Frontier Province celebrates ‘Martyrs’ Day’ on a very big scale annually. This is a special day for the Red Shirts. In order to avoid any breach of the peace they called this celebration off. Immediately the Muslim League decided to demonstrate on that day.

It might interest you to know that in the United Provinces from 30 to 35 per cent of the total votes cast in separate Muslim constituencies were against the Muslim League candidates. Nevertheless by the luck of the election a far larger proportion of Muslim League candidates won. We have to accept that fact according to democratic procedure although we know that a considerable number of the Muslim electorate is against the Muslim League demands in the UP. Only five days ago I attended a vast gathering in a typically Muslim area of the UP.
There were over 100,000 persons present at a Conference and a great number of these were Muslims, who had indeed taken considerable part in organizing that Conference.

I mention this fact to show that various totalitarian claims made may not be justified and this business of trying to decide political issues by threats of violence must not be allowed to influence our judgement of the situation. I am quite clear in my mind that the first thing to be done is to put a stop to this violence and to the policy underlying this violence. Nobody can have a grievance when it is admitted that decisions will be made without compulsion. Violence breeds violence as it has done in India and if once it is made clear that violent tactics pay, then the belief in peaceful methods will fade away.

I have been getting a large number of telegrams from D.I. Khan. I suppose you have got them too. People from D.I. Khan who live in Delhi are naturally very greatly agitated at what has happened and what is happening there. They cannot get any news, they cannot go there except by air. Attempts to charter planes have failed. It was our desire to send two or three competent observers there who could at least cheer up the people in their sufferings and send us a report of the present state of affairs. An attempt is still being made to arrange this.

I am afraid this letter is a very inconclusive and inconsequential one. You need not trouble to reply to it.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

11. Deliberate Policy of Violence Increases Communal Feeling

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 1 May 1947

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Thank you for your letter of the 30th April which I received last evening. I am grateful to you for your courtesy in sending me reports of the conversations you had during your visit to the Frontier.

2. The impressions you have gathered may, no doubt, be justified by what you saw and heard. Possibly, if you had had time and occasion to see more, you might have had some additional impressions which might have helped in arriving at a truer appreciation of the situation.

3. There can be little doubt that there is an upsurge of communal feeling. That requires no proof for the very fact of murder and arson on a large scale is proof enough. There is also little doubt that recent events, and more specially what has been happening in the FrontierProvince itself, have affected the Tribes. While they have been so affected, it is difficult to say what the various divisions of feeling among them may be after reference to one or two grounds only. Undoubtedly the situation is an explosive one.

4. The first impression that one gathers from recent happenings in the Frontier is that gangster methods pay and that a deliberate policy of murder, arson, and loot, of the most revolting kind, yields results. That is a most depressing thought.

5. Last night I received a report about certain conditions in the Frontier from Dewan Chaman Lal, MLA, who was good enough to visit Peshawar and D.I. Khan at my request. This report brings out some other aspects of the situation. In particular it deals with the troubles in D.I. Khan and how repeated attempts by the Deputy Commissioner to prevent any mishap and to control the situation when trouble started were foiled by the Superintendent of Police and the Additional Superintendent of Police. The Deputy Commissioner’s orders were completely ignored. The charges made are very serious not only from the administrative point of view but because of the consequences that took place in D.I. Khan and the neighbourhood.

6. I feel reluctant to go into any details about the happenings in the Frontier Province not only because exaggerated and excited versions are put forward by rival groups, but also because I have a feeling that this is not a question of facts but of an approach to the problem. The major fact that stands out is of a deliberate policy being followed by the Muslim League in the NWFP, a policy which has had the most ghastly results in human suffering. That policy is openly being pursued still and threats are held out of worse consequences. I have received information of a speech delivered by a colleague of mine in the Interim Government in Hazara District commending the Muslim League adherents for what they have done and encouraging them to continue such activities. Hazara has been a horror not easy to parallel.

7. In the course of your conversations in Peshawar it would appear that the Ministry there was in the dock and had to defend itself. Little, if anything at all, is said about the Muslim League agitation and its results and the continuing policy that has been pursued by it.

8. It would be absurd to say that all that has happened in the NWFP is due to the machinations of the Governor and his officials. But I have little doubt in my mind that the Governor and some of his officials are responsible in many ways for the present situation. As I have previously informed you, it is my clear opinion that the Governor is completely unfit for the responsible position he holds. He has neither the capacity nor the impartiality to deal with it. This applies also to certain officials in Waziristan. I find it increasingly difficult to continue to be in charge of a Department which is responsible in some way for the activities of officials who function wrongly and are completely beyond my control.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

12. Report from NWFP

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on NWFP for the Second Half of April 1947, 2 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

... 2. Political and Communal.—The Muslim League campaign against the Ministry continued in most Districts on about the same scale as during the first half of the month; but there was a tendency to increase intensity in Peshawar City, which reached its climax on April 28th, on which day HE the Viceroy arrived. The general appeal for peace by Mr Gandhi and Mr Jinnah did not seem to have much effect on the rank and file of the party, though it was bound to influence the leaders to some extent; and it was re-inforced by Mr Jinnah’s own appeal for peace in the province during His Excellency’s visit. Even so tension was extremely high on that day, and would have been even higher but for the decision of the Congress party not to hold any simultaneous demonstration. Estimates of the crowd which assembled, and which was seen by His Excellency, vary, considerably, but the number was probably not below fifty thousand. Ultimately it dispersed without any serious incident having taken place and the subsequent days have been relatively quiet.
On the 23rd of April also, which is annually celebrated as Martyrs Day in Peshawar City, matters reached a critical pitch and serious trouble was only averted by the prompt action of the authorities in enforcing a curfew early in the afternoon. On this occasion also the decision of the Congress party to refrain from what is traditionally their own celebration was a very important contributory factor to the avoidance of trouble.

The general picture has been one of processions, demonstrations, picketing and interference with the running of trains, accompanied by lathi-charges, the use of tear gas, and the arrest of a substantial number of people. Occasional murders of Hindus and Sikhs, apart from the more serious communal trouble described below, bomb explosions by night in and around Peshawar City, cutting of telegraph lines, and sabotage on a small scale of road bridges and railways have all contributed to maintain an atmosphere of uneasiness everywhere and of fear in the case of the minorities. One serious outrage took place on the night of April 28th, when unknown culprits from outside the perimeter wire threw three bombs on to the house of the General Officer Commanding, Peshawar Area, and fired a number of shots into the house itself.

The Jails are now filled to overflowing and the political prisoners have frequently resorted to turbulent acts, particularly in Haripur. The Provincial Government's announcement on April 19th of a general amnesty for all those not charged with crimes of violence was not accepted by the Muslim League, and the diminution of the jail population thereafter has been negligible. It remains to be seen whether consultations by Muslim League leaders on this subject will lead to more satisfactory results. If not, very vigorous measures will be necessary to restore order in the Jails, apart from those already taken from time to time to deal with particular outbreaks of trouble.

The District of Dera Ismail Khan has seen disturbances unprecedented in this province. The trouble began on the evening of April 14th with inflammatory speeches to a large audience. Minor violent incidents on the following morning rapidly led to general communal rioting which continued until 16th April. The situation was only brought fully under control with military aid on the 17th April. Casualties of all communities amounted to 18 killed and 45 wounded, the latter including 11 policemen. About 900 shops were destroyed by fire and number of important Government buildings and private houses. The trouble spread rapidly to Tank, where the dead ultimately numbered 33 including 17 Mahsuds who had been attracted by the hope of loot. Most of Tank City has been destroyed by fire. Numerous other villages in the District witnessed outbreaks of communal disorder on varying scales, and full figures of casualties and damages are not yet known. Much of the trouble was caused by migrant Powindas. An outstanding crime was an attack on April 22nd on a convoy of lorries evacuating members of minority communities to Dera Ismail Khan from Paroa. In this 10 person were killed and 18 wounded. Since then a measure of peace has returned to the District following the reinforcement of the civil Armed Forces on the spot, the countryside by mixed columns. The most successful counter measure up-to-date followed an attack on Kulachi on the night of April 28th by a Tribal gang. The attack was repulsed by the police and Frontier Constabulary on the spot. The gang were met some miles away by a mixed force of Frontier Constabulary and military. And they were met yet again near the Tribal Border by a force of South Waziristan Scouts. Total casualties to the gang were 6 killed, 2 wounded and 19 taken prisoner.

The neighbouring District of Bannu, being forewarned has so far escaped similar tragedies. But the City has remained in a constant state of anxiety, behind locked gates, with commercial and Government business almost at a stand-still. Tribal gangs have constantly menaced the City and the smaller towns of the District, and worse might have occurred but for the prompt action of the political authorities in North Waziristan in arresting on April 24th 400 Mahsuds who were on their way to the plains for mischief....

13. Frontier Minority Faces Communal Insanity
   Letter from Prem Das to J.B. Kripalani, 1 June 1947
   AICC Papers, File No. G-14/1946-47, NMML.

   My dear Acharya Ji,
   Namaskar. You must have read in the press that DI Khan Hindus and Sikhs have altogether been ruined on account of communal madness and nothing has left with them to live upon. They are wandering from place to place but no Congress Government of any province dare to give them shelter. What is wanted is a government which can rule both at the centre and in the province. If the Central Government had acted strongly then Noakhali, Punjab and NWFP would not have been possible. The Government particularly in this province is weak and its officials are not co-operating with it. The result is that both Hindus and Sikhs are being made victims. The Congress High Command should be well warned. The way in which these onslaughts on Hindus and Sikhs are being overlooked is shaking up the whole country. It should not be forgotten that in its flight of liberty the main support has come from the Hindus. No body wants the Congress to disregard the interest of others, but this does not mean that the Congress should sacrifice thousands of Hindu Lives and Billions of Hindu Money in trying to placate a Community which refuses to have any truck with the Congress and openly proclaims itself to be an alien nation. This kind of thing is creating a lot of discontent among the Hindus greatly and they may lose faith in the Congress. Then the Congress will lose its main support and will release new forces which may unsettle the whole future. Then the dreams of a socialistic or democratic or powerful India may disappear and India may again lapsed [sic] into anarchy or go into a new subjection.

   Would you kindly, therefore, place the case of Frontier Minority before the Congress High Command and save it from further ruin.

   With kindest regards,

   Yours sincerely,
   Prem Das [illegible]
   Chhota Bazar, D.I. Khan

14. ‘Islam Never Preached Killing of Helpless and Slaughter of Women and Children’
   The Tribune, 10 June 1947.

(From our own correspondent)

PESHAWAR, June 9.—Khan Amir Mohd Khan, President, Frontier Provincial Congress Committee, has issued the following statement:

‘I wonder if Mr Jinnah, President of the All-India Muslim League, was at all serious in characterizing the League agitation in the Frontier as a movement of peaceful civil disobedience in his broadcast speech on the 3rd June from the All-India Radio. I am sure he must have
Towards Freedom: 1947

...blushed while uttering these words as the statement was glaringly incorrect. The League agitation in the Frontier can by no stretch of imagination be either called peaceful or civil. During the last few months his followers were responsible for murders of hundreds of men, women and children and forcible conversions of a large number of them. Property worth crores of rupees was destroyed through loot and arson, which caused untold misery to a section of the population of this province. The nature of agitation has been purely communal which struck terror and awe into the minds of all those who had no means of defending themselves.

'At this time the question of civil liberties as is often alleged by him and his followers was never involved. Whether in Hazara, Mardan, Peshawar, Kohat or DI Khan the initiative was taken by the Leaguers. It was only after they indulged in acts of violence, loot, arson and murder that certain preventive measures were taken and those too were enforced in a half hearted manner and with an unwilling mind. Our grouse against the Provincial Government has been that they always became wiser after the event. If prompt and proper action had been taken—and I fully appreciate the difficulties of the Provincial Government—much of the killing, stabbing and shooting could have been avoided. Instead of paying tribute to the people, who are guilty of acts of such shameful and dastardly nature, it was expected of Mr Jinnah to have condemned them in unqualified and unequivocal terms.

'If such is going to be the foretaste of Pakistan to be set up in NWFP, I pray to God that He may save our province from this catastrophe. I am a Mussalman and know the teachings of Islam. At no time Islam preached killing of the helpless and slaughter of women and children.'

15. Congress Has Failed to Protect Hindus and Sikhs

Press Statement by All-India Hindu Mahasabha and Central Hindu–Sikh Minority Protection Board, 20 June 1947

AIHM Papers, File No. C–165, NMML.

From Gandhiji’s post-prayer speeches regarding NWFP and reports of Abdul Ghaflar Khan Jinnah meetings it has now become clear that the Congress has ultimately surrendered and [sic] North Western Frontier Province to Pakistan. It is really sad to note that the surrender has been effected after the Hindu and Sikh minorities in that province and [sic] had undergone great sufferings, trials and tribulations in the recent devastation caused by the Muslim League in their Direct Action movement. Leave of Sir Olaf Caroe does not offer any satisfaction or consolation after he had done sufficient harm to the minorities there either by not checking the Muslim League atrocities or instigating them.

The Congress Government in that province completely failed to give any protection to the Hindus and Sikhs but deceived them into false sense of security which resulted into a complete annihilation without any resistance from within or any sympathy from outside. When Behar Government is offering Rs 1000 per capita as compensation to the sufferers, the Frontier Government has not come forward to give any help to them. Even the Hindu majority provinces and their Governments have not given any substantial help to the refugees. When Government of Bengal has spent one crore of rupees on refugees of Bihar the UP Government has very generously given only Rs 5000 to the refugees at Hardwar.

Now when sufficient harm has been done to the Hindus Gandhiji has come forward to preach establishment of separate Pathanistan for the protection on [sic] Pushto language and Pathan culture, who could protect the culture and language of Hindus we asked.
We, hereby, demand from the powers that be that sufficient compensation be given to every Hindu and Sikh who want to stay in NWFP. The compensation should never be less than Rs 1,000 per head if not more and all the loss they have suffered should be fully compensated. No separate sovereignty state be established unless arrangements for colonizing the minorities in safety zones which shall have to be created in the province, are made....

G. PUNJAB

1. Mahasabha Leaders Visit Riot-affected Areas

Extract from a Report by Hindu Mahasabha Leaders, 23–6 March 1947
AIHM Papers, File No. C-154, NMML.

PUNJAB TOUR

Mr L.B. Bhopatkar, President, and Syt Ashutosh Lahiry, General Secretary, All India Hindu Mahasabha, left by Air for Lahore on Punjab tour on 23rd March last. It may be remembered that Punjab Government imposed a ban on their entry and when the President intimated the Governor by telegram that they would defy the ban to vindicate the self-respect of the Hindu Mahasabha the Governor’s Secretary wired him on the 20th instant intimating the withdrawal of the ban. They arrived at Lahore at about 9 a.m.... The President was profusely garlanded and they were taken to the house of Dr Gokul Chand Narang, where they put up. Sometimes after at about 10-30 a.m. they toured round the devastated areas in Lahore city and returned at about 1 o’clock. At 2 o’clock they left by car for Amritsar along with Dr Gokul Chand Narang. Reached there at about 3 p.m. They met Captain Keshab Chandra and discussed with him the various questions about relief and rescue work. They then made an exhaustive tour along with Captain Sahib the areas devastated during the riots. They found a part of the city about one-tenth of the whole city utterly ruined. The havoc and devastation caused gave the impression as if the whole area had been bombed by the planes. In the heart of the business quarters they found one street about half a mile in length and second one of equal length so completely devastated that it was difficult to penetrate into the roads. Numerous three or four storied buildings had topped down and they had to walk on heaps of ruined materials with considerable difficulty. The houses mostly belonged to the Hindus but the shops mostly belonged to the Moslems. Syt Lahiry expressed the opinion that nothing like this had occurred in Calcutta even during the worse days in the great Calcutta killing. About 10 crores of rupees properties have been lost of which 8 crores belong to the Moslem and seven crores belong to the Hindus and Sikhs. Loss of lives are almost equal. They were entertained with Tea at the House of Captain Keshab Chandra then motored back to Lahore reaching there at 6 p.m....

...A large number of Hindu Students of DAV College, SD College and other colleges had assembled in the spacious compound of Dr Narang’s house in order to listen to the President. In his absence, however, Syt Lahiry addressed them for an hour dwelling at length on the various implications of the present political situation created by British Cabinet declaration to quit India by June, 1948, and also by the campaign of organized measure, loot, arson and abduction of the Hindus in various parts of the country by the agents of the Moslem League. He specially appealed to the young-men to organize units of strength throughout the country as in future those who are strong and capable of holding their own against the rising tide of the Moslem aggressiveness will, alone survive and dominate over India. All old conceptions and political programmes have now become obdurate and Hindus must think in terms of new vision which imposes a very heavy responsibility on the shoulders of the youths of the country.

The following morning the President met continuous streams of people pouring in for personal talks with him and at 9 p.m. he, accompanied by Sjt Lahiry went round the city again and for three hours visited numerous houses amongst crinzy lanes and bye lanes of the old city area, which bore marks of the depredations of the police. Most of the houses were riddled with bullets and their walls, doors roofs and window panes bore overwhelming evidence of the vandalism that the Police caused actuated by communal frenzy. They visited particularly the house of Sree Balkishen, the General Secretary of Hindu Sabha Forward Bloc and a most stout fighter and resister who was shot down by the police in his own house. He was a brave young man and the President advised that proper steps should be taken for enshrining the memory of such heroic soul. They then visited the house of a young lad of 16 years of age who was lying grievously injured in his house and who though received several sword-cuts in his hand refused to part with the Hindu Mahasabha flag which he held firmly in his hand till the last. His life was, however, saved miraculously. The President had to ascend several times the upper floors of many three or four storied buildings for inspecting the bullet marks and the havocs created....

In the evening at 6.30 p.m. a meeting of Hindu Mahasabha workers took place in the Hindu Sabha Bhawan at Shah Alim Gate. About fifty workers were present including the members of the Hindu Mahasabha Forward Bloc. Mr Bhopatkar addressed the workers for about 45 minutes in course of which he appealed to them to shed old ideas about politics and to look upon them as the future leaders of Hindustan and to rely on their own initiative and resourcefulness. In dealing with any particular political situation and not to look helplessly on towards old political leaders for lead and guidance. The new situation called for action on the part of verile [sic] youths and the time has now come for the students and young men to play an effective role in resisting the onslaughts that are in progress with fullest fury. Then Syt Lahiry addressed the workers for about 15 minutes in Hindi and the meeting dispersed at about 8.30 p.m.

AT RAWALPINDI

The following morning the President and Sjt Ashutosh Lahiry—accompanied by Dr Gokul Chand Narang and Captain Keshab Chandra left by Air for Rawalpindi reaching there by 10.30 a.m.... They were very much impressed with the relief organization work of the local leaders and realized the tremendous magnitude of the burden which the local leaders have been carrying on almost unaided by any outside people's organization....

Here they spent about two hours freely mixing with the refugees and getting at first hand the tragic picture of a reign of terror and devastation. The refugees were all from the rural areas of Rawalpindi districts and a very large number also were from Campbellpore district.

The refugees were found to be suffering awfully for want of clothing and for want of various essential food-grains such as oil, dal, vegetables and other things. They are being supplied early with four Chattaks of Atta and two chattaks of rice per day and with certain quantity of germinating gram without any oil or species [sic] or any other essential materials.

In course of the talks with the refugees it was ascertained how the Hindus and Sikhs in every locality fought and resisted for days together the onslaughts of the overwhelming number of Moslems and how they succumbed ultimately and most of them were wiped out. Several
Communalism: Provinces

Thousands of Sikhs were found whose hair have completely cut off and beards shaved. The womenfolk recounted doleful stories of their horrible experiences.

The Hindus and Sikhs throughout the Rawalpindi district with the exception of three villages have been totally liquidated. Thousands were massacred. Thousands others were forcibly converted to Islam. Women, children were butchered with incredible brutality. Numerous young girls were carried off. Many girls below 8 or 10 years of age who could not be immediately taken into marriage were made to stand in a row—their body soaked with kerosene oil and was set fire to and they were slowly burnt alive amidst ghastly wailings. Infants were snatched away from the lap of their mothers and thrown into the boiling coldron and roasted alive in presence of the mothers in expectation that this kind of butchery would melt the hearts of mothers and would induce them to divulge the secret places where their wealth were kept hidden. Womenfolk were kept confined in houses which were set fire to and they were burnt alive while the menfolk were put to the sword. One instance was made known in which the Sikhs and Hindus themselves put to the sword about 32 women when they were captured by the moslems was found to be inevitable. Another instance of about 38 women with their children deliberately walking into fire and being burnt alive was also related by the refugees. In fact, cruelties far exceeding what the country had witnessed in other provinces have been perpetrated in Rawalpindi district.

The party returned to Rawalpindi in a sad and outraged mood and held long discussions at night with various gentlemen. The situation in the contiguous frontier province is equally grave and it will be the height of stupidity to imagine that there is going to be peace in near future either in the Punjab or in the North Western Frontier Province.

The Punjab Provincial Hindu Mahasabha has started a Relief Fund known as Punjab Hindu Sabha Relief Fund with Bhai Parmanand as President and Dr Gokul Chand Narang as Treasurer.

Mr Bhopatkar and Mr Ashutosh Lahiry left Rawalpindi at 2.30 p.m. on the 26th March by air and reached Delhi at 5.30 p.m.

2. Bhopatkar Calls for United Hindu–Sikh Front

Press Statement by L.B. Bhopatkar, President, All-India Hindu Mahasabha, 24 March 1947

AIHM Papers, File No. C-165, NMML.

The following is the statement to the Press made by Mr L.B. Bhopatkar, President, All India Hindu Mahasabha from Lahore on 24-3-47.

India is passing through very critical times, and her future largely depends upon what instructions Lord Mountbatten has brought with him from the British Cabinet and what policy the Interim Government proposes to adopt both as regards matters at home and abroad.

The Muslims are manifestly out to achieve their objective of Pakistan by fair or foul means, and it is for all those who stand for the unity and integrity of India and her independence to lay down once for all definite lines of policy and action.

It is obvious that the Muslims have declared civil war in Pakistan areas, and the recent happenings in Bengal and Punjab are but manifestations of the same. Sind has declared its intention to be a Sovereign State after June, 1948. All this indicates clearly an endeavour on the part of the Muslims to establish Pakistan by force, if it could not be had by agreement. It will be unwise on our part to interpret it otherwise. The plain question, therefore, before India is: Whether to adopt a policy of drift as at present, or to crush ruthlessly all these attempts to divide India in their very inception. If the party or parties in whose hands is entrusted at present the destiny of India intends or intend to concede ultimately to the Muslims what they demand, duty and honour require them to do so as early as possible instead of allowing politics to drift and to face its aftermath. But if they really do not so intend, then the same duty and honour demand that they must accept the Muslim challenge and fight it down before it assumes more alarming and disastrous proportions.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Punjab has outstripped Bengal in all what a Muslim outburst means and brings in its trail. There has been terrible loss of life and property both in urban and rural areas of the Punjab. It may even be said that in the rural areas where the Hindus and Sikhs were in a hopeless minority, they have been completely wiped away.

In Bengal and more so in Punjab all the carnage, devastation and forceful conversion were the outcome not of a sudden, unpremeditated outburst of Muslim fanaticism, but of a deep-laid plot on the part of the Muslims equipped with the modern weapons of war such as tommy-guns, rifles, bombs and hand-grenades. The result was that the Sikh sword and the Hindu lathi proved to be utterly powerless to cope successfully with them.

Added to this, there was almost culpable negligence on the part of the Punjab Government to take timely steps to put down Muslim raids and riots in the western parts of the Punjab, just as they did in the eastern parts to prevent reprisals by the Hindus and Sikhs residing therein. In fact, it seems that since 4th to 10th of March, the Government had ceased to function in the Muslim majority parts of the Punjab. The Police failed in several places to rise to the occasion and to do all the needful that was expected of them. In some instances they openly [sic] joined the riotous mobs in their nefarious deeds.

I feel that it is time for the Hindus and the Sikhs to take stock of the situation and devise ways and means efficacious enough to enable them to effectively protect their life, liberty and property. I also feel that it is the primary duty of the Punjab Government on one hand to confiscate immediately all the arms unlawfully collected by the Muslim hooligans and on the other, to freely grant licenses of arms to Hindu Sikh minorities particularly in Rawalpindi and Multan Divisions. This course will, in my opinion, go a long way in restoring public confidence in one’s own safety and the security of one’s own honour and property.

A proposal is abroad to divide the Punjab into two or three zones and to hand over the administration of each zone to the ministers separately appointed for that zone. I frankly confess to my not having studied in detail so far either the significance or the implications thereof; and consequently, I am not in a position to pronounce any definite opinion about the same. But all the same, I may sound a note of warning to say that let not anything be done in haste which we will have to repent at leisure.

I may also request all my Hindu and Sikh brethren in the Punjab to note that a time has arrived when, irrespective of any petty considerations of party loyalty and affiliation, they should examine carefully and boldly the ideology and the methods they swear by, and find out whether they require re-orientation or not in order to meet the new menace. This menace being entirely communal in its context, complexion and content, it is necessary for the Hindus and Sikhs to organize themselves as such, to pool together all their resources and to create a solid Hindu-Sikh Front to meet all Muslim aggression and fanaticism. Herein lies their glory and salvation as well.
Dear Friend,

I have received your letter of the 19th instant with its enclosures.

I am sorry to say that your letters make very painful reading. You seem to believe that we do not know what is happening in the Frontier or in the Punjab, or that we do not care for what is happening there. If that is your belief, it is futile for us to try to convince you otherwise. If you think that our vacating this place from the Central Government would be of help to the Hindu community, we are prepared to do so. Your having no confidence in us is understandable, but your prejudice against the Congress is so great that no Congressman would be able to convince you that they are capable of discharging their duty towards the great Hindu community or the brave Sikh community as well as any Indian. You cannot expect us to expose all our plans, or to explain to you everything that is being done.

You are labouring under a misapprehension that the Central Government has got powers which are not being exercised in this crisis. You also feel that we are not in touch with events that are happening in the Punjab and that we get our information only from the newspapers.

You must know that there is what is called the Intelligence Department of the Government of India. There is also the Military Intelligence Service. There is, therefore, nothing which is not known to us, and of which you are aware.

Both my colleagues had come there in consultation with me and they have done what was possible for them to do. We are also doing what is possible at this end, but you cannot ignore the fact that under the present Constitution that has been functioning the provinces are more or less independent and therefore the controlling authority in emergencies is the Governor and the Viceroy.

You have not understood correctly my speech at Meerut or at other places. I still stand by that, but that speech does not indicate that I am going to provide swords for the Hindus in the Frontier or in the Punjab or in any other minority areas. My advice to them was to be prepared to defend their lives, property and the honour of their womenfolk. After all, when the third party is going to disappear, in the transitional period, trouble is bound to arise, and the unfortunate people residing in the minority areas have to bear the brunt. They must be prepared to face the consequences. It is no use demoralizing them by simply raising cries or throwing blame on others. That would not help them at all.

I have nothing but admiration for those Sikhs and Hindus who have fought bravely against heavy odds in Muktang, Rawalpindi and other adjoining areas.

When I was at Poona, I had seen a letter addressed by you to Gandhiji in very offensive terms, and since then we had come to the conclusion that no useful purpose would be served by carrying on any correspondence with you. You hold very clear ideas about us, and perhaps you don’t think that we know our duties and responsibilities. Excuse me, therefore, if I thought it right not to respond to your letters in order again to hear from you in not very pleasant terms.
I can only assure you again that without your reminding us of our duties, we are fully conscious of them and are doing what is humanly possible for us to do.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

4. PPCC Resolution on Communal Outbreak in Punjab

Resolution Passed by Punjab Provincial Congress Committee, 26 March 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-10/1947, NMML.

The Working Committee views with distress and pain, the horrible communal riots accompanied by arson, loot and murder and such terrible atrocities and brutalities from which even brutes would recoil with horror, in Rawalpindi Division, Multan, Lahore, Amritsar and Gurgaon District and other parts of the Punjab.

Reports published in the press, statements of public workers and news received in the office of the PPCC depict a scene of bestiality and medieval barbarities that must fill every human being with shame, disgust and anger. Deeds of violation, abduction of women and forcible religious conversions and of loot, arson and murder have been committed in an organized pre-planned manner on a scale which finds few parallels in the history of our country. The Government communiqués bear testimony to it.

Especially in the North Western Districts, minorities have been given a terrible blood bath by the communal maniacs. Families after families have disappeared while many a town, villages and cities have been wiped off the map.

It seems that the most modern methods of warfare have been used in these disturbances. Hand Grenades, Tommy Guns and rifles, have been freely employed, showing that the military deserters and demobilized soldiers played a leading role in this widespread carnage. In some places police is also said to have participated in such activities.

This committee deplores the huge loss of life and property and condemn in particular the acts of brutality committed against defenceless persons, especially women and children, and offers their sympathy to the innocent sufferers. This Committee finds it impossible not to connect these tragic happenings with the un-constitutional agitation by the Muslim League party which led to the resignation of the Coalition Ministry. It is amazing to note that the authorities kept quiet during this agitation inspite of the violent character of the movement at some places.

This committee hold that this outburst of brutality is the direct result of the politics of hate and civil strife that the Muslim League and other communal parties have practiced for years past, and of the threats of violence that it has daily held out in the past months.

This Committee further feels that it cannot be mere accident that the districts where serious rioting broke out, are those districts which have British SPs and DCs. It further condemns the callousness of those officials who instead of giving relief and protection to sufferers taunted and bulleyed them, asking them to go to Congress for protection.

This committee further un-reservedly condemns all such provocative utterances and speeches and slogans raised during the last two months that have led to this orgy of blood all over the province and warns the people that in view of the disastrous consequences because of the communal madness, they should no more fall in their traps and thus loose their lives and property.
In view of the very serious nature of the riots, the like of which have never happened in any Part of this country, it is essential in the opinion of the Working Committee, that a thorough enquiry be held by an impartial tribunal which can command the confident [sic] of the Public into the circumstances proceeding [sic] the fourth March incidents and the following days and the steps taken by the Government both before and during the riots to meet the situation.

This Committee further strongly urges the Government to take the following steps immediately in order to restore the confidence of the minorities in the affected areas:

1. Immediate measures should be adopted for the restoration of looted property, abducted girls and women and converted persons.
2. Immediate rounding up of hooligans and miscreants.
3. Military Pickets be posted on all the routes, roads and bridges leading to trans-border territories to prevent the looted property and abducted women being conveyed to the tribal areas.
4. Evacuating the minorities from the dangerous areas to localities of the refugee camp.
5. Immediate relief in the form of medicine, cloth and food be provided to the refugees in the camps and other isolated areas.
6. Potentially dangerous areas should be constantly patrolled by the Military.
7. Impartial special courts headed by the judges of known integrity should be established to try these police officials against whom there are serious allegations of abetment with the hooligans. As a first step they should be immediately transferred.
8. Deterrent action like confiscation of pensions, Jagirs, etc. should be taken against those retired servicemen who have taken part in these organized slaughter.
9. Compensation should be given by the Government to all the sufferers.
10. Immediate steps be taken to guard against spread of epidemic in the affected areas.
11. Arrangements should be made by the Government for harvesting the crops whose owner have either been murdered or un-traced so far.
12. Illegal possession of arms should be severely punished and such arms should be immediately recovered and confiscated.
13. All religious conversions after 1st March, 1947 should be declared illegal by the Government.
14. As the minorities have lost all confidence in the majority, so the committee asks Government to concede their demand that can give them sense of security and safety.

This committee realize that the wounds inflicted not only on the bodies but the spirits and self respects of the people will take long to heal. Nevertheless they appeal to them to forget and forgive and to utilize this terrible experience for re-establishing good will and friendly relations between the different communities which have been so rudely disturbed during recent times. The Working Committee is of opinion that the communal problem cannot be solved by intimidation and violence but by mutual understanding, friendly discussion and, if necessary, by agreed arbitration.

In this dismal picture of communal madness many heartening instances of neighbouring love and mutual amity between the communities have come to light when Hindus and Sikhs gave shelter to the Muslim neighbourers while Muslim protected their Hindu neighbourers.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Such instances are a ray of hope for the future. This committee congratulates such peace loving citizens.

Finally this committee calls upon all the Congress committees and Congress men and all the citizens of whatever community and creeds with whatever party affiliation to come forward at this critical juncture and help to maintain the peace of our dear land by forming peace committees and Mohalla committees to preach and practice communal harmony and good neighbourliness to save the innocent men, women and children from the fury of communal hooligans.

Secretary,
Punjab Prov. Congress Committee,
Bradlaugh Hall, Lahore.

5. ‘Hindus and Sikhs Acknowledge Muslim Chivalry’

Stories of Muslim chivalry and good neighbourliness towards the minorities are daily pouring in from strife-torn Punjab. Reports of how the Musalmans protected the lives, properties and places of worship of the Hindus and Sikhs who lived in their midst, are now available. Below is a translation of two pamphlets issued by non-Muslims—Hindus and Sikhs—acknowledging with gratitude the help rendered and kindness shown to them by Muslims.

The following is the translation of a pamphlet issued in Amritsar on 12-3-47, under the caption, ‘Bloody Incidents of Amritsar and the Call of Truth.’

‘We know that the violent atmosphere of Lahore will have its repercussions on the peace-loving city of Amritsar; and that was exactly what happened. The animal instincts of the people of Amritsar had the better of them and they wrought havoc in the city. The Hindus, Musalmans and Sikhs fought freely. Where we saw the bloody scenes of massacre we also saw property worth crores being burnt to ashes and such horrid scenes of arson were witnessed which perhaps have no parallel in the whole of India.

‘It is most shameful and regrettable that where we lived like brothers today, we see heaps of dead bodies. But, Kucha Chatan (a Mohalla of Amritsar) provides an sterling living example. Here the Musalmans are in an overwhelming majority with a number of Hindus and Sikhs living amongst them. Here our Muslim brothers not only guarded our lives and property, but also provided us with all sorts of facilities of life. We are very much thankful and indebted to our Muslim brethren of Kucha Chatan for all that they did for us. ...

‘We once again appeal to Sikhs, Hindus and Musalmans in protect one another in their own mohallas in the same manner, and to embrace each other like brothers and divorce mutual suspicious and distrust from their minds and help each other in starting their businesses and normal life.’...

Following is the translation of another pamphlet issued in Amritsar, entitled, ‘Thanks.’

We signatories of Division No. 12 (Chowk Farid, Mori Gunj, Kucha Noor Shah, Kucha Arif Dar, Kucha Subo Dar, Kucha Deputy Aziz Uddin, Ktra Sher Singh Kohna, Bazar Shaikhan, Bazar Natha Singh, etc.) heartily thank the Musalmans of the division. In spite of the fact that our Hindu and Sikh brothers plundered and butchered those Musalmans who lived in their midst and whose safety they had pledged, the Musalmans behaved with utmost patience and courage and kept the Musalmans in check. They fulfilled the promises given to us and saved our lives, property and honour at the risk of their own lives.
We are writing this without any pressure and with full consciousness and we want to say that we have full faith in our Muslim brethren and we appeal for peace and harmony. ...

6. ‘Let Mamdot Form Ministry or Hold Fresh Elections: Ghazanfar Ali Asks Punjab Governor to End Sec. 93 Rule’

Mr Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Health Member in the Interim Government in a Press statement issued on Saturday in New Delhi on the situation in the Punjab demanded that the Governor of the Punjab should either let the Leader of the Muslim League in the Provincial Assembly form a Ministry or dissolve the legislature and hold fresh elections.

‘The policy of delaying action in this direction and letting the Section 93 regime continue will be wholly anomalous,’ Mr Ghazanfar Ali Khan added, ‘and altogether wrong—particularly after the British Government’s clearly pronounced intention of withdrawal from the Indian political scene next year.’

The following is the full text of the statement:

‘What is the Governor of the Punjab doing to end the Section 93 rule in that province? Or does he propose to let it drift on? These are questions which many people are asking, and which, I consider it necessary, should be voiced publicly.

‘Is the normal constitutional procedure to remain suspended indefinitely in the province, because there have occurred communal disturbances?

‘How these disturbances started and who were responsible for inciting people to indulge in violence for political objectives are separate questions which, I trust, will be referred to a competent and impartial committee of enquiry.’

THREATS OF VIOLENCE

‘As far as the crimes committed during these disturbances are concerned, every right thinking person must condemn them irrespective of whether they were committed in certain rural areas of Rawalpindi division or in Chowk Prag Das in Amritsar. I have personally never felt hesitation in condemning them in the strongest language possible.

‘The point however, is that the fact of communal disturbances or threats of violence cannot be allowed to stand in the way of the constitutional rights of the people.

‘If such disturbances could justify the suspension of the normal constitution, most of our provinces would be under the direct rule of the Governors today. The immediate duty of the Punjab Governor in the constitutional field is quite clear.

‘He has invited the Leader of the Muslim League Party to form a Ministry on the presumption that he is likely to command a majority of the Legislature, and the Khan of Mamdot, I believe, has informed the Governor that he is in a position to advise him about the formation of the Government and is prepared to face the Legislature. If the presumption is still there, the Governor should let the Khan of Mamdot proceed with his task.

‘In case the Governor thinks that the presumption does not hold good and that no one in the House is in a position to command an absolute majority, he should put the position immediately to the electorate by dissolving the House and holding fresh elections. It is then up to the electorate to produce a stable majority party....
Towards Freedom: 1947

7. ‘Sacred Blood of Our Martyrs’

_The Tribune_, 31 March 1947.

LAHORE, March 30.—The Shromani Akali Dal’s Working Committee in a lengthy resolution on the happenings in the Punjab has after condemning ‘the barbarous acts of loot, arson, rape, ravish, abduction, forcible conversion and forced marriages...’ in the riot-affected Rawalpindi and Multan Districts and the North Western Frontier Province expressed the view that...

Tribute

The meeting also placed on record its deep sense of sorrow at the murders of Babu Labh Singh, ex-President of the Shromani Akali Dal, S. Nanak Singh, Pleader, Multan, S. Jaswant Singh of Dheri, Member SGPC, S. Bhagat Singh of Khaparkheri, S. Banta Singh, ex-President, Gurdwara Chheharta Sahib, Bhai Mangal Singh of Amritsar and numerous other Sikhs, including women and children in the districts of Attock, Rawalpindi, Jhelum, Multan and in the NWFP and prays that these brave souls may rest in peace.

The Akali Dal feels confident that the sacred blood of our martyrs would not have been shed in vain, but instead will enable the Panth to come out victorious in the end.

(b) The SA Dal expresses its profound sympathy with all those, whose property has been destroyed, children and women-folk molested and subjected to untold, inhuman and brutal tyrannies and who are taking refugee in Relief Centres. The SA Dal assures them of all possible help it can render.

Punitive Police and Fines

The SA Dal urges upon the Punjab Government

(i) that punitive police posts be stationed in villages, a section whose populace committed inhuman crimes of arson, a general killing of minorities and looted and destroyed their property.

(ii) That punitive fines be imposed upon that section of the populace of such areas, at least adequate for covering the loss of property and the cost of the punitive police.

(iii) That the riotous people of those areas, especially the ex-servicemen be disarmed, searches be made to recover smuggled and stolen arms and ammunition.

(iv) That licenses to carry arms be issued liberally to Hindus and Sikhs of these areas.

(v) That the culprits and the ringleaders be immediately arrested, and be awarded sufficiently deterrent punishment.

The SA Dal urges upon the Punjab Government to take immediate steps for the early rehabilitation of the refugees.

Local Authorities’ Failure

The Shromani Akali Dal notes with great concern that at rural places, local authorities not only failed to effectively check the occurrences of pre-planned hooliganism but in many cases actively sided with the aggressors and abetted the commission of various acts of lawlessness, resulting in the wholesale destruction and ruin of the minorities in large areas and calls upon the Government and His Excellency the Governor to take stern action against such persons immediately.

The meeting further recorded that this meeting of the Shromani Akali Dal is of the view that an overwhelming majority of one community in the Punjab Police is dangerous for the peace of the province and therefore, demands of His Excellency the Governor of the Punjab to adopt such measures immediately as to increase the number of non-Muslims in the police to at least 50 per cent in the near future.

8. ‘Perpetrators of Crime Still at Large: Free Elections Impossible’

LAHORE, March 30.—An assertion that the Muslim League Party in the Punjab Assembly has no majority—every non-League Party, in no uncertain terms, has refused its co-operation to the League—has been made by the former Coalition Finance Minister, Mr Bhim Sen Sachar, in the course of his rejoinder to the statement of Mr Ghazanfar Ali, who had asked that the Punjab Governor should let the leader of the Muslim League Party form a ministry or dissolve the legislature and order fresh elections.

Mr Ghazanfar Ali forgets, says Mr Sachar, that in the atmosphere created by terrorism, loot, arson, murder and other heinous crimes, which has been created, and with the majority of the principal perpetrators being still at large, free elections are impossible.

Instead of posing the role of injured innocence to instal a communal Ministry in the Punjab or to ask for elections ‘which would intensify communal bitterness and be a serious danger to law and order’, and his ‘political associates restored’, Mr Sachar has asked Mr Ghazanfar Ali to help in restoring confidence and peace in the countryside and present a solution like sincere and true Punjabis.

The following is the full text of Mr Sachar’s statement:

‘I have read Mr Ghazanfar Ali’s statement on the Punjab situation with pain and disgust. It is a cruel, though an awkward, attempt at misrepresentation and harassment, but it will neither deceive nor coerce anybody. There is no warrant for the statement that the Governor should either let the Muslim League form a Ministry or dissolve the Legislature and hold fresh elections.

‘His facile assertion that Muslim League commands a majority in the Legislature is without any iota of substance. The League Party by itself does not possess the requisite strength of members, and non-League Party in the Provincial Legislature has in no uncertain terms flatly refused co-operation to the League in helping to boost a purely communal ministry. Mr Ghazanfar Ali and his friends know it too well that a purely communal ministry cannot simply function in the Punjab. It is gracious of Mr Ghazanfar Ali to suggest that the League would condescend to include representatives of other parties in its ministry, but the question is if anybody is willing to join the League on its terms. Mere lip sympathy after the recent mad orgy of com-sentatives [sic] of other parties in its Province will convince not even the most credulous. The League has positively lost caste with the non-League elements in the Province and if my information is correct even with some of its own members. Its empty assurances carry no weight. Wordy condemnation of horrible and inhuman crimes committed by Mr Ghazanfar Ali’s followers sound simply hollow and add insult to injury. Are the members of the League party willing to openly help the authorities in arresting and trying the bloody foes of humanity whose misdeeds should make any one hang his head in shame? Does not Mr Ghazanfar Ali know that rather then help authorities in bringing the heartless criminals to book, some of his exalted friends have been suggesting to the criminals to remove all evidence of their crimes by destroying looted property and making away with the abducted innocent girls. My friend must face the facts. Lasting friendship in the Punjab cannot be had by uttering a few fine words. It is the heart that must speak.’
Section 93 Rule

‘I regret the continuance of Section 93 no less than anybody else. But it is not decent of Mr Ghazanfar Ali to pose the role of injured innocence in order to instal a communal ministry in Punjab. And a sermon on constitutionalism sounds odd in the mouth of Mr Ghazanfar Ali, to have indulged in all sorts of indecent, provocative and forceful methods to dislodge the Coalition Ministry, commanding a clear majority in the legislature was nothing, but a deliberate repudiation of all accepted cannons of parliamentary Government. Neither threats nor entreaties can cut any ice in the political field of the Punjab. Let Mr Ghazanfar Ali and his political associates in the Punjab actively help in restoring confidence and peace in the countryside. Let them come out openly and present a solution—like sincere and true Punjabis. There is no other way.

‘Mr Ghazanfar Ali, says Mr Sachar, asks for fresh elections, but he forgets that terrorism, loot, arson, murder and other more heinous and degrading crimes openly committed in the Punjab especially when the (majority) of perpetrators of these crimes including the principal ones are still at large, make it impossible to hold any election which would be free from intimidation and undue influence. Does he not also realize that holding of elections at this time would intensify communal bitterness and be a serious danger to law and order which should be the paramount duty of every right thinking man to restore and maintain.

‘Further how can fresh elections assuming they could be held in the present turbulent conditions solve the present Punjab tangle? Suppose—and it is only a supposition the Muslim League succeeds in capturing clear 88 seats in a house of 175; obviously it will not become more representative than the last Coalition Government commanding 95 votes. If a Government of 95 members composed of all but the League elements in the Assembly cannot, according to the League properly manage the affairs of the Punjab, with what face can the League by itself claim to be entrusted with the task of running the Government of the Province. Bluffs would take it nowhere. Let League pause and think.’

9. Formation of Punjab Ministry: Factions Within the League

Letter from M.A. Jinnah to Firoz Khan Noon, 3 April 1947

Dear Mr Noon,

I am in receipt of your letter of 22nd March, 1947 and the Urdu letter which you have enclosed. The version given in the Urdu letter of my talk with Akhtar Ali Khan and one or two others who came with him, when he referred to the leadership of the Punjab Assembly League Party, is entirely incorrect. As a matter of fact, when Mr Akhtar Ali Khan started saying that you should be elected as leader of the Party and not Mamdot, I told him that he was living behind time and was entirely ignorant of what had already taken place, and that my information was that the Party had already elected Mamdot unanimously and that you had proposed his name. I told him that that sort of misinformed talk did not do any good and that now all must loyally work with their leader who had been unanimously elected and stop all this loose talk. You can see from the date of the interview that he had with me that it was after the Party had decided unanimously to elect Mamdot as leader and I advised them all, including Mr Akhtar Ali Khan, to work in a team and with unity which was most essential at this critical time that we are facing [sic].
I think you are unduly sensitive. Please dismiss from your mind that after what happened in Delhi when we had a frank talk, I have any doubt now left in my mind about your earnestness and desire to work in a team. That is the only way in which we shall succeed.

I have noted what you say with regard to the Rawalpindi situation and I shall be very glad to discuss the matter when I reach Delhi. I am leaving on Friday by air and hope to be there the same afternoon.

Yours sincerely,
M.A. JINNAH

10. Rescue Abducted Women Immediately
Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Evan Jenkins, 4 April 1947

New Delhi

Dear Sir Evan,

I received a large deputation from Rawalpindi and Mianwali this morning who gave me a long report about their difficulties. I asked them to write it down as briefly as possible and they have now given me the enclosed note. I have no personal knowledge of these happenings since I visited Rawalpindi, and I am, therefore, taking the liberty of forwarding the note to you. It may be a one-sided note and exaggerated in parts. That you will be in a better position to judge.

2. There is one point, however, to which I should like to draw your special attention as I did when I met you last. This is the question of rescuing women who have been abducted or forcibly converted. You will realize that nothing adds to popular passion more than stories of abductions of women, and so long as these abducted women are not rescued trouble will simmer and might possibly blaze out. Every day’s delay in rescuing them adds to the difficulties of the situation and makes rescue more unlikely. In view of the open allegations of partiality against the police, it was suggested that the military might help in this rescue work. It appears from the report I am sending you that about 200 such women were in fact recovered as also a large quantity of looted property. I am told that the military has been stopped from doing this work now, although about 100 women have still to be rescued. I would request you to take special interest in this matter so that the rescue of these women as well as those who have suffered compulsory conversion might be effected as soon as possible. It is unfortunate that many people place no reliance on the police in such matters.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

---

1 The report had blamed the civil authorities for interfering with the work of the military and preventing them from performing their legitimate duties. It demanded, among other things, that the military should be empowered to try and sentence summarily all offenders, and that the rescue work by the military should be expelled. It also demanded removal of some Muslim officials from Rawalpindi because of their communal attitude and the reinforcements of the police force in Rawalpindi with large numbers belonging to the minority communities.
11. Report from Punjab Province

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

1. POLITICAL AND COMMUNAL—The situation in the Punjab has improved very considerably during the fortnight covered by this report. Apart from stray incidents the Western and Central Punjab are now comparatively quiet, and in the Eastern Punjab, now the most menacing area, quick action is dealing effectively with such disturbances as take place. Generally disorders are fewer in number and smaller in size with the result that in some places it has been possible to decrease the severity of the special control measures enforced, while in others it has been practicable to reduce the number of troops acting in aid of the civil authorities. The improvement however, and unfortunately, is due to Administrative action and vigilance, to fear (in some measure) of the new powers which Government have taken in Acts and on Ordinance recently made law, and not to any real amelioration in communal relations. The situation therefore lacks an essential ingredient which would furnish an assurance for future peace. Since the 4th of March, and until the end of the month, official estimates of casualties are 2,090 dead and 1,142 seriously injured, but no claim can be made that the figures are accurate. Meanwhile, relieved of much of the immediate pressure of suppressing disorders, police attention is being given increasingly to the investigation of the crimes which were committed. Already some hundreds of arrests have been made, an appreciable quantity of looted property has been recovered and a feeling that retribution will demand its price is spreading and is doing some good. There is still much to do, however, and in such matters the task of the police is made difficult by the communal attitude of the public who often rate other interests higher than the bringing to justice of the true culprits. Police work is also hampered by efforts which are made to influence officers and by unwarranted allegation which sometimes almost amount to persecution.

As has been said, any indication is lacking of an improvement in the relationship between the Hindus and Sikhs on the one hand and the Muslims on the other. Indeed it is safe to say that feelings between them have never been so strained or the chances of their coming together never so remote. Invisibly but definitely all non-Muslims have been drawn together and there has been a manifest stiffening in their resolve neither to collaborate with the Muslims nor to suffer their domination. Equally on the Muslim side there has been a hardening of determination and Muslim parties other than the Muslim League have been affected. The Ahrars are now opposed to Congress and the Khaksars are going the same way. Even Muslim Congressmen are dismayed for they feel that their parent body has discarded its pretence of nationalism and they are anxiously considering where their loyalty should now be given.

Everybody in the Province accepts that the portents of the future are grave and that in the absence of a political settlement to which the Muslims and the Sikhs can subscribe the chances of escaping disorder, infinitely more wide-spread than that which has recently taken place, are slender. It is realized that such a settlement can be either on a provincial level or on a higher plane. So far as the former goes honest endeavour has ceased to be made and hope has virtually been abandoned, for the communists are hardly on speaking terms; their approaches to each other are mainly of an acrimonious character in the press and a social and economic boycott is increasing each day in effectiveness both in towns and in villages. The possibility that an all-India settlement can come about is accepted, but the degree of optimism entertained in this respect is not high.

The Congress resolution favouring the partition of the Punjab as a solution and Mr Jinnah’s strong opposition to any such plan are in the understanding of most people sign-posts on the road which leads to continued disagreement and to strife....

12. Increasing Communal Tensions
Letter from M.K. Gandhi to Louis Mountbatten, 7 April 1947

BHANGI COLONY, READING ROAD, NEW DELHI

Dear Friend,
I have pressing letters from friends in the Punjab asking me to go there, even if for a few days. Pandit Nehru agrees. Nevertheless I would like you to guide me too....

Then Noakhali calls. If the wires received by me during the last two days are to be relied upon, there is increasing lawlessness in Noakhali. Attempts at roasting people alive have been traced twice, and looting etc. is going on. You will see my public statement in the Press.

This outbreak of violence is not a mere detail. If it cannot be dealt with now, it won’t be fourteen month hence.

Yours sincerely,
M.K. GANDHI

13. Communal Attitude of Sikh Leaders
Letter from S.E. Abbott to G.E.B. Abell Forwarding a Letter by Baldev Singh to the Punjab Governor, 10 April 1947

Secret.
D.O. No. G.S. 206
[My dear Abell,]

HE the Governor mentioned in his letter No. 663 of 9th April to HE the intensely communal attitude of certain leaders including apparently the Hon’ble Sardar Baldev Singh. He thinks HE may be interested in the enclosed copy of a letter from the Hon’ble Sardar Baldev Singh and of the acknowledgement he has sent to it. The letter is very communal in tone, and the last sentence of paragraph 4 comes oddly from the Defence Member, whose prejudice against Muslim troops cannot long remain secret.

Yours sincerely,
S.E. ABBOTT
Enclosure 1

BALDEV SINGH TO JENKINS

Defence Department, New Delhi.
April 7th, 1947

My dear Sir Evan,

Ever since my return from tour in the Western Districts in the Punjab, I have been overwhelmed with the distressing accounts of the victims of communal riots and the terrible plight to which thousands of the survivors have been reduced. You doubtless must have both seen and heard of these things too. The more one hears of what has happened, the more it seems as if the attack on non-Muslims was premeditated and even organized. It was certainly a direct consequence of the most reprehensible utterances of responsible Muslim League leaders, many of whom indulged in open incitement to violence over a number of months particularly since last year; and since no action was taken against them or their supporters in Muslim press, the rank and file were emboldened—more so when during the League’s defiance of the Public Safety Ordinance its demonstrators got away with almost every form of the so-called ‘peaceful civil disobedience movement’ which ultimately culminated in the resignation of the late Coalition Ministry. The inaction of the police and the authorities generally during those fateful five weeks, I have no doubt, contributed in no small degree to embolden the spirit of Muslim communal aggressiveness. All this has been an eye-opener to non-Muslims particularly in places where they were almost abandoned to some of the vilest outbursts of felony. The gulf between them and Muslims is unbridgeable.

2. I have, as you are perhaps already aware, expressed my own and the views of Sikhs and non-Muslims generally on this sad chapter in the history of my Province to His Excellency the Viceroy and His Majesty’s Government. All I will say here is that though we have read and heard the appeals for peace made by the Punjab Leaguers, we also hear and know of so many other things as to their designs and plottings that it is impossible for us to take them seriously. What is needed is to take every possible precaution to prevent a recurrence of trouble and it is with this end in view that I am writing this letter.

3. An Ordinance was issued recently giving the Military authorities the same powers as the Police and it is gratifying to know that the former made a good job of the work they were entrusted with in recovering looted properties, restoring abducted girls and apprehending criminals and goondas. I am now informed that the DC Rawalpindi has now issued orders to the Military not to interfere in this work which, according to him, must be left to the Police only. I do not know if this is correct or whether the DC is competent to issue such orders. If it is correct, I would request you to please see that the Military continue to act as before. This is necessary in order that confidence may be restored rapidly.

4. It is freely rumoured that large quantities of arms are being smuggled into the Punjab from the Frontier and Tribal Areas. Such smuggling is nothing new but in present circumstances greater vigilance is obviously more necessary. Here again it is alleged that the Police, which is preponderatingly [sic] Muslim, is not taking action against the smugglers. You are, I have no doubt, already doing whatever is possible. Enough non-Muslim Police is perhaps not readily available. May I suggest non-Muslim Military Units might be utilized to do this job as a special security measure and also to hunt down unlicensed arms-keepers.
5. I am glad to see from reports that you are taking steps to increase non-Muslim element in the Police. Widest publicity should be given to this move and I do hope that a more representative Police Force will be formed as early as possible. This will go a long way in restoring confidence among the minorities now gravely suffering under a sense of insecurity. In this connection, the demobilized soldiers will, I am sure, prove useful. The other day, I received a representation from Mazbhi Sikhs who have served during the war and have lately been demobilized. It will help the resettlement problem as well if they and others are encouraged to join the Police.

6. Another point and I have done. I am receiving reports that a number of Sikhs have been deprived of their Kirpans by the Police. I need not stress the grave objection to such incidents in view of the religious susceptibilities of the Sikh community in the matter. The Kirpans seized from Sikhs, it is said, have been made over to Muslims by Muslim Policemen. I shall feel obliged if you will very kindly have this report examined. The misuse of Kirpan by a Sikh must be checked; he should however not be deprived of its lawful possession.

Yours sincerely,

BALDEV SINGH

14. ‘Riot-stricken Hindus and Sikhs Must Not Migrate—Sardar Swarn Singh and Lehna Singh’s Appeals’

_The Tribune_, 10 April 1947.

LAHORE, April 9.—An earnest appeal to the riot-stricken people in the Punjab not to leave their ancestral homes or to go away from the refugees camp to other places outside the Punjab has been made by Sardar Swarn Singh, former Coalition Minister and President Punjab Riot Sufferers Relief Committee and Dr Lehna Singh, MLA, General Secretary PPCC in two separate statements. They say that this mass emigration by the Hindus and Sikhs would create most difficult problems not only for those who go away but for the minorities in the Punjab as a whole.

In his statement Sardar Swarn Singh says:

According to the information received from the Refugee Camp at Wah and Kala and also from some towns of the Western Punjab, it seems that a large number of people are leaving these towns and going to other places either in Central or Eastern Punjab. Some have gone out of the Province also. The number of refugees in Patiala alone has gone up to 17,000. This unplanned and haphazard migration is bound to lead to ruin and disaster. This sort of evacuation will not create difficulties for evacuees, but for the non-Muslim minorities in the province as a whole. I know Hindus and Sikhs in the Western Punjab have suffered heavily. Mere consolation and sympathy cannot heal the wounds that have been inflicted upon them. In spite of it I say that Hindus and Sikhs must not move from their places till some definite and organized plan is placed before them. The Punjab Riot Sufferers Relief Committee and the Punjab Relief Committee have recently formed a joint committee to tackle this gigantic problem of the rehabilitation of the refugees. This Committee is already seriously considering this question and I hope the committee will be able to chalk out a definite programme within a short time. In the mean time I would urge upon all well wishers of the Hindus and Sikhs to discourage this mass migration, if not stopped immediately, it is bound to prove suicidal to us in the long run.
Dr Lehna Singh’s Appeal

Dr Lehna Singh Sethi MLA, General Secretary PPCC in his appeal to the minorities in North Western Punjab says: Reports are being received that panic-stricken Hindus and Sikhs are evacuating the Districts of Rawalpindi, Campbellpore, Jhelum, Gujrat, Mianwali and Multan. For thousands of years our ancestors lived in this area and contributed immensely to its prosperity and development. To leave our ancestral homes flourishing and prosperous for an unknown future is highly regrettable.

No one doubts that in Rawalpindi, Campbellpore and Jhelum the minorities have been treated horribly but for a considerable portion of a population to migrate from one area to the other in a state of helplessness without any plan and official aid is extremely difficult. For a minority to quit like this is both suicidal and unwise, in fact this tantamounts to cowardice.

The present state of affairs cannot last long. The military is stationed in these areas at present and will remain stationed so long as the normal conditions do not prevail. The rounding up of culprits though slow is still proceeding apace.

I have toured the various districts and can say with certainty that the authorities will try their best to prevent any recurrence of communal riots. In case they recur they will be crushed in no time.

In view of the above, I would request my Hindu and Sikh brethren not to leave their ancestral homes and not to believe rumours. They should fearlessly and bravely stick to their posts and carry out their daily normal activities.

15. ‘Muslims Engaged in Life and Death Struggle: Ghazanfar’s Advice to Students’

...PUNJAB DISTURBANCES

‘A striking proof of their unity, organization and discipline was furnished by the recent civil liberties movement, which Muslims carried on under the leadership of the Provincial Muslim League, for about five weeks on non-violent and non-communal lines to a successful end. Unfortunately, things happened in the Punjab soon after, which presented a sad contrast to this peaceful and province-wide struggle of the masses for certain elementary political and civil rights. I am referring to the recent communal disturbances in various parts of this province. I have never hesitated to condemn the crimes and misdeeds perpetrated during this break-down of law and order.

‘I hope to God that the impending transfer of power from British to Indian hands will be completed peacefully; but if either of the two major parties refuses to be just to the other, or to follow the golden maxim of “Live and let live” and, if as a result, there are fights, I wish that some method may be found of establishing a convention to be respected on all sides to spare at least women and young children from barbarous attacks, murder and torture. The horrible example of such crimes on a mass scale, set by Bihar, seems to have dulled people’s sense of chivalry and humanity. Wherever communal riots now break out, helpless women and children become a special object of attack along with men. This happened in Chowk Pragdas in Amritsar. This happened in the rural areas of northern Punjab, and this again happened in Gurgano district. I condemn, with all the emphasis at my command, any kind of unprovoked attack whether by a Muslim, Hindu or Sikh, on an innocent and weak neighbour, anywhere in the country, particularly when the victims are helpless women and children.’
DELIBERATE PROVOCATION

‘While referring, however, to the ugly crimes which have disfigured the fair name of the Punjab during recent weeks, I must also emphasize the need for everybody to maintain a correct perspective about the unfortunate episode. Communal rioting in the Punjab was deliberately provoked and encouraged as a means of obstructing normal constitutional procedure. There exists clear documentary evidence in support of this in the form of reports published in the local Press of public speeches delivered in Lahore on March 3 last. Let anybody read those speeches and see if, even in cold print and after proper and careful subediting, they mean anything else than a call to certain section of the people to indulge in violence and bloodshed. The peace of the Punjab was thus wantonly and deliberately destroyed. The earliest phase of communal disturbances in Lahore and certain other towns clearly reflects the result of these speeches. An official record of the happenings in Lahore on March 4 is in existence in the form of a Public Communiqué. No official version of the sequence of events in Multan, Amritsar and Rawalpindi towns had been published by the Punjab Government, as far as I know, but it can be safely asserted that trouble started at all these places in more or less the same way. Certain excitable elements took their cue from the speeches delivered in Lahore and started demonstrations involving ugly acts of violence.

‘The trouble might have been nipped in the bud if the League Leaders’ sincere efforts to secure a united front of the leaders of all communities for the limited purpose of checking violence and restoring peace and order had received equally sincere response. Some leaders, however, seem to have feared that, if they joined hands with the Muslim League even for the limited purpose of restoring and maintaining peace in the province, the process might develop into a Muslim League Ministry. In these circumstances the trouble spread, got completely out of control, first as a result of wild rumours and later due to a variety of causes, the bad example of one man or group being followed by another and fanatical passions coming into play along with economic causes and motives of sordid gain....'

EXPLANATION DUE

‘I wish my non-Muslim friends who occupy positions of influence in their communities would show a better sense of responsibility towards at least their own people than indulging in this kind of short-sighted opportunism. How can they in this age of progressive democracy hope to keep the Muslim majority of this province permanently out of their proper place in popular self-Government?

‘How long can the Section 93 rule last? In fact it seems to me that an explanation has already become due to the public of the Punjab from the authorities concerned as to why the Section 93 regime is now in existence and what steps are being taken to end it. Is it there because no political party is willing or able to form a Ministry, or is it there because certain minorities are refusing to accept the representation which the majority offers them in the Ministry? Or again, is it being continued because there have occurred communal disturbances in certain parts of the province, or certain people are threatening to create more disturbances if popular rule is restored in the Punjab? The constitutional position is clear beyond any doubt. The Muslim League party claims that it is in a position to form a Ministry and face the House at once. What is the justification for refusing to let the question be decided on the floor of the House? The margin of the majority which the Ministry may be able to command is irrelevant. Who can say whether any Ministry which commands a majority today will or will not prove stable in future. As far as the representation of the minorities in a Muslim League Ministry in the Punjab is ...concerned, the offer of not only a just but a generous share for the Sikhs is always open, in spite of whatever might have happened. If it is not accepted, it is no fault of the Muslim League. The Congress Party, however, stands on a different footing altogether. It is an All-India Party. In its majority provinces it has shown no desire to form coalitions with the Muslim League, even if it meant the formation of purely Hindu ministries. In the circumstances, it cannot expect to be invited into a coalition by the Muslim League in Punjab. This, however, does not mean that a Muslim League Ministry will be unmindful of the legitimate interests of either the Hindus or any other smaller minority. It will strain every nerve to protect them and to give them the same safeguards which any minority may be enjoying anywhere else in the country.
Towards Freedom: 1947

16. Congressmen Not to Be Associated with Communal Relief Organizations

Letter from Sadiq Ali to the General Secretary, District Congress Committee, Gurgaon, 12 April 1947

AICC Papers, File No. G-8 (I)/1947, NMML.

The Gen. Secretary,
Dist Cong Committee,
Gurgoan.

Dear Friend,

We have your letter of the 10th instant. The Congress is a nationalist organization dedicated to the service of the whole people of India irrespective of caste and creed. It is not desirable for Congressmen to be associated with communal relief organizations. We should discourage such associations. If you have any particular case in mind which you think is leading to harmful consequences it should be brought to the notice of the PCC. Cases of this kind have to be viewed in the light of the situation obtaining in the district concerned.

Yours sincerely,
Sadiq Ali
PERMANENT SECRETARY

Enclosure

President: Rao Gajraj Singh, Advocate
General Secretary: Mr Roop Lal Mehta
Treasurer: L. Giasi Ram

The District Congress Committee, GURGAON

Hodal
10-4-'47

The President,
Indian National Congress,
Delhi.

Most respected sir,

Will you very kindly clarify the Indian National Congress Policy on the following points:
1. Whether a member of Provincial Congress Committee, and office bearers of a District and Tehsil Congress Committees can be a member of Hindu Relief organization organized by Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh and Hindu Mahasabha under the name of Hindu Relief Committee?

2. In case the above is not permissible, disciplinary action against any individual such as above can be taken?

An reply will be very much appreciated.

Yours obediently,
Roop Lal Mehta
General Secy

PS. Please reply to Mr Rooplal Mehta,
Hodal,
District Gurgaon.

17. Governor of Punjab Partisan to Hindu-Sikh Front

Extract of a Letter from Liaquat Ali Khan to Louis Mountbatten, 15 April 1947
IOR, R/3/1/90, Acc. No. 3415, NAI.

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

I believe that during the consultation that you are holding with provincial Governors, provincial administrations and the conditions prevailing in the various provinces are likely to come under review. It is a matter of vital concern to the Muslim League that the situation in the Punjab should be understood in its true perspective, and that you should bear in mind our deep resentment of the present partial and unjustified attitude that is being adopted by Sir Evan Jenkins, the Governor of the Punjab....

Events in the Punjab since the imposition of Section 93 have made it clear that the present administration has made it a matter of policy to suppress, intimidate and coerce the Muslims and it appears as if the Governor considers it his personal concern to do all that he possibly can to prevent the majority community in the Punjab from having its proper share in the administration of the province.

Everywhere in the riot affected or threatened areas which cover nearly the whole of the province, the administration is adopting an attitude of hostility towards Muslims. In all districts vast numbers of Muslims have been indiscriminately arrested and even in places like Amritsar where the Muslims have suffered the heaviest losses, many more Muslims than non-Muslims are in jail. Throughout the province an overwhelming percentage of responsible officials are non-Muslims. Out of 29 District Magistrates only 9 are Muslims whilst there is not a single Muslim Commissioner or DIG of Police in the Punjab. Similarly, the special investigation staff set up to enquire into the recent disturbances is preponderantly non-Muslim, so much so that in Rawalpindi only 5 out of 26 officials of this are Muslim, and this at a time when justice by any except a mixed staff is out of the question.

The general behaviour of the administrators, is one of open hostility towards the Muslims. Responsible officials, who are expected to have no political affiliations openly declare their hostility to the Muslim ideal of Pakistan, and the DIG of Rawalpindi Division recently issued a press statement couched in unrestrained terms threatening direct vengeance on the Muslims. High ranking leaders of the Muslim League are treated with contempt and intimidated by the officials who openly threaten them with reprisals by Sikhs. To all sections of the Muslims, the officials make no secret of their partiality for and sympathy with the Sikhs, and paint in lurid colours the prospects of Sikh retaliation. Muslims are complacently informed that the Sikhs are arming aggressively, as if it were the duty of Government to encourage such preparations rather than to prevent them.

Even in a technical matter like the censorship of news, the most provocative and aggressive speeches and statements of Sikh and Hindu leaders are allowed to pass, whilst even the mildest utterances by the Muslim leaders are withheld from publication.

The Sikhs and Hindus are at the same time being encouraged in every way to adopt an aggressive attitude. Despite reports of large-scale arming by the Sikhs, and of smuggling of arms from the adjoining Sikh States who have publicly declared their resolve to support the Akali Party and its policy in every way—reports which the officials themselves confess to be well-founded—nothing is being done in the matter. In the present state of high tension the Sikhs are being allowed to display large swords under the name of kirpans, whilst the Muslims are being deprived everywhere of even pen-knives. The Sikhs do not claim their religious sacrament of carrying a Kirpan in the army, or the police, in the law courts, the legislatures or in jail, but they are allowed to carry Kirpans when doing so imperils the peace of the land. On the other hand when the Muslims claim the right to wear a sword, it is argued that whilst the weapon in the possession of a Sikh is an emblem of spirituality in the hands of a Muslim it becomes a menace to others, although it is freely admitted that the chief present danger to the Punjab comes from the temper of the Sikhs.

Any impartial assessment of the position in the Punjab leads one to the inescapable conclusion that the Governor and his subordinates want to foster chaos in the province. The minorities are being deliberately encouraged to oppose any reasonable settlement with the majority, and are being led to believe that if they are able to create further disturbances in the province, it would be a political argument in their favour and against the Muslims in the final disposition of power in India.

I have placed these facts before you, because I feel that unless the Governor of the Punjab is persuaded to alter his present attitude very serious consequences may follow, which might have effects that cannot be limited to the boundaries of the Punjab.

I also feel that the time has come when a final decision must be taken to replace Section 93 in the Punjab by a popular Government. The Muslim League is in a position to form a ministry and to command a majority in the provincial Legislature, and I cannot see how the Governor can continue to resist the normal application of constitutional methods. The refusal of the Governor to allow the Muslim League to form a ministry directly helps the other parties to maintain their intransigent attitude. The argument is sometimes advanced that as the formation of a ministry by majority party is not likely to accord with the wishes of the minorities who will create disturbances, the majority party should not be allowed to form a ministry at all. You will appreciate that such an argument, if applied generally, will place a decisive weapon in the hands of minorities all over the country, who will thus be able to prevent the majority parties effectively from forming a Government in any Province by threatening a disturbance of the peace. This, you will agree, would be an impossible proposition.
I shall be glad to see you at any time convenient if any of the points raised in this letter require further elucidation or discussion.

Yours sincerely,
Liaquat Ali Khan

---

1 The noting by Jenkins in the margin reads ‘14 are British, I think’.

18. Jenkins Denies Charges Laid upon Him by Liaquat Ali

Extract from a Note by Evan Jenkins Commenting on a Letter by Liaquat Ali Khan to Louis Mountbatten, 16 April 1947

IOR, R/3/190, Acc. No. 3415, NAI.

...(4) We are dealing with the aftermath of very serious disturbances. In one Police Station alone of the Rawalpindi district the Police tell me that they are investigating 500 murders. It is quite impossible for me to declare an amnesty, nor can I permit people to retain looted property, abducted women, and so on. In one village of the Attock district the Police found 30 lorry loads of loot.

(5) The cadres of the Punjab services are mixed, and it is impossible to guarantee that the Muslims will have their full share of senior appointments. I cannot pass over senior British and non-Muslim officials to make room for Muslims. Of the 29 districts, 10 are held by British officers, 9 by Muslims and 10 by Hindus or Sikhs. There is one Muslim Commissioner, who is on leave. He happens to be quite incompetent. The Chief Secretary is a Muslim. The investigation staff is an improvisation. We asked all suitable retired officers to join it, but the Muslims have mostly refused. The IG of Police has his eye on this, since the staff is not yet complete.

(6) It is untrue that the officials are hostile to the Muslims. They have been deeply shocked both by the atrocities committed in the rural areas and by the complacency of the League. Scott, DIG, Rawalpindi, a good officer but no politician, gave an interview to some journalists at which he unwisely expressed his disgust.

(7) It is untrue that our censorship is worked with intentional partiality. We are frequently defeated by clever journalists.

(8) Everything possible is being done to keep the Sikhs and Hindus quiet. The Kirpan question has already been explained to HE. Briefly, the Sikhs have had the legal right to carry swords since 1924, and it would be most unwise to take them on on this issue immediately. The only possibility would be to allow the Muslims to carry swords. HE has already told me that he does not prima facie favour this and has instructed me, to refer the matter to him if it is proposed to give any concession to the Muslims.

(9) For what object the British officials in the Punjab, including myself, are ‘fostering chaos’ I do not know. Every British official in the ICS and IP in the Punjab, including myself, would be very glad to leave it tomorrow. With two or three possible exceptions no British official intends to remain in the Punjab after the transfer of power. Six months ago the position was quite different; but we feel now that we are dealing with people who are out to destroy themselves, and that in the absence of some reasonable agreement between them the average official will have to spend his life in a communal civil war.

(10) The Punjab is not now in a constitutional, but in a revolutionary situation. If a Muslim League Government were formed tomorrow, it would be attacked by the non-Muslims, and particularly the Sikhs, with a violence which might prove uncontrollable and would certainly involve frightful slaughter by Police and troops. If Mr Liaquat Ali Khan means to start an agitation against authority in the Punjab, he will produce very much the same result. He might be reminded that it was the Muslim League, and not the non-Muslims, who first attempted to dislodge a Ministry by force.

Jenkins

19. ‘Communal Harmony behind Swords’

Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 17 April 1947.

(By Mr K.L. Rallia Ram)

The recent happenings in this land and elsewhere need no comment. They are too painful and too distressing to have any further reference. Suffice it to say that anyone with a little insight into the working of the human mind, could clearly foresee that trouble was brewing and that bad days were ahead....

The spirit of vindictiveness has been abroad in its worst term. For the sins of the miscreants belonging to the place are punished the innocent people living at a distance of hundreds of miles....

Amidst these ghastly scenes which the country has witnessed there have been innumerable cases, of mutual goodwill, extending of protection, help and succour by members of all communities. Here are some illustrations indicative of their loyalty and friendship during the dark days, which fill one with great hope as to the future of the country. Inside Shahalini Gate there is a small mohalla named as Jaure Mori. In that vicinity there is a mosque with a sprinkling of Muslim families. It is completely surrounded by Hindu habitation. The Muslims were all protected and cared for by them. Similarly, between Chauk Rang Mahal where ‘two empires meet’ and Mochi Gate there is a Hindu mohalla called Pipal Whera. It is pinned by Muslim neighbours on all sides. At the very outbreak of hostilities, Hindus were given an assurance which was very faithfully adhered to by the Muslim friends that the Muslims would protect them the same way as they would do their own. Many other instances could be quoted to prove that there are people who want to live peacefully with one another and recognize the rights of citizenship and fellowship. They seem to fully realize that lives of the people belonging to different religions are so interwoven that they cannot do without each other’s co-operation, help and friendly social dealings. This temporary insanity has come over a section of the people who have committed such horrible crimes. Hitler’s satanic act of raiding the civil population has perhaps unconsciously influenced some of them. The world is much nearer in thought and action today than it was ever. ‘Evil and good’ of one country or group of countries develop and travel. It is hoped that people will learn a lesson and that evil doers will get an exemplary punishment and a strong and healthy public opinion will be created which will serve as a sentinel and guard against perpetrations of such atrocities. No one will try to stab another in broad daylight unless he felt and knew that the people around him would give him moral support and thus be a party to it. Let the leaders who have created this atmosphere and have built for themselves an imaginary Utopia sit down, calmly and coolly and analyse various issues with which they are obsessed and find out a solution. Such an opportunity is opened to them now. The Constituent Assembly is at work. That is the place where they can settle their differences and propose safeguards, if they need any in getting loaves and fishes for their respective communities. Let them place the interest of the country at large above their own selfish ends. That will surely lead them to the desired goal of freedom and independence. We talk of reforms and post-war achievements. We have not touched even the fringe of them. So much has got to be done to make India a self-sufficient and self-reliant country that it will mean hard work, labour and sacrifice of disinterested and unselfish people all over the country for many many years to come as yet. Let us get to work and forget the past and let us all be permeated with the spirit of ‘forgive and forget’.

20. Report from Punjab Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Punjab for the First Half of April 1947, 19 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

1. POLITICAL: The situation in the Punjab has shown no signs of improvement so far during the month of April. There have been two serious communal outbreaks, one in the Gurgaon district and the other in Amritsar City and many incidents of stabbing and arson have taken place in other districts. In Gurgaon, the Meos were in conflict with Ahirs, the Jats and the Gujjars, and five villages were destroyed and many more people were murdered. The conduct of the people was such as to make it safe to say that for more than a century comparable scenes of open community warfare have not been witnessed in that area. In Amritsar, Muslims and Sikhs were again the main contestants, though Hindus did not emerge unscathed, and, in four days, twenty two persons lost their lives and eighty one were injured. The happenings in both places showed that a desire to avoid conflict on the part of many persons of all the communities is lacking and demonstrated that trivial incidents can cause conflagration in which the innocent suffer as much as those who deserve to pay the price of folly more. The official figures of casualties for this Province since trouble commenced on a serious scale are now three thousand killed and twelve hundred seriously injured and of this number any with the slightest pretensions to leadership can be counted on the fingers of one hand. The casual figures are still incomplete and are increasing daily as investigation uncovers further tragedies.

In Amritsar and elsewhere cases which have been reported show that the use of explosives in the shape of crude bombs is increasing. In Amritsar lighted arrows were also used in attempts to set premises ablaze. These are unwanted indications that periods of comparative quiet have been utilized as times of preparation for further disorder. During enforced lulls fortifications in various localities in cities have also been set up and it is generally believed that a constant scramble to obtain weapons, even of a rough kind has gone on. Such activities make it unfortunately clear that the lesson of the recent past has not been learnt and that evil intention lurks in many places. At the same time there is a great deal of evidence from all over the province to show that there is a general public which now exists and almost crazed with anxiety about the future. There is fervent hope—against hope in the hearts of a great many Punjabis that the negotiations in Delhi will result in a settlement which all will accept whatever it may be, and there is not a little criticism of the political and communal leadership which many blame for bringing the country to its present dangerous pass. Unfortunately, the will of the well-meaning section is greatly weakened by apathy and its strength is further sapped by fear which stands in the way of open opposition to the evils which are privately condemned as being most harmful to the common good. As a result public opinion is largely deprived of the power it should be entitled to enjoy and fails to oppose effectively the forces which seek to destroy.

The political situation has not changed radically during the fortnight. The cleavage between the Sikh and Hindus on the one hand and the Muslims on the other has undoubtedly widened and no fresh effort has been made to resolve Punjab affairs on a provincial level. Both Hindus and Muslims are now looking to Delhi for a solution as one is beyond their own contrivance, and, as a result, any provincial political activity on the part of the League and the Congress has been unimportant and desultory in character, and without the shape of long term plan and policy. In contrast, the Sikhs who have less faith in all-India leadership and who look on Punjab matters as being of vital importance and not as a pawn in all-India negotiations have continued their work of the organization of their community in a way which leaves no doubt of their determination to be ready to meet all eventualities. The raising of the Akal Regiments has made progress and efforts are now afoot to unite all Sikhs so that they may combine to meet approaching danger whatever form it may take. The latest move in the Sikh plan is to have twenty five selected and influential Sikhs working in each district and pledged not to return to their homes so long as their community requires their services. On Besakhi Day some two hundred and eighty Sikhs, including Master Tara Singh, took the oath required of them in this connection at the Akali Takht and were called the Shahidi Jatha. Many others would have taken the same oath if their going to Amritsar had not been prevented by the disturbances which were taking place in the city at that time.

A point of interest in connection with the Sikhs which is worth mentioning is their growing doubt about whether any partition of the Punjab which Congress might try to arrange would suit their interests. They fear that they might find themselves greatly outnumbered by Hindus in a new State owing allegiance to Hindustan and deprived of much of the advantage which the Sikhs hoped Khalistan would give them. This has not affected Sikh-Hindu relations, but it shows how extremely difficult any plan of partition is going to be.

The Ahrars are the other political party to which Punjab public interest is attracted at the moment, to see what their final attitude to Congress is going to be. The present Ahrar intention is to settle the issue in a meeting at Lahore on the 19th April at which representatives of the party from other provinces will be present to state their views. Meanwhile in Ahrar circles there is a threat of open defiance of law to try and coerce Government into granting to Muslims the right to carry swords in all places in the same way as Sikhs may possess and carry kirpans. There is undoubtedly resentment amongst Muslims that Sikhs should have this advantage but whether the Ahrars would attract wide Muslim support for a campaign of the kind they have in mind is open to some doubt, for their popularity with the Muslims on account of past events is not great.

2. LAW and ORDER.—The political agitation and the communal disorders which have taken place in the Province without an appreciable break since the last week of January, directly and indirectly, have had a most adverse effect on crime. Directly the politicians and the communalists concerned have committed crime themselves and have created opportunities for loot of which criminals have quickly taken advantage. Indirectly they have created a situation of general unrest and disrespect for law in which crime naturally flourishes. They have also taken up much police and magisterial time with the result that the campaign which has constantly to be carried on against crime if it is to be kept under control has suffered grievously. In these circumstances it is inevitable that crime should increase and it is not surprising that the first months of 1947 should show a marked increase over the corresponding months of 1946 which themselves constituted a high record for many years. The increase in crime is in offences against property and person and much of it is of a serious kind. The situation is one which justifiably causes concern and unfortunately very little improvement can be expected until economic conditions improve and until the police are left free by politics to do their legitimate work.

5. THE PRESS.—There was no change in the general attitude and policy of most newspapers which indulge in recrimination against and vilification of the community with which their owners are in conflict. Discouragingly few sound constructive proposals were suggested by the press to halt or to cure the present cult of communal hatred. Speeches by political leaders were unstintingly praised or condemned according to communal inclination, and mistrust and suspicion dominated the tone of the Press, which was inclined, with the exception of the ‘Civil & Military Gazette’, to print any matter conceivable communal, however startling or patently untrue it might be, which could manage to pass the censor. Violation of pre-censorship orders were by no means uncommon and a number of warnings had to be administered. The publication of six Lahore dailies was prohibited for 14 days and the publishers and printers or editors of six others were prosecuted under PPS Act.

Particular venom was directed by Muslim publications against the Sikh leaders, whose arrests were demanded for their war-mongering activities and pronouncements. These demands received vituperative replies from the ‘Khalsa Sewak’ and the ‘Ranjit’, an anti-Akali nationalist Sikh paper, which appealed to Government to bridle such publications Muslim newspapers were also particularly indignant at the recent remarks made by the Maharaja of Patiala concerning the adherence of his Army to the Panth. Local daily publications have in fact become instruments for the spreading of communal ill-will, and print whatever matter they can to indicate the opposing community is gaining undue advantage. The resurrection of the old and vexed question of communal representation in the Police and other Government departments was one facet of this unending war.

Muslim newspapers continued to dispute the rights of Sikhs to carry any but ‘token’ kirpans. Much antagonism was expressed to the Congress proposal for partition of the Punjab; the ‘Pakistan Times’ insisted on the grouping of Provinces proposed by the Cabinet Mission or, alternatively, demanded the partition of Bihar, the UP, Madras and Bombay. Nationalist Hindu and Sikh newspapers, with the exception of the ‘Pratap’ and ‘Ranjit’, accepted the Congress lead. These papers strongly opposed any suggestion of a Coalition Ministry in the Punjab and did not favour the suggestion of new elections.

The Muslim League agitations in the Assam and N.W.F. Provinces were commented on by the various newspapers according to their communal views. The ‘Bande Matram’ in connection with the Frontier disturbances saw the hoary spectre of British inspiration.

21. ‘Noble Example of Communal Harmony’

_Dawn_, 19 April 1947.

(The following letter signed by 6 Sikhs and 16 Hindus has appeared in the weekly ‘Fauji Akhbar’ of the 19th April)

To the Editor, Fauji Akhbar, Delhi.

Sir, We shall be grateful if you publish the following account in your periodical.

We, the Hindu and Sikh signatories of this letter, live in village Wandshah Bilawal in Talagang Tehsil. There are about twenty Hindu and Sikh houses in our village, which has a population of about three thousand. As you are aware, communal disorders broke out in several big cities of the Punjab in March, 1947. Communities wherever they were in a minority, lived in constant dread of their life. Reports of several disturbing incidents reached our ears, too. But we shall never forget the brotherly treatment meted out to us by all the VCOs, IORs, Lambardars and Safedposhes, of our village and in particular, the great kindness shown to us by Hazrat Shah Sultan Ibrahim Sahib, the Sajjada-Nashin of Wandashah Bilawal. It needs special mention that when communal trouble spread to the vicinity of our village, we, inside the village, were quite safe, due to the kindness of Sajjada-Nashin Sahib, and the VOCs, NCOs, and IORs of our village. Those of them who possessed licensed firearms remained on guard during nights.
Towards Freedom: 1947

And so long as conditions did not return to normal, they protected our life and property.

Besides, there is the episode of the three of us Sikhs, Ram Singh, Hari Singh and Amir Singh. These three of us had to appear before a court in Makhad on the appointed date. On their return from Makhad the party got down at Daud Khel Railway Station, where they met Pir Sahib Mohammad Sharif of our village, who happened then to be on tour with his disciples.
The journey back to our village was perilous. But the Pir Sahib and his party came to our rescue and escorted us safely to our village, walking all the 27 miles on foot.

As we were two days late in coming back home, it caused anxiety to several of our friends.
Consequently three Muslim young men went to Makhad to look for us and render whatever help they could. They went via Mianwali and Daud Khel. On arrival at Daud Khel, they learnt that the three of us had already left in the company of the Pir Sahib of Wandashah Bilawal.

We, the undersigned Hindus and Sikhs of this village, wish to bring this example of communal harmony to the notice of the Punjab Government and the leaders of the Hindus, the Sikhs and the Muslims and we earnestly appeal to all our Hindu, Sikh and Muslim brethren that the Hindus and the Sikhs should set a similar example wherever the Muslims are in a minority, and that wherever the Muslims are in a majority, they should similarly protect the life and property of their Hindu and Sikh brethren.

Yours faithfully,

(Here follow signatures of 16 Hindus and 6 Sikhs.)

22. Maharaja of Patiala Portends Civil War

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Maharaja of Patiala, 20 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

TOP SECRET

His Highness dined with me, and I had a talk with him from 2100 to 2145 hours.

After referring to my last visit to Patiala, His Highness took the usual line of expressing his intense grief that the British were deserting their allies and friends of long standing by their departure from India. He also said that if we were proposing to do that, he thought it had been very unfair of us to weaken the States in the way we had done over the last few years instead of strengthening them so that they could stand on their own legs when we went.

He told me that he had a large number (I think 20,000) of Sikh refugees from the massacre areas of the Punjab, who were constituting a great problem for him.
He said he was trying to keep Tara Singh and Kartar Singh in order, but they were of course apt to be inflammatory; and he told me that he thought that they and the Raja of Faridkot were being extremely foolish in the plans they were trying to hatch (and about which the Raja of Faridkot had told me). He had warned the Raja of Faridkot that any idea that the departure of the British could be made the occasion of a 19th Century grabbing match was out of the question and could not fail to have the most disastrous repercussions ultimately on the grabbers.

HH of Patiala said that although he would do all in his power to preserve peace and avoid strife, he could not but be worried at the prospect of our departure, since he believed that chaos and riot were the least that could be expected after we had gone, and that they would be lucky if they escaped civil war.

As usual, he asked me whether we would not reconsider our decision to go, and I gave him the usual answer.

23. ‘Communal Activities of the Muslim League Necessitate Partition’
Letter from Bhimsen Sachar to Jawaharlal Nehru Enclosing a Statement Jointly Issued by Him and Sardar Swaran Singh, 21 April 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-34/1947, NMML.

PUNJAB ASSEMBLY CONGRESS PARTY
BRADLAUGH HALL

Ref. No. .... Lahore

The enclosed statement has been issued jointly by me and Sardar Sawarn Singh the Leader of Punjab Assembly Panthick Party in Punjab Legislative Assembly. The statement has the full support of members of the Congress Assembly Party and the Panthick Assembly Party. We shall feel very grateful if you would kindly bring this to the notice of His Excellency the Viceroy provided this suggestion meets with your approval. It appears to me that very early action in the matter is called for.

Bhimsen Sachar

Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru,
Vice President, Interim Government,
York Road,
New Delhi.

ENCLOSURE

After giving our most careful and anxious consideration to the issues arising out of the recent communal disorders in the Punjab and the impending constitutional changes in the country we have arrived at the following conclusions regarding the present and future governmental problems of the Punjab:

For the last many years the Muslim League has been carrying on a ceaseless and vigorous propaganda amongst the Muslim masses to the effect that the Muslims of India are a separate nation, and that they should not let the non-Muslims have peace unless a Sovereign State by the name of Pakistan is carved out of the present Indian territory. The League leaders have been further exhorting their followers to organize their physical resources so as to be able to conquer the Pakistan territory in the manner their forefathers had conquered India. This idea was driven still further home to the Muslim masses when during the last general elections the Muslim voters were freely told that the victory of the Muslim League at the polls would lead to the establishment of Pakistan and that in the Pakistan State trade, lands and other property of the Hindus and Sikhs will automatically pass on to the Muslims. To consolidate their hatred of non-League elements, the Muslim masses were told, on religious authority to have nothing to do with Hindus, Sikhs and the non-League Muslims in any sphere of life whether political, social, or economic. It is this open advocacy of the use of physical force in the settlement of political issues that has been responsible for the recent bloody riots in the Punjab and which continues to constitute an insurmountable obstacle in the way of restoring peaceful and orderly life in the province.
Towards Freedom: 1947

The last so-called Disobedience Movement of the Punjab Muslim League was an open invitation to lawlessness and disorder. For more than a month, the Muslim League carried on unconstitutional and violent agitation to break a constitutionally established Coalition Ministry which had a clear majority behind it. The resignation of the Coalition Ministry was utilized to make the Muslim masses believe that the Pakistan had been achieved, and the day for which the Muslim League was preparing them had arrived. Accordingly, they started a regular ‘Jihad’ (Holy war) against the Hindus and the Sikhs and indulged in murder, loot, arson, rape, religious conversions and forcible marriages. During this conflagration thousands have been killed, and much larger number have become homeless and penniless. Property worth crores of rupees has been damaged or destroyed. Hundreds of our sisters have become widows and a very large number of children have become orphans. Dozens of our brave and self-respecting sisters, gave their lives, but refused to surrender their chastity. All honour to them for they have upheld our glorious heritage.

These dreadful events of the last month and a half have conclusively proved that any government in which the Muslim League is the dominant partner will not inspire confidence, and will fail to protect the minorities. It is, therefore, necessary to take steps to safeguard the life, honour, liberty, religion, education, culture, language, and economic and political interests of Hindus, Sikhs, Harijans, and other Punjab minorities and to afford protection to the remaining non-League nationalist elements in the Punjab against the abuse of political power by the Muslim League. This becomes all the more urgent, demanding immediate decision in view of the announcement of the British Government that it may hand over complete power even to an existing province by the 30th of June 1948 at the latest. We cannot submit to be ruled by those who have committed or caused to be committed in these inhuman atrocities in the Punjab and therefore demand that immediate steps be taken to divide the Punjab into two, and if necessary into three autonomous provinces.

To restore responsible government in the province of the Punjab, we demand that as an interim and transitional arrangement, His Excellency the Governor General should instal immediately two or three regional administrations with separate Ministers, under one Governor for the two or three zones of the existing province of the Punjab. We must make it plain that in the existing circumstances we are not prepared to cooperate with the Muslim League for forming a single Ministry for the whole of the Punjab.

Swaran Singh

Bhimsen Sachar
24. League’s Claim to the Punjab Ministry

Extract from a Letter from Iftikhar Husain Khan of Mamdot to Evan Jenkins, 23 April 1947

MAMDOT VILLA, DAVIS ROAD, LAHORE

My dear Sir Evan,

...It is my impression that during our talk no doubt was cast on my claim that I possess the support of a clear majority of the present members of the Punjab Legislative Assembly. In this respect I would like to emphasize my position that having been invited by you to form a Ministry, it is my constitutional right to prove my majority on the floor of the House. ...

...With regard to the Congress with whom we have to deal not only in the Punjab, but in every Province in India, my position is that I am willing to cooperate with them in the Punjab on exactly the same terms as they are prepared to offer to the Muslim League in the Provinces where they represent a majority of the population. An All-India question, by its very definition, cannot be tackled on any other basis. On the other hand, since it is possible to reach a settlement with the Sikhs on a provincial basis, I have already assured them of the fullest satisfaction of all their reasonable demands in the sphere of administration in the Province. I am prepared to pursue efforts in this direction, but I cannot accept their unreasoning veto on the functioning of democracy in the Punjab.

I shall be grateful for an early reply from Your Excellency.

Yours sincerely,

IFTIKHAR HUSAIN KHAN

25. Governor Doubts League Claims of Majority in the Legislative Assembly

Telegram from Evan Jenkins to Louis Mountbatten, 24 April 1947

IOR, R/3/1/177, Acc. No. 3478, NAI.

IMMEDIATE

No. 82-G. In letter dated today 24th April Mamdot demands formation of Ministry which would evidently consist of Muslims only or of Muslims supported by a few Christian or Scheduled Caste Members. He asks for early interview so that he may submit his proposals.

2. Formation of such a Ministry would unquestionably precipitate non-Muslim rebellion of extreme violence in Central and Eastern Punjab. Conditions have changed radically since Ministry making was suspended on 5th March and we are now in revolutionary situation with all communities preparing for final struggle. Non-Muslims would believe with reason that Mamdot would endeavour to use police and troops to suppress them, and would withdraw criminal proceedings against Muslim Offenders in Rawalpindi Division and Multan. Mamdot would find himself involved immediately in something like Civil War and would in my judgement be unable even to hold obligatory Budget Session of Assembly. Civil Services would be split from top to bottom and task of British Officers would become quite impossible. Some of them including several Senior Police Officers would probably ask to be relieved at once. Your Excellency can judge better than I can, [the] probable effect of upheaval on this scale in your discussions with party leaders.

3. I doubt if Mamdot has majority in Assembly but if I resist him on this ground alone I commit myself to acceptance of communal Ministry as soon as majority is proved. I propose therefore to tell Mamdot frankly first that a communal Ministry cannot in my judgment carry on the Government of the Punjab in accordance with the provisions of the Government of India Act and secondly that no move to form a Ministry will be made until Your Excellency’s discussions with the leaders are concluded, when the future of the Punjab will presumably be clearer. In dealing first I would rub in League’s assertion of right of direct action in January and February. Decision on these lines may lead to agitation by Muslims but it appears to me the only possible decision. If Your Excellency could prevail upon Jinnah to accept it the effect would be good. Local leaders are fatuously complacent and if I were in their place I would not dream of forming a Ministry.

4. I cannot defer seeing Mamdot beyond Monday 28th April and shall be grateful for orders by then. In view of importance of this telegram and to save ciphering I am repeating to Secretary of State for information.

26. Communal Ministry Cannot Govern Punjab

Extract from a Telegram from Evan Jenkins to Louis Mountbatten, 28 April 1947
IOR, R/3/1/177, Acc. No. 3478, NAI.

IMMEDIATE

No. 86-G. Mamdot saw me 1530 hours today. He had telephoned during morning to say that he wished to keep the appointment. I asked him whether he had anything to add to his letter. Rather to my surprise he made no reference to any instructions from Jinnah and said that he had nothing to add.

2. He then produced figures for his alleged majority consisting of 84 Muslims, 4 Scheduled Castes and 3 Christians—total 91 in a House of 175. I said I noted the figures, but did not think that a communal Ministry, whether Muslim or non-Muslim, had any chance at all of governing the Punjab in the immediate future under the 1935 constitution. I was convinced that a purely communal Ministry would be dislodged by a violent rebellion and might even be unable to hold its obligatory Budget session. Surely the right course was to await the result of Your Excellency’s discussions with the Party leaders. If agreement were reached between the Muslim League and the Congress, we might be able to make a fresh start in a better atmosphere. Agreement might be based on union or on partition, but all parties including the Sikhs would at least know where they stood and might be ready to co-operate with one another immediately so as to bring the agreed solution into force. I thought Muslim League did not realize the extreme danger of the present situation and the risk they would be running by attempting to impose their will on the Punjab without some easing of the present tension.

3. Mamdot said that he personally would have accepted my view, but he was under very heavy pressure from his followers, who felt that they were being victimised under section 93 and that no attempt was being made to control the militant Sikhs. He referred particularly to criminal cases in the Rawalpindi district, the procedure for summary trials, the sword-kirpan controversy, the liberty allowed to Nihang Sikhs, the circulation of violent Sikh pamphlets, and the suppression of a riot in the Attock jail on 22nd April.
4. I assured Mamdot that I had no desire to frustrate the Muslims, but was so acutely aware of the danger of a communal Ministry that I would be most reluctant to take one on as Governor. All senior British Officers shared my view and were not prepared to take sides in a communal civil war. Events in Rawalpindi had undoubtedly led to many arrests and prosecutions, but in one Police Station alone there had been 500 murders, and I did not see how retribution could be avoided. The Sikhs were in a dangerous mood, but it was no time to stir them up on religious issues. I did not see what the Muslim League would lose by waiting a month or so for a possible easing of the tension.

5. Mamdot then asked whether I was definitely unwilling to accept a Muslim League Ministry and felt that the Muslims must ‘continue to suffer for another month’. I replied that I was unwilling to accept a communal Ministry, whether Muslim or non-Muslim, and that I was sure nothing must be done to impair the possibility of a Central settlement. Mamdot then said that he had already seen Jinnah and might see him again. He asked whether Your Excellency would grant interviews to party leaders during your visit to the Punjab. I said that I thought there would be no time at Rawalpindi but that Your Excellency would probably be glad to see Mamdot at New Delhi. Mamdot then asked whether you would be coming to Lahore and I replied not according to the present programme.

6. Mamdot was rather sulky and hinted at the possibility of a mass Muslim League agitation. I replied that I would sooner deal with this than a fight between a Muslim Ministry and the non-Muslims, but very much hoped that he would accept the need for moderation. Mamdot observed that this was all very well, but the Muslims were not going to accept partition and a civil war seemed almost inevitable. He saw no reason why I should prevent the Muslims from fighting for what they regarded as their rights.

Repeated P.S.V. New Delhi.

27. Sikhs Bearing Kirpans Threat to Peace

Notes from the Home Department, 29 April and 2 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 5/7/47, NMML.

Para 8 of the letter below on 28/4/47

The situation is evidently unsatisfactory and the CC has not suggested any action to improve it. I am myself unable to make any constructive suggestion, though I think that it might have been helpful if Sikh leaders had been able to discourage the wearing of unusually large Kirpans by people who ordinarily do not carry them. Probably in the last resort reliance will have to be placed upon the establishment of genuine more friendly feelings between the parties; these can be hoped to follow from a settlement of political or constitutional differences.

A.E. Porter
29/4/47

HM regrets he is unable to accept the CC’s arguments. It seems clear to HM that stabbings cannot be caused by long swords whereas statistics show that most such casualties on either side were cause by stabbings. The casualty figures show that on the whole Muslims have been more ‘sinning’ than ‘sinned against’. As far as HM has been able to gather from the daily reports, the attacks on Muslims are mostly or at worst equally with Sikhs made by Hindus. We cannot, therefore, lay the responsibility at the doors of Sikhs only as the CC seems to have done. That more deaths have been caused amongst Muslims than amongst non-Muslims does not necessarily indicate the greater effectiveness of the weapons used but may show better marksmanhip and more deliberate aim.

In these circumstances HM considers that no case has been made at all for interference with the long-established practice of exemptions in favour of kirpans.

V. Shankar
2/5/47

Letter from Punjab Provincial Congress Committee to the General Secretary, AICC,
30 April 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-10/1947, NMML.

To
The General Secretary
AICC, Allahabad
(Copy) 6, Janter Manter Road
New Delhi

Dear friend,

With reference to your No. P/16/2313 dated 21.4.47 we beg to forward herewith a copy of the report on the recent communal disturbances in our Province.

This report is by no means exhaustive and complete on account of un-availability of all the necessary data.

These riots or organized slaughter of minorities have occurred at an unprecedental scale.
In rural areas of Rawalpindi Division villages and villages have been completely wiped out sometimes with nobody in devastated villages to tell their tale of anguish and misery. Facts finding committees are collecting the necessary statistics and evidence but it will be a long time before their report becomes available.

The riots have taken a heavy toll of human lives and property. The loss of lives can be safely put at about 8000 while loss of property certainly runs in crores of rupees.

These riots began on 4th March and up to 15th March continued with great intensity and ferocity in all the affected areas. The police officers and European officers played a highly ignoble and partisan role in these riots and this factor proved a great hinderance in the way of suppression of these riots.

Communalism in the services and administration in the province also encouraged the lawless elements. Lahore Telephone Exchange tempering with the message of minority leaders has already become a scandal.

It is pointed out that Deputy Commissioners and Supdts of Police of all the Districts in which these disturbances took place, were British. It is alleged that they encouraged the lawless elements from behind the scene.

Along with this report we are also enclosing with a copy of the resolution passed by our Working Committee on the 25th March and a booklet entitled (Rape of Rawalpindi).

Please acknowledge receipt of the same.

Yours sincerely,
Ram Kishan
for General Secretary
Enclosure

Report of the Recent Disturbances in the Punjab
(March–April 1947)

Introductory

The origin of the recent communal disturbances that flared up suddenly on the 4th March, and engulfed the whole province from one end to the other, can be traced back to the unconstitutional agitation accompanied by violence at many places and provocative slogans everywhere to overawe and overthrow a popular ministry. The agitation culminated in the resignation of Malik Sir Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana, the Premier on 2nd March. His resignation was so sudden and so dramatic that everyone felt extremely flabbergasted to hear it.

Nawab of Mamdot, the leader of the Muslim League Assembly Party was invited by the Governor to form a new ministry and coalition ministry was requested by the Governor to function as a care-taker Government. The coalition party which still commanded a majority in the house was brazenfacedly neglected and by passed. Naturally Panthic Party and Congress Party could not brook into un-constitutional step with equanimity. On the 3rd March Panthic Party and the Congress Party met in the Assembly Chamber and decided to resist the installation of a purely communal ministry with all nonviolent means at their disposal. While the meeting was being held a huge Muslim crowd gathered outside the chamber and began to shout highly provocative slogans in favour of Pakistan. The Panthic leaders headed by Master Tara Singh emerged from the hall and shouted counter slogans at which they were threatened with personal assault by the hostile league crowd. The passions ran high on both sides but the intervention of the police saved the situation.

In the evening the same day a protest meeting was called in Kapurthala House against the formation of a purely communal ministry in the province. On the 4th March a procession was taken out by the students as a demonstration against Pakistan. Near the Gol Bagh it was subjected to indiscriminate and murderous firing without warning by the police, resulting in heavy casualties. It is remarkable to note that the police never interfered with league demonstrations during the League’s agitation which was by no means peaceful. The police in fact used to watch these huge processions violent in character with interesting indifference and some times policemen openly fraternised with the demonstrators. But at the very first non-violent demonstration the police officers rank and file descended upon the peaceful demonstrators with all their ferocity and brutality. This wanton and entirely unjustified firing lit the first spark to the already explosive atmosphere created by the League leaders invective and hymn of hate constantly and ruthlessly preached against the non-Muslims.

This pent-up hatred against the non-Muslim at the imaginary and fabricated grievances suddenly burst up and brought down with terrible crash and [sic] edifice of peace of the province. A peaceful procession raising anti-Pakistan slogans was attacked by the Muslims in Chowk Mati in the afternoon immediately after firing by the police in Gol Bagh area. A free fight occurred in which knives, hatchets, lathis, brick bats were used freely. About sixty persons were injured and about 6 to eight were killed. Curfew was enforced.

This clash ignited the conflagration all over the Punjab especially in the North Western Punjab. The care-taker Govt resigned on the 5th as a protest against the police firing on the students and rightly said in their statement that they could not take the responsibility for the tragic development. On the 6th March, the Governor assumed the full powers of the Government under Sec. 93 and the troops were called in to quell the disturbances in Lahore, while disquieting news from Rawalpindi division and Multan began to pour in with tension mounting everywhere.

Like a pre-planned campaign of terror armed hoards began to attack the defenceless minorities in cities, towns and villages of Rawalpindi, Jhelum, Cambellpore, Attock and Multan. Thousands of men belonging to the minority communities were mercilessly butchered. Their women folk were raped and murdered and abducted and their burnt alive and hacked to pieces before their eyes. Their houses and properties were looted and burnt before military help could come. From the details available now it can be asserted that this carnage was systematically pre-planned. Demobilized soldiers, pension holders and Innam Khawars all joined in this slaughter and most modern weapons like Machine Guns, grenades, tommy guns and rifles were used. Treachery also was employed to complete the destruction of the minorities. The raiders collected with the pretext of taking part in Kabaddi matches. The minorities were assured of protection and then attacked unaware and were done to death with brutality that has no match anywhere.

The trouble also flared up in Multan and Amritsar by the 5th of March accompanied by usual burning and looting.

Bleeding and screaming Punjab turned to All India leaders for protection. S. Baldev Singh visited the Punjab followed by Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru on the 14th March. Both of them visited the riot affected areas and saw the smouldering ruins and wounded and maimed persons everywhere and consequently had a personal view of the ghastly sights. Their presence infused considerable confidence among the public and also goaded the authorities into strict action for suppressing the riots.

All party peace committees consisting of Nawab of Mamdot, Sardar Sawaran Singh and Lala Bhim Sen Sachar was formed on the 8th March and appeals for peace were broadcast by them but it had not the desired result. Punjab public safety Ordinance was amended to meet the situation. An act known as the Punjab Disturbed Area Act was promulgated and came into force on the 19th March giving wide powers to the Government and police and military officials. Death penalty were provided for murder, attempted murder, kidnapping, abduction and their variants rape robbery and dacoity and arson in the disturbed areas. All the Districts of Rawalpindi Division the Multan District, the City and Cantonment of Lahore, Amritsar, Sialkot and Jullundur, Ludhiana and Hoshiarpur were declared disturbed areas under this act.

These measures combined with other military patrolling and appeals of the leaders gradually calmed the situation. Accounts of blood soaked events and terrible atrocities by the endless streams of refugees keep the tension unmitigated as a result of which recrudescence of the trouble occurs here and there. Gandhi-Jinnah appeal though belated may also help but as long as a satisfactory solution of political problem of the province is not found the present submerged turmoil will continue with stray assaults and arson and sometimes open clashes. In the meantime behind this widespread misery distress and destruction and suffering feverish attempts are being made by the league leaders for the installation of league ministry, and regular persistent propaganda campaign has been launched by the league press to prevent any action from being taken against the culprits and hooligans who took part in this wholesale slaughter of minorities....
PART OF THE POLICE IN THE RIOTS.

Increasingly impeachable evidence is coming to light of the highly partisan and discreditable role played by the police and some European Officers during these obviously planned riots all over the Province. In Rawalpindi urban and rural, Attock, Jhelum, Cambelpur, Multan, Amritsar everywhere there is found to be the same story of Muslim Policemen and Officers openly encouraging Muslim rioters and sometimes taking active part in these slaughter operations. In Rawalpindi Central Kotawali Police station Muslim police is reported to have revolted against their officers. Deputy Commissioner Rawalpindi when implored by the minorities to impose curfew in the city told them that some blood must be shed before the independence of India comes. Mr King, the commissioner openly taunted the people by saying that British and European Officers should not be approached for help as they were quitting. There is evidence to show that the English Police Officers did not order the Muslim Constables to fire at the Muslim rioters. Tehsildars and Sub-Inspectors in rural areas for example in Kahuta in Rawalpindi actually planned and executed the riot operation by the raiding mob. Muslim and European police officers never paid any heed to the call for help from the minorities. It is not mere co-incidence that in almost all the affected places the trouble always originated in places near the Kotwalis and Police Stations, as at Multan and Amritsar etc. According to a statement of Seth Sudarshan when he visited Multan, Hindus openly blamed the police for their misfortune. They said that they could defend themselves better if the police were removed from the scene. Col Dhillon has also corroborated the statement. When Hon Pt Jawahar Lal Nehru visited riot affected area many a representation were made to him by the public complaining against the disgusting behaviour of the officials and the police officers. Deputy Commissioner Amritsar also did not respond to the request of the public in calling the military in time. Muslim armed mobs were killing looting and burning in the vicinity of Kotwali but the police did not raise their little fingers to check them. Even at the present moment in the various cities Muslim ruffians make cowardly assaults on unwary strangers and passers-by in the presence of Muslim policemen. They just wink and nod approvingly and help them to make good their escape. Everywhere military aid was provided when the mischief has already been done. Murder of B. Labh Singh at Jullundur and S. Nanak Singh in Muslim [sic] while they were going on peace mission was the result of the treachery and foul conspiracy of police officers. It is really strange that at the time when wholesale slaughter and rape of minorities was going on full swing, the Governor himself thought it better to visit Rohtak to study critical situation where nothing has happened actually.

While the culprits in Rawalpindi are at large efforts are being made to round up and search the villages for illegal arms and abducted women and converted persons. Thousands of raiders are supposed to have taken part in these ‘operations’ but so far only two thousands have been traced. All these officials who actually connived and abetted at the murders are still there. The names of all the officials and police officers and men who are guilty of participating in the carnage are expected to be traced by the Facts Finding Committee who are on their track. The area in which non-Muslims predominates have been perfectly peaceful in spite of provocations.

Most of the cities are under curfew. Special investigation police staff which is reported to be inadequate has rounded up about two thousand persons in the Rawalpindi division. On account of vigilance and control of military the things are quiet at the surface. Large number of panic stricken Hindus and Sikhs are leaving their hearth and homes in Cambellpore,
Towards Freedom: 1947

Attock, Rawalpindi rural areas and Mianwali Districts for eastern places in the Punjab. Rehabilitation and relief of the refugees is task of colossal magnitude which cannot be done by the public without the co-operation of the Government. At the present moment this is far from satisfactory.

The Punjab Riot Sufferers Relief and Rehabilitation Committee have appointed Facts Finding and Information Collecting Committees in the effected areas. These reports when consolidated will recall the whole tragedy in its ghastliness supported by figures and unimpeachable evidence. At the present moment it is not possible to give actual figures of the killed, converted and raped and loss of property as there have been huge dislocation of means of communication into the far flung villages affected by these riots, especially in Rawalpindi Division. Moreover the tension continues the double-faced appeals by the League leaders seem to have no effect whatsoever on their followers who go on stabbing innocent passers-by wherever they can and committing arson here and there.

1 Page Nos 3 to 18 of this report have been omitted here.

29. Hindu–Sikh Stakes Higher in Gurdaspur

Text of a Telegram to J.B. Kripalani Sent by Different Organizations of Punjab, 4 May 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-34/1947, NMML.

Gurdaspur district 51 per cent narrow margin muslim population unreliable. Hindus Sikhs combined pay much larger land revenue income tax own more landed house property own eighty percent high sectional educational in much larger voting strength provincial assembly have 66 per cent elected district board members then Muslims grave injustice if district with Pakistan pray have plebesite [sic] detailed statics [sic] all kinds.

1 These organizations are: (1) Secretary, Arya Samaj, (2) Sanatan Dharm Sabha, (3) President, Rajput Sabha, Shahpur (4) President, Singh Sabha, (5) President, Jagannath Sanna Sabha, (6) President, Akali Dal, (7) Vice-President, Municipality, Gurdaspur.

30. Partition No Solution

Report on the Communal Rioting in Punjab by Chhabil Das, 5 May 1947
B.S. Moonje Papers, Subject File No. 58, NMML.

THE PUNJAB RIOTS AND THE LESSONS

In the North Western Frontier Province, the proportion of Muslim Population is 93 per cent, while in the adjoining Rawalpindi Division (comprising of 6 districts of Rawalpindi, Attock, Jhelum, Gujrat, Shahpur and Mianwali)—it varies from 87 to 89 per cent. The microscopic minority consisting of the Hindus and Sikhs dare not go against the wishes of Muslim majority, not to say of starting any communal trouble or fomenting any riot. What happened in the Rawalpindi, Attock and Jhelum districts of the Rawalpindi Division, Multan district and in the Hazara, Kohat, D.I. Khan and Peshawar districts of NWFP defies all description. The Muslim peasantry of those regions, inspired and led by the Muslim League Leaders, both political Demogogues and the fanatical ‘Mullahs and Pirs’, surpassed all previous records in acts of barbarity, ferocity and vandalism, resulting in wholesale murders, arson, plunder, rapes and abduction of Hindu and Sikh women and girls and forcible conversions to Islam.

Before indulging in any sort of criticism, let us recite a few bare facts out of thousands of facts:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Name of village</th>
<th>Name of District</th>
<th>Events</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Jand</td>
<td>Attock</td>
<td>14 Hindus and Sikhs were murdered, the whole bazaar, 80 per cent of the residential houses were looted and burnt.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Basal</td>
<td></td>
<td>All Hindu houses and shops looted and burnt. 27 Hindu men, women and children burnt alive in a temple</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mathial</td>
<td></td>
<td>36 murders, all houses and shops burnt.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rajar</td>
<td></td>
<td>157 murders, forcible conversions rapes and arson.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Parial</td>
<td></td>
<td>350 murders, forcible conversions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thoba Khalsa</td>
<td>Rawalpindi</td>
<td>152 murdered. 90 women committed suicide by jumping into a well.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Karor</td>
<td></td>
<td>60 forcible conversions to Islam. All Hindu houses destroyed by fire.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dhudial</td>
<td>Jhelum</td>
<td>The whole village of Hindus burnt.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Thamali</td>
<td>Rawalpindi</td>
<td>450 murders.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mughal</td>
<td></td>
<td>140 murders.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dhaberan</td>
<td></td>
<td>About 600 murders.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In the three northern districts of Rawalpindi (Attock, Rawalpindi and Jhelum), the loss of human life is alone calculated to be between 7000 to 8000 lives, the loss of property must exceed 40 to 50 Crores of Rupees.

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>District</th>
<th>Events</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>D.I. Khan</td>
<td>About 1400 shops burnt, colleges, cinemas, schools destroyed.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kulachi</td>
<td>The whole town destroyed.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mansehra</td>
<td>100 shops, practically the whole bazaar gutted.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tank</td>
<td>Loss of life very huge</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kot Najib-Ullah</td>
<td>The whole Hindu and Sikh owned shops and houses...</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Murree</td>
<td>105 bungalows, owned by non-Muslims, reduced to ashes.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Kahuta</td>
<td>The whole town, market, destroyed by fire.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nanda</td>
<td>3 murders and all Hindu houses looted.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Domel</td>
<td>100 Hindus' shops and houses looted, 4 lives lost.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

To call these events by the name of riots is a misnomer and sheer abuse of language. They are in reality broad-day-light organized acts of gangsterism, working under the instructions of the Muslim League Feudal Lords and grenzied [sic] Muslim priests who in normal times, are the pillars of the British Imperialism and lackeys of British Bureaucracy. During the two Great Wars, these henchment [sic] of the British Empire, supplied hundreds of thousands of recruits to the Indian Army. The whole region being an arid and barren plateau, lives on the military services and military pensions. The demobilized soldiers, pensioners (Civil and military) Lumberdars or Patels, Zaildars and Jagirdars and Inamkhors, all fell a prey to the vicious communal virus indiscriminately spread by the Muslim League Feudal Lords, and armed with spears, axes, tommy guns, hand grenades and incendiary [sic] bombs pounced upon the peaceful populations. Their sole motive seems so to terrorize non-Muslims, that instead of having recourse to the tedious, hard and ineffective methods of exchange of populations, they should automatically bid good-bye to their parental homes where they had been residing since time immemorial. The Muslim Leaguers resorted to Naked Fascist and Nazi methods and by following a policy of large scale murders, arson, loot, indescribable rapes, abductions, tearing out eyes even of little children, forcible conversions, with horrible acts of circumcision of young and old aging from 2 to 70/80 years, they have for the time-being succeeded in their nefarious designs, within a fortnight of these terrible happenings, about 80 per cent non-Muslim population of these unhappy regions has migrated to Dehra Dun, Hardwar (UP), Bikaner, Gwalior (CI States), Mandi Suket States and to the remote hilly district of Kangra.

In my humble opinion, the division of the Punjab will not solve the real problem. That will be simply shifting the Frontiers of Hindu India, from the Indus to the Ravi or the Jamna. Unless the mentality and Psychology of both the Hindus and Muslims is revolutionised the shifting of Frontier, will prove only a poor make shift and a weak palliative with the result that what had been happening to these ‘Gate-keepers of India’ on both the banks of the river Indus, since the dawn of Historical times (from the invasion of Alexander the Great, right up to the invasion of Ahmed Shah Abdali, nay upto the year 1947 of the Pax Britanica, will happen to these people on the Ravi or the Jamna Banks. By freely authorizing the use of fire-arms to the non-muslim minorities for self protection and by breaking and disintegrating the power of Muslim Mullahs and Feudal Lords over the ignorant Muslim masses, can we restore harmony and cordial relations between muslims and non-Muslims. The Muslim League gangsterism requires prompt and speedy curbing, and unless and until this is done, the united efforts of all the anti-Fascist forces of the land by the cherished dreams of Indian freedom, Swaraj, Ram Rajya, Socialism and Workers and Peasants’ Republics etc. all seem to be vanishing into the air like smoke. Gandhian Philosophy and Policy have miserably failed to achieve Hindu-Muslim Unity, it has rather accentured the communal bitterness and given a fillip to the votaries of violence.

The ostensible cause for the Muslim League to start ‘Direct Action’ was for the restoration of Civil Liberties and to terminate the Coalition ministry of Sir Khizar Hayat; in the Punjab and of Dr Khan Sahib in NWFP, while actually they were terrorizing, intimidating and exterminating the Hindus and Sikh minorities, whose interests they were so loudly proclaiming to protect. Could Duplicity and Devilry go further?

I am a native of the Rawalpindi Division and during my public life of 25 years, have made an extensive tour of the NWFP and Rawalpindi division.

During the last 6 or 7 weeks, I visited almost all the above riot-affected areas, made personal contacts with refugees of all sorts at Wah, Kala, Rawalpindi, Campbellpur and Pindigheb Relief Camps. Therefore, the facts detailed above are based on my first-hand information.

Stalwarts like Pandit Madan Mohan Malviya, Pandit Motilal Nehru, C.R. Das and others had come to the rescue of the distressed and bleeding Punjab, soon after the Jallianwala Bagh Massacre. It is a thousand pity that much more heart rending tragedies, as pithily detailed above, having happened, no Indian leaders have, so far cared to come and console the bleeding Hindus and Sikhs of this benighted province.
I, therefore, with all the emphasis at my command, that you should find time to come and see the miserable and pitiable condition of the Punjab minorities.

Yours fraternally,
Chhabil Das
Ex-Life Member, Servants of the People Society

Lajpat Rai Bhawan
Lahore,
5.5.47

1 This report was also sent to S.P. Mookerjee.

31. Report from Punjab Province

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

1. COMMUNAL: There was no major communal disorder during the second half of April, but a succession of incidents has kept the Province disturbed and has furnished proof, if any were needed, that the communal temper has not improved. The acts committed have been mainly arson and stabbing but the burning of wheat crops has also been reported from several places, and is attributed to communal malice, though in some instances, it is probably accidental or due to village feuds. Possibly the most dangerous aspect of a bad situation has been the growing use of explosives, both to cause damage to property and to take life. So far, with one or two exceptions, experiments in bomb making have been amateurish in character and have caused little damage except to the bomb-makers themselves. This is satisfactory so far as it goes, and it is to be hoped that the history of 1942 will repeat itself, when the swift retribution which attended those who were engaged in similar criminal practices made bomb manufacture unpopular. The potential danger now, however, is greater than it was then for the war spread knowledge of dangerous methods which might be put to bad use now.

The joint appeal for the cessation of internecine strife issued by Mr Jinnah and Mr Gandhi has not brought about the improvement for which so many fervently hoped. This is due to the unfortunate fact that many felt that one or both had been persuaded to a line of combined action which neither individually would have prompted, and to the publicity of a section of the press which conveyed the impression to the public that Mr Gandhi had been outwitted in a battle of wits, in which communal advantage was involved and not sincerity. Both adverse factors might have been overcome if the provincial followers of the principals had acted in a way which provided practical acceptance of the published wishes of the leaders. In the absence of any such reassuring indications conclusions embodying doubts were inevitable, and have added to the dismay which is felt on account of the present situation and the future. Communal apprehensions and community bitterness continue to be expressed in ways which leave no doubt that they are real. In particular migration is increasing and the stories and fears which displaced persons take with them enhance both communal hatred and tension. Social and economic boycott is also extending and is being practiced by Muslims and Sikhs in a damaging degree and by Hindus too. In connection with boycott the Working Committee cannot... of the Shiromani Akali Dal recently passed a resolution which made it almost complete in its application to Muslims. The matter is important for no other action, except open strife, can affect relations so widely, detrimentally and quickly.

2. Political: The renewed efforts which are being made in Delhi to find a solution for India’s complex problems are attracting the greatest possible measure of public, communal, and political attention, and the general view is that a division of India is unavoidable. It is accepted that this may result from some kind of settlement between the League and the Congress but that a British Government award is a much more likely instrument for bringing it about. While the public prays for a sensible solution which will avoid strife, and is increasingly apprehensive about the removal of British control, none of the Province’s main political parties accepts the idea of partition, as a result of compromise or award, with equanimity. Muslim political opinion is concerned, for it fears that the loss of a substantial part of the Punjab will weaken the economic structure of Pakistan. The Hindus dislike it for they resent being deprived of any of the all-India supremacy to which they feel their majority in India gives them title. They also fear Muslim domination in any area and realize that many of them will be subjected to it if any form of Pakistan comes into being. Both Hindus of the Congress and Muslims, however, await the decisions at the Centre with faith in their political leaders, although this trust is possibly greater now in the case of the latter than the former. The greatest anxiety about partition is being shown by the Sikhs. Their dread is that whatever is agreed to, or imposed, will ignore their interests, which, since they do not possess a majority of their own in a single district, are manifestly difficult to protect. They are strongly opposed to Pakistan; at the same time they do not relish absorption by a Hindu State. Their present demand is for a non-Muslim State extending from the Jumna to the Chenab, and including several Muslim majority districts.

With some uneasiness, the Punjab Congress has endorsed the resolution of the all-India Congress Working Committee which advocated partition as a solution for the country’s difficulties. Beyond this, and except for a programme of inspiring unity (in which there is an absence of faith), and raising relief funds there has been little Congress activity, and in some areas Congress has lost ground because of a growing feeling that it is prepared to give more to placate Muslims than the Hindu community can safely surrender. Possibly with this knowledge as a spur, the Punjab Congress has made plans to improve its organization and committees are to be set up in cities, towns and villages which are to have offices and secretaries who will function regularly. Sewa Dals are also to be organized and special training classes are being started for this purpose. An officer of the INA is likely to be the chief organizer of the Sewa Dal, but, even if he wants it, there is some doubt if he will have full INA support for his work, for many of the INA resent Congress’ failure to do more for them and communalism has effected both officers and men in a noticeable degree.

The Ahrar General Council met on the 19th and 20th of April in Lahore and representatives from Delhi, the United Provinces and the Frontier Province were present. After somewhat confused proceedings the Council ratified the resolution severing connection with the Congress, and a Sub Committee was formed to consider what action should be taken to coerce Government into granting the privilege to Muslims to carry swords. This is a matter which continues to agitate the League mind as well as that of the Ahrars, but the League has not shown any marked inclination to indulge in open agitation in this connection so far. It is also one which has not escaped Sikh notice and the Sikh leaders have said that if any agitation were started by the Muslims in this connection, they would oppose it with such means as they possess....
5. LAW AND ORDER: Demonstrations, inspired by the Students Congress and leaders of the Communist Students Federation, staged against the Punjab University authorities, to demand the postponement of examinations, defied the prohibitions imposed on meetings and demonstrations and resulted in police firing in Lahore on the 25th of April. As a result, one student was killed and another was injured. Since then the students have not risked another clash with authority, although it can hardly be said that the manner of conduct of the student leaders has improved to any appreciable extent. Since 4th March, when students in Lahore were to the fore in the initial clash with the police which was followed by widespread disorder in many places, the conduct of a section of the student community has been unseemly and provocative and their readiness to defy the law has been apparent on many occasions. In the circumstances the incident in Lahore, and the factors which combined to bringing it about, cannot be described as being altogether surprising. There is no doubt that the students would benefit from more discipline, and that a continued lack of it may easily lead them to further disorders.

Akhter Husain
Chief Secretary to Government, Punjab

32. Apprehensions about a Communal Ministry in Punjab
Letter from Evan Jenkins to Iftikhar Husain Khan of Mamdot, 7 May 1947

My dear Khan Sahib,

Thank you for your letter of 28 April. I am very glad to set out in writing the views I expressed to you during our talk on that date.

2. The essential points in your letters of 24th and 28th April, some of which you amplified during our talk, are, I believe as follows:

(1) that my invitation to you of 3rd March to assist me in forming a Ministry still stands;
(2) that you have the support of 91 Members of the Punjab Legislative Assembly, including 84 Muslims, 4 Scheduled Caste Members and 3 Christians; or in other words an assured majority of 7 in a House of 175;
(3) that much as you regret the unwillingness of the Hindus and Sikhs to co-operate with you, and willing as you are to continue your efforts to secure their co-operation, their ‘unreasonable refusal... to co-operate cannot be permitted to stand permanently in the way of the functioning of normal constitutional and democratic methods’; and
(4) that you should be permitted to form a Ministry immediately and to prove your majority at a very early meeting of the Assembly.

I deal with these points in order in the next paragraph.

3. (1). We did not discuss directly the question whether my invitation to you to assist me in forming a Ministry still subsists. It is clear that before the proclamation under Section 93 of the Government of India Act, 1935, can be revoked I must be satisfied that it is once more possible to carry on the Government of the Punjab in accordance with the provisions of that Act and I concentrated on this aspect of the situation.

(2). I noted your claim to the support of 91 Members of the Punjab Legislative Assembly, but observed that some of these Members might not have decided finally to support you.
Towards Freedom: 1947

From recent statements in the Press it appears that the party allegiance of some at least of the Members representing the smaller minorities is doubtful.

(3) and (4). These appeared to me to be the most important points in our discussion. Your argument, if I understood it correctly, was that since you had a parliamentary majority, you had a right to take office, and were confident of your capacity to carry on the Government of the Punjab in accordance with the provisions of the Government of India Act, 1935. I did not admit your claim to a majority, but said that in my judgement a communal Ministry—whether Muslim or non-Muslim—would find it quite impossible to maintain itself in present conditions. I reminded you that constitutional Government by a Ministry must be conducted in accordance with certain principles; and that when any large section of the population denies the validity of those principles, the position of a Ministry becomes impossible. The Muslim League agitation of January and February was unquestionably directed at the removal of the Coalition Ministry by 'direct action'; at the time the Coalition Ministry had a parliamentary majority larger than that which you now claim, and the whole basis of the agitation was that no Ministry, whatever its parliamentary majority, should remain in office if it fails to represent any large section of the population. The Ministry you proposed would in fact exclude all the Hindus and Sikhs, and I did not see how the Hindus and Sikhs could be expected to respect principles which the Muslims had themselves discarded. In short, I felt that until there was some easing of the communal tension, and some prospect of agreement between Muslims, Hindus and Sikhs, the formation of a Ministry would be both dangerous and unwise. I understood that the discussions now in progress in New Delhi might be expected to produce definite results in the near future; and it seemed to me most important that we should do nothing here to prejudice all-India agreement. If the Congress and the Muslim League, and, for the Punjab, the Sikhs, could arrive at some agreement about the future of India, we might well have a fresh starting point in the Punjab. My conclusion thus was that no Ministry should be formed immediately, but that we should review the situation as soon as the all-India position was clear.

Yours sincerely,
E.M. JENKINS

33. 'Khizr Pledges Full Support to League'

LAHORE, Sunday.—MALIK KHIZR HYAT KHAN TIWANA, former Premier in a Press statement tonight said that the Muslim League Party had his support and that of his Muslim colleagues for the formation of a Ministry.

Sir Khizr said: 'A certain amount of speculation about me still continues in a section of the Press. I had made my position perfectly clear in my statement of March 2 and I wish to reiterate that I made way for the Muslim League to come to an understanding with other parties in the Punjab and to form a Government.

'I had pointed out then that the risks involved in adopting any other course were too obvious to be stressed. For the peace and prosperity of my province I would welcome an agreement between the parties and am still hoping that this much desired agreement will come about. For the formation of a ministry the Muslim League Party has my support and that of my Muslim colleagues.'
Dawn Lahore Correspondent writes that with the public declaration by Malik Khizr Hyat Khan Tiwana to support Muslim League Party for the formation of a ministry in the Punjab, the Muslim League Party’s strength has risen to 101 in the House of 175 including the Speaker. The opposition now consists of 23 Akalis, 50 Congressmen (including 4 Scheduled Castes).

If the Punjab Governor can overcome his deepseated opposition to the Muslim League and allow the Leader of the Punjab Muslim League Party to discharge his constitutional right under 1935 Act to form a ministry, he will have a comfortable majority of 27. ...

34. Sikhs Special Targets in Communal Violence

Letter from S.E. Abbott to R.V. Brockman Forwarding a Statement Issued by Master Tara Singh, 13 May 1947

Secret No. G.S. 265

My dear Brockman,

I am desired to forward, as of possible interest to HE the Viceroy, a copy of a statement issued by Master Tara Singh on May 12th. The statement was submitted for press advice and was not passed for publication.

Yours sincerely,

S.E. ABBOTT

ENCLOSURE

STATEMENT BY TARA SINGH

Amritsar,
May 12th, 1947

Master Tara Singh has issued the following statement:

Time has arrived when authorities and the Muslim League should be plainly told about the feelings deeply agitating the Sikh mind. For some months past regular campaign of murder, loot, arson, rape, abduction and forcible conversion has been going on against the Sikhs and Hindus in NWFP and the Punjab. The Sikhs appear to have been made special targets of the League terrorists and assassin hirelings. They have been regardless of consideration of age and sex butchered in cold blood. In some cases infants, women and men were forcibly huddled together and burnt alive as if mere faggots. Their Gurdwaras and properties have been looted and consigned to fire. Crimes against their womenfolk have been committed which even the vilest wretch would feel ashamed to narrate. There is no end as yet to these acts of barbarity and the basest bestiality which pass by name of civil disobedience movement in vocabulary of Mr Jinnah and League. The League has done nothing to check the violent inhuman doings of its followers. Sikhs hold Mr Jinnah and the League directly responsible for the atrocities committed against non-Muslims and warn them that their cup of patience is now full to the brim and it cannot hold any more water. They have sinned against man and God otherwise nemesis will overtake them in their mad career and mete out to them the fate reserved by the Almighty for tyrants.
Plain speaking to the authorities is also imperative in the interests of peace and welfare of the country. It is the primary function of Government to maintain law and order and ensure security of life and property in law-abiding citizens. The Government with all its enormous resources in the shape of world-renowned army and police has signally failed to discharge this obligation. No amount of reasoning can convince the Hindus and the Sikhs that the forces of disorder could not be suppressed by the authorities. One also fails to understand why law of conspiracy which used to be so alert and vigilant in the days of Akali and Congress movements has been allowed to fall into disuse and arch conspirators and fomenters of public disorders are suffered to strut on the stage, triumphally issue statements and make speeches sowing seeds of hate and strife. There may be some expediency in this but this cannot be explained on ground of any good to unhappy land.

I am cognisant of the fact that real power to suppress disorders is still in the hands of Governor-General and the Provincial Governors. Everybody knows how dagger, fire and bullet did their havoc in Muslim districts unchecked for hours and days together sometimes under very nose of the police and troops but they could be moved into action by order from higher authorities. This bespeaks of the extreme incompetence on the part of the local officials or their secret sympathy with nefarious designs of hooligans. The Sikhs expected higher officials to deal properly with delinquent local officials and law breakers in a manner calculated to restore confidence of Hindu and Sikh minorities. But these expectations have been sadly disappointed and despair of people affected by the disturbances has found unmistakable expression in the wholesale exodus from several districts of NWFP and Punjab. This state of affairs does not reflect any credit on the Provincial Governments concerned. For the sake of their name they should do something in the matter, frankly tell minorities that authorities are helpless and that they should cease to look to them for their protection and should devise measures for their safety independently without relying upon the Government support. I assure the authorities that if the police and army allow them to act freely and do not subject them to double tyranny of hooligans and police, Sikhs can ensure complete peace and tranquillity within few days. Then if they suffered any losses in this voluntary undertaking they would not in any way blame the authorities but rather thank them for concession made on their seriously considered demand.

A word now to Sikhs. I congratulate you on exemplary patience and fortitude you have shown so far under the gravest provocations wantonly offered both by the League goondas and several policemen and officials day after day. I know you suffered wrongs and when you turned to police officials for redress you were mocked, insulted and instead of meeting with human sympathy and ordinary courtesy you got rebukes and rebuffs. The goondas have grown so bold in view of the active support or culpable connivance of their brethren who predominate in police that they have dared daily to commit outrages on your persons and Kirpans in the very city or holy of holiest where you must come impelled by religious sentiments or commercial or domestic needs and where you must expect to be best protected of all places in the world. That Sikhs fall victims to daggers of assassins in this city is extremely provocative and matter for deep shame for the Sikhs. You have as enjoined acted under remarkable restraint so long. Though this conduct has seriously affected your reputation as brave people whom none may touch without grief it has served one very great useful purpose. You have tried to maintain peace and have proved yourselves to be forbearing party in eyes of world. I recognize there is a limit to everything and you can now no longer control yourself as you feel that there is well planned scheme of extermination in operation against you. Moreover thought is goading you to exasperation that wrong interpretations are being put on your peaceful conduct and it is being assumed that you can also bear slavery in Pakistan and it is being seriously considered that districts like Lahore, Gujranwala, Lyallpur, Montgomery, and other places which bear imperishable imprint of Sikh glory, history, enterprise and industry upon them can be safely dragged into Pakistan. I realize my grave responsibility in the present hour and urged by sheer sense of duty to my country and community I am making my last appeal to the Government and the Muslim League to save the situation which has grown explosive in the highest degree.

35. Tara Singh Rejects the Gandhi–Jinnah Peace Appeal

Extract from a Letter from Tara Singh to S.E. Abbott, 13 May 1947

Dear Mr Abbott,

...I may say also that I shall not be a party to any hypocritical statement like that issued recently by Mahatma Gandhi and Mr Jinnah with the bitter result known to the world. I do not like to see a single innocent person murdered and shall do my utmost to prevent such murders whenever I find the Sikhs as aggressors. But so far the Sikhs have been aggressors nowhere....

I may repeat that I shall come to see His Excellency as soon as possible with the object of being useful to His Excellency’s efforts to re-establish peace; but I shall join no Conference with the Muslim Leaguers held for the purpose of anything, even establishing peace, for I have not the least faith in their sincerity.

Yours sincerely,
TARA SINGH

---

1 For more on the Gandhi–Jinnah appeal, see Chapter Four.

36. Problems regarding the Formation of a League Ministry in Punjab

Extract from a Letter from Evan Jenkins to Louis Mountbatten, 14 May 1947

Secret Government House, Lahore
No. 674

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Mamdot has returned to the charge after his consultation with Jinnah in Delhi. I enclose a copy of his letter to me of 14th May, to which I have so far sent only a formal acknowledgement. In the original letter the paragraphs are not numbered; in the copy I have numbered the paragraphs for purposes of reference....

Yours sincerely,
E.M. JENKINS
ENCLOSURE

MAMDOT TO JENKINS

Mamdot Villa, Davis Road, Lahore
May 14th, 1947

My dear Sir Evan,

Thank you for your letter of May 7th 1947.

It appears that the position I took in my interview with you on the 28th of April has not been fully appreciated by you, nor can I agree with some of the conclusions that you have drawn in your letter.

[2.] I am surprised that you should have any doubt as to the subsistence of your invitation to me to assist you in the formation of a Ministry. I believe the reason that this matter was never directly discussed by us in our talks was that we were both acting on the assumption that your invitation continued. This is implied in my letter of April 23rd to you, on the basis of which we met on the 28th. But I think all doubt on this matter is resolved by a perusal of your letter to me dated March 5th, 1947, in which you emphasized the urgency of the ‘establishment of a stable Ministry in the Punjab’ and you expressed the hope ‘that within the next few days’ I ‘will be able to let’ you ‘have proposals much more definite’ than those contained in my letter of March 5th, 1947 to you. You also requested me to comply with certain stipulations which would satisfy you that I possessed the support of a majority of members of the Punjab Legislative Assembly. Unless it was assumed that your invitation to me to form a Ministry continued, there could have been little purpose in your stipulating certain conditions, and in your request that I should submit more definite proposals. I must remind Your Excellency that your letter of March 5th, 1947 was written to me after the promulgation of Section 93 and therefore you must have weighed all the constitutional aspects of the situation before asking me to continue my efforts for the formation of a Ministry in the Punjab.

[3.] I find it necessary to question again the grounds on which any reasonable doubt can be entertained about my having the support of an absolute majority of the members of the Punjab Assembly. In my last interview with you, I claimed the support of 91 members of the House, and I was in a position to produce written statements to this effect by 10 members, apart from the 81 who owed allegiance to the Muslim League Party in the Assembly. I am not aware of any other method by which support to a Ministry can be assessed, quite apart from the fact that under normal constitutional procedure, the word of the leader of a Party, who is called upon to form a Ministry is not questioned except on the floor of the House. It is, of course, not possible for me to resolve hypothetical doubts in Your Excellency’s mind, and I can only hope that Your Excellency will ultimately be persuaded to repose confidence in the democratic verdict of the Legislature. I would also like to point out that the press statements issued by certain members of the Punjab Assembly representing the smaller minorities, referred to in your letter, do not cast doubt on the assurance of their support to me, but in fact confirm it, as is apparent from the recent statements of Mr Singha and Mr Gibbon.

Since our last interview, however, the position has been further clarified by the declaration of Malik Sir Khizr Hayat Khan issued to the Press on 11.5.1947, in which he has pledged the unequivocal support of his colleagues and himself to the Muslim League in the formation of a Ministry. Despite your doubts, I had always counted on their cooperation, and I am now in a position to claim the support of 98 members in a house of 175, or in other words, an assured majority of 21, which is a larger parliamentary majority than was claimed and enjoyed by any party in the House since the elections held to the Punjab Legislative Assembly in February 1946. I cannot, therefore, believe that Your Excellency has any further doubts as to my possession of an absolute majority in the House, or in my ability to form at least as stable a Ministry as the Punjab has known during the term of your office as Governor.

[4.] In the last paragraph of your letter, Your Excellency has alluded to certain general constitutional principles according to which democratic Governments under the Government of India Act 1935 are to be conducted. Unless the Government of India Act has introduced a departure in the normal functioning of parliamentary democracy as it is known to the world, the only test of the formation of a Government is the ability of one party or a coalition of parties in a Legislature to command the support of a majority of members in it. The mere fact that a minority in the Legislature and in the country is incited or determined to question the normal functioning of parliamentary Government by majority rule, and has expressed an intention to fight against a Government established by law by creating chaos and bloodshed in the country, cannot bring about a voluntary abdication of the machinery of democracy. I hope Your Excellency will agree that to submit to threats of violent resistance would be to introduce a very dangerous precedent in the politics of India, and would in fact be a direct encouragement to all minorities, wherever they are placed to resort to methods of lawlessness and intimidation. To accept the argument of chaos would be to destroy all possibility of peaceful democratic administration not only in the Punjab, but all over India.

I find it impossible to agree with the conditions you suggest must be fulfilled before the Government of India Act 1935 can be allowed to function. The Government of India Act contains a series of mandatory provisions, which must be adhered to in certain circumstances contemplated by the Act, and its validity cannot depend on the prior agreement of certain parties to regulate their affairs according to it. To accept the latter proposition would be to reduce the Government of India Act 1935 to a series of proposals on the lines of the Cabinet Mission proposals of May 16th, 1946, which can become binding only when they are agreed to, and then only for the parties which agree to them. Therefore, I submit that under the Government of India Act you have no choice except to apply provisions of the Act to the situation in the Punjab, which in the present context means that if you are satisfied that I, as the leader of the Muslim League Party, have the support of an absolute and stable majority in the House, I must be allowed to form a Ministry in the Punjab to replace the temporary expedient of Section 93 administration.

[5.] There is a suggestion in Your Excellency’s letter which I feel bound to answer, although it has no direct reference to the question of Ministry formation in the Punjab, but which has considerable political significance. I must deny that ‘the Muslim League agitation of January and February was unquestionably directed at the removal of the Coalition Ministry by “direct action”.’ Your Excellency must recollect that immediately prior to the movement referred to above, the Committee of Action of the Punjab Provincial Muslim League made it clear in an official statement that it was no part of its intention to upset the Unionist Ministry by “direct action”. Your Excellency must recollect that immediately prior to the movement referred to above, the Committee of Action of the Punjab Provincial Muslim League made it clear in an official statement that it was no part of its intention to upset the Unionist Ministry by “direct action”. Your Excellency must recollect that immediately prior to the movement referred to above, the Committee of Action of the Punjab Provincial Muslim League made it clear in an official statement that it was no part of its intention to upset the Unionist Ministry by “direct action”. Your Excellency must recollect that immediately prior to the movement referred to above, the Committee of Action of the Punjab Provincial Muslim League made it clear in an official statement that it was no part of its intention to upset the Unionist Ministry by “direct action”. Your Excellency must recollect that immediately prior to the movement referred to above, the Committee of Action of the Punjab Provincial Muslim League made it clear in an official statement that it was no part of its intention to upset the Unionist Ministry by “direct action”. Your Excellency must recollect that immediately prior to the movement referred to above, the Committee of Action of the Punjab Provincial Muslim League made it clear in an official statement that it was no part of its intention to upset the Unionist Ministry by “direct action”. You civil liberties. A movement to overthrow the Ministry would have only been called off with the overthrow of the Ministry. No one was in a better position to assess the cause of the dissolution of the Unionist Ministry than Malik Sir Khizr Hayat Khan, who, in his statement, made it clear that his resignation was due to the new revolutionary circumstances created by HMG's statement of February 20th, in the light of which it was no longer possible for him to present himself a permanent obstacle in the way of the advance of the Muslim people in the Punjab.

[6.] Your Excellency will therefore agree that the Muslims of the Punjab have never violently wished to challenge the basis of parliamentary democracy, and they expect that the minorities in the Punjab, who have ruled this province for a year against the expressed wish of 57 percent of the population of the province, will have the decency to submit to a principle which for so long has been permitted to work peacefully in their favour. But the Muslim people are not prepared to submit to threats and intimidation, and are ready to take responsibility of facing the challenge of lawless elements, and of pacifying the disturbances which occurred in the Punjab on the promulgation of Section 93 in the province.

[7.] It is my opinion that if Your Excellency continues to suspend democracy and constitution at the behest of some Hindu and Sikh leaders, you will further encourage them to follow the path of anarchy, and will render yourself liable to the doubt that partiality such as this lies at the root of the unreasonable and disastrous attitude adopted by some of the minorities towards the final solution of the problem of the Punjab.

I, therefore, cannot agree with you that we should postpone the formation of a Ministry in the Punjab till the All India position becomes clear, because I am emphatically of the opinion that the toleration of a undemocratic method of approach to this problem would encourage an application of the same fascist tactics to the larger All-India issue, and will, in fact, further reduce the prospects of a reasonable permanent settlement.

[8.] Section 93 administration is at all times an extraordinary measure which can be permitted only in extreme cases and for the shortest possible period, and then only so as to enable the employment of constitutional expedients for the restoration of normal democratic Government. Your Excellency, however, suggests that Section 93 should be accepted as a permanent feature of our political life till such as all the problems of our future destiny are resolved. This is a position that the Muslim League will resist with all the force at its command, particularly when it appears that the highest placed officials of the present regime are using Section 93 to coerce, oppress and intimidate the Muslims, and are complacently watching the creation of circumstances in which the lives of thousands of Muslims are gravely imperiled at the hands of organized communal bands of people, who are openly proclaiming and organizing civil war in the Punjab. Despite repeated attempts to bring these facts to Your Excellency's notice, and to warn individual officials against the consequences of this policy, no efforts have been made to reverse it, but, on the other hand, it has been intensified, and the hostility and contemptuous incivility of the administration from top to bottom has everywhere reached an intolerable pitch.

[9.] I have in my letter dated April 28th 1947, already described the efforts I have made to secure the cooperation of Hindus and Sikhs in the formation of a Ministry and explained my position with respect to what you call a purely communal administration in the Punjab. I cannot, therefore, agree to the suspension of constitutional Government in the Punjab till such time as the 75 representatives of the Hindus and Sikhs in the Punjab Assembly consent to support me, and I must again formally request you either (1) to give me an opportunity of finally satisfying you that I have the support of a majority in the Punjab Assembly, that is, in case you have any doubts left in this matter, or (2) if you are satisfied that I fulfil the constitutional and democratic test of commanding an absolute majority in the Punjab Assembly, to permit me to form a Ministry in the Punjab.

With best wishes,

Yours sincerely,

IFTIKHAR HUSAIN KHAN

37. ‘Refugees’ Lives Broken; Military Terror for All’

Extracts from a Report from People’s Age, 18 May 1947.

A delegation on behalf of the Communist Party of India led by Central Committee member Sajjad Zaheer and three Provincial Communist leaders, Sohan Singh Josh, B.P.L. Bedi and Fazal Elahi Qurban, has just returned from a visit to the worst riot-affected areas in the Western Punjab. We publish below a report of what they saw and heard by Sajjad Zaheer.—Editor.

We have come back after spending one week in one of the worst riot-affected areas of the Western Punjab—Rawalpindi, Campbellpur and Jhelum.

What emerges before one’s eyes is primarily a picture of utmost brutality and bestiality, of extreme human suffering and injury; and in the midst of all this, there are noble examples of human fellowship, men of all communities and all parties getting together under the stress of circumstances for mutual aid and protection, of splendid working-class solidarity.

Side by side, there is the evidence of the utter bankruptcy of the political policies pursued by League, Congress and Akali leaders in the Punjab today; and of the provocation, villainy, incompetence and incitement to fratricidal conflict of British officials and bosses.

Perhaps in an atmosphere surcharged with communalism and when retaliation and preparations for ‘the next round’ are still being talked about openly, one should not speak of the crimes that have been perpetrated by infuriated mobs....

The Aftermath

All over the riot-torn country-side of ‘Pindi, police and military raj is complete. Of the hundreds who are being arrested, many are innocent. Many are cursing the League; many have become even more embittered and communal.

There are villages where ripe crops are standing and there are no males to reap them—all males have been arrested. The Hindu and Sikh village-shopkeepers having disappeared from the villages, those who hoped that the blackmarket would cease thereby are sadly disillusioned. For their Muslim substitutes here are bigger profiteers.

In Pindi many League-minded merchants have floated a Muslim syndicate to finance business enterprises. They want to fill the vacuum being created by Hindu–Sikh migration.

Leaguers generally talk only of the police and military atrocities being perpetrated in villages now. Akalis talk of retaliation, Congressmen helplessly imagine that partition and Muslim hostages in Hindu India are the only way out. All apprehend a second and worse round of riots—when the crops are harvested and Sikhs start their communal counter-offensive in the Punjab.

Migrations continue. A tense embittered atmosphere prevails, the voice of reason and common-sense is hardly audible in the general tumult of hate.
Still the common man, Muslim, Sikh and Hindu, in this area definitely does not want riot and mutual throat-cutting—wherever stout-hearted men of all communities and all parties have come forward to keep the peace, the common patriotism and self-interest of all has been roused. It is a race here between evil and good, between reaction and progress, slavery and freedom. Who can doubt that it is the latter which can and must win?

WORKERS’ SOLIDARITY PREVENTS RIOTS

We were all proud to know that the organized workers of ’Pindi of the Attock Oil Company Union, the Murree Brewery, the Municipal employees, the advanced section of NWR workers, the MES (’Pindi), under the call of their respective Unions and the Communist Party, not only maintained the utmost unity among themselves but Muslims, who are everywhere in majority, gave shelter to, protected and defended their Sikh and Hindu fellow workers.

White Bosses Incite

Repeatedly attempts were made by the White managers to incite Muslims against Hindus and Sikhs but with no avail.

At the Attock Oil Company’s refinery at Morgha near ’Pindi when the workers’ quarters were surrounded by outside rioters, who called for the blood of workers of the minority community, Muslim leaders of the Union organized night long vigil, faced the rioters and drove them away. They brought rations for the marooned minority workers, assured them that only over their dead bodies could the rioters get to them.

In Khaur, where are situated the oil wells of the British owned Attock Oil Company, the workers took the initiative to form an Aman Committee of all the inhabitants of the small township.

We met the 66-year old Sher Khan, President of this Aman Committee, who said:

‘I did not do all these things but this boy Dev Dutt told me what it was all about. I am a Chauhan Rajput and I cannot allow acts of cowardice to happen here. God has helped us and we have succeeded in maintaining peace.’

Dev Dutt is the young Communist organizer of the Union who had been living in this area (ninety per cent Muslim majority) during the entire riot period.

We met Hakim Abdul Majid and Ghulam Farid, Union leaders, and Munshi Mohmed Khan, lorry driver, and others who had gone round the villages adjoining the oil wells of Khaur and established seven committees there.

In one case, where some rioters had looted a shop, they got all looted property restored. Still, in those villages, Hindus and Sikhs are living, but Hindu worker Kashi Ram, turner of the Oil Company, told us: ‘I have full faith in these Muslims, but how can I trust the outsiders, when I know of their deeds?’

Workers’ Heroism

In the same way when a mob of rioters came the Murree Brewery Union leader, Shafi with his fellow workers faced them and turned them away. Incidentally, he saved the whole brewery from being burnt down.

Here, the White Manager, Abeling, had told a deputation of workers that the Company could give protection to them only if they left the Union. Workers came away indignant and organized their own join defence.
Among the railway workers one backward section was swept into the riot but on those ... where the Union was strong, union leaders organized joint-defence; fought back rioters and protected and saved many lives from mob fury.

PUNJAB IS NOT ALL RIOTS

Jhelum Hindus and Muslims Jointly Pacify Armed Rioters: Leaguers Save Gurdwara from Fire

The picture in Jhelum town and district is quite different from 'Pindi.

Here, as soon as communal tension began to grow after the news of happenings in Lahore (among the Muslims, the most inflammatory news was Master Tara Singh’s communal antics in Lahore), all the parties got together, Leaguers, Congressmen, leaders of the Gurdwara Prabandhak Committee and Communists, and formed an Aman Committee whose President was a Muslim Leaguer, Secretary a Sikh Congressman and among whose committee members were Akalis, Communists, local League MLA and Municipal Commissioners.

Together they went round and held street corner meetings, declared that riots were engineered by British imperialists and Hindus, Muslims and Sikhs were all brothers and should not fight.

Even where a mosque was set on fire by some mischief-mongers, the Muslim Leaguers asked Muslims to be peaceful and when a gurdwara in the countryside was set fire to League leaders led those who extinguished the fire.

They went into the countryside together with Hindu Congress leaders and Communists faced armed crowds bent on rioting, pacified them in this way kept their district free from communal arson, murder and loot.

Except for a few villages adjacent to 'Pindi district which were looted and burnt by 'Pindi district crowds, the district of Jhelum successfully fought the communal outburst, saved its minorities and kept up fraternal relations.

In many places, joint volunteers were organized who kept the watch, keeping themselves awake the whole night.

When we saw the President of the Jhelum Aman Committee Khan Yar Mohd Khan, he handed over to us a copy of the appeal which the Jhelum All-Parties' Peace Committee had issued to the leaders of all political parties in the Punjab, urging them in all humility to give up the game of power-politics, which has endangered the life, property and freedom of the whole Province, and sit together in order to jointly work for peace.

Many leaders had not even replied to this appeal but Mr Yar Mohd Khan told us with a sad smile, ‘I don’t mind their not replying, if only they get together as we have come here.’

38. Appeal to Impose Martial Law on Lahore

Letter from G.C. Narang and Bhim Sen Sachar to Evan Jenkins, 18 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/176, Acc. No. 3477, NAI.

NARANG HOUSE,
LAHORE

Dear Sir Evan,

Lahore is burning. A good deal of it was reduced to ashes yesterday and day before yesterday. Today Akbari Mandi, Chune Mandi, Chauhatta Wasti Bhagat, Kuch Kagzian and Pipal Vehra are in flames and several other places are threatened. A visit to the town by your Excellency will convince you of the extent of mischief and gravity of the situation. Fire brigades cannot cope with the fire and the owners in most cases, are shot down by the Police if they come out to extinguish the fire. The situation has apparently become desperate and beyond control. We are, therefore, all of the opinion that the only way of saving Lahore is that it should be made over to the military and Martial Law should be proclaimed. Meanwhile 48 hours curfew should be imposed over the whole Corporation Area.

We trust Your Excellency will be pleased to take immediate steps to restore law and order and prevent further destruction.

Yours sincerely,
G.C. Narang
Bhim Sen Sachar

39. No Case for Martial Law in Lahore
Letter from Evan Jenkins to G.C. Narang, 19 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/176, Acc No. 3477, NAI.

My dear Dr Gokul Chand,
Thank you for the letter you and Lala Bhim Sen Sachar sent me yesterday.

I am in close touch with events in the City, and have myself inspected the arrangements made by the District Magistrate, the Police and fire brigades. The fires have been very serious, but are confined to relatively small areas.

The fire brigades have in my opinion done very well, in spite of shortage of water and other difficulties. The Corporation fire brigade has been reinforced by brigades from the Army, the RAP and the North-Western Railway.

It is not true that the owners in most cases are shot down by the Police if they come out to extinguish the fire. The vicious communal propaganda against the Police is one of the most difficult features in the situation, and is almost entirely unjustified.

I do not agree that the situation is desperate and beyond control. What has happened is that large numbers of persons of all communities have collected quantities of incendiary material, and are able to use it without detection by traversing roof-tops, throwing ‘fire-balls’ from one house to another and so on. Checking trouble of this kind is not an easy matter, but searches are going on and arrests are being made, and the trouble will be checked before very long.

I need not go into the intricacies of Martial Law, the nature of which is seldom clearly understood. There is no case for it in Lahore at present.

Long curfews have their uses, but are not a complete remedy and cause great distress to the poorer classes.
I understand that last night was reasonably quiet.

Yours sincerely,
E.M. Jenkins
40. Sikhs Gear Up for Communal Attacks on Muslims

Letter from S.E. Abbott to R.V. Brockman Forwarding an Intelligence Report on the Activities of Sikhs, 21 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/145, Acc. No. 3460, NAI.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE
LAHORE

Dear Brockman,

HE desires me to forward the enclosed copy (prepared by myself) of secret intelligence report sent up today. HE considers that this report is of some interest in view of the recent activities of Faridkot and Nabha personnel in the Punjab (these activities have been separately reported in ‘Q’ cipher telegrams).

Yours sincerely,
S.E. Abbott

Capt R.V. Brockman, CIE, OBE, RN, PSV, Viceroy’s House,
New Delhi.

Information collected from several sources says that the Sikhs are determined on an offensive against Muslims where they are in a majority in the area which the Sikhs are demanding, and against the Muslims in the Punjab Police. The details of the plans the Sikh leaders have made are being kept secret, but there is some reason to think that attacks on Muslim villages are contemplated, and on police stations, and that communications will be interrupted. At first the action was planned for some time between the 15th and 25th May, but it has been postponed to the last week of May or the first week of June. Sikh organization has not yet been completed, but the Sikh leaders are doing all they can to make progress and their Sikh followers are being encouraged to expect something big in the near future.

Hindu big business is stated to be backing the Sikhs. Most of the Sikh states and some others are also involved. Patiala is said to have agreed to supply arms and ammunition as well as explosives. He is supposed to have sent some of his soldiers, armed and in mufti, already to Amritsar. Faridkot held back but gave way on being promised Ferozepore district. Nabha is not in the business himself but his Dewan is and some of the Nabha Sirdars, Alwar, Dholpur, Bikaner and Bharatpur have all promised arms, and ammunition. Kaputhala [sic] and given money and shelter to Sikh refugees but is not prepared to go further at the moment.

41. Impose Martial Law in Punjab

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to John Colville, 21 May 1947

Camp Birla House
Mussoorie

Dear Sir John Colville,

I have been receiving some letters and telegrams from Lahore regarding the serious situation in the city. Arson and stabbings on a large scale have been taking place, and therefore it seems the situation has not been brought under control. In fact, the latest telegram from the Governor of the Punjab seems to indicate that the general population, and even top-ranking leaders, are reconciled to the inevitability of the continuance of trouble. I feel that, particularly at the present juncture, the continuance of such a state of affairs is fraught with dangerous potentialities. I had some correspondence with Lord Wavell just before he left for England, in which I suggested to him the desirability of imposing martial law in the affected areas of the Punjab. He then replied that he felt that a middle course should first be followed. And the result was the enactment of two ordinances to arm the executive and the military with special powers to deal with the disturbances. It seems that these special powers are not proving effective, and a suggestion has been received that the city should be placed under martial law. None can appreciate better than the ordinary civilian the difficulties and handicaps of a martial law regime, but at the same time it is of the utmost importance these days that a disturbed situation is brought under control with the least possible delay and with the minimum possible waste of time and life. At a Cabinet meeting, Lord Mountbatten gave the assurance that in future such disturbances would be put down with an iron hand.
Towards Freedom: 1947

In these circumstances, I would request you to consider once again, in consultation with the Governor of the Punjab, the suggestion which has been made to me by responsible leaders of the Punjab that the worst affected areas of the city should be placed under the military.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

42. Report from Punjab Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Punjab for the First Half of May 1947, 22 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

1. COMMUNAL.—Following a period when a decreasing number of incidents gave some slight hope for further future improvement in the communal situation serious trouble broke out again in Amritsar on the 9th of May and the city has continued to be disturbed since that date, while the district has not remained unaffected. There was no special or immediate cause for this recrudescence of grave disorder and the events which have taken place must be attributed largely to general causes and to the all-India political situation which in the past fortnight has developed on lines which have increased the bitterness existing between the communities. Some of the acts committed were shocking in their stark brutality and an attack on a funeral party of a child in which six Sikhs and one Hindu were killed has added to an already over-long list of Muslim atrocities. Possibly as a result of the happenings in Amritsar, the situation in Lahore deteriorated a few days later, on the 13th of May, and much damage has been caused to life and property. In Amritsar the casualties since communal trouble started in March have been over two hundred killed and twice that number seriously injured. In Lahore, over the same period, one hundred and ten persons have lost their lives and three hundred and seventeen have suffered grave hurt. For the province the death roll exceeds three thousand three hundred while the injured number fourteen hundred.

In the most recent disturbances the temper of the people has been noticeably worse than it was on earlier occasions and their determination greater. There has been an increase in the use of fire arms and in Lahore acts of incendiariism have been many. Crude bombs have also continued in use, particularly in Amritsar. Ignoring a large number of relatively unimportant incendiary devices in which chemicals were used, thirty three cases had been registered under the Explosive Substances Act in the province by the end of the first week of May. In one of these the explosive was sufficiently powerful to wreck the premises which were the place of manufacture, but in all others ingredients which are not difficult to obtain have been utilized for the production of missiles of a crude character. In most of the cases, both in Amritsar and elsewhere, Sikhs and Hindus have been the owners or makers of bombs, and Muslims have been involved in only one or two cases. As stated in the last report issued in this series, bombs have caused more injuries and more deaths to the makers and handlers than to anyone else, but so far this does not seem to have had the deterrent effect for which was hoped.

Districts have not remained free from incidents and these and the reports received from district officers show that communal hatred and tension exist in a dangerous degree. Practically throughout the province social and economic boycott persists and the migration of persons whose community is in a minority at their ordinary places of residence continues to take place. In some places tension has increased as a result of the happenings in Lahore and Amritsar and in many more the public nerve is being kept raw by the stories told by displaced persons from the Frontier as well as the Punjab, and by rumour which is in constant currency. The activities of the three communal volunteer bodies in their exercises and efforts to strengthen themselves have also had a bad effect. As a result more and more persons are now coming to hold the fatalistic view that civil war is only a question of time and preparations for offence and defence are increasing. The grave apprehension that trouble is in store for the Punjab is stated to have affected business and to have caused capital to leave for safer places.

2. POLITICAL: There is practically no political activity now in the shape of public meetings or other forms of public demonstrations. Political parties, and particularly the Muslim organizations and the Sikh, however continue to hold frequent party meetings at which concern is mainly displayed for matters which are essentially communal in character. This was demonstrated by the proceedings of meetings of the Working Committee of the Shiromani Gurdwara Parbandhak Committee and the Shiromani Akali Dal which took place in Amritsar during the first week of May. The meetings devoted their principal attention to the strengthening of guards on Gurdwaras, means to improve Sikh mobility and communication and the supply of kirpans and their allotment to areas standing in most need of them. In districts activity almost entirely centres on the volunteer bodies, or private armies as they are universally called, and is aimed at improving organization and strength. Reports received show that both the Akal Sainas and the Muslim League Guards are increasing in size and suggest that former is likely to be the more formidable body at least in the central districts. In some places progress has been made with the formation of Congress Sewa Dais but it is not great.

The efforts which are being made in Delhi and London to help India’s political leaders to find a settlement have commanded the attention of all and the outcome of the conference which HE the Viceroy is holding on the 2nd of June is awaited with considerable anxiety. The fortnight which has passed can be described as a period of statements and speculation. The public pronouncements made by Mr Jinnah, Mr Gandhi and Mr Patel attracted the greatest possible interest. By the people who are not politicians and communalists, and there are still some, what has been said has been received with dismay and grave anxiety for the future, for it seems to them that ground has been lost and nothing gained on the way to an understanding. Many still believe that the Cabinet Mission's plan is the best solution that can be found for India's problems, and they see any chance of it ever being accepted and worked with sincerity fast disappearing in the midst of recent words. Among their followers the statements of their leaders have been well received, and have made a considerable impression. They have, in fact, created an atmosphere in which no award by the British Government in the shape of a compromise would be received by any party except with hostility and condemnation. Because of this those who hope for a peaceful solution believe that embarrassment and worse will be avoided if His Majesty’s Government limits its help to guidance and leaves the terms of settlement to be reached by those who are most vitally concerned.

Provincial statements have also appeared and have been of some interest. Punjab League leaders have voiced their full support of Mr Jinnah’s Pakistan demand and have visited Delhi to assure him that they are as strong in their determination as he is in his that a division of the Punjab shall not take place. In Provincial matters the League’s publicity has been marshalled in an effort to try and convince the Sikh leaders that partition of the Province is not in their interests for it will divide their strength. In this Muslims have not succeeded in their purpose of persuading the Sikhs to the mood of response which would pave the way to the formation of a Coalition Government and, indeed, recent communal incidents have driven the two communities even further apart. At the same time there is no doubt that the Sikhs are worried by the aspects of the situation which Muslim propaganda has stressed, and by the failure on all sides to take seriously their claim to territory where they are in a minority. They are also concerned about the Hindu demand for a Jat Province which totally ignores Sikhs interests. Their present consolation lies in their faith in the strength of their community and in its loyalty to the Punth.

The Muslim League has continued its efforts to form an exclusively Muslim Government and has not met with success. In this connection yet another statement deserves mention. It was made by the ex-Premier and said that the Muslim League had his support as well as his colleagues for the formation of a ministry. It did not state in clear terms what kind of ministry would attract this support. The statement has brought forth a single expression of disapproval from the Sikhs and none from the Hindus. Criticism has come mainly from the League and the papers it controls. From this it seems clear that the League fears that it still lacks Unionist collaboration of a kind which would help it on its way to its haven of communal ambition....

THE press: The tone of the press has further deteriorated, and commentary on political issues has increased in rancour. The nationalist papers, led by the ‘Tribune’, commenced a campaign of criticism of British Indian policy, shortly after HE the Viceroy’s visit to the NWFP, which was often threatening and anti-British in tone. It was taken up and embellished by the extremist section. Muslim papers took no part in this hymn of hate, but altered their tune after the Khan of Mamdot failed recently in his latest efforts to form a Muslim League ministry. The ‘Pakistan Times’ commenced an offensive directed against the present Government on the 7th of May. A most objectionable article, which was not passed for publication in the ‘Pakistan Times’ appeared subsequently in the columns of the ‘Dawn’.

The campaign for and against the establishment of Pakistan has raged with undiminished fervor. The Sikh press has devoted a large amount of space to stories from Sikh history of heroism and military prowess against the Moghuls. The Muslim press has retorted with expressions of ‘grim determination’ to resist partition of Punjab, warning the Sikh leaders of the consequences of playing into the hands of the Hindus. The Sikh proposal of partition on a property basis has been rejected in the Muslim press which maintains that territorial re-adjustments cannot be solved on these lines and uses the break-up inspired by Congress of the Zamindari system in the United Provinces ...
The communal newspapers have thrown restraint away in their indulgence in most bitter mutual recrimination. The publication of a cartoon in the daily ‘Shahbaz’ depicting Mr Gandhi and Master Tara Singh carving up the ‘Indian cow’ is illustrative of the communal level to which provincial politics have sunk. The Hindu press was bitterly resentful of the implied insult to its religion.

The recurrence of communal strife in Amritsar has been given publicity with headlines which have been unnecessarily alarming, particularly by the nationalist press which has continued also to clamour for the removal of HE the Governor of the NWFP and has opposed with vehemence the demand made by over 300 Tribal Maliks to the Viceroy at Landi Kotal for the return of the Khyber Pass to Tribal Territory. On this particular issue the Muslim papers took their usual opposite line. The formation of the ‘Naujwan Pathan Party’ in the NWFP to combat the League’s violent agitation against the Congress Ministry has evoked sharp comment in the Muslim section of the press, which warns its readers that Congress in the near future will probably employ violence to achieve its aim. The suggestion of Mr Patel that the Interim Government should be given Dominion powers has also been scathingly criticized; the proposal is considered a means to the Congress and to subject the Muslims by force to Hindu domination. The proposal was, naturally, appreciated by the Hindu and Sikh papers, which, however, saw nothing good flowing from the Gandhi–Jinnah meeting, the ‘Tribune’ commenting that Mr Jinnah had promised to do his best to see that the peace appeal was carried out, but had immediately decreed that the League ‘civil disobedience movement’ should continue. The imposition of a fine on the Muslim community in the Rawalpindi area has been welcomed with elation by the Hindu and Sikh press whose only criticism has been on the score of Government’s ‘moderation’. The Muslim papers’ line is that Government is showing unreasonable bias in favour of the Sikh and Hindu communities.

Unanimous criticism, rare in these days of communal hatred, was expressed in condemnation of the firing by the Police on an unlawful assembly of students in front of the Punjab University. The inadequacy of community representation in the civil and military Services is a constant complaint which all papers make, and is one which is being voiced more loudly as a result of the communal situation.

Akhter Husain
Chief Secretary to Government, Punjab

43. Uncontrollable Rioting in Lahore: Call for Effective Use of Army
Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to John Colville, 23 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/90, Acc. No. 3415, NAI.

Mussoorie
As at: 17 York Road
New Delhi

Dear Sir John,

During my very short stay here I have been increasingly distressed by news from the Punjab, especially Lahore. Parts of the old walled city of Lahore are being gradually reduced to ashes and there appears to be a complete lack of control of the situation. Reports of those killed by police firing or wounded or arrested and searches made in houses indicate an extreme partiality on the part of the police. It is extraordinary how the administration, in so far as Lahore is concerned, is hardly functioning as it should. I realize fully the difficulties and the strain caused by these occurrences. At the same time it seems to me obvious that if this kind of thing continues, it will spread with great rapidity in other parts of the Punjab also. If the situation in Lahore cannot be controlled, it is still less likely that a wider conflagration will be controlled. The present police authorities are apparently totally unable to control it and reports reach me from impartial sources that no very serious attempt has been made to meet the situation. Whether these reports are correct or not, I cannot say. But the fact that such a serious situation could continue for days and weeks is bad enough. I would earnestly request you to consider what other and further steps should be taken in this matter. The only other step that suggests itself is the effective use of the army in the city of Lahore with freedom to act as they think proper to deal with the situation.
Towards Freedom: 1947

2. I realize that during your brief tenure of the Viceroyalty you will hesitate to take any new step. Perhaps Lord Mountbatten might be consulted by cable or otherwise.

3. Reports from Calcutta are also disturbing. Many of these reports are often exaggerated and alarmist. Nevertheless it is safer to take every precaution for a possible contingency. I have received a letter from a Muslim friend, whom I consider impartial and balanced, from Calcutta. I enclose a copy of this letter for your information.¹

4. I hope to return to Delhi on Monday morning.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru

¹ Not reproduced here.

44. ‘Fight Back Goondaism’: Patel’s Advice to Punjabis

Extract from a Report from The Hindustan Times, 24 May 1947.

MUSSOORIE, May 23.—‘Reports have been reaching me through both official and non-official sources of the serious loss of life and property which renewed disturbances have caused in Lahore,’ says Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel, Home Minister, Interim Government, in a statement....

‘In such a situation and in the present adverse circumstances I feel that the minorities in the Punjab have no alternative but to organize and adopt all possible means to defend themselves against organized acts of vandalism, arson, murder etc. I have never failed to impress on the public the need of constituting themselves as their own policemen or to rely upon themselves rather than depending on the police and military for protection....’

Face It Bravely

‘I can well understand and appreciate the desire of the Hindus and Sikhs of the Punjab to remove their women and children to places of safety, but it is the duty of men to face bravely and courageously all acts of vandalism and goondaism in the spirit of defiance, no matter what the consequences may be. Flying from the brute force of the tyranny and oppression not only creates demoralization but also encourages the oppressors in their acts of insanity and brutality.

‘I would, therefore, advise the people not to give way to despair and defeatism but to face this danger manfully and bravely.’
My dear Brockman,

As desired by HE the Governor I forward herewith, for the information of HE the Viceroy, copies of notes recorded by him after interviews yesterday with the Hon’ble Mr Liaqat Ali Khan and today with the Hon’ble S. Baldev Singh.

Yours sincerely,

S.E. Abbott

Enclosure 1

Mr Liaqat Ali Khan saw me at 12 noon today at his request. We talked until 1.30 p.m.

2. On the general situation he said that the Muslim League did not accept certain particulars in the announcement proposed by HMG. When I asked what these particulars were, he replied that the League would not agree to the partition of Bengal or the Punjab.

3. I said that in that case the outlook was not promising. The Muslims wanted the whole of the Punjab; the Sikhs would yield only about 2/5ths of it to them; and the Hindus would follow the Congress leaders. There was a ‘civil war’ atmosphere in the Punjab now and all communities were fatalistic and hysterical. How did Mr Liaqat Ali Khan suggest that the situation should be handled?

4. Mr Liaqat Ali Khan said that the Muslims felt aggrieved—they were not the aggressors, but the present administration in the Punjab was bitterly hostile to them. Only two of the Magistrates employed in Lahore City were Muslims; and a relatively small number of the Police officers so employed were Muslims. British officers were rough and discourteous in their dealings with Muslim non-officials. I replied that I had to go on facts and not on party propaganda. The official figures for deaths caused by the disturbances since March 4th were, on 23rd May, 3,410. I believed the correct figure (including Rawalpindi deaths not yet registered) to be about 3,600. Of this total probably not more than 600 were Muslims. Similarly the loss of property was probably to Rs 10 to Rs 15 crores, and less than 5 per cent of this was probably Muslim property. It was difficult for me to hold that the Muslims were not the aggressors—even in the renewed Lahore rioting their deaths were less than one-third of the total number of deaths recorded. I did my best to preserve communal balance in posting Magistrates, and I had no doubt that IG Police did the same in posting Police officers. As regards British officers, I was sure they were being fair; but many of them had been gravely shocked, and I thought the League leaders didn’t realize how horrible the Rawalpindi massacre seemed to any impartial person.

5. Resuming his argument Mr Liaqat Ali Khan said that we ought to get much tougher with the Sikhs.... I said that the Muslim League must try to understand the Sikh view—the Sikhs, unreasonable and difficult as they were, had a real grievance. The League had never apologized for the Rawalpindi massacre and the continued burning in Lahore and Amritsar were making a reconciliation impossible. The Sikhs now felt, and with reason, that they would not be safe in a Muslim State. I believed partition to be a disaster for the Punjab, but if we were to avoid it, all parties must be prepared to make sacrifices. It was no solution to say that the Sikhs were headstrong and unreasonable—three months ago this criticism was justified, but now the Sikhs had a good deal of reason on their side, though in ten years’ time the present disputes might, and probably would, seem entirely futile. How would Mr Liaqat Ali Khan solve the problem?

6. Mr Liaqat Ali Khan replied that there would be trouble anyhow, and that the right solution was the one which would cause least trouble. Personally he thought that whatever decision HMG announced should be enforced with the utmost firmness. (Rather an odd suggestion in view of the League’s rejection of partition.) I pointed out that HMG and the British element in the services did not want to get involved in a communal civil war, and he replied that we could not evade our responsibility. There would be civil war, and we could not possibly walk out.

7. Mr Liaqat Ali Khan spoke at some length and with some bitterness about Kirpans and Nihangs. I said that by going for the Kirpans I might cause the explosion I was trying to avoid.
(I did not tell him that HE Lord Mountbatten had instructed me not to move in this matter without his concurrence.) I intended to deal with Nihangs but was not anxious to publicise the fact.

8. This is a very jejune record of a long and rather rambling talk. The main points are:
   (a) the determination of the Muslim League to reject partition;
   (b) the complacency of the Muslim League about Muslim atrocities (I did wear Mr Liaqat Ali Khan down a little on this towards the end);
   (c) the implacable hostility of the Muslim League to Hindus and Sikhs. (when I said that the Muslim League could hardly deny the non-Muslims in the Punjab the rights they claimed for themselves in India, Mr Liaqat Ali Khan said that ‘truncated’ Pakistan was a Congress device for the ultimate suppression of the Muslims, and that the all-India and Punjab questions were not in pari materia).
   (d) the dissatisfaction of the Muslim League with the present administration;
   (e) the advice that HMG’s decision should be enforced ruthlessly. (This seems inconsistent with (a) Mr Liaqat Ali Khan got very hot about the communal composition of the Army.)

9. A most depressing talk. Like every one else Mr Liaqat Ali Khan believed that there will be ‘civil war’. He may see me again tomorrow after he has visited Amritsar.

E.M. Jenkins
25.5.47

Enclosure 2

The Hon’ble Sardar Baldev Singh saw me at the Secretariat at 11 a.m. today at his request.

2. He took a very gloomy view of the general situation. He said that he did not think Jinnah would agree to the partition plan, and that if Jinnah ran out, the Congress would also decline to support the plan. So far as the Sikhs were concerned, he thought they would be satisfied by a passage in the last draft he had seen which laid down that the Boundary Commission should, in fixing a boundary, take into account population ‘and other relevant factors’. He admitted that the Boundary Commission would have to be appointed by ‘the parties’, or in other words by the leaders of the Muslim, Hindu and Sikh communities, and that the terms of reference to the Commission (which would presumably also have to be drafted by ‘the parties’) would have to be considerably more specific. Broadly his view was that the Sikhs would accept the announcement; that the Muslim League would reject it; and that the Congress, though they might accept it initially, would withdraw their acceptance if the Muslim League proved recalcitrant.

3. On the immediate situation, I explained to Sardar Baldev Singh that we really needed more men to deal adequately with the Greater Lahore area.... I explained that though in Amritsar we were occasionally faced with mobs, in Lahore the Police and troops hardly ever got a target. Stabbings and burnings went on furtively and the offenders were seldom seen. If we could employ a larger number of men, the commission of outrages would be more difficult; but there was no real solution to our problem except to round up any organized gangs. We were doing this, and had made a number of arrests.

4. Sardar Baldev Singh suggested that the Police were not impartial. I replied that all communities complained against the Police, but that on the whole they had in my opinion done very well. There had been incidents (one occurred yesterday) of partiality or indiscipline, but such incidents were inevitable. It seemed to me that all services would rapidly be affected by communal feeling, including the Magistrates and the Police and at a later stage the Army.
People would soon realize, if they had not realized, the fact that I was no longer in a position to grant rewards or to administer punishments save on a very limited scale; and individual Government servants would naturally look over their shoulders to the political parties and to their future employers. Politicians had stimulated communal feeling in the Police and were trying to do so in the Army, and we were getting into the vicious circle that Government servants were blamed because they were communal and communal because they were blamed.
S. Baldev Singh admitted that much of this was quite true.

5. He asked me about Police recruitment and said that his information was that so far we had recruited only 20 per cent non-Muslims in our present recruitment campaign. I told him that we were doing our best. I had called for official figures, but had not yet seen them. He said that he would have circulars sent to demobilization centres so that Commanding Officers might encourage men to join the Police. I said that this would be a welcome move, though I believed that we were in touch with all the centres likely to be able to help. I suggested that S.
Baldev Singh should consult the Branch concerned in GHQ, and should leave it to them to take action in consultation with IG Police....

9. Sardar Baldev Singh harped at some length on the familiar theme of drastic action against wrong-doers, by which he meant drastic action against the Muslims. He produced a map of the Delhi Gate end of the City showing the location of Police Posts and the scene of the various fires. He thought we should impose heavy collective fines, and he would go in for the evacuation and burning of quarters the inhabitants of which had offended. I said that I had already approved the imposition of collective fines on the Rajgarh area and on other parts of the city, and the details were now being worked out. It was easier to talk about drastic action than to undertake it. The Hitlerian method would be to take hostages and to shoot them, and I could no doubt improve the situation remarkably by shooting all the members of the High Commands. I did not, however, myself recommend action of this kind, which involved the innocent with the guilty. I had already explained that we had few targets in Lahore City and that the Police and troops had seldom had an opportunity to fire effectively.

10. Sardar Baldev Singh then talked about Martial Law. I explained the nature of Martial Law to him and said that it would not in my opinion make any difference to the present situation. The Lahore Area Commander was definitely against it. Sardar Baldev Singh said that proposals were being considered by the Government of India for an extension of the powers of troops so as to abrogate the ‘minimum force’ rule and to permit the Commander on the spot to consider the future as well as the immediate situation. (I had in fact already seen a copy of a signal from GHQ to Northern Command on this subject.) I said that as far as I knew, the Central Ordinance issued on 19th March 1947 gave troops all the powers they needed.....

11. I asked S. Baldev Singh to use the influence with the Sikh community to prevent aggression. The Sikhs believed that the Muslims were collecting arms and the Muslims believed the same of the Sikhs. Much of the present trouble was due to fright. Sardar Baldev Singh intimated that he would do what he could.

E.M. Jenkins
26.5.47

46. Press and Prominent Leaders Should Spread Message of Peace
Appeal by All Parties Peace Committee, Rawalpindi, 28 May 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 98, Installment II to IV, NMML.

Mission School
Rawalpindi

To
Dr S.P. Mukerji
Calcutta

Dear Sir,

You are well aware of the communal tension that prevails in the Province. Rawalpindi has already experienced a holocaust which has completely upset and disorganized all aspects of life. A repetition of it will make things indescribably worse. We believe that every one must do his bit to relax this tension, so that normal life may be resumed. Accordingly, an ALL PARTIES PEACE COMMITTEE has been formed in Rawalpindi which comprises of all the parties and organizations, political, social and religious, to counter-act rumour mongering and the prevailing panic. At a recent meeting of the Committee the following resolution was unanimously adopted:

Resolved that the PRESS and the Prominent Leaders of all shades of Opinion be earnestly requested to refrain from publishing or delivering statements and speeches which can in any way inflame COMMUNAL PASSIONS or embitter social relations. The prevailing communal tension is grave indeed and calls for the cooperation of all peace loving citizens to do their very best to counteract false Rumours and propaganda. We earnestly hope that the Newspapers will not give prominence to inflammatory news in any way but will use their good influence to promote peace and harmony in the province.

I am directed to send a copy of it to your esteemed paper for publication.

Yours faithfully,
Bhisham Sahny
Gen. Secretary
Members of All Parties Peace Committee.

League:
Mohd Ummar President, Mian Hayat Bux, Maulvi Maula Bux, Yogi Ram Nath President, Bawa Amar Singh, Prof Bhisham Sahny.

Congress:
Mela Singh President, Kartar Singh Bazaz, Dharam Singh.
Sikh Sabha:
Uttam Singh Dugal, Jit Singh Sahni, Antar Singh
Christian League:
Hira Lall, Gladstone.
Communist Party:
V.D. Chopra, Gurcharan Singh.
Socialist Party of India:
Abdul Aziz, Abdul Latif.
Socialist Party (India):
Bharat Bhushan, Giani Jowand Singh.
Juma Masjid Committee:
Abdul Aziz Khan, Zaffar Mahmud.
Khaksars:
A.K. Ashraf Khan, Ishaq Zaffar.
Forward Bloc:
Kashmiri Lal, Jogindar Singh Puri.
Head Masters and Principals:
Abaid-ur-Rehman (Islamia) Hari ...
(DAV)
Majlis-i-Ahrar:
Fazal Karim, Ghulam Naxbund Bagi.
Jamiat Naujwani-Islam:
Aga Mansabdar, Ghulam Mohiuddin.
INA
Jaswant Singh Bindra (Lt) Narindar Nath.

47. Troops Helping Hindus against Muslims
Letter from Ghazanfar Ali Khan to John Colville, 29 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/90, Acc. No. 3415, NAI.

Dear Sir John Colville,

You will kindly remember my submissions to you during our interview last week about the participation of men from Sikh States in the Punjab in rioting in Lahore and Amritsar. The allegations reaching me in this connection have since been confirmed. It appears that in certain instances men who came from these States to create disturbances were in uniforms and had in their possession firearms belonging to the States. Your Excellency was kind enough to promise to take necessary action in this connection. I trust the matter has not escaped your memory.

2. Much more serious complaints are now being received about the incursion of troops from Alwar and Bharatpur States into villages in the territory of Gurgaon district, to help the Hindus against Muslims in riots and to terrorize Muslim villagers in other ways. It is difficult to obtain any but oral evidence of this. It appears, however, that in the beginning of May a party of Alwar State troops accompanied by some Hindus of the British territory raided the Muslim village of Chundika within the jurisdiction of the Police Station of Taoru and bayonet a Muslim. I am told the incident is well known to the authorities in Gurgaon district. The ostensible reason for this may be the prevention of ingress of men from the British territory into the States. Actually these pickets are said to have become a menace to Muslims within the British territory.

3. In connection with measures which are being taken for the suppression of disturbances in Gurgaon district, responsible and respectable Muslims from the district have approached me with the grievances that the composition of the forces which are patrolling the disturbed areas is overwhelmingly non-Muslims [sic] and that sufficient patrolling is not being done in those areas where Muslim minorities are surrounded by Hindu mobs.

4. I should like to submit that these grievances should be brought to the notice of the local civil and military authorities. If they are correct, they deserve to be redressed. Very alarming reports are being received from the interior of the Gurgaon district. I hope that the authorities will [sic] be able speedily to bring the situation under control.

Yours sincerely,
Ghazanfar Ali Khan

HIS EXCELLENCY THE RIGHT HON'BLE
SIR JOHN COLVILLE, CCIE., TD.,
Acting Viceroy of India, New Delhi.

48. Illegal Detenus under District Commissioner’s Orders
Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten Forwarding His Letter to Evan Jenkins, 30 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/90, Acc. No. 3415, NAI.

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten

I am sending herewith a copy of the letter which I have written to Sir Evan Jenkins. The papers speak for themselves and I need hardly make any further comments beyond stating that this admittedly high-handed action of the Deputy Commissioner has created quite a sensation among the Hindus of Gurgaon.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

Enclosure 1

New Delhi
The 30th May, 1947

Dear Sir Evan Jenkins,

I am sending herewith a copy of the representation from the President of the Bar Association of Gurgaon and the Deputy Commissioner’s endorsement thereunder, concerning the arrest of some leading Hindus in the Gurgaon District, which were handed to me and which I have seen in original. From these papers it is quite clear that these persons have been arrested and are being kept in detention until they or someone on their behalf give the information required by the Deputy Commissioner.

2. The Defence Member and I decided late last night to visit the affected areas in Gurgaon. On the way we met the Deputy Commissioner who was returning from a patrol. I questioned him about this. He first denied that he had given such a thing in writing. I then showed him the papers. He then said that he meant the note to be a reply to a private letter which he had no time to send in the usual way. I pointed out to him that the whole thing had definitely an official appearance and could not be treated as private but he seemed quite unable to appreciate anything and was speechless. He merely explained that the Peace Committee had committed a breach of pledge and he wanted information as to how the incident happened. I pointed out to him the seriousness of the position in which he had involved himself, by giving it in writing that he would release the persons if certain information were furnished to him but he did not seem to realize it.

3. I myself feel that whatever may be the facts regarding the incident, the methods adopted by the Deputy Commissioner are indefensible and bound to react most unfavourably in the present situation in Gurgaon District. In effect the arrested persons are hostages for the supply of information which may not be in their knowledge. Failure of peace committees to maintain the peace is not an unusual occurrence. Inability to give information, however valuable, cannot be a bona fide justification for arrest and detention even under the special powers under which arrests have been made.

4. The action is bound to be challenged in a court of law and will attract considerable publicity. It may conceivably have ugly consequences in the District itself. I feel that to avoid further unpleasantness of the situation and to restore confidence in the local administration, the sooner the mistake is rectified the better.

Yours sincerely,

---

Enclosure 2

Copy of a representation dated 27/5/47 from the President, District Bar Association, Gurgaon, to the Deputy Commissioner, Gurgaon.

Dear Sir,

You had told me of your offer that Ch Jugal Kishore and others who are detained in Jail could see you. I hurried to the jail with your permit but the detinues [sic] had already left for the Railway Station on their way to Hisar. I am in a position to state that the detinues will be willing to see you provided there is an opportunity to see you. They will be leaving Rewari by 6 p.m. train for Hisar. I request you to detain them at Rewari and that they may be immediately brought here to meet you by a special lorry. From the public as well as from the administration point of view, it is a very important matter. I am sure if they once see you, you will be satisfied on all points, and they will prove of very great help to the administration in these critical times. As I feel they will be of great real help in the maintenance of peace. I beseech you to consider my request favourably.

A.N. Sharma
President
District Bar Association

PS. I shall be prepared to pay the expenses of the lorry if so required.

A.N. Sharma

There is no need to call them back from Rewari. If anyone on behalf of some or all of them gives information concerning the Narangpur incident, my offer of release holds good.

T. Brandan [sic]
Deputy Commissioner
27/5/47
49. Premeditated and Organized Attacks in Gurgaon
Letter from Liaquat Ali Khan to Louis Mountbatten, 31 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/90, Acc. No. 3415, NAI.

NEW DELHI

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Accompanied by my colleague the Hon'ble Mr Ghazanfar Ali Khan, I visited certain parts of Gurgaon district today, including the District headquarters as well as the headquarters of the small military force which is assisting the civil authorities in checking the widespread rioting in the District. We had an opportunity of discussing the situation with the Deputy Commissioner and certain other officials as well as with Muslims who came to us on hearing about our arrival.

Our discussions with the local officials brought out a few points very clearly, which deserve to be brought to your notice immediately.

(a) It is not merely a spontaneous flare-up of communal feelings in this part of the country, but a planned, pre-meditated and well-organized attack that has been launched with the object of completely suppressing the Muslim community of Meos numbering about one million and forming a more or less compact Muslim belt in a predominantly Hindu area. Possibly it is intended to pave the way for the establishment of a Jat province by force. The idea of the Jat province has been openly favoured not only by the Jat Hindu population on both sides of the Punjab—UP border, but also by certain rulers of Indian States. A sinister aspect of the present attack is that armed troops from the Indian States of Bharatpur and Alwar have been frequently entering the Gurgaon district territory. They have been noticed in uniforms. It is not improbable that a number of them in plain clothes have been mixing up with the rioters during the present trouble and using their modern weapons against the Meo villagers. The impression in Gurgaon district is widespread that arms and ammunition are freely pouring into the riot-affected areas from the Indian States.

The present trouble started, according to all reports, with a treacherous attack by Hindu jats on a Muslim village, Naurangpur, after an elaborate series of meetings, held under official auspices, at which pledges and undertakings were given for the maintenance of peace. From there the disturbances have rapidly spread over a wide area and assumed the form of an offensive on a very wide front against the Meo villages by large crowds drawn from Hindu jats, Ahirs, and Gujars of several districts in the Punjab as well as the UP, among whom are no doubt certain number of trained soldiers, carrying arms belonging to the Alwar and Bharatpur States.

(b) The military force which has been sent to help in stopping this carnage is altogether inadequate. It consists of four companies with a total strength of about 500. One of them is a Gurkha Company. The other three until today were the Rajputana Rifles. The Rajputana Rifles have a mixed composition but, it is an unfortunate accident the three companies sent to Gurgaon were all Hindu. Today they have been replaced by Sikh companies. There is no doubt that in a situation like this a military force of mixed composition can alone ensure fairness and inspire confidence in the population. What I regard as another unfortunate accident is that the visit of the Hon'ble Members for Home and Defence to Gurgaon yesterday should have been followed by replacement. of the Hindu companies by Sikh soldiers today. I know that there is no connection between the two, but it is difficult to convince unintelligent and panic stricken villagers.

(c) It was explained to us that owing to its inadequate strength the military force can make its presence felt only in one sector. This leaves killing, looting and arson practically unchecked in other parts. An additional reason for the inability of the forces to control the situation in these latter areas is their inaccessibility and lack of motorable roads.

In view of the points mentioned above I would make the following submissions for your immediate consideration:

(1) The rulers of Indian States clearly need a prompt warning to keep their civilians and soldiers out of these disturbances. The need of such a warning is also indicated by the fact that armed men and soldiers from certain Sikh states in Central Punjab have recently been mixed up with the disturbances in Lahore and Amritsar.

(2) More military force should be sent to the disturbed areas in Gurgaon district immediately. It will be appreciated that an attack on a minority on such a big and organized scale in the neighbourhood of India’s capital may have most unfortunate repercussions in remoter parts of the country, if it is not promptly checked. What is equally important is that the force to be sent there should be of a mixed composition.
This is a point on which I cannot lay too much emphasis.

(3) In view of the inaccessibility of those areas where rioting, killing and arson are now at their worst, the use of such cavalry as can be assembled immediately and the need of machine-gunning from the air may also be seriously considered. I would further submit that the rioting in Gurgaon district must be controlled immediately, if the Meo community is to be saved from almost complete effacement.

Yours sincerely,
LIAQUAT ALI KHAN

50. Report from Punjab Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Punjab for the Second Half of May 1947, 7 June 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

I. POLITICAL AND COMMUNAL:—There has been a considerable deterioration in the communal situation in the Punjab during the second half of May....

Incidents proving better organization have occurred outside as well as inside the two cities.
The best examples are attacks which took place at Rajgarh and Singhdpura near Lahore on the 18th and 19th of May and at Rasulpura close to Amritsar on the 24th. Rajgarh and Rasulpura were scenes of large-scale and obviously well-planned onslaughts on Muslims by Sikhs and Hindus armed with modern weapons, grenades and bombs. Singhdpura was different in that it furnished no evidence of unprovoked aggression but supplied proof of the preparedness of Sikhs organization to meet any emergency and to retaliate with brutal effect. In all these three incidents, in which the Muslims suffered heavy casualties, investigation is being conducted and is likely to result in interesting disclosures. Already there is reason to believe, that the Rajgarh attackers included men of the Rashtriya Sewa Swayam Sangh [sic] among their members. It is known that members of the Sangh are also concerned with an organization inside the city which has been functioning under the control of a Defence Committee which is part of the Punjab Relief Committee. Most prominent persons are members of the Punjab Relief Committee and the principal role of the organization which the Defence Committee controls is communal aggression of a most serious kind. This can safely be accepted as proof of the deplorable depths of degradation to which communalism has sunk in the Punjab.

Outside Lahore and Amritsar, the most serious communal disturbances which have taken place have again been in the Gurgaon district. The disorder started there on the 25th of May when Ahirs who are Hindus attacked a Muslim village with serious results in casualties and damage. On the following day another village was attacked and Muslim retaliation quickly followed. Since then, there has been communal warfare over a large part of the district, which can properly be described as being out of control. Muslim Meos and the Ahirs are the principal belligerents and have already destroyed fifty villages and killed and wounded a large number of persons. An indication of the widespread and serious character of the situation is contained in a report which states that in one day the military and police fired as many as a thousand rounds. There is no doubt that the contestants are well armed and recoveries made of arms include some solidly made mortars. It is possible that these would not be vastly effective in use, but their presence and their obvious manufacture in rural areas of the Eastern Punjab speak significantly of both earnest preparation and a will to action.

The events which have been described in Lahore, in Amritsar and in Gurgaon have had an ill effect on the rest of the Province and there has been a succession of reports from other districts of cases of stabbing and arson. In some districts, where overt action has so far been absent, tension is reported to be increasing and panic to be greater than before. In the circumstances it has to be accepted that the continuance of the disturbances has created a widespread and dangerously inflammatory state of affairs.

There has been no activity in the Province which can be described as being truly political in character, and anything sponsored by political organizations has been communal in deliberate effect. Both the Akalis and the Muslim League have been giving their attention to the districts to which they both lay claim, and in a fashion which has proclaimed the determination of each not to submit to the domination of the other. No attempt has been made by Muslims or Sikhs to bridge the gulf which now separates them, and the only effort in this direction which has been made was by a non-Punjabi, Seth Jamna Dass, of Bombay. It is said that in his endeavours he had the blessing of at least part of the Congress High Command, but this unfortunately did not bring him success. His efforts to arrange a representative conference as a preliminary to and understanding, and a combined effort for peace were foiled by intransigence, jealousy and suspicion; and may have done more harm than good. It is against this background of the apparent implacable determination of the communities not to give ground on communal issues that the negotiations and endeavours of His Majesty’s Government, His Excellency the Viceroy and the Indian Leaders have been viewed and their chances of success have been judged by the people of the Province. Helped by the press to understand the solution likely to be put forward, they have given anxious consideration to whether any plan involving a division of India, a partition of the Punjab and of the Defence Forces can succeed and furnish the guarantee of peace which they so earnestly desire. Their meditations have but increased their perplexities and dread and their search for solace has not been helped by statements which Mr Jinnah and prominent Sikhs have made, nor by rumour claiming to be able to disclose that the private views of important visitors to the Province admit of little hope of sincere compromise. In the circumstances fear of what will flow from the conference has increased, and with it the panic already existing on account of the Provinces’ disturbed conditions.

In order to be able to deal more effectively with any situation which may arise, and to increase public confidence in Government’s ability to maintain control, and its determination to do so, arrangements have been made for extra and substantial military assistance. The public have been informed of the new dispositions, and strength of the additional military forces and this has had a steadying effect. The Punjab Government has also decided to take full advantage of the additional powers now available and declare all districts ‘disturbed areas’. This further sign of determination to suppress disorder has been welcomed....

Akhter Husain
Chief Secretary To Government, Punjab

51. Casualties in Punjab
Telegram from S.E. Abbott to G.E.B. Abell, 15 June 1947

Immediate
Confidential
No. 131-G

Your telegram 1437-S. Best available figures from 18th November to 15th May are 3,280 killed and 1,359 injured. Figures certainly below actuals as Rawalpindi District figures still uncertain and in Gurgaon many casualties removed by rioters themselves.

52. Appalling Communal Situation in Gurgaon
IOR, R/3/1/90, Acc. No. 3415, NAI.

My dear Liaquat Ali Khan Sahib,

A party consisting of Pir Ilahi Buksh, Mir Bundeh Ali, Mir Ghulam Ali Talpur, Ministers of Sind, Mr M.H. Gazdar, Mian Amiruddin, Mayor of Lahore, 3 members of the Ad Hoc Delhi Muslim League Committee and myself toured the riot-affected area of Gurgaon District on the 11th of June 1947. We visited Gurgaon, Sohna, Taru, Nuh and Palwal and the surrounding villages which have been devastated in the recent disturbances. We went in no official capacity and it was not our intention to present a detailed report of our observations, but we were so completely taken aback by what we saw, and by the nature and extent of the devastation already caused and likely to be caused in the immediate future that we feel it our duty to impress you with the gravity of the situation and to urge you to take immediate steps to bring under control, what, is in effect, full scale civil war raging within 20 miles of the capital of India. If the least delay is permitted in this, it is our opinion that thousands of helpless men, women and children will be massacred within the next few days and an irretrievable disaster will befall more than half a million of human beings, which will tarnish the birth of Indian freedom and shame the last days of the British rule in India.
We are surprised that it is not sufficiently realized in Delhi, or for the matter of that in any part of India, that a cruel and merciless war is being waged at this very moment in the closest proximity to the Indian capital, with all the horrors and atrocities attendant on a campaign for extermination conducted with the most modern weapons of destruction but unchecked by any of the conventions of civilised war-fare [sic]. It is ridiculous to apply the phrase communal rioting to the situation in Gurgaon. What is actually taking place is a large scale invasion of the Muslim villages by thousands of armed and disciplined men from the adjoining districts of the United Provinces, as well as by the official armed forces of Bharatpur and Alwar State. It is to be borne in mind that the Meo tract in Gurgaon and the adjoining Indian States is the only compact and populous concentration of Muslim majority population between the Sutlej and the border of Bengal, numbering near 10 lakhs of people, and it appears to be the firm intention of the surrounding Hindu provinces as well as the Hindu states to liquidate this powerful and gallant pocket by all the tactics made familiar by Herr Hitler in Poland. From reliable information that we were able to collect on the spot we are convinced that many thousands of men, women and children have been massacred in the last few days and that scores of villages have been burnt to the ground, and that people in all the surrounding villages are living day and night in imminent peril of attack and extermination.

The most alarming feature of the whole situation is the conduct of the military that has ostensibly been called out to restore order. The composition of the military in Gurgaon is exclusively non-Muslim. From time to time a purely Hindu Rajput regiment is replaced by a Sikh Regiment which is later relieved by the former Rajput regiment. This is being done at a time when the non-Muslim army is misbehaving in a shameless and atrocious manner. In fact it is our belief that more Muslims have been indiscriminately massacred by the Indian non-Muslim military than by the combined attacks of the Jats, the Ahirs, the Rajputs, the Hindus of UP and the armies of Bharatpur and Alwar. In particular it is the common belief in Gurgaon that the Sikh military has taken it upon themselves to wage war on behalf of the non-Muslims. Sikh army personnel have indiscriminately shot the Meos, and it is rumoured that some of their men have actually taken off their uniforms to reinforce the mobs with their official weapons. It is the common practice for the soldiers to carry out searches for arms in the day in Hindu villages and to redistribute the confiscated arms at strategic places under cover of night, thus securing that the maximum force is deployed at the decisive place against the doomed Meos. Similarly in one place some 600 Hindu rioters were arrested by the military at the spot, but 450 were released immediately the remaining 150 having already passed to the custody of the police. There are at the moment lying in Palwal Civil Hospital 4 men who were forced to lie on their backs by the military and then crushed twice over under military trucks. It would be fruitless to pile illustrations because it is our belief that the savagery, brutality and partisanship of the military is well-known to the authorities. We understand that the DC of Gurgoan has represented again and again to the Central Government for mixed troops but he has been snubbed with the answer that the military does not recognize communalism. This is amusing when it is noticed that wherever disturbances take place, whether it is in Rawalpindi, in Attock, in Multan, in Amritsar or in Gurgoan, lack of communal considerations in the Army means the exclusive presence of non-Muslims [sic] troops.

It is our firm conviction that the worst offenders in the present Gurgoan disturbances have been the non-Muslim army, and that unless immediate steps are taken to introduce a mixed military personnel there is no hope for Muslims in Gurgaon. If it is not found possible to secure this, then we suggest that the military should be completely withdrawn, because the brave Meos would be able to fight their Hindu enemies with better chances of avoiding complete annihilation if they are not re-inforced by their military allies. It is also to be hoped that when mixed military is introduced in Gurgaon it will be done in sufficient numbers to cope with the enormity of the problem. It is ridiculous that whilst it is impossible to see the road for army trucks in West Punjab, it is possible to travel almost right through the disturbed area in Gurgaon without coming across a uniform.

Finally we would like to impress upon you with all the force at our disposal, the wicked role that is being played by the Indian States of Bharatpur and Alwar. As you know the Mewat is a compact tract that covers adjoining areas of Gurgoan, UP, Bharatpur and Alwar, and whilst there are some 2,50,000 Meos in Gurgoan, more than twice this number live in Alwar and Bharatpur. At present these two States have declared a war of extermination on the Muslims of Mewat. As recently as the night of the 10th, whole regiments of the Bharatpur military took part in an organized attack on Meo villages in Bharatpur State on the Gurgoan boundary, killing hundreds of people and sacking and burning 7 villages completely, whilst the Indian troops on the border looked on, only concerned to see that no Muslim escaped from Bharatpur to Gurgaon, or that no Gurgaon Meo should enter into Bharatpur to succour and defend his kith and kin.

We Muslims of India believe that we are one people. We cannot watch unmoved the pitiless massacre of our brothers merely because an artificial boundary divides Gurgoan from Bharatpur and Alwar. In the name of humanity we call upon you to appeal to the Viceroy of India in this matter and to see that the concepts of medieval barbarism are not allowed to reign unchecked in a tract almost within sight of the Viceregal Palace, and at a time when we stand at the very threshold of our freedom.

53. Tragedies of Punjab

Extract from a Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 22 June 1947
IOR, R/3/1/91, Acc. No. 3416, NAI.

PERSONAL

17 York Road
New Delhi

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

You have not returned from Kashmir yet and are due back tomorrow.

I am, however, writing this to you rather late at night because I am distressed and the sending of this letter will perhaps give some relief to my mind....

3. But this letter is mainly about the city of Lahore where fires are raging and consuming hundreds of houses. It is reported that 100 houses were burnt down last night and this morning. During the previous two days about 250 houses were set fire to and burnt. At this rate the city of Lahore will be just a heap of ashes in a few days time. The human aspect of this is appalling to contemplate.

4. Amritsar is already a city of ruins, and Lahore is likely to be in a much worse state very soon. Lahore is, of course, a much larger city than Amritsar.

5. If you will forgive a personal touch, I should like to tell you that my mother came from Lahore and part of my childhood was spent there. The fate of Lahore, therefore, affects me perhaps more intimately than it might many other people who are not connected with that city....

7. Apart from newspaper reports, people have come from Lahore to see me today and they have given descriptions of what is happening there. Whether their accounts are correct or not, I cannot say. They tell me that repeatedly, when houses were set fire to, the residents of those houses rushed out into the streets and lanes and these peoples were fired at by the police for breach of the curfew order. Most of these fires occurred at the time of the curfew. I am told that the District Magistrate has ordered that people should keep open the doors of their houses and lanes so as to allow refugees from burning houses to enter other houses, because if they remain in the streets during curfew hours, they will be fired at by the police.

8. This is very strange state of affairs and few persons would like to be residents of Lahore at present. Surely, something effective has to be done to stop this tragedy, if existing methods have failed and the police are incapable of controlling the situation. As I told you once, the insistent demand is either for the military to take charge, or for the withdrawal of police and the military so that the people can look after themselves. You were surprised at this last demand and it is surprising enough. But it is passionately repeated. All manner of charges are made against the police of committing arson and of preventing people from putting out fires and firing at them when they try to do so. It is not possible for me to know the truth of these charges; but the fact remains that there is this strongly-felt feeling about the police and further that the situation continues to deteriorate. Are we to be passive spectators while a great city ceases to exist and hundreds of thousands of its inhabitants are reduced to becoming homeless wanderers, or else to die in their narrow lanes?

9. You gave an assurance even before June 3rd and subsequently that any kind of disorder will be put down with vigour. I am afraid we are not honouring that assurance in some places at least, notably in Lahore and Amritsar. Gurgaon also is still more or less a battle-field although similar and adjoining areas on the UP side are fully under control.

10. From all accounts that I have received, the statement of June 3rd has had a sobering and calming effect in most places. Whether people like the decisions or not, they accept them and have a general feeling that a settlement has been arrived at. This old tension is gone or is much less. There is no more talk, as there used to be, of civil war and the like.

11. But this does not apply to Lahore, Amritsar and Gurgaon. Gurgaon is a wide area and already several hundred villages have been burnt down. The damage has been done and, I suppose, sooner or later the trouble there will end, though it is still continuing to some extent. Lahore is an even more serious matter, not only because it effects a very large number of persons and valuable property, but also because it is the nerve-centre of the Punjab. There appears to be a deliberate policy being pursued there of smoking out people. It is an astonishingly foolish policy from any point of view and can do no good to anybody. Nevertheless it has succeeded in a large measure, and if it is continued on this scale for another ten days or so, there will be little left in the city of Lahore to save. If anything has got to be done, it must be done immediately....

13. Please forgive me for this long letter which you will get on your return from Kashmir. I tried to stop myself writing it, but the thought of Lahore burning away obsessed me and I could not restrain myself.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru
H. SIND

1. Governor Accused of Partiality

   Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Francis Mudie, 15 April 1947
   Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

TOP SECRET

After Sir Francis Mudie had given me an account of how his Government was working, I took him into the garden and informed him categorically that he was accused of being violently pro-Muslim League and of failing in his constitutional duties to look after the interests of the minorities in Sind. I told him that Mr Gandhi had made this accusation as well as other Congress leaders, and that an article by Jai Prakash Narain which Mr Gandhi had sent me, called upon me to dismiss Sir Francis from the post of Governor for failing in his duty.

Sir Francis assured me that the accusations were completely without foundation; that he constantly pulled up his Government and did his best to look after the interest of the minorities; but that he naturally did his best to get on well with his Government, because that, he presumed, was the correct attitude for a constitutional Governor to take.

He informed me that the real grounds for Congress dissatisfaction with him lay in the 1942 period, when he was Chief Secretary to the Government of the UP, under Sir Maurice Hallett, and when together they had had to round up and imprison Congress leaders, for which he thought they would never forgive him.

I then told him that Mr Godbole had warned me that two Bills were coming up for my assent, concerning the alienation of land and impersonation at elections, which were causing the most violent feeling among the Hindus who regarded both Bills as directed against them. I invited the Governor to give me a very full brief if he really wished me to give my assent.

He gave me a verbal explanation of what was behind these two Bills, but promised to let me have it in writing as well.

I finally told him that I accepted his explanation in regard to the Congress accusations; that I realized that political capital was being made the whole time out of the attitude of high British officials; and that he could count on my support. I did warn him, however, to be ever careful not to give Congress the least excuse for accusing him of partiality.

In conclusion we discussed the prospects of Pakistan consisting only of Sind and the western half of the Punjab, and he expressed the view that this would be a perfectly feasible economic proposition, and since the total population of the two areas would only be in the neighbourhood of 15 millions, that is, less than 4 per cent of the total population of India, nobody could really say that this Pakistan was seriously destroying the unity of India. In fact it might be regarded as a fairly large Indian State which had decided not to join the Constituent Assembly.

This opens up a new vista, since now we could go ahead giving Mr Jinnah his truncated Pakistan, whilst keeping a strong Centre for the rest of India at Delhi; all this on the assumption that the NWFP retains a Congress Government and that the Muslim League will not want the expense of trying to run a Province which needs 3 1/2 crores spent on it over and above its income (mostly for the tribes), and that Suhrawardy will not agree to the partition of Bengal and will throw in his lot with Congress.
Anyhow, here is a new plan which we will consider tomorrow at the Governors’ Conference.

2. Mudie Presents His Case against Congress Claim
Letter from Francis Mudie to Louis Mountbatten, 22 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 138, NMML.

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

I promised to let you have some ammunition with which to meet the Congress attack on me that I am unfair to the minorities in Sind. This is not very easy to do as I am constantly doing what I can to prevent their being unfairly treated but I may mention the following cases as being of some importance:

(1) The ministry unanimously, at a Cabinet Meeting, wished to supersede a Hindu, who had been certified by the Chief Court as fit to hold the post of District and Sessions Judge. I appointed him to the post by an order made in my individual judgement.

(2) All the ministers, except possibly the Premier, wished to make the rules regarding the communal ratio in the Services applicable to promotions. At present they apply only to new appointments. I refused to agree. So they got a member of their party in the Assembly to move a resolution to that effect. This was carried, all the Muslims voting for it and all the Hindus against, but, as the result of what I had said the day before to the Ministers, they all remained neutral, incurring a certain amount of obloquy thereby.

(3) The Hindus here give me credit for the maintenance of the peace. This has involved, on some occasions, action contrary to my ministers’ real wishes or over their heads. Last August I threatened two with dismissal for issuing an inflammatory statement.

(4) I have also, on occasions when I thought Hindu members of the Services were being unfairly treated, referred the matter to the Public Service Commission under the concluding provisions of section 266(3) of the Government of India Act, 1935.

2. I hope that these instances will be sufficient for your purpose but I would like to mention certain general matters which are of importance in this connexion. The first is, as I told you in Delhi, that the real gravamen of the Congress charge against me is that I was Chief Secretary of the UP in 1942 when the Congress rebellion was suppressed. Before that the Congress and I got on fairly well. I am not accused of anything excepting defeating them, but that is a serious charge.

3. The other reason for the attack on me is that I have always considered it important not to presume too much on the friendliness of my ministry. Admittedly, I get away with a good deal that I could not get away with if I had a Congress ministry, but any suggestion that a Muslim League ministry should be treated with less respect than a Congress ministry would be greatly resented. The League is, at present, suffering from an extreme inferiority complex which makes them, at times, difficult to deal with. But what the Congress want me to do is to treat my ministry in a way that would produce a constitutional crisis in a Congress province. If I did, it would be a snub to the League which would be just what the Congress want. It would also weaken the Sind Government, by setting the Governor against the ministers, which also from the Congress point of view is desirable.
4. This question arose very acutely last July, when on the advice of the Premier, I prorogued the meeting of the Assembly that had been called to elect representatives of Sind to the Constituent Assembly immediately after that election was over. The Congress were opposed to this, as they had suborned the single vote on which the ministry’s majority depended by a promise of cheap land and so thought that they could defeat the ministry and gain power. It seemed to me that if advice is tendered by both the Premier and the Leader of the Opposition on a purely political matter, the Governor should act on the advice of the Premier. If a Congress Governor were to depart from that rule there would be trouble.

5. My real reason, however, apart from the constitutional one, was that I was sure that if the opposition, which consisted of the Congress plus a number of Muslim stooges, all but one of whom lost their seats at the last election, got power then there would be widespread communal rioting, in which, of course, the Hindus would have lost very heavily. I would have got the Province into the position now existing in the NWFP and previously existing in the Punjab. I would have had a ministry with a small majority in the Assembly, but violently opposed outside it. It was as a result of my action on this occasion that, as I told you, Nehru, in a public statement, said that both I and my Premier should be dismissed. My action has been justified by the result of the recent election and by the ensuing communal peace when nearly every other Province was disturbed. Many of the Hindus in Sind see it now and are grateful. But a strong Government in Sind does not suit the All-India Congress book, and I daresay the leaders at the Centre do not realize the local situation. Unfortunately Governors cannot explain these things!

6. I am afraid that this is rather a long letter but I thought it worthwhile to set forth the case fairly fully.

Yours sincerely,

F. MUDIE

3. Objectionable Activities of League Leaders
Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 23 April 1947

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

I am enclosing for your perusal a copy of the letter which has been forwarded to me by the Leader of the Congress Party in the Sind Assembly. The letter was written to him by another MLA of Sind and it is typical, in so far as it is subjective, of the attitude of responsible leaders of minorities in the Muslim majority areas. In so far as it is descriptive of the speeches and incidents referred to therein I have no doubt about its authenticity. A particularly objectionable feature is the speech of Pir Illahi Bux, one of the Sind Ministers, who has, under the cloak of ministerial protection without its attendant responsibilities, appealed to the baser instincts of his audience.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel
ENCLOSURE

COPY OF LETTER FROM SJT MADHAVDAS SHIVALOMAL, MLA, TO PROF. GHANSHYAM DATED 11-4-1947

Thanks for your kind letter. After the Muslim League conference the situation has deteriorated. Very nasty speeches were made. Especially speeches by Mr Kazi Isa of Quetta and Mr Unis and two other Punjabi Leaguers roused the feelings of the masses to such an extent that the audience actually wept hearing heart-rending accounts of Bihar Muslim massacres. Some of the Muslim speakers told the audience to keep ‘heavy and iron-rimmed lathis’ if they could not get guns and revolvers. All the Congress leaders, specially Nationalist Muslims, were abused right and left.

Then they held two meetings of prominent Muslim sardars and zamindars in camera where it is learnt they were asked to follow orders of the Muslim League faithfully in future etc.

I certainly feel that these series of conferences that are being held in Sind are not with good intentions. I have taken full notes of these speeches covering about 80 pages. Fortunately the Deputy Commissioner, Mr Keith, is a good administrator. I met him yesterday and he is fully aware of all these poisonous speeches. Possibly he has informed the Government of all these speeches and their reaction. The police officials were made to sell the tickets of the Muslim League conference. Deputy Superintendent of Police and other police officials were given prominent place on the stage reserved for distinguished visitors. All the bad characters have been enlisted as Muslim National Guards, who are using very filthy language in the presence of Hindus, actually abusing them. Hindus are feeling very panicky and suffering all these humiliations with patience. Some of the rich Hindu families have left Jacobabad for Rajputana States for the time being. Two days back nine prominent Hindus including myself and Mr Mathuradas received threatening letters. I enclose actual one such letter for your perusal.

Mr Satramdas, Hindustan correspondent, has sent a fairly detailed account of the speeches to Hindustan but it was drastically censored. I have given an English translation of these speeches to the Deputy Commissioner. Even Pir Illahi Bux did not refrain himself from being carried over by communal madness. He said, ‘Sind Muslims are ready to wage fourth War of Panipat to prove their fitness and readiness to get Pakistan. I am proud Jacobabad district which is the frontier and full of brave people will be in the forefront in that jehad.’

It is not improbable that arms are being imported from the Punjab and Baluchistan borders because all zamindars of this district own lands and relatives in those areas and are politically important citizens of Kalat Estate as well as Dera Ismail Khan (Punjab) areas. Even the DSP had called me asking me to be on guard as he felt my life was in danger. I assure you that I am not afraid of these threats and I have been to Kandkot from the 5th to 8th instant and arranged for the lodging and boarding of Congress Seva Dal volunteers. Keeping in view the unhealthy atmosphere, I am thinking of cutting short the period of camp. I am writing a fairly detailed account of the present situation in the district for Hindustan and other English daily papers.

I feel you [should] come for two days here to know everything personally and at the same time attend the Congress Seva Dal camp at Kandkot.

PS.
I have just received information that a young Hindu Punjabi goldsmith has been butchered at Kandkot and his mutilated body [was] found in a Muslim graveyard yesterday. I am awaiting further details.
Dear Sardar Patel,

As I wrote to you on 27 April, I asked the Governor of Sind whether he had any information about the objectionable speeches made by Pir Illahi Bux.

2. The Governor tells me that the Pir is not a very notable speaker, but that he does at times make rash and thoughtless speeches. After the Jacobabad conference, at which a number of objectionable speeches were made, the Governor took the matter up with the Premier and impressed on all his Ministers the necessity for exercising restraint and caution in their public speeches. As a result, the Premier, accompanied by Pir Illahi Bux and Pirzada Abdus Sattar, has recently left on a tour of Hyderabad district to impress on everybody the need to preserve the peace and to avoid anything which would lead to Hindu-Muslim conflict.

3. A certain number of speeches at this conference were made not by Sindhi speakers but by others from outside the province. The Governor also took up this matter with the Premier who took strong action, particularly in regard to a refugee from Bihar, Maulvi Abdul Qudus who had made a very objectionable speech.

He asked him to issue a statement denouncing what he was reported to have said and in case you have not seen it I attach a copy from the Sind Observer of Sunday, 27 April.

4. I had, as you know, impressed on the Governor when he was in Delhi the absolute need for maintaining peace and avoiding oppression of minorities. I am therefore particularly glad to draw your attention to the fact that the Governor handled the matter immediately in this way, some time before the receipt of my letter to him.

Yours sincerely,
Mountbatten of Burma

ENCLOSURE

Maulana Qudus has issued the following statement to the Press:

I was thunderstruck and shocked to see some articles in the newspapers of Sind, apprehending breach of the peace in Sind and accusing some responsible Muslim leaders here. Such an irresponsible step is liable to make the atmosphere explosive. Therefore, I consider it my bounden duty to warn the Muslim public of Sind against such baseless propaganda; and I repeat again what I have already declared and stressed in my public speeches delivered throughout the province, that the ‘revenge of inhuman atrocity in one place or province on the innocent people of another place or province is un-Islamic, a great sin, crime and also rebellion against the holy teachings of the Quran.’

I appeal to the Muslims of Sind to remain peaceful and to regard the recent Islamic appeal by Quaid-i-Azam to preserve peace, tranquillity and good name of the only peaceful province of Sind. I also appeal to the Hindu public and Press of Sind to be wise enough and feel their human duty to welcome and sympathize with the Bihar refugees instead of putting blame on the homeless and helpless people of Bihar who did not come here for mere change in the high and hilly places of Sind.
Towards Freedom: 1947

5. Communal Speeches Made at Sukkur Muslim League Conference

Letter from Parasram V. Tahilramani to Chief Secretary, Government of Sind, 10 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 57/20/47, NAI.

Dear Sir,

I am sending you herewith a translation of some passages occurring in a letter which was written in Sindhi by Agha Badruddin MLA (Deputy-Speaker) in his Capacity as Chairman of the Reception Committee of the Sukkur District Muslim League Conference, and which was read out at the opening session of that Conference at Sukkur on the 6th ultimo. The letter has been published in the issue, dated the 9th April 1947, of the Local Sindhi Daily, the Al-Wahid, at page 6 of that issue, in three column streaming headlines under the caption ‘Get ready to face the impending delicate situation.’ The passages are a direct incitement to Muslim masses to resort to violence for the purpose, among other things, avenging Bihar Muslims. Apart from those passages, the whole tenor and spirit of the letter are highly inflammatory and are calculated to cause a breach of peace in the province.

I have no doubt you will agree that such propaganda must forthwith be checked. I shall be grateful if you will kindly give this matter your immediate attention and let me know at an early date the action that you propose to take in regard there to.

Yours faithfully,

Parasram V. Tahilramani MLA
Hon Secretary,
Sind Assembly Congress Party

ENCLOSURE

In the course of a letter addressed to the Sukkur District Muslim League Conference in his capacity as chairman of the Reception Committee of that Conference, Agha Badruddin Ahmed, MLA, Deputy Speaker of the Sind Legislative Assembly writes, inter alia, as follows:

Friends, today the gaze of the world in general, and of the Muslims in the Muslim Minority Provinces in particular, is directed towards you to see whether or not your hands are going to move. They are looking out for a movement of your Muslim brethren in Muslim minority Provinces that in one hand you should have the Holy Quran as the light on your path and have in other hand a sword. Those Muslims are anxiously and restlessly straining their ears to hear the sound of hoofs of galloping horses, the rattling of the swords and the sky-rending slogans of ‘Allah-Ho-Akbar’ of the Muslim crusaders. Those Muslims brethren also fervently cherish this desire that ‘Oh Sindhi Muslim, go forth to the land of Bihar and behold for your self how on that soil lie scattered without coffin or grave thousands of corpses of orphaned children, widowed women and innocent Muslim crusaders.’

And you are not unaware of what is happening in our own Province.

In the house of every foreigner (meaning the non-Muslim Sindhi) there are weapons. Those weapons are either guns of ammunition and bombs, but alas as for you, you have not with you even an ordinary stick.

If even now this my fervent appeal fails to stimulate some activity in your muscles, then take it from me that the days of our national existence in Hindustan are numbered. But, no, the Muslim nation is not despairing of you.
And it is not sufficient that each Muslim youth should only attach to his dress a paper or a cloth badge of a Muslim National Guard and stand in line as a guard, but it is necessary that having tied round his head a coffin cloth, he should stand forth ready to protect his religion, faith, honour name and fame.

6. Role of Congressmen in Local Politics of Sind

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Jethmal Parsram, 12 May 1947

Dear friend,

I have received your letter of the 6th instant and its enclosure entitled ‘Sind betrayed.’

According to you, the Sarva Sind Hindu Panchayat organization already exists. May I know what has prevented it from functioning and ousting the Congress from the field? You seem to have written this note in anger, and when a man is in anger, he loses sense and reason. Why do you blame the Congress for doing what it considers to be proper? It is no use your saying ‘Sind betrayed.’ Nobody can betray Sind except the Sindhis themselves, and I do not think that Sind Congressmen who have made so many sacrifices have done so in order to betray their own province.

You say that hitherto you ‘have been sitting dumb like a fool,’ but evidently you are now talking like a fool. So you had better remain silent, as you used to. Instead of losing your temper and getting angry against Congressmen, you had better start doing what you think to be proper.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

7. Hindu Minority in Sind

Letter from R.K. Sidhwa to Vallabhbhai Patel, 15 May 1947

My dear Sardar Sahib,

On my return from Delhi last week I was flooded with questions from various Hindu leaders and friends whether Bapu and yourself advised Dr Choithram that all Hindus should migrate from Sind at once as there was no other alternative. I told them that I had not consulted either Bapu or yourself on this matter but knowing the views of both of your good selves and having come in close contact with both of you I without contradiction state that Bapu could not have said so. I was therefore very pleased to read your message as well as of Bapu’s that we ought to be brave and face the situation and if we cannot do it non-violently to face it violently but never to be coward or ‘run away.’ Moreover Bapu has sent a message through Bhai Partap that if Hindus have as a last resort to migrate they should all go together by giving notice to Government and also not to forget other non-Hindus, namely, Parsis and Christians. All these have gladdened the hearts of all of us. I may here inform you that except few Amils, I mean about three to four hundred big families, nobody wants to migrate. Staunch Hindus also are opposed to it and they have welcomed your message. I may here inform you that Parsis and Christians have great stakes in Karachi. Parsis pay the largest amount of taxes to the Municipal Corporation, so do Indian Christians to a good extent.

With kind regards and thanking you again for giving right and good advice to Hindus,

Yours sincerely,
R.K. Sidhwa

PS.
I may here inform you that in the meeting Dr Choithram had called for this purpose nearly three times, he had invited only selected Hindus and other Congressmen were left out.

8. Right of Gurkhas to Carry Khukries

Extract from a Letter from Nihchaldas C. Vazirani to Vallabhbhai Patel, 15 May 1947

Sheikha Building
Mahatma Gandhi Road
Karachi

Dear Sardar Sahib,

2. There is one matter which is urgent as far as Sind is concerned. You know that Gurkhas wear ‘khukries’ (small daggers or big knives) as ceremoniously and religiously as Sikhs wear kirpans. No action has been taken anywhere in India under the Arms Act against any Gurkha for carrying a khukri. But recently Sind police have seized two khukries from two Gurkhas. This has caused resentment amongst Gurkhas. It appears that the only way is the issue of a notification by the Governor-General under Section 27 of the Indian Arms Act exempting khukries on the same lines as kirpans.

With respects,

I am
Yours sincerely,
Nihchaldas C. Vazirani

9. Public Speeches by League Leaders Questioned

Note by R.N. Banerjee, 19 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 57/20/47, NAI.

This is with reference to H.M’s order that the public utterances of the Ministers and other Muslim League Leaders of Sind should be watched and scrutinised.

2. Apart from too much saber-rattling, the substance of Pirzada Abdus Sattar’s speeches appears to be that the Ministry’s anti-Hindu measures are designed primarily for redeeming of the Muslim majority of the people from economic exploitation by Hindu capitalists. It may be argued that similar (anti-capitalist) propaganda has been in evidence even in Hindu Provinces, for example, various enactments—initiated since the economic depression following 1929—against money lending, pending legislation in Hindu majority provinces for expropriation of zamindars and landlords etc. Even making due allowance for this fact, one cannot avoid the impression that the palpably aggressive and minatory utterances addressed to the Hindu population of the Provinces are obviously designed for terrorizing the Hindus into submission and warning them against active efforts to safeguard their legitimate interests. Such utterances must obviously be judged in the general context of the anti-Hindu campaign of the Ministry and the League leaders. HM would recall that these terror tactics are being continued in spite of Mr Jinnah’s warning (some months ago) to the Sind League leaders to give a more fair deal to, and put at ease, the minorities in Sind.

R.N. Banerjee
Secretary

10. Khukris Not of Religious Significance

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Nihchaldas C. Vazirani, 21 May 1947

My dear Nihchaldas,

I have received your letter of the 15th instant. You have compared the Gurkhas’ right to keep khukris with the Sikhs’ right to wear kirpans. Perhaps there is considerable difference. One has a religious significance; the other is perhaps a right based on custom to a warlike race which has no religious significance at all. I agree the sentiment in both cases may be similar and equally strong. The Arms Act provides exemption for the Sikhs since many years. It is difficult at this stage to provide for any exemption for any particular class in the Indian Arms Act. But your suggestion will be carefully considered. You know the hostility of the Muslim League towards the Gurkhas in general.

I am delighted to have your reassuring message about the position of Hindus in Sind. I am glad to hear that the University Act is being suitably amended.

I am afraid many people suffering from a defeatist mentality have been creating a demoralizing atmosphere in Sind, but I fully appreciate your attitude which deserves to be adopted by all the public workers of the minority community in Sind. Self-confidence, courage and unity can only save the minorities in provinces where they will have to put up a hard fight to secure their existence and fair play. I wish you success in your endeavour.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

11. Hindu Minorities Must Not Migrate

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to R.K. Sidhwa, 23 May 1947

My dear Sidhwa,

I have received your letter of the 15th instant. I am surprised to hear that Dr Choithram informed the Hindus in Sind that I had advised them through him to migrate from the province. I can never be guilty of such a cowardly advice. Sind Hindus are not a small minority, nor are they without any resources. They will have full support from the rest of India in case of persecution or in case of real need. I do not see how Dr Choithram could have given such advice in my name. I am sure the non-Hindus, and particularly the Parsis, will give a good account of themselves as an intelligent and resourceful minority to do everything possible to secure their just and legitimate safeguards. They will also not hesitate in contributing their mite in the advancement of the province in which they live. The present communal atmosphere is a passing phase and is bound to end with the solution of the political deadlock. I regret to find that Dr Choithram did not invite Congressmen in the meeting referred to by you.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

12. Demand for Separation of Hindu Majority Districts in Sind

Telegram from V.D. Savarkar to President, Sind Provincial Sabha, and the Chairman of Hindu and Minority Conference, 1 June 1947

PRESS ON WITH ALL POSSIBLE SPEED AND EFFICIENCY THE DEMAND FOR SEPARATION OF HINDU MAJORITY DISTRICTS IN SIND WITH A VIEW TO JOINING THE HINDUSTHAN UNION. PAKISTAN OR NO PAKISTAN HINDU MAJORITY DISTRICTS MUST BE SEPARATED EVEN IN THE INTEREST OF AKHAND HINDUSTHAN ITSELF.

I. UNITED PROVINCES

1. Report from UP

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on UP for Second Half of March 1947, 8 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

...3. Communal.—The tension increased as the news of the Punjab disturbances began coming in. Incidents leading to minor rioting are reported mainly from urban areas in about 10 districts. In the western districts, the slightest incident between persons of opposite communities is liable to deteriorate into rioting. Particular mention may be made of Benares and Cawnpore. In Benares, the clash at the time of Holi mentioned in the previous report was followed a few days later by further trouble during the progress of an Arya Samaj procession and the police were obliged to open fire. Other parts of the city were soon affected and a number of stabbing incidents occurred. In Cawnpore, tension was aggravated by the celebration of the Pakistan Day on March 23 followed on March 30 by the Punjab Day. Incidents started on the night of March 29 as a result of the display of the pro and anti-Pakistan placards. Brickbatting between rival parties and panicky firing of gun shots by private persons from house tops were frequent. The District Magistrate and the Additional District Magistrate received slight injuries from brickbats. Prompt and vigorous patrolling by large parties of police and military forces, rounding up of bad characters and the imposition of collective fines prevented the situation from serious deterioration. Some cases of arson occurred. The police had to open fire to disperse crowds. The casualties were not heavy. Only two deaths have so far been reported...
2. Report from UP

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on UP for First Half of April 1947, 23 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

...3. Communal.—Communal relations which had worsened as a result of the Punjab disturbances coupled with the observance, in the last fortnight of various ‘days’ and the incidents connected therewith, show little change towards improvement. The District Magistrate, Meerut, reports that the air is thick with rumours of preparations by both the major communities for a fight and one Commissioner describes the feelings between the two communities as having ‘crystallized into a state of latent animosity’. Though due to the strong and vigilant attitude of the administration the Province was free from major clashes, there is an under-current or uneasiness particularly in the Meerut Division. In Cawnpore, minor incidents like stray brick batting, putting of flesh in mosques and temples, continue and the civil authorities are constantly on riot duty. In Benares, panicky rumours have prevented the situation from returning to normal and stray incidents continue to occur. In Khurja (Bulandshahr) trouble started with school boys and culminated in the death of 15 persons and injuries to 45. In Mathura, the orthodox Hindus are said to be working up the anti-cow-slaughter agitation and the Muslims are preparing to oppose it....

3. Communal Situation Worsening in UP

Record of an Interview between Fouis Mountbatten and G.B. Pant, 3 May 1947

I congratulated him on having a quiet province, and said that the Governor had told me how pleased he was with the way the Ministry was working with him, which Pandit Pant entirely confirmed.

Nevertheless, he told me that the repercussions of events in the Punjab and Bihar and Bengal were beginning to make themselves felt in the UP, and that he could not regard the situation as entirely satisfactory. They had gone out of their way in the UP to give the minorities more than a fair deal, but the Hindus were gradually becoming opposed to such generous treatment towards a community which was proving itself to be so brutal and violent in other provinces.

He asked me whether I favoured partition, and I told him emphatically ‘No’. He appealed to me then not to agree to a decision for partition. I pointed out that I could not go against the will of the people; the most I could do was to leave the choice as far as possible to the people of India, and this was the policy I was endeavouring to follow.

He regretted the fact that we were leaving in June 1948, at such short notice, and said that if two or three years ago we could have announced a date five years ahead for our departure everything could have been done in a much more orderly and smooth way and with less risk of violence on our departure.

He volunteered the statement that the feeling between the British and Indians had never been so good, and said that this feeling had noticeably improved in the last couple of months. He felt that this was one of the few good things that had come out of the announcement. He also paid the usual flattering tribute to me, saying that I was the right man to settle the problem. I replied that I could now see how he had become the Chief Minister of the UP.
4. Peace Committees on Either Side Must Act Responsibly

G.B. Pant's Address to Members of Peace Committees at Bareilly, 6 May 1947

'We should always recognize the high value of human life. Difference of opinion between human beings is natural and it is very necessary for human progress, but the difference of opinion should not make people give up behaviour expected of decent men', said Pandit Pant. Outlining the policy of his Government, he said: 'We have had enough of these communal orgies of bloodshed and no good Government can tolerate such acts of violence on innocent people. The Government will not spare any pains to root out these riots in the province and they will be curbed. Maximum strictness will be shown to prevent this pest. Curfew, punitive police, collective fines, shadowing of mischief-mongers, in a nutshell whatever is humanly possible to stamp out communal rioting, will be undertaken by the Government.

'It is high time public opinion should mobilize itself against riot mongers. It is wrong to treat them as heroes. They are not men but worse than beasts. By causing such incidents they paralyse the entire normal life of the city leading to the imposition of curfew on account of which thousands are forced to starve and are not able to get even the bare necessities of life. Such a state of affairs will never be allowed to continue.'

Referring to the Gandhi—Jinnah appeal he said: 'They have urged upon their followers that political questions cannot be settled by these orgies of bloodshed and destruction. Hence if we are their true followers we should abstain from such acts of violence and make sincere efforts to make people realize the truth of what they say.'

Referring to the complaints against officials, he said: 'The public should realize the responsibilities of Government servants and render them every help they stand in need of. If they have any genuine complaint against any official, a complaint should be made to the official himself and I am confident that the official himself will rectify.'

Outlining the work for the peace committees, Pandit Pant said: 'The chief item of programme in a peace committee's activities should be propaganda. It should foster a mentality that if an incident has occurred people should not be vindictive, rather they should wait for the law to take its due course. It should impress that such acts of retaliation lead to further retaliation, forming a vicious circle with definite loss to both communities and absolutely no advantage to them. Peace committees should try to remove ill-will nursed by one community against the other. The Government by maximum strictness can only prevent lawlessness but cannot foster fellow and neighbourly feelings between the two communities. Peace committees should bring about a complete change of heart and tell people that those who indulge in these acts of lawlessness are responsible for the imposition of curfew and starvation of thousands of people confined to their homes, and that such people are not entitled to any sympathy, much less praise. They should not receive any encouragement whatsoever and should be looked down upon. Peace committees can render great help in the investigation of cases. People in communal frenzy try to implicate innocent people of the other community. A peace committee, if it honestly works, can advise the Government about the innocence of people and the Government will see that innocent people are not harassed, but they should not give any quarter to culprits who must at all cost be brought to book. A peace committee should remove heartburns in the two communities and make public opinion flow in constructive channels instead of recriminatory and destructive courses. Peace committees should be formed in every mohalla in the city. The Government will place certain funds at the disposal of the District Magistrate to help the peace committees in their propaganda drive. There is the need of a practical programme to improve the atmosphere.'

5. Organization of Home Guards and Assistance to Refugees

Extracts from a Letter from G.B. Pant to Vallabhbhai Patel, 28 May 1947

Naini Tal

My dear Sardar Sahib,

....I had occasion to speak to you about our proposal for the organization of home-guards. We have been greatly handicapped because of the apathetic attitude of the Defence Department. They seem to have been under a misapprehension about the exact scope and character of the proposed home-guards. These home-guards, as you will see from the accompanying copy of the Home-Guards Act, will be no more and no better than an auxiliary of the police force. They will not be entitled to keep any arms themselves. All their arms will be kept in the armoury. Only they will be given training in the use of fire-arms so that in emergencies they may keep watch and ward over the areas assigned to them. We would be content to have 410 muskets even if 303 rifles are not available. The Defence Department had agreed to lend us some barracks for this purpose, but even such permission was withdrawn. Consequently in spite of all our efforts the scheme has not made any progress so far. I shall feel grateful if you will kindly secure us the muskets and the barracks that we need. Our Home Secretary who was at Delhi recently spoke to Mr Dundas in this connection and he gathered from the talk that he had with him that the prejudices were greatly due to misunderstanding and misconception about the exact status of the home-guards. They seem to have been misled by the sort of home-guards they had in England when the War was in progress. It was, more or less, a military force. Such is not, however, our intention...

We are doing all we can to help the refugees in Hardwar. I am asking the Transport Department to accommodate wherever possible such of them as had been engaged in motor business in the Punjab and North-West Frontier and held licences for plying motor-vehicles in their homelands. The influx of the refugees is, I understand, progressively increasing. Many new problems seem to be arising from day to day and some of them are also causing, I am told, a little embarrassment. However, I hope all questions will be satisfactorily settled. It is necessary, however, to make use of Raniganj camp near Hardwar and Clement barracks in Dehra Dun for the refugees. It will not be possible to accommodate them in the existing buildings and they are said to be already overcrowded. Will you kindly ask Shankar to see that formal sanction is issued to enable the refugees to occupy these barracks?

I have received your latest letter and made necessary enquiries. I am assured that there is no cause for any grave concern. However, I have asked those concerned to be vigilant and watchful.

I think I have already written at considerable length, so I need not take more of your time.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

G.B. Pant
6. ‘Proportion of Hindus and Muslims in Services’

Extract from G.B. Pant’s Speech in UP Legislative Council, 29 May 1947

I have listened to the speeches that have been delivered with due attention.... Although I would have preferred the postponement of a debate of this character to more tranquil times, I cannot get over the exigencies of the present situation. It was perhaps inevitable. It has become a most pressing and inexorable demand. In the circumstances we have to apply ourselves to this question. Luckily, the honourable mover has himself not suggested any basis on which the proportion should be fixed. His resolution gives ample latitude to Government. It only says, the Council recommends to the Government that immediate orders be issued fixing the proportion in which the members of the various communities in the province will be recruited in the public services. What that proportion should be he does not care to indicate. On what basis that proportion should be fixed he is willing to leave it to Government. Well, to that extent I appreciate his attitude. I also think that his resolution does not mean that recruitment by promotion is to be made on any other basis than that of merit. I think he concedes and accepts the principle that so far as the filling up of vacancies by promotion is concerned there should be no other criterion except that of merit, for the introduction of any other extraneous consideration would lead to a lamentable deterioration in the efficiency of public services....

First of all a public servant is meant for the service of the public. He has to forget his caste, his creed and his colour. He must serve all impartially, justly, fairly, without fear and without favour.... Loyalty and devotion to the State which maintains public services is the fundamental condition of every public service, and especially on an occasion like this when we are faced with new problems and when things are going to take shape not only for the present but also for decades or perhaps for centuries. It is necessary to remember that whatever be the state of the State that may emerge out of the deliberations that have been going on in this country and abroad for some time, every member of the public services, wherever he be situated, will above all have to be devoted to the State and his allegiance to the State will have to be unqualified, unreserved and unstinted....

The next point that remains relates to recruitment, as it is ordinarily called by the method of direct recruitment. When we come to that, I admit that situated as we are we cannot perhaps altogether ignore the hard realities of the present situation. But still it is to be recognized that in an ideal system, and we have to approach the ideal, there can be only one method of recruitment, that is recruitment by fitness and efficiency. I do not know what the final decision will be, but I would personally think that so far as posts are filled, either by the Public Service Commission or by boards of selection on a competitive basis, competition alone should determine the eligibility of candidates for vacancies. That will enable us to get the best men....

It is unthinkable that any scheme should be put forward under which premium is sought to be placed on inefficiency to such an extent as would ensure for any section of the community a larger number of posts than it could secure on the basis of competition or its population. Obviously, those who are unqualified or do not come up to the prescribed standard or are not the best ones should not be given a larger proportion than they should be entitled to on the basis of population. Democracy does recognize numbers and it is based—whether one likes it or not—on the principle of all heads being almost equal, and so population does afford a reasonable test for determining the strength of communities as well as groups. And, after all, on what does a minority or a majority base its claim, except on its numbers? So if numbers alone is the criterion, then we cannot ignore that criterion when we come to the recruitment of services. I personally would like all those posts which are filled by means of competition to be recruited on the sole ground of merit and nothing else. No extraneous considerations should come in and those who are the best should be given the privilege and the duty of discharging the heavy responsibilities attached to responsible offices. But, as I said, if there be a keenness in any quarter that population basis would suit better, then that might be considered. There you have a yardstick and by that yardstick you can measure and see through impartial agencies who are the best men in each group.

There is another category of public servants: those who are recruited not by means of competition, but more or less arbitrarily. There one can very well have the apprehension that justice will not be done to any particular community, and there being no tangible test for determining who is unfit and all being apparently fit, I think the population basis may have to be accepted for posts of that character. It will leave no ground for apprehension for any minorities; otherwise as things are developing there may be an apprehension that even with regard to such posts the minorities may not have a fair deal later. But here it is not only a question of minorities but also of the majority. There are unfortunately strong feelings on all sides that all are not getting a just and fair deal. Mere arguments do not convince people and something tangible has to be done in order to reassure men’s minds and one must adopt a course which must be just and fair and which, while being equitable in every way, also goes to reassure the public mind. So, as far as the posts that are recruited otherwise than by competition are concerned, the population basis may perhaps be a fair basis for determining the eligibility of individuals for such posts....

I hope it will also be recognized that new forces are emerging everyday. Up to this moment the claims for recruitment had been more or less restricted to superior and richer classes among the Hindus as well as among the Muslims. But now it is not only a question of the richer section of the Hindus or of the richer section of the Muslims. I see no reason why the scheduled classes should not have their full and legitimate share. I personally think that the maximum effort should be made to ensure for them the maximum number for which qualified candidates can be found among them. This is the debt that we all, whether Hindus or Muslims, owe to them. So, if reservation has to be made it must be made first of all for them, because they are weak, they are poor, they are suppressed and unless they come up to the level, we will have a very feeble link in our political and social chain which may impair the soundness of the entire fabric. So they are entitled to consideration.

Then there are the backward sections among Hindus and Muslims who do not come within the category of scheduled castes or any other, but who also feel that they are entitled to a share in public services. I do not exactly know how their aspirations can be satisfied but I appreciate their ambitions and desires and I think that if any feasible scheme can be devised we will have also to take into account their claims and what is due to them. How that can be done I do not know. I have no clear idea.

I hope in view of the statement that I have made the honourable mover will not consider it necessary to press his resolution. I can assure honourable members of this House that we have only one desire and that is this that every public servant in the province should serve the public honestly, enthusiastically, scrupulously and devotedly, that every man and woman may aspire to achieve the highest position that may be open to anyone else in this land, and that nobody may be debarred from any office, place or position that is valued or respected, whether by communities or by individuals.
Chapter 19. Muslim League Civil Disobedience Movements in Assam and NWFP

A. Assam

1. '11 Muslim Immigrants Killed in Assam Firing: Civil Disobedience Movement Takes a Serious Turn'
25 March 1947

BARPETA (ASSAM), March 24: Four people, including a woman of 70, died on the spot, and an equal number were wounded, when the police opened fire on the Muslims of Chochra, a village in Barpeta sub-division on March 21, informs the Secretary of the Assam Provincial Muslim League.

The same evening fire was opened again in the Mandia grazing reserve, killing and wounding a number of Muslims. Up to the morning of March 23, 11 bodies were removed to hospital and 15 persons were lying seriously wounded.

The situation has taken a grave turn. Maulvi Syed Abdur Rauf, MLA, rushed to the spot and then returned to Barpeta for attending the 'Pakistan Day' celebrations. He said that the police had absolutely no justification in opening fire on the peaceful Muslims, but unless an inquiry was made by top-ranking officers and due care was taken by the League leaders, justice would be denied to the Muslims.

A message from Gauhati says that the situation in several places in Kamrup, Goalpara and Darrang Districts is tense, following the launching of agitation against the eviction policy of the Assam Government by the Muslim League, but the Government are taking precautionary measures in these areas. It was stated there officially on Saturday....

The Assam Muslims observed complete hartal yesterday as a protest against the arrest of their leaders.

In Tezpur a huge procession was taken out and when it reached the jail, the police tried to stop it but failed.

Meetings were held in many towns and villages demanding the release of the leaders and condemning the eviction policy of the Assam Government.—OPI.
My dear Abell,

Please refer to your Secret D.O. letter No. 592/58 of yesterday’s date regarding the importance to the Congress of the Sikhs and Assam....

The position in Assam is that, apart from Sylhet districts, it is predominantly a Hindu province. In the province as a whole, out of a total population of 10.2 millions, Hindus number 4.21 millions and Muslims 3.44 millions. If we exclude Sylhet district, the figures are—total population of 7.10 millions, Hindus 3.06 millions, Muslims 1.55 millions, Tribes 2.41 millions. Congress naturally cannot be expected willingly to surrender a Hindu majority province to Group ‘C’.

The position has inevitably been very much affected by the recent communal disturbances in the country, and in present circumstances the Congress cannot be expected to advise Assam and the Sikhs in the Punjab to accept grouping unreservedly; and in fact, even if they did, the minorities and the Hindus in Assam will certainly not yield to Congress pressure.

Yours sincerely,

V.P. MENON

Shillong, March 31.—‘The Assam Government cannot submit to any kind of threat, whether from inside or outside the province’, said Mr Gopinath Bardoloi on his return from a tour of the disturbed areas in Assam.

The Premier said: ‘The decision of the joint Council of Action of the Bengal and Assam Provincial Muslim League to launch an invasional attack on Assam with organized Muslim League national guards must be an extremely unfortunate one. In judging by what has happened since then it has caused widespread alarm and sense of insecurity throughout the province. The Government of Assam might have treated the whole thing lightly if it did not result in the disturbances which have taken place in different parts of middle and lower Assam. The talk of adoption of civil disobedience by the Assam Muslim League has been particularly harmful as some unfortunate illiterates are being duped to violent activities by this mischievous propaganda.

‘Besides minor aggressive activities in small grazing reserves in major places aggressive tactics were adopted by immigrants against police parties kept in grazing reserves to prevent illegal encroachments and disturbances. In Govindapur reserve the police had to open fire in order to save themselves and protect their camp from the ... fury of an armed mob of several thousands. Near Mankachar the joint Council of Action of the Muslim League have opened a camp named as ‘Purva Pakistan Qila’ (Fort of Eastern Pakistan) where training is given to Muslim League national guards with a view to training them in the art of creating violent disturbances within the province by participating in civil disobedience and violating all law and order of the Government.

'The Government have full information that even now some members of the Bengal Muslim League Parliamentary Party, in conjunction with other important local Leaguers in Mankachar area, are bent upon carrying out their mischievous activities which might immediately result in widespread disturbances in the province.

'We had certain talk with Mr Saadulla, leader of the opposition, for a quieter settlement of certain issues connected with the situation. But it must be obvious that so long as this threat of civil disobedience and apprehension of lawlessness remains, the Government shall have to pursue a policy by which these lawless activities may not be made possible and people saved from unnecessary bloodshed which is bound to result from the tactics followed by certain people.—API.

4. ‘Bardoloi Ministry Must Go’
Editorial from Dawn, 2 April 1947.

In sheer ruthlessness, hatred and violence the immigrant-baiting by the Bardoloi Ministry of Assam can only be compared with the brutal persecution of Jews by the Nazis under the guidance of that master Jew-baiter Julius Streicher, who has since paid for his crimes with his life in the Nuremberg gallows. In both cases the objective would appear to be the same: Streicher exterminated Jews from Germany and other German occupied areas in the hey-days of Nazi power, while Premier Bardoloi, equally power-drunken, has been waging an unholy war against peaceful Muslim immigrants in Assam with a view to their extirpation. The tragic irony of it, however, is that the engine of repression has been set in full gear against the very persons who have enriched the economic life of Assam by making waste land bloom by the sweat of their brows just as in Germany it was the hounded-out Jews who enriched the cultural heritage of that country in every sphere of human activity.

By divine dispensation Nazism has long been liquidated and its victims everywhere are heaving a sigh of relief. But in Assam the heavy sighs of people wounded by police and military bullets as well as of those forcibly dispossessed of their earthly belongings and subjected to all sorts of indignities that militate against the civilised human conscience by the Bardoloi Ministry continue to rend the air. It has been well said that those whom the gods wish to destroy, they make them mad first. Strange as it may seem symptoms of lunacy are clearly visible in the conduct and behaviour of the Assam Ministry towards the immigrants as well as League workers who have stood by them in their distress. Who could have dispersed peaceful ‘squatters’ (we quote the expression from the Home Minister Mr Basanta Kumar Das’s statement in the Assam Assembly) by military bullets other than some violent inmates of a bedlam? A few months ago when homeless Londoners voiced their grievances against the British Government by squatting at the doors of public buildings and private mansions, were they fired upon or even baton charged by the police? Incredible though it may sound the Bardoloi Ministry was guilty of the maniacal excess of dispersing peaceful squatters by bullets. To any normal man this would appear as an act of madness.

We may be allowed to send a message of hope and cheer to our oppressed brethren in Assam in their distress. We sincerely believe that the day of their deliverance from the vicious claws of their soulless tormentors is not far to seek. The Assam Provincial League has decided to launch a province wide civil disobedience movement against the Bardoloi Ministry for the restoration of civil liberties, which have been ruthlessly suppressed by them. The Working Committee of the Provincial League has adopted the following resolution in that connection.

In view of the high-handed action of the Congress Government of Assam in arresting some leaders of the Muslim League including Maulana Abdul Hamid Khan, President of the Assam Provincial Muslim League and the firing on unarmed innocent Muslim immigrants outside grazing reserve, resulting in 12 deaths, including an old woman of 70 and several injured; and in view of the fact that the liberties of the Muslims of Assam are being trampled upon by the Provincial Government by suppressing free association and by putting restrictions on letters, telegrams and other means of communications, this Committee directs every branch of the Muslim League organization throughout the province immediately to start a peaceful, non-violent, non-communal mass civil disobedience movement on a wide scale to break a Government which has not only been unjust and unfair to the Muslims, but has failed in every direction in relieving the people of the province from the hardship created by scarcity, rising prices, corruption and nepotism.

It calls upon the people of the province as a whole to support the movement.

The League leaders have given an assurance to the Ministry that the movement is not to be directed against any community but is solely intended to bring the Government to their knees. A similar movement was launched in the Punjab recently which ended in a glorious victory for the League. The enemies of the League today lie prostrate, vanquished and utterly demoralized. We have no doubt that the history of Northern Pakistan will repeat itself in Eastern Pakistan. Meanwhile, the Muslims of Assam must respond to the call of their leaders and jump into the arena with courage, and confidence. Victory will not take long to crown their struggle.

5. 'Censorship of Eviction News Imposed by Bardoloi Ministry'

_Dawn_, 8 April 1947.

Strict censorship of news relating to eviction and repression of immigrants in Assam has been imposed by the Bardoloi Ministry as will be evident from the withholding by the Shillong Telegraph office of an important Press telegram filed for 'Dawn' by its Shillong correspondent.

In a letter no. P-I/A.P. dated March 28, 1947, to our correspondent, the Telegraph Master of the Shillong Telegraph Office said: 'I beg to inform you that your Press telegram BGXQ/XQ No. 1 dated March 20, 1947 addressed to Dawn, Delhi has been stopped as objectionable'.

The telegram in question which was sent to 'Dawn' by post by the correspondent reads as follows:

'The death roll as result of police and military firings on immigrants at Barpeta on March 21 and 22 has, according to the Muslim League mounted to 25, including one woman, while the condition of 16 injured is reported grave. This ghastly tragedy has miserably failed much to the discomfiture of the Congress Government to curb the progress of the civil disobedience movement. It has assumed a dynamic force that has brought closer together all sections of the landless, devoutly wished by the Muslim League.

Report from Nowgong states about 300 Scheduled Caste immigrants evicted from their holdings in the middle of February have joined the movement in true comradeship with their oppressed Muslim brethren.
At Barpeta there is not a single Reserve Area which people have not infiltrated and constructed their houses in spite of the authorities. Success at Barpeta has raised the morale of immigrants in Mongaldai. Those who left the place reappeared and again started cultivating the land. The situation has become so much desperate for the Congress Government that Mr Gopinath Bardoloi, Premier, was obliged to send an SOS to Sardar Baldev Singh, Defence Member, Interim Government, praying for more troops to assist him in warding off what he calls a Muslim invasion, it is reliably learnt.

6. Provision of Military Aid for Assam

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Baldev Singh, 9 April 1947

New Delhi

My dear Baldev Singh,

I am sending herewith a copy of an extract from a letter which I have received from Bardoloi, the Assam Premier. It appears that the reservation which you made in regard to military aid has been misunderstood by him, and a clarification is therefore necessary. The intention clearly was that military aid should be given when civil forces are unable to cope with the situation, whether it arises out of the eviction policy of the Government of Assam or any other matter, but that it will not be given merely to evict immigrants. If you agree, clarification on these lines may be sent to the Government of Assam.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

ENCLOSURE

EXTRACT FROM A LETTER DATED 31-3-47 FROM MR GOPINATH BARDOLOI TO SARDAR PATEL

We are really grateful to you and Sardar Baldev Singh for the promise of aid of military; but the reservation that has been put to it that it could not be applied for eviction purposes will create difficulties. Most of the troubles will arise out of the Government's policy of maintaining the inviolability of the grazing reserves which was agreed to by all parties, including the Muslim League, as also due to Government's attempt to distribute available waste lands to all including Hindus, Muslims, tribals and the immigrants themselves. If there is any flare-up it will be due to Government's policy to do the right thing to all parties concerned on an economic basis. But the Muslim League only want to settle them with Muslims only and when Government thwart it they go for civil disobedience. It is therefore not known how the maintenance of law and order of the province as a whole could be distinguished for maintenance of law and order in the grazing reserves and waste lands where law and order are proposed to be infringed. I request you to give very careful consideration to the points I have raised herein and clarify by some direction to us and to the military authorities, according to which the distinction may not be maintained.
My dear Bardoloi,

I have received your two letters and have taken action on each of them.

On receiving the first letter, I got in touch with Baldev Singh and made sure that military aid would be available to you in case of need. He is satisfied that such aid would be ample.

As regards your second letter, in which you wanted an amplification of the statement that troops would not be used for eviction purposes, I have passed on the extract to Baldev Singh with the suggestion that the point may be suitably clarified to convey that military aid should be given when civil forces are unable to cope with the situation, whether it arises out of the eviction policy of the Government of Assam or any other matter, but that it will not be given merely to evict immigrants. I shall let you know the action taken on this suggestion by the Defence Member.

In the meantime, I have had a discussion with your Speaker and Shri Prabhu Dayal. They have also discussed the matter with Gandhiji. You will have our full support in your stand on legal rights. Not an inch of land should be surrendered to the illegal immigrants, and you must stand solidly and firm on the policy which you are implementing. To yield to threats, show of force or any ‘direct action’ would be suicidal and unbecoming of Government with any sense of responsibility.

I have explained these matters to Shri Rohini Kumar Chaudhury, and he will tell you what we feel about it.

Shri Prabhu Dayal also mentioned to me that you require some two or three good officers. I should like to have further details as to what type of officers you require, of what seniority and for which post. After getting the details, I shall let you know what we can do to help you.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

8. ‘Saadulla in Talks with Bardoloi’

GAUHATI, Thursday.—MR MOHAMMAD SAA'DULLA, ex-Premier of Assam and Chairman of the Assam Muslim League Council of Action, revealed at a public meeting yesterday that negotiations were still proceeding between him and Mr Gopinath Bardoloi, the Premier, for ‘an honourable settlement on the eviction question’ so that Assam might be spared the untoward happenings which might be inevitable otherwise.

Mr Saadulla also said that the civil disobedience movement had not yet begun, but was being examined by the League High Command. He counselled all, including League Members and overzealous officers, not to bang the negotiation door.

Referring to the eviction policy now being pursued by the Assam Government, Mr Saadulla said that it was not the one formulated in 1946 between Mr Gopinath Bardoloi, Mr Rohini Kumar Chaudhury and himself to solve the land problem in the Province.

The present Government was following an entirely new policy. The Congress in 1939 virtually accepted the abolition of ‘Line System’ policy which later culminated in a tripartite agreement years ago. 'I accuse the present Government of breach of the terms of that agreement and it is indeed a travesty of truth to say that the Bardoloi Ministry have been acting by agreed policy', he said.

Mr Saadulla referred to the recent statement of Mr Gopinath Bardoloi in which the Premier had said that 3,500 families had been evicted so far, of whom 700 families were entitled to provision of land as protected people. If 27,000 bighas of land were provided to evictees, said Mr Saadulla, the problem might easily be solved and if the Congress Government agreed to this term he (Mr Saadulla) would stop further immigration into Assam in the best interest of Assam as a whole.

Dwelling on the question of including Assam in Pakistan he stated that Assam was a Muslim majority province if the tribals and Scheduled Caste people were excluded from the Hindu fold, as these people preferred to be separate communities. He also levelled the charge of nepotism, corruption and inefficiency against the present Government.

Concluding Mr Saadulla appealed to all to maintain peace and harmony as the Muslim League had no design to launch any movement against any community or individual, but wanted, if forced, to fight an unjust policy.

This was Mr Saadulla's first public speech since the Muslim League's decision to launch civil disobedience movement in Assam.—API.

9. Preparations for Direct Action against Assam Government

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 13 April 1947

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

I am sending herewith a copy of an intercepted letter which I have received from Assam. This will give you an idea of the preparations which are being made to launch direct action against the Government of Assam. Any further comment on my part is unnecessary. It may be noted that the writer of this letter is a member of the Assam Legislative Assembly and a prominent member of the Muslim League.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

ENCLOSURE

Purba Pakistan Killa
PO Mankachar
Dhubri (Assam)
24 March 1947

M.A. Kashem, BA (Hons), MLA
Headmaster
Mankachar H.E. School

Jonab,

At the request of the party I had to painfully leave Shillong without any final scheme and programme. On my way home I had been to Mymensingh to see if Mr Pathan was there. From there I directly went to Calcutta and met Mr Pathan and sought their help. At his suggestion I saw the treasurer, Mr Jasimuddin Sahib and other members of the joint committee and the working committee. Moreover, I tried to contact all the members of Mymensingh and Rangpur districts for their active participation. They all are in favour of the move but it will be mainly monetary help. From the Calcutta League office I booked a trunk call but had no response from Shillong.

A publication in Ananda Bazar Patrika of 8th Chaitra has astonished me. Though the decision of the working committee was ultra vires still we have accepted and as such there is no reason for such ruinous publication. I do hope you will kindly contradict the statement to infuse courage in the people.

As I had not the opportunity of living a detailed scheme of Purba Pakistan Killa [fort], I am sending Maulvi Sarwaral Islam, a prominent League worker, to give you an idea as to the institution. Viewing the need of the community at this juncture, I, in pursuance of a resolution of the joint committee at Bahadurabad, started this killa in the name of Allah. I am at a loss to find means to continue it. Mr Ghayshuddin Pathan accompanied by Mvi [Maulvi] Nazir Hussain Khandker, BL, MLA and Mvi Paniruddin Ahmed, MLA of Kurigram, visited the killa on the 22nd after addressing a huge gathering in the locality. He of course was kindly ready to advance me some money from their fund but I declined to receive any money direct as it will lead to dangerous consequences. In Calcutta I learnt that Mvi. Mahmud Ali had already accepted two thousand rupees from the committee. I have in writing requested him to make payment only to the chairman, committee of action, or his agent. He has given after long discussion the gist of their proposal to us which is sent to you for consideration and information. Kindly either communicate direct with the secretary or send your correspondence in a closed cover per bearer so that I may manage to send via Kurigram. Their proposal seems to be quite good as far as preparation of the programme and plan is concerned. This has also done away with chances of difference between the opinion of our provincial committee of action and the joint committee.

Maulvi Nazamul Huq came here yesterday with a copy of the resolution of the committee of action and I am simply astonished to find the contradiction between paper publication and the resolution. In the paper it was announced that civil disobedience will continue, and as such I arranged meetings in each union only with the willing persons. No arrest was made nor fire opened though Sec. 144 was violated. Details you may know from the bearer. If they abstain from arresting what step should we take to court arrest? I am in a position, Allah willing, to send at least 10,000 (ten thousand) persons to court arrest from this killa. Even I can, if you desire, send batches after batches from this killa to Barpeta or Mangaldai at fixed places to occupy waste land. Of course, I cannot exactly give you the number but I think a sufficient number may be recruited if I get timely intimation.

I am very much in favour of guerilla fight specially in the Garo Hills elaka [area]—attacks may be made at different border places of Bengal. I am soon going to that side to ask them to be prepared. The other day I received one telegram from you asking me to attend the meeting of the committee of action on 1 April. Is it a fact that the meeting will actually take place? If so, how can I be present if you do not permit me to court arrest on the way as I am definitely under warrant of arrest though the Hon'ble Premier and the Home Minister gave you contrary information? I would be glad if you kindly let me know per bearer if you really want me there.
Now for opening of another base at Sonahat I would request you to take early steps. At present there being only [one] base the Government has concentrated their attention to this killa. Not only Mr Peters has been made Additional Deputy Commissioner for Mankachar [but there is also] one senior magistrate, a few inspectors and sub-inspectors with some sections of the Assam Rifles and armed police. I will take up the responsibility of opening it with Mvi. Paniruddin Sahib, MLA of Kurigram. As it has become impossible for me to manage the recurring expenses of this killa, I would request you to draw on your behalf from the joint committee an amount to the extent of Rs 20,000 (twenty thousand) for recurring expenses and non-recurring expenses, an estimate of which is enclosed herewith as it is far easier for me to draw money from Calcutta than from Shillong. Of course you may kindly consider the question seriously and then let me know what you settle. In case you authorize me, you will kindly send an authority letter per bearer. If you are not in a position to authorize me, you will kindly personally visit the place within a week or so otherwise I shall be undone—already I had to spend five thousand from different funds.

I am fairly well. Hope this will find you in good health and spirit.

With salaams and best regard,

Sincerely yours,
Abul Kashem

10. Posting of Armed Forces in Assam
Letter from Gopinath Bardoloi to Vallabhbhai Patel, 15 April 1947

Shillong

Respected Sardarji,

Your letter sent per favour of Shriyut Kumar Rohini Kumar Chaudhuri has been received by me. Since after I had written to you regarding our conversation with General Renkin, myself and my Home Minister had [another] conversation with General Stuker of Eastern Command in the presence of the Governor, the Inspector-General of Police, the military officer in charge of the Assam Regiment and also the officer in charge of the Assam Rifles. General Stuker repeated almost the same arguments as General Renkin and said that we had dissipated the provincial force, namely, the railway force and the Assam Rifles by distribution in weaker stations and thereby weakening the striking force of the army. To my great surprise, the Governor also joined with him and thought that we should withdraw the few platoons placed in the grazing reserves and concentrate them in particular places. Of course, I most emphatically opposed this idea as these forces also were putting down civil disobedience by mass encroachment in the grazing reserves with show of arms which is only a part of the general policy of the Muslim League. I also explained to him that if the policy was one of prevention of bloodshed and not one of bloodshed, the best way to avert it was by posting armed forces in such areas where disorder was apprehended; and it is only on account of that fact, namely, the maintenance of forces in dangerous areas that a flare-up in these areas has been averted. Concentration in particular areas will only mean that there will be already trouble in these areas such as had happened at Noakhali. Whatever might be from the military point of view, I said that I could not agree to remove them (excepting from one place) from these areas and that the army, if they wanted to give us any help, must give additional forces for the defence of the borders in 4 or 5 places which I have named. After a controversy ranging for more than an hour the General agreed to render whatever help was possible to be given to us. I wanted the Governor by an order in writing to place our specific demands for a brigade; but neither did the Governor do so in our presence nor did the General agree that such a strength could be immediately made available. As far as I know, it is the Governor who is to requisition, but if the Governor would not act according to the advice of the Ministry, what can we do?

The friends who saw you report that you were considering us to be weak. I boldly say that we have been more than strong considering the forces at our disposal; but if the Government of India cannot have their orders enforced with regard to the requirements of the province, blame should not come to the provincial Government. In the meantime, however, some forces have been given to take route marching in these border areas of Dhubri and they are also placing some platoons (eight) in two other areas in Shillong and Pandu; but it is the military and the Governor who will be the persons in charge of the disposition of the army.

Regarding land policy, we are standing very firm. Maulvi Mohammed Saadulla has expressed to some people that if we show our attitude to discuss with the Muslim League and are prepared to give some land to some whom we were not bound to give according to the terms of the agreement with him, he would advise calling off of the civil disobedience. I have, however, caused it to be known to him that there can be no question of granting any more land beyond what we are bound to give under the agreement, and that so long as civil disobedience remains we cannot actually negotiate with the Muslim League on any issue. We have caused it to be known through the Press that if they withdraw their civil disobedience we might discuss issues for implementing the terms of agreement about which also the charge of the Muslim League is that we have not done so. I hope you will kindly continue to take interest in our affairs in all details. I shall continue to furnish you with information from time to time.

As regards posting of officers, I shall write to you a separate note officially.

Yours sincerely,
Gopinath Bardoloi

PS. I should have told you that Sardar Baldev Singh wanted us to use the whole Assam Rifles and wanted to replace the same by other troops to guard the frontier. But the Governor, and possibly the General, [are] opposed to the idea.

G.N. Bardoloi

11. ‘Muslim Students behind Assam Campaign’

Dawn, 16 April 1947.

SYLHET, Tuesday.—MR MOINUL HAQUE CHAUDHRY, General Secretary All-India Muslim Students Federation Chamber, Committee of Action, Assam Provincial Muslim League has issued the following statement:

‘My attention has been drawn to a statement issued by one Mr Abdul Haque alleged to be the Secretary of Assam Muslim Students Federation asking the Muslim students ‘not to participate in anti-Assamese activities of Assam Muslim League which is an institution guided by non-Assamese and also the civil disobedience movement of Muslim League.’
Towards Freedom: 1947

‘The General Secretary of the All-India Muslim Students Federation declares that the Secretary of Assam Students Federation is not Abdul Haque but Mr Hoshmat Ali. The aforesaid gentleman is one of those misguided Communist influenced agent-provocateurs who was expelled by the Assam Muslim Students’ Federation with Tosodduq Ahmed and others for his move to start a parallel Muslim Students’ Federation with himself as Secretary and Akram of Jorhat as President.

‘For sometime he has been issuing statements posing as Secretary of the Federation to mislead people. I am glad that one of the ex-Presidents of the Federation has contradicted the news. I want to inform public that the whole Muslim students’ force of Assam is behind the Muslim League movement and they are prepared to face all eventualities’.

12. Political Situation in Assam

Letter from Syed M. Saadullah to M.A. Jinnah, 16 April 1947

SHILLONG, ASSAM

My dear Quaid-i-Azam,

Mr Abdul Matin Chaudhury who is going to attend the meeting of the Central Committee of Action at Delhi on the 20th April, has requested me to send you a short note on the present political situation of Assam.

The position is hopeless from any point of view. On the 19th February, a meeting of the Council of the Provincial Muslim League was convened in a sub-divisional headquarters of the Sylhet district where a Committee of Action was created who were authorized to devise ways and means to counteract the eviction policy of the Congress Government. I was nominated a member in my absence without my consent. It is alleged that the President of the Provincial Muslim League verbally told the members on the 19th February that the meeting of the Committee of Action will be held at Dhubri on 2nd March. That is probably the reason why no notice was sent to me of this meeting on the 2nd of March though I was not present at Maulvibazar where the Council meeting was held.

Only three out of nine members of the Committee of Action were present at Dhubri where the Committee of Action is supposed to have clothed [sic] the President of the Provincial Muslim League with dictatorial powers. One member of the Committee of Action—an MLA—who was present at Dhubri on the day, asserts that there was no meeting of the Committee of Action at Dhubri. The President convened a meeting of the Working Committee of the Provincial Muslim League to be held at Nowgong on the 9th March 1947. Three MLAs out of twelve members of the Parliamentary Party, who are members of the Working Committee, attended this meeting at Nowgong on the 9th, where a Civil Disobedience Movement for Assam to be launched by the Muslim League was decided upon. On 10th March, the President, Maulana Abdul Hamid Khan, started civil disobedience at Tezpur on successive dates.

Thus it will be apparent that the Working Committee declared civil disobedience on the 9th of March, without taking any steps to prepare the country for such a move. They took no approval of their scheme from the Central Committee of Action, as is necessary under the Muslim League Constitution. The Civil Disobedience Movement, thus launched, was against the eviction policy of the Congress Government which they have adopted since February 1946.
The Parliamentary Party, consisting of 31 Muslim League MLAs, was ordered by the Working Committee to abstain from the session of the Assembly, although they had no powers to dictate to the Parliamentary Group. To preserve the unity of the Muslim League, the Parliamentary Party acted as directed by the Working Committee and withdrew from the Assembly session. We sent representatives at Delhi to place the situation in Assam before the Central Committee of Action which deputed Chaudhry Khaliq-uz-Zaman to Assam. The resolution adopted by the Working Committee of the Provincial Muslim League at the instance of Chaudhry Khaliq-uz-Zaman may have been shown to you by your Secretary as it appeared in the press. For the prestige of the Muslim League organization, and as we are presented with a fait accompli by the President of the Provincial Muslim League, we are forced to adopt the resolution of the Civil Disobedience Movement.

Ever since the 30th of March, my co-workers have been doing their level best to organize the people for launching the Movement vigorously when the approval of the Central Committee of Action will be obtained. But up till now, excepting in two areas, the response has been poor. There is absolutely no fund even for the travelling expenses of the co-workers, not to speak of any relief to sufferers from the Movement. I have borrowed Rs 2,000 from a certain fund to carry on. It was out in the Press that Bengal is raising a lac of rupees to help us and we have also appealed to the All India Muslim League to help us with a lac of rupees. Up till now, in spite of promises of help by the Acting Secretary of the Bengal Provincial Muslim League, who accompanied Chaudhry Khaliq-uz-Zaman to Shillong, not a single farthing has been received by me so far from this source. I know that a draft for Rs1,000 was sent by the Bengal Treasurer in the name of our General Secretary at Gauhati. But I do not know what will be the fate of that draft as the General Secretary has already been detained by the Government for violating Section 144 at Dhubri. The Muslims are not at all prepared to launch a big Civil Disobedience Movement; they are disorganized and, as I stated, for want of funds, workers in sufficient numbers could not be sent to different areas to rouse the people.

The Congress Premier and myself met on the 3rd of April to negotiate a peaceful settlement, but up till now nothing concrete has emerged which I can place before you. The entire Assam Valley Hindus, Tribal people and also the Tea Garden labourers are dead set against the Muslim immigrants from Bengal. We can expect no help, no sympathy from them in the Assam Valley in our Civil Disobedience Movement, and we are in a minority in the Assam Valley. Please, therefore, give your best thoughts to the situation in Assam and guide the Committee of Action, who are meeting at your place on the 20th April, and give me directions [about] what to do. If a vigorous Civil Disobedience Movement is to be carried on, it will surely mean much loss of innocent lives and destruction of property. It is a moot point whether by launching such a movement we can dislodge the present Ministry with our 31 Muslim League Members in a House of 108—and yet ‘Down with the Ministry’ is the slogan of this Movement.

The Congress Government has raised the false cry that the Movement is specially designed to bring Assam into the Pakistan Zone. The varied geographical position of Assam will compel her ultimately to align herself with Bengal, for Assam has got no outlet to the outside world except through Bengal and an alienated Bengal can use the stranglehold on the economic life of Assam. Our chief export is 400 million pounds of tea, which must be exported through Calcutta or Chittagong port, and Assam is dependent, except for rice, for every article of daily diet, like salt, sugar, dal, wheat products, and other things, on other parts of India and these articles must be moved through Bengal to reach Assam. In the future Constitution of India, if Assam becomes an independent State or a part of Hindustan while Bengal enjoys [joins] Pakistan, Bengal will have the whip-hand over Assam to make Assam ask for grouping with Bengal. Therefore, in my opinion, it is immaterial if Assam, under her present masters, proves intransigent and refuses to join the grouping. The Muslim League need not, on the score of Assam alone, object to sit in the Constituent Assembly.

As the letter has become inordinately long, I will close here; but I have instructed Mr Abdul Matin to give all further materials about Assam’s present and future position verbally to you.

With best regards and sincerest wishes,

Yours fraternally,

SYED M. SA’ADULLAH

13. ‘Assam Govt’s Eviction Policy Condemned’

Extract from a Report from Dawn, 17 April 1947.

‘I have noticed that some newspapers are trying to paint the democratic, non-violent and non-communal movement launched by the Muslim League in Assam as a communal one’, says Mr Mohd Habibullah Bahar, MLA, Acting Secretary, Bengal Provincial Muslim League in a statement issued from Delhi.

‘They are also characterizing this movement’, he continues, ‘as an ‘invasion’—a veritable ‘blitz killing’ set afoot by Muslim League for the swift conquest of Assam. This I must hasten to clarify, is far from truth. It is not a movement directed against a particular community or a province. It is a life-and-death struggle of the ‘have nots’ against the human vampires who are sucking their life-blood.

Moreover, the resolution of the Assam Provincial Muslim League Working Committee which has called upon the people of the Province irrespective of religion, caste and creed to support this just movement of the hungry millions, gives the lie direct to the malicious propaganda of some newspapers....

SUPPRESSIVE POLICY

In several districts of Assam not only Bengal Muslims but Hindus of Surma Valley also are not permitted to take possession of land. In Assam Valley Bengali language is being suppressed. It is interesting to find that the tea-garden labourers from CP, Europeans and Nepalis are allowed to settle down everywhere in Assam while on the other hand even the ‘protected immigrants’ who came long before 1938 are forcibly being evicted.

In Assam today 15 lakhs of tribal people, 18 lakhs of tea-garden labourers, 2 lakhs of Manipuris, 6 lakhs of Scheduled Caste Hindus, several lakhs of Koches and many of the Surma Valley Hindus have raised their voice against this hated ‘jungle law’ which has been forced upon the people of Assam by a vicious coterie headed by Mr Gopinath Bardoloi.

I warn Mr Bardoloi for the last time that this terrorism will lead him nowhere but to self destruction. It will plunge Assam into turmoil and turbulation indescribable. If he does not change his present policy, I am sure he and his gang will go down to shame amid the curses of nations.

Lastly, I send my hearty congratulations to the brave immigrants and hungry ‘have nots’ who have stood in such a supreme crisis like a solid rock against which the angry waves of Bardoloi tyranny are beating recklessly in vain. I do not believe, even for a moment that the might of Assam will prove to be long and interminable. Surely, the sun will rise again. It will herald a new and golden morn. Its crimson rays will touch with all tenderness the graves of those who died for such a noble and righteous cause.

The Bengal immigrants and Assamese ‘have-nots’ shall win in this present struggle because their cause is just...

14. Case of Mizo People for Self-determination

Extract from a Memorandum Prepared by the Mizo Union, 22 April 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 130, Installment II to IV, NMML.

Prepared by the MIZO UNION, which has 20,000 enlisted full members and 80,000 associated members. Thus the total members comes to 100,000—which can well represents [sic] the entire Mizo people.

Aijal,
North Lushai Hills,
ASSAM.

PRINTED AT THE LOCH PRINTING PRESS—AIJAL.

MIZO MEMORANDUM

Memorandum of the case of the Mizo people for the rights of territorial unity and solidarity and self-determination within the Province of Assam in free India submitted to His Majesty’s Government and The Government of India and its Constituent Assembly through the Advisory Sub-Committee for Assam partially Excluded Areas and Excluded Areas.

Pursuant to the Resolutions passed by the General Assembly of the Mizo Union at Aijal in September 1946, subsequently supported by the Mizo Conference at Lakhipur (Cachar) in November 1946, this Memorandum prepared by the Mizo Union and supported by the Mizos outside the Lushai Hills District, represents the desire and wishes of the entire Mizo people of the Lushai Hills, Manipur State, Cachar, Tripura State and the Chittagong Hill Tracts, and others.

The Memorandum seeks to present the case of the Mizo people for territorial unity and integrity of the whole Mizo population and full self-determination within the Province of Assam, for the realization of which an appeal is made to His Majesty’s Government the Government of India and its Constituent Assembly to make a special financial provision from year to year for a period of ten years or until such time as the Mizos shall assert that they can maintain their self-determination without this financial provision.

The People and the Land

The Mizos are a numerous family of tribes closely knit together by common tradition, customs, culture, mode of living, language and rites. They are spread over a wide area extending far beyond into the Manipur State, Cachar, Tripura State, Chittagong Hill Tracts and Burma, but, contiguous with the boundaries of the present Lushai Hills District which was curved out arbitrarily for administrative purposes.

The Mizo people have been known under different names. They were first wrongly identified as KUKIS during the time of Lord Warren Hastings when a Raja of Chittagong sought the help of the British against the so called Kuki raiders; and it continued to be applied to the whole group until 1871. When it was supplanted by the term LUSHAI as a result of the active and prominent part taken by the LUSEIS, a sub-tribe of the Mizo race—against the British Expedition known as the First Lushai Expedition. The present Lushai Hills District was thus carved out of the entire Mizo land for administrative convenience and the Mizo people living within the district came to be known as the Lushais while the other Mizos, left out of the Lushai Hills District and annexed to the surrounding districts, continued to be known as Kukis without their consent. However, the solidarity of the Mizo people as a race and a distinct block is testified by the names of places, mountains and ranges in the Lushai Hills, Cachar, Manipur, Tripura, Chittagong Hill Tracts and Burma, known and called after the names of the several sub-tribes of the MIZO race originally occupying them. Shakespear, Stevenson, Liangkhaia, Shaw, Kingdon-ward and Kim of the Statesman are some of the authorities on this.

The MIZOs have nothing in common with the plains nor with the Nagas or Manipuris or others. They are a distinct block. The area now under their occupation are mostly hilly except the eastern portion of Cachar District extending to BarailRange in the North Cachar Hills. Wherever they go and wherever they are, they carry with them their primitive customs, culture and mode of living in its purest origin, always calling and identifying themselves as MIZOs....

The Mizo Population

(a) The Mizo people in the Lushai Hills alone number 146,900, with an area of 8,143 sq. miles according to the census of 1941.
(b) The Mizo population of the Manipur State continuous to the Lushai Hills again comes to about 70,000, with an area of about 3,500 sq. miles.
(c) The Mizos in the Cachar district contiguous to the Lushai Hills number about 9,000, with an area of about 300 sq. miles.
(d) In Tripura State contiguous to the Lushai Hills, the Mizos again number approximately 7,500, with an area of about 250 sq. miles.
(e) In the Chittagong Hill Tracts, also contiguous to the Lushai Hills the Mizo population is generally approximated to be about 5,000 with an area of about 300 sq. miles.
(f) In the Chin Hills (Burma) also contiguous to the Lushai Hills, who are now commonly known and termed with the Chins, number not less than 90,000, with an area of about 3,500 sq. miles occupied by them.

The total Mizo population of the contiguous areas alone thus comes to roughly 328,400 and the areas about 15,993 sq. miles.

It is a great injustice that the Mizos having one and the same culture, speaking one and the same language, professing one and the same religion, and knit together by common customs and traditions should have been called and known by different names, and thrown among different peoples with their homeland sliced out and given to others.

The whole contiguous of the Mizo population, as detailed above, occupies the middle and most important portion of India’s eastern frontier. It is therefore the more imperative that His Majesty’s Government, the Government of India and its Constituent Assembly should do the just and proper thing and grant the Mizo their just demand for territorial unity and solidarity....
The Present General Condition of the Country

As stated in the foregoing paragraphs, the Mizo areas are mostly Excluded. The Political Officer is supreme in every respect. The education is mostly carried on by Christian Missionary groups. The general communication of the country is extremely poor. The land is extremely hilly without good roads; and the people poor and simple, primitive and divided into tribes and clans. The higher education is mostly derived from outside the district, but, inspite of this lack of educational and technical training facilities the mass literacy of the Mizo people is highest in Assam. The people are mostly intelligent and as such given equal terms they always outshine their fellow workers of other communities in the field and at home. They are born strategists. Their greatest shortcomings is lack of finance as a result of long neglect on the part of the British in respect of their trade and commerce and limited scope open for them. Their areas stretch from north to south parallel with the Burma border line for over 200 miles. In fact, it presents the most important strategic point for defence along the eastern border of India.

This being the background, it is all the more imperative that the Mizoram be given Special Financial Provision by the Centre from year to year while allowing them their territorial integrity as anything short of this will be detrimental to their upbringing. In other words, the Centre shall grant Special Financial Provision from year to year for the purpose of development of the country while the district shall join autonomous Assam through Legislature with adequate representation, and be also eligible to the Provincial Services with due reservations, at the same time retaining her territorial integrity and self determination; as otherwise thrown among forty crores of Indians the 328,400 Mizos with their unique system of life will be wiped out of existence.

Our Case

In the light of the facts stated in the foregoing paragraphs and in view of the geographical position and the strategical importance of the Mizoram for the defence of India and taking into consideration the unique characteristics of Mizo polity and the compact block of Mizo land—This Memorandum is placed with the Authorities for:

(1) Territorial Unity and Solidarity of the whole Mizo population to be known henceforth as Mizo and Mizoram for Lushai and Lushai Hills district, retaining the sole proprietary rights over the land.

(2) Full self-determination within the Province of Assam.
   (a) With a National Council having the supreme legislative authority and executive body and a Judiciary within the district, the composition and functions of which will be prescribed by rules.
   (b) Any concurrent subjects in which the district may be connected with the Autonomous Province of Assam or India as a whole shall be by negotiations with the National Council which will be set up according to the wishes of the General public; any legislation may be applied to the district only with the sanction of the National Council with any modification.

(3) Special financial provision by the centre from year to year until such time as the Mizos shall assert that they are able to maintain their territorial integrity and self-determination without this financial provision.
PHOTOGRAPHS AND FRONTIERS

PLATE II: Illustration of the Mizo border with India and Myanmar.

PLATE III: Map showing the territorial claims of the Mizo Union.

PLATE IV: Aerial view of Aijal, the capital of the Mizo Union.

1062  Towards Freedom: 1947

ALL THE ABOVE ITEMS SHALL BE SUBJECT TO REVISION ACCORDING TO THE FUTURE TRENDS OF EVENTS EVEN TO THE EXTENT OF SECEding AFTER TEN YEARS.

For this end it is to be understood that the democratic system of Government in its purest form shall at the very outset be introduced.

Passed and approved by the Mizo Union Representatives Conference at Aijal, Lushai Hills, Assam, on 22.4.1947.

Khawtinkhumma MA
President
Vanthuama
General Secretary
The Mizo Union
Aijal, Lushai Hills

15. ‘Bardoloi Greeted with Black Flags in Silchar’
Dawn, 23 April 1947.

SHILLONG, Tuesday.—MR GOPINATH BARDOLOI, Premier of Assam was again greeted today with black flags and anti-Ministry slogans at Silchar on his way back from Aijal. Four Muslim League workers including Messrs Ghulam Jeelany, Chowdhury Abdul Ahad, Salar-e-Zila, Muslim National Guards, were arrested in this connection. According to the statement of Mr Mukabbir Ali Majumdar, MLA, the arrested Muslims were assaulted.

Soon after their arrest all Muslim shops were closed down and a huge procession of about 15,000 people, shouting ‘Down with Bardoloi Ministry’, ‘Down with Eviction Policy’ and ‘Long Live Muslim League’, paraded the town. The procession was followed by a mammoth public meeting.

It may be stated that Mr Bardoloi had to face similar demonstrations at Karimgunj on April 16. The biggest demonstration ever staged by Muslims of Karimgunj in connection with civil disobedience movement was on April 18. A procession of about 50,000 people was taken out. Sixteen of the demonstrators were arrested by the police.

MEETINGS AND PROCESSIONS

Meetings and processions were also held at Cachar on April 15. Mr Moinul Huq Chowdhury and Qazi Ibrahim Ali addressed the gathering. Some Jamiat quislings tried to create disturbance, but their attempts were not allowed to succeed due to remarkable discipline of the Musalmans.

At Hailakandi, Muslims took out a huge procession in defiance of Section 144 and held a meeting at which Mr Moinul Huq Chowdhury condemned the Congress Government for its tyrannical administration.

In all these places Mr Abdul Matlib Mazumder, a member of the Bardoloi Cabinet, had to pass through black flag demonstrations.

Mr Abdulla Nurul Huq, acting President, Provincial Muslim League, and Mr Abdul Hye, MLA, made whirlwind tours in some parts of Kamrup and Nowgong last week.

In an interview to the ‘Dawn’ correspondent they said that the League’s civil disobedience movement has spread into the remote villages of Assam.

The Police also raided the house of Mr P.M. Shahabuddin, Vice-President, North Sylhet District Muslim League at 3 o’clock this morning and took into custody his nephew Jan Mohammad Khan, an important League worker in Sylhet.
Five Muslim National Guards Messrs Abdul Hossain, Salar Zila, Abdul Manik Muhammad Mushabib, Abul Sayeed and Abdul Bari were also arrested. This morning the Committee of Action, Assam Provincial Muslim League met at Shillong and took stock of the latest position regarding the present civil disobedience movement.

It appointed Messrs Abdullah Nurulhuq, Abdul Hye and Syed Abdul Rauf to enquire into police firing at Govindapur that resulted in the death of 25 unarmed immigrants. Nineteen immigrant families were evicted from Gohain Gaon, ten miles from Jorhat town, without any notice on April 2nd according to a report reaching Provincial Muslim League Office.

16. Savarkar’s Stand on the Assam Situation

Telegram from V.D. Sarvarkar to Gopinath Bardoloi, 26 April 47
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, File No. 95, Part I, Installment II to IV, NMML.

Savarkar Sadan
Bombay 28

To
The Editor,

The following Telegram has been sent by Veer Savarkarji to the Hon’ble Mr Gopinath Bardoloi, Prime Minister, Government of Assam. Please publish the same in your paper and oblige.

Yours faithfully,
G.V. Damle,
Secretary

'Hindu Sanghathanists resent cowardly compromises with Aggressors, which cannot but breed further aggressions. Moslem trespassers old or new must be ejected to a man and no inch in Assam should be surrendered. It is by yielding inches in the past that the Hindus are challenged today to surrender the whole of Hindusthan. Hindus in Assam are sons of those sires, who beat back Aurangzebian armies. Are they to yield today to these League rabbles? Assam must continue as a valorous Hindu Province discharging its ancient mission in defending and extending the Eastern Frontiers of Akhand Hindusthan.'

Savarkar

17. Settlement of Immigrants in Tribal Areas of Assam

Letter from Gopinath Bardoloi to Vallabhbhai Patel, 27 April 1947

Constitution House
New Delhi

Respected Sardarji,

I enclose herewith a copy of my letter to Sir Akbar Hydari on his proposal for the settlement of immigrants and other people in the tribal areas in Assam on the north of the Brahmaputra. The reasons I have indicated in that letter will, I am sure, convince you that any action on that line at this present juncture is bound to be construed as an attempt on the part of the Government of India to convert Assam into a Pakistan and is bound to encourage the Muslim League to create more disorder and lawlessness in the province as a direct consequence of this action. Already the Muslim League has widely circulated that by the appointment of Sir Akbar Hydari the Government of India has allowed Assam to be converted into a Pakistan—a fact which possibly Sir Akbar Hydari does not know.

As a Member of the Interim Government, I earnestly appeal to you to kindly see that no reason whatsoever is given to encourage the forces of lawlessness and disorder in the province, which is already passing through a great ordeal.

Yours sincerely,
Gopinath Bardoloi

PS.
I am sending herewith a copy of the reply he sent immediately after the receipt of the letter.

ENCLOSURE

Constitution House
New Delhi
27 April 1947

My dear Sir Akbar,

Since after you had spoken to me [about] your plan regarding the settlement of immigrants and other people in the tribal areas, I had an opportunity of consulting two colleagues of mine—Honourable Mr B.K. Das and Honourable Rev Nichols-Roy on the subject, and they are equally emphatic that this will be the most unpopular and dangerous measure that you could adopt for the province. I am afraid you do not know the sentiments of the people of those areas. Even now they are contesting the rights of the British people to collect taxes from them, and often times [this resulted] in disputes between the Sikkim Government and the British Government. Any attempt at colonization of those areas during this period of transition will immediately be interpreted as an attempt at conquest, resulting in the creation of hostile elements where we should have nothing but goodwill for them.

Secondly, so far as the Ministry is concerned, with the threat of civil disobedience of the Muslim League, with the ultimate object of the Pakistanization of Assam, the Ministry will become extremely unpopular and lose its hold on the people altogether if the scheme is even contemplated to be put into action in the near future.

I therefore most earnestly request you to drop this idea for the present. We are really very much perturbed. We fear that even if a scent of this idea gets out the Muslim League will be strengthened in their attempt to create disorder in Assam by their civil disobedience which is already on.

I shall discuss this matter with Sardar Patel and Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru. If I find an opportunity I shall let you know.

Yours sincerely,
G.N. Bardoloi
18. ‘Assam League Backs Out’

The Hindustan Times, 28 April 1947.

The League.—Congress agreement over the eviction policy of the Assam Government has fallen through on account of Mr Saadulla’s failure to carry his party with him. The agreement, it is learnt, was in no sense a one-sided compromise.

The question of League agitation in Assam was considered at the recent Governors’ conference.

The Governor of Assam is reported to have conveyed to the Viceroy the desire of Mr Saadulla to get the whole question reopened. This Mr Saadulla considered necessary to save the League from the indignity of having to ask for a truce.

The Assam Government, true to its policy of arriving at an amicable settlement, gave the necessary handle to Mr Saadulla. At the intervention of Sir B.N. Mitter, the Assam Premier, Mr G.N. Bardoloi, agreed to discuss the question anew with Mr Saadulla. Both the agreement and the statement Mr Saadulla was to have issued after the terms of the agreement had been announced were drafted and fully approved by Mr Saadulla in the presence of Sir B.N. Mitter.

The agreement and the statement explicitly declared that the League would withdraw its civil disobedience movement unconditionally. The acts of violence indulged in by the League in Assam were openly denounced in both these documents. All along Mr Saadulla behaved as if he had the mandate of the party to carry on and conclude the negotiations. The Assam Government reaffirmed its previous offer to get individual cases examined by an impartial tribunal.

The failure of Mr Saadulla to get his party to ratify the agreement which was more or less drafted by him should logically result in his resignation from the leadership of the party.

Mr Bardoloi, it is learnt, has wired to the Assam Governor to permit him to release all relevant papers to the Press to show to the public that the responsibility for the rejection of the agreement lies with the Muslim League which has virtually disowned their leader.

19. Note on Muslim Majority Areas in Assam

Letter from Abdul Matin Chaudhury to K.H. Khurshid, 28 April 1947

KENCH’S TRACE, SHILLONG

My dear Mr Khurshid,

I promised to send an important Note about Assam with maps to Mr Jinnah. I am sending them herewith. Please hand over these to him.

Yours sincerely,

ABDUL MATIN CHAUDHURY

Enclosure

ABSOLUTE MUSLIM MAJORITY AREAS IN ASSAM

The areas in Assam, contiguous to Bengal, in which the Muslims form absolute majority over all the other communities combined, consist of two zones, (1) the Surma Valley Muslim Zone, and (2) the Assam Valley Muslim Zone.
SURMA VALLEY MUSLIM ZONE

The Surma Valley Muslim Zone comprises the entire district of Sylhet and the plains portion of the neighbouring district of Cachar. The district of Cachar consists of three sub-divisions, that is, Hailakandi, Silchar and North Cachar Hills. Hailakandi and Silchar sub-divisions are included in the plains portion of the district of Cachar. Population of this Zone is as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Population</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Muslims</td>
<td>21,24,635</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scheduled [Castes]</td>
<td>4,16,286</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other Hindus</td>
<td>9,53,736</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tea Garden Tribals</td>
<td>2,16,642</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>37,20,520</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The details of the above are as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SYLHET DISTRICT</th>
<th>Population</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Muslims</td>
<td>18,92,117</td>
<td>60.7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scheduled [Castes]</td>
<td>3,64,510</td>
<td>11.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other Hindus</td>
<td>7,85,004</td>
<td>25.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tea Garden Tribals</td>
<td>65,627</td>
<td>2.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>31,16,602</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>HAILAKANDI SUB-DIVISION</th>
<th>Population</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Muslims</td>
<td>85,963</td>
<td>51.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scheduled [Castes]</td>
<td>11,381</td>
<td>6.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other Hindus</td>
<td>37,787</td>
<td>22.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tea Garden Tribals</td>
<td>29,585</td>
<td>17.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>1,66,536</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>SILCHAR SUB-DIVISION</th>
<th>Population</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Muslims</td>
<td>1,46,555</td>
<td>30.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scheduled [Castes]</td>
<td>40,395</td>
<td>9.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other Hindus</td>
<td>1,30,447</td>
<td>29.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tea Garden [Tribals]</td>
<td>1,10,106</td>
<td>27.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>4,37,284</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>CACHAR PLAINS</th>
<th>Population</th>
<th>Percentage</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Muslims</td>
<td>2,32,528</td>
<td>38.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scheduled [Castes]</td>
<td>51,776</td>
<td>8.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Other Hindus</td>
<td>1,68,734</td>
<td>27.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tea Garden Tribals</td>
<td>1,39,691</td>
<td>23.1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Total</td>
<td>6,03,820</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
ASSAM VALLEY MUSLIM ZONE

The Assam Valley Muslim Majority Zone runs through Goalpara and Dhubri sub-divisions in Goalpara district into Barpeta sub-division in Kamrup district. It consists of (1) Mankachar, (2) South Salmara, (3) Lakhipur, (4) Dhubri, (5) Golakganj, (6) Bilashipara, (7) North Salmara Thanas (Police Stations) in Goalpara district (8) Sorbhog, (9) Barpeta and (10) Tarabari Thanas of Barpeta sub-division in Kamrup district. The population figures and percentages are given below:

ASSAM VALLEY MUSLIM MAJORITY ZONE

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Thana</th>
<th>Total</th>
<th>Muslims [Castes]</th>
<th>Scheduled Hindus</th>
<th>Caste</th>
<th>Tribals</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>(1) Mankachar</td>
<td>39,671</td>
<td>31,543</td>
<td>1,034</td>
<td>6,137</td>
<td>957</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(2) South Salmara</td>
<td>89,671</td>
<td>82,794</td>
<td>900</td>
<td>6,071</td>
<td>82</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(3) Lakhipur</td>
<td>81,391</td>
<td>56,467</td>
<td>192</td>
<td>13,951</td>
<td>10,781</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(4) Dhubri</td>
<td>94,146</td>
<td>61,469</td>
<td>2,571</td>
<td>25,593</td>
<td>4,513</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(5) Golakganj</td>
<td>85,464</td>
<td>37,396</td>
<td>1,425</td>
<td>45,609</td>
<td>1,057</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(6) Bilashipara</td>
<td>1,01,584</td>
<td>52,958</td>
<td>2,186</td>
<td>33,195</td>
<td>13,265</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(7) N. Salmara</td>
<td>1,06,463</td>
<td>52,262</td>
<td>6,851</td>
<td>49,613</td>
<td>137</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(8) Sorbhog</td>
<td>1,22,381</td>
<td>63,594</td>
<td>981</td>
<td>36,942</td>
<td>20,763</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(9) Barpeta</td>
<td>1,80,520</td>
<td>98,041</td>
<td>8,997</td>
<td>66,294</td>
<td>7,185</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(10) Tarabari</td>
<td>65,265</td>
<td>55,339</td>
<td>1,047</td>
<td>8,225</td>
<td>652</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Total 9,66,556 | 5,91,843 | 26,183 | 2,61,183 | 59,302 |

Percentage 100 | 61.2 | 2.7 | 29 | 6.1 |

[Note: The totals in the above tables are incorrect and have been given as in the original.]

DETAILS OF PERCENTAGES, THANA BY THANA

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Thana</th>
<th>Muslims [Castes]</th>
<th>Scheduled [Castes]</th>
<th>Other Hindus</th>
<th>Tribals</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>(1) Mankachar</td>
<td>79.5</td>
<td>2.6</td>
<td>15.4</td>
<td>2.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(2) South Salmara</td>
<td>92.3</td>
<td>1.0</td>
<td>6.7</td>
<td>0.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(3) Lakhipur</td>
<td>69.3</td>
<td>0.2</td>
<td>17.1</td>
<td>13.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(4) Dhubri</td>
<td>65.2</td>
<td>2.7</td>
<td>27.1</td>
<td>4.7</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(5) Golakganj</td>
<td>43.7</td>
<td>1.6</td>
<td>53.3</td>
<td>1.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(6) Bilashipara</td>
<td>52.1</td>
<td>2.1</td>
<td>32.6</td>
<td>13.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(7) N. Salmara</td>
<td>49.2</td>
<td>6.4</td>
<td>44.3</td>
<td>1.0</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(8) Sorbhog</td>
<td>51.9</td>
<td>0.8</td>
<td>33.1</td>
<td>16.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(9) Barpeta</td>
<td>54.3</td>
<td>4.9</td>
<td>36.7</td>
<td>3.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(10) Tarabari</td>
<td>84.7</td>
<td>1.6</td>
<td>12.6</td>
<td>0.9</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
DISTRICTS IN WHICH MUSLIMS, THOUGH NOT IN ABSOLUTE MAJORITY YET FORM THE SINGLE LARGEST GROUP

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>District</th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Scheduled [Castes]</th>
<th>Other Hindus</th>
<th>Tribals</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Goalpara</td>
<td>4,68,924</td>
<td>23,434</td>
<td>2,83,789</td>
<td>2,37,993</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cachar</td>
<td>2,32,950</td>
<td>51,961</td>
<td>1,73,855</td>
<td>1,78,264</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nowgong</td>
<td>2,50,113</td>
<td>59,214</td>
<td>2,29,137</td>
<td>1,66,525</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

PerCentages

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>District</th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Scheduled [Castes]</th>
<th>Other Hindus</th>
<th>Tribals</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Goalpara</td>
<td>46.2</td>
<td>2.3</td>
<td>27.9</td>
<td>23.4</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Cachar</td>
<td>36.3</td>
<td>8.1</td>
<td>27.1</td>
<td>27.8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nowgong</td>
<td>35.1</td>
<td>8.3</td>
<td>32.2</td>
<td>23.4</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

SUB-DIVISIONS IN WHICH MUSLIMS FORM THE LARGEST GROUP

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Sub-division</th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Scheduled [Castes]</th>
<th>Other Hindus</th>
<th>Tribals</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dhubri (Goalpara Dist)</td>
<td>3, 37,072</td>
<td>8,995</td>
<td>1,94,322</td>
<td>1,75,475</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Goalpara (Goalpara Dist)</td>
<td>1,32,852</td>
<td>14,379</td>
<td>88,467</td>
<td>55,322</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barpeta (Kamrup Dist)</td>
<td>2,22,774</td>
<td>11,803</td>
<td>1,74,127</td>
<td>45,339</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Silchar (Cachar Dist)</td>
<td>1,46,555</td>
<td>40,395</td>
<td>1,30,947</td>
<td>1,10,106</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

PerCentages

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Sub-division</th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Scheduled [Castes]</th>
<th>Other Hindus</th>
<th>Tribals</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Dhubri</td>
<td>47.00</td>
<td>1.20</td>
<td>27.10</td>
<td>24.50</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Goalpara</td>
<td>46.20</td>
<td>2.30</td>
<td>27.90</td>
<td>23.40</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Barpeta</td>
<td>49.49</td>
<td>2.50</td>
<td>38.30</td>
<td>09.90</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Silchar</td>
<td>30.90</td>
<td>9.00</td>
<td>29.90</td>
<td>27.00</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

POSITION OF HILL DISTRICTS IN ASSAM

The position of the four Hill districts of Khasi and Jaintia Hills, Garo Hills, Naga Hills and Lushai Hills demands closer scrutiny. In these districts Hindus, including Scheduled Castes, are from 1.6 to 10 per cent only, the Hill tribals forming the overwhelming proportion of the population, as the following statistics will show:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Area</th>
<th>Hindus</th>
<th>%</th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>%</th>
<th>Tribals</th>
<th>%</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Khasi &amp; Jaintia Hills</td>
<td>12,739</td>
<td>10.7</td>
<td>1,555</td>
<td>1.3</td>
<td>1,03,567</td>
<td>87.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Garo Hills</td>
<td>14,307</td>
<td>6.7</td>
<td>10,398</td>
<td>4.6</td>
<td>1,98,474</td>
<td>88.2</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Naga Hills</td>
<td>4,198</td>
<td>2.2</td>
<td>531</td>
<td>0.2</td>
<td>1,84,766</td>
<td>97.3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Lushai Hills</td>
<td>2,447</td>
<td>1.6</td>
<td>101</td>
<td>0.6</td>
<td>1,47,042</td>
<td>96.7</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Obviously with [only] 2–10 per cent [of the total] population in the Hill districts, the Hindus have no right to claim domination over the Hill tribes of these four Hill districts forming 87 to 97 per cent of the population.

On the other hand, Muslim Zones have a greater claim to these Hill districts on the grounds of contiguity, commercial intercourse and strategic defence.

Lushai Hills have no physical contiguity with the remnant [sic for rest of] Assam. Access to Lushai Hills can only be through Pakistan Zones in Bengal and Assam. As the last War has shown, Lushai Hills and Naga Hills are a necessity to the Pakistan Zone for its strategic defence. Garo Hills are surrounded practically on three sides by overwhelming Muslim Zones.
in Bengal and Assam, its main outlets to outside world lie through the predominantly Muslim areas in Bengal and Assam. Khasi and Jaintia Hills have close historical association with the predominantly Muslim district of Sylhet, the plain portion of the ancient Kingdom of Jaintia forming even today a part of Sylhet district.

20. 'Assam Government Not in Mood to Settle with League'

_Dawn_, 29 April 1947.

SHILLONG, Monday.—_INDISCRIMINATE_ arrests including that of a member of the League Committee of Action, unjust police firings over peaceful demonstrators, even during days of negotiations which clearly reveal that there was ‘no change of heart on the part of the party in power’, dashed to ground all hopes of settlement with the Congress Government, says a resolution adopted by the Committee of Action, Assam Provincial Muslim League over three-day talks between the Congress Government and the Muslim League initiated by Sir B.N. Rau, Constitutional Adviser, Government of India.

Syed Mohammad Saadulla, Chairman, Committee of Action, deeply regretted in a chat with the pressmen that the talks should have fallen through.

He also revealed that the terms of the settlement offered by the Ministry fell, according to the majority of the Members of the Committee of Action, much short of an honourable compromise.

Syed Saadulla deplored the most thoughtless police outrages despite his request to the Government not to prejudice the prospect of settlement by doing anything provocative to Muslims.

He also expressed concerns over the reported Government instructions to the district officers ‘to shoot to kill’ League demonstrators.

Asked whether there was still any room for settlement, Syed Saadulla replied in affirmative but added that in the absence of Mr Gopinath Bardoloi, the Chief Minister, further talks would be useless.

He disclosed that he would undertake extensive tour ‘to pacify the people’ so that nothing untoward happened.

RESOLUTION

The text of the resolution adopted by the Committee of Action last night, has been released by its Chairman, Mr Muhammad Saadullah.

The resolution is as follows: ‘The Committee of Action after hearing their Chairman, the acting Presidency [sic], Vice-President and the acting General Secretary of the Assam President, Vice-President and the trend of talks they had with the representatives of the Ministry and the negotiations that were carried out came to the conclusion that it did not reveal a change of heart of the party in power inasmuch as that even during the two days of negotiation at Shillong, a member of the Committee of Action was arrested at Silchar and police firing was resorted to without the slightest justification, causing the deaths of innocent and unarmed peaceful demonstrators at Mankachar and Sylhet, apart from the heavy number of injured and they have been reluctantly compelled to inform the Government that there is no point in carrying on negotiation’.
An API message adds:

Questioned whether there was any room for further negotiation, Mr Saadulla replied: ‘The Muslim League is not unwilling to come to an honourable compromise, but according to the majority of members of the Committee of Action, the terms of settlement offered by the Ministry do not constitute either a suitable or an honourable settlement’.

Giving the background of the negotiations, Mr Saadulla paid a tribute to the efforts of Sir B.N. Rao to effect a settlement, but regretted that they had failed.

He regretted that the Premier was absent and there was little prospect of resumption of further talks, if any, till he returned to the headquarters on May 10.

Meantime, he did not know what would happen to Assam as the situation had definitely deteriorated due to what he called ‘provocation to peaceful demonstrators’.

Mr Bishnu Ram Medhi, Revenue Minister, who is now in charge of the Home Department has issued the following statement to the resolution adopted last night by the Committee of Action, Assam Provincial Muslim League:

I have received a letter from Mr Mohammad Saadulla today at 10:30 a.m. forwarding the resolution of the Committee of Action, Assam Muslim League. It is regrettable that he could not persuade the members of the Committee of Action to take a reasonable attitude and abandon the present civil disobedience movement which has already degenerated into an out-burst of violence for which many reasonable persons have already expressed regret and alarm.—API

21. Impact of Bengal Partition on Assam

Extract from Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Gopinath Bardoloi, 1 May 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 18, NMML.

I sat next to Mr Bardoloi at luncheon on 1st May. He told me that Assam would make no difficulties about the partition of Sylhet, since the general view was that they belonged to Bengal, and would be no loss to the rest of the Province. The only people who might kick up a fuss would be the 40 per cent Muslim minority in the Sylhet district.

I asked him what solution he would prefer for Bengal, from the point of view of Assam. He replied that he would like Bengal to remain unified and join Hindustan, since this would give Assam the very best access to the rest of Hindustan.

If Bengal remained unified and joined Pakistan, it would virtually strangle Assam. If Bengal remained unified and independent they would have to negotiate access through Bengal, but it would not be so difficult as if Bengal had joined Pakistan.

If they had partition he expected to get access to Hindustan through Cooch Behar and Jalpaiguri.

He shared with me the regret that Sir B.N. Rau had failed in his attempt to reach a settlement in Assam recently and attributed this to the shooting that had taken place during his mediation.
22. Report from Assam Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Assam for the Second Half of April 1947, 3 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

1. Political.—The result of the demonstration march through Goalpara district has been variously interpreted but there has certainly been a waning of activity, and some reported reaction among Assam Muslims on the South Bank against the Disobedience campaign. An unfortunate incident took place on the 22nd April at Mankachar; some Assam Riflemen were trying to make purchases in the bazaar, while Muslim League National Guards attended the bazaar in numbers to enforce a boycott of the Assam Rifles enjoined by Maulavi Abul Kasem, MLA. A sepoy was jostled by a National Guard who after an altercation wrestled with him for his rifle, and was struck by another rifleman. The sepoys then concentrated and attempted to leave the bazaar, but were followed and stoned by a growing crowd which eventually endeavoured to surround them near the entrance to their camp close by the police station. A brick hit a Rifleman and knocked him down whereupon some shots were fired in the air to warm off the mob while he was being rescued, but this proving ineffective further firing took place at the crowd which resulted in the death of two persons and a number of injuries, though most of the latter appeared to have been caused by the stampede itself. There is some reason to believe that an inhabitant fired a shot gun in the excitement, as one man appears to have been injured by pellets. Altogether 27 rounds were fired by the sepoys. Attempts have since been made to rally more sober elements among the Muslim community with some success. It has apparently been decided not after all to shift bazaar to the ‘Pakistan Kila’ and there has been talk on the part of Maulavi Abul Kasem of his surrender and that of other wanted leaders. On the other hand, Khan Bahadur Abdul Latiff, MBE, who has considerable local influence, is reported to be considering the demand that he should join the League....

Elsewhere in the Assam Valley, the Disobedience movement has languished. At the close of the previous fortnight an attempt to hoist the League flag at Talasbari in Barpeta was made but frustrated. In Darrang the action taken by way of detaining or restricting individuals may have partly disrupted the movement, though it is said that the determination of encroachers to resist eviction is maintained. So far the total number of orders of detention issued is 64 and the number restricted in movement from 20. It would appear that many orders served in Darrang have not been executed, the subjects having gone to ground. Proposals are being considered to deprive active resisters of licenses and permits issued by the Supply organization but where the League is powerful, other dealers are not always available to take their place owing to fear of victimization. The calling in of licensed weapons is likely to prove more effective....

2. Communal.—There has been little disturbance of a definitely communal nature, but rumour on several occasions succeeded in developing a marked degree of panic. At Samaguri in Nowgong a story of alleged arson led to the despatch of an armed party to deal with the reported breach of the peace, but the news was found to be false. At Bhowanipur in Kamrup the sounds made during a religious festival in a Hindu village led to an assembly of people in a neighbouring Muslim immigrant quarter who apprehended attack. When the latter gathered in their turn the Hindus assumed that the attack would come from the immigrants and put themselves in a state of defence: both parties thus remained until 3 a.m. when an armed party arrived from the Police Station, having been informed by messenger of the excitement. At
Towards Freedom: 1947

Rupahihat in Nowgong apprehension of trouble led the shop-keepers to ask for an armed guard. This was deputed but owing to increased apprehension caused by this very fact, the hat remained practically closed.

The Ahoms continued to criticize the eviction programme but illogically they indicate that when they are in a position to assert their will they will attempt to exclude all foreigners from upper Assam.

A curious incident in the movement for elevation of the depressed classes took place at Nowgong where sweepers visited all Hindu tea stalls of the town demanding tea to be served, but were refused. They left peacefully but threatened that they would have to take other steps....

4. Law and Order. — Meetings of a distinctly inflammatory nature have not been confined to the Muslim League. Jallianwala Bagh Day was widely celebrated. In a large procession in Nowgong held by Sikhs and Hindus on the 12th April, the birth day of the Sikh faith, swords were carried and guns were fired into the air. Much exception was taken to the martial speech of one Gurbachan Singh, who was indeed stopped in his more dangerous remarks by the President. At other meetings in this district, the villagers were exhorted to keep lathis, spears and knives in their houses ready for defence against attack by the Muslims.

The most notable thefts from ex-military stores reported in this period were of three trucks containing stolen pipes, electrical fans and other electrical machinery, a truck load of motor parts, eight outboard motors and two water pumping engines, all in Lakhimpur. ... Refugees from Noakhali and Tripura in Darrang district are most unwilling to return to their homes. So far only half have returned and the remainder judge from their letters that the conditions at home are so insecure that they dare not take the risk: they therefore appeal to the Assam Government to continue hospitality. Statements by Mahatmaji on this point have clearly strengthened their resolve to oppose repatriation....

23. ‘Assam Muslim Students Protest against Government Repression: May 7 to Be Observed as Martyrs’ Day’

GAUHATI, Thursday (delayed)

To mark their protest against the military and police firings on Muslim students and the arrest of the General Secretary of the AI Muslim Students’ Federation, the Working Committee of the Assam Muslim Students Federation has declared May 7 as Assam League Prisoners and Martyrs Day.

In pursuance to this declaration, Mr Hasmat Ali, General Secretary of the Assam Provincial Muslim Students Federation, has appealed to the Muslim students of Assam to observe the day by calling strikes and holding demonstrations and meetings.

The first meeting of the Working Committee of the Assam Muslim Students’ Federation was held here on Tuesday, Mr Imborah, Deputy President of the Assam Federation presiding. ...

Addressing the Working Committee, Mr Abdullah Nur-ul-Haq, Acting President of the Assam Provincial Muslim League, who was present there by special invitation appealed to the Muslim Students’ Federation for their full help and co-operation with the civil disobedience movement launched by the Assam League and added that the Provincial Muslim League would help the Muslim Students’ Federation in all possible ways.
He also advised them to unite and requested them to select two kinds of workers from among them, one of fighters and the other of non-fighters.

In the course of his speech, Mr Abdul Hai, MLA, Acting Secretary of the Assam Provincial Muslim League exhorted the audience to go to the interior to explain the civil disobedience movement to the Muslim villagers with a view to organize them. ‘The Muslim nation looks to you all to do your duty to your nation. Allah is with us and surely victory will be ours’, concluded Mr Abdul Hai.

Miss Asiya Khatoon of Gauhati addressing the members of the Working Committee said: ‘I appeal to all Muslim girl students wherever they may be to organize themselves and join hands with our brothers immediately. We cannot waste a single minute and we should prepare now to go ahead’.

Speaking next, Mr Hasmat Ali, General Secretary, Assam Provincial Muslim Students Federation, said that as soon as he assumed office, he was confronted with an important issue namely, the eviction policy of the Assam Congress Government. A resolution passed at the 6th annual session of the Assam Provincial Muslim Students’ Federation held at Sylhet on March 4 last, requested the Assam Muslim League to chalk out a definite programme against the eviction policy.

Just after the launching of the civil disobedience movement by the Assam Provincial Muslim League, I with some other workers toured several villages and organized and addressed many meetings with a view to explain to the villagers the objects of our movement.

‘In all places where eviction was going on, village markets observed complete hartal in response to the call of our workers. Several enthusiastic workers courted arrest in Golpara, Barpet and Surma Valley’.

‘In spite of the military which opened fire at some places, we called upon all branches of the Muslim Students’ Federation to plunge themselves into the civil disobedience movement, but insisted upon them to carry on only a non-communal campaign’.—OPI.

24. Nehru Comments on Assam Situation and Jinnah’s Attitude Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Akbar Hydari, 24 May 1947

Mussoorie

My dear Hydari,

I have just received your letter of the 18th May. I came up to Mussoorie four days ago to see my daughter Indira and for a brief respite. I am going down again tomorrow to Delhi. I expect the next few weeks will be pretty heavy. So I hasten to send you a brief reply from here before I get tied up again with other work.

2. I am not sufficiently conversant with the question of immigration into Assam to be able to say anything worthwhile. It seems to me, however, that the Assam problem is intimately tied up with the all-India problem. It was just possible for the Assam problem to be settled separately when Bardoloi and Saadullah came to some kind of agreement. That agreement having fallen through, I doubt very much if anything else can be done in the near future, except to hold off very serious developments.
3. As a matter of fact everything has been held up because of the political situation. This situation is bound to develop rapidly, for good or ill, during the next few weeks. That development will affect every part of India including Assam.

4. We have arrived at a stage when it is quite impossible to carry on in the way we have so far done. There must be a settlement, and if there is no settlement there must be some other way of ending this crisis. Jinnah's attitude, as ever, has been completely unhelpful. Even when he agrees to things in private, he dissents from the agreement in public. He will not commit himself to anything and wants other people to do so leaving him free to act as he chooses. We are up against something which is neither political nor economic nor reasonable nor logical. Fortunately we have arrived at a stage when we must put an end to this sorry business some way or other. What has been happening in Lahore recently has been pretty bad. It is always possible that this might spread. There is in fact no responsibility at the present moment anywhere. And so long as responsibility is not fixed on a strong authority, these problems will go on.

5. I certainly hope that the decision to post a brigade in Assam will not be reversed. If I can help you in any way in regard to this matter, I shall certainly do so. We must be prepared for all eventualities.

With all good wishes to you and Lady Hydari.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

B. NWFP

1. "You Must Be Prepared to Lay Down Your Life to Defend the Weak"—Qazi Attaullah's Appeal to Red Shirts

Peshawar, March 24.—Qazi Attaullah, Revenue Minister, Frontier Government addressed thousands of villagers at Rustam in Mardan District, and asked every able-bodied Pathan to support the Khudai Khidmatgar movement and put on red uniform and ceaselessly work for independence of their Pathan homeland during the critical period of transfer of power until June 1948. ‘Badshah Khan’s day and night efforts during the last quarter of a century,’ he said, ‘have at last borne fruit and that freedom, for which the Pathans have paid so heavy a price, is now in sight. A handful of privileged class people whose interests are linked with imperialist system are inciting and making brother fight against brother and creating civil war amongst Pathans. They are enemies of Islam and enemies of India and are playing traitors’ game. Our toleration towards League’s hooliganism has been taken as our weakness. You have to demonstrate your strength in such unmistakable manner that they realize that you are alive. In every town and in every village mobilize your full strength. Afford full protection to minorities and organize programme of meetings, demonstrations and marches from village to village. It will be a blot on the fair name of Islam and Pathans, if even a hair of non-Muslim is touched in your presence. You must be prepared to lay down your life to defend the weak and sacrifice your all for this noble cause.

‘We are being ruled’, he said ‘simply because we are disunited, India’s enemies are creating conditions in which slavery can flourish. The achievements of your sacrifices are in danger.
Arise and gird up your loins to defend it with all your might. There is not a minute to be lost. Give a crushing reply to the enemies of your freedom before it is too late.

After the meeting the huge gathering rushed towards Qazi Sahib and assured him of their steadfast loyalty to Khudai Khidmatgars’ organization. Some old comrades who were staying behind on personal grievances announced they would support and work ceaselessly from now onwards. Shrewd observers and independent elements, who know Pathans’ temperament prophesied that the whole countryside may go red before long.

2. Nehru Demands Caroe’s Resignation

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Olaf Caroe, 26 March 1947

Dear Sir Olaf,

Thank you for your letter of the 20th March. I did not go to the Frontier because Lord Wavell asked me not to go just then. I confess I was unhappy about this, and it seemed to me rather odd that I should be asked not to go even on a private and brief visit. I have not believed in the policy of shirking a problem or avoiding risk. I went to the Punjab and I think my visit did good.

Dr Khan Sahib has been here and we have had a number of talks. It is evident that the policy he intends to pursue is not in keeping with your policy. There is an inherent conflict between the two. Indeed I understand that you told him to resign and further said that he and his colleagues had made a mistake in aligning themselves with the Congress. This creates an impossible position at any time and more especially when the province has to face a difficult situation. Most of the officers in the NWFP will naturally follow your lead and this conflict between you and the Ministry will lead to a weakening and deterioration of the administration. We cannot afford to have this at this particular juncture.

My visit to the Frontier last year revealed to me this inherent conflict and I wrote to you at some length about it. Subsequent events have strengthened that conviction. The Governor and his chief officers seem to function more as allies of the opposition than of the Ministry. The reaction of this policy in the Tribal Areas has also been marked. The way the Pir of Manki has been allowed to have a free hand in preaching murder under the sheltering care of local officers is not the kind of thing one expects from an efficient and cooperative administration.

I have received numerous complaints about the rationing system in the Tribal Areas. These complaints resolve themselves in allegations of partiality and unfairness on the part of some of the officers concerned. In this respect also the Pir of Manki appears to be a favoured person. These are allegations which I cannot verify and have no means of verifying.

I have become convinced that the present set-up in the Frontier is unsatisfactory and is leading to trouble. In view of the rapid transition that is going to take place in India, it has become necessary to adapt ourselves immediately to these new conditions.

Some days before Lord Wavell’s departure I wrote to him on this subject. I did not want to trouble him on the eve of his departure, but I felt the urgency of the situation and was compelled by these circumstances to write to him. I pointed out to him that there was a complete absence of a common outlook between you and me, as well as between you and the Frontier Ministry.
In view of this, the only proper course appeared to be your resignation from the Governorship. I do not know if he communicated the contents of this letter to you.

I hope you will forgive me for the frankness with which I am writing to you. The issues before us are too serious for any trifling on our part. I have written more or less briefly and there is much else that I would have liked to put before you. But for the moment this must suffice.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

3. 'Frontier League Movement Enters Second Month: Tribute to Gallant Muslim Masses' Report from Pakistan Times, 27 March 1947

PESHAWAR, March 25.—'A full month of trials and tribulations for the Muslims of NWFP has passed and they have entered the second month of their brave fight with the Congress Government who have killed civil liberties in the Province and let loose a reign of terror in an all-out bid to crush the Muslim League,' says Mr Sher Bahadur Khan, Secretary, War Council, Provincial Muslim League, in a statement.

He adds: 'The struggle has been perfectly peaceful and non-communal throughout the Province except at Peshawar and some parts of Hazara, where it was marred by outbursts of violence as a result of firing by the military on the opening day of the Budget Session of the Frontier Legislative Assembly. While the War Council strongly disapproved the conduct of those who have indulged in acts of violence against their neighbours, it has nothing but admiration for the willing and ready response made to their (War Council's) appeals by the Muslim masses and the brave and courageous fight put up by them in every nook and corner of the Province.'

Mr Sher Bahadur continues: 'As we look back we find the path we have trodden strewn with corpses of gallant people who have fallen for the sacred cause of Islam and civil liberties. Let us pay our homage to the departed heroes by stepping into the breach ourselves and pledge not to retreat our steps until the goal is reached.'

MORE ARRESTS
Pakistan Day was observed throughout the Province with great enthusiasm. Reports of the meetings and the processions culminating in the arrests of a large number of Muslim Leaguers have been received from several places. Khan Mohd Ishaq Khan, the newly elected MLA, was arrested along with two volunteers for organizing a procession in Mardan.

At Abbottabad the Muslim League volunteers picketed the police station and police posts peacefully. No arrest was made.

A big procession was taken out at D.I. Khan and 56 persons offered themselves for arrest.

Meetings and processions were also organized at Bannu and Kohat. One hundred and thirty-eight Muslim workers were arrested temporarily at Bannu while no arrest was made at Kohat.—OPI.
4. ‘Frontier Repression’

1 April 1947

What transpired between Dr Khan Sahib and Pandit Nehru before the arrest of the Pir Sahib of Manki Sharif is not known, but popular opinion has it that Dr Khan Sahib must have obtained some assurance of support from the Central Government if things got too hot for him. They are hot enough as it is and the temperature is bound to shoot up as a result of Dr Khan’s latest indiscretion. The indefatigable Pir Sahib of Manki is reputed to be one of the most influential personalities in the land of the Pathans and his arrest will doubtless extend the arena of conflict between the Khan clique and the Frontier people. The conflict has been confined so far to the towns and villages of ‘settled districts’. It might easily extend now to the crags and gorges of the tribal belt. There is no doubt that the present League Movement in the Frontier Province owes a good deal of its dynamics to the personality of the Pir Sahib, and the Khanna–Khan combine must have staked heavily on the hope that his arrest will be something in the nature of a coup de grace. It will not be the first time that a tyrannical administration banking on ruthlessness and repression, to crush the will of the people, had failed. For what Khan Sahib and his colleagues are up against are not a few individuals but a whole people, and the arrest of popular leaders does not pacify but provokes them further. This very commonplace truth has been demonstrated so often in the last few years that no sane person will desire to contest it. We are yet a long way, however, from the age of reason and every administration, unless it is willing to abdicate when the people demand its abdication, continues to try out for itself the same weapons which they know have failed their sturdier predecessors. To add impertinence to injustice, Dr Khan Sahib continues to claim that he enjoys the confidence of the Pathans because he is still backed by a parliamentary majority. It is true that the weightage enjoyed by the Frontier minorities and the confusion and muddled thinking engendered by Congress propaganda and Congress friends at the time of elections did manage to beguile the Frontier people into putting the Khan clique into power but the confusion has since been laid to rest and the issues have become clearer. When the Pathans put Khan Sahib’s Ministry into power, they obviously made no allowance for the fact that the Ministry would be changed into a joint stock company and govern only for the benefit of its own share holders, that people’s food will be bartered for political support and the dictates of Wardha will have precedence over the wishes of the Pathans. Now that all these facts are before the people, they have challenged Khan Sahib to submit his Ministry to their revised verdict, and Dr Khan Sahib’s answer has been arrests, lathi-charges, bullets and tear-gas bombs. Even craven hearted and cowardly sections of the Indian people have stood up to these weapons with courage and it is inconceivable that the brave and freedom-loving Pathans will give in to them. The result, therefore, has been an unprecedented political upsurge among all sections of the Pathan people and purdah, have forsaken their age-old immobility to lead political processions. The tempo of the Movement is daily on the rise and as the arrest of the Pir Sahib of Manki shows, the Khan Government intends to match this by a corresponding increase in terror. The conversations with the Central Government might obtain for them a greater amount of powder and steel but nothing can procure for them Pathans’ goodwill or buy off the popular indignation against their corrupt and inept regime. The only wise and democratic course open to them is to submit to the will of the people and if they are not satisfied that the happenings of the last few weeks are a sufficient indication of this will, they can test its strength in fresh elections. At first sight the uphill path of reason may appear more unpleasant than the downward slope of folly but on second thought even the most headstrong adventurer can see that even though it is easier to slide down a slope it is also easier to break your neck.

5. ‘Lahore Muslim Women Take Part in Frontier Movement’
2 April 1947
Lahore Muslim women gave a lead to their menfolk during the weekend when a batch of four of them left Lahore for Peshawar to participate in the Pathan struggle for restoration of civil liberties. They included Begum Fatima, Miss Nasira Siddiqui, Begum Zubeida Shah and Begum Karim Dad. News of their safe arrival in Peshawar has been received here.
This batch of women will be followed by others. The Punjab Muslim League Women’s Committee, which has sponsored the present move to help actively our Pathan brethren, hopes to send jathas of Muslim women regularly.

6. ‘Political Prisoners in Kohat Break Doors of Barracks’
3 April 1947
PESHAWAR, April 1.—The NWFP Government issued the following communique last night: ‘In Kohat this morning about 59 under trial political prisoners broke the doors of their barracks and came out in the jail compound and began to damage jail property. The prisoners were relocked in their barracks.
‘Cases of incendiarism also occurred in Kohat City today. Some shops were burnt and ten looted. The Superintendent of Police was assaulted by a Muslim League worker near the jail gate. Detachments of police and troops are patrolling the town. A curfew has been imposed for one week from 7 p.m. to 6 a.m. and all public meetings and processions have been banned.
‘At Peshawar Jail this morning some of the political prisoners set fire to three tents and assaulted two convict warders who received injuries. Curfew in Peshawar City has been extended for one week.
‘Two live bombs were discovered today near Akora on the main railway line from Peshawar. The down Frontier Mail was consequently delayed. Last night ten bundles of luggage of Hindu passengers at Nowshera Railway Station were set on fire. A railway chowkidar is reported to have fired two shots but the culprits managed to escape.’—API.

7. Governor Considered Partial to the League
Extract from the Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten, M.K. Gandhi and Abdul Ghaffar Khan, 4 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.
The meeting lasted from 2.30 to 4.30 p.m.
Mr Gandhi brought with him as promised Abdul Ghaffar Khan. Lord Ismay attended the meeting.
Abdul Ghaffar Khan gave a very forthright denunciation of the Governor of the NWFP and all his officials, particularly the political officers dealing with the tribes.
He accused the Governor of being pro-Muslim League and of trying to make the task of the Government under his brother, Dr Khan Sahib, as difficult as possible. He said that the subordinate British officials of the ICS followed his example.

He stated that the tribes were completely under the control of the British political officers and invariably did what they said.

When challenged on this point by Lord Ismay, he quoted the case of the war. Once the political officers told the tribes that the British Empire was engaged in a life and death struggle, the tribes gave no more trouble whatsoever until they were informed that the British had won the war.

C.V.S. and I did our best to refute this theory. I reminded Abdul Ghaffar Khan of the tribes’ descent into Peshawar in 1930, which no amount of appeals by the political officers could prevent.

The fact remains that this remarkable old man is firmly convinced that Sir Olaf Caroe and all his officers are intensely pro-League and are doing their best to undermine the position of the Congress on the Frontier.

I asked Mr Gandhi for his views. He said he feared that there were many British members of the ICS, particularly among the highly placed ones, who could not bear to see the British leave India, and who had clung all along to the theory that if they could only support the Muslim League actively, to the point at which it could be held that the British could not leave India to civil war, then the British would be compelled to stay.

He pointed out that the views held by Mr Winston Churchill were so well known that had he been in power or had there been any chance of his returning to power, the line taken by all those ICS officials would have achieved its object.

Lord Ismay said that great as his affection was for his late chief, it was his opinion that if Mr Churchill now by some miracle returned to power, the pressure of public opinion in England would preclude his being able to reverse the present decision. Indeed, all the rest of the Conservative party agreed with the Labour Party’s policy, except for mention of the earlier date.

I asked Mr Gandhi for some more examples of biased [sic] officials. He said that although he did not know Sir Francis Mudie personally, all his friends in Sind told him that he was extremely pro-Muslim League and much too friendly with his Government.

I pointed out that he had previously agreed with Abdul Ghaffar Khan that Sir Olaf Caroe was insufficiently friendly with his Congress Government in the NWFP, and now he accused Sir Francis Mudie of being too friendly with the Muslim League Government in Sind.

Mr Gandhi replied that he did not wish Governors to be biased [sic] one way or the other; their friendliness with their Governments should be the impartial friendliness which a constitutional monarch should bestow upon any Government which came to power.

He advised me most strongly to get rid of any officials who could not be brought to see that they must remain impartial and helpful during the final stages....

8. ‘Kohat Muslim Women Demand Fresh Elections’

_Dawn, 5 April 1947._

Kohat, Friday.—A meeting of the Muslim women of Kohat was held here recently, with Begum Haji Zabardast Khan presiding.
The following resolutions were passed:

'The present Ministry has lost the confidence of the people and failed to maintain law and order. The meeting demands that fresh elections may be held in the Province and a new Government set up.

'All the League leaders workers and National Guards arrested should be released forthwith.

'The amount of punitive fine imposed and realized from the NWFP tribesmen should be returned to them without delay.

'The meeting demands that the Muslim women convert Aiysha Begum, who embraced Islam on her own free will may be handed over to Muslims at the earliest.

'The Red Shirts injured four children on March 27 by firing. The meeting demands that the culprits should be arrested and dealt with properly according to law.

'The arrest of Pir Saheb of Manki Sharif has greatly injured the feelings of the Muslims; especially the lacs of his disciples, the meeting demands that he should be released forthwith unconditionally and peace restored in the Province'.

9. Chief Secretary, NWFP Government, Gives His Assessment of the Political Situation

Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Lt Col D. de la Fargue, 11 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 191, NMML.

The meeting lasted from 12.45 to 1.45 p.m.

Lt-Col de la Fargue is Chief Secretary, NWFP Government. He stated that in his opinion a free clean election in the Frontier Province would be more likely to return Congress to power than the League. He said it would be necessary to go into Section 93, because if the party in power arranged the elections they would almost always be rigged unfairly. But even with a Section 93 Government, he thought that an election would return Congress to power.

He said that Abdul Ghaffar Khan was the most unpopular man on the Frontier, but that on the other hand his brother Dr Khan Sahib was absolutely first class, and all stories about his being neurotic and unbalanced were nonsense, and arose from his outbursts of ungovernable temper. He himself had even had to strike him once to bring him to his senses, after which they had been better friends than before.

I told him that though in normal times I would consider it highly reprehensible to discuss his Governor with him, I was sure Lord Ismay would agree that in this time of absolute crisis I must obtain a British opinion on Pandit Nehru’s shocking report on the Governor. Pandit Nehru had in fact asked for his removal and has spoken to me about it in no unmeasured terms.

Colonel de la Fargue very courageously replied that although the Governor was a man with great knowledge of the Frontier, he was in fact biased against his Congress Government, and had lost the confidence of all fair-minded people in the Province. He said that his continuation in office was in fact a menace to British prestige.
10. ‘Revulsion against League in NWFP’

Peshawar, April 9.—A feeling of revulsion against the pointless demonstrations by Muslim Leaguers seems to be overtaking Peshawar city where the normal life of 130,000 citizens has been upset by adherents of the League. It is likely that a deputation may wait upon the Ministry to express the determination of the citizens of Peshawar against toleration of continued interference in their normal life.

League demonstrations are dangerous because they are communal. People remain indoors. The poor labourer and middle class people are hard hit. Tongawalas, carpenters, masons, and other labourers are idle. A large number of non-Muslims have left Peshawar. Many streets bear a deserted appearance. Occupation of street vendors is gone. People have begun accusing the League for such a state of affairs and for depriving them of work and wages in these days of scarcity.

Selfless work done by the Khudai Khidmatgars during the disturbances stands in striking contrast to League activities. When minorities in Peshawar were overawed by hooligans, they left their homes in the villages, took up their residence outside the city and planted themselves in batches in various bazaars and mohallas so that terrorized people may move about freely. They escorted people from their homes to their offices and back. For 15 days, these noble bands of workers, drawn from surrounding villages, in red uniforms served as sentinels of peace and earned the gratitude of the minorities and approbation of all fair-minded Muslims.

‘Can the League claim any credit for the present agitation it is conducting in the Frontier Province. Will League leaders repudiate the actions of their volunteers in green uniforms indulging in outrageous-hooliganism’.

‘It is high time the Provincial Government takes adequate steps to fulfill its first duty of protecting life, even if it is necessary to ban the League organization in the province’, declared a prominent Congress man.

11. Situation of the NWFP Ministry

Extract from the Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten and Maulana Azad, 12 April 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

The interview lasted from 4.15 until 5.15 p.m....

He next raised the question of the frontier. He pointed out that in the NWFP there had always been a system of diarchy, and that the Government [Governor] had a responsibility both for the Provincial Government, and for the Political Department for the tribes. In 1938 the Congress Ministry felt the difficulty of this position, and had complained bitterly. Last year after the elections Maulana Azad went to Peshawar, and found that the Congress members, who had won the election, did not want to form a Ministry until they could be assured of the attitude of the new Governor, and the Political Department. He therefore went to see Lord Wavell, who said that Dr Khan Sahib need have no apprehensions for Lord Waved intended to give the new Governor instructions which would ensure his working in well with the Congress Ministry. Lord Wavell, at Maulana Azad’s request, went so far as to write him a letter giving him this assurance, a copy of which Maulana Azad says he will send me. Maluana Azad then went to Peshawar and recommended Dr Khan Sahib to form a Ministry.
No sooner had Sir Olaf Caroe arrived than he made it quite clear that he was violently anti-Congress and pro-League. It was not only a question that he failed to give the full cooperation that Lord Wavell promised, but that he did not bother to conceal his deliberate hostility. Maulana Azad said that he had come to the painful conclusion that it was difficult, if not impossible, for the Congress Ministry to continue to co-operate with the Governor.

I told him that I had had similar reports from Pandit Nehru, Mr Gandhi and Abdul Ghaffar Khan, and that I recognized that this was now acknowledged to be the Congress point of view. I had only been here three weeks and one hour, during which time I have been fully occupied on what I regarded as my first priority, an over-all solution for India. I should continue to treat that as my first priority, and I could not guarantee to devote any time to the Frontier at present. Furthermore, as soon as a decision could be announced, I considered that it would probably be necessary to go into Section 93 in the NWFP, and to hold a new election. After that I would be quite prepared to consider whether the present Governor should continue. I pointed out that Lord Wavell had warned me of these attacks against the Governor, and had recommended me to take no precipitate action. Maulana Azad regretted that I felt it necessary to order fresh elections in the NWFP, since he pointed out that very fair elections had been held only a year ago, and that beyond some propaganda by the League in the urban areas, nothing had happened to change the situation. In fact he thought that Congress would be re-elected.

I told him that Pandit Nehru had thought that Congress might not be re-elected, since the frontier people were always ‘against the Government’. Maulana Azad asked me whether I would be prepared to hold elections in other Provinces, and I replied ‘No, not unless it could be proved to me that they were necessary’. He then asked me why I considered an election necessary in the NWFP, and I replied that in all other Provinces the separate electorates enable one to forecast, with considerable accuracy, the results of elections as between the League and Congress, since all Muslims voted for the League. In the NWFP, however, the election was largely an issue between the Congress Muslims and the League Muslims, and of course there was no separate electorate in this case. I said that the results would clearly show whether the inhabitants wanted a League or a Congress Government.

Maulana Azad said that if I was determined to hold an election, he presumed it would only be if I gave a decision in favour of Pakistan, since if the Cabinet Mission plan were accepted he assumed a Coalition Government would be formed in most Provinces, including the NWFP.

12. Pro-League Leanings of the NWFP Governor

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 12 April 1947

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

With reference to the discussion we had this afternoon, I am sending herewith a copy of the appreciation of Muslim League movement situation in the NWFP on 5-4-47 and the Governor’s note below it, about which I spoke to you. I am also enclosing the Fortnightly Report for the second half of March 1947 which gives a statement of the situation up to 31-3-47 and which was apparently prepared on 2 April 1947.
2. I find that Mr Mitchell has less than 17 years’ standing. Apparently, the Governor thought that the Ministry had to learn a great deal from him in regard to the situation in the province with which Mr Mitchell had dealt at first hand only for a few days, while the Ministry had been dealing with it for a much longer time. You will also observe that this note was got prepared by the Governor over the head of the Chief Minister and that the Governor’s suggestion for conciliation or compromise is in regard to a movement, the two demands of which referred to the return of a widow of a Sikh murdered by Muslims, who was converted forcibly to Islam and married off to a Muslim, but subsequently returned to the Sikh by the Ministry according to her free choice, and to the refund of Rs 75,000 collected from the Tribes under the orders of the Central Government for wanton and wilful raids on a peacefully settled district involving several murders in cold blood and serious loss of property.

3. It is quite clear that if anything the situation demands firm and resolute handling. Instead we have the defeatist mentality of a comparatively young Chief Secretary who is apparently the conscience-keeper of a responsible Governor and the compromise plea of the latter whose especial responsibility it should be to safeguard constitutional government against the organized attacks and criminal conspiracy of irresponsible agitators and not to persuade it into abdicating its functions.

4. Finally, I need only comment on the difference between the Appreciation, by the same officer, of the situation up to 31-3-1947 and his Appreciation only three days later. It seems that all demoralization, danger of breakdown and tiresomeness of the services came about during those three or four miraculous days.

5. The conclusion is irresistible that the note was prepared to serve the purpose of a Governor who has made no secret of his determination to hand over the province to a League Ministry.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

ENCLOSURE

APPRECIATION OF MUSLIM LEAGUE MOVEMENT SITUATION ON 5-4-’47

1. I submit for consideration the following appreciation. I very much hope that it will not prove annoying to hon’ble ministers, whose opinion may be very different. I venture to do this only because things seem to me in the last degree serious and that it is my duty to present this view with its reasons. I do not presume to comment on the merits or otherwise of the Muslim League motives and methods. I shall try to state only facts, following those with my own inferences.

2. The agitation has met with a great deal of success. The jails are full to capacity. To release many offenders in order to make room for more is only an apparent remedy. It can be no permanent solution of this problem. Indeed as far as I can see there is none.

3. All officers down to and including sub-inspectors of police and corresponding ranks are at the limit of their endurance. It is known that the District Magistrate, Mardan, has been recommended leave on medical certificate. It is for all practical purposes a certainty that most or all senior officers at least will crack up sooner or later; and all the sooner as the hot weather comes on. They have been exposed for about two months already to a physical, nervous, and moral strain which they cannot fairly be asked to endure any longer. They have been abused by responsible people (I state a fact) on grounds of disloyalty, which has not helped. I know that many of them do hold their private political views, though by no means all incline to one particular party. But I have failed to find evidence of any officer’s political views having affected the execution of his duty.

4. The rank and file of the police are also exhausted and bewildered. There have been many cases of illness, including T.B., as the result of unbroken weeks of physical strain, irregular and bad meals, sleeping on the ground in the open, and so on.

5. We have heard on the best authority that the military are not happy about the circumstances in which they have had to work; but it is not for me to state any more when the facts are not fully at my disposal.

6. So much for the civil instruments of law and order. I consider that their powers are for all practical purposes exhausted.

7. I now consider the people in three categories:

(a) Hindus. It is known that deputations have been to the Mullah Sahib of Manki expressing themselves in favour of Pakistan and craving protection. Many Hindus have stated to me that they have no confidence in any present authority for their protection. The exodus of Hindus from every district to other parts of India goes on every day. A substantial number of the forcible conversions reported has been forcible only in the sense that those converted seized with some degree of spontaneity the chance to live as Muslims in safety rather than as Hindus in danger.

(b) Muslims. I have found it impossible to assess accurately the extent to which, if any, the Muslim League have gained ground with the electorate in all districts. Facts conceded by members of the Congress party, however, are that all large towns and Hazara district are now Muslim League sympathizers, active or otherwise. In areas where the Congress party had strong support in the past, reports of meetings usually include mention of hostile demonstrations by Muslim League sympathizers. One opinion, from a person whose opinion is entitled to respect, was to the effect that D.I. Khan and Bannu would show a Muslim League majority, the rural areas of Peshawar and Mardan a Congress majority, with Kohat doubtful but inclined to the Muslim League. The fact does stand out, however, that the Pathans are bitterly divided against one another.

(c) The Tribes. I have not been able to find any evidence of Congress sympathizers anywhere except for a small portion of the Mahsuds. The general tribal policy until recently was for them to hold aloof from Indian politics; but at the same time strong sympathy was generally expressed for the Muslim League. But (to avoid what might be very lengthy detail) the arrest of the Mullah Sahib of Manki, and the firing on March 10 at Peshawar, have had very serious consequences. On 4-4-47 the crowd in Peshawar included Afridis and Mohmands. The former said to a senior officer that on that day they were few; next time there might be 20,000. A deputation of Afridi Malik has told the DC, Kohat, that they cannot (and by inference will not) control their young men. Mohmand jirgas have uttered similar threats. The Dre–Mahsud marakka passed more specific resolutions. I see every possibility of tribal inroads on a large scale culminating in general war. It happened in 1897 and to a less extent between 1916 and 1919, and there is nothing inherently improbable in the same thing happening again.

8. At this point I leave facts as I have been able to collect them and turn with great diffidence to inferences. One frequently reads and hears that the situation, generally or locally, is under control. I believe that an analysis of the facts shows this not to be correct. From time to time and in different places individual situations have been brought under control. Not so the situation as a whole, regarding which it can only be said that it is being coped with from day to day and from hour to hour. The officers of government at least are unable to see more. If this inference is correct, it follows that measures are required to settle the situation, not merely to cope with it; and it is not only the writer of this note who recommends deliberation on this point. The whole population of the province and the tribal areas, and especially the persecuted minorities and overwrought officials, would welcome the news that something was being done other than a grim continuation of the present struggle.

A.N. Mitchell
5-4-'47

9. I asked the Chief Secretary, with his fresh approach to the question as he has just taken over, to let me have his appreciation of the present position arising in the province as a result of the League movement. His appreciation above, I might differ in certain details of his conclusions, but I consider that his application is broadly correct. It is particularly necessary for the provincial Government to bear in mind the strain on officers, which is very great indeed and may lead to a breakdown if something cannot be done to deal with the trouble at its root instead of with its symptoms. I do not consider that the present agitation is likely to grow less without an attempt to work towards some form of conciliation or compromise.

10. The form of conciliation or compromise is of course not at all easy to envisage. What it might be is an announcement by the provincial Government that, while in no sense they yield their constitutional rights, they wish in the public interest to negotiate a settlement and to that end propose to release all persons imprisoned under Section 40, FCR and for breaches of order under Section 144 CrPC, only retaining in jail those under trial or convicted of offences under the IPC (other than Section 188 IPC). The ultimate aim of such a move would have to be very carefully considered, whether it was leading up to the possibility of a coalition Government or to elections eventually. It would probably be very difficult in any case to hold elections during the hot weather.

11. If no form of conciliation is attempted it will be necessary to consider what action to take should there be a real breakdown of civil forces of law and order, complicated possibly by tribal aggression.

12. I thought it well to get all this on to paper, for I regard it as a matter of utmost importance on which close thought is necessary.

O.K. Caroe
Governor
7-4-47

A.N. Mitchell
7-4-47
Peshawar, Sunday.—‘We reiterate our whole hearted support for Pakistan which is the only solution of the Indian political problem and failing which there is going to be bloodshed and chaos in India. We further urge upon the British Government to concede it forthwith, otherwise we will be forced to demand all those areas and provinces which were once governed by the Indian Muslims during the Moghul rule and will offer any sacrifice for the attainment of that object’, says a resolution unanimously adopted at a joint Jirga of the South Waziristan and the Kurram Agencies held at Parachinar on Saturday, according to a telegram received, from the representatives of the Kurram Agency.

In another resolution, the Jirga stated: ‘We, the tribal people, are a free people and will remain so. We do not want the Patel Committee or any other such committee to visit the Agencies. We can decide about our future ourselves in cooperation, of course, with the All-India Muslim League. Therefore, if the Patel Committee or any other Hindu Committee visits the Agencies, we warn that the consequences will be serious and the Government will be responsible for them’.

A third resolution, which like the earlier ones was unanimously passed, said: ‘We strongly protest against the arrest of the Pir Sahib of Manki Sharif by the Congress Government of the N-WF Province. We deeply regret that the Governor should have allowed this, knowing fully well what the reaction and adverse effect it would have on the Pathans of the tribal territory. We urge upon the Governor-General-in-Council as well as the Governor of the N-WF Province to release him forthwith, failing which the Government will be responsible for the dreadful consequences.’

The next resolution, also unanimously approved, said, ‘The Khan Ministry has lost the confidence of the Frontier people. Its misrule has resulted in the ever-increasing lawlessness and bloodshed prevailing in the Province. The Ministry, has miserably failed to run the administration of the Province. Its continuance any longer is a direct challenge and an insult to Pathan intelligence and this is already having its serious repercussions among the tribal people.’

Fresh Elections Demanded

‘It is, therefore demanded that Khan Ministry should be immediately dissolved, Section 93 be promulgated and fresh elections be ordered forthwith’.

Lastly, the Jirga sternly warned that ‘any step directed against the interests of the Agencies (by the Hindu Congress or the British Government) will be resisted with everything at our disposal’.

The representatives of the South Waziristan Agency who visited the Kurram Agency and held the Jirga with the leaders of the latter Agency included Captain Abdulla Khan, Malik Amir Khan, Col Shah Pasand, Malik Ata Mohammad, Malik Bakar and Jammat Khan.
14. Political Situation in the Frontier

Minutes of the Fourth Miscellaneous Meeting of the Viceroy, 18 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 196A, NMML.

Those present at this meeting held at The Viceroy's House, New Delhi on 18 April 1947 at 11.30 a.m. were: Rear-Admiral Viscount Mountbatten of Burma, Sir O. Caroe (not present for first two paras of the record), Pandit Nehru, Dr Khan Sahib, Lord Ismay, Sir E. Mieville; Lieutenant-Colonel Erskine Crum (Secretariat).

THE SITUATION IN THE NWFP

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY

Opened the Meeting by thanking Pandit Nehru for the letter which he had sent him that morning. He went on to say that he had hoped to be able at the present time to give all his attention to efforts to find a solution for the future of India as a whole and to avoid details which only concerned individual Provinces. However, he felt that the situation in the NWFP was, if not dealt with now, likely to prejudice the wider problem. His immediate object, therefore, was to find a temporary expedient which would restore that situation and maintain peace until an over-all solution for the whole of India had been decided. He hoped that solution when found, would be acceptable to all parties, and would result in the prevention of bloodshed. From the latest reports it appeared that the situation at the Frontier was deteriorating both in those areas which were the direct responsibility of Dr Khan Sahib and in the tribal areas.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that Sir Olaf Caroe had explained to him that the main difficulty at the moment was that the Muslim League had started agitations which were gravely embarrassing the Government of the Province. In dealing with these agitations, the Government was gradually getting itself into a position, not by any means wholly intentionally, whereby most of the Opposition were in jail. He pointed out that it was very difficult to carry on constitutional government in such a state of affairs. In the United Kingdom during the war, only one member of Parliament had been imprisoned under the special Defence Regulation No. 18b. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that Sir Olaf Caroe was fully aware that he was considered by many to be pro-Muslim League but he had denied this in what had impressed him (His Excellency) as being a most sincere way. If the intention of the British had been to remain in India, it was conceivable that they might have tried for a 'divide and rule' policy. But as the British were going in June 1948—and his instructions on this point were inflexible—and as all were agreed that it was of the utmost importance to leave the country as peaceful as possible, it was not rationally conceivable that any Governor should violently take sides with one or other political party at this stage.

Sir Olaf Caroe then entered the room.

DR KHAN SAHIB complained that on many occasions Sir Olaf Caroe had not taken his advice.

SIR OLAF CAROE said that he had the greatest admiration for Dr Khan Sahib, whom he considered to be an outstanding and most courageous man. They had had many differences of opinion in the past for various reasons. He agreed that he had on occasions not accepted Dr Khan Sahib's advice—because to have done so would have made the position of his Ministry more difficult. As a specific point he had disagreed with Dr Khan Sahib over the question of interference—though from the highest motives—by the Executive in the discretion of magistrates, particularly in their judicial functions.

Pandit Nehru said that he fully upheld the principle that there should be no such interference. Dr Khan Sahib said that it was Sir Olaf Caroe who interferes with him. His Excellency the Viceroy said that he would be quite ready to send an independent judge to look into this question if both Sir Olaf Caroe and Dr Khan Sahib wished it.

Sir Olaf Caroe said that another matter on which he had not always taken Dr Khan Sahib’s advice was that of the posting of officials. The reason for this was because he considered that much caution should be exercised before transferring officials just because there had been trouble in their districts.

Dr Khan Sahib remarked that if he was to be trusted to run the Province, he should not be accused of favouritism.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that at the Governors’ Conference two days previously, this question of posting had been discussed. The Governors had felt that there was a distinct tendency on the part of many Ministries to ask for the immediate transfer of officials whenever there was any trouble. In the Governors’ unanimous opinion such impulsive transfers were likely to cause breakdown of the administration.

Dr Khan Sahib interpolated the remark that many of his recommendations for transfer had been changed unilaterally by the Governor without him being consulted.

Sir Olaf Caroe denied this, saying that he always discussed appointments with Dr Khan Sahib and there was no question of varying them without consulting him. His Excellency the Viceroy suggested that if in any case personal discussion between the two proved impossible, the Governor and the Prime Minister should exchange personal and confidential notes.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that it was a clear principle that Governors should not interfere with postings except when Ministries tried to transfer officials hurriedly after trouble. It was also an obvious principle that Ministries should avoid such actions.

Dr Khan Sahib’s next complaint was that Sir Olaf Caroe interfered too much with day-to-day work, saw many files before him, and thereby stultified his opinions. He stated that he had always seen the files before Sir George Cuningham, when the latter had been Governor. Sir Olaf Caroe admitted that when he had first been appointed he had possibly, on occasions, expressed his own views too freely on files—but he said that that procedure had come to an end some time ago.

Then Dr Khan Sahib said that Sir Olaf Caroe was wont to call conferences without inviting him. He quoted particular cases of this. Sir Olaf Caroe explained why this had been done. His Excellency the Viceroy said that it was agreed in principle that this was an incorrect procedure.

His Excellency the Viceroy then said that he considered that the hour had come to cease recrimination. He asked Dr Khan Sahib what policy he would best like to follow.

Dr Khan Sahib said that he believed that every outbreak of disorder should be treated at once and firmly. Leniency, in his view, only led to further outbreaks.
Sir Olaf Caroe said that this was surely a very large question—how far a popular Government could go in time of trouble to order the suppression of a movement which was directed against it. Whenever there had been serious violence he had done his best in every possible way to assist his Ministry to enforce law and order. He had most helpful backing from Pandit Nehru, for which he was thankful, in dealing with tribal inroads. The question of whether or not to ban processions and demonstrations under Section 144 was a very difficult one. He had been trying to persuade his Ministry on the one hand to enforce law and order, and on the other hand so to act that a return to normal conditions would follow as soon as possible. In dealing with a procession which was getting out of hand, one could either use the police in lathi charges and perhaps tear gas, or one might bring in troops—which was likely to result in heavy loss of life. The Military had informed him that they considered that District Officers had, on the whole, particularly in Peshawar, dealt with crowds very well without calling troops in.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that he was sure that Dr Khan Sahib would agree to the principle that it was wrong to call in a single soldier unnecessarily. Dr Khan Sahib agreed.

Sir Olaf Caroe stated that, after troops had been called in to deal with the situation at Peshawar and had had to open fire, feeling had been aroused more than ever before and there had been a large number of assaults in the city that night. He had been unable on this occasion to consult Dr Khan Sahib so he had given orders that the city should be occupied by troops. The situation now was that the present administration was being held in position by the use of troops.

His Excellency the Viceroy asked Pandit Nehru whether he agreed that a popular Government should never have to be held in power by the use of troops if this was in any way avoidable. Pandit Nehru agreed thoroughly.

Dr Khan Sahib then said that Sir Olaf Caroe imagined things. He also said that, if he were given a free hand, he would promise that there would be no rioting, no processions, no murders.

His Excellency the Viceroy then asked Dr Khan Sahib whether he could continue government if all troops were withdrawn. Dr Khan Sahib said that indeed he could, provided that all officials were withdrawn also.

Pandit Nehru asked Dr Khan Sahib whether he was complaining against being restricted. Dr Khan Sahib said that he was.

His Excellency the Viceroy asked Dr Khan Sahib what he would do if he had a completely free hand. Dr Khan Sahib said that he would deal severely with anybody who broke the law.

His Excellency the Viceroy then told Dr Khan Sahib that it was widely held that the Pir of Manki had on many occasions publicly preached non-violence. Dr Khan Sahib said that this was only true of the immediate past. Six months ago the Pir of Manki said that he would shoot the Governor if he were told to do so. Dr Khan Sahib added his opinion that the Pir of Manki had been behind all the recent murder and looting.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that he wanted now to start discussing positive action and a draft statement was handed round, which, it was suggested, should be issued by Sir Olaf Caroe after his return, announcing that elections would be held in the NWFP in due course. Dr Khan Sahib said that he would be prepared for an election at any time. He would not stay in power for one moment longer then he was wanted. He was fully in favour of this principle. His Excellency the Viceroy related that, when Mr Liaquat Ali Khan had suggested that the Province should be put under Section 93 pending elections, Sir Olaf Caroe had declared himself quite ready that the present Ministry should continue in power until after the elections were held. He went on to say that the last thing that he wanted to do was, by trying to help, to make matters worse. The essential thing was to establish a truce in accordance with the appeal signed by Mr Gandhi and Mr Jinnah and to keep the Province quiet until the main decision was made. He was wondering what steps could be taken to stop the present disturbances. First it was, of course, desirable that the Muslim League should call off their direct action campaign—and that was surely what Mr Jinnah’s signature on the appeal implied. Secondly, could the Government of the Province make any gesture? Might it perhaps be possible to issue a fresh statement saying that, as an act of clemency, all political offenders would be released on the condition they did not take advantage of the truce. If they did, they would be put back in jail. Perhaps processions might be prohibited—but not political meetings and the freedom of speech. He was not suggesting that those who had committed criminal acts should be released.

Dr Khan Sahib agreed thoroughly with this line of action. He added that he did not think that any condition should be made in the release of political prisoners. Pandit Nehru also agreed that such a statement should be issued, and made suggestions as to the wording of it. Sir Olaf Caroe agreed that a statement on the lines suggested by the Viceroy would be helpful. He gave his view that the important thing was that processions must stop. He suggested that political leaders accused of violence should not be released and this was agreed. It was also agreed that those guilty of the technical crime of breaking the ban to take part in processions should be released.

There was then a short discussion of and agreement on a draft note to be issued to the Press concerning the results of this meeting.

His Excellency the Viceroy asked whether it was considered that it was very important not to arm the rival factions in the NWFP. Dr Khan Sahib and Pandit Nehru agreed that it was.

Sir Olaf Caroe said that it was Dr Khan Sahib’s policy to let everybody who was likely to vote for him have a gun. Dr Khan Sahib said that this was not the case. He had been issuing permits for fire-arms recently, but solely for record purposes. Nevertheless, he felt that the villagers must have something to protect themselves with. The trouble was that the good villagers had no arms and the ‘undesirables’ had arms without licences. Pandit Nehru pointed out that there were and always had been a large number of guns on the Frontier.

Pandit Nehru said that the rough dividing line between Congress and Muslim League supporters in the NWFP was on class lines. Sir Olaf Caroe did not agree with this. He thought that the present division was largely a reproduction on the political stage of old factions.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that Dr Khan Sahib had been accused of holding up Press telegrams and Sir Olaf Caroe said that there had been some unwise censorship by the Government. Dr Khan Sahib said that there had been only one case of censorship. He said that he would repeat the orders that had been issued that there should be none.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that he would much like to visit the NWFP as soon as occasion permitted.

Dr Khan Sahib said that he would be very pleased if His Excellency would come; he felt sure that such a visit would be most helpful. Sir Olaf Caroe and Pandit Nehru agreed with this.
His Excellency the Viceroy:

(i) invited C.V.S. to prepare a draft of the statement to be issued by the Government of the NWFP;
(ii) approved the draft, suggested by C.V.S., of a note to be issued to the Press on the results of the Meeting.

15. ‘Frontier Referendum Imminent: Congress Ministry Will Have a Fall from Which It Will Never Rise’
26 April 1947

Peshawar, April 24.—‘The Frontier Congress Ministry is in office only for a week or two and a referendum is imminent,’ declared Malik Firoz Khan Noon, former Executive Councillor, addressing a gathering of students at the Islamia College, Peshawar this afternoon.

‘In these days of democratic rule,’ Mr Noon continued, ‘no Ministry can remain long in power by means of tear-gas, lathi-charge and dirty money which come from an organization, the most dangerous enemies of Islam and Indian Muslims. If the Frontier Muslims cannot see, I can read the writing on the wall. The Ministry will have a fall from which it will never rise. This sort of administration cannot be carried on very long.’

‘Another election,’ the Speaker added, ‘is at your door when the Pathans will give a verdict in favour of Pakistan. Our demand is not fresh election but free election and that can only be done, when the present Congress Ministry goes away and Section 93 is established’ [sic for imposed].

Giving reasons for the existing great gulf between Hindus and Muslims in India, Malik Firoz Khan Noon attributed it to the narrow-mindedness of Hindu leaders and capitalists. Had they been a little broad-minded and true statesmen, India would have been free long long ago.

‘India can now be free even tomorrow,’ Mr Noon added, ‘provided Hindu leaders agree to the same sort of freedom for Muslims which they love for themselves. Hindu Raj will never be established over the head of Muslims. Pakistan must be established at all costs where Muslims can live as a free nation with their own religion, culture and tradition.’

Concluding Mr Noon paid tributes to Frontier League workers including the Pir of Manki Sharif and women workers.

Malik Firoz Khan Noon had lunch with the Governor at Government House today.

Sardar Abdur Rab Nishtar, Member for Communications in the Interim Government, visited Peshawar Central Jail this afternoon and had long discussions with Frontier Muslim League leaders, including the Pir of Manki Sharif.—API.

16. ‘Frontier Ministry Will Never Submit to Unabashed Goondaism: Sardar Patel’s Statement’
Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 27 April 1947.

New Delhi, April 26.—Considerable importance is attached in political circles to two statements which Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel issued tonight, one, appealing to the Princes and their people to take their due and honourable share in the shaping of India’s destiny by joining the Constituent Assembly and the other that the Frontier Ministry will not submit to rowdyism and goondaism....
In regard to the Frontier Province which the Viceroy, Lord Mountbatten and Lady Mountbatten will visit on Tuesday, Sardar Patel refuted the suggestions of the imminent resignation of the Ministry or that there was a fresh election round the corner.

The following is the text of Sardar Patel’s statement on the Frontier. ‘It is to be regretted that some responsible League leaders have recently made statements hinting at the imminence of the resignation of the Frontier Premier. They are out to mislead the ignorant section of the people into the belief that a fall of the Frontier Ministry or a fresh election in the Frontier is round the corner and thereby afford a fillip to a movement which, under the cloak of the so-called demand for civil liberties, is virtually aimed at coercing the constant submission to illegal and improper designs of its sponsors.’

Pathan’s Verdict

‘Political memories are proverbially short. This is particularly the case when it is most embarrassing and inconvenient to recall past discomfitures and defeats. It was only a year ago that the League suffered a resounding defeat on the clear cut issue of Pakistan or Hindustan. Despite the obligation of all resources, both official and non official, against it, the verdict of the Pathan was unmistakably in favour of the latter.

‘A comparatively small section of the people confined mostly to a few towns may take undue advantage of the spirit of toleration and contempt of violent methods but they cannot displace a popular ministry by unconstitutional methods. It is foolish to expect that what has been settled by ballot will be allowed to be unsettled by bullets or brute force and wishful thinking of irresponsible League leaders.

‘Let not the people be deluded by these false statements into any sense of desperation as they are sure to meet with disappointment. The Frontier Ministry has assumed power as a result of popular mandate. No amount of back stair intrigues or threat of violence or mischievous propaganda can coerce it into abdicating its power, either in favour of unalloyed autocracy or unabashed rowdysim and goondaism.’

17. Viceroy’s Impressions: Need for Fresh Elections in NWFP

Note by Louis Mountbatten, 29 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 193, NMML.

Impressions gained from talks with 16 senior officers and officials of the Services in the NWFP on the 28th April 1947, at Peshawar.

Without exception everyone, both British and Indian, to whom I spoke was absolutely convinced that fresh elections at the earliest possible moment were absolutely necessary if a great disaster was to be avoided in the NWFP. They further went on to say that they considered it would be necessary to have section 93 government to ensure fair elections. Some considered this would be necessary for from four to six months, but all agreed that at a pinch two months would be enough, and some went so far as to say that even one month might do.

They pointed out that the black marketeering and the control of rationing and supplying of food and cloth had come into the hands of the Government supporters who could thus exercise unfair pressure on the voters.

The Government were also exercising unconstitutional pressure on the courts, and through the arms licensing. Quite apart from this, they said that if the present Government were in power the actual mechanism of the election would be unfairly worked.
Those who had seen the great Muslim League crowd which had collected at midday today (estimated variously to number between fifty and a hundred thousand) expressed their conviction that if I had not gone and shown myself on the bridge nothing would have been able to prevent the crowd from forcing their way through to Government House to see me, and that this inevitably would have meant troops having to open fire on the crowd, with a terrible loss of life.

General McCay went so far as to tell me at 11 p.m. that night that he considered his troops would still have been firing at that moment if I had not gone to the crowd when I did.

Several drew attention to the fact that it was unprecedented in their experience for such a meeting of Pathans to remain completely orderly, well-disciplined, and good humoured, and that the clapping and cheering with which I had been received was absolutely unknown to the Frontier.

18. Communal Undertones of the League Agitation Record of Meeting between Louis Mountbatten and Representatives of the Hindu-Sikh Minorities Protection Board, 29 April 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 96A, NMML.

The deputation presented the memorial attached, and their spokesman, Rai Bahadur Dina Nath, pointed out that the agitation going on in the NW Frontier Province was mainly communal, and to only a lesser extent anti-Ministry. This was proved by the fact that no Muslim-Congressite had been harmed. He added that there was a general complaint that some members of the administrative services were not cooperating with the Government, and asked that there should be an increase in the non-Muslim element, especially the Police. He ended by stating that the minorities, who were only five per cent in the Province, were prepared to support any government which protected them, and safeguarded their economic, social and religious life.

2. HE thanked the deputation for this statement of their case and commended their attitude as both sensible and realistic. He agreed that it seemed the situation was communal, in the direct chain of causation from the Bengal and Bihar troubles.

3. HE then dealt seriatim with the points raised in the memorial. He stated, on the authority of the Governor, that as thorough an investigation as was possible in the circumstances was being made into all offences. This was affected by the fact that the police were working at stretch in coping with the immediate day-to-day Law and order position, and the Governor added that the public did not help to catch the criminals. Moreover, it was very difficult to get any proof when a murder was committed during the course of a procession.

4. The question of punishment of prisoners found guilty was one for the courts to decide.

5. The Governor stated that a large number of collective fines had been imposed in villages, probably more than in any other comparable area in India. The Governor did not believe in collective fines in towns, which he maintained only increased bitterness. HE entirely associated himself with this opinion, and the deputation agreed.

6. HE made it clear that more military forces were deployed in the NWFP than in any other such area in India. He said it was wrong in principle to use the army in place of the police in day to day work, by posting military pickets permanently inside cities, or in villages, as one of the deputation requested. The army should be used to support the police in case of trouble extending beyond their ability to cope with. The Governor added that troops were being used more than he had ever seen during his entire service in India.
7. On the matter of the impartiality of officials, HE pointed out that the Deputy Commissioner, D.I.K. was a Hindu who had been recommended for appointment there only two months ago by the Chief Minister. The Governor had given him every support for which the DC had only recently thanked him and yet D.I.K. had been the worst district.

8. The Governor pointed out that both political parties enjoy equal right of access to tribal areas, and that six months ago he had issued a circular enjoining this. At the same time, he disclaimed responsibility, on behalf of political officers, for any consequences which might ensue if propaganda parties of either side visited the tribes. There was thus full equality of treatment in regard to access to these places.

9. HE finally said that his endeavour was to remove the basic cause of communal strife rather than to deal with successive incidents. He was trying to get a decision as soon as possible on how to effect the transfer of power from British to Indian hands in such a way that everyone would accept it. If he could do so, that would remove the basic cause of the trouble, though he could not remove communal prejudice.

10. Rai Bahadur Dina Nath thanked HE for the patient and sympathetic hearing that he had accorded the delegation and said that the minority communities were realists, and wished to remain on in the NWE Province after the transfer of power. HE approved of their intention to reach a satisfactory accommodation in due course with the majority community and expressed sincere sympathy with their present plight.

I.D. Scott, 29-4-47

ENCLOSURE

His Excellency the Viceroy and Governor-General of India

Representation on Behalf of the Hindu and Sikh Public Bodies of North West Frontier Provinces

May it please Your Excellency!

We, the undersigned representatives of the leading Hindu and Sikh Public Bodies of Peshawar most respectfully beg to offer our heartiest welcome to Your Excellency and Lady Mountbatten on your first official visit to this ancient and historic city and submit the following lines by way of acquainting Your Excellency with the real situation in the North West Frontier Province, as affecting the Hindus and Sikhs vitally.

As a sequel to the Direct Action Campaign launched by the Muslim League in Calcutta last year, and its aftermath, the Muslim League leaders of this Province have been carrying on a most virulent type of communal propaganda against the Hindus and Sikhs, with the result that woeful incidents of murders, murderous assaults, forcible conversions, arson and loot, involving tremendous loss of life and property, and acute physical and mental agony to the innocent victims, the Hindus and Sikhs, have taken place at different places in the Province since 1st October, 1946. According to conservative estimates the number of Hindus and Sikhs murdered is about 500, of those stabbed and wounded about 150, and of those forcibly converted about 400. Nearly fifty places of worship have been burnt, as also 1500 houses and shops. The property of Hindus and Sikhs worth crores of rupees has been burnt, looted and destroyed.

The Hindu and Sikh residents of the Province feel that if the communal propaganda carried on by the Muslim Leaguers is not effectively checked by the Government, more tremendous loss of life and property is seriously apprehended. Already a large number of Hindus and Sikhs have left the Province owing to a feeling of extreme insecurity under the present conditions created by the Muslim League’s communal agitation. This continuing exodus of minorities is fraught with disastrous consequences.

Since 10th March, 1947, normal life and trade in Peshawar have been almost paralysed. For ten days at a stretch all Hindu and Sikh residents of Peshawar remained confined to their houses for fear of being stabbed, shot or murdered by the Muslim Leaguers, in spite of the Ministry’s solicitude to help them.

The Hindus and Sikhs have full confidence in the present Ministry which has been doing its utmost to give them protection but it is an open secret that a preponderating element in the services does not cooperate with the Ministry in carrying out its policy effectively. It is a patent though extremely deplorable fact that very few culprits who inflict loss of life and property on the Hindus and Sikhs, are apprehended and brought to book. On the other hand, when a Hindu or Sikh exercises his right of private self-defence against heavy odds, he is at once proceeded against with a vengeance.

The present agitation carried on by the Leaguers is in fact not anti-Ministry, but anti-Hindu and Sikh. The present Ministry is in office on account of the confidence that it enjoys of the majority of Muslim members in the Legislature. Even if the eleven Hindu and Sikh members of the Legislature were to withdraw their support, the Ministry would continue in office, as it would still have the confidence of 21 Muslim members against 16 Muslim League members, in the Legislature. The very fact that not a single act of violence has been committed on any Muslim supporter of the Ministry, shows that the whole agitation is in fact anti-Hindu and Sikh, though it has been shown in the false grab of anti-Ministry agitation.

The free access to the Tribal Territory enjoyed by the Muslim League leaders and workers during the past ten months, and the communal propaganda carried on by them there, against the Hindus and Sikhs, have resulted in the recent tragic happenings in the district of Dera Ismail Khan. Unless immediate and effective steps are taken to put a check on the activities of the Muslim Leaguers in the Tribal Territory, a repetition of the grave happenings in D.I. Khan district, is feared in other parts of the Province. That in view of the facts herein above submitted, Your Excellency’s memorialists pray that in order to restore confidence and to attain normal and peaceful conditions in this province, the following measures may kindly be taken:

(a) Thorough investigation of all offences affecting life and property by impartial officers of approved integrity.
(b) Confind [sic] punishment to persons who may be found guilty.
(c) Imposition of collective fines in areas wherein murders, arson, and loot have taken place and miscreants cannot be traced.
(d) Arrangements for adequate military forces to be placed at the disposal of the Civil Authorities for quelling disturbances and keeping order.
(e) Posting of such impartial District and Police Officers as may command the confidence of the minorities.

We beg to remain,

Your Excellency’s most obedient and respectful memorialists:

Peshawar
April 28, 1947
1. for Provincial Hindu Sikh Minority Protection Board, Peshawar.
2. for Hindu Sabha, Peshawar.
3. for Aman Sabha, Peshawar.
4. for Arya Samaj, Pampura, Peshawar.
5. for Arya Samaj, Asiya, Peshawar.
6. for Goshala Committee, Peshawar.
7. for Hindu Sewa Sang, Peshawar.
8. for Pajtirath Sudhar Sabha, Peshawar.
9. for Andarshehr Sudhar Sabha, Peshawar.
10. for Bar Association (Hindu Section), Peshawar.
11. for Khukhrain Sabha, Andarshehr, Peshawar.
12. for Piece goods Merchants Association, Peshawar.
14. for Guru Singh Sabha, Peshawar.
15. for Gurudwara Bhai Biba Singh, Peshawar.
17. for Brahmin Sabha, Peshawar.
18. for Shri Hari Kirtan Mandal, Peshawar.
19. for National High School, Peshawar City.
20. for Arya Girls’ School, Peshawar City.
21. for Arya Samaj (Gurukul Section), Peshawar City.
22. for Shri Sanatan Dharam Sabha, Peshawar.
23. for Dry Fruit Association, Peshawar.
24. for Piece goods Brokers’ Association, Peshawar.
25. for Narinjan Singh Khalsa High School, Peshawar.
27. for L. Gurditta Mal Trust School, Rampura, Peshawar.
28. for Santanic Sikh Committee, Karimpura, Peshawar.
29. for Managing Committee R.B.S. Kanahi Nand Sanatan Dharam High School, Peshawar.
30. for Khalsa Youngmen Association, Peshawar.
32. for Gurudwara Singh Sabha, Peshawar Cantt.
33. for Khalsa High School, Peshawar Cantt.
34. for Mahila Vidyala, Rampura, Peshawar.
35. for Gurbhai Committee Raja Sir Gurbaksh Singh Bedi, Peshawar.
36. for Managing Committee Dharamsala Baba Siri Sahib Bedi, Peshawar City.

19. ‘Heavy Losses to Hindus and Sikhs in the Disturbances in Frontier Province: Forcible Religious Conversion and Large Scale Arson.’

Extract from a Report from Hindustan, 30 April 1947.

Finance Minister of the Frontier Shri Mehr Chand Khanna told the reporters in Peshawar that in the course of the Muslim League agitation since December, 400 Sikhs and Hindus were killed, 150 injured due to stabbing, more than 300 were forcibly converted to Islam, 50 persons were shot and 50 religious places of Hindus and Sikhs and 1600 houses and shops torched.
The most surprising thing is that in Dera Ismail Khan Jail one person was forcibly converted. In the violence in Haripura Central Jail, Inspector General was beaten.

This is a translation of the original report in Hindi entitled 'Seemaprant ke Updravon Mein Hinduon tatha Sikhon ko Bhari Shati: Balaat Dharma-Parivartan Va Vyapak Agni-Kand'.

20. Decisions regarding NWFP Elections

Extract from the Record of an Interview between Louis Mountbatten, M.A. Jinnah, and Liaquat Ali Khan, 2 May 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 193, NMML.

HIS EXCELLENCY started by thanking Mr. Jinnah for arranging for the Muslims to come and see him during his recent visit to the NWFP, and also congratulated him on the behaviour of the huge crowd of Muslims who had gathered in Cunningham Park. His Excellency said that after consulting Dr. Khan Sahib he showed himself to the crowd who gave him a great reception and then dispersed without any trouble. His Excellency said that he could not too strongly put to Mr. Jinnah that the latter’s object was to obtain fresh elections to the NWFP before the transfer of power. Lord Ismay had left for England that morning to explain the plan for the transfer of power to HMG and included in it, as Mr. Jinnah knew as he had actually read the plan, was a clause to the effect that fresh elections in the NWFP would be held. He must repeat that if violence were to continue in the province, that paragraph referring to the elections would be amended. He felt strongly that Mr. Jinnah obviously would want to get the NWFP into Pakistan, and that everything therefore was to be gained by Mr. Jinnah quietly calling off the movement without any announcement. His Excellency further said that, in his view, there was a clear case for fresh elections, but that in no circumstances would he yield to violence.

Mr. Jinnah said that he was sorry but he felt that there was some misunderstanding. He had clearly understood that an announcement about a fresh election was not to be held up until the plan was made public, which he understood would not be at any rate until the end of the month, and it would be impossible for him to control the situation for so long. He said that he had carried out what he told His Excellency he would before the latter’s visit. There was no procession; the meeting was peaceful; and those Muslims in gaol came and had an interview with the Viceroy, and now, he said, ‘the position is that you ask me to tell my followers not to carry on with the agitation’. What could he say in reply? His Excellency said that he could refer to the Gandhi/Jinnah appeal, that he could say that he had seen the Viceroy who was adamant that he would not give way to duress, and that the obvious thing to do was to wait for the plan. Mr. Jinnah agreed that it was quite wrong to give way to force and that violence must be stopped, but that His Excellency could not control the people nor could he. He could not understand that the question of dissolution had to be delayed until after the plan was made public. His Excellency replied that his conscience would not allow him to yield to force in any way, and he was in great trouble with the Congress over the attitude he was taking up regarding the NWFP. He did not mind that. To Jinnah’s definite question ‘as a result of your visit to the Frontier Province are you satisfied there is a case for immediate dissolution of the Government’, His Excellency gave a categorical denial ‘No, definitely no; any election will take place solely on the issue of Pakistan or Hindustan.’ The election was merely to find out whether the province should go to Pakistan or Hindustan, that it might be necessary for the fair conduct of the election to go into Section 93, and that observers for the Muslim League and Congress might have to be appointed. Mr Jinnah said that if the Khan Sahib administration was allowed to continue, the Congress would provoke conditions that would cause violence and that if he were to call off the campaign he would be reduced to dust in the eyes of his followers. He could say that the campaign must be peaceful, but he had no hesitation in saying that it would not remain peaceful.

At this moment, Mr Liaquat Ali Khan joined the meeting. His Excellency then told Mr Liaquat of the general tenor of the conversation. Mr Liaquat said that he saw no chance of the movement being called off. If the Muslim League had called it off immediately after His Excellency’s visit, it would be said that the League was under British orders and that Mr Jinnah counted for nothing. This was a point which His Excellency said had not occurred to him before and one that carried weight with him.

His Excellency then suggested that the League would be well advised:

1. to insist on their leaders in the Provinces leaving the gaols. He pointed out that some of the best brains in the League Party were in prison and were perfectly free to come out but would not do so as they felt that they were embarrassing the administration more by remaining in.

2. that Mr Jinnah should send for the League leaders here and, whilst not insisting on their calling the movement off, should suggest that they should keep it alive by holding meetings in out of the way places, and not too big meetings at that; that processions and picketing should be barred; and that incidents should be prevented which have news value and are published in all the newspapers.

Mr Jinnah said once again that so long as the present Ministry was in power he saw no hope. It all sounded all right on paper but in practice it just would not work. His Excellency replied that he feared that the answer to that was that it would be necessary for him to send in troops and aeroplanes which he would be forced to do if the League were determined to make trouble. Mr Jinnah said that the Congress knew perfectly well that they were finished in the NWFP. They were playing the game of the last gambler’s throw. Their whole idea was to keep up the quarrel and bloodshed and to force the hands of the Viceroy to say that under those circumstances he could not have an election. He said that the representatives for the NWFP were arriving tonight and he frankly did not quite know what he could say to them, but it was finally left that if Mr Jinnah wished to come and see His Excellency again and proposed to bring the leaders with him, he would communicate with me, and the Viceroy promised that he would receive them....

21. Nehru’s Disagreement on NWFP Elections

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 3 May 1947

NEW DELHI,

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

With your letter, dated 30th April, you sent me various papers relating to your visit to the Frontier. Among these was an account of your meeting with the Governor of the NWFP and the four Ministers on the 28th April.
On reading through all these papers I was considerably surprised both at some statements of fact and at the general approach to various problems. I wrote to you a brief letter expressing my distress. There was much in those papers to which I wanted to draw your attention. But I refrained from doing so, because, as I pointed out in my letter of the 1st May, the basic question was one of approach. I should like to make it quite clear that I do not agree with several things that have been said in the course of the various interviews and the fact that I am not drawing particular attention to each matter should not be taken to mean that I agree with it.

This morning I had a trunk telephone call from Dr Khan Sahib, the Chief Minister of the NWFP. He told me that he had received the report of the meeting you had with the Ministers. He added that so far as paragraphs 15, 16 and 17 were concerned, there was obviously a grave misapprehension and they did not correctly represent what he or his colleagues had agreed to. It was not possible for me to go into any detail on the telephone, but I understood that he had sent a note on the subject to the Governor with the request that this may be forwarded to you.

I need hardly repeat that this matter of the Frontier Province is not only important in itself but has far-reaching implications in the all-India context. Any special treatment of the Frontier Province in regard to elections, or the imposition of Section 93 Government would create a very grave situation. I have already written to you about the Congress Working Committee's reactions to such a proposal. I am personally convinced that those reactions are correct.

It is unfortunate that there should have been a misunderstanding in regard to what was said at your meeting with the Ministers. Sometimes wrong impressions are formed for lack of preciseness in language. It is desirable, above all, that there should be no misunderstanding of respective viewpoints. In this matter the Frontier Province Ministry is concerned, of course; but all of us are equally concerned, because of the wider implications involved. I trust, therefore, that nothing will be taken for granted and if there is any misapprehension it should be removed immediately.

In the course of our conversations I think I mentioned to you the result of a by-election in the Frontier, which was held about two months or so ago. I am sorry I gave you perhaps a slightly wrong impression. I have now enquired into this matter and the correct figures are as follows:

In the 1946 general election the Muslim League candidate won the seat at Mardan. The voting was as follows:

- Muslim League: 8354
- Congress: 8185

Muslim League majority: 169

In the 1947 election the voting was as follows:

- Muslim League: 8941
- Congress: 8353

Muslim League majority: 588

There was thus no change, though there was a slight increase in the Muslim League majority from 169 to 588. The total voting went up from 16539 to 17294. Both the candidates increased their poll, though the increase on the Muslim League side was somewhat greater. On the whole, it might be said that there was no marked change.

Yours sincerely,

JAWAHARLAL NEHRU
22. ‘No Elections in NWFP’

The Tribune, 3 May 1947.

New Delhi, May 2.—The Congress Working Committee at its session today it is understood, further considered the situation in the NWFP with particular reference to the reported desire of the authorities to hold fresh elections in the province. The committee is believed to have addressed a letter to the Viceroy opposing the holding of any general elections now and stressing that the first concern of the government should be to restore law and order. It is believed the committee's opposition to the holding of elections was mainly due to the fact that elections held in the province only last year resulted in the success of the present ministry. The committee is understood to have been of the opinion that elections should not be held in response to disorders engineered for upsetting a government and the interest taken by certain highly placed authorities in favour of an election would be construed as a partisan attitude.

In this connection Congress quarters pointed out that the Muslim League was for liquidating the present ministry or alternatively have a fresh election.—API

23. ‘Section 93 Cannot Be Applied in Frontier’

The Hindustan Times, 4 May 1947.

It is foolish to expect that Section 93 could be applied in the NWFP, where the Ministry has the solid support of a good majority of the legislators’, said Sardar Vallabhbhai Patel in a statement on Saturday.

Sardar Patel said: ‘The efforts to dislodge the Frontier Ministry by violent means continue unabated despite Mr Jinnah’s so-called peace appeal and the Viceregal visit to the Frontier in quest of a rapprochement. The Frontier Premier’s gesture in offering to release the League prisoners made in response to this appeal, has evoked no response from the prisoners; on the other hand the forces of disorder have received encouragement’.

‘Mr Jinnah’s peace appeal is either completely ignored or not taken seriously by his followers and yet there is no condemnation from him of acts of violence perpetrated by them. Systematic pressure tactics in true Hitlerian style and with all its fury and characteristics are being employed in support of their illegal designs’.

‘The latest to take the field is a concerted propaganda decision in favour of a proclamation under Section 93 in the Frontier as a result of this visit. The talk of application of Section 93 in the Frontier is to betray ignorance of the elementary conditions of that province. A resort to Section 93 when a duly elected legislature is functioning with a Government commanding majority not only of the Muslim members but also of the minorities would be a gross act of betrayal and highhandedness and an outrage on the constitution. Even when a few months ago the constitution broke down in Sind owing to the Ministry’s failure to secure the requisite majority the Ministry was not removed. It is foolish to expect that Section 93 could be applied in the Frontier where the ministry has the solid support of a good majority of the legislators. This propaganda about the application of Section 93 may help in keeping alive the unlawful and violent agitation for a little while longer but it cannot affect the stability of the Ministry’.—API
24. ‘Recall and Dismissal of Sir Olaf Caroe Demanded’

Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 5 May 1947.

New Delhi, May 4.—Acharya Jugal Kishore, General Secretary of the Congress, and Dewan Chamanlal have issued a statement on the Frontier province in which they state that 'a Governor should be appointed in place of Sir Olaf Caroe who should be prepared to guarantee protection to the minorities in full sympathy and harmony with the present Ministry and that it is not the Ministry that should be dismissed but the Governor and the officials who look to him for support'.

The Congress leaders had gone to survey the Frontier situation and make a first hand report to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru at his request. Following is the text of the statement: ‘We have recently returned from a tour of the Frontier Province and what we have seen of the destruction and violence committed against the persons and property of innocent men, women and children has shocked us beyond measure. There is no doubt that the adherents of the Muslim League have utilized these atrocious methods with the primary object of making it impossible for the Ministry to function, nor have we any doubt that what we may call the Governor’s party has given direct or indirect encouragement to the law breakers...’

‘One of the spokesmen of the League is pleased to describe such horrible and premeditated atrocities as evidence of a “spirit of anger and discontent prevailing in the Frontier Province”. Not one word of condemnation or regret or horror has fallen from the lips of this gentleman, but instead he calls for a referendum, thinking possibly that by such acts of brutal coercion and intimidation a reversal can be obtained of the recent crushing defeat suffered by his party in the provincial election.

‘The Frontier Ministry is unshakable. It has the support not only of the minorities to a man but also of an imposing majority of the elected legislators representing the Frontier Pathans. All wishful thinking on the part of inspired agitators, wanting fresh elections or a Section 93 Government is utter nonsense and balderdash. No Ministry is as secure in popular support today as the Ministry headed by Dr Khan Sahib and it would survive terrorism, brutality, coercion and even the present Governor of the North West Frontier Province.

‘It is an open secret that the present Governor does not favour the Ministry. A man in his position who is also the head of the Political Department, can seriously hamper the work of the Ministry since a large number of administrative officers play a dual role being civilian administrators as well as Political Agents. Special responsibility rests upon the Governor for the protection of the minorities and yet attempt made by well meaning administrators and the Ministry to protect the minorities have been frustrated. Representatives of the minorities met us and told us that they had complete confidence in the Red Shirts and yet a scheme for the provision of Home Guards has been unnecessarily held up by the Governor—thus robbing the minorities of confidence in his impartiality.

‘The happenings at Dera Ismail Khan were an eye-opener to us. The League agitation had practically fizzled out and it became difficult to find more than four persons to offer themselves for arrest, although on previous occasions the figures had been very high. It was obvious that the back of the agitation had been broken and all was peaceful.

‘In this situation secret meetings were held, people imported from the Punjab and other areas and definite information was conveyed to the authorities of the impending disaster. As it was known that the so-called civil disobedience movement having failed, resort would be had to violence, repeated orders were issued by the head of civilian administration for the arrest of the ring leaders and repeatedly these orders were disobeyed by the police officials. Indeed, even the orders of the Inspector General of Police under the instruction of ministry were flouted. The flouting of these orders resulted in the agitators resorting to violence with impunity and on the 15th of April, the first incident that took place was the burning of a shop right opposite the police station at Dera Ismail Khan.

'The Governor of the Province was fully aware of the orders given for the arrest of the ring leaders and yet when he arrived, he asked one of the most prominent of the ring leaders to accompany him and openly fraternised with this person. Quite naturally the officials who had disobeyed the orders given to them had done so knowing perfectly well that they would not be questioned or called to order. The city of Dera Ismail Khan could have been saved and all the disaster that had come upon that city and the surrounding areas could have been avoided. But in this unnatural state of affairs when officials displayed a dual loyalty, disaster was inevitable. This unnatural state of affairs must cease immediately and a Governor should be appointed in the place of Sir Olaf Caroe who is prepared to guarantee protection to the minorities in full sympathy and harmony with the present ministry which is headed by a unique and superb personality, Dr Khan Sahib.'

25. NWFP People Must Be Given a Chance to Express Opinion

Statement by M.A. Jinnah, 7 May 1947

I have had the opportunity of discussing with Frontier League leaders the situation in the NWFP and the developments that have taken place recently. The League movement in the Frontier was started because the people, and especially the Muslim Leaguers and the League Organization in the Province, were sought to be crushed by the Khan Sahib Ministry by fair means or foul ever since the Ministry was formed. The victimization, persecutions, suppression and oppression on the part of the Government knew no limits. Every vestige of civil liberties had ceased to exist. Ordinances, Frontier crime regulations, Section 144 and other repressive provisions of the law were being freely and ruthlessly used to deprive the people of their rights of political expression and criticism of the Ministry. These were the conditions prevailing in the Province when the top ranking leaders of the Muslim League were arrested for asserting their rights of civil liberties, and the resentment caused among the people assumed the character of mass civil disobedience. It is absolutely false, and a complete misrepresentation of the facts, that the All India Muslim League ever decided to resort to direct action.

2. The Bombay resolution of the 29th July, 1946, he continued, merely indicated a change of policy. By it we declared that we would no longer be restricted to constitutional methods which had been scrupulously followed by the All Muslim League up to that time. The Congress creed, on the other hand, not only permitted them to resort to unlawful means, but it was the very essence of the organization, and they were free to resort to mass civil disobedience at any time they considered proper for the achievement of their objectives through coercive methods. This 'Sword of Damocles', he said, was kept continually hanging over the Muslims and the British Government, and the Congress has repeatedly launched movements and used the weapons of mass civil disobedience since 1921 on various occasions, creating grave situations in the country. The last time they decided to launch the movement was in 1942, and we all know with what disastrous consequences. The attitude of the Congress towards perpetrators of acts of violence in connection with movements launched by it is evident from what the Congress Ministries have been doing since their return to power. In their Provinces acts of violence committed during the 1942 movement have been hailed by the Congress leaders as acts of heroism and patriotism.

3. As against this policy and record of the Congress the Muslim League, by its resolution of the 29th July, only made it clear that it was now free to launch a movement of mass civil disobedience as and when it was thought necessary. It was in this sense that the phrase ‘direct action’ was used. It is quite obvious that the meaning of ‘direct action’ which is attributed to us maliciously, namely that it is based on the principle of force, violence and bloodshed, is without any foundation and is absolutely untrue. ‘Direct action’ means social pressure, strike or revolt, constituting moral pressure upon the authority in power to redress our grievances and meet our demands.

4. The present movement in the North-West Frontier Province developed because the situation had become intolerable, and the Ministry could not be allowed to continue its ruthless policy of crushing the Muslims and the Muslim League Organization. The entire public has lost its confidence in this Ministry and there is Province-wide demand for the application of Section 93, and fresh elections. Dr Khan Sahib and his co-Ministers were challenged to seek the verdict of the people, which they, in their extreme obstinacy, still refuse to do. From all the information that is available to me and I have gone through this matter most carefully, I cannot disagree with the facts as they exist, and as a result of the situation created by the Frontier Ministry thousands of the people have been arrested, sentenced to various terms of imprisonment and detained and clapped into jails under the Frontier Crime Regulations. The only honourable course for Dr Khan Sahib and his co-Ministers is to resign and seek fresh election.

5. I note that the Frontier Government subsequently issued a communique on the 19th April in which inter alia they said ‘The Government have, for their part, decided unconditionally to release, as soon as conditions permit, all political prisoners who are not charged with offences of violence; and the Government have no intention of interfering with the freedom of expression of political opinion or with peaceful meetings, but they must impress on all in the Province that processions and picketing have in the past proved an incitement to acts of lawlessness, and that they cannot be permitted until normal conditions return’. But the root cause still remains. I had hoped that better counsels would prevail and I do still hope that the situation will be examined dispassionately, and in its true perspective, by those concerned.

6. The Provincial Muslim League, he continued, has on the 1st May (before the Frontier leaders came to Delhi to meet me), after full consideration, come to the conclusion that the steps so far proposed by the Frontier Government in no way met the demands of the Muslim League, and were, therefore, not acceptable to the League. They, therefore, decided not to call off the movement. The Frontier leaders could not also agree to their being released, for they had not gone to the jails merely to be released. I sympathize with them and I am unable to disagree with them in the decisions that they have taken.

7. Nevertheless, we must recognize that the question of the Frontier, in all its aspects, is now before His Majesty’s Government, and Lord Ismay is in the UK now, and, in my opinion, it is a question of a few weeks when decisions concerning the whole of India are likely to be announced. It is quite obvious that the people of the NWFP must be given a chance to express their verdict, and the root cause of popular resentment must be eliminated. There is not the slightest doubt what the verdict will be, and the present Ministry cannot possibly thereafter continue. Therefore, as I have always said, let us hope for the best and be prepared for the worst.

8. In these circumstances I most earnestly appeal to every Muslim, especially the Leaguer, to do all in their power to remain peaceful. Without any reservation I say that on our side there should be no resort to violence or force, and we must bear up with fortitude and show tolerance, despite the gravest provocations. We should not depart from the strictly peaceful path which we are determined to follow. In no circumstances, he continued, should the Movement be allowed to take a communal turn. Our fight is not against the Hindus or Sikhs. We are fighting for a true verdict of the people of the Province, to be obtained by fair and free methods. It is against all canons of morality and civilization, and the teachings of Islam, that we should harm the weak. On the contrary it is the duty of every Muslim to protect the minorities, in spite of whatever provocation there may be. I know it can be said that it takes two to keep peace, but on our side I say keep peace at any cost, and to the other side I may say ‘don’t provoke and keep peace’. I pray to God that during the few weeks that are now ahead of us, pending the final announcement, both sides will do their best and save people from destruction of life and property. When the final announcement has been made it will be entirely for us, and we will be free to decide as to what course of action we should adopt’.

26. League Movement in the Frontier Loses Track
Press Statement Issued by Ashutosh Lahiry, 8 May 1947
AIHM Papers, File No. C-165, NMML.
The statement issued by Mr Jinnah is a laboured defence of the indefensible movement of civil disobedience being carried on by his followers in the North Frontier Province and is indeed an amazing piece of effrontery. It is most deplorable that Mr Jinnah should have, at this juncture, lent the League Civil Disobedience movement of the Frontier Province the weight of his public support, when the paramount need of the moment was to discourage forces of disorder and lawlessness in the province. His present statement will only strengthen the lawless element, inspite of his call to his followers to remain peaceful. It is clear that Mr Jinnah succumbed to the pressure of the young enthusiasts of the League headed by the Fakir of Manki.

It is entirely contrary to facts to say that the League movement was started, because the people were ruthlessly deprived of their rights of political expression or criticism of the ministry. The movement was started with the definite political objective of ousting the Congress ministry from power, whatever might have been its ostensible purpose. It is well-known that the deprivations of civil liberties in the Frontier Province did not precede but followed the launching of the Civil Disobedience movement by the League. As a matter of fact, the Khan Sahib ministry had been guilty of excessive leniency to the leaders of the Moslem League including the Fakir of Manki who were allowed to carry on amongst the fanatical Pathans a reckless campaign of hatred and violence for several months and propagate intense communal bitterness amongst the ignorant masses. Torn pages from the Koran as well as human bones were conspicuously displayed in every meeting to prove how in Bihar Islam had been humiliated and Moslems have been done to death. Such reckless campaign had its inevitable effect and the Hazara outrages were the direct outcome of this insensate propaganda. Did Mr Jinnah ever condemn these outrages in which the minority community alone suffered at the hands of the majority community. Had the Khan Sahib ministry taken steps to restrain in time this organized campaign of incitement to violence, Hazara tragedy could not have been enacted, nor could have the forces of disorder and lawlessness gained the strength and intensity which these have reached today.

The ministry is now paying dearly for its shortsighted policy and its over anxiety to placate to the insatiable lust of the Moslem League. From a study of the sequence of events in the North West Frontier Province it will be found that Mr Jinnah’s charge that the League was compelled to launch the civil disobedience movement in vindication of civil liberties is entirely baseless.

Mr Jinnah’s attempts to defend the Frontier movement on an analogy with the Congress Civil Disobedience movements are equally futile. The Congress movement had been carried on strictly on non-violent lines and Gandhiji had called off the movement whenever he found indications of any deviation from the strict path of non-violence. The 1942 movement was an exception and has been repudiated by Gandhiji. The Congress leaders had no opportunity to inaugurate or to lead the movement which, owing to the folly of the Government, degenerated into a mass movement of violence, quite contrary to the tradition and technique of the Gandhi movement. To compare Congress Civil Disobedience movements with the League movement of Civil Disobedience is indeed a travesty of facts and is to do violence to truth and reason.

Mr Jinnah, curiously enough, has sought, at this belated hour, to emphasize the peaceful nature of the Direct Action movement of the League while the march of events during the last eight months has left no room for mistaking the real intentions of this League movement. Since the formation of the League Council of Action, the country has been flooded with speeches, statements, and messages from responsible Moslem League Leaders such as Mr Nazimuddin, Sir Feroze Khan Noon, Mr Suhrawardy and Sir Ghazanfar Ali Khan and others with the evident object of preparing the Moslem mass mind for violence. I need not refer in detail to these speeches they are so fresh in public mind. In fact a campaign of direct incitement to violence has been the consistent policy of all the responsible League leaders including Mr Jinnah himself. Even the other day Mr Jinnah, in course of a statement threatened that if Pakistan were not accepted, the only other alternative would be ‘Catastrophe’ in the country.

These speeches and statements have not remained mere empty utterances but have been followed by actual deeds of violence and brutality from one end of the country to the other. The opening campaign of the Direct Action Day on the 16th August led to frightful atrocities in Calcutta; and Noakhali, Lahore and Rawalpindi, followed in quick succession. And now the Frontier Districts have been the scene of persistent outrages compelling the major portion of the Hindus and Sikh population to evacuate the province. In the face of such overwhelming evidence of calculated and organized violence in the interest of the Moslem League, Mr Jinnah’s assertion about the peaceful intentions of his Direct Action movement is indeed a cruel mockery.

Mr Jinnah knows too well what loss and sufferings the Civil Disobedience movement of the League has caused the Hindus in the North West Frontier Provinces. At least one thousand Hindus have been murdered in Peshawar, Hazara, Kohat and Dera Ismail Khan districts alone during the last two months—not to speak of systematic looting and burning of thousands of Hindu families. To call this Civil Disobedience, a peaceful movement to bring moral pressure to bear upon the authority in power, as Mr Jinnah has done, is a most blatant untruth.

If Mr Jinnah’s concluding appeal for peace to his followers had been genuine, he would have called off or withdrawn his support to the Frontier movement which has resulted in such widespread killing and spoliation of one community alone. Whatever he might say the Frontier movement is inescapably aimed against the minority community. If a tree is known by its fruits, the frank violence of the League movement is a stark and unchallengeable fact. Why does not Mr Jinnah follow Gandhiji’s example and cry a halt to the orgies of loot, arson and murder and demonstrate, by concrete action, his genuine anxiety for the peaceful character of his Direct Action movement: As it is, his present statement is intended to whitewash the misdeeds of his followers in the Frontier Province.

I have no doubt that in spite of his peace appeal Mr Jinnah’s failure to condemn the crimes hitherto committed by the Frontier men against the minority community, and his support to the Civil Disobedience movement with the full knowledge of its essentially violence [sic] character will serve as a distinct encouragement to the League fanatics.

27. ‘Agitation Will Bring League’s End in Frontier: Dr Khan Sahib’

Peshawar, May 8.—Dr Khan Sahib Premier of NWFP, at a press conference today declared that the Pathans would not tolerate if anything was forced on them unjustly.

He said he was surprised that any Indian, whoever he might be, could suggest section 93 rule for NWFP, ‘which we have removed once before and which we shall never allow in this province’.

‘As far as the will of the people is concerned,’ Dr Khan Sahib continued, ‘a plebiscite after the departure of the British will show what the Pathans want. The plebiscite should be an honest vote of the people of the province without being interfered with or influenced by those who have always been deceiving the Pathans’.

The Frontier Premier asserted: ‘The fight in NWFP is between the poor and the vested interests. The League agitation here has nothing to do with political agitation in the rest of India’.

A few women running about in processions and paid volunteers from tribal areas and the Punjab could never impress the Pathans who knew what their duty was and who were carefully watching the arrival of freedom, he added.

Dr Khan Sahib sympathized with ‘friends of Mr Churchill’ because the previous imperialist regimes gave them support, which in a democratic country, they could never hope to get. ‘In a way, I am glad,’ Dr Khan Sahib said, ‘that they are not stopping their agitation because that will bring about their end in the Frontier Province and that will disillusion them. They must remember that they can never be saved by imperialist bayonets from hungry crowds whom they have provoked now and on whose labours they have always lived’.

28. ‘120 Red Shirts Join League: Bomb Explosion in Kohat: 123 Volunteers Arrested’

Peshawar, Tuesday.—Despite Khan Ministry’s repression in the NWF Province, the League movement is proceeding with an ever increasing tempo. Veiled women are in the vanguard of the Pathans’ fight for the restoration of people’s civil liberties. Big processions and mammoth meetings on the one hand and peaceful picketing of courts and courting of arrest in large numbers, on the other, have become the daily feature. Even the Khudai Khidmatgars are not left untouched by the Khanna-Khan Ministry’s desperate tactics in crushing their brother Pathans’ freedom movement and there are reports that the Red Shirts are daily joining the Muslim League in considerable numbers.

Yesterday 120 Red Shirts, including their commander, joined Muslim League. In Peshawar, League volunteers picketed the Judicial Commissioner’s Court, in the course of which 28 of them were arrested.

The Zenana Muslim League took out the usual procession from Khan Abdul Qayyum Khan’s residence, which marching through the city bazaars and the Pakistan Chowk and raising anti-Ministry and League slogans reached Gorkhaki Tehsils where the crescent spangled green flag was planted.

At 5 p.m., a huge procession led by Agha Khan Badshah Kalandari was taken out from the City League Office in defiance of Section 144 CrPC, enforced in Peshawar.

When the processionists marching through the main bazaars and streets of the city reached Kabli Gate police post, 15 of them were arrested. The procession, thereafter, in its characteristically peaceful manner, marched back and terminated at Bazar-i-Kalan.

Begum Kamaluddin with other five arrested ladies was brought back from Kohat to Peshawar in police custody, where they were later released, according to the information available from the League office.

While in Kohat, on May 11, a very big procession, followed by another women’s procession, was taken out in defiance of the Government ban. Five of the processionists were arrested.

The total number of arrests made that day was, according to OPI, 55.

About 25 League workers, who after their release were returning to their villages by train, were re-arrested at the railway station.

A Hindu Railway officer always takes Hindu passengers free in his reserved bogie to Rawalpindi. The railway authorities have been informed to this effect.

A bomb explosion was heard at about 10 p.m. on the night of May 10 near Babu Ram building, where another bomb explosion took place a few days back. Consequently, much panic prevails here at the attitude of the local authorities in not making searches in the houses belonging to the minority community where bombs and arms are alleged to have been kept in store. Great resentment is also felt about the present hours of the curfew clapped down on the city from 8 p.m. to 8 a.m.

Railway stations were picketed and Pakistan tickets were issued by the League volunteers at Nowshera, Mardan, Hathian and Takhatbhai.

There were processions, meetings, court picketing and other forms of demonstration in almost all provincial towns.

29. ‘Badshah Khan’s Call to Leaguers’

The Hindustan Times, 14 May 1947.

Peshawar, May 13.—An appeal to Muslim League leaders to sit with Khudai Khidmatgars in a joint jirga to tackle the various issues that may arise after the British quit India was made by Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan addressing a public meeting in ‘Iliqa Khalil’, Peshawar district, yesterday.

He said: ‘Leaguers fear Hindu domination, while we fear British domination. Let us meet together. We are prepared to allay their fears. But, I ask, would they in return allay our fears?
This is the foremost issue to be considered and then will follow others which vitally affect the interests of Pathans and in regard to which everyone of us, of whatever political persuasion and economic interests, must be sincerely anxious'.

Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan warned the Pathans that resort to methods of violence would mean their annihilation. If they wanted their fair name to be maintained, they should eschew violence and hatred from their hearts.

30. ‘250 Workers Arrested in Kohat, More Red Shirts Join League Movement’

Kohat, Monday.—For the last fortnight, the younger brother of Pir Sahib Manki Sharif, accompanied by Mian Abdulla Shah, Haji Said Shah and Ali Mohammad Khan, has been carrying on extensive tour in the rural areas of this district. They addressed huge gatherings in about a score of villages, as a result of which a large number of Red Shirts joined the Muslim League.

In the meetings, resolutions were passed expressing no confidence in the Congress ministry, and reiterating full confidence in the leadership of the Qaed-e-Azam.

After the Friday prayers on May 16, at a meeting held at Bahadur Khan Mosque, the following resolutions were passed:

That the Muslim League strongly condemns the action of the Congress ministry in indiscriminately arresting respectable League workers under Section 40 FCR.

That the present curfew hours from 8 p.m. to 6 a.m. interfere with the religious rights of the Muslims, who are debarred from offering their congregational prayers.

Khan Should Follow Khizr

That it is the time when the Khan brothers should join the Muslim League and follow the noble example of Malik Khizr Hayat Khan, the ex-Premier of Punjab.

The same day, the civil courts in the Kohat district were picketed, resulting in the suspension of work. 150 picketers were arrested. A huge procession of men and women marched through the main bazaars at 6 p.m. Five processionists were arrested and, following their arrest, five lady processionists offered themselves for arrest but were refused arrest. The procession dispersed at the Jinnah Park, after a speech by the Muslim League leaders.

Haji Said Shah, the President of the District League, was arrested under Sec. 40 FCR on May 17. Consequently, all the schools remained closed and the students marched in a procession to the civil courts for picketing, but the police dispersed them, arresting six of them....

Courts Paralysed

After the students were arrested, the courts were picketed by men from the Ustarzai village who suspended the work of the courts for a few hours 90 of these were arrested.

In the evening, as usual, a huge procession followed by 2,000 ladies marched through the main bazaars. The processionists held street-corner meetings at various places in defiance of Sec. 144 CrPC. Five of the processionists were arrested.

All the schools here remained closed for the day. The students marched towards the civil courts in a procession to picket them. But the police arrested six of them and dispersed the rest.
31. Report from NWFP

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on NWFP for the First Half of May 1947, 27 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

...Political and Communal. Although the Muslim League agitation has by no means been abandoned, and indeed has been endorsed by Mr M.A. Jinnah in his recent broadcast, its intensity has been markedly less. The general picture given in my report for the second half of April remains unchanged in so far as the nature of the agitation goes; and to this may be added the appearance in several places of highly inflammatory broadsheets inciting the public to communal as well as political hostility. There has been some increase, also, in the number of bomb outrages, although the amount of damage done by them has been negligible. Hindus and Sikhs have also continued to emigrate in large numbers, especially from Bannu. But the number of demonstrators, picketers, and of people interfering with trains has greatly decreased. This decrease might have been more marked but for the greater frequency with which processions of women have been taken out, particularly in Peshawar. No method has yet been devised of adequately controlling these. The harvest probably has much to do with this reduced activity but the strongest reason is probably to be found in a general air of expectancy that an announcement is shortly to be made in Delhi and that until then it is sufficient to keep the agitation alive without pressing it to extremes.

That it would not take much to arouse it to dangerous proportions has been shown by several incidents. On May 10th, for example, a Martyrs’ Day was observed in Peshawar, Mardan, and Kohat to commemorate the two men killed near the Legislative Assembly on March 10th when the military were forced to open fire. Substantial crowds took part in these celebrations. Again considerable indignation was worked up in Kohat on May 11th, when an externment order was served on a certain Begum Kamal-ud-Din, and on that day and the next processions ran into several thousands. On April 29th the house of a Muslim in Haripur, Hazara District, accidentally caught fire while he was working in his fields and two children were burnt to death. Malice was quick to impute this to incendiarism by the troops stationed there, and attempts were made for Friday May 2nd to be celebrated on a large scale as a Martyrs’ Day for the two children. Communal tension was extreme but fortunately influential people managed to get the celebrations cancelled. In this way the pot continues to simmer, and commerce and Government work continues to suffer.

An offshoot of the agitation has been an attempt at a no-rent campaign in parts of Hazara District and adjacent independent territory. It appears to have been initiated by the Ahrars, and though it has not achieved serious proportions, there is always danger of its doing so in the prevailing lawless atmosphere.

A measure of peace has returned to Dera Ismail Khan District, though occasional raids have taken place by gangs composed partly of Trans-border Tribesmen and partly of local bad characters. The measures taken by the local civil and military authorities have been so thorough that hardly one of these raids has not either been repulsed at the outset or interrupted at an early stage with deterrent casualties to the culprits. Total casualties in the District upto April 25th amounted to 121 of all communities killed and 89 of all communities wounded. Three quarters of those killed and about half of those wounded were of minority communities. The damage in Dera Ismail Khan City is estimated to be of the value of nearly rupees one crore; while the town of Tank has very largely ceased to exist. Apart from the horrible implications of these figures in terms of human suffering, it is no exaggeration to say that the effects on commerce also imply an economic calamity to the District and the adjacent Tribal Areas not only through the destruction of property and goods, but also through the emigration of many thousands of those upon whom commerce depended.

The situation in the jails has if anything deteriorated. It was hoped that the party of Muslim League leaders who visited Delhi on parole for discussions at the beginning of the month might return with a decision to meet the Provincial Government’s proclaimed amnesty at least halfway. They did return on May 7th, but the decision was that they should maintain the status quo ante. The leaders themselves have on several occasions shown that they are capable of controlling their more extreme followers. But in the absence of the leaders first in the Peshawar Jail and later in Delhi, Haripur Jail in particular and others to a less extent proved turbulent. Assaults on Jail staff and damage to Jail property have been reported from Dera Ismail Khan and Haripur; and everywhere discipline has been defied. The Provincial Government decided on May 9th that in these circumstances the privileges extended to political prisoners must be withdrawn even if the process should lead to serious disturbances. It has begun in Peshawar Jail and so far no untoward incident has occurred. It is, however, still too early to be confident that yet another crisis may not have to be faced....

32. ‘Campaign of Communal Aggression Can’t Be Called Civil Disobedience’

Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 28 May 1947.

Peshawar, May 20.—Mr Mehr Chand Khanna, Finance and Information Minister, Frontier Government, says in a press statement, ‘I take strong objection to the statement of Lord Listowel, Secretary of State for India, in the House of Lords on May 21 in reply to a question by Lord Lloyd that the Muslim League campaign of civil disobedience had been started against the Frontier Congress Ministry and that campaign had taken the form of peaceful processions and demonstrations.

‘I do not know from where Lord Listowel got his facts. I can only say in my capacity as Information Minister that I was never consulted. Common courtesy demands that Provincial Government should be consulted before questions of policy are answered and data given. To allow Lord Listowel to get a clear picture of so-called civil disobedience campaign I am instructing the Information Department to send him copies of all official communiqués.

‘It is wrong to call an organized campaign of communal aggression and violence as civil disobedience. Since shooting and killing started in Hazara, Frontier District, one out of every 4,000 Hindus and Sikhs in the Frontier has been murdered. Due to this orgy of loot, arson and murder a very large proportion of Hindu and Sikh population has left the province. Meetings and processions could not be described as peaceful even by any stretch of imagination. In the former violence is openly preached and in the latter openly practiced. The first so called peaceful procession was started in Mardan on February 19 by inflicting bodily injuries on members of minority communities and by looting their property. It was followed by an organized raid on the house of the Premier in Peshawar. After two days, attempts were even made on the lives of the Hon’ble Premier and the Education Minister. There are many other cases in which processionists shot dead peaceful citizens. Provocative speeches were made in Dera Ismail Khan, another Frontier District which saw worst cases of atrocities, perpetrated by any human being. It may be pointed out that this happened after the so-called peace appeal had been made by the President of the All India Muslim League. ...

33. ‘D.I.K. Scheduled Castes Support Pakistan’
_Dawn, 30 May 1947._

Peshawar. Wednesday.—The newly formed Federation of Scheduled Castes of Dera Ismil Khan has passed a unanimous resolution, pledging their support for Pakistan.

The Muslim League flag was hoisted over their houses on Sunday to declare their sympathy with the Muslim League civil liberties campaign.

34. ‘Waziri Tribesmen Reaffirm Faith in Pakistan’
_Dawn, 1 June 1947._

_D.I. Khan, Saturday._—A huge public meeting was held at Khan Gurum (Waziristan) under the presidentship of Captain Mir Badshah Khan, Chief of Mahsuda tribes. The Waziris once again expressed their unflinching faith in Pakistan and declared to fight for it to the last. On June 5, a bigger meeting has been called which will be presided by Shahzada Fazaldin Khan uncrowned king of Waziristan.

In a resolution tribes made protest against Government who arrested 600 Mahsuds near Bannu and asked Government to release them.

Courts were picketed yesterday in D.I. Khan. Ghulam Sarwar Khan and Sher Khan Vice-President and President of Paniala respectively with 13 picketers have been arrested. Frontier Muslims are determined to face many troubles till the Congress Ministry is removed from office.

Frontier Muslims through province-wide agitation have shown that they are against the Congress rule.

Due to the untiring efforts of Pir Sahib of Zakori, Member of Frontier Assembly, D.I. Khan and Bannu have become the centre of League activities since the movement of civil disobedience has started in Frontier. It was Pir Sahib’s efforts that the Congress false propaganda was torn asunder in Frontier in general and in Bannu and D.I. Khan in particular. Every Pathan in this province is prepared to lay his life on one call of Pir Sahib. Thousands of his disciples have thronged jails in N-WFP.

Government have stopped arresting mojahidins as there is no space in jalis. Civil Liberty Movement is in full swing gaining strength day by day. Pir Sahib of Zakori is determined to continue the struggle till Khan’s Ministry go out of office.

35. ‘NWFP League Movement Withdrawn’
_Dawn, 2 June 1947._

New Delhi. Tuesday.—Mr Sher Bahadur Khan, Secretary, Frontier Muslim League War Council, in a statement tonight said: ‘I have been directed by Mr Samin Jan Khan, President, Frontier Muslim League, that in view of the announcement made by the Viceroy and the broadcast by the Qaed-e-Azam the League movement of civil disobedience in the NWFP should be suspended forthwith.'
The formal withdrawal of the movement will be decided upon by the provincial Muslim League when it meets on the 9th instant. I, therefore, call upon all the war councils in the province to cease their activities and also direct that prisoners, convicted in connection with the movement and still under trial orders for whose release had been issued by the provincial Government sometime back, should come out of jails at once'. —API

36. Demand for Removal of NWFP Governor

Extract from a Note by M.K. Gandhi to Louis Mountbatten, 2 June 1947

CWMG, Vol. LXXXVIII, p. 60.

...Badshah Khan is with me in the Bhangi Colony. He said ‘Do ask the Viceroy to remove the Governor. We won’t have peace till he is gone.’ I don’t know whether he is right or wrong. He is truthful. If it can be done decorously, you should do it.
Chapter 20. Division of Punjab

1. Against Partition of Punjab

Extract from an Article in The Tribune, 23 March 1947.

[The proposed partition of the Punjab is a question of great importance not only to this province, but also to the rest of the country. While publishing Prof Brij Narain’s article against partition we invite those political thinkers who are for it to make their contribution to the discussion. Owing to the extraordinary pressure on the space in the ‘Tribune’ we shall be able to publish just a few selected articles.—Ed. ‘T.’]

The Congress Working Committee, in its meeting at New Delhi on 8th of March, took an important decision, without realizing its implications. We are referring to the proposed partition of the Punjab.

In the earlier part of the Resolution there is a reference to the Congress having already expressed its acceptance of the Cabinet Mission’s scheme of May 16, 1946 and of ‘the interpretations put upon it by the British Cabinet on December 16’. The Resolution on the Punjab seeks to find a settlement of the Punjab problem involving ‘the least amount of compulsion.’ ‘This would necessitate a division of the Punjab into two provinces,’ the resolutions proceeds, ‘so that the predominantly Muslim part may be separated from the predominantly non-Muslim part.’ The Congress Working Committee commends this solution which, it thinks, ‘should work to the advantage of all the communities concerned and lessen friction and fear and suspicion of each other.’

Partition and the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme

It may be noted in the first place that the demand for the partition of the Punjab is not consistent with the Congress acceptance of the Cabinet Mission’s scheme. There is no partition of any province in this scheme, but the grouping of the Provinces into Sections. The place of the Punjab is in Section B. The Cabinet Mission’s scheme does not grant to any ‘part of a province’ the right to frame its own constitution, or to opt out of its Section, now or at any subsequent time. I am stating this as a fact and no useful purpose is served by ignoring facts. Either the Congress has accepted the Cabinet Mission’s scheme or it has not. Assuming that the Congress has accepted this scheme ‘in its entirety’, the Congress cannot demand the division of the Punjab into two provinces.

Two Questions

But this is a small point. The British have fixed a date for ‘quitting India,’ and we may draw up any kind of constitution, ignoring the Cabinet Mission’s scheme. The Punjab may be partitioned, if the League and the Congress agree. There are two main questions to consider: Is the partition of the Punjab practicable, and secondly, is it advisable?

Many readers of the ‘Tribune’ would be inclined to answer the first question in the affirmative. We take a map of the Punjab, and draw a line somewhere—the Punjab is divided into two provinces. How very simple!

But the drawing of this line would not be a simple affair. It would be a most difficult operation and it would arouse a controversy which would not be settled before June 1948. Apart from this, the inclusion of a district, or part of a district, in a certain zone, and its exclusion from the other zone, would create a situation which might lead eventually to organized civil war....

In the whole province there is majority of Muslims, 57.06 per cent. If the partition were to take place by Divisions, and simple majority were the criterion, then the League would claim the following Divisions: Multan, Rawalpindi and Lahore. But the Congress Resolution speaks of ‘predominantly’ Muslim and non-Muslim parts. What is the interpretation of ‘predominantly’? Is the Lahore Division, with a Muslim majority of 58.18 per cent of the total population, a predominantly Muslim area? An authoritative definition of the term ‘predominantly’ is required. Who is to provide this definition? If the Congress and the League fail to reach an agreement on this point, which is not unlikely, will the dispute be referred to the U.N.O.?

Some Interesting Cases

Next consider the distribution of the population by district. In Ferozepur the Muslim percentage is 45.07 and of Hindus and Sikhs combined 53.31. Ferozepur is predominantly neither a Hindu–Sikh area, nor a Muslim area. Who is to secure Ferozepur, the Congress or the League? The Muslims have a bare majority in Gurdaspur, 51.14. The League cannot have it because it is not a ‘predominantly’ Muslim district, and the Congress cannot claim it as there is a Hindu–Sikh minority in the district. In Amritsar, again there is bare majority of Hindus and Sikhs. It will be seen that partition on the basis of predominantly Muslim and non-Muslim areas will raise enormous difficulties.

Who Will Get Lahore?

Will the rich prize of Lahore, with its University, libraries, colleges and industries fall to the League? Or will there be a partition of Lahore and its wealth? Try to answer this question, and you will realize the senselessness of the proposal to divide the Punjab into two provinces. It is easy to adopt resolutions it is not so easy to put them into effect.

Fate of Minorities

The advisability of partition may be considered from several points of view. We may begin with the fate of minorities in the predominantly Muslim and non-Muslim areas after partition has taken place.

Is a transfer of populations contemplated? Writing in the ‘Tribune’ dated December 5, 1946 (‘Power Politics.’ III) I said, ‘when the Congress has not been able to prevent the economic partition of the country, how would it prevent the political partition when it comes? Supposing widespread disturbances continue with large-scale murder, looting and arson, political partition, with the transfer of populations from one area to another, would become inevitable.’

The Congress now itself demands the political partition of the Punjab, which is only the first step towards the political partition of India. There are over 28 per cent Muslims in the Ambala
Division of Punjab

1115

Division and over 34 per cent Muslims in the Jullundur Division. In the predominantly Muslim Division of Multan, Hindus and Sikhs form over 21 per cent of the population. Are minorities to be left to the tender mercies of majority community? The Congress resolution says nothing about it, but Mahatma Gandhi’s views about moving minorities to their majority areas are well known. Members of a minority community must stay where they are, and allow themselves to be killed or roasted alive, whenever it should please the majority community to do so.

It will be said that safeguards would be provided for minorities. The majority community in every part of India has repeatedly declared that it will stand forth as the protector of minorities.
Such declarations mean nothing. They mean nothing in our country, as large scale murder, looting and arson in Bihar and the Punjab have shown,...

2. Fate of Minorities in Jhelum District

Letter from Joginder Singh Danona to General Secretary, Provincial Congress Committee, 2 April 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-34/1947, NMML.

From: Joginder Singh Danona,
For Hindu and Sikh Families of Village: BHAUN
Mohalla Kochhran, BHAUN, Distt Jhelum.
Dated 2nd April, 1947.

To: The General Secretary,
Provincial Congress Committee,
Lahore.
Through the Secy., Distt CC Jhelum.

Dear Comrade,

In view of the AICC resolution recommending partition of the Punjab, I have the honour to approach you on behalf of the Hindu and Sikh families of my village and request you to please clarify these points by the return of the post.

1. We who are hardly 7 per cent in these districts are being solely left on the mercy of the Majority Community in these Distt.
2. In case the scheme passed by the AICC is put into effect, what arrangements are under consideration for our migration to the native places where our community is in a majority?
3. In view of the fact that we about 50 families of this Village intend to migrate from this side to the Eastern Punjab or the United Provinces, may I please be informed that possible facilities can be accorded for our settlement in the Eastern Punjab or United Provinces.
4. I shall be glad if you contact the United Provinces Government and stress on them the necessity of providing us a temporary shelter for the present and some 100 Bighas of land where about 200 families can be settled and the place should be near the Railway Station where ... facilities would be forthcoming. We are quite willing to buy the land which if at all is at distance of about 6 miles from Railway Station but should be sold to us on a very reasonable price.
I feel sure that you will take steps to ensure that necessary accommodation is provided to us and about 100 Bighas of land is provided to us with facilities of taking shelter in the first instance.

I expect a very early reply and your advice in the matter by the return of post rather inform me telegraphically.

I am, Sir,
Yours, etc etc etc.
Joginder Singh Danona,
Mohalla Kochhran, BHAUN,
Distt Jhelum.
Dated 2nd April, 1947.

NB.: In case the land can be provided and Temp. Shelter can also be arranged, I should be informed telegraphically enabling me to leave straightaway for the destination.

3. Appeal for Partition of Punjab into Two Provinces
Letter from Some Members of the Indian Central Legislature to Jawaharlal Nehru, 2 April 1947
IOR, R/3/1/157, Acc. No. 3820, NAI.

Sir,

We, the undersigned Members of the Central Legislature from the Punjab, beg to submit the following for favour of forwarding the same with your endorsement to HE the Viceroy and to HMG for their urgent consideration and immediate action thereon:

Unfortunately, the relation between the Muslims and Non-Muslims in the Punjab were already much strained due to the agitation carried on by the Muslim League for Pakistan, but the recent tragic happenings in North-Western Punjab have very rudely shaken the confidence of the Hindu and the Sikh minorities in the belief that there will be any fair deal for them at the hands of the Muslims in future.

The Muslims and Non-Muslims are almost equally balanced and no Government can carry on without the support of the three communities. Fortunately the population of the Province is so divided that there are distinct and contiguous areas where Muslims and Non-Muslims predominate. We have given our anxious and deep thought to this problem after considering all its pros and cons. We have come to the conclusion that the only way out of the present dead-lock is to partition the Punjab into two Provinces. That and that alone, in our view, can ease the tension in the Province which may increase at any moment. We further venture to add that it is no longer a long term constitutional issue, but an urgent and immediate administrative problem which should have first priority. Effective steps may, therefore, be taken forthwith to constitute two Provinces out of the present Punjab by passing an Order-in-Council or by any other way which may be found suitable. We are fully convinced that Partition is the only solution of this vexed problem.

We are, Sir,
Your most obedient servants,

(1) Pandit Thakur Das Bhargava MLA
(2) Raizada Hans Raj MLA
4. Only Sikhs Can Demand Partition

Letter from Firoz Khan Noon to M.A. Jinnah, 4 April 1947

Faletti’s Hotel, Lahore

Dear Mr Jinnah,

The following may be useful to you in your talks with the Viceroy.

1. A division of the Punjab can only be demanded by the Sikhs. The Hindus cannot object to living with a Muslim majority because we live in UP, Bihar, and other places.
2. The Sikhs can only claim special consideration if they are a separate community from the Hindus.
3. Seen as a separate community, the Sikhs do not predominate in any _tehsil_ in any of the districts in the Punjab except in only the following few:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>(a) Ambala District</th>
<th>Muslims</th>
<th>Sikhs</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tehsil Kharar</td>
<td>39,156</td>
<td>68,508</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tehsil Rupar</td>
<td>52,400</td>
<td>61,847</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>(b) Hoshiarpur District</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tehsil Garh Shankar</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>(c) Ludhiana District</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tehsil Jagraon</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Tehsil Samrala</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>(d) Ferozepore District</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tehsil Moga</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>(e) Amritsar District</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Tehsil Tarntaran</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

You will see how far apart these places are and how few. There is a move to create a federation of all Sikh States. These almost adjoin except Kapurthala, Patiala, Jind, Nabha and Faridkot are almost limitrophe. (Malerkotla is a Muslim State.) The Sikhs, if they were unhappy in the Br[itish] Punjab as it exists today, they could move into these Sikh kingdoms.

Yours sincerely,
Firoz Noon
5. ‘Hariana Jats Support Sikhs’ Demand’

_Tribune, 6 April 1947_

Hissar, April 5.—‘The Hariana Jats are completely in agreement with the Sikhs in making the demand for the division of the Punjab and they will not lag behind in making any sacrifice for fulfilment of this end. In saying this I am voicing the feeling of one and all of the Hariana Pranta,’ says Rao Bahadur Surajmal, MLA, member of the Constituent Assembly in the course of a statement.

The following is the full text of the statement:

The Hindus in the Punjab form more than 30 per cent of its population and according to its population they are the second largest community in the Punjab. Bulk of their population comes from the Hindu zamindars of the South East Punjab and sub-mountainous districts of Hoshiarpur, Kangra, Gurdaspur and Sialkot. In importance too the Hindus are second to none in the Punjab. In landed and other properties they have got a better position in the Punjab than others. They have got the best fighting material. The Hindu Jats of Hariana, the Rajputs, Ahirs, Gujjars and the Dogras of Hoshiarpur and Kangra districts have shown their mettle in the last two world wars which took place during the last 30 years. These Hindu communities are not to be cowed down or brow-beaten in any way by anybody. There might have been some differences amongst the Hindus in the past but there can be no denying the fact that they have got the perfect unanimity on the point that they are not going to submit to the rule of any one community in the Punjab and that they are opposed to any scheme which may give political power to any single community.

Hindus, as such, form an overwhelming majority in almost all the districts south of river Sutlej. These districts have never been a part of the proper Punjab before the advent of the British rule and no power on earth now can throw them at the mercy of any single community. Politically, linguistically, culturally they always formed a part of the old Delhi province. It was the British who brought them over to the Punjab after it had been annexed to the British rule.

Some 20 years ago a conference was held at Delhi under the presidentship of the late Sir Chhotu Ram to consider the creation of a separate province and it was then unanimously decided to work for the separation of the Ambala division.

The question was even raised at the Round Table Conference and a scheme was prepared.

The recent events have once again brought this question into prominence.

The re-distribution of the boundaries of provinces and creation of new provinces has always been contemplated by the main political parties on linguistic and cultural basis and I do not see any difficulty in the way of the Muslim League to accede to the legitimate demand of the Hindus and Sikhs. Thus this long-standing controversy will cease.

The Hariana Jats are completely in agreement with the Sikhs in making the demand for the division of the Punjab and they will not lag behind in making any sacrifice for the fulfilment of the end. In saying this I am voicing the feeling of one and all of the Hariana Pranta.
6. Sikhs Prepare for Violent Attack on Muslims

Extract from a Letter from Evan Jenkins to Louis Mountbatten, 9 April 1947
IOR, R/3/1/176, Acc. No. 3477, NAI.

SECRET
No. 663

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

There is now little doubt that some at least of the Sikh leaders are preparing for a violent agitation against the Muslims in the Punjab. I append for Your Excellency’s information translations of two Gurmukhi documents:

(1) an unsigned pamphlet giving a grossly exaggerated account of events in the Rawalpindi Division; and

(2) an appeal purporting to be signed by 18 Sikhs, including Sardar Baldev Singh, for what appears to be a ‘war fund’ of Rs 50 lakhs.

Document (1) was distributed some days ago by Giani Kartar Singh to Akalijathedars and Secretaries from all over the Punjab and the Punjab States. Document (2) came into our hands in print by accident; it was sent to the Ajit (a Lahore newspaper) by the Shiromani Akali Dal for publication. The editor did not publish it in full, but misdirected a copy to our Press Branch apparently in place of a document on which he wanted Press advice....

Enclosure 1

Translation of Gurmukhi Pamphlet (five sheets).
‘Thousands of innocent Sikhs murdered in cold blood.’
‘Loot and arson in Attock and Jhelum Districts. Villages after villages destroyed and razed to the ground.’
‘Sikhs! Read Patiently and Ponder over it.’
‘In order to establish Pakistan, the atrocities committed on Sikhs in the Punjab since 5th March 1947 have not come to light because of censorship on news. Although the Sikh population is small in the Districts of Attock, Rawalpindi and Jhelum, they own valuable property in these places. All the Sikh residents of these districts, excepting only a few, have been done to death, their properties looted, houses burnt, women outraged and many young girls forcibly converted to Islam. Their woeful tale is worth your patient hearing. But all this has been done according to a pre-arranged plan. At first, the Muslims took the Sikhs into their confidence on the pretext of providing them shelter from being attacked. Later, they were forced to part with their money in order to pay to the goondas who threatened to attack them. Even so, they were attacked and looted. Besides spears and swords, guns and bombs were also used. Lambardars were the ring-leaders of the goondas. Only the lives of those Sikh women were saved who agreed to their forcible conversion to Islam. The others either committed suicide or were burnt alive. The souls of all these innocent women are crying for help. The goondas had brought camels and bullock-carts to take away the booty. About thirty thousand Sikh lives have been saved by the Military, and all of them are now in Relief Camps. Those who owned lacs of rupees are today longing for a piece of bread’.

Herewith are details of incidents village by village:
[This section is omitted.]
There are thousands of Sikhs in Relief Camps, including women and children. They stand in need of everything. Thousands of young girls need clothing.

Oh Sikhs! Read this and think yourself. What have you to do under the circumstances? In your veins, there is yet the blood of your beloved Guru Gobind Singhji. Do your duty.

Translation of a Pamphlet Printed by the Ajit of Lahore (5/4/47):

‘O, Khalsaji! A critical condition has arisen for the Panth which arose after the last great Ghallughara (general massacre of Sikhs). The Ghallughara which has occurred specially in Pothohar and the Frontier is too painful for us to describe. It is not yet known what the future will bring. The time is extremely grave and situation is extremely critical. Now for us matters have gone to the extent of “throne or the coffin”. In order to maintain the existence of the Panth at this juncture, every Sikh should do his duty to the Guru’s Panth. In obedience to the Panth, lies the life of a Sikh. By dint of their strength the Muslims want to thrust Pakistan on Sikhs, Hindus and Christians and they have already shown to us a specimen of Pakistan storm. In their majority zones they have perpetrated such tyrannies as cannot be described. Thousands of Sikh and Hindu women and children have been murdered; Keshas and beards of hundreds have been chopped off and an effort has been made to convert them to Islam; hundreds of women have been abducted; whole villages have been burnt up. Hundreds of chaste women jumped into wells and have sacrificed their lives in many other ways in order to preserve their honour. The Panth which plumed itself on rescuing others’ girls, finds its own daughters in the hands of tyrants. Rest assured, as it is only a small specimen of Pakistan and more terrible incidents are yet to come. But Khalsaji, we are the Sikhs of that Guru who having had his four children slaughtered said: “what if four have fallen. Thousands still survive.” We have to fight this tyrannical Pakistan and have to keep the Panth in high airs. This Panth has been prospering all the more after every Ghallughara and rest assured that even now the Panth will prosper. Be alert; you should recover yourself.

Fifty lakhs of rupees are required at this time for fighting the Pakistan in which lies our death. Although our community is poor, it has been winning every morcha by dint of sacrifice in the name of Tenth Guru. It is our vigorous appeal that money should be collected from every house, every mohalla, every village and every city for achieving victory in the forthcoming clash. Collect one rupee per head. If poor Sikhs are unable to pay rupee one per head, it is the religious duty of the Sikhs of that village or town to make up the deficiency. In this way 50 lakh rupees should be collected very soon. This sum should be collected up to the 15th Baisakh.

This Baisakh should prove a re-birth of the Khalsa and should always serve to give encouragement to the Sikhs in history. Besides, entire Sikh public is requested to offer prayers every day for “Victory to the Panth”. Such a terrible conflict is approaching that even the sum of Rs 50 lakhs collected once cannot be sufficient. Hence all Sikhs are requested to give one-tenth of their income for this task. And in every house one handful of flour should be set apart for the Guru’s Fund at the time of kneading flour.

Note: For purposes of receiving this money, S. Baldev Singh Defence Member, Government of India, Delhi and Sardar Bhag Singh (of Gurdaspur) Advocate, Teja Singh Hall, Amritsar have been appointed treasurers. Collected money should be sent to one of these two persons by hand or by money order.'
7. Sikhs Demand Partition

Note by Evan Jenkins on His Interview with Giani Kartar Singh, 10 April 1947
IOR, R/3/1/176, Acc. No. 3477, NAI.

Giani Kartar Singh came to see me at his request at 4 p.m. today. I gave him a letter from P.S.V., which had just arrived, and also a letter from P.S.V. to Master Tara Singh, which he promised to deliver immediately. I said that I understood that the letters contained invitations to an interview with HE the Viceroy.

2. Giani Kartar Singh said that it was in anticipation of such an invitation that he had come to see me. He wished me to plead the Sikh cause with HE. I asked him what the Sikhs really wanted. He replied that HMG might endeavour to settle with the Muslim League and the Congress (a) on the basis of the Statement of 16th May 1946, or (b) on some other basis. It would be grossly unfair for the British to leave India without making proper provision for the Sikhs.

I suggested that we assume (a) in the first instance. If Mr Jinnah and the Congress leaders decided to co-operate in the Constituent Assembly, would the Sikhs co-operate also or would they stand out?

The Giani replied that the Sikhs were still dissatisfied with the Statement of 16th May 1946. They would go into the Constituent Assembly if they were guaranteed in Section B the same right of communal veto as had been granted to the Muslims in the full Assembly.

Moreover, the Sikhs were now convinced that there must be an immediate partition of the Punjab. The two new Provinces could both be in Section B, but both must have the right to contract out of the new constitution.

I pointed out here that partition would be extraordinarily difficult and that I personally was convinced that unionism was the best thing for Punjabis. If partition were sanctioned, I doubted if the Hindu Jats of the Ambala Division would wish to be included in the Sikh State.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Their idea was to form a separate Jat State, including the whole or part of the Meerut Division of the United Provinces and a large part of the Ambala Division of the Punjab.

The Giani said that the Sikhs had no intention of coercing the Hindu Jats and that if the Hindu Jats wanted a separate Province of their own, he would raise no objection. The Sikh conception was of a non-Muslim State, including nearly the whole of the Sikh country. Such a State would be amalgamated or federated with the Pakistan States, and should be free to join Hindustan or Pakistan, or to remain completely independent and to make a separate treaty with HMG.

I questioned the Giani as to his ideas about boundaries. He said that the Sikhs would let the Hindu Jats have Rohtak, Gurgaon, about half the Karnal district, and about half the Hisar district. They would expect the remainder of Karnal and Hisar, the whole or the greater part of Ambala and the whole of Simla to be included in the Sikh State. They thought the Ravi the most suitable boundary between the Sikh State and the Muslim State; but he personally would not insist upon the Sikhs taking over Lahore City. He made it clear that he would wish Montgomery to be included in the Sikh State, and that Nankana Sahib in the Sheikhupura district and its neighbouring villages should be a ‘free city’. He thought once the partition had been effected, there would be voluntary movements of population and that the Sikhs now living in the Lyallpur district would exchange with Muslims living in Montgomery.

I repeated my arguments against partition. I said that I thought it would mean economic and political ruin, and asked whether the Giani’s ideas excluded some sort of a Punjab Federation. He replied that he would have no objection to a Federation of a limited kind, for example, for such subjects as Irrigation and Electric Power; but it would have to be a voluntary Federation between equals, and there could be no question of Muslim domination over the Sikhs.

3. I asked him if he thought the Muslims would accept a partition. He said that he really did not know, but that it was the only solution of the present communal problem, which could not be solved in any other way. I said that if the Muslims did not agree to partition and if partition were ordered, a very considerable force would be needed to effect it. The Giani said cheerfully that we had only to put the two Governments into office and they would see to the rest. The British had taken the Punjab from the Sikhs, and it would be logical enough to return it to them.

4. I then took the discussion to (b) in paragraph 2 above—the possibility of an agreement between HMG, the Muslim League and the Congress on some new basis—and to the possibility of a complete breakdown. I asked the Giani if he thought any settlement likely. He said that the Sikhs did not particularly want a settlement, and would accept no settlement which did not provide for them. The British could not fairly disregard the Sikhs who during the last century had supported them in many ways. If they liked, they could leave the Punjab without a Government, and the communities would then fight it out; but the Sikhs would not tolerate any arrangement which placed them under the domination of another community. He realized that my advice would be taken by HE the Viceroy and he trusted that I would do nothing to injure the Sikh case or to suggest the feasibility of any arrangement that did not satisfy the Sikhs. I said that I had always done my best to help the Sikh community, since I was well aware of their importance in the Punjab. I doubted if India could be peaceful if the Punjab were in a state of chaos; and the Punjab could hardly be peaceful if the Sikhs were not reasonably satisfied with their political condition. I had as great an affection for the Punjab as for my own country, since I had spent the greater part of my life here, and my only object was to leave the Punjab in the best possible state from the point of view of Punjabis. For the reasons I had given I was against partition; but if the Punjabis would be satisfied with nothing else, they would presumably get their own way in the end. But the difficulties of partition were enormous, and I hoped that the Sikhs would not rule out the possibility of some local settlement with the Muslim League.

The Giani then said that the Muslim League had shown no real signs of wanting a settlement. They had talked about it constantly, but their whole attitude had been that they were a separate nation and must dominate the entire Punjab. They could only do that by force and the Sikhs would not let them do so. He quite appreciated my sentimental dislike of partition—the British had done a great deal for the Punjab during the last century and naturally hated to destroy their own handiwork. Whatever HMG decided to do now he hoped that the decision would be fair to all.

5. I took the opportunity of mentioning to the Giani the undesirable character of his propaganda—particularly two recent Gurmukhi pamphlets about events in the Rawalpindi Division and about the need for a ‘war fund’ of Rs 50 lakhs. The Giani said that he had not read the first of these pamphlets (as I think he distributed it himself, I doubt if this statement was true), but would correct any inaccuracies which it contained. I pointed out that whatever his intentions might be, propaganda of this kind gave the impression that the Sikhs were about to attack the Muslims. The Giani laughed heartily at this, and said that the Sikhs would do no such thing until after the British left India. They had no intention of fighting a war on two fronts, nor would it be in their interest to annoy the British unnecessarily at the present stage.

6. The Giani ended our interview by detailing a number of grievances and suggestions of the usual kind, on which I have made a separate note.

E.M.J.

8. Rejection of Congress Plan for Partition

Note by A.R. Khan, 12 April 1947

A SHORT COMMENTARY ON THE RECENT CONGRESS WORKING COMMITTEE’S RESOLUTION FOR A DIVISION OF THE PUNJAB

...The above table gives the population as well as percentage of various communities in the 11 districts of the Punjab, where Muslims do not form a clear majority, that is, 51 per cent or over.

According to an article which appeared in the Statesman, dated 16th March 1947, the Hindu–Sikh demand for a separate province in the Punjab, where non-Muslims are in majority, also included the district of Gurdaspur. It is not understood on what theory this claim of the Hindus and Sikhs is based since the community-wise position in that district is quite different, as would be evident from the following figures of 1941 Census.
Gurdaspur—

Hindus including Jains, Scheduled

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Castes and Ad-Dharmis</th>
<th>2,83,200</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Others including Sikhs</td>
<td>2,30,100</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Christians</td>
<td>50,300</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

Total: Non-Muslims       5,63,600
Total: Muslims           5,89,900

Total: Non-Muslims and Muslims 11,53,500

Even if the whole population of all the communities in the district, excluding the Muslims, is taken into account, the Muslim population exceeds that by 26,300 persons; hence there is no justification for the inclusion of Gurdaspur district in the Hindu–Sikh demand.

The Sikh–Hindu demand for the division of the Punjab beyond the River Ravi is also not justified since many Muslim-majority districts of the province lie east and southeast of River Ravi, such as Gurdaspur, Lahore, Montgomery and Multan. What they can claim for a division on the basis of population is the area lying on the east bank of the River Beas. However, I give below a short commentary on the community-wise population in each district of the Hindu–Sikh demand.

Simla—The Hindus represent 57.4 per cent while the Muslims only 18.0 per cent; hence the Muslim claim cannot be argued.

Kangra—The Muslims represent a negligible percentage of only 4.8 against 80.7 per cent Hindus.

Hoshiarpur—The percentage of various communities is as under:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Hindu</th>
<th>35.4</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Sikhs</td>
<td>16.9</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Scheduled Caste Hindus and Ad-Dharmis</td>
<td>14.5</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Muslims</td>
<td>32.6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rest</td>
<td>0.6</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The Hindu percentage exceeds by only 2.8 per cent that of the Muslims. Since the Sikhs represent only 16.9 per cent, that is, nearly half of the Muslims, they have got no case at all as a separate community.

Jullundur—The percentage of Caste Hindus and Sikhs comes to 40.3 (13.8 + 26.5) while the Muslim percentage alone is 45.2; hence they (Hindus and Sikhs) cannot claim this district on principle.

Ludhiana—This is the only district where Sikhs form a substantial majority: 41.41 per cent Sikhs, 37.0 per cent Muslims and 13.0 per cent Hindus.

Ferozepore—The Muslims alone represent 45.1 per cent while the Hindus and the Sikhs represent 15.1 per cent and 33.8 per cent respectively. None of these two can claim the district in their individual capacity.
Considering the community-wise percentage for the Ludhiana [Jullundur] Division as a whole, both the communities—Hindus and Sikhs—have got no claim at all for the possession of this Division in their individual capacity. The Muslims represent 34.4 per cent, Hindus 30.0 per cent and Sikhs 24.1 per cent. The position of this Division is the same as is obtaining in Assam. In Assam the Hindu percentage is a bit more than [that of] the Muslims while the percentage of Tribes is a little less than [that of] the Muslims. The same position is prevailing in Ludhiana [sic for Jullundur] Division of the Punjab where the Muslims form a majority, the Sikhs are a bit less in percentage than the Muslims, and the Hindus are much more less than the Sikhs. When the Hindus can rule over Assam with a bare majority of 7.6 per cent (41.3–33.7), the Muslims of the Punjab, nay, the Ludhiana [sic for Jullundur] Division, representing a majority of 4.4 per cent (34.4–30.0), can also claim the possession of Ludhiana [sic for Jullundur] Division.

The claim of the Hindus in Ambala Division is, no doubt, justified on the basis of population because they form a majority of 52.2 per cent in the Division and they represent more than 51.0 per cent in every district of this Division.

A keen study of these two Divisions suggests the possibility whether such conditions prevail anywhere else in the country or not. In view of this, I have tried to present a picture of certain parts in the United Provinces in Table 20.2 to enable the Quaid-i-Azam to make use of it with advantage, if possible.

Now Hindus cannot claim the support of Scheduled Castes since Scheduled Castes are agitating against Hindus practically all over the country. In the UP, they have already started an agitation against the Congress Ministry. Similarly, the Hindus cannot claim the support of the Christians because they have got nothing in common with the Christians while the Christians resemble the Muslims culturally and religiously. As regards the Sikhs, they cannot put their case with the Hindus according to their present position as a separate nation from the Hindus, though small in number, unless and until they merge themselves in Hinduism. All these arguments are put forth because it is not to our advantage to separate Ambala Division from the Punjab and because the Muslims will greatly lose in respect of mineral wealth if they at all agree to forgo Kangra district, the hidden treasure of which is much greater than all the mineral wealth accumulated in the whole of Punjab.

Please refer to UP figures on the following page [Table 20.2]. This indicates that Hindus represent 42.2 per cent in Saharanpur, 51.8 per cent in Muzaffarnagar, 56.9 per cent in Meerut, 45.5 per cent in Bijnor, 46.7 per cent in Moradabad and 57.9 per cent in Bareilly.

When the Sikhs representing only 5.1 per cent in Ambala Division can ask for a separate homeland in the Punjab, the Muslims of UP residing in the above 6 districts representing 31.7 per cent have got a right to claim a homeland in the above 6 districts of UP. Our demand for the northern part of UP is more weighty than the Sikh demand in the Punjab on account of our cultural and linguistic affinity which dominates the populace of these 6 districts over and above the strength of 31.7 per cent population representation.

I regret I cannot provide similar figures for certain other areas of the country for want of time and material which is not with me but I am sure such areas are available in the country particularly in Bihar and Madras.

I hope the Quaid-i-Azam will kindly give a second thought to this short commentary and the 2 tables before forming any conclusion relating to the division of the Punjab. I must reiterate that by this division the Punjab, rather the Northern Pakistan Zone, will be a greater loser in respect of irrigation, minerals and agricultural resources.

A.R. Khan

9. Hindus–Sikhs Agree to Partition Punjab

Resolution Adopted by the Working Committee of the Shiromani Akali Dal, 16 April 1947

Mountbatten Papers, File No. 120, NMML.

1. Shiromani Akali Dal notes with satisfaction that the Nationalist Hindus and Sikhs of the Punjab have fully agreed to the partition of the Punjab. Recent barbarities of the Pakistani Muslims on the Hindus and Sikhs of the Punjab have left no other solution of the communal tangle except the partition of the Punjab.

Shiromani Akali Dal demands that before the transfer of powers to the Indian hands in June, 1948 the Punjab should be divided into two provinces and for the redistribution of the Provincial boundaries a boundary commission should be set up. The terms of reference whereof should be to demarcate the Provincial boundaries keeping in view:

(a) Population,
(b) Landed property,
(c) Land Revenue, and
(d) Historical places and traditions of the various communities.

The Shiromani Akali Dal further demands that facilities be provided for exchange of population and property and that special arrangements be made for the protection, honour integrity and sanctity of the historically religious places.

The Shiromani Akali Dal also appeals to all the Panthic organizations and workers to unite and solidly stand behind this demand.

No.71/701

Dated, Amritsar the 19th April, 1947.

Copy Forwarded to His Excellency the Viceroy of India, New Delhi for favour of His Excellency’s kind perusal and necessary action in the matter.

Secretary,
Shiromani Akali Dal.

10. ‘Ruinous for All Communities’

_The Tribune_, 19 April 1947.

Lahore, April 18.—‘It will be ruinous for all communities to split the province into bits’, says Punjab’s ex-Premier Malik Khizar Hayat Khan Tiwana in a statement today expressing his opposition ‘to any scheme involving the partition of the Punjab’.

He says: I had in a press interview, some weeks back, expressed my opposition to any scheme involving the partition of the Punjab. I notice now that a section of the press has doubted the authenticity of that statement. I have, in fact, on many occasions in the past expressed the view that it will be ruinous for all communities to split the province in to bits. The present Punjab boundaries make the province a self sufficient economic unit. The irrigation system, the electricity scheme and the extensive development programme of the future if torn apart would lead to impoverishing both the western and eastern Punjab.

It will be a catastrophic calamity indeed if this comes about and all sections of the Punjabis should consider its dangerous implications, particularly the Hindus and Sikhs in the west and the Muslims in the east of the Punjab.

11. Create Separate Regional Administration until Partition

Letter from Bhim Sen Sachar to Vallabhbhai Patel, 21 April 1947

Lajpatrai Bhavan
Lahore

My dear Sardarji,

I beg to enclose for your information and such action as you may deem advisable a copy of the statement issued by the Congress and the Panthic parties in the Punjab Legislative Assembly along with a copy of my covering letter to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru.

Yours sincerely,

Bhim Sen Sachar.

Dear Panditji,

The enclosed statement has been issued jointly by me and Sardar Swaran Singh, the leader of the Punjab Assembly Panthic Party in the Punjab Legislative Assembly. The statement had the full support of members of the Congress Assembly Party and the Panthic Assembly Party. We shall feel very grateful if you would kindly bring this to the notice of His Excellency the Viceroy provided this suggestion meets with your approval. It appears to me that very early action in the matter is called for.

Yours sincerely,

Bhim Sen

The Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru
Vice President
Interim Government
New Delhi

Extract from Joint Statement

To restore responsible government in the province of the Punjab, we demand that as an interim and transitional arrangement, His Excellency the Governor-General should install immediately two or three regional administrations with separate Ministers, under one Governor for the two or three zones of the existing province of the Punjab. We must make it plain that in the existing circumstances we are not prepared to co-operate with the Muslim League for forming a single Ministry for the whole of the Punjab.

12. ‘Ambala Muslims Oppose Partition of Punjab’

   Ambala, Friday.

   A meeting of the representatives of the District and City Muslim Leagues office of the Ambala Division was held on the April 20, 1947 at Karnal with Chaudri Mohd Hassan MLA, in the chair. The following resolutions were unanimously passed.

   That the City and Distt Muslim League representatives as well as the workers of the Muslim League of the Ambala Division are strongly opposed to the suggestion of interested political parties for partition of the Punjab into different zones. The Muslim League representatives of the Ambala division view with suspicion the move of the Hindus for reducing the Muslim majority in the Punjab into a minority by separating Ambala Division from the rest of the Punjab. The Muslim League representatives of this division hope that Qaed-e-Azam will not agree to any proposal which may ultimately prove to be detrimental in the interests of the Muslims of this Division....

13. Attitude of Political Parties Remains Unchanged
   Extract from a Letter from Evan Jenkins to Louis Mountbatten, 30 April 1947
   IOR, R/3/1/178, Acc. No. 3479, NAI.

   Government House, Lahore

   Secret
   No. 666.

   ... 6. The attitude of the political parties is unchanged. The Muslim League are still anxious to form a Ministry, a subject on which I have written separately to Your Excellency. The Muslim leaders are as complacent as ever. Daultana recently toured in the Attock district, and there is credible evidence that he told the people in at least one village that if they could stick it out for a fortnight or three weeks, all proceedings against them would be withdrawn, and the officials who have suppressed the disturbances would be given a hot time. There has been no real attempt to approach the Hindus or Sikhs, the Muslim attitude being that the Muslims are entitled to rule the whole of the Punjab and that when this is admitted they will be good enough to treat the non-Muslims with generosity.

   The Sikhs are preparing for an offensive. I believe that the leaders would prefer not to launch it until July 1948 or later; but they will find it difficult to control their followers. There are strong rumours of a retaliatory attack by Sikhs on a suburb of Amritsar or some other place with a strong Muslim element. The Sikhs have committed themselves so deeply to the partition of the Punjab that it will be difficult, and perhaps impossible, for them to take a different line.

   The Hindus are still in close alliance with the Sikhs, though there are signs that the Sikhs are not anxious for too close a link with the Congress High Command. Officially the Hindus would like partition, but I am not sure of the attitude of those of them who belong to the Rawalpindi and Multan Divisions.

An agreed partition of the Punjab appears to me virtually impossible. The Sikhs would expect to get the cis-Ravi districts of the Lahore Division and the Montgomery district of the Multan Division, and possibly even the Shiekhupura district across the Ravi. The Muslims on the other hand would not wish to cede the Amritsar district (which has in fact a small non-Muslim majority), and would claim a part of Ferozepore and Jullundur. Indeed most Muslims would be reluctant to part with anything west of the non-Punjabi speaking districts of the Ambala Division. No leader seems yet to have considered the implications and difficulties of partition.

14. Partition of Punjab, Bengal, and Sind Necessary
Letter from Mast Ram Gupta to J.B. Kripalani, 1 May 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-34/1947, NMML.

To Acharya Kripalani Esq
IN Congress
President
New Delhi.

Sir,

May I take the liberty to submit few lines for necessary actions:

Divisions of the Provinces of the Punjab, Bengal and Sind is most necessary as Hindus can’t work with Muslims. We want cow protection but they say this is against their religion which also teaches them to slaughter Kafirs that is Hindus and Sikhs. Hindus can’t progress in any direction if the Provinces are not divided.

Suhrawardy, Prime Minister Bengal and other Muslim Leaders in Punjab are now deceiving the Hindus by saying that division of the said provinces will not be useful for the Hindus and Muslims. This is a ... the Hindus and Sikhs will be very sorry to lose this opportunity which they have got after sacrificing many lives in Frontier and Punjab and in Bengal.

Those who are in favour of United India they are traitors. In the 2nd World War the ratio of Muslim in army was 16 per cent and not 25 per cent according to the ratio of Muslim population in India now when the war is over they demand that Muslim should be 25 per cent in army. In Punjab and Bengal Muslims in all branches are 90 per cent on responsible posts who are playing havoc against Hindus and Sikhs.

There can be no military trainings in schools and colleges which is most necessary. The Hindus can’t progress in any way in United India. To please few Muslims in Congress I think you will not make mistake. Hindus can’t please the Muslims. In Khilafat days in Turkey Hindus paid one crore rupees for this purpose but Turkey did not help in any way to the Hindu sufferers.

The past mistakes of History should not be repeated by the Hindu Leaders of these days. You can please God but not the Muslim gundas. The remedy is the bullet of guns and not preaching for peace. Kindly inform accordingly to Mahatma Gandhi, Pandit Jawahar Lal Vice President and other Leaders.

Do you think that Muslim army and police will punish the Muslim rioters or will fight against Muslim countries bordering India. You will find in a few years that Afghanistan and tribes men of frontier will attack India then what will be the use of keeping Muslim Army. By the divisions of Punjab and Bengal the Muslims have gone out of their senses and now are preaching for friendship with no practical proof.

May God keep you ever happy and healthy.

Yours M.O. Servant

Mast Ram Gupta,
Overseer
PO Jagraon
Ludhiana.

15. ‘Division a Solution of Despair’

_The Tribune, 1 May 1947._

The Congress resolution for division of Punjab has not received that measure of support in various quarters which Congress resolutions usually do, particularly in the nationalist circles, but those who have opposed it have probably not realized the position in which the country finds itself to-day. For the nationalist elements who are wedded to solidarity of India any division proposition on communal basis, strikes at the very principle of solidarity. If one province can be divided, why cannot the country. Division and redistribution on geographical and linguistic basis is understandable but if once the distribution on communal basis starts, then firstly, we accept the Muslim League theme for division of India and secondly we accept communalism as basis of future Indian politics.

Surely the Congress must have been alive to the above reasoning. On the other hand, circumstances as they exist cannot be ignored if a proper solution is to be found. If under the influence of certain reactionary forces and vested interests, a large section of people are misguided into a communal frenzy and cannot see reason, a solution has to be found. The type of solution depends on the time available. It is futile to force a large section of people to something which they do not appreciate. It is better to let people realize their mistake then to force things against their will which may only harden their views to the extent of preventing them to see reason. The time available is too short for long-term solution on the basis of persuasion, pleadings and arguments.

In view of the above conditions in which the country finds itself, what is to be done? The first step is naturally to localize the problem. It is obvious that it will be the majority in any particular area that must decide what shape of things they want for the future. If a majority in a bigger unit think differently from the majority in a smaller unit, how can it force the majority in a smaller unit to agree to its decision, when we accept the principle of self-determination? Again if one unit happens to be in a negative mood how can it be permitted to hold up progress of another unit, big or small? If the majority of North-Western Punjab wishes to remain a part of one group, while the majority of South Eastern Punjab wishes to stay out, why should not the dissenting elements be permitted to do as they like and see for themselves what will suit their interests best. If pleadings and arguments get no response, practical demonstration is the next best method available to make one see reason, but there are two fundamental inaccuracies in an assumption made for theoretical determination of the will of people which only a referendum can give.
It is assumed that census figures are correct which everybody knows to be wrong. The last census operations in Punjab were a big scandal and ultimately figures had to be cooked to get a closer relation with previous census which also happened to be incorrect. No great reliance can, therefore, be placed on these figures. Secondly, it is wrong to assume that all Muslims want Punjab to be an integral part of group B. During the last election, nearly one third of Muslim votes were polled against the League. These people were either against Pakistan, or believed in non-interference in the Punjab matters from outside. It is, therefore, most unfair to such tolerant Muslim elements to assume that their view is the same as that of League.

If Muslim League following amongst Muslims is taken as 66 per cent then in order to give the Muslim League a majority in any particular area, the Muslim population in that area must be 50 x 3/2 equal to 75%. Again unless a particular community happens to be in a preponderating majority, it is incorrect to think that there will be no tolerant elements having sympathies with the aspirations of the minority community and therefore the policies of the locality will be regulated by the policies of the majority community. If therefore a province has to be divided up, it must be divided in three parts. Two of these will be such that one community is in such great majority that the view of the majority of that country will always prevail, and we have seen that in case of Muslims, such areas will be those where their population is 75 per cent or more. The third portion will be where the Muslims or the non-Muslims do not preponderate and where one can never be sure without a proper plebiscite as to what the will of people will be and whether that will be with such a large majority as to rule out all possibilities of change of general public opinion. Taking into account the inaccuracies of census figures, the three portions of the Punjab work out as below:

I. Ambala Division and Jullundur Division minus Jullundur and Ferozepore Districts.
II. Lahore Division plus Jullundur and Ferozepore districts and Montgomery and Lyallpur districts and parts of Multan districts.
III. Rawalpindi Division plus Muzaffargarh, Dera Ghazi Khan, Multan and Jhang districts.

These boundaries further require to be adjusted so as to conform in geographical limits and be administratively possible. For example, it is impossible for one canal to be operating in two contiguous provinces without creating daily complications.

This will modify the boundaries to

I. East of River Beas.
II. Between Beas and Chenab except south western portion of Doab served by Haveli and Mallsi Canals.
III. West of Chenab plus Haveli and Mallsi areas.

The only alternative solution if the unity of Punjab is to be kept intact is for the Unionist Leaders to come forward and to take control of the situation. The League cult is based on ... and hatred of non-Muslims and their distrust begets distrust. Just as division is no solution similarly the League cult of hatred is negative in nature and leads nowhere. The present atrocities committed in North-Western Punjab has shown the League cult in its nakedness and after all this happening no non-Muslim can have any confidence in League politics or be prepared to co-operate with the League. Therefore the Unionists are the only people who can command co-operation from all sides. Let the Punjab as it is be an entirely independent group, say group D, as distinctly separate from Group B by opting out of group B and having direct connection with the Centre. If the Unionists whose creed is unity of all Punjabis take up this position they can save the Punjab from division. They will have the support of the Muslims of Eastern Punjab and non-Muslims of Western Punjab and possibly many saner elements of central Punjab. They will not only serve as important links to bring the various communities together and heal their wounds caused by mutual disaffection but may save the Punjab from division which although highly undesirable from higher interests, seems to be the only solution of the present state of tension caused by the inflammatory speeches of fanatics is to continue. If the non-Muslims are ensured of a saner policy tending towards communal harmony they may give up the idea of division altogether because, as will be seen, the division idea is the product of present disturbances and high tension and is merely a solution of despair.

16. Plan for Partition of Punjab

Memorandum from Punjab Representatives in Constituent Assembly to H.L. Ismay, 1 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 121, NMML.

Constitution House
New Delhi

Dear Lord Ismay,

We have the honour to submit the accompanying memorandum on the question of the partition of the Punjab for your kind consideration. We trust that you will very kindly place this memorandum before His Excellency the Viceroy and before His Majesty’s Government for their kind consideration.

We are submitting this memorandum as representatives from the Punjab to the Constituent Assembly of India.

Yours sincerely,
Gopi Chand Bhargava MLA
Harnam Singh
Tek Chand
Ujjal Singh
Prithvi Singh Azad
Kartar Singh
Harbhaj Ram MLA
Pratap Singh MLA
Suraj Mal MLA
Siri Ram
Diwan Chaman Lall
Members of the Constituent Assembly.

Memorandum by the Punjab Sikh and Hindoo Members of the Constituent Assembly

The terrible happenings in the Punjab have revealed that an organized and well-planned ‘Jehad’ was preached and carried out against the unoffending non-Muslim minorities, particularly in the Rawalpindi and Multan Divisions of the province. The campaign was inspired by the Muslim League organization and resulted in the most brutal atrocities that have ever been committed on innocent men, women and children. It has now become impossible for the non-Muslim minorities in the Punjab to accept any Government in the province dominated by Muslim communals. Impetus was given to those, who indulged in these atrocities, by the 'Direct Action Resolution' passed by the Muslim League under the presidency of Mr M.A. Jinnah, when he made a public declaration that 'the days of constitutionalism are over' and that 'might only can save our rights'. Soon after the 'Direct Action Resolution' was passed, Mr Liaquat Ali Khan and Mr Ghazanfar Ali Khan, Members of the Interim Government and Mr Feroz Khan Noon, an ex-Member of the Executive Council and formerly High Commissioner of India, openly preached the creed of violence. All this resulted in a regular holocaust of murder, loot, arson, abduction, rape and forcible conversion in which thousands of innocent lives of members of the minority communities were lost and unheard-of atrocities were committed. Such a state of affairs cannot be described as riots or communal fracas. It was an entirely one-sided and systematic attack, in which innocent members of the Hindu and Sikh communities were caught unawares and, being defenceless, were butchered or burnt alive in a manner unknown even in the darkest days of human history. Property worth crores of rupees was looted or wantonly destroyed. And, significantly enough, these happenings did not elicit even one word of condemnation from the leaders of the Muslim League!

The terrible happenings of March 1947 have rendered homeless a large number of Hindu and Sikh inhabitants of the demarcated parts of the province, with the result that they have to find their homes in areas where the Hindus and the Sikhs are strong enough to meet the Muslim menace. Thousands of them are migrating to Central and Eastern Punjab and have no desire to go back to their homes.

The non-Muslim minorities under the circumstances are of the view that the only solution of the Punjab problem is an immediate division of the Punjab. They feel that their honour, lives and property cannot be safeguarded unless the Province is divided into two parts on the lines suggested below:

The total area of the British Punjab (inclusive of what are at present 'Partially exclusive areas' in Kangra District and Dera Ghazi Khan District, is 99089 square miles, vide page 2 Census Report of India of 1941 Vol.VI (Punjab). We suggest that the division of the Province should be made in such a way that each part comprises nearly one-half of this area and that the dividing line should be along the river Chenab where it enters British territory in Sialkot District. The part of the East and South of the proposed dividing line will comprise the Ambala, Jullundur, and Lahore Divisions with one of the colony districts of Lyallpur or Montgomery.

More than three-fourths of the urban immovable Punjab is owned by non-Muslims. This is clear from the indication of taxation on urban immovable property in the province.

The total land revenue of the Punjab in 1931 when the Punjab Government collected the figures community-wise for the use of the Simon Commission was Rs 4,38,13,977. Out of this sum the non-Muslims paid Rs 2,18,44,913. This is approximately 50 per cent of the total land revenue of the province. These figures have not been revised subsequent to 1931 but it is a well known fact that the change in ownership since 1931 has been in favour of the non-Muslims. Thus taken as a whole, the non-Muslims own considerably more than 50 per cent of the rural and urban property in the Province.

In view of the above facts the conclusion is inevitable that the demand of the non-Muslims of the Punjab to at least half the area of the Punjab is eminently just. The proposed non-Muslim province will comprise an area of about 49000 square miles which is one half of the total area of the province.

We have suggested the above basis for the partition of the Punjab for the following reasons:

(a) The demarcation on the above basis satisfied the linguistic requirements. Punjabi is the language of the people East of the Chenab, whereas the language of the people in the proposed Muslim province is Lehndi-Multani. For a detailed discussion on this subject reference may be made to the ‘Linguistic Survey of India’ by Dr Sir George Grierson, KCIE., ICS., Vol.IX, Part 1, page 608.

(b) In the event of partition, exchange of property and population will have to take place as considered necessary by Mr M.A. Jinnah also. That being so, the property basis of partition will be the most suitable. An examination of the agricultural life of the province will show that all the essential interests of the Sikhs are in the tract East of the Chenab. The Muslims in Gurdaspur District number 51 per cent according to the last Census but out of the total annual land revenue of the district which is Rs 17,77,562 the Muslims pay Rs 6,16,193 only as against Rs 11,61,369 paid by the non-Muslims. In Lahore District the Muslims though 60 per cent of the population, pay Rs 483,448 per annum as land revenue whereas the non-Muslims pay Rs 9,36,007. In the matter of agricultural holdings, the position of non-Muslims is much stronger than that of Muslims in the Shiekhupura district and other parts of Lahore division.

(c) The Cabinet Mission in the Statement of May 16 examined this question of the partition of the Punjab with care and they came to the conclusion that ‘a radical partition of the Punjab would divide the Sikhs, leaving substantial bodies of Sikhs on both sides of the boundary and would not provide an acceptable solution for the communal problem’. They apparently had in view the division of the province on the basis of districts having a bare Muslim or non-Muslim majority. The Muslims by reason of the recent disturbances have, however, made the partition of the Punjab an absolute necessity and in this partition care has to be taken that a major portion of the Sikhs and other minorities is provided a home in the non-Muslim part of the province. According to our suggestions, the population of the various communities in the non-Muslim Province will approximately be as under:

1. Sikhs 33,00,000
2. Indian Christians 3,75,000
3. Scheduled Caste & Adharmis 14,50,000
4. Hindus 52,00,000

This will afford real protection to the various minorities and will also obviate the difficulties envisaged by the Cabinet Mission in para 7 of the Statement.

(d) The property owning population is rooted in the soil of the province. The other population is floating. The census operations of the Punjab were always conducted during the winter months of the year. The Census Reports bring out that during those months, Powindahs, Baluchis, Pathans and Kashmiris in lakhs migrate from Baluchistan, Tribal area and Gilgit in the Punjab and they are included among the Muslim population of the Province. The basis suggested by us is the only proper basis because the population of the Punjab which is floating is more easily transferable.
The basis of partition suggested above is equally just to the Muslims. The density of population in the proposed non-Muslim province of the Punjab is 445 persons per square mile as against 235 persons per square mile in the proposed Muslim province of the Punjab. The projects for irrigation that have recently been launched in the proposed Muslim province will irrigate an area of more than 2 million acres of land which alone will absorb an additional population of at least one million persons, who will necessarily migrate from the Central Districts of the Punjab. Further, the proposed Muslim province is so thinly populated, that it can very easily absorb several lakhs of the floating population of the Punjab that at present inhabits the proposed non-Muslim part of the province.

The scheme of partition will of necessity take into consideration the capital investments on the irrigation projects and the value of the unallotted crown lands in the Punjab. According to our scheme of partition the proposed non-Muslim province will get about 33 per cent while 67 per cent of the above will fall to the share of the proposed Muslim province.

We may further mention that in the division proposed by us, most of the mineral resources that exist in the Punjab will fall to the proposed Muslim province. The oilfields and the oil refineries of the Punjab are situated in Rawalpindi Division and so are the coal fields and salt mines. The raw material for heavy chemicals like gypsum and limestone are to be found on a large scale in the Muslim zone and the only heavy chemical factories, manufacturing soda-ash and chlorine etc. and all the cement factories in British Punjab are situated in Jhelum and Attock districts.

Before concluding, we may refer to another mode for the partition of the Punjab suggested in some quarters. According to that suggestion, the partition is to be on the basis of districts having a bare Muslim and non-Muslim majority as returned in the Census of 1941. That this will not be a just basis is in the first place evident from the Census reports. The census figures have been challenged by non-Muslims time and again and their inaccuracy is admitted by the Census Commissioner of India and the various Census Superintendents of the Punjab as is apparent from the quotations given in the appendix. The non-Muslims maintain that the Muslims and non-Muslims are almost equal in numbers in the Punjab. They contend that the Muslim figures have been swollen by reason of the influx of temporary immigrants during winter months when the census enumerations took place. The division of the Punjab on population basis will, as envisaged by the Cabinet Mission in para. 7 of the Report, divide the Sikhs into two halves and would not afford an acceptable basis for the solution of the communal problem. The division district-wise on population basis would not give to the non-Muslims even that much area to which they are entitled strictly according to their proportion in the population, that is, 43 per cent of the aggregate area of the province, which comes to 42,108 square miles. If population alone is to be the criterion then the non-Muslim province should consist of Ambala and Jullundur divisions of the Punjab and the Lahore Division minus Gujranwala District. The handing over to the non-Muslims, those districts only, in which there is a decided non-Muslim majority, would neither give them the area they are entitled to out of the total area of the Punjab, nor afford them any scope for expansion, nor provide any practicable method for the exchange of property or population. Such a division would adversely affect the Sikhs whose population would be divided half and half in the two proposed provinces. Besides, the non-Muslim province so formed would be a deficit province and being thickly populated will offer no scope for development as all the colony areas will be included in the Muslim Province. Indeed, the line of demarcation suggested by us in this memorandum would be the only equitable line of Division.
The proposals we have made may be summarized as follows:

(a) The Punjab should be divided.
(b) A Boundary Commission should be appointed.
(c) Inter alia, the following should be the instructions given to the Boundary Commission:
    (i) The division of the Punjab should be on the property basis.
    (ii) While drawing the demarcation line, the necessity of keeping the major part of the Sikh population in a homogeneous area should be kept in view.
    (iii) The division should be such that one of the colony districts of Lyallpur or Montgomery is included in the non-Muslim province. The adoption of this principle will facilitate the exchange of property and population.
(d) Pending final arrangements, two Cabinets may be set up for the administration of the Punjab, one for the Ambala, Jullundur and Lahore divisions and the other for Rawalpindi and Multan Divisions. If for any reasons the above suggestion cannot be put into force forthwith, we suggest that the Lahore Division may be administered during the interim period by a joint Cabinet consisting of equal number of Muslims and non-Muslims.

1. Sardar Ujjal Singh, MLA.
   Willington Mall, Lahore.
2. Sardar Harnam Singh, Advocate,
   Lahore.
3. Giani Kartar Singh, MLA, Lyallpur.
4. Sardar Pratap Singh, MLA,
   Amritsar.
5. Bakshi Sir Tek Chand.
   Retired Judge, High Court, Lahore.
6. Diwan Chaman Lall, MLA (Central)
   Lahore.
7. Dr Gopi Chand Bhargav, MLA,
   Lahore.
8. Choudhry Harbhaj Lal, MLA,
   Lyallpur.
9. Mr Prithvi Singh Azad, MLA, Ambala.
10. Rai Bahadur Choudhry Suraj Mal, MLA, Hisar.
11. Pandit Siri Ram Sharma, MLA, Rohtak.

17. ‘Punjab Hindu Sabha Supports Partition’

Lahore, May 3.—The Executive Committee of the Punjab Provincial Hindu Sabha at its meeting reiterated its opposition to the partition of India and demanded that if through the intercession of the Government some provinces were to be torn away from the Centre, then in their opinion the provinces of Punjab and Bengal must be partitioned on the condition that the portfolios of law and order along with defence must remain with a Union Centre in order to make the recrudescence of the fanatical outburst impossible and to inspire confidence among all sections of the people. Bhai Parma Nandji presided.

The Sabha asked the Hindus in a resolution ‘to answer the clarion call of the Hindu Mahasabha to gather under its banner to save Hindu culture, and civilization by establishing a network of Hindu Sabhas all over the province enrolling members and contributing liberally to its funds...’.

18. Communities Unlikely to Cooperate on Partition

Letter from Evan Jenkins to Louis Mountbatten, 3 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 121, NMML.

Government House, Lahore,

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Your Excellency may be interested in the enclosed note of an interview I had yesterday with Sardar Swaran Singh, Sardar Harbans [Harnam] Singh, and Lala Bhim Sen Sachar. Sardar Swaran Singh, as Your Excellency may remember, was Development Minister in the Punjab and is now prominent in Sikh politics. Sardar Harbans Singh is an Advocate, originally of the Rawalpindi District, and is a Member of the Constituent Assembly. Lal Bhim Sen Sachar was our Finance Minister. Characteristically the three gentlemen did not mention to me the proceedings or intentions of the Hindu and Sikh ‘Convention’ which recently met at Delhi. They left me to see in this morning’s newspapers that this ‘Convention’ had demanded the partition of the Punjab with the Chenab as the western boundary between the two States. The non-Muslim State must, according to the ‘Convention’, include the whole of the Ambala, Jullundur and Lahore Divisions, and one colony district from the Multan Division.

2. This partition business seems to me to be getting out of control. The present position may be stated as follows:

(1) We could partition the Punjab (a) by force in pursuance of an award by HMG, or (b) amicably in pursuance of an agreement between the communities.

(2) Course (a) would require the use of a very large body of troops and is for this reason alone impracticable. It would in any case be a difficult and unpleasant course, resulting in the establishment of two Governments which would be compelled to rule by massacre.

(3) Course (b) has so far held the field, and until a few days ago it seemed that if Pakistan were conceded, Jinnah would instruct his followers to accept a reasonable partition. The attitude of the Hindus and Sikhs has never been certain, but there was a chance that if the Muslims met them half-way, they would be reasonable.

(4) The situation has been radically changed by Jinnah’s public announcement that Pakistan must include the whole of the Punjab (he would probably agree to the severance from the Punjab of a part at least of the Ambala Division, but this does not affect the main issue). The Hindus and Sikhs, particularly the latter, have countered with the most extravagant claims and are certainly not prepared to agree to the inclusion of the whole of the Punjab in Pakistan or to any reasonable partition. Their claim to the whole of the Lahore Division may be a bluff, but they would, I am sure, refuse to accept any boundary short of the Ravi, and they would insist on the inclusion in the non-Muslim State of a considerable colony area, possibly an entire district.

(5) It is thus clear that we are not going to succeed in course (b). There will not be an amicable partition in pursuance of an agreement between the parties, and if we are not very careful, we shall be manoeuvred into giving an award which we shall be unwilling or unable to enforce.

3. In these circumstances I think that Your Excellency should reconsider the terms of any early announcement embodying a solution of the Indian political problem. In the Punjab we are going to be faced with a complete refusal of the communities to co-operate on any basis at all. It would clearly be futile to announce a partition of the Punjab which no community would accept. The announcement would be regarded as an award which all three communities would dare us to enforce, and I have no doubt that all three communities would begin instantly to fight among themselves. We cannot get away from the basic facts—that Jinnah wants the whole of the Punjab, and that the Hindus and Sikhs will insist that he is not to have more than two-fifths of it. There can be no peaceful solution without a complete change of front by all communities, and unless Your Excellency sees some prospect of such a change, I think we must begin to consider very seriously what ad hoc arrangement can be made for the transfer of power. I have not been able to think of any suitable arrangement—failing communal agreement there can be no orderly representative Government here; and failing orderly representative Government there is no satisfactory successor.

Yours sincerely,
E.M. Jenkins

1. Note not reproduced here.

19. ‘Partition on Basis of Landed Property—Master Tara Singh’s Demand’

_The Tribune_, 4 May 1947.

Lahore, May 3.—In a statement issued this evening, Master Tara Singh, the veteran Akali leader says that the only basis for a peaceful settlement in the Punjab is a division demarcating the two parts on the basis of immovable property held by the Muslims and non-Muslims.

Following is the full text of the statement:

'It is rumoured that the Punjab is being divided into eastern and western parts on the basis of mere population of the districts and not on the basis of population of Muslims and non-Muslims in the province as a whole. This gives the Muslims 65 per cent of land though at present they own less than 50 per cent of it.

'Mr Jinnah pleads for the exchange of population. It is clear that he is convinced that the life and property of the minorities will not be safe in the Pakistan area. Transfer of populations from one part of the country to another is impossible on account of the climatic, linguistic and cultural difficulties. But exchange of population within a province is quite practicable, particularly in the Punjab, where climate and language are the same practically throughout the province. Therefore I agree with Mr Jinnah that so far as the Punjab is concerned exchange of populations is the only permanent solution of our present difficult problems. Exchange of population is not the same thing as immigration and emigration, but it clearly implies exchange of property as well. Therefore, the partition of the Punjab must be based on considerations of the population of Muslims and non-Muslims and the property held by them.

'Mr Jinnah seems to be anxious to maintain the integrity of the Sikhs, but he is not anxious to maintain their independence. All he wants is that the Sikhs should remain together under his heel. He roundly accuses the Sikhs for allowing themselves to be used by the Congress. Is it because the Congress accepts that the Punjab is the homeland of the Sikhs? Is it because the Congress is one with the Sikhs in maintaining the integrity and independence of the Sikhs? Is it because it sympathizes with the aspirations of the Sikhs to be free from communal domination?

'As compared with the above and leaving aside the past history, the recent experience that the Sikhs have had, has convinced them that it is impossible, under the present circumstances, to submit to any communal domination with the certain knowledge of being exterminated. No paper safeguards can obliterate the lessons and practical experience.

'I would request Mr Jinnah to give up this hypocritical role of being a friend of the Sikhs.

'But after June, 1948, when the British are gone and if Pakistan is established, the lot of the minorities can only be imagined than described. We are, therefore, inevitably driven to the conclusion that division of the Punjab demarcating the two parts on the basis of the immovable property held by the Muslims and non-Muslims is the only basis for a peaceful settlement. In demanding this we do not seek any favour from anybody. We want only our right to live as a free people.'—API

20. Increasing Demand for Plebiscite

Letter from S. Tarlok Singh to I.D. Scott, 5 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 121, NMML.

My dear Scott,

Pandit Nehru has been receiving a large number of telegrams everyday in regard to the partition of the Punjab and Bengal. Lately the number of these telegrams has been anything from 100 to 200. Many of the telegrams come from Gurdaspur District which has, as you know, a very narrow majority of one community over the rest. It is of course clear that there are very strong feelings on the subject. In particular, the need for the plebiscite is being stressed a great deal. Pandit Nehru has asked me to let you have this information and also to enquire whether you would like me to pass these telegrams to you.

Yours sincerely,

Tarlok Singh
Private Secy to Pandit J.L. Nehru.
21. ‘Harijans Want Partition of Punjab’

_The Tribune, 6 May 1947._

New Delhi, May 4.—The definite assertion that if partition of the Punjab is not effected along the river Chenab, nearly 5 lakh Harijans out of the total of 17 lakhs in the whole of the Punjab would be forced to live in Pakistan was made by a deputation of Punjab Scheduled Castes representatives who waited on Mr Jagjivan Ram, Labour Member, Interim Government, yesterday.

Stressing the fact that partition of the Punjab was in the interest of the Scheduled Castes, the deputationists requested Mr Jagjivan Ram to place this view-point of theirs before the Viceroy and members of the Congress Command.

Messrs P.R. Thakur, Radhanath Da and Ashutosh Mullick, Scheduled Castes representatives from Bengal in the Constituent Assembly also met the Labour Member yesterday and had detailed discussions with him regarding the position of Scheduled Castes in the event of the division of the Punjab and Bengal.—United Press.

22. PPCC Resolution on Partition of Punjab

Letter from General Secretary, Punjab Provincial Congress Committee, to General Secretary, AICC, 6 May 1947

AICC Papers, File No. P-14, Part II, 1947-48, NMML.

To,

General Secretary,
AICC Swraj Bhawan, Allahabad.

Dear friend,

The General meeting of the PPCC in its meeting held on 4-5-47 passed unanimously the attached resolution on the partition of Punjab.

It will be highly appreciated if this office is kept informed regarding further developments and instructions in this connection.

Thanking you,

Yours sincerely,

L.S. Sethi,
MLA
General Secretary.

Resolution

The Punjab Provincial Congress Committee reiterates its strong faith in the geographical political and ethnological unity of India, maintenance of which is the prime necessity of the moment so that in context of present international setting India may play her rightful role. Without this unity it would be impossible to defend the country against foreign aggression and develop it industrially and economically.

As a first requisite to the preservation of this unity there should be a strong Centre. As [sic] anaemic and weak centre would encourage fissiparous tendencies and will lead to industrial, economic and cultural impoverishment of the country. Present events in the various parts of the country have already demonstrated that even communal riots and such other disturbances cannot be effectively checked by a Central Government which is powerless to interfere in the Provincial affairs.

The Committee further maintains that separate electorates are the direct cause of the present communal hatred and estrangement and therefore should be replaced by joint electorates with adult franchise, with or without reservation of seats for minorities in the future constitution of the Indian Union and of all its component parts.

This committee while welcoming HMG’s decision of transferring power to Indians by June, 1948, places its protest on record against that clause of H.M. Government’s statement of February, 20, 1947, which says, “That it may transfer power even to the Government of some of the existing provinces as it has proved a source of encouragement to the disruptive forces working against the unity of India”.

The same has further encouraged the Muslim League to resort to non-constitutional and violent methods to grab power in the Punjab, NWFP and other places. Therefore in the interest of the unity of this country this committee demands that power be transferred to a strong Central Government.

This committee while believing in the unity of the Punjab is of the opinion that the unity of India is more fundamental and necessary. But if the division of India becomes inevitable and inescapable because of the reactionary, negative and anti-national and undemocratic stand of the Muslim League, then in view of the present happenings, the part of the Punjab which desires to remain in the Indian Union is fully entitled to exercise its inalienable right to do so. With respect to the demarcation of the division line, which matter, this committee leaves to the discretion of the Congress High Command.

23. Sikhs Unsafe under Muslim Domination

Telegram from Tara Singh, Baldev Singh, and Swaran Singh to Listowel, 7 May 1947

Lahore

After brutal happenings in Western Punjab no Sikh or Hindu’s honour, life or property safe under Muslim domination in existing Punjab. Therefore division of Punjab alone can provide safety and homeland for Sikhs who ruled Punjab before British and whose historical and economic position entitles them to special consideration. The proposal to make only twelve eastern districts as homeland for Sikhs and Punjab Hindus causing consternation. This division unfair and unjust as these districts compromise only thirty five per cent area as against fifty per cent property and forty three per cent population of Sikhs and Hindus of Punjab. This proposal heaviest blow to Sikhs as it carves already small community into two halves and deprives them of entire canal colony areas developed mainly through their efforts and enterprise. Proposed Eastern Province has extremely low disproportionate share of provincial assets providing no scope for exchange of population and property. The proposal mutilates whole system of upper Bari Doab canal. We demand division of Punjab along river Chenab with provision for exchange of population and property. Thus alone can integrity and solidarity of Sikhs and their holdings be preserved and equitable distribution of provincial assets assured. Any interim arrangement inconsistent with this demand extremely prejudicial to Sikhs and will be resisted. We remind Britain of its repeated pledges to the Sikhs. Now is the time to redeem them.

Master Tara Singh, Baldev Singh, Swaran Singh.

24. ‘Patiala Pleads for Separate Province for Jats’

Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 7 May 1947.

Ferozepore, May 5.—‘If in the new constitution of India, territorial redistribution becomes inevitable, I shall fully support the demand of the Jats for the formation of a Jat Province. ‘The Britishers have announced to transfer power to Indian hands and it is for us now to grasp the opportunity. It is only as partners of the United India that the Indian Princes can find approach. Now is the time that all States must join the Constituent Assembly.’ Thus observed His Highness the Maharaja of Patiala while addressing more than 20,000 sturdy Jats of Haryana at the annual function of the All-India Jat College, Rohtak, last evening.

Besides others, the Maharaja of Bharatpur State, Hon’ble Sardar Baldev Singh, Defence Member in the Interim Government, Gyani Kartar Singh, S. Ishar Singh, Majhail and Jathedar Udham Singh Nagoke, were present.

The Raja of Bharatpur in his speech stressed the need for unity among the Jats....

25. ‘Sikhs Shall Be Doomed in a Divided Punjab—Mamdot’

Dawn, 7 May 1947.

Lahore, Tuesday.—Khan Iftikhar Hussain Khan of Mamdot, President of the Punjab Muslim League commenting on Master Tara Singh’s demand for the partition of the Punjab on the basis of immovable property said today that the Sikh leader’s abrupt departure from the universally accepted principle of partition on population basis clearly indicated that the Sikhs had now started assessing the disastrous consequences accruing to their community from a division of the Punjab.

‘The latest statement of Master Tara Singh’, he said in an interview with the API ‘exhibits a sense of realization on his part that the Sikhs shall be doomed for ever in a divided Punjab. As they shall not only pass under the perpetual domination of the Hindu majority in eastern Punjab but shall also lose all their economic stake in the west’.

‘The latest demand for the partition of the Province on property basis is in reality nothing more than a subterfuge to wriggle out of the awkward position created by their own sentimentality worked up to a high pitch by sinister Congress designs. The Sikhs too know it that no one is going to take it seriously, but it may create the necessary ground for a stepping back’.

Faulty Leadership

The Khan of Mamdot said that the cry for the division of the Punjab was raised by the Sikh leaders to serve as milk-sup for their enraged followers who had been misled into uncalled for misery and suffering through their faulty leadership.

They very much expected from the sympathetic Congress that it would recognize their permanent hegemony in the new eastern province of the Punjab by agreeing to the appointment of Sikh Premier for all time or by allowing the Patiala State to swell out and extend its taints [sic] over the adjoining territories so as to expand it into a homeland for the Sikhs.

But it appeared that both the proposals had been rejected by the Congress and hence the change of position by the Sikhs.

United Punjab

'I personally believe,' the Khan of Mamdot said, ‘that it will not be long before the Sikhs come round to support a united Punjab. They know that the Muslims will resist to the last any encroachment on the integrity of the Pakistan areas and they also realize that the partition of the Punjab will only benefit the Hindus who are in a majority in the eastern districts.'

'The future of 37 lakhs of Sikhs lies in consolidation of their position in one province and not in raising permanent barrier between their own ranks reducing them to humble minorities on either side of it.'—API.

26. Sikh Demand for a Separate Constituent Assembly
Excerpts from a Letter from Major Short to Stafford Cripps, 8 May 1947

My very dear Sir,

Baldev has written again. Attached....

...But the rest, and the fact he has written again and so soon, makes me feel the Sikh is beginning to feel neglected—I don’t doubt unjustly. But if he is, then I don’t doubt he is due to go off with the worst bang we’ve yet had, and entangle all, and most of all us, with the shambles. Of course it is for Congress and the League to remove this feeling of neglect. But they only can if the Sikh feels we are urging them to remove it, and are keeping the Sikhs in the swim of what’s afoot.

However, that is a matter of opinion. What is a matter of fact is that Baldev says he agrees with the views of Sant Singh. Considering Baldev’s hold over the Sikhs (proved by recent events, or they’d not have been so quiet); and that Sant is the wisest, sanest, and most moderate of any Sikh known to me, it may be useful to you now to know what those view are....

Enclosure 1

Sardar Baldev Singh to Major Short

1 Bhagwan Das Road, New Delhi
1 May 1947

My dear Bill,

...I hope the letter that I wrote to you the other day was clear. Things are moving fast here. Whether any settlement will be possible, I do not know. What I am concerned at present with is the future of my community. You will remember the assurance the Members of the Cabinet Mission and everybody else gave us of a fair deal for Sikhs. This is the time of the assurance to be fulfilled. In fact it is now or never. I hope therefore that you will do your best and persuade your friends to leave no stone unturned to help us.
Towards Freedom: 1947

Sant is here and I agree with what he writes, as the minimum that Sikhs can be expected to accept. Needless to say that it will also help people of my way of thinking who are so keen on building up cordial relations between England and India.

There is not the least doubt in my mind that some British officials here who still live in the past are doing a tremendous lot of harm to the future relations between our countries. They belong to the old diehard school and are doing their best to put the Labour Government in a very awkward position. I told you this when I was in London. Subsequent events have proved what I then said. It is a high time that the Labour Government were made aware of this unfortunate element in India, for not until the officials co-operate fully in the new policy, will worthwhile results be reaped. Anyway it is clear that these diehards must be ignored and put in their place when final decisions are being framed.

I depend on you to give us the best support you can.

Yours sincerely,
Baldev Singh.

Enclosure 2

Sardar Sant Singh to Major Short

Nabha, Punjab, India.
26 April 1947

My Dear Friend,

Many thanks for your two letters.... Facts are: For 27 years or more religious democracy has been preached and practiced senselessly by the rulers and the ruled. Under the stress of circumstances mostly created by the two Great Wars the rulers perforce leaned more and more towards religious minorities. Aliterable political majorities and minorities elsewhere in democratic countries have been grafted here on religion, thus losing all chance for conversion of political thought and opinion and thereby a majority into a minority. I believe every Englishman in the political field knows this fact. But instead of starting this country anew he sent the first consignment in the shape of Communal award and then the declaration 'Indians should frame their own Constitution' knowing too well that the gulf was wider than the Atlantic ocean. My friend, I believe in Transmigration and Karma and you in Action and Reaction. In my conception, it is impossible to escape from Reaction—except through prayer in matters spiritual and through happening in matters secular. It was for this very reason that I readily answered Pakistan and Khalistan last year and not because these were good for those who asked for them and for our friends of the Commonwealth.

So much for the diagnosis. Now the village Hakim's prescription.

Division and Partition be accepted in principle. If 562 states can exist on the map there is room for 15 instead of 11 Provinces. Boundary Commissions to be set up later. Let Muslims and Non-Muslims including or excluding Sikhs sit in their own Constituent Assemblies. The Sikhs may have their own C.A. if they so choose. Let these bodies prepare paper Constitutions. It will be interesting to see how each C.A. handles such questions as Defence, F.A., Communications, Finance, Planning and above all the problem of Minorities and Franchise. Each C.A. to produce this paper Constitution within six months with or without the help of others and then it should appoint a negotiation body to resolve the points of difference in 15 days. Amended Constitutions should be put to a referendum to the different Communities both in the majority and minority Provinces. If 25 per cent of the majority Community votes against and 66 per cent of the minority Community do not accept the draft Constitution, it should be considered lost. The ballot to be secret under U.N.O. All this to be completed by February 48. Some such step will bring the vainglorious Leaders on the practical plane while their past Commitments to their followers will be redeemed and their personal egoism satisfied.

I have written to Mr Moon and hope to keep it up.

Weather is warming up here. Communal tension is indescribably intense and I will not be able to get away to the hills this season.

With kindest regards to you all.

Yours sincerely,
Sant Singh.

27. No Hope for Agreement

Telegram from Evan Jenkins to Listowel, 9 May 1947

Immediate
No. 87-G.

Your telegram Nos. 5961 and 59(?65) May 9th. For Ismay from Governor of the Punjab. Detailed comment is impossible because I do not know (A) whether options are exercisable by electorate, separate sections of legislature (?or) (?representatives) elected by (?)sections of legislature as in original plan and (B) provisional boundary to be included in appendix.

[2.] In the Punjab transfer of power can be made only in one of following three ways. First. An arrangement between communities as to successor authority or authorities. Agreement need not be absolute but must have public support of Moslem League and Congress and of Sikh leaders. Second. In pursuance of award by HMG which we are prepared to enforce. Third. By appointment of ad hoc successor authority which would in fact mean abandonment of the Punjab.

3. There is in my judgement now no hope of agreement on these or any other partition proposals. Whatever Jinnah may say in private he has declared publicly for united Punjab as part of Pakistan and Sikhs are making extravagant claims which may be modified but will not be abandoned. Announcement even in terms now contemplated will be treated as an award under which we shall be expected to enforce provisional boundary and to procure appointment of Boundary Commission. If as I suppose provisional boundary runs between Moslem and non-Moslem majority districts it will satisfy nobody and HMG will have to choose between cancelling announcement or using force on a large scale for an indefinite period. We may rapidly find ourselves driven to third method which would be (?positive) disaster.

4. Assuming that announcement is made in terms now contemplated I would expect boycott of all proceedings by Moslems and Sikhs and partly by Hindus also. Moslems would not want (??any) partition and Sikhs would not be satisfied with provisional boundary based on Moslem and non-Moslem majority districts. Hindus would probably follow Sikhs.
5. Punjab situation is explosive and at the moment I can see no credible way out. But I am quite sure that we must avoid an announcement (on which) there is no agreement. Much will depend on Viceroy's final discussion with leaders. I hope to give my views to Viceroy in greater detail on Sunday May 11th.

Repeated to Viceroy and P.S.V., New Delhi.

28. Partition Is the Only Alternative
Letter from Stafford Cripps to Clement Attlee, 10 May 1947

My dear Prime Minister,

As you know I have been and am very worried about the Punjab part of our plan. I send you in confidence Billy Short's latest letter and enclosures. May I have them back when you have digested them.

I think we have gone a long way to meet Sant Singh's point of view which is apparently also Baldev's but we must remember that the Sikhs can bust this arrangement as well as Jinnah! If we were to adopt Dickie's last alternative and hand over the Punjab to the Muslims that would mean immediate civil war. We must in the last resort divide out the Sikhs somehow or we shall never get through.

Yours,
Stafford

29. Congress Should Take Harder Stand on Partition of Punjab
Letter from Baldev Singh to J.B. Kripalani Forwarding His Letter to Jawaharlal Nehru, 10 May 1947
AICC Papers, File No. G-34/1947, NMML.

My dear Kripalani,

I enclose herewith a copy of a letter which I have addressed to Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru.

Yours sincerely
Baldev Singh

Enclosure

1 Bhagwan Dass Road,
New Delhi.

May 7th, 1947.

During my interview with the Viceroy yesterday afternoon he discussed with me my letters to him, copies of which I have already sent you. Earlier in the day I had received a letter from him. I enclose its copy. In our talk he explained to me the position as he now seems to have planned regarding the partition of the Punjab. I am quite upset over what he told me as I feel convinced that his plans are bound to go against the interests of the Punjab as a whole and of the Sikhs in particular. It now seems to me that this situation has arisen because the Congress has not pressed our case emphatically enough.

2. Although the Viceroy made it clear that the ‘notional division’ he is adopting in the first instance is only to create two assemblies for voting purposes on the broad questions of partition or unity and gave the further assurance that it will not prejudice the work of the Boundary Commission. I entertain the gravest fears as to the repercussions such an announcement will create on public mind. The immediate reaction to it will be that the Punjab has in fact been partitioned on the basis of twelve districts in the East and seventeen in the West. It will weigh the scales heavily in favour of the Muslim League which though disingenuously fighting against it will exploit the scheme to demonstrate the injury it inflicts on the Sikh community and thus gain support for non-partition of the province. It will embitter communal relations much worse than now. It will make it impossible to transfer even a part of any of the 17 districts at any later stage for inclusion in the Eastern Punjab. The Boundary Commission is also bound to be influenced by this notional division.

3. I have from the very beginning tried to impress upon you the gravity of the problem of the Punjab, particularly that of the Sikhs and sought Congress support for our case. I have a feeling that sufficient importance has not been attached to it. In fact, I heard it said by Rajaji that if there was to be a division of India, one district or two in the Punjab this way or that, do not really matter. This is most unfortunate. Quite aside from the irreparable injury such an outlook will cause specially to the Sikhs, the implications of even such a truncated Pakistan on the peace and security of India as a whole must not be ignored. I am convinced that the Muslim Leaguers will accept this lesser area not because they will be satisfied but with a view to demoralize the Sikhs and use it as a jumping ground for future aggression. We have seen but a faint picture of these dreaded designs in recent weeks. At this stage it is only we who have suffered. In future much greater areas will be involved. I want you to view the partition of the Punjab from this long range point of view. The only effective check against the evil designs of the League is to prevent the Sikh community being disrupted by cutting away now as much of the Punjab from Pakistan area as possible.

4. Let us examine some consequences of this ‘notional division’:

(i) The population of the twelve Eastern districts to be separated is:

| Muslims   | 3,853,573 |
| Non-Muslims | 7,694,346 |
| Total     | 11,547,919 |

When the matter goes to the Boundary Commission, the Muslim League, on finding that it cannot avoid partition, will try to get as much of the Eastern 12 districts as possible into its area. Rajaji’s formula had already conceded to the League the contiguous Muslim majority units, even tehsil-wise. The League will cash on it and the Boundary Commission too is bound to be influenced by what has been conceded by an important member of the Congress Working Committee and to some extent by Gandhiji himself. On this basis we are likely to lose in addition the following tehsils out of the 12 districts.

(a) Tehsil Kakonar in Jullundur district where out of population of 1,43,610 only 216,267 are non-Muslims.
(b) Tehsil Ferozepur in Ferozepur district where out of a population of 298,286 only 129,916 are non-Muslims.

(c) Tehsil Zira in Ferozepur district where out of a population of 210,819 only 73,233 are non-Muslims, and

(d) Tehsil Ajnala in Amritsar District where out of 237,049 only 96,110 are non-Muslims.

All these tehsils are contiguous with Eastern Muslim majority districts and will, under Rajaji’s formula, have to go to the Eastern Punjab. And if they are so taken away, as I fear they well might, the position of the Eastern Punjab and of the Sikhs particularly, shall be gravely jeopardised resulting in further depletion of Sikh and non-Muslim population in the Eastern districts.

(ii) Much has happened since Rajaji’s formula based on population majorities in districts—whatever its worth—was first propounded. Muslim League, for instance, has since arrogated to itself the role of dictatorship in Indian public life and embarked on a career of unabashed aggression. To meet its claim on the basis of population majorities today is to pander to its threat and practice of brute force, and to expose ourselves to perennial risks of unrest and disorder. We have seen today that even Mr. Jinnah’s own peace appeal has fallen flat on his followers. If we placate them today particularly in the Punjab, the consequences will be grave for the future peace of India.

(iii) Along with the forthcoming political announcement it seems the Boundary Commission and its terms of reference will also be announced. The terms of reference, unless now most carefully drawn up, will give an indication of the probable boundary line of the proposed final partition of the Punjab. When these terms are considered by the public in the light of the ‘notional division’, the entire basis of partition will assume a new perspective. I may be wrong, but I have a lurking fear that it is the intention of the British to drive the Sikhs towards the Muslims in the Punjab, if only—in appearance at present of course to prevent the community being cut into halves. These intentions are not clean. They want the Sikhs to come to terms with the League and to remain in Pakistan. The ‘notional division’ aims at this perhaps inadvertently. The plan in fact seems to be to both weaken India as well as to keep the Muslim aggression alive. Such a design must be checked at this stage. And this can only be done if the Congress takes a firm stand now. I personally feel that in the interests of the security of India as a whole, you should put the greatest possible pressure on the Viceroy and HMG that in no case will Congress agree to any partition which does not include in the Eastern zone the Divisions of Ambala, Jullundur and the three districts of Gurdaspur, Amritsar and Lahore in Lahore Division. The case can be put in the interests both of the province as well as of the Sikhs who have suffered gravely by Muslim terrorism. The main principle of partition should therefore be to satisfy the Sikhs who, as a community, have a far greater claim on the Punjab than Muslims. The partition should aim primarily at the Sikh case. I have already made this clear in my earlier letters.

5. During my talk with the Viceroy he told me that the Congress had agreed to the partition on the basis of Muslim and non-Muslim majority districts and that it was for this reason he had made his plan for the ‘notional division’. If this is so it is quite contrary to the impression I have gained from you, and I do think that no time should be lost to set things right and to let the Viceroy know that his impression was wrong.
6. I may mention here that it is on the basis of this ‘notional division’ that the Viceroy also proposes to set up the two interim Ministries in the Punjab later on. You can well imagine how the League will consolidate the Western zone in its own interests and entrench itself there as well as confirm the impression that no part of it will ever go to the Eastern Zone.

7. I have referred to the terms of reference of the Boundary Commission. I would like you to see that these terms are not limited only to the basis of population majorities in districts but take into account the Sikh demand that the line of demarcation should be one as would leave as small a percentage of Sikh population as possible in Pakistan area. The basis of total population strengths and property holdings of the non-Muslims in the province as a whole, would here be relevant considerations.

8. In the last paragraph of his letter, the Viceroy refers to what he calls my suggestion and says that he accepts it. The suggestion is not mine. It was the impression I gained, as I said in my earlier letter to him, from my talks with his advisers. The way he has put it, I connect it with what he suggests in the last para of his letter. The Muslim League leaders are now anxious to contact Sikhs leaders. This was hinted at by the Viceroy himself. The move seems to me to force the Sikhs into the lap of the League by presenting to them the picture of the present ‘notional division’ and to convey that their safety lies only by joining up with Pakistan area. This is a situation I cannot reconcile myself with. I am not prepared to negotiate with any leader of the Muslim League and have made this abundantly clear. Others from my community might however be tempted to do so. In such circumstances it will put me in a very awkward position in the Office I now hold. And if, God forbid, they should by any chance dally with the League, it will mean the end of the desire I have always entertained of drawing my community close to the Congress in the cause of the country we all hold dear. As an individual, I know I am of little consequence. But please do let me frankly state that if you and the Congress do not support me at this crucial stage I will cease to be of any service to you consistent with my convictions and hopes.

30. ‘Active Steps Must Be Taken to Avert the Catastrophe of Partition in Punjab—Khan Mohd Ibrahim Burq’

Dawn, 13 May 1947.

Lahore, Monday.—Mian Mohammad Ibrahim Burq, former Education Minister and a Unionist MLA, in a statement to the Press says: ‘Now that the question of the division of the Punjab has come to the forefront and is engaging the attention of all thinking Punjabis, it is obvious that there is almost a complete unanimity of Muslim opinion against the cutting up of the Province, it is equally evident that there is a very strong clamour for division from the Hindus and Sikhs combined.

This catastrophe cannot be averted unless we take active steps at this stage to prevent the partition.

It is admitted by all the people who take a serious view of things that it will be highly detrimental to the interests of Muslims and non-Muslims alike. Mr Suhrawardy, the Muslim League Premier of Bengal has declared in unequivocal terms that the Bengalis are one race, they have one language and have many points in common and does not all this apply with equal force to the Punjab.
Have not the Punjabis, over and above this, several other common interests such as highly developed and interlinked system of irrigation and hydro-electric schemes etc, would not all this upset the economic life of the Province, therefore, why should not we get together to settle our differences ourselves as Mr Suhrawardy proposes for his Province.

The common sense of the Punjabis left uninterfered is bound to assert itself and mutual confidence will begin to reappear. That might create an atmosphere to forgive and forget. And why should this be impossible.

I appeal to all the Punjabis to bring about that happy state of affairs in which we worked in the past. If this happens, I am sure of the glorious future for this land of five rivers.'—API.

31. ‘Memorandum to Viceroy: Arya Pradeshak Sabha’s Demand’

Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 15 May 1947.

Lahore, May 12.—On behalf of the 90 lakhs of Arya Samajists, Lala Khushal Chand, President, Arya Pradeshak Pratinidhi Sabha, Punjab has sent the following memorandum to His Excellency
Lord Louis Mountbatten, Viceroy of India:

‘The growing insistence on the part of the Muslim League to divide India, has led to the further demand for the partition of the Punjab as a way of escape from the yoke of a communal rule. It is my imperative duty, therefore, on the eve of your taking decisions in respect of these demands to convey to your Excellency the wishes and feelings of 90 lakhs of Arya Samajists for the due protection and preservation of the various existing rights and interests of this section and also to urge upon you the necessity of holding the scales of justice even between section and section of India’s population.

About seventy-five years ago, when the great Indian reformer Swami Dayandanda Saraswati, whom some Englishmen of this time called the “Martin Luther of India”, launched a movement for the regeneration and uplift of the whole world and founded the Arya Samaj for the purpose, it was in the Punjab that the movement struck its roots deeper and grew into a mighty tree.
The Punjab today is the main centre of Arya Samaj movement in India to the cause of which hundreds and thousands of people have dedicated their life. The Punjab of Arya Samaj is in the vanguard of every work of social reform and uplift in India.

Our Holy Land

Besides, the ancient history of the Aryas is inseparable from the Punjab. It is on the banks of the Punjab rivers, more particularly on those of the Irawady (Ravi) and the Chandrabhaga
(the Chenab), that the great Aryan Rishis in austere purity, chanted the holy Vedic hymns and lived the Vedic life and thus purified the whole earth. And it is from the Punjab that the Light of Vedic truth went forth to the good of mankind the world over. The Punjab therefore, is our Holy-Land.

And Lahore is the holy shrine of our Holy-Land. Because it was in Lahore that the Arya Saraswati Mandir first took shape and came into being as the Dayanand College. It is here, again, that philosophers like Pandit Guru Datt, martyrs like Pandit Lekh Ram, patriots like L.
Lajpat Rai and saint-philanthropists like Mahatma Hans Raj lived and worked and sacrificed their lives.

Are the Arya Samajists to be deprived of their holy homeland and their holy city, whatever the pretext? Are they to be stripped of their natural and divine heritage and torn away from all their ancient spiritual, cultural and social associations which are to them the most sacred and cherished sources of noble inspiration and guidance of life? Are the Arya Samajists to throw away all these or to be dominated only because their number is comparatively smaller?...

It is therefore most important and necessary that those on whom rests the responsibility of taking decisions on the various demands or proposals of the Punjab’s partition should consult also the wishes and interests of the Arya Samajists who number about 90 lakhs in India and whose population and life is most intimate and vital to the Punjab of today.... And may we trust that the British Government will be pleased only to take such steps even in regard to the proposals of demarcation of new boundaries as have the support of their consent, whereby their religious beliefs and sentiments will be respected and their social, cultural and financial interests will be adequately protected and safeguarded.’

32. ‘Jullundur Division Muslims Resolve to Resist Partition of Punjab at All Costs’

Extract from a Report from Dawn, 16 May 1947.

Jullundur, Wednesday.—The Convention of the Muslim legislators representatives of the District and City Leagues and the District Muslim Students’ Federations of the Jullundur Division, met here on Saturday last to ventilate their sentiments against the proposed fragmentation of the Punjab....

Mr Zia-ul-Islam, President of the Punjab Muslim Students’ Federation, in his presidential address, said that the Muslim League’s demand for the partition of India is based on the principle of two nations. This demand of the partition of India is not a demand of the Muslims of the Muslim majority provinces but also a demand of the Muslims of the Hindu majority provinces. If the Hindus of the Muslim majority provinces want to get out of Muslim domination, why should the Muslims in Hindu provinces accept the Hindu domination, he asked.

Exchange of population is therefore absolutely essential for the progress and prosperity of Hindustan and Pakistan. The division of the Punjab, he said, would strike deep at the root of administrative and economic life of the Province, which has been for nearly a century, developed and built up on that basis and grown as such. We cannot tolerate any portion of Punjab and Bengal to be separated because it will make the exchange of population impossible. Above all, the nature of the Punjab Irrigation demands the continuance of administrative and economic unity of the Province...’
Chapter 21. Bengal: United or Divided

1. ‘What Do You Think about Partition of Bengal?’

A controversy has been raging for some time past over the proposed question of partition of Bengal for the creation of separate homeland for Bengal Hindus.

The Amrita Bazar Patrika has been publishing all shades of opinion both in favour of and against the proposition.

In order to make a more correct estimate of public opinion, we have decided to take some sort of a Gallup Poll from among you—our readers.

We put the following question below and earnestly request you to give us your considered view:

Do you want a separate homeland for Bengal Hindus? ..........

If you approve of the creation of a separate homeland for Bengal Hindus, write only ‘Yes’ against the question; if you don’t, write only ‘No’.

Please send your reply to J.N.S., Amrita Bazar Patrika, City Office, Chowringhee Square, Calcutta, 13, by April 7, 1947.

Name ................................................
Present Address........................................
Home Address.........................................
Religion ................................................

2. ‘Partition of Bengal Is Vitally Necessary: Mr N.R. Sarkar’s Appeal to Assembly Members’

.... The text of the statement runs as follows:

The recent demand for the division of Bengal which has come from Bengal Hindus who, at one stage in the history of the Province, had by their unsparing efforts and sacrifices unsettled the ‘settled fact’ of Lord Curzon’s partition of Bengal, has to be viewed in its true perspective and against the background of real facts and circumstances. In my view this demand does not have its genesis in any pre-determined motive to frustrate the Pakistan demand of the Muslims. Even if the Pakistan demand were not there, the very constitutional set-up which the Cabinet Mission’s proposals envisage, namely, a loose federation with only control over Defence, Communication, and Foreign Affairs, when viewed against the back-ground of the relation of powers and forces working in Bengal and the attitude of Bengal Muslims, cannot be said to ensure proper opportunities to the Bengal Hindus for equal and common rights of citizenship, so essential for the social, political or economic development. Bengal Hindus have realized from actual experience in recent years that no matter whether we have a United India on the basis of the Cabinet Mission’s proposal or States on the basis of the Muslim League demand for Pakistan, a partition of Bengal is necessary, vitally necessary, if Bengal Hindus are to have any prospects for future growth of their cultural and economic life.

MAJORITY PARTY’S STRATAGEM

‘United Bengal’, if it is to have any meaning, postulates a feeling of real union between the two outstanding major political elements in the province, namely Hindus and Muslims. So long as this is merely uttered as a slogan without any indication that the majority community is in any way anxious for union or real understanding with the Hindus,—and no tangible indications have been forthcoming yet—Bengal Hindus can never look upon the cry for United Bengal as genuine. In the absence of any such spirit the claim for United Bengal on the part of the majority community can only be construed as a move to retain their hold and influence over a larger area and resources. Their persistence in the two-nation theory and its application in matters of administration through numerous and increasing ramifications of communal preferences cannot but make their appeal for a United Bengal under present conditions appear as almost a farce to Bengal Hindus....

ONLY A FEW INDIVIDUALS BENEFITED

A careful analysis of the events in the history and administration of Bengal under Provincial Autonomy during the last few years will clearly show that the party in power has followed a policy of separatism and division in order to maintain and increase their power and position and to cover up their lack of efficiency so far as real constructive work is concerned. But their separatist communal policy has not, I feel, benefited even the Muslim Community as a whole, although it may have put good sums of money into the pockets of a few individuals, favoured by Government patronage....

If the party in power had been able to develop the resources of the province and to create more openings and opportunities or if they had been able to properly train up men of their own community for the openings that exist, nobody could object to an increasing share being taken by Muslims of such openings and opportunities. The crux of the whole matter, however, is that the ruling party has not so far given indications of having the ability to develop the resources of the province....

‘SUICIDAL SELF-SURRENDER’

Even among Hindus there are some, whose opinion is entitled to respect, who have expressed themselves in favour of a United Bengal I do not know what may be the arguments behind this opinion. They have not stated what would be the basis or the ideas and plans for this United Bengal on a real democratic line. If the present atmosphere continues—and what hope is there that it will not?

Then under United Bengal the minority community can never expect to get equal opportunity for its rightful growth and development. In fact, the conclusion is hardly resistible that in such a situation for Hindus to agree to a United Bengal would simply be suicidal self-surrender. I chanced to see the other day a notice that a meeting of Muslim citizens had been called to consider the Tramway strike situation. It is unthinkable that even the transport strike should be considered to be in any way a matter for separate communal deliberations. So long as such a separate tendency does exist even in fields which cannot, in reason, be regarded as communal, it is hardly possible for all sections of the people to be imbued with an idea of common citizenship over-riding communal distinctions and making for democratic rule.

The opinion has also been expressed that all our problems would solve themselves with the advent of Socialism, but so long as communalism runs rampant it will be a tremendous stumbling block to the attainment of the ideal of socialism. Under the prevailing circumstances the ruling class will only take advantage of slogans like socialism and communism to seek communal advantage for itself....

What, then, is the harm in separating? What is the danger if the predominantly Hindu areas of Bengal separate and form themselves into a distinct administrative unit?...

A SUGGESTION

The task, however, is not easy and the time at our disposal is very short. Therefore, it is essential that we should take immediate steps in a businesslike way. As the very first step, I suggest that the Assembly Members in respect of the Hindu majority areas (in Bengal), which desire and for which it would be practicable to join and form a separate administrative unit, should come together and publish a unanimous, well-reasoned manifesto demanding separation. This initiative is to come [sic] from them since it is the present elected members who are also participating in the Constituent Assembly now engaged in the larger task of constitution-making for the whole of India. This public demand of theirs should be forwarded to the Secretary of State, to the new Viceroy and the Interim Government, and to the President of the Constituent Assembly and others. Thereafter meetings should be held in the respective constituencies of these members for the purpose of obtaining the approval and acceptance of the manifesto by the people at large in the constituencies. After these are done, I think a Committee or Council of Action should also be formed to watch, guide and conduct this movement at every step. I hope the authorities of the Bengal Provincial Congress Committee would take early steps to get things in motion.

3. 'Creation of a New Bengal: Enthusiastic Support'

Extract from a Report from Amrita Bazar Patrika, 23 March 1947.

Enthusiastic support to the movement for the creation of a separate province of Bengalee nationalists out of the compact non-Muslim majority areas of Western and Northern Bengal was accorded at the conference held at Indian Association Hall on Saturday evening under the auspices of the New Bengal Association. The conference was very largely attended, the hall being fully packed.

Major-General A.C. Chatterjee, convenor of the conference, addressing the gathering said that this was a movement for the preservation and survival of nationalist Bengal. The British power would go by June, 1948 and unless they took steps now they might be separated from the Indian Union. It was unthinkable that the part of the country which gave birth to the spirit of nationalism in India should be separated from the Indian Union and be linked up with Pakistan. The time at their disposal was very short. They must mobilize public opinion very quickly so that the Constituent Assembly and British Government might take steps for the creation of the new province before it was too late.

Mr Alamohan Das moved the following resolution:

'This conference of the citizens of Calcutta and representatives of political, commercial and economic interests, and of the Bar Association emphatically endorses the movement set on foot to create a new province for the Bengali nationalists, out of the compact non-Muslim-majority areas of Western and Northern Bengal and join the new Bengal so formed with the Union composed of the Nationalist Provinces of India, as the conference considers it the only way of ending the intolerable tyranny of the majority community over the minority community in Bengal, and of conserving the culture and language of the Bengal nationalists.'

Dr Bamandas Mukherjee, supporting the resolution said that the for taste [sic] of Pakistan they had already had had made them sick of it. If they were to save their lives, properties, honour and chastity of their women they must have separation.

Srimati Hemarapva Mazumder said that in this question there should be no party feelings or differences.

Amongst those who addressed the conference were Dr S.N. Sinha, Messrs Saila Kumar Mukherji, Chairman, Howrah Municipality, Sailen Ghose, Dr Srikumar Banerjee and Rai Bahadur Bijoy Behari Mukherjee.

28-MAN COMMITTEE

The Conference endorsed the formation of a 28-man Committee called 'New Bengal Association' with Maj. Gen. A.C. Chatterjee the president to conduct the movement. The Committee consists amongst others Mrs Hemarapva Mazumder, Mr Mukunda Behari Mullick, Mr Mrinal Kanti Bose, Mr Banku Behari Mondal, Dr S.N. Sinha, Dr Srikumar Banerjee, Mr Radhanath Das, Dr Subodh Ganguly, Mr S.N. Modak, Mr Harendra Kumar Mukherji, Mr Upendra Nath Banerji and Mr Hemendra Prasad Ghose.

RESOLUTIONS PASSED

The following resolutions were also passed at the conference.

'In view of the notorious handicaps (for example, the communal award) placed on the minority community of Bengal and the consequent helplessness and inability of the few nationalist members of the Provincial Legislatures to throw out the Communal Ministry for their misrule or to check its ever-growing aggressiveness on the minority community in all its spheres of life, this conference calls upon the non-Muslim members of the both the Houses of Bengal Legislature to resign forthwith as a mark of protest and elign [sic] themselves with the movement for the creation of a new Bengal.'

'That the Central Government be requested to take effective steps for the maintenance of peaceful atmosphere in Bengal, so that the inhabitants of the area proposed to be constituted as a separate Province may express their views freely without being subjected to any coercion or physical violence from the majority community of the Province.'
Towards Freedom: 1947

4. Proposal for Separate (Hindu) Province of West Bengal
Letter from J.D. Tyson to G.E.B. Abell, 24 March 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 17, NMML.

My dear Abell

On Saturday, the 22nd March, Mr Kiran Sankar Roy, Leader of the Congress Assembly Party, came to see Sir Frederick Burrows at his own request, probably to try to find out what HE was thinking about the present move to set up a separate (Hindu) Province of West Bengal. HE has asked me to send you a note he made of the course of the discussion in so far as it was relevant to this issue.

As you probably know, the proposal for a separate West Bengal is at present primarily a Hindu Mahasabha idea and though it has had a guarded blessing from some high ranking Congress leaders at Delhi the Congress Party is not yet committed to it and opinion among Hindus in Bengal is still very divided. So far as we know, K.S. Roy himself has not publicly committed himself to any scheme of the kind, though it is obvious from his visit to HE that he sees and is ready to exploit the bargaining value of the movement vis-à-vis Suhrawardy’s pleas for an independent Bengal in which the 45 per cent Hindu element will have their fair share.

Yours sincerely,

J.D. Tyson

ENCLOSURE

Note of an interview which Mr Kiran Sankar Roy, Leader of the Congress Parliamentary Group, in the Bengal Legislature had with H.E., the Governor of Bengal on Saturday, the 22nd March 1947.

After some desultory talk, the conversation was steered by Mr Roy to the present political situation in Bengal and its relation to the political situation elsewhere in India. He said it was inconceivable that Bengal should stand by itself as an independent State and that there was no possibility of the Hindus co-operating if the dominant Muslim majority made that an issue. What the Hindus would probably do in such circumstances would be immediately to launch a passive resistance movement (if it remained at that), refuse to pay any taxes to the existing Government of Bengal and set up a parallel Government of their own to which they would pay taxes. He expressed great appreciation of the Chief Minister’s (Mr Suhrawardy’s) recent speeches but felt that they were the expressions mainly of his own individual opinion and had but slight backing from the Muslim League Party.

HE said that in his view Pakistan, envisaged as enjoying sovereign and independent status, would be difficult to apply to Bengal divided as it is from the nearest potential Pakistan unit, the Punjab, by over 700 miles of territory comprising two Hindu Provinces and with three Hindu Provinces as its neighbours. He suggested that the proper course for Mr Roy and his Party to adopt was to be reasonable and to meet the Chief Minister more than half way so that a Coalition Government could be set up in Bengal irrespective of what happened in the rest of India to enable a peaceful transfer of power to be made.
Mr K.S. Roy replied that if that could be accomplished he and those for whom he spoke would be more than satisfied and he added that they would be content to leave the issues of the number and distribution of portfolios in such a Coalition Government in the hands of the Governor.

5. ‘Suhrawardy Visualizes Independent Bengal’

The view that even if Bengal could be united with a Centre, whether it was a Centre of All-India or Pakistan, it would be a very loose connection and to all intents and purposes Bengal would be independent was expressed by Mr H.S. Suhrawardy, Chief Minister, in an interview yesterday (Monday).

Mr Suhrawardy spoke against the move for the partition of Bengal. He denied that he was emphasizing on a joint ministry to counteract the move for the partition of Bengal....

In his interview, Mr Suhrawardy said:
‘My idea has always been that Bengal should be governed by a ministry in which all sections should cooperate. I tried to do that when I came to power but owing to the all-India tangle and to the insistence of everyone pressing his own point and to the fact that the Congress was not prepared to co-operate with the Muslim League in other provinces, it was not possible for me to take that step.

FUTURE GOVT.
‘But in the case of an independent Bengal where we shall be thrown entirely on our own resources and where all of us can have one aim, namely, the prosperity of this Province, I have no doubt in my mind that future Government of this Province must be vested in a ministry which must enjoy the confidence of all sections of the people and that no particular important minority or group should consider that it is being kept out or suffer from any sense of frustration.

‘I indeed think it will be calamitous if we cannot work together and pull together. And the move for the partition of Bengal I consider to be conceived in a spirit of defeatism and is due to inability to visualize the future. I should have thought that all Bengalis would have risen in favour of the scheme for a greater Bengal rather than for dividing Bengal into sections....

PRACTICALLY INDEPENDENT
‘If you ask me about the future shape of the Province it is not possible for me to make a categorical statement other than, I am sure, that the Province of Bengal will be practically independent of any Central organization. Neither the Congress, nor the Muslim League have till now been able to forecast the future. They have wisely waited for the arrival of the present Viceroy. And I fear that all of us must hold our soul in patience and watch the development of events. All that I hope and pray for is that Bengal may have peace, good feeling and fellowship among its people and prosperity and that it will refuse to listen to advice of persons who wish to encourage the Hindus to separate themselves from their Muslim brethren in order to bolster up their own claims.

Mr Suhrawardy was reminded of the opposition to his idea of Bengal having a status isolated from a Central organization.
Speaking on the point, Mr Suhrawardy said:

‘Even if it could be united with a Centre it will be a very very loose one. Whether it is a Centre of All-India or of Pakistan it will be a very loose connection and to all intents and purposes Bengal will be independent and would have to rely upon its resources for the maintenance of its life and future prosperity.’

6. ‘Bengal Partition Proposal Opposed’

Strong protest was registered and a keen sense of resentment expressed against the move for the partition of Bengal, at a representative conference of leaders held at the office of ‘Jai Hind’ on Sunday last on the invitation of Sj Akhil Chandra Datta, Sj Sarat Chandra Bose presided over the conference.

Sj Sarat Bose said that the proposed partition had to be opposed not only in the interest of East Bengal Caste and Scheduled Caste Hindus, but in the cause of nationalism in India and of Indian independence itself. The partition proposal, he pointed out, was a concession to the principle of Pakistan. It was, therefore, the duty of every nationalist in India and in Bengal, in particular, to oppose the proposal tooth and nail...

Most of the speakers stressed the need for a tearing campaign against the proposed partition and dwelt on the serious dangers to the cause of Indian independence which were bound to follow partition. Partition, they added, was no solution of the communal problem. They pointed out that any nationalist naturally stood committed to an all-out fight against Pakistan. It was therefore illogical, improper and suicidal for him to lend support to the move for partition which amounted to acceptance of the basic principle of Pakistan, namely, the territorial division or re-adjustment on the basis of community or religion. They urged the Congress leadership in Bengal and Congress High Command not to leave the Hindu minority of East Bengal to a dire fate.

The following are the resolutions passed unanimously at the conference:

1. While emphasizing the supreme need of carrying on a determined fight against Pakistan and communalism and thereby safeguarding the interests of the people of Bengal, this conference places on record the emphatic protest against the move for partition of Bengal inasmuch as:
   (1) Partition is fundamentally wrong on all grounds—political, economic, cultural, linguistic and social.
   (2) Partition is no remedy for communalism. It is no solution of the communal problem but is calculated to aggravate it.
   (3) Exchange of population being a helplessly unpractical proposition, the inevitable effect of partition will be to throw the minority communities of Bengal into the fire of communalism.
   (4) It is a retrograde and reactionary move. Communalism is only a passing phase in our national life. The destiny of our country will inevitably be shaped by socio-economic and political forces, which have already begun to work. The partition of Bengal will create a permanent cleavage between the two communities and perpetuate an evil which is bound to die out even earlier than some people find it difficult to believe.

(5) It will seriously affect the interests and position of the Scheduled caste Hindus, who form a predominantly large percentage of the Hindus in East and North Bengal. In case of partition, the well-to-do sections would naturally be inclined to move out of East and North Bengal and migrate to West Bengal, leaving the poorer sections of caste Hindus and Scheduled caste Hindus to their fate in an area which for all practical purposes would be converted into Pakistan. The very move for partition will thus widen the gulf between the Hindus themselves at a time when serious attempt is being made to do away with all inequalities and caste distinctions.

(6) It is a concession to the principle of Pakistan.

(7) It is argued by the advocates of partition that it will be a source of tremendous strength to the Hindus of East Bengal and that in case of oppression of the Hindu minority by the Pakistan Govt, in East Bengal, the Hindu Govt sitting in Calcutta will give them protection. This argument cannot stand a moment's examination. How one provincial Govt can give any real or effective protection living under another provincial Government passes one's comprehension.

(8) The whole move for partition is obviously the outcome of defeatist mentality which has grown out of a sense of frustration and want of self-confidence but for which there is no justification or excuse. No Govt can possibly function for any length of time against the wishes of a very large minority forming almost half of the entire population.

(9) Partition is tantamount to the surrender of almost half of Bengal to communal forces.

(10) Salvation does not lie in partition. It can only come out of a determined fight against Pakistan communalism and separate electorate.

(11) The move for partition is calculated to strengthen British imperialism and to disintegrate Indian national life and solidarity.

II. This conference demands that when power is transferred it must be transferred to an Indian Union of which the Province of Bengal shall be a unit.

III. This conference further demands that there must not be transference of power separately to divided portions of India.

IV. This meeting urges upon the people of Bengal to pool their full strength immediately to fight for a non-communal Government in Bengal which may ensure to all men and women living in the province, freedom from want and freedom from fear of domination by one community or class over another.

V. Resolved further that Sj Sarat Chandra Bose and Sj Akhil Chandra Datta be authorized to form a Committee of Action for taking necessary steps to give effect to the above resolutions....
7. Proposal for a Separate Province in Bengal

Memorandum from Bengali Non-Muslim Members of Central Legislative Assembly to G.E.B. Abell, 2 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 17, NMML.

Feroz Shah Road,
New Delhi.

Dear Sir,

Enclosed is a statement by the non-Muslim members of the Central Legislature from Bengal embodying their considered views on the proposed formation of a separate autonomous province in Bengal within the Indian Union. As a few members are now absent from Delhi, it has not been possible to append their signatures just at the present moment, but they would follow.

In view of the urgency of the matter, I request you to be so good as to place the statement immediately in the hands of His Excellency the Governor General for such action as to him may seem fit and proper.

An acknowledgement is requested.

Yours faithfully,

Pandit Lakshmi Kanta Maitra,
MLA, Central.

ENCLOSURE

Proposed creation of a separate autonomous province in Bengal within the Indian Union.

We, the undersigned Members of the Indian Legislative Assembly and the Council of State from Bengal, deem it our duty to make the following statement on the proposed creation of a separate autonomous province in Bengal.

2. We have carefully considered the situation in the country as it has developed during the last ten years. The absolute majority of the Muslim Members in the Bengal Legislature has enabled them to completely communalise the entire field of administration in the province, with the result that the cultural and economic life of the minorities has been systematically undermined. Besides, the Muslim League Ministry, by adopting the most inefficient, corrupt and reckless methods has wellnigh brought the administration of the province to the verge of collapse and disaster.

3. The events which have taken place since August last have brought things to a head. Criminal misdeeds on an extensive scale, such as arson, murder, plunder, rape, abduction, forced conversion, marriage under compulsion, desecration of places of worship and destruction of property, committed by the supporters of the Muslim League in Calcutta and various places in the country-side with the consent or connivance of the communal Government in power, have brought us face to face with the outstanding realities of the situation. The time has, therefore, come for us to consider what measures are necessary to be taken immediately for protecting the life, honour, liberty, religion, education, culture, language and economic interests of the Hindus and other nationalists of Bengal.

4. The urgency of the matter has been further emphasized by the announcement of the British Government of the 20th February last to the effect that British Rule would come to an end by the 30th June, 1948 and that power would be handed over before that date either to some form of 'Central Government for British India or in some areas to the existing Provincial Governments or in such other way as may seem most reasonable and in the best interests of the Indian people'. As the Muslim League has repeatedly declared that nothing short of a sovereign Pakistan would be acceptable to them, their demand includes the transfer of the whole of Bengal to its administration as an independent State outside the Indian Union. This can never be agreed to by the nationalists of Bengal as it is bound to lead to their abject subjection, total loss of freedom and complete cultural effacement. Such a fate for the Hindus and other nationalists of the province who have contributed so largely to the advent of freedom in India can never be contemplated with equanimity.

5. We are, therefore, confronted by the question, namely, whether to live in freedom or in slavery. There is no patriotic or sensible man who will hesitate for a single moment to give the right answer. In our view the only solution of the problem lies in the creation of a separate autonomous province in West and North Bengal within the Indian Union.

6. We have ascertained public opinion on this momentous issue and are convinced that the overwhelming majority of the patriotic and thoughtful men not only in Bengal but in the rest of India is in favour of such a solution. We are, however, aware that there is some objection to this proposal in certain quarters. After having given the most careful consideration to their views, we feel bound to assert that their opposition is based on untenable grounds. They have not so far put forward any alternative suggestions of a concrete nature, and the few hints thrown out by them are wholly impracticable in the present context of things.

7. Of the grounds urged by these critics in opposition to the proposal three deserve notice. The first is that the attitude of the supporters of a division of the province is different from that of the great leaders who fought and unsettled Lord Curzon’s Partition of Bengal. This objection is based on a misconception, for the character of the Partition of Bengal in 1905 was entirely different from the division of the province now demanded. Lord Curzon tacked on the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions and the Darjeeling District of Bengal to five Divisions of Bihar, one Division of Chotanagpur and one Division of Orissa. Another ground was that the solidarity and homogeneity of the people of the two parts of Bengal were sought to be broken by that measure, and that the language, culture and traditions of the Bengalees were in jeopardy. But the position has completely changed today. The Muslim League now definitely and strongly asserts that the Muslims are a separate nation and that their language, culture and customs are entirely different from those of the Hindus. It is also now being claimed that Bengal is the homeland of the Muslims alone. The second objection to the proposed creation of a new province is that it will ‘leave the Hindu Minority of East Bengal to a dire fate.’ But we feel that this apprehension is entirely baseless. At the present moment the people of West and North Bengal are absolutely powerless to render effective assistance to their persecuted brethren in East Bengal. But with full Governmental authority in their hands, they will be in a position not only to assist them in a variety of ways but to prevent any injustice or outrage being perpetrated on them. The third objection is that the proposal is anti-national and that communalism is a passing phase. This is a wholly erroneous view as it is based on an incorrect appreciation of the situation. Far from it being a passing phase, communalism is till growing as is evidenced by the recent tragic events in the Punjab and Bengal as well as by the steps which are being taken even now by the Muslim League to strengthen it. It is idle to expect that communalism in India, which has grown steadily during a period of more than sixty years, will die a natural death in the near future.
8. We desire in this connexion to invite the attention of the public as well as the Government to the formation in Bengal of an organization known as the Muslim National Guards which is assuming the character of a private army and is fast becoming a menace to the peace and tranquillity of the province. Another serious and disquieting development is the creation by the Muslim League Ministry of an armed Police Force consisting entirely of Muslims recruited from outside the province.

9. We fervently hope that the various aspects of the question, as pointed out by us, will be fully appreciated by all. It is our firm conviction that the emergence of a new province would prove beneficial to the inhabitants of both East and West Bengal and that it will foster and strengthen the nationalist forces.

10. We request His Excellency the Viceroy and the Interim Government as well as the Constituent Assembly to take without delay such measures as may be necessary for constituting a separate autonomous province in West and North Bengal as a willing part of the Indian Union.

11. Further, in view of the recrudescence of communal disorder and violence in Calcutta and other parts of Bengal, it is imperative to take immediate steps to prevent more bloodshed and chaos. With this object in view we request that His Excellency the Governor General be pleased to install, as an interim and transitional measure, two Regional Administrations with separate Ministries under a common Governor, for the two parts of the province of Bengal.

Lakshmi Kanta Maitra, M.L.A.

(Calcutta Non-Muhammadan Constituency; also represented the Presidency Division Non-Muhammadan Constituency from 1935 to 1945)
Dhirindra Kanto Lahiri Choudhury, M.L.A. (Central Bengal Landholder’s Constituency) Mymensingh, E. Bengal
Susil Kumar Ray Chowdhary, Member, Council of State, West Bengal Non-Muhammadan Constituency.
Satyendra Kumar Das, Member, Council of State, East Bengal Non-Muhammadan Constituency.

8. Bengal Congress Calls for Partition
Resolution Passed by Bengal Provincial Congress Committee in Calcutta, 4 April 1947

_Indian Annual Register, Vol. I, 1947, pp. 238–9._

The Executive Committee of the Bengal Provincial Congress Committee in Calcutta on the 4th April 1947 resolved that ‘if His Majesty’s Government contemplate handing over its power to the existing Government of Bengal, which is determined to ensure the formation of Bengal into a separate sovereign State and which, by its composition, is a communal party Government, such portions of Bengal as are desirous of remaining within the Union of India should be allowed to remain so and be formed into a separate province within the Union of India.’

The resolution further said that while framing the constitution of Bengal even as a province with the Union, if it was not found possible to provide joint electorates and adult franchise... with essential minority safeguards as the basis of the Constitution, Bengal should be divided into two provinces and such portions as were desirous of framing the constitution on that basis should be allowed to form a separate province of their own.

Dr Shyama Prasad Mookherjee, Sj K.C. Neogy, MLA (Central) Dr B.C. Roy and Sj Nalini Ranjan Sarkar attended the meeting of the Committee by special invitation.

The Committee expressed the view that India had a fundamental unity geographically, culturally, ethnically and politically and that in the present international setting, the maintenance of this unity was vitally necessary for the defence of India and for her proper future development. This unity would be ineffective unless there was a strong Centre, and so the Committee considered that the Cabinet Mission’s decisions of allotting to the Centre only the three subjects of Defence, Foreign Affairs and Communications, had been inadequate. At any event, the Union Constituent should contain clear and definite provisions giving effective authority to the Central Government to implement its directives in matters concerning Fundamental Rights and the protection of minorities and of backward tribes, and these subjects must be made a Central responsibility.

The Committee considered that joint electorates with adult franchise should be the basis of the future constitution of the Union of India and all its component parts.

While welcoming HMG’s decision to transfer power to the people of the country by June 1948, the Committee insisted that power as a whole should be transferred to the Central Government. It recorded its disapproval of the clause in the statement of February 20 that His Majesty’s Government may transfer power even to the Government of some of the existing provinces, as this would break up Indian unity and cut off Bengal from the rest of India and was likely to result in handing over power to some communal party in Bengal.

By another resolution, the Committee noted that certain portions of Eastern and South-Eastern Bengal, the Garo Area, the Chittagong tracts and others, were determined to remain within the Union of India. Having contiguous connection with other parts of the Indian Union, such portions had their inalienable right to remain within the Union. So the Committee expected that in the new Constitution, effective facilities would be provided for these portions to remain within the Union, if necessary by incorporating them in any other province within the Union, contiguous to them.

The Committee also favoured the setting up, immediately, of Regional Ministries functioning in two different regions of Bengal in the interim period, pending the final transfer of power. It recorded with regret that the Bengal Government had failed to give protection to law-abiding citizens and particularly to the minority community, as also to maintain law and order within the province. The Government, as at present functioning, had forfeited the confidence of the law-abiding and peaceful citizens of the province. A Government guided and dominated by a communally composed party could not discharge its obligations towards the citizens, irrespective of class and community. The communal nature of the Government now functioning in Bengal was mainly responsible for the social disorder, defiance of law and order and the general lack of efficiency and integrity usually expected in governmental institutions and offices. Hence, the Committee considered that in the interim period, pending the final transfer of power, the only other alternative was to set up immediately Regional Ministries functioning in two regions according to the desire of the people inhabiting those regions as had been suggested for the Punjab.
Towards Freedom: 1947

9. ‘Tarakeshwar Conference: Demand for Partition of Bengal’

Extract from a Report from Sunday Statesman, 6 April 1947.

‘Our demand for the partition of Bengal is prompted by the desire to prevent disintegration of the nationalist element, to preserve Bengal’s culture and to secure a homeland for the Hindus of Bengal which will constitute a national State as a part of India and will afford protection to the minority in Eastern Bengal,’ said Mr N.C. Chatterjee in his presidential address at the Bengal Provincial Hindu Conference at Tarakeshwar on Friday.

‘The new province will have an area of about 34,000 square miles out of the total area of 77,000 square miles of Bengal,’ he added. ‘Its population will be about 25 millions, of which Muslims will be about 8 millions. The proportion of the Muslim minority in the new province will be about 30 per cent. The correspondent proportion of the Hindu minority of East Bengal will also be about 30 per cent. Thus the parity between the minorities will be an effective safeguard against any kind of oppression or discrimination.

‘The economic and agrarian problems of the new province are materially different from those in East Bengal. It will have a population bigger than that of many Indian provinces and have sufficient mineral resources and food as well as important industries and will have the greatest port and the biggest university in India.

‘Bengal should be partitioned before the British Government quits this country. Once you go under a Pakistan Government holding sway over the whole of Bengal, you will be doomed for ever.

‘Our plan of action should be definite and clear:

‘(a) We shall have a committee of experts to delimit the boundaries of the new province.

‘(b) Immediately the areas are settled, we shall call upon Hindu MLAs to demand that this territory should be constituted into a new province. If necessary, they should come out of the Assembly and form a separate legislative body.

‘(c) A declaration should be made guaranteeing the fullest protection to the minorities in this new province and safeguarding their religion and culture and assuring every citizen living in that state equal rights of citizenship.

‘(d) Every Hindu living in East Bengal should be treated as a citizen of this new province.

‘(e) We shall present our demand to the President of the Constituent Assembly and ask the Assembly to frame a Constitution and to include this new province as an integral part of the Union of India.

‘(f) We shall place this demand before the British Premier and the British nation and call upon them to implement the principle which the Cabinet Mission formulated in their plan that the Hindu majority areas in Bengal and the Hindu–Sikh majority areas of the Punjab must not be made parts of sovereign Pakistan States.

NEW BENGAL STATE

‘(g) We shall form a council of action to device ways and means to secure the establishment of the new Bengal State.

‘(h) We shall enrol at least 50,000 volunteers, which will be the nucleus of the national army for the new province, from local committees in each village, union and district in order to galvanise public opinion and carry on a campaign in support of this move.'
‘(i) We shall make arrangements for setting up a provincial government which will take over power from the British Government.

‘(j) We shall work in co-operation with all nationalists, irrespective of party affiliations, who will support this demand.

‘If you stand together and give us your support and if you are prepared to undergo the necessary sacrifice, we promise you the new province early next year.

‘On behalf of the Hindus of Bengal we call upon the British Government either to transfer power to the Provisional Government in the new province of West Bengal or to transfer the same to the Central Government....

‘The latest declaration of the British Government envisages the possibility of the imposition of Pakistan on the whole of Bengal. This announcement militates against the previous statements of responsible British statesmen to keep intact the integrity of India and the clear finding of the British Cabinet Mission that there is an almost universal desire for the unity of India. This declaration also runs counter to HMG’s pledge not to allow the minority to place their veto on the advance of the majority....

GREATER BENGAL

‘Some people are talking of Greater Bengal. They suffer from greater delusion. No one will be happier than myself if we can build up a Greater Bengal, as an integral part of Great India, as a self-respecting unit of the Indian Federation. But if Greater Bengal means Greater Pakistan, then it will be insanity to accept such a plan.

‘We do not believe that it is really the desire of the British nation forcibly to disrupt India’s unity and integrity. British rule should be liquidated with honour to England and benefit to India. If British statesmen are really serious in liquidating British rule in India, then the transfer of power should be made from British hands to a strong Central Government in an Indian Union and the attributes of sovereignty should be vested in that Government which will have power to regulate the destinies of the whole of India and will be able to preserve the integrity of India against foreign invasion and internal strife and civil disorder.’

10. ‘Bengal Partition Issue—Leela Roy’s View’

_Hindustan Standard_, 15 April 1947.

Sjkt Leela Roy has issued the following statement:

‘I am just back from a tour of the Dacca district in several parts of which myself and my colleagues addressed huge public meetings, analysing the general situation in the country and pointing out the extremely harmful implications of a partition of Bengal.

‘In mammoth public meetings anti-partition resolutions were passed and democratic right of Congressmen to propagate their views for and against partition was demanded.
We have found everywhere that only a microscopic minority supported the partition move and even they were led more by specious promises which were totally untenable than by sound reason. Many on our presenting the other side of the picture were convinced of the harmfulness of the move the poorer and the younger section of the people were definitely against the move.

‘A wrong impression has been sought to be produced mainly through paper propaganda in Bengal and India that Bengal as a whole or even a majority in Bengal wanted partition.
Towards Freedom: 1947

I am definitely of opinion that this is not a fact. The fact rather is that the other side has been inactive and not vocal and thus gone by default. The time has come when this partitioning of our homeland must be effectively stopped. Our demand is that:

1. Not a single Bengalee whether a Hindu or Muslim must leave his homeland—whether he be in the eastern or the western part of Bengal.
2. His life, property and religion must be safe from all kinds of hooliganism or interference.
3. Free democratic right of voting that is, joint and not compartmental franchise must be assured to him.
4. Lastly everyone must have a right to organize and raise a volunteer corps in order to propagate and maintain the above stand.

'I appeal to those all over Bengal who are of our view of thinking to contact and co-operate with us without further delay for giving expression to and proving what Nationalist Bengal really thinks and desires. Not a day more should be lost. The heart of Bengal is sound, let not her reason be clouded by false and sectional slogans.

All are requested to contact us at: The Weekly Forward Bloc Office 47—A Rashbehari Avenue, Calcutta.'

Sikta Leela Roy has telegraphed to Mahatma Gandhi expressing the wish to meet him urgently on the Bengal partition issue.

11. Report from Bengal Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bengal for the First Half of April 1947, 17 April 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

Political

1. Uneasiness and uncertainty have been the keynotes of the fortnight and provincial problems, those in Calcutta in particular, have tended to divert interest from the happenings in the rest of India. As must be expected in Bengal under present conditions the problem of communal discord and the best method of escape from the present politico-communal impasse have continued to be major matters of interest.

2. The disturbed conditions in Calcutta have again monopolised the chief measure of interest. The major political parties have continued their efforts to restrain members of the two major communities in the city from continuing their excesses. Some details of the happenings of the period are referred to in the Communal Section of this Report. In brief, the efforts that have been made have been only partially successful and, in fact, the communal tension and uncertainty is greater now than it was in the middle of the period.

3. Political capital has also been sought to be made out of the various incidents that have recently taken place in Noakhali. Injudicious publicity and the issue of statements by Mr Gandhi and others which might be taken as implying a recognition that the general situation in the district is as depicted in the telegram and messages that have been despatched from that area have contributed very considerably to the present sense of unease there. Full advantage has been taken of developments to raise the general question of the future of the Hindus of East Bengal and the weakness of their position under present conditions.

4. It has been realized that the present disturbed communal situation provides a valuable opportunity to publicise, in Hindu quarters, the thesis that the only method of obtaining relief from the present political impasse is the formation of a West Bengal, separated from the Muslim League controlled East Bengal. Reports from the areas most likely to be affected if such a partition was brought about continue to show growing interest in the scheme—an interest which is being stimulated by constant propaganda in the press and among the thinking section of Hindu society. The major event bearing on this problem was the annual session of the Provincial Hindu Mahasabha held at Tarakeswar in the district of Hooghly where lines of action for the division of the Province were laid down. The attendance at the conference on the 5th was some 25,000—the meeting being presided over by Mr N.C. Chatterjee and addressed by Dr Shyamaprasad Mukherjee and ‘Major General’ A.C. Chatterjee. At the conference a resolution, demanding the partition of Bengal and the formation of a Hindu Province, was formally adopted. A suggestion was also made regarding the formation of Regional Ministries. A Council of Action was formed to achieve these goals and the Working Committee of the Mahasabha is now carrying on informal discussions with the Congress leaders in Bengal to formulate a joint scheme. The Hindus appreciate that the action proposed by them may invoke Muslim hostility and reports received indicate that the Mahasabha contemplates the immediate recruitment of one lakh of volunteers and the raising of a fund of Rs 50 lakhs to be spent for Hindu defence and the movement for the partition of Bengal. The subsequent announcement by the Bengal Provincial Congress Committee in favour of the general principle of partition will undoubtedly strengthen the hands of those working for the success of this proposal.

5. According to the report of the Commissioner, Burdwan Division, numerous meetings, large and small, have been held in support of the movement. The reports of the Commissioner, Presidency Division, show that the movement is also receiving active support from the Hindus of Jessore, Khulna and parts of 24-Parganas. In North Bengal, too, the movement appears to have fairly wide support and in Malda interested parties are already engaged in considering the division of that district on a thana basis! Even in the Chittagong Division there is reported to be a strong section of Hindu opinion who favour partition though the Communist party, the local followers of Mr Sarat Chandra Bose and the Muslims are opposed to it.

6. Though excitement over the Assam Eviction Policy has subsided for the moment in the Chittagong Division and does not appear to be attracting attention in the Dacca Division, interest has continued to grow in the district of Rangpur where the situation on the Assam border has dangerous possibilities. A number of meetings have been held at which speeches denouncing the eviction policy have been delivered: a number of the meetings, notably at Chilmari (30,000) and at Sonahat (10,000) were well attended. Though the Commissioner considers that there is little likelihood of any actual trouble in Bengal, the people have unquestionably been encouraged by this propaganda to consider the ‘conquest’ of Assam as a jehad. Fortunately following the visit of Khaliquzzaman Chowdhury to Assam there are indications that Muslim League volunteers have been instructed not to enter Assam though the latest reports received indicate that a second killa or fort for the concentration of National Guard volunteers is being constructed in the Rangpur district on the border of Assam and that preparations are, in fact, being made for the despatch of volunteers into that Province. The whole question of the policy to be adopted towards the activities of the Muslim League of the Province in this matter is under consideration of Government....

12. Independent Bengal to Have Links with Britain
Extracts from a Note by T. Shone on His Interview with H.S. Suhrawardy, 17 April 1947

Mr Suhrawardy, Chief Minister of Bengal, called on me on the 15th April and stayed for over an hour, during which he did most of the talking. The following are the main points he made—often in the bantering and even flippant way which he affects, but which does not necessarily mean that his remarks are not to be taken seriously....

Mr Suhrawardy expressed the utmost distaste for a divided Bengal. The Province, as now constituted, could become an independent State of wealth and importance, with its 65 million inhabitants. He wanted foreign capital and the assistance of British enterprise to develop Bengal; American capital was also ‘waiting on the door-step’. But how could one know now whether Bengal would be divided or not? And Calcutta was vital to Bengal. At a later stage in the conversation Mr Suhrawardy said he supposed the Hindus might have Howrah while the Muslims kept Calcutta. But he repeated that he did not want to have anything to do with dividing Bengal; and he certainly did not want to have to fall back on Chittagong as the port of a mere Eastern Bengal under Muslim control....

Throughout Mr Suhrawardy’s conversation, there was a strong implication that he wished Bengal at least to maintain a close connexion with Great Britain; indeed, at one point he said ‘I suppose I could offer Bengal to England on a platter, but that the offer might be refused’. He again dropped a remark—not untinged with sarcasm, as when he first made it to me in Calcutta—about the High Commission becoming an Embassy.

When speaking about the division of Bengal, Mr Suhrawardy asked where in the world could one go nowadays, to settle down in peace. Was England a good place,—or Ireland? Or perhaps the Baleric Islands? One must have work of some kind; he believed hall porters at hotels in New York did very well. Several of his remarks in this context gave the impression that however much he dislikes the prospect of a divided Bengal, he fears it may come about.

As Mr Suhrawardy was leaving, I mentioned that I was going to meet Mr Jinnah for the first time next day. He said ‘I hope you will be able to talk—if you want to. Generally, Mr Jinnah will listen to someone for two minutes or so and then get impatient’.

13. Jinnah Rejects All Pleas for Compromise
Telegram from J.F. Burrows to Louis Mountbatten, 18 April 1947
IOR, R/3/1/130, Acc. No. 3448, NAI.

IMPORTANT
SECRET
No. 95-S. My Chief Minister informed me at interview today that while in Delhi this week he had put to Jinnah the strong pleas I had made to him that either the Cabinet plan should be accepted and the League should enter the Constituent Assembly or that a very strong Coalition government should be set up immediately in Bengal. (I had made it clear to Suhrawardy that I regarded the adoption of one or other of these courses as only method of avoiding civil strife and paving the way in peaceful transfer of power in Bengal.)

Jinnah told Suhrawardy that he regarded the Cabinet plan as dead: that he is not accepting the Congress invitation to discuss it and that he has no intention of entering Constituent Assembly.

As regards forming a Coalition Cabinet in Bengal Jinnah’s view was that the proposal was premature.

14. Mookerjee Responds to Suhrawardy

Statement by S.P. Mookerjee, Undated
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 141, Installment II to IV, NMML.

We have carefully gone through the long statement issued by Mr Suhrawardy regarding partition of Bengal. It is not possible for us to take him seriously in respect of the various points he has raised and in particular to his jugglery of figures based on the last census report. He has painted a paradise for the minority community in Bengal and has appealed to them to agree to remain in united Bengal, which to quote his own self-condemnatory language, will be within a divided India. This paradise to come is hardly comparable to the hell that exists today in Bengal and the untold sufferings of the Hindus which are mostly due to the misrule and mal-administration of a party Government, of which Mr Suhrawardy is himself at the head. The whole basis of the Moslem League demand for the partition of India is that Muslims belong to a separate nation and they refuse to live under the majority rule of the Hindus. It is refreshing to find that Mr Suhrawardy has suddenly discovered that all Bangalees belong to one race and as such they should agree not to partition their province. Is he prepared to suggest that in Bengal, barring in the field of religion which is the concern of individuals as such, there will be no distinction made between Hindus and Moslems in any sphere of administration or public activity? Surely if all Bengalees constitute one race, as indeed they should, does it not logically follow that all citizens belonging to the various provinces will agree to live within one united India, exercising the common rights of Indian citizenship? Or, does Mr Suhrawardy suggest that in respect of Bengal alone we shall follow one rule so that his party and community may dominate over the entire area but in respect of the whole of India Hindus and Muslims must constitute two different nations and Muslims must demand a separate sovereign Pakistan for themselves? And yet Mr Suhrawardy expects that Bengal Hindus must trust him and take him seriously.

We have not asked for the creation of two provinces out of the existing boundaries of Bengal due to any sense of frustration. We have made this demand with a full sense of responsibility. Ours is a most realistic approach and we consider this to be essential for our future peace and freedom, if not for our very existence. In the first place it will enable nearly two-third of Bengal’s Hindu population who live in contiguous areas to remain within the Indian Union. Secondly, the creation of two provinces, one predominantly Hindu and another predominantly Muslim, will lead to the disappearance of all feelings of domination and counter-domination and enable the two major communities in Bengal to develop themselves freely according to their wisdom and talent. They must discover very soon that it will be to their mutual interest to protect the minority within each respective area. It may be that within a few years the two provinces may again come together, once the present communal tension and distrust disappear.
Mr Suhrawardy has attempted to drive a wedge between the caste Hindus and Scheduled Castes. He has shed crocodile tears for the welfare of the backward sections among Hindus. We can assure him that inspite of his having bribed a few Quislings, who do not count in the public life of Bengal at all today, all sections of Hindus have nothing but disgust and horror for the way in which Bengal is being administered today and whatever their internal differences may be, they support the demand for partition with one voice as the only way out of their present tragic fate.

We have emphasized over and again and do so once more that partition of Bengal is only a long term solution and if Bengal is to be saved from destruction the present ministry must be dissolved with the least possible delay. It has failed to discharge the elementary duties that any civilised Government is expected to perform and it has forfeited its right to remain in charge of the affairs of the province for one single day more. To allow it to remain in power is nothing but to compromise with crime.

15. Students Support Bengal Partition

Memorandum from Calcutta University Students to J.B. Kripalani, 21 April 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 141, Installment II to IV, NMML.

Calcutta

To
Acharya J.B. Kripalani,
President of the Indian National Congress

Sir,

We, the following students of the Calcutta University, have the honour to request you to very kindly place this letter of ours, in which we have tried to analyse our arguments in favour of a partition of the province of Bengal, before the Working Committee of the Congress at its next meeting.

(1) We the non-Muslim and nationalist Muslim inhabitants of Bengal want to remain in a strong Indian Union. But the present League Ministry of Bengal wants the whole of this province to form a part of their Pakistan scheme, without any relation with the Centre. This they want to do forcibly against the will of its non-Muslim and nationalist Muslim inhabitants. Formation of a separate province in Western Bengal, composed of the compact non-Muslim majority areas, will enable a large majority of the non-Muslim inhabitants and also some of the nationalist Muslim inhabitants of Bengal to remain with the Centre and out of the clutches of this evil-conceived Pakistan.

(2) Since there is not the remotest chance of the Muslim League coming to an agreement with the Congress and joining the Constituent Assembly before June 1948, the British Government according to their statement of February 20, may hand over all power and authority, in the case of Bengal, to its League Ministry, which in all probability will be in office till June, 1948 because of their brute majority in the legislature due to the communal Electorate. This will mean a virtual establishment of Pakistan in the whole of Bengal. If we must concede to Pakistan, let us make it as limited as possible. This can only be achieved by a timely partition of Bengal and of the Punjab. It has got to be done before it is too late.
The religion, culture and the traditions of the non-Muslim inhabitants of Bengal, whose past history is so glorious and who have contributed so much to India's fight for freedom are at stake in the hands of the League Ministry. If the Ministry is allowed to have its own way for some time more, these will become things of the past. The only way to save at least a part of them is to divide Bengal. The Bengalee nationalism and the religion, culture and traditions of its non-Muslim inhabitants will find a homeland in the new province of Western Bengal.

At present the non-Muslim and nationalist Muslim inhabitants of any part of Bengal have absolutely no voice in the administration of the province. Hence the non-Muslims and nationalist Muslims of Western Bengal are almost of no help to the non-Muslims and nationalist Muslims of Eastern Bengal. Thus the plea, that with the division of Bengal the fate of the non-Muslims and the nationalist Muslims of East Bengal will be sealed, does not hold good. It is to be remembered that the Noakhali tragedy occurred while Bengal remained united. Surely the condition of the non-Muslims and nationalist Muslims of East Bengal will not be worse in a divided Bengal than what it is now. Rather, it will be very much better as then the non-Muslims and nationalist Muslims of West Bengal, having a voice in the administration of that new province, will be in a position to render some real and effective help to them.

From a study of the latest Budget proposals of the League Ministry of Bengal, we can form an idea as to the extent to which the non-Muslim inhabitants of the province are being tortured. The Ministry is spending altogether a sum of Rs 1 Crore and 5 lakhs for the Muslim refugees from Bihar. In spite of the Bihar Government and Mahatma Gandhi's repeated requests to the refugees to settle back in their old villages, they are being kept here with the deliberate intention to 'Islamize' Western Bengal. A new Muslim Educational Fund has been opened to which the annual contribution will be Rs 10 Lakhs. Fifty thousand Rupees are being spent for the construction of Muslim students' hostels in Calcutta. Rs 29,000 have been sanctioned for the expansion of Presidency and Islamia College to take in more Muslim students. The scheme for the expansion of research facilities in the University College of Science, for which originally ten lakhs of rupees had actually been sanctioned, has now been abandoned as it was a non-communal scheme. On the other hand schemes are afoot for the establishment of a residential Muslim University in the suburbs of Calcutta at an estimated expenditure of One Crore and thirty lakhs of rupees. Several crores of rupees have been wasted due to the failure of the boat construction scheme and now 7 lakhs are being wasted on the Calcutta Riots' Enquiry Commission. Bengal Government is the most corrupt administration in India. It is to be noted here that the non-Muslims of Bengal pay approximately 75 per cent of the province's taxes. Are we to go on indefinitely paying for our own destruction and only for the benefit of those who support a hostile political organization? A partition of Bengal is the only answer to this question.

We want a non-communal constitution based on the principles of democracy with joint electorate and universal adult suffrage. We want that under the constitution minorities will be protected and equal opportunities for development and growth will be provided for all, religion, caste, creed, colour or sex being no barrier in any walk of public life. These cannot be expected in a constitution framed by the Leaguers. That they will not yield to the demand for joint electorates is clear from all their utterances. The happenings in Noakhali clearly show that they are not going to protect the minorities.
So far as employment is concerned, they are even prepared to import Muslims from other provinces, if suitable Bengalee Muslims are not available but not to take in non-Muslim Bengalees or even nationalist minded Muslims. Punjabi Muslims recently demobilized from the army are being recruited in hundreds in the Calcutta Armed Police to increase the percentage of Muslims therein. Surely the League Ministry cannot rely upon non-Muslim policemen in the act of suppressing the nationalist spirit. How can we afford such state of affairs to continue any longer? A quick partition of Bengal is the only solution.

Thus to frame a non-communal constitution of their own choice and to find a homeland for the Bengalee nationalism, the non-Muslim and nationalist Muslim inhabitants of Bengal are today demanding a separate province in Western Bengal. Surely in this they are in no way betraying the efforts of those great patriots and leaders who forced Curzon to re-unite Bengal. Curzon divided Bengal to crush its nationalistic spirit whereas now in a division of the province lies the only way to save its nationalism.

Surely a talk of a partition is not out of any defeatist mentality as is said by some still in favour of a United Bengal. Is the Sikh demand for a partition of the Punjab out of any defeatist mentality? After all, the prevention of a division of India is not entirely dependent upon the non-Muslims and nationalist Muslims of Bengal and hence if, in the light of Mr Attlee's statement of February 20, they want a division of the province, they are in no way advocating Pakistan. Rather if Western Bengal remains with the Indian Union, the whole scheme for the so called Eastern Pakistan will collapse and the League will be forced to come to terms with the Congress. We may ask here the supporters of a United Bengal what is their programme to prevent Pakistan. They have not been able as yet to put forward a single concrete suggestion.

Therefore, if we give up our prejudices and sentiments and base our thoughts on realism and facts, we cannot find any plea against a partition of Bengal.

Sir, in conclusion we request through you the Working Committee of the Indian National Congress, to pass a resolution on this vital issue on similar lines as that on the Punjab with modifications, where necessary and take every possible step for the early establishment of a separate new province in Western Bengal.

We remain, Sir, Yours obediently,

(signed by 1310 students of Calcutta University)

16. ‘Majority of Non-Muslims Opposed to Division of Bengal, Says Mandal’

Extracts from a Report from Dawn, 22 April 1947.

The assertion that the majority of non-Muslims in Bengal were not behind the demand for the partition of the province and that this could be proved by a referendum was made by Mr Jogendra Nath Mandal, Law Member, Interim Government, in a statement to the Press on Monday evening in New Delhi.

Mr Mandal said that the present communal trouble was a temporary phase which could not last long and that the division of the province was no solution to the problem. It was not in the interests of Hindus to divide the province and the Scheduled Castes were definitely opposed to partition.
Although the agitation for partition of Bengal was originated as a sort of bargaining counter to resist and discourage the demand for Pakistan of the Muslim League, it now appears to have assumed serious proportions. So long I had been under the impression that the nationalist Hindus of Bengal would neither welcome nor support the proposal for partitioning Bengal, which when once made by Lord Curzon in the year 1905, was resisted successfully by them with immense courage and sacrifice.

But I have been disillusioned by the resolution passed by the Working Committee of the Bengal Provincial Congress Committee supporting the proposal for partition.

I do not mind if the Hindu Mahasabha leader, Dr Shyama Prasad Mukherjee, along with his few colleagues and a number of fortune-seekers of Western Bengal rent the sky with their loud voice and high-sounding words in support of the move for partition, but I am really astonished to find Mr N.R. Sarkar, ex-Member of the Viceroy’s Executive Council, for whose sobriety and wisdom I had the greatest admiration, also indulge in supporting the game which, I am sure he knows better than anybody else, will produce no fruitful results in the solution of the problem which concerns the Hindus of Bengal today.

...I had occasion to meet and discuss this question with some of the leaders of the partition movement but none of them have so far been able to convince me how the creation of a separate province in western Bengal, governed by Hindu administrators, could protect the Hindus of eastern Bengal who, after the partition is effected, will become a microscopic minority and will feel absolutely helpless.

If the existence of a Hindu province in the neighbourhood is a guarantee for the safety and security of the minorities of a particular province—in this case the minority Hindus of eastern Bengal—then the contiguous Hindu provinces of Bihar and Orissa can as well as an equal guarantee for the minorities of the people of Bengal as a whole.

CONTENDING PARTIES
The creation of a Western Bengal province will only reduce the area of the present Bengal and will only make the border-line narrow and nearer for both the contending parties affording better scope and facilities for a direct combat.

I have no doubt in my mind that if such an eventuality happens, the Hindus of eastern Bengal shall have no other protection than to leave their properties and their hearths and homes and take shelter in western Bengal.

If, of course, the leaders and pro-bounders [sic] of the partition movement have in view the ultimate course of transfer of population, then I have got little to say against this move, but I must feel amused that the Caste Hindu leaders, who once so vehemently criticized Dr Ambedkar for his ‘Thoughts on Pakistan’ and Mr Jinnah for his proposal for transfer of population, appear now to have grown wiser and are themselves advocating those very proposals....

Let me support my contention with facts and figures. The proposal of the Caste Hindus is that the Burdwan Division consisting of the district of Burdwan, Birbhum, Bankura, Midnapore, Hooghly and Howrah and the district of 24-Parganas and Calcutta of the Presidency Division where the Hindus are in a majority should form the proposed province of western Bengal.

They also claim the district of Jalpaiguri in the Rajshahi Division as a Hindu majority district. But so far as Jalpaiguri is concerned, the population of the Scheduled Castes being 32,540 and that of the Caste Hindus being 15,501, the Scheduled Castes are in a majority there and as such their voice should prevail.
POPULATION ANALYSIS

The total population of all the above mentioned eight districts is 1,59,32,646 of which the Muslim population is 30,75,215; hence the total non-Muslim population comes to 12,857,431. The Caste Hindu population of these districts according to the census of 1941 amounts to 53,50,877. This figure includes the population of a number of communities which are equally backward, illiterate and poor as the Scheduled Castes and these communities are, I am sure, not happy under the Caste Hindu domination.

The total population of these communities in those eight districts is 5,22,453. Besides, there are others, namely Pundari or Pundra Khatrai which is a Scheduled Caste community and enjoys all the privileges allowed to them (This community has been included in the Caste Hindu category) and one section of Mahiyas [sic] whose total population in the eight districts in question is in the neighbourhood of nine lakhs.

Both of these communities are also unwilling to submit to the Caste Hindu domination. Thus the position is that the Caste Hindus are only 37.5 per cent. Even if cent per cent of the Caste Hindus of western Bengal support the partition, it cannot obviously be taken as the verdict of a majority.—API

17. Jinnah Opposes Partition of Provinces

Extract from Minutes of Viceroy's Seventh Miscellaneous Meeting, 23 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 196A, NMML.

...Item 4

PARTITION OF PROVINCES

Mr Jinnah said that Muslims were more virile than Hindus. Therefore there had been an enormous increase in the proportion of Muslims, particularly in Bengal and Assam, since the 1941 census. An ‘unknown person’ had applied his mind to the problem of the proportionate increase, and prepared, on the data of increases between previous censi, a rough estimate of the present proportions.

His Excellency the Viceroy said that he doubted that it would be practical to take such claims into consideration when deciding on demarcation of boundaries, in view of the time factor.

Mr Jinnah said that he had not accepted the partition of Bengal and the Punjab, as reported in certain Hindu newspapers; but had not considered it worthwhile to issue denials. Mr Jinnah said that the partition of Provinces was a most dangerous proposition and bound to lead to trouble, as it was not based on ‘wisdom and foresight’, but born of ‘bitterness and spitefulness’. It would ‘loose terrible forces’ and was ‘suicidal’. It was a ‘most dangerous thing when an angry man lost his judgement’.

His Excellency the Viceroy pointed out that all these ‘arguments’ in favour of non-partition of Provinces applied equally to the non-partition of India.

Mr Jinnah said that in Western Bengal the caste Hindus were only 37 per cent of the total Hindu population. The 63 per cent scheduled castes Hindus would be ruined if they were cut off from those in Eastern Bengal. The idea made them shudder. ‘Any average man’ should be asked.

His Excellency the Viceroy pointed out that these views were very different to those which had been expressed to him by Dr Mukherjee earlier that day....
18. ‘Bengal Harijans Not Opposed to Partition of Province’
The Hindustan Times, 25 April 1947.

Mr P.R. Thakur, Depressed Class leader of Bengal and a member of the Constituent Assembly, strongly repudiated the contention of Mr J.N. Mandal, Law Minister of the Interim Government, that the Scheduled Castes of Bengal were opposed to the Bengal partition movement.

Mr Thakur, in a Press statement, says: ‘The Scheduled Castes people on whose behalf Mr Mandal pretends to speak have been strongly opposed to Pakistan, as would appear from the resolutions adopted at many of the Scheduled Castes conferences. As such, Mr Mandal, who is a follower of Mr Jinnah, had no right to say anything regarding the issue of partition of Bengal, which is nothing but an off-shoot of the anti-Pakistan agitation.

Movement Favoured

‘Even Dr Ambedkar, whom Mr Mandal acclaims as his political guru, does not support Pakistan. Moreover, Dr Ambedkar is definitely in favour of the Bengal partition movement. Mr Mandal’s pretensions, therefore, to speak on behalf of the Scheduled Castes people of Bengal fall to the ground since his views on this very crucial issue are at variance with the considered opinion not only of the Depressed Classes League, but also of the leader of the Depressed Classes Federation.

‘I should rather say that if Mr Mandal had any sympathy for the wishes and sentiments of the Scheduled Castes people of Bengal, he would have persuaded the Muslim League not to insist on Pakistan in Bengal but to work for a United Bengal under the Indian Union’.—UPI

19. ‘Bengal Divided’

Extract from an Article in The Eastern Economist, 25 April 1947.

Mr Lovat Fraser, (who spoke with contemporary knowledge of the partition agitation and claimed to some extent to anticipate the verdict of history), wrote of Lord Curzon’s achievement ‘that Bengal patriots who denounced him for giving them that boon would one day bless his name for it’. Mr Lovat Fraser thought that Lord Curzon himself would live to see this day and was convinced that the Bengalis have far too much intelligence to be unwilling to own when they have been in the wrong. This last statement has certainly been prophetic, although it has taken nearly forty two years for the partition to become (in Lord Morley’s phrase) a settled fact.... The present communal situation gives new meaning to Lord Curzon’s statement that ‘what we want in India is personal knowledge of localities and personal touch with the people’....

What are the resources of the new provinces likely to be? District-wise (and including the Chittagong Hill tracts), the Hindu Province will have an area of 31,919 square miles, against 45,523 for the Muslim province. It will have a population of 19.589 millions against 40.718 millions in the new Muslim Province. The density of population in Hindu Bengal will be something like 614 per square mile against 894 in the neighbouring province. As regards ‘hostages’, the Hindu minority in the Muslim province (if it is formed district wise) will be 10 millions against 4.3 million Muslims in the Hindu Province. In other words Muslim will form 21.9 per cent of the population in the Hindu area, whereas Hindus will form 27.9 per cent in Muslim Bengal. This division is much less equitable to the West than if the scheme for claiming the whole of the Burdwan and the Presidency divisions, (without regard to the Muslim majority in individual districts) were to be adopted. But on the other hand, it is somewhat fairer to the East in the allocation of financial and economic resources.
Towards Freedom: 1947

What the future budgets of the two provinces are likely to be, no one can say with any certainty. Any forecast involves several broad assumptions. In the first place, assumes a certain division of resources between the Union centre and the provinces. It also assumes certain decisions regarding permanent settlement. But even more importantly, any forecast will have to be based on an acceptable principle for the allocation of revenues. If tradition is followed and the allocation is based on actual collection, Western Bengal ... attenuated form (that is, without the addition of a Western strip or the bordering villages) will have a definite superiority. Land revenue which, with the disappearance of provincial excise will be the largest single item of revenue within the existing provincial field of taxation, sufficiently illustrates this difference. Out of the total area of 28.48 acres in Muslim Bengal, roughly 25.86 million acres are permanently settled: the margin is appreciably wider in Hindu Bengal where only 13.29 million acres out of 20.77 million acres are permanently settled. The average incidence of land revenue per head of the population in the two provinces after separation, reflects this disparity in taxable capacity. On the basis of the figures collected in the Agricultural Statistics of British India (1937–38), the average incidence of land revenue per head in Hindu Bengal works out to somewhat less than one rupee, whereas in Muslim Bengal it is somewhat more than eight annas. The vast industrial superiority of the Hindu province will also be reflected in the other available sources of provincial taxation. The return of the distribution of agricultural income reveals the following results:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>In rupees</th>
<th>Number of Caste Hindu Assessees</th>
<th>Number of Muslim Assessees</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Rs 3,000 to 5,000</td>
<td>2,134</td>
<td>1,094</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rs 5,000 to 10,000</td>
<td>4,080</td>
<td>2,803</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rs 10,000 to 15,000</td>
<td>871</td>
<td>551</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Rs 15,000 to 20,000</td>
<td>323</td>
<td>186</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

This is much more sobering than enthusiasts for Pakistan or independence have imagined, and is due to the fact that direct taxation and customs will not be available to the province.

The prospects of stabilizing the budgets of the separate provinces are not, however, by any means bleak, although this seems at first sight to be a some what strange conclusion in view of the current deficits of the Bengal Government. The abolition of the permanent settlement will enable both the provinces to benefit immediately from an increase in land revenue. The incidence of the land tax in Bengal has been found to be less than half the rate at which the tax is levied in Madras. An even greater source of revenue will be central excise, which the Union will in all probability surrender to the provinces. Some idea of the importance of this latter source as a stabilizing factor may be had from the fact that even in 1944–45, the central excise revenue raised in Bengal was as much as Rs 13.05 crores. The yield of this source is of course limited by one major consideration: no province or sub-province can levy excise duties so as to pitch the level of taxation at an appreciably higher level than in the rest of India. But even so, the potential additional revenue from these two sources will more or less solve the financial problem, especially if we remember that retrenchment is yet due. The Finance Ministers of the two provinces, if they are installed in office in the next few months, will be able to plan the taxation and expenditure for the first full year of separation, namely, 1948–49, comprehensively and precisely on the basis of the division of revenue according to collection. For the current year (or if 1948–49 is not the first full year of separation or if it is otherwise found necessary) the system of joint purse may be tried. It will involve the certification by the Auditor General, or by an expert Fiscal Commission if one is set up, of the total provincial revenue in the entire area now covered by the province of Bengal; this may then be divided between the two provinces in some agreed proportion. The system obviously means some accounting complications, but they are hardly insuperable. On the assumption that the percentage share of each province will be determined with reference to its area as well population (giving equal weightage to both), the share of the Hindu province, formed district-wise works out to 40 per cent. Any current deficit which this percentage system involves can be met through borrowing from the Reserve Bank or from the Central Government for the present. Pending the findings of the Boundaries Commission, this is all that can be suggested at present. This course of action is immediately practicable. It will not on the one hand postpone a decision on the partition question, till a Boundaries Commission or a Financial Investigation Commission or both have reported—a process which may take anything from three to twelve months. On the other hand, by deciding the urgent question of principle in advance, this will enable any such Commission or Commissions to consider the questions of detail on the basis of comprehensive examination and enquiry (which will be possible when there is no compulsion to report within a dead line date).

It remains to consider the economic resources of the two provinces. The vast superiority of the present Hindu districts is obvious, but the extent of this superiority cannot be realized except by careful examination of the available statistics. The Muslim Province will be predominantly agricultural. It had in 1937–38 an acreage of 16 millions under rice and 1.4 lakhs under wheat, against 6.2 millions and 15,700 areas respectively in the Hindu Province. The acreage under gram was roughly 2.61 lakhs and under other foodgrains roughly (10.4) lakhs, against 18,600 acres and 1.5 lakhs of acres respectively in Hindu Bengal. The area under commercial crops is similarly divided. Against 1.2 lakhs of acres under linseed 1.8 lakhs under mustard and nearly 6.77 lakhs under mustard in the Muslim districts, Hindu Bengal grew linseed on 12,400 acres only, sesamum on 29,000 acres and mustard on 94,200 acres. These statistics justify the description of Eastern Bengal as an ‘Egypt of broad green rice fields with half a dozen Niles’. On the other hand, there are no less than 99 jute mills in the Hindu districts (according to the latest issue of Large Industrial Establishment in India) although there is not even one jute mill in Muslim Bengal. There are 31 cotton textile mills in the Hindu province against 8 in the Muslim districts. There are 203 general engineering establishments in the Hindu area and only 13 in the Muslim area. All the three ordnance factories are located in the 24-Parganas in Hindu Bengal as also all the chemical works. There are 28 oil mills in the Hindu province against only four in the Eastern districts.

These statistics have been selected at random. They justify to a very large extent the old complaint that good administration stops at the Ganges. The industrial and financial prosperity of the Presidency division is largely explained by the distance which separates the outlying districts and sub-divisions of Eastern Bengal from the headquarters. It has been said that ‘Calcutta absorbs the attention of the administration even in the hot season, destroys its sense of balance and leads it to regard the affairs of distant district as of minor importance’. These complaints are not perhaps justified at present. But it is easy to fall into the opposite error of neglecting Western Bengal. Granted the unwieldy size of the province, the existence of mutual antagonism will inevitably lead to maladministration or neglect of some areas. If the succession of provincial ministries can be so nicely balanced that the party in opposition regularly forms the Government at reasonable intervals, this evil will perhaps correct itself over a long period. But this is an uncertain remedy. Better administration will be secured immediately by partition and greater balance as between agriculture and industry will be forced on the separate provinces. Such deficiencies as the partition may bring to light will hardly be of any great consequence as it will be farcical to assume that self sufficiency should be the aim or that India will not continue to be one great free trade area.

20. Independent Defence and Foreign Relations for United Bengal

Extract from a Note by Louis Mountbatten of His Interview with H.S. Suhrawardy, 26 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 192, NMML.

...I told him that I was ardently against all forms of partition; I wanted above everything a united India. If I could not have a united India, then I would like the Cabinet Mission plan. If I could not have the Cabinet Mission plan, I would then put it to the Provinces to decide. I had been called upon to partition the Punjab, Bengal and Assam, and I expressed my regret that these Provinces should be partitioned, but said that it was unavoidable.

Mr Suhrawardy told me that in the case of Bengal, this was far from being the case, and that since my plan included a vote on whether a Province should be partitioned or not, and if not partitioned, whether it was to join Pakistan, Hindustan, or remain independent, he could tell me now that given enough time he was confident that he could get Bengal to remain as a complete entity. He told me that he could get Mr Jinnah to agree that it need not join Pakistan if it was prepared to remain united.

I told him that this was very good news, for although I was against splitting India up into many units, I considered it far better to keep Bengal as one economic unit than to have it partitioned.

I asked him if he was also going to ask for a separate army, and he said most emphatically; ‘Yes’. I pointed out the appalling difficulties of dividing the army into two as well as nationalizing it; those difficulties would be even greater still if the army had to be divided into three, and it would take a minimum of five years, after we had left India in June 1948, for this to come about, and in the meanwhile he would have to accept a Defence Headquarters ‘in trust’ for India as a whole. He did not like this idea, and seemed to think that the partition of the army could be easily effected. I assured him he was quite wrong, and that in any case I had no intention of allowing the army to be split up while I was still here.

He then mentioned that he hoped British officers would help in the formation of a Bengal Army; and I replied that I did not see how this could be done, since India was not likely to remain within the Commonwealth. He replied ‘I beg your pardon; Bengal has every intention of remaining in the Commonwealth’. I told him I thought this was undesirable and that I was personally against any part of India being in the Commonwealth if all of India was not in, lest we got mixed up into supporting one side in a civil war. On this, he said, ‘I do not see how you can kick us out, what have we done to be expelled?’ I admitted that that put him in a strong position, but that I still could not recommend it, although when the time came I should have to report it.
Mr Suhrawardy then said he must have as long as possible to convert Bengal to the idea of being united and independent. I asked him what the minimum time required would be, and he replied that the absolute bare minimum would be two months. I said that I thought that this was in fact the longest time he could count upon, since I hoped to get a decision within one month; voting of the non-partitioned Province a week later; and voting of the partitioned Province not more than three weeks after that. He asked me not to have a decision on partition until November; and I pointed out that if we left it as late as this, there was practically no prospect of getting partition implemented before we left in June 1948.

I asked Mr Suhrawardy to give Lord Ismay his ideas on the notional partition of Bengal for voting purposes, and said that I would be available if he wanted to see me again urgently at any time.

21. Partition of Bengal Is Suicide

Extract from a Note by H.S. Suhrawardy, 27 April 1947

It must be a matter of the greatest regret to all those who were eagerly looking forward to the welfare and prosperity of Bengal to find that an agitation for its partition is being vigorously pursued in some quarters. This cry would never have been raised had it not been due to a sense of frustration and impatience on the part of some Hindus inasmuch as the members of their community have not an adequate share in the Bengal Ministry in spite of their numbers in the province, their wealth, influence, education, participation in the administration of the province, their propaganda and their inherent strength. This frustration is largely the result of a failure to realize that present conditions in Bengal, which is linked to India, are not applicable to an independent sovereign state as I hope Bengal will be....

An entirely different state of circumstances will arise when each province will have to look after itself and when each province is sure to get practical, if not total, independence, and the people of Bengal will have to rely upon each other. It is unbelievable that under such a set of circumstances there can exist a Ministry in Bengal which will not be composed of all the important elements in its society or which can be a communal party Ministry, or where the various sections will not be better represented than they are now. I do not think that the fact that the Muslims will have a slight preponderance in the Ministry by virtue of their slender majority will be grudged by the Hindus as indeed this has hitherto been accepted by all as inherent in the nature of things in Bengal. Does any one seriously conceive that it is possible under such a set of circumstances to visualize that one section of the people, say the Muslims, can tyrannize over the minority, namely the Hindus, in Bengal? There are several factors which make such a thing impossible and unbelievable. There is the internal strength of the Hindus themselves, their internal strength which can paralyse any unfair administration. They occupy the most important places in the administration. They are a majority in the services. The administration in the secretariat is in their hands. The most important and the experienced officers of the Government are Hindus. It is just ridiculous to think that their position and influence can be ignored. Over and above this, Bengal will have 200 million Hindus on its frontiers, who will certainly make it their cause to see that their co-religionists have a fair deal in the province. It will just be fatuous and suicidally fatuous for any Muslim Government to give an unfair deal to the Hindus of Bengal.
I have read most fervid fulminations against the Government of Bengal on its alleged treatment of the Hindu population. These denunciations have been built on the most slender and imaginary foundations. I by no means admit that the demand for the partition of Bengal is the demand of the majority of the Hindus even of West Bengal, let alone of the majority of the Hindus of Bengal....The lead for partition has been taken by the Hindu Mahasabha which hopes that, by whipping up agitation for the partition of Bengal, for the dismissal of the Bengal Ministry and imposition of Section 93, by establishment of regional Ministries, by arousing fanaticism against the Muslims of Bengal, by creating disturbances through hartals and violence, it will be able to ingratiate itself with the Hindu people and destroy the influence of the Congress. This is but a vain dream as they will find to their cost....The last elections have demonstrated most convincingly that neither the Hindu Mahasabha nor the Congress represent the voice of the Scheduled Castes....Again, amongst the Caste Hindus themselves, there are certain grades of Hindus who, though classified as Caste Hindus, do not follow either the Congress or the Hindu Mahasabha and will be happier under a rule that will work for the common man than under a rule of the privileged classes which will certainly pull for the rights of the privileged classes from which the Congress and the Hindu Mahasabha derive their strength. The agitation, therefore, for the partition of Bengal is not so universal amongst the Hindus as it is made out to be, though propaganda may make it appear otherwise.... In the 1941 census there is a large and indeterminate group of Hindus who have refused to record the caste to which they belonged. It will be recalled that at that time a vigorous propaganda was carried on amongst the Scheduled Castes to induce them not to record their castes but to declare themselves as Hindus only; and it can thus be safely argued that those who have not recorded their castes mostly, if not wholly, belong to the Scheduled Castes....

....Why should the Bengalee Hindus want a separate homeland? Let me proceed on the assumption for the time being that the demand is not limited to a few but is put forward by all Caste Hindus, Scheduled Castes and those who have not returned their castes. Now, has their culture, their religion, their language suffered under the present regime? And how do they think that in future set-up they will suffer so that they can only flourish and safeguard their culture and life if they have a small portion of Western Bengal? To my mind, I think, the demand is suicidal from the point of view of the Hindus. Even if it did happen, an eventuality which I cannot conceive that the rule is passed solely into the hands of Muslims intent on crushing the Hindus as a whole, an attitude which would combine the entire population of Hindus in opposition to the Muslims, could such a policy possibly succeed or be put into effect where any Government of Bengal would have to carry its own servants along with it, while most of them belong to the Hindu community? Then again, industry, business and the professions are in their hands. Their youth are well advanced and know their rights and know how to achieve their claims. Not only is the present attitude due to a sense of impatient frustration, not only is it short-sighted, but is a confession of a defeatism which one hardly expected from the great Hindu community of Bengal.

Noakhali is constantly cited as an indication of what might happen in the future set-up of an independent State. I have already said that it would be ridiculous to draw conclusions for the future from the present set-up. But let us pause here for a moment. Can Noakhali and the incidents of that area be considered typical and an augury for the future? And are there not many other districts where the Muslims are in a convincing and overwhelming majority and yet has not peace been preserved in these districts, and have not the Hindus carried on exactly as before with all their powers and privileges?
It is said that this Government is handing out patronage to Muslims in the way of posts, educational facilities and business. It is a pity that this is considered to be a cause for grievance. It is indeed a pity because the patronage (mostly born of the War and shortly to disappear) is of pitiful dimensions, hardly worth noticing, and is merely an attempt to do some justice to the Muslims after their relegation to the position of hewers of wood and drawers of water. But surely in the context of the great unity of Bengal that I dream of, I do not think that, whatever arguments may be advanced at this stage to arouse feelings of hatred against the Government and give force to a demand for separation, the Hindus themselves will object to raising the Muslims and the Scheduled Castes and the backward classes to such a level that they may be able to participate adequately in the advancement of the country.

And let us pause for a moment to consider what Bengal can be if it remains united. It will be a great country indeed, the richest and the most prosperous in India, capable of giving to its people a high standard of living, where a great people will be able to rise to the fullest height of their stature, a land that will truly be plentiful. It will be rich in agriculture, rich in industry and commerce, and in course of time it will be one of the most powerful and progressive States of the world. If Bengal remains united, this will be no dream, no fantasy. Anyone who can see what its resources are and the present state of its development, will agree that this must come to pass if we ourselves do not commit suicide. And suicide for what? Need I repeat, if that assurance is once more wanted, that often enough has Mr Jinnah made it clear that there can be no Government whatsoever, such as he visualizes, which can function in an independent context without the closest co-operation of the minorities; and this dictum is more applicable to Bengal than to any other province in India.

If we can have an un-severed Bengal, if all of us are united with a purpose of making this great, then surely our claims to the districts of Manbhum and Singbhum, perhaps the district of Purnea, certainly to the Surma valley if not to Assam as a whole (of course with their consent, which I think will be forthcoming when the tussle disappears and gives way to co-operation and mutual reliance), are bound to find favour on the principle of self determination, and then we can have a portion of the world that will certainly surpass any other country of like dimensions.

I have therefore visualized all along Bengal as an independent State and not [as a] part of any Union of India. Once such States are formed, their future rests with them. I shall never forget how long it took for the Government of India to realize the famine conditions in Bengal in the year 1943, how in Bengal’s dire need it was denied food grains by the neighbouring province of Bihar, how since then every single province of India has closed its doors and deprived Bengal of its normal necessities, how in the councils of India Bengal is relegated to an undignified corner while other provinces wield undue influence. No, if Bengal is to be great, it can only do so if it stands on its own legs and all combine to make it great. It must be a master of its own resources and riches and its own destiny. It must cease to be exploited by others and shall not continue to suffer any longer for the benefit of the rest of India. So, in the end, the tussle will rage round Calcutta and its environments, built up largely by the resources of foreigners, inhabited largely by people from other provinces who have no roots in the soil and who have come here to earn their livelihood, designated in another context as exploitation. Alas, if this is the main objective, as my figures would demonstrate, then no claim for the partition of Bengal can remain static, and a cause for enmity and future strife would have been brought into being, of which we can see no end.
To those of the Hindus who talk so lightly of the partition of Bengal, I make an appeal to drop this movement so fraught with unending mischief. Surely, some method of government can be evolved by all of us sitting together, which will satisfy all sections of the people and will revivify the splendour and glory that was Bengal.

22. Status of Calcutta

Extract from a Telegram from Louis Mountbatten to J.F. Burrows, 28 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 17, NMML.

IMMEDIATE
TOP SECRET

.... 2. I do not like the idea of a free city. It goes against all the principles on which the rest of the plan is based, it leaves Calcutta cut off from Muslim Bengal, it will not be acceptable to the Hindus, and I do not see how we can enforce it or prevent a fight for the city next year. Besides which it is not for me to make Pakistan into a sensible scheme. I want it to be seen for what it is, while giving the Muslims everything to which they are entitled, and every chance to work out their own salvation.

3. Do not forget that my scheme leaves the door open to a united but independent Bengal belonging neither to Pakistan nor Hindustan. Jinnah would raise no objection to this. Do you think Suhrawardy could bring this off?....

23. ‘Bengal Leaders Confer—Partition Campaign to Be Intensified’

The Hindustan Times, 28 April 1947.

The Calcutta situation and the Bengal partition issue were considered at a meeting of the Bengal leaders, Dr P.C. Ghosh, Mr Surendra Mohan Ghosh, President of the Bengal PCC, Dr B.C. Ray, Mr Kiron Shankar Roy, Pandit L.K. Maitra, and Dr S.P. Mukerjee held in New Delhi on Sunday morning.

In the evening there was a meeting of the Council of Action for New Bengal province formed by Bengali residents of Delhi and New Delhi. It was decided at the meeting to send a telegram to Mr Sarat Chandra Bose asking him to support the Bengal partition movement.

It was also decided to take the following measures: (a) To send batches of volunteers to various cities of Northern India such as Lucknow, Simla and Benares which have large Bengali population to intensify the campaign in favour of partitioning Bengal; (b) To send a deputation of women to Lady Mountbatten in order to urge her to take immediate steps for the protection of Bengal women, and (c) To send Press cuttings and other literature in favour of Bengal partition to the Viceroy and leaders of Indian political parties.

It is proposed to set up a permanent office in New Delhi to mobilize opinion in North India in favour of partition of the Punjab and Bengal.
24. Unanimous Support for a Separate Hindu Province

Memorandum on Bengal by B.C. Roy, K.S. Roy and S.P. Mookerjee, 28 April 1947

S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 139, Installment II to IV, NMML.

(Based on discussion with Sir Eric Mieville on 28/4/47)

1) Opinion amongst Hindus in Bengal is practically unanimous that a separate province should be created comprising the Hindu majority areas in Bengal so that this new province may remain within the Indian Union.

2) Apart from the above consideration creation of two provinces out of the existing province of Bengal will lead to elimination of communal tension and passion, giving equal opportunities to the two major communities to develop their respective areas in their own way. Both major communities are soon bound to realize that in their mutual interest the minority community within each zone must get fair and reasonable protection.

3) No separate machinery is called for in order to ascertain the viewpoint of Hindus. Out of the about 93 Hindu members in the Bengal Legislative Assembly we undertake to forward to the Viceroy a statement supporting the demand signed by at least 80 members. These members represent not only the Hindu majority areas but also the Hindu minority areas in Bengal. In addition to this we shall also forward to the Viceroy a statement signed by (...) members out of (...) members elected from Bengal to the Constituent Assembly by non-Muslim members of the Bengal Legislative Assembly. This will render it unnecessary to set up a new machinery elected by members of the Bengal Legislative Assembly belonging only to the Hindu majority areas.

4) On the above basis the Viceroy may well decide in favour of partition.

5) The next question will relate to the delimitation of the boundaries of the two new provinces. For this purpose a Boundary Commission should immediately be set up which should be instructed to find out the Hindu majority and the Muslim majority areas. It will more or less be contiguous. This division may be made thana-wise, subject to certain adjustments which may have to be made in some areas. A map has been drawn up on this basis and has been handed over to Lord Ismay and Sir Eric Mieville.

6) If any provisional boundaries have to be drawn up specially for establishing regional ministries pending final partition, Presidency and Burdwan Divisions, each of which has a non-Muslim majority may be one zone; and the other three Divisions, Rajshahi, Dacca and Chittagong, may be the other zone. Only in respect of Darjeeling and Jalpaiguri (falling within Rajshahi Division) which afford a gateway to Assam an exception should be made and these areas should remain attached to the Hindu zone. The boundaries thus provisionally drawn up will not affect the final adjustment to be made by the Boundary Commission, nor are they unfair to the two major communities, bearing in mind their respective population strength in the province.

7) The case of Chittagong Hill Tracts (which adjoins Tripura and Assam) having 98 per cent non-Muslim majority should be specially considered. This area should be attached to Assam, just as Sylhet may come to Eastern Bengal.
The same remark applies to the small area in Mymensingh district adjoining Assam in which tribal people abound. These people have made representation to the Tribal and Excluded Areas Committee of the Constituent Assembly that they desire to be linked up with Assam. The Viceroy will no doubt consider sympathetically the case of these non-Muslim tribal people living in Eastern Bengal on the border of Assam. The area concerned is ______

8) It is essential that along with the declaration to be made by the Viceroy in favour of partition, the Bengal Ministry must be dissolved. This is necessary for maintenance of law and order and also for smooth transfer of power to the two new provinces. Coalition Ministry will not be possible at this stage. The best course will be to apply Section 93 and the Governor should be instructed to have a Council of Advisers representing the major elements in the province on whose advice the Governor should act during the interim period. This may be followed by the establishment of regional ministries pending final partition. In any case we hold the emphatic view that the present Bengal Ministry must not be allowed to remain in office for a single day following the Viceroy's declaration. If this is done chaos and disorder are bound to follow in as much as the Moslem League in Bengal cannot and will not easily reconcile itself to Bengal being partitioned.

9) The situation in Bengal, and Calcutta in particular, is critical. Special instruction should be issued to the Governor by the Governor General in this connection. The legislature should be prorogued immediately and the Governor should see to it that nothing is done which may prejudice in any way the Viceroy's announcement on account of the activities of the Moslem League ministry.

Note on Bengal

1) It is for consideration whether the principle of partition of Bengal (and of the Punjab) should be decided by the Viceroy or should be left to be determined by some machinery to be set up by the members of the Legislative Assembly, belonging to the two respective zones.

2) I suggest the Viceroy's Declaration may be on the following lines:
   (a) The implementation of the Cabinet Mission scheme was based on agreement among the major political parties in India. This agreement is not available. It is the policy of HMG, which has been accepted by the Congress, that no constitution will be imposed upon any unwilling areas which is unrepresented in the Constituent Assembly. Therefore the function of the present Constituent Assembly is automatically limited to the areas which are willing to co-operate with it. The question arises in particular with regard to the Punjab and Bengal. Both these provinces have compact areas which are predominantly non-Muslim. It is therefore necessary that these two provinces should be partitioned forthwith and two additional provincial units created out of the existing boundaries of the Punjab and Bengal, so that each unit may decide independently on its future policy.
   (b) Having arrived at this decision the Viceroy will then proceed to indicate how the partition will be effected.
It was suggested to me yesterday that the Viceroy might provisionally demarcate the areas. The advantage of this is that the members of the legislature belonging to such areas may at once meet separately, elect their representatives to the Constituent Assembly or Assemblies and decide whether they will remain within Hindusthan or Pakistan.

The disadvantage of such a decision is that the Viceroy cannot possibly make a final demarcation now and the Boundary Commission may have to revise the areas. I do not want any controversy into which the Viceroy will be drawn affecting the actual boundaries of the two new provinces. It will be fatal if the Viceroy gets mixed up in any agitation regarding delimitation.

A much simpler course will be for the Viceroy to announce that partition will be made and also to state the main principle on which it will be based. India is at present one united country. If any part of India wants to break away from India, it can only do so provided that part consists of sufficiently large contiguous areas, each area comprising of say 60 percent of people belonging to the majority community. In other words if Muslim Bengal is to be separated out of the existing boundaries of Bengal and taken out of India altogether, such Muslim Bengal should comprise those contiguous areas where Moslems are at least 60 percent. If a percentage higher than bare majority cannot be fixed, it will then be contiguous areas (not necessarily districts) with Muslim majority. The border-line areas and some ‘pockets’ may need special adjustment.

(c) Having laid down the principle the Viceroy will announce that a Boundary Commission will be immediately appointed to demarcate the areas and also to lay down the fundamental principles on which exchange of population and property may be effected with the help of the State.

(d) The composition of the Boundary Commission may be suggested to the Viceroy within a specified date by agreement between the major parties in the legislature, failing which the Viceroy will nominate the Commission. The Commission will report to the Viceroy by 31st July, 1947.

(e) As soon as the province is partitioned into two zones the existing members of the Legislative Assembly (excluding the European members) will sit separately and elect their representatives to the Constituent Assembly on the lines mentioned in the Cabinet Mission scheme. The Viceroy will reserve to himself the right to allot certain members who represent special constituencies to either of the zones and may also give such directions as he may consider necessary for whose members who may represent constituencies, the whole of which may not fall into one or other of the zones.

(f) This election should be completed by 31st August, 1947. The members so elected will then decide whether they will remain within Hindusthan or within Pakistan.

The third alternative of a Sovereign Bengal may be ruled out as unnecessary.

(g) The Viceroy’s declaration must also include his decision to dissolve the Bengal ministry. Apart from the grave situation created in Bengal due to the actions and inactions of the ministry, it is unthinkable that any one-party ministry should be allowed to remain in charge of the whole of Bengal during the interim period.
Partition of Bengal is and will not be to the liking of the Moslem League, although it may be forced to accept it as a logical outcome of its own Pakistan scheme. But to keep the Moslem League ministry in power in Bengal during the interim period will not only result in the complete breakdown of law and order but will create new complications which may be extremely difficult to meet. It is therefore only fair and proper that both in respect of the Punjab and Bengal, once the partition issue is decided upon, an administration which will be fair and just to both zones and to the major communities must be installed. This may be either some form of regional ministries with one Governor at the top or section 93 regime. We need not shudder at section 93 regime at all, if that becomes temporarily inevitable for a peaceful transfer of power. The Governor may be instructed to have his non-official Advisers, if the major parties are willing to cooperate. Three main tasks will face this Interim Government, namely, (1) to maintain peace and order (2) to refrain from any controversial legislative and administrative measure which may affect the rights of the two areas and (3) to settle, by agreement if possible, the division of the official personnel so that the two zones might act as independent units when the transfer of power will take place.

I would certainly urge that the Viceroy should not allow the Bengal situation to deteriorate any further for a single day. Even today legislative measures of a highly controversial nature such as the Abolition of Zamindary System, Acquisition of Waste Land Bill and Education Bill are being brought forward, each one of which may throw the province into chaos and confusion. The Viceroy should immediately ask the Governor to prorogue the legislature and maintain the status quo until the Viceroy’s declaration is made. The opposition made this request to the Governor but this has not been accepted.

Rapid recruitment of Punjabi Moslems to the Armed Police Force is continuing. Unless this is stopped, grave complications are bound to arise. The Viceroy cannot deal with individual items, if he feels partition of Bengal is inevitable, he should at once save the province from the domination of the Moslem League ministry.

If the ministry is to cease to function simultaneously with the declaration of the Viceroy, negotiations should be made with the Governor with the least possible delay. Bengal is on the edge of volcano today and what I have suggested above will not only help to maintain law and order with strict impartiality but will also make it easier for the Viceroy to affect a peaceful transfer of power at the appropriate time.

I enclose a press cutting containing a statement of the Home Minister of Assam. This shows how urgent and serious the situation is.
25. Demand for Separate Non-Muslim Province in Bengal Irrespective of Partition

Resolution Passed at the Conference of Commercial and Industrial Organizations in Calcutta, 29 April 1947
R.P. Papers, File No. 19-P/47, Part II, NAI.

BENGAL NATIONAL CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Copy of the Resolution adopted at the meeting of the representatives of several commercial organizations held on Tuesday, the 29th April 1947 at the Hall of the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce under Chairmanship of Mr D.C. Driver.

This Meeting of the representatives of the under mentioned industrial and commercial organizations on a very close and careful consideration of the constitutional set-up of the country as it is likely to emerge from the various proposals now being discussed and the likely effects of such a constitutional set-up on India’s economic development, trade, commerce and industry as a whole and on the commerce and industry of Bengal in particular is emphatically of opinion that for the general well-being of the country and in the interest of her quick, balanced and orderly economic development, through the maximum and the most efficient exploitation of the available resources, both human and material, Indian Union should be treated as one economic unit. This Meeting believes that only by accepting the fundamental economic unity of Indian Union, will it be possible to ensure her planned economic development on a scientific and rational basis with a view to raising the existing level of employment increasing the purchasing power of the masses and improving their standard of living which would create fresh demands for goods and services and offer invaluable stimulus for the development of industry, trade and agriculture.

This Meeting is further of the opinion that in addition to Defence, Foreign Affairs and Communications which the Cabinet Mission in its Statement of May 16, 1946 conceded to the Union Centre, (a) currency and exchange which is a supersensitive mechanism and forms the basis of the economic life of the people, (b) customs and excise in respect of which a uniform policy for the whole of India is essential for the maintenance and growth of India’s widely dispersed industries, (c) generation of power on which depends the future growth and development of her existing industries and the establishment of new ones and which can best be secured under a unified control and coordination, (d) labour legislation where also uniformity is equally essential, (e) food which again calls for a common and comprehensive India-wide policy specially in the face of the existing food shortage and (f) the existing and future location of the Defence industries in respect of which the interests of the different parts of India are interdependent should all be under the jurisdiction of the Union Centre in the interests of India’s economic development.

In the opinion of the representatives assembled at this Meeting while the exercise by the Union Centre of powers mentioned above is eminently desirable the loose Federation envisaged by the Cabinet Mission under which only Defence, Communication and Foreign Affairs and powers to raise the necessary finance therefore would belong to the Centre should be the absolute minimum. In case however any area chooses to stay out it cannot force parts within the area which desire to remain inside the Union to go outside the Union against their will.
In view of all the above this Meeting demands that in the event of the Muslim majority in Bengal deciding to form a Pakistan State outside the Indian Union, or even if they decide to remain within the Indian Union unless the constitution framed for Bengal is acceptable to the Hindu Minority in the province, the Burdwan Division, Calcutta, Presidency Division and portions of Rajshahi Division and such other areas, where there is a non-Muslim majority and which form a contiguous area, should be allowed to constitute themselves into a separate province to be run on a truly democratic basis and to form a part of the Indian Union.

This Meeting further resolves that copies of the Resolution be forwarded to Britain’s Prime Minister, the Secretary of State for India, the Viceroy, the President of the Congress, the Vice-President of the Interim Government of India, the President of the Constituent Assembly and to the Press; and that a Committee composed of the following gentlemen be appointed to take necessary action for securing the objective laid down in the Resolution:

Mr D.N. Sen (President)
Mr N.R. Sarkar
Mr D.C. Driver
Mr B.M. Birla
Sir Buddredas Goenka
Mr B.L. Jalan
Mr J.K. Mitter
Dr S.B. Dutt
Mr M.L. Shah
Mr S.C. Roy

The following Chambers of Commerce and industrial and commercial organization were represented at the Meeting:

26. The Position of Calcutta with Regard to the Division of Bengal

Extract from a Note by W. Christie, 29 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 17, NMML.

...3. On the question of Calcutta, the Governor’s original recommendation was not firm. In his note on the provisional partition of Bengal he recommended a formula which, in terms, assigned Calcutta and its suburbs to West Bengal. He added a rider to the effect that a fairer arrangement would be one under which both Provinces could enjoy the benefits to be derived from access to the wealth of Calcutta. Such an arrangement would also be more fair to Calcutta itself. The disposition of Calcutta might well prove an important bargaining point in inducing the League to accept a truncated Pakistan in Bengal....

The main consideration is that we are about to prescribe a procedure which not only makes the provisional partition of Bengal a cast iron certainty, but removes nearly all chance of Bengal becoming united again. So long as the Bengal Hindus have partition and Calcutta, they have all that they want. Reunion with East Bengal would only put them again in a position of numerical inferiority to the Muslims.

But if Calcutta were to be a no-man’s land, and the Muslims had a share in it (which need not necessarily be a 50 per cent share of its revenues: that would be a matter for mutual agreement or arbitration), there would be common ground on which the two parts of Bengal might eventually reunite.

The Muslims are likely to fight for Calcutta if they have no share in it at all.

The Hindus are less likely to fight for the absolute control of Calcutta.

The following passage in Mr Suhrawardy’s recent statement is significant. ‘So, in the end, the tussle will rage round Calcutta and its environments built up largely by the resources of foreigners, inhabited largely by people from other provinces who have no roots in the soil and who have come here to earn their livelihood, designated in another context as exploitation.’

The effect of our plan would be to set the seal on the partition of Bengal and make Civil War, and paralysis if not destruction of India’s greatest commercial centre, almost inevitable. The Governor’s proposal lessens the likelihood of Civil War over Calcutta, and provides an important matter of ‘common concern’ as a basis for reunion. The objections to the Governor’s proposal that Calcutta should not be allotted to either half province, but should be administered as a condominium, are therefore probably less than the objections to our plan in its effect on Bengal....

27. Representative Character of Scheduled Caste MLAs Questioned

Note by J.D. Tyson, 29 April 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 17, NMML.

In view of the arguments based on the supposed attitude of the Scheduled Castes to Pakistan and the difficulty of saying how far the present Scheduled Caste Members of the Assembly represent the views of the Scheduled Castes since they were ultimately elected to the Assembly on the vote of Scheduled Caste and Caste Hindus together, H.E. will find the statement below, which I have had run out in office today, extremely interesting and more informative than might have been expected.

It is clear that out of 30 reserved seats no less than 15 were filled without any contest at either the primary or the final elections and that of these 15 no less than 13 went to Congress candidates without contest. (The uncontested seats won by Congress were in Burdwan 2, Birbhum 1, Bankura 1, Midnapore 2, 24-Parganas 2, that is, 8 out of 10 seats reserved for the Scheduled Castes in West Bengal. In North Bengal Malda 1, Jalpaiguri 1, Rangpur 1, that is to say 3 out of 5 seats in North Bengal went uncontested to the Congress. In East Bengal only one seat (Mymensingh) was uncontested and this went to a Congress candidate. They also obtained one uncontested seat in Murshidabad. The other two uncontested seats were—Mr P.D. Raikut who stood as an Independent for the second seat in Jalpaiguri and the Hon’ble Mr N.N. Roy who won the second seat in Rangpur without a contest).
It would appear therefore that in South West Bengal the Scheduled Castes are Congress-minded and in North Bengal personalities seem to have counted more than politics and the result was divided.

Most of the contests were in Central and East Bengal,—Hoogly, Howrah, Nadia, Jessore, Khulna, Dinajpur, Patna cum Bogra, Dacca, Mymensingh, Faridpur, Bakarganj and Tippera. Of the 15 seats contested all over the Province Congress won 8 and in each case was at the top of the Poll at the primary election as well as at the general election. I cannot find a case where an Independent or non-Congress Scheduled Caste candidate headed the list in the primary election and was defeated with the aid of Caste Hindu votes in the final election. In fact there is only one instance in all the 15 seats filled by contest where a candidate who was not the first candidate at the primary election was returned at the final election; this is the case of the Hon’ble Mr D.N. Barori who was fourth of 8 candidates in the primary election for two seats in Faridpur and came up to first or second place in the final election thereby securing one of the two seats.

J.D. Tyson

28. Scheduled Castes Should Be Mobilized in Bengal
Letter from J.N. Mandal to M.A. Jinnah, 30 April 1947

3 Cooper Street, Calcutta,

My dear Quaid-i-Azam,

I am sending Mr G.D. Pramanick with this letter. He belongs to the Scheduled Sunsi Community and is a trusted friend of mine.

I have set up the organization to carry on our work in Western as well as Eastern Bengal. I had a long discussion with Mr Suhrawardy yesterday. I have collected a number of workers from both Eastern and Western Bengal. I have already put in a number of workers in the Districts of Khulna, 24-Parganas, Howrah, Burdwan and Midnapore. It will be necessary to carry on a very extensive and intensive propaganda in Western Bengal, that is, in Burdwan Division and 24-Parganas. The Scheduled Caste people thereof being very backward in education, we shall have to meet with difficulty. But if I could put in a large number of workers we are sure to achieve success.

I now propose to start with a sum of Rupees twenty-five thousand. I shall be able to send you a report of the progress of work after ten days. It is an encouraging aspect that our workers do not cost me much.

Kindly send the above-mentioned sum with Mr Pramanick with your instructions, if any.

I am well. Hope this finds you hale and hearty.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely,

J.N. Mandal
29. Agitation for Partition and the Need to Unseat the Bengal Ministry
Letter from N.C. Chatterjee to S.P. Mookerjee, 30 April 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 141, Instalment II to IV, NMML.

My dear Shyamaprasad,

Enclosed herewith please read a report from Mr Meher Chand Dhiman.

Major General Chatterjee rang up his Secretary this morning to ask me to be prepared to leave for England on a deputation in connection with the Partition agitation. I told the Secretary, Dr Ganguli, that I am not going to do anything of the kind unless you are going and also a strong team is sent, if at all necessary. It is no good spoiling the case by sending up a second-class deputation. I am told that Pundit Lakshmi Kanto Moitra MLA has also been good enough to volunteer to go. Dr Ganguli saw me in the afternoon and I made the position clear to him. The deputation, if Bengal really wants to make it successful, should consist of yourself, Dr Roy, Major General Chatterjee, myself and Pundit Moitra or any other distinguished MLA
if he likes to join us.

I do not know what good we shall do in England. It is much better if we can organize 10 days’ Hartal here and break the Bengal Ministry. One day’s Hartal has to some extent unnerved them and Suhrawardy’s tone has changed. Ten days’ Hartal can be made successful if the Congress leaders show wisdom and courage to join hands with us in this crisis.

Every day prominent Hindus are being killed. Col Sen Gupta has been killed the other day. Sir Jadu Nath Sircar’s eldest son has also been killed. Col Sen Gupta’s factory has been looted after he was murdered. Of course that did not bring any Curfew or strong action.

I am sending you also a note given to me by Major Burdhan on information supplied by some high official.

Regarding Hindusthan National Guard, I am going to meet Dr Trivedi and others on Friday evening. Baku is telling me that the southern section is threatening to revolt [sic] against the centre. I do not understand what is happening. I shall have a frank talk with them.

I am also enclosing a copy of a report of a meeting of all Relief Workers held at Chaumohani.
That was organized by Mr Dalai who went to Noakhali and was attended by Congress, Hindu Mahasabha and other workers and was very representative.

Yours sincerely,
N.C. Chatterjee

Copy of a letter already posted.

30. Need to Divide Bengal Irrespective of Partition of India
Letter from S.P. Mookerjee to Louis Mountbatten, 2 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 18, NMML.

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Since I met Your Excellency about ten days ago I have had two long discussions with Lord Ismay and Sir Eric Mieville. At the last interview with Sir Eric Mr K.S. Roy, Leader of the Opposition in the Bengal Legislative Assembly and Dr B.C. Roy were also present. I sent some notes and a map to Lord Ismay which I believe you have seen by now.

The next few weeks will be momentous in the history of India and of the Punjab and Bengal in particular. I was deeply struck by the earnestness and sincerity with which you were trying to appreciate the problems that face India today and which must be solved before the final transfer of power takes place by June, 1948.

The views I am expressing in this letter are shared by a very large section of Hindus not only in Bengal but in other parts of India and I hope Your Excellency will give due consideration to them.

We are definitely opposed to Pakistan. We say this not merely from the point of view of Hindus but in the interest of India as a whole. The Constituent Assembly today represents every province in British India and also a number of important Indian States. One Moslem majority province namely NWF Province is represented by a majority of its members. The Muslim members belonging to Bengal, Sind and the Punjab are no doubt absent and they are represented only by the Sikh and Hindu members. This obstructionist attitude on the part of the Moslem League should not weigh with HMG at all. If HMG can take courage in both hands and announce that it is not going to depart from the main provisions of the Cabinet Mission scheme, the situation will at once change. If it is further announced that the Constituent Assembly will be accepted as the first Provisional Parliament of Free India and the transfer of power will be made to a Provisional Government to be elected by the Constituent Assembly on the basis of proportionate representation, the Moslem League is bound to alter its present attitude of negation and obstruction and take its legitimate part in the administration of the country.

Whether division of India takes place or not, it is essential that the Punjab and Bengal should be partitioned. I shall not say anything about the Punjab in my letter as her representatives must have placed full facts before you already. I shall deal with Bengal only.

The reasons why Bengal should be partitioned in any case are as follows:

1. Bengal’s area is about 78,000 square miles and her population is more than 60 millions. Purely from administrative standpoint, creation of two provinces out of the existing boundaries of Bengal is not only possible but eminently desirable. Bengal today is admittedly one of the worst administered provinces in British India.

2. Bengal Hindus have suffered terribly during the last ten years on account of communal misrule and mal-administration. In spite of their immense contribution towards the development of the province, they have no voice in its administration. Protection of Muslim interests is not the only minority problem in India. If ever an impartial survey is made of Bengal’s administration during the last ten years it will appear that Hindus have suffered not only on account of communal riots and disturbances but in every sphere of national activities, educational, economic, political and even religious.

3. Fortunately for Bengal the two major communities live in two compact zones and a separation is rendered easier on this account. Hindu Bengal will have about 35,000 sq miles with a population of about 24 millions. This will be equal to, and even larger than, some of the existing provincial units in India and also some States in Europe and America.

4. More than two thirds of the Hindu population including about 4.5 millions out of 7.6 millions of the scheduled castes will live within Hindu Bengal. This will give an opportunity to both major communities to develop themselves according to their best ability and traditions and the constant rancour and strife between one community and another will gradually disappear. Both major communities in the two provinces are soon bound to realize that in their own mutual interest, the minority community in the two respective provinces must be duly protected.

Both the provinces should remain within the Union of India. If however India is to be divided on communal consideration, partition of Bengal becomes an immediate necessity and the above arguments are strengthened by the following additional ones:

(1). Mr Jinnah’s claim for Pakistan is based on the theory that Hindus and Muslims are two separate nations and Muslims must have their own homeland and their own State. That being so, Hindus in Bengal who constitute about 26 millions of people may well demand that they must not be compelled to live within the Moslem State and the area where they predominate should be cut off, so that the province thus created may link itself up with the Hindusthan Union. This demand Mr Jinnah can never resist for, as the Cabinet Mission pointed out in its scheme of May, 16, the same logic and arguments applicable to Pakistan apply also to partition of Bengal.

(2). If Muslims being 24 percent of India’s population constitute themselves into such a formidable minority that their demand for a separate homeland and State becomes irresistible, surely 45 percent of Bengal’s Hindu population is a sufficiently large minority which cannot be coerced into living within the Pakistan State against the will of the people.

(3). It is said that if once Bengal and the Punjab are partitioned, the other portions of India have also to be partitioned on similar consideration. This is purely academic. If there are other areas in India which are large enough to be constituted into separate provinces on communal consideration, their claim has to be justified on merits. Surely the existence of small pockets here and there cannot justify the creation of new provinces. Even in Eastern Bengal, there will be numerous towns with majority Hindu population and also several Hindu pockets; but we are noting to claim that each of them is to be converted into a provincial unit. It is only because the Hindu majority areas, contiguous in character; are large enough to form into a separate province that we are justified in putting forward our claim for partition.

(4). Mr Jinnah speaks of transfer of population and property. If an undivided Bengal is thrown into Pakistan, we have to transfer about 26 millions of Hindus which is next to impossible. On the other hand if Bengal is partitioned the question of transfer will be comparatively easier it will affect about nine millions Hindus in Muslim Bengal and six millions Moslems in Hindu Bengal.

(5). There is some loose talk of a sovereign undivided Bengal. We do not understand its significance at all nor do we support it in any way. This will give us, Hindus, no relief whatsoever. Sovereign undivided Bengal will be a virtual Pakistan. Who will frame the constitution of Sovereign Bengal? Obviously, this will be left in the hands of the majority of the Moslem Leaguers who will be guided by fanatical notions of a separate nationhood and we are not prepared to trust our fate to them. Further we do not in any case want to be cut off from the rest of India and we are not prepared to make any compromise on this issue on any consideration whatsoever.
I do hope you will give full consideration to the above points. You have come to India with an open mind and to explore the safest way to transfer power to Indian hands. By being fair to both the major communities in Bengal would it be possible for you to avoid chaos and bloodshed. Our suffering in Bengal today is indescribable. We have ceased to live under a civilised Government and the rule of law has been substituted by the rule of gangsterism. You may either decide the question of partition yourself or set up a machinery which will make it possible for the people of the area concerned to express their views. I would however emphasize, as indeed I did in course of my interview with you, that it is essential that the Bengal Ministry must be dissolved as soon as the question of partition is announced. To allow the ministry to continue in office may lead to disastrous consequences from which recovery will become almost impossible.

I have written to Your Excellency with utmost frankness for I honestly believe that it is a life and death question to us. Freedom is about to dawn on India and we, who constitute not a negligible number amongst the people of India and whose contributions to the growth of India’s progress have been considerable, have the right to demand that in the Free India to come we must have a territory assigned to us wherein we can live without fear and enjoy the fruits of peace and freedom, without depriving the other majority community of its rightful interests in the area in which it predominates.

I shall be leaving for Calcutta on Monday by air. If you feel that there is any further point which I should clarify, please let me know. I shall be prepared to come and meet you any time, now or later, when you may be good enough to summon me. I hope you will also be able to meet Mr K.S. Roy, representing the Bengal Congress, now in Delhi, who also shares my views substantially.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

31. Opposition to United Bengal within Muslim League

Letter from H.S. Suhrawardy to Liaquat Ali Khan, 5 May 1947

My dear Liaquat Ali Sahib,

I am sure that you have seen the statement of Maulana Akram Khan on my scheme of undivided sovereign Bengal and he finds in it an opposition to the Muslim League and to the Quaid-i-Azam. It is people like these who destroy the best-laid schemes by their foolishness and their partisan spirit. He has sabotaged my plan definitely and given a setback to the headway which I was making amongst the Hindus. If Bengal is divided, both sections will be weak and negligible. More so, our section, which, although it has got a large enough population, is so deficit in food grains that no amount of intensive cultivation will be able to produce a sufficiency. I am also just unable to realize how a weak Eastern Bengal can be of any assistance to the Muslim cause or be any strength to the Muslims or help the Muslims in the minority areas. The old Maulana’s and his party’s antagonism to Mr Abul Hashem blinds him to the folly in coming out with statements injurious to the Muslim cause.
I may be coming over to Delhi on the 16th or the 17th in spite of the heat.

Yours sincerely,
SHAHEED

32. Demand for Two Regional Ministries

Letter from Jogesh Chandra Mukherjee to S.P. Mookerjee, 5 May 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 141, Instalment II to IV, NMML.

Bar Association
Dacca.

Sir,

I have the honour to enclose herewith a copy of the resolution passed at the Extra-Ordinary General Meeting of the Dacca Bar Association held on 5.5.47 for your information. The substance has already been communicated by telegram

I have the honour to be,

Sir,
Your most obedient servant,
J.C. Mukherjee
Secretary.

ENCLOSURE

Resolved that the present Ministry of Bengal is inefficient, corrupt and has been guilty of wanton discriminatory acts of commission and omission as a result of which the province of Bengal has been undergoing untold miseries and normal life of the people has come to a standstill. This association urges upon the authorities concerned to remove forthwith the present Ministry of Bengal and to form two regional Ministries till partition of Bengal which this association already demanded.

Nil Kamal Chakravarty
President,
Bar Association, Dacca.

33. Congress Leader’s Assurance about Securing Partition

Extract from a Letter from Rajendra Prasad to M.N. Saha, 5 May 1947
R.P. Papers, File No. 6-I/45-6-7, NAI.

1 Queen Victoria Road
New Delhi.

My dear Dr Saha,

...You must have seen my statement about the question of partition. My own feeling is quite definite and so far as other colleagues in the Government are concerned, their view is also equally definite. I had gauged the feeling in Bengal and everyday I am getting confirmation that I had done it rightly. You may rest assured that, so far as we are concerned, we shall do our best to secure partition of the predominantly non-Muslim areas from Muslim areas. Kindly do not hesitate to write to me if there is anything you consider it is necessary to communicate.

Yours sincerely,
Rajendra Prasad

34. Methods Adopted by the League to Garner Support Letter from N. Dutt Mazumdar to Vallabhbhai Patel, 8 May 1947

P-20 Moti Jhil Colony
Dum Dum
Calcutta

My dear Sardarji,

The enclosed is the copy of a letter I have received by post from quarters obviously connected with the Muslim League. It will speak for itself. This is forwarded for your information as quite an interesting sample of methods which the votaries of Mr Jinnah’s ‘Pakistan’ are seeking to adopt in Bengal to ‘canvass’ opinion in their favour.

Following this letter I have also received a leaflet in Bengali which warns that the loaded pistol is ready to correct us from the path of partition of Bengal and resistance against the creation of ‘Pakistan’. A copy of this leaflet is also enclosed herewith for your information.

With kindest regards,

Yours sincerely
N. Dutt Mazumdar

ENCLOSURE

Axat Pakistan
S.S. Headquarters
Calcutta
30 April 1947

Mr Niharendu Dutt Mazumdar
Calcutta

S.S. Headquarters hereby request you that you immediately stop propaganda in support of ‘Bengal partition’. Bengal must be an independent, sovereign and united state wherein there will be no distinction of class, creed and religion. But this independent state must be called ‘Azad Pakistan’ and the Muslims by virtue of their numerical strength will be the dominant power. Remember, Muslim Bengal is no more idle and busy after job-hunting. Youths of Muslim Bengal are now prepared to sacrifice their last drop of blood to attain and afterwards defend what they love to call ‘Pakistan’.

S.S. Headquarters lastly warn you that if you continue to do the same the very existence of you will be at stake.

Azad Pakistan
[Illegible]
Sardar [Commander]
35. Call for Two Interim Ministries Pending Partition
Resolution by Villagers of 24-Parganas Districts Forwarded to S.P. Mookerjee, 9 May 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 141, Instalment II to IV, NMML.

THE HINDUS OF ABOUT FORTY VILLAGES MET AT A PUBLIC MEETING HELD AT BAKHRAHAT, 24 PARGANAS, BENGAL ON 9.5.47 UNDER THE PRESIDENTSHIP OF MR J.N. MONDAL, BA

ALL SECTIONS OF THE HINDU COMMUNITY JOINED IN THIS MEETING

The meeting surveyed the present political situation of Bengal and dealt at large with the evils of communal policy pursued by the present Ministry of Bengal in all spheres of public life. It also discussed how by nefarious legislation the Ministry is bent on ruining the Hindus and destroying everything Hindu.

After much deliberation the following resolution were unanimously passed:

(1) In view of the criminal barbarity in the shape of communal riot perpetrated in Calcutta, Noakhali, Dacca and other parts of the province and untold sufferings of the Hindus caused thereby and also in view of the inability or unwillingness of the present Bengal Ministry to put a stop to such state of things and apathy shown by it towards the Hindus it is resolved that this communal Ministry be removed immediately.

(2) As peace and order ceased to exist in this province and lawlessness is reigning supreme in the name of law and order it is further resolved that the Bengal Hindus should have a separate administration within the Indian Union and as such demand a partition of the province into West Bengal consisting of the Presidency Division with Calcutta, Burdwan Division and the districts of Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling, and East Bengal.

(3) Be it also resolved that two zonal Ministries be formed during the interim period so long as the partition scheme is not given effect to.

Copy forwarded to Dr Shyamaprasad Mookerjee, for information, favour of sympathetic consideration.

J.N. Mondal
President of the Meeting

36. Stop Violence in Name of Religion
M.K. Gandhi’s Interview with Abul Hashem at Sodepur, 10 May 1947

Hashem Saheb opened his case by stating that Bengalis were after all Bengalis, whether Hindu or Muslim. They had a common language, a common culture and did not wish to be ruled by Pakistanis who lived a thousand miles away. Gandhiji said:

But haven’t we been so long ruled by people who live seven thousand miles away?

Yes, but then that would mean that Pakistanis of the West would rule over us in Bengal.

But supposing they do not rule over you, and you wish to form a voluntary alliance with Pakistan because you have common religion which both of you wish to propagate throughout the world, then where is the objection?

But then you are talking of Pan-Islamism.
Yes I am. Perhaps you do not know how deep the Muslim feeling about it is. I had evidence of that even while I was a student in England many years ago. What is then your objection to a voluntary federation of different countries professing the same religion?

Hashem Saheb did not reply.

Then Gandhiji asked me to bring a Bengali primer which he had been reading lately. When this was brought, Gandhiji proceeded to tell Hashem Saheb that, to all intents and purposes, he was trying to become a Bengali. He found hardly any difference between the language of a Bengali Hindu and a Bengali Muslim. Bengal was the only province in India where common Muslims did not understand Urdu. His intention in learning the Bengali language was to be able to read Gurudev’s poems in the original, for, from them he received the message of the Upanishads, which lay at the root of the culture of the whole of India.

Hashem Saheb said that every Bengali looked upon Rabindranath with the highest veneration, and in this, Muslims were one with Hindus. That was the chief reason why Bengali Muslims did not want Bengal to be broken up into two.

It is the spirit of the Upanishads which binds Rabindranath to the whole of Indian culture. Does not Bengal derive her deepest culture from what is the priceless heirloom of all India? If that is so, and Bengal wishes to enter into voluntary association with the rest of India, what would you say about that?

Hashem Saheb had no reply for this question either.

You have not really made up your mind about Pakistan. Please think about it once more, and then we shall discuss the new proposal.

You are following the same path of non-violence as was followed by Lord Buddha and the Prophet. People consider you a reincarnation of these. You must extinguish the fire of violence in Calcutta. You must also do something so that our brethren in Bihar can live in peace.

First and foremost, it is a mistake to consider me a reincarnation of Buddha or of the Prophet. I have never made any such claim. I am an ordinary man. Of course I do try to follow the principles of life as preached by our scriptures and our great men. I have even succeeded to a certain extent. Yet, I do not claim that I am a person with divine qualities or higher than you. I am a servant of all human beings, be they Hindu or Muslim. I do wish I had the power to end the bloody strife raging among men and women of the same country. I should then be happy. Great men like Lord Krishna and Lord Buddha were so many incarnations of God. Our scriptures say that these great men had the divine power to establish peace and happiness. But you will realize that I am no divine person since I am not able to establish peace. And, if I presume to be such a person, I would not be able to survive in the world even for a minute. I have certainly been tested in my vows of truth and non-violence. That is why I have come here after touring Noakhali, Bihar, Delhi. I wish either to do something in this field or die. If you feel what Gandhi is doing is correct and Gandhi is needed in Calcutta I would first of all wish to make an humble request if you would allow me.

Yes, of course. You can command us to do anything.

The first thing is that if you are loyal to the party to which you belong and for which you work, you must ask Jinnah Saheb why, after signing the peace appeal with Gandhi, he is sitting in Delhi when thousands of Hindus are dying in the Punjab, the Frontier Province and Noakhali and thousands of women are being raped. Why should every worker belonging to your party not stand by the Hindus and protect them? If you are keen on saving the Muslims you will have to give protection to all these Hindus. And as far as you are concerned, you go and post yourselves in Noakhali whether or not you get the orders from Jinnah Saheb. You must prove to the Hindus that they are your brothers and sisters and if any Muslims come to kill them in the name of religion, you would offer to die first and protect them, that their mothers, sisters and daughters are your mothers, sisters and daughters. Let me tell all three of you that if you prove it not by words but by your actions, you would uphold your religion, and bring glory to your organization and this would have its effect in the whole country and your leaders would shine out by such remarkable acts. Today your leaders and your organization stand discredited in the world. If you want to strengthen your organization, if you want to allow the Muslims of India to live in peace and happiness and unity, this is the only way and there is no other. I know very well that you are not going to be convinced by what I say. But I would be untrue to you if I did not tell you what appears truth to me. This is so because I consider you all as my brothers and my friends, and my duty as your friend and brother obliges me to speak to you the truth.

Abul Hashem, Secretary, Bengal Provincial Muslim League, advocated the partition of India into Hindustan, Pakistan and United Sovereign Bengal.

37. Responsibility for Communal Violence

Gandhi’s Interview with H.S. Suhrawardy, 11 May 1947

H.S. Suhrawardy, the chief sponsor of the united sovereign Bengal scheme, drew a rosy picture of the proposal. Gandhiji said that a new Bengal could not be born in utter disregard of the past. When the past was so full of wrongs, how could people believe in the sincerity of the new proposal unless past wrongs were set right? Suhrawardy said, his Government had been wholly impartial and equal justice had been meted out to all; otherwise how could it have the support of a large number of Hindus? Gandhiji expressed the opinion that this was no different from the argument of British imperialists.

A friend of mine had written a letter in which he described the utter incompetence of the Government and the veiled connivance of police officers in encouraging Muslim rioters. Gandhiji had read his letter and asked me now to hand it over to the Chief Minister. The latter went through it and said, ‘Yes, it is a bad case. But I am sure, you realize that this is an exception.’

Then with Gandhiji’s permission, I placed before Suhrawardy another case of murder in which the police had not taken up any enquiry even when seven days had passed. Suhrawardy tried to bypass the charge against his Government by saying, ‘Do you know, there are more than half a dozen versions of that event? One even accuses me of complicity in the murder.’ Gandhiji had been silently listening to our conversation. He now broke in by saying:

Yes, you are responsible not only for that murder but for every life lost in Bengal, whether Hindu or Muslim.

Suhrawardy immediately retorted, ‘No, it is you who are responsible for it, for you have denied justice to the Mussalmans.’

I have rarely seen Gandhiji lose his temper in public. For one moment he flared up and said:

Don’t talk rot!
But immediately he became restrained and calmed down. He told Shaheed [Suhrawardy] that if he was really serious about his new Bengal, he should go amongst the hooligans, wherever there was disturbance, and stop the mischief by risking his own life if necessary.

If you do it even for a day, it will transform the atmosphere—not only in Calcutta but in the whole of India.

38. ‘Strong Condemnation of Move for Sovereign Bengal’

The Jatiya-Banga Mahasammelan which concluded its two day session at Singhi Park yesterday (Sunday) strongly condemned the recent move to carve out Bengal as an independent sovereign state and demanded immediate dissolution of the Muslim League Ministry in Bengal and formation of regional Ministries in its stead under a common Governor pending the creation of a new province of Bengal within the Indian Union.

The Mahasammelan sent the following wire to the Viceroy in this connection:

‘Convention of 5,000 delegates of Presidency Division and Calcutta and attended by 50 MLA's and MLC's and several Constituent Assembly members unanimously adopts resolution strongly protesting creation of sovereign independent state in Bengal.’

Adopting resolutions to the above effect, the Convention pointed out that the cry for an independent sovereign Bengal was a sinister design to land the province in utter ruin, and a step towards that trap meant submission to the foisting of Pakistan in Bengal in future.

PARALLEL GOVT

As a measure to meet any future contingency which might be brought about by the British Government transferring power to the existing communal Government of Bengal, the Convention urged upon the people to form a parallel Government with the nationalist forces in the country and requested all the nationalist organizations to form a Joint Council of Action to take necessary steps in this regard.

In another resolution adopted, the Convention called upon Congress MLA's (Provincial and Central) and members of the Constituent Assembly who opposed partition of Bengal to resign their respective office if they could not see their way yet now to declare in unequivocal terms their support for the movement.

The Convention fixed May 15 as the ‘Nationalist—Bengal Day’ and appealed for its country-wide observance.

Sj Kalipada Mukherji, who presided over the concluding session in the absence of Dr Prafulla Chandra Ghosh, appealed to the delegates and visitors to exercise restraint so that the interruptions which marked the proceedings of the opening session could be avoided. Sj Mukerji’s appeal was listened to and the day’s proceedings were happy and smooth. All the resolutions were carried unanimously.

The first resolution, moved by Sj Narendra Nath Sen stated:

REGIONAL MINISTRIES

‘The reactionary and anti-national policy adopted and pursued for over a decade by the Muslim League Ministry in Bengal made possible by the clever, deliberate device of the British Government has brought about ruin, disaster, misery and communal bitterness among the people. It has failed to give any protection to the people, specially to the minority community and also to maintain law and order in the province. The communal Ministry has thus forfeited the confidence of the peace-loving people of Bengal. This convention, therefore, demands that the present Ministry be forthwith dissolved and in its place regional Ministries be at once set up under a common Governor pending the creation of a new province within the Indian Union.'...

39. ‘Retain Bengal for Bengalis’
Letter from M.K. Gandhi to H.S. Suhrawardy, 12/13 May 1947
ＣＷＭＧ, Vol. LXXXVII, p. 460.

I recognize the seriousness of the position in Bengal in the matter of the partition. If you are absolutely sincere in your professions and would disabuse me of all the suspicion against you and if you would retain Bengal for the Bengalis—Hindus or Mussalmans—intact by non-violent means I am quite willing to act as your honorary private secretary and live under your roof till Hindus and Muslims begin to live as [the] brothers that they are.

Yours sincerely
M.K. GANDHI

40. United Bengal Should Be Based on ‘Mutual Consent’
Record of Gandhi’s Interview with S.P. Mookerjee at Sodepur, 13 May 1947

Shyamaprasad had heard that the scheme for united sovereign Bengal had received Gandhiji’s blessing. So he had come to ascertain the truth of the report. Gandhiji replied that he had not yet made up his mind about it but was trying to find out what the proposal really meant. Then he asked Shyamaprasad for his own opinion on the scheme.

Shyamaprasad began by saying that although Mr Suhrawardy was apparently its author, it was really being sponsored by the British commercial interests in Bengal. If Bengal were partitioned, it would create serious difficulties for the jute industry, for the mills would be in West Bengal and the raw materials in another State. Moreover, he said that the Viceroy, Lord Mountbatten, had personally asked him to give the proposal careful consideration. Gandhiji said:

So your objection is on account of its parentage! No, I want you to criticize the scheme on its merits.

The Shyamaprasad proceeded to say that although Mr Suhrawardy was now sponsoring the cause of a united Bengal, yet once division had taken place, what was there to prevent this Bengal from seeking voluntary alliance with Pakistan? He could surely manipulate a decision of this kind by means of the majority of Muslim votes. Gandhiji said:

But has he not spoken of ‘mutual consent’ between Hindus and Muslims in the formation of a separate Bengal?

Shyamaprasad asked what difference that made so long as the majority of the Legislative Assembly were Muslims. Gandhiji replied:

But a decision by a simple numerical majority is not by ‘mutual consent’. I would interpret that term differently. It ought to mean that if a majority of Hindu members and a majority of Muslim members agree to form a separate sovereign State, then it comes into being by 'mutual consent', not otherwise. That majority may be 51 to 49 or may be fixed at any other figure by mutual discussion before the agreement is entered into. And if Suhrawardy has to win the majority of the Hindu members of the Assembly over to his side, don't you see that the present communal situation in Bengal will immediately change for the better?

But supposing Suhrawardy does succeed in winning over many Hindu members and a separate state is formed, then one day, that state may federate itself with Pakistan if the decision is by majority of votes.

No. Such a decision should also be by 'mutual consent' as interpreted before separation from India.

Shyamaprasad then asked what would happen if the majority of Hindu members wanted to federate with India and the majority of Muslim members with Pakistan.

Then there would be a partition of Bengal. But that partition will be brought about by mutual agreement of the people of Bengal and not by the British. It is a partition by the British which has to be prevented at any cost.

But can you contemplate Bengal lying separated from the rest of India?

You ask me that question!

Finally, Gandhiji said to Shyamaprasad that we should take Mr Suhrawardy's new proposal at its face value, even if we may have no faith in him personally. Preservation of united Bengal in a united India should not be made the condition precedent in the present negotiation, that would defeat one's purpose. Having placed faith in the bona fides of Mr Suhrawardy's proposal for a united Bengal, we should work out its logical implications. An admission that Bengali Hindus and Bengali Mussalmans were one would really be a severe blow against the two nation theory of the League. If therefore Mr Suhrawardy was prepared to accept the real meaning of the term 'mutual consent', it would mean either the end of the League or of Mr Suhrawardy.

41. ‘Future of Bengal’

Extract from an Editorial in Amrita Bazar Patrika, 13 May 1947.

Since his arrival in Calcutta on Friday last Gandhiji has been meeting some political leaders and discussing with them, it is reported, the question of the desirability and possibility of a united, sovereign Bengal. It is also reported that some scheme or schemes are being discussed at these meetings. We have no authoritative accounts of what these schemes are nor do we know Gandhiji's reactions to these schemes. Neither have we knowledge if these leaders have been authorized by any political organizations to discuss plans for a united, sovereign Bengal or enter into negotiations with each other for that purpose. If they have not been so authorized, we would like to know on whose behalf they are discussing the plans they are reported to be doing. These reported happenings, which seem enveloped in mystery, have naturally caused serious misgivings among large numbers of Bengalee nationalists.

What impressions Gandhiji has formed during his brief stay in Calcutta we do not know. But we may tell him that nationalist Bengal is today definitely and emphatically in favour of a partition of Bengal. They believed in the absolute unity of India as a whole, politically and economically. Even a year ago Bengalee nationalists could not think in terms of a division of this province. Somehow or other they reconciled themselves to the rule—the apter word would be misrule—of the League Government which started in the year 1937. But today, by a strange but dismal turn of events since August last year, the position has completely changed. We need not go into those events here—they are so very well-known. To-day Bengalee nationalists feel in their heart of hearts—and quite rightly—that in the formation of a separate West Bengal Province of theirs within the Indian Union lies their only salvation. There is no other way. This is the belief passionately entertained by an overwhelming majority of Bengalee nationalists. This is conclusively evidenced by the views expressed by the nationalist Press in Bengal, by hundreds of public meetings held in different parts of the country and by opinions expressed by thousands of knowledgeable men in the columns of newspapers. With a little effort Gandhiji can easily ascertain the truth of what we have stated above.

...But the minority community and all others who do not subscribe to the theory of 'a change of masters' must live and have a secure home. For ten years they have tried to adjust themselves to the tyrannical rule of a brute majority. They have already given a fair trial to Gandhiji's advice to rely on the protection afforded by the majority community. The result is seen in carnage, arson, slaughter and dishonour of women folk. A very high price has already been paid by the minority community in its effort to live in brotherly amity together with fellowmen of the majority community. Things have now reached such a pass that the two must henceforth live apart if they are to live at all.

We tell Mr Suhrawardy that it is no use for him to talk sweet and big. The poison he has so well helped to spread has become such a Frankenstein that it can crush him the moment it is convinced that he means what he professes to avert a Pakistani calamity. It is equally useless for him to plead that he was not warned in time of this future development. All he has done so far is to abuse the 'Hindu' press and 'Hindu' leaders and drive the anti-Hindu poison deeper into the minds of Bengalee Muslims through administrative acts. Mahatma Gandhi is surely perfectly aware of all this, and no opportunist stratagem can deceive him as to the true state of things. Partition, as we have remarked, is not a pleasure; it has become an unavoidable necessity.

42. Opposition to Suhrawardy's Plans

Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to K.C. Neogy, 13 May 1947

My dear Neogy,

I have received your letter of the 11th instant. You must have noticed from the activities of Mr Suhrawardy in Calcutta that he is considerably unnerved by the agitation of partition of Bengal which is sure to separate Calcutta from Eastern Bengal which is destined to be the League portion of Pakistan if it persists in its demand. I am afraid this cry of a sovereign independent Bengal is a trap in which even Kiran Shankar [Roy] may fall with Sarat Babu. The only way to save the Hindus of Bengal is to insist on partition of Bengal and to listen to nothing else. That is the only way to bring the Muslim League in Bengal to its senses.

I am aware of the threat which Suhrawardy has given in his statement and which he may try to execute in the event of partition, but we shall take all possible precautions to prevent such a catastrophe. At present unfortunately the proposed announcement has been postponed.
Towards Freedom: 1947

for a fortnight and during that period the tension and war of nerves will continue but there is no help. I trust you are having the full benefit of the exuberating climate of Simla Hills. Hope you are doing well.

Yours sincerely
Vallabhbhai Patel

43. Nehru Disapproves of Sovereign Bengal
Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to S.P. Mookerjee, 14 May 1947

New Delhi

My dear Dr Mookerjee,

I have your letter of the 11th May. All the considerations that you have mentioned have been before us. Naturally I cannot say with any definiteness what is going to happen. I do not personally appreciate at all the idea of a sovereign Bengal unconnected with the Union.

Any notional division of the province for the purpose of deciding about the future must necessarily be based on some simple rule which presumably is related to the census figures of population. Final boundaries can only be settled by a Boundary Commission.

As you must know, the date of the so-called Conference has been postponed to the 2nd June. The Congress Working Committee is meeting on the 31st May in Delhi. I think it will be advantageous if you could be in Delhi round about that time. In any event you will probably have to come up for the meeting of the Constituent Assembly Union Principles Committee.

Yours sincerely
Jawaharlal Nehru

44. Bengal Hindus Persist with Demand for Partition
Telegram from V.D. Savarkar to S.P. Mookerjee, 15 May 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, File No. 141, Instalment II to IV, NMML.

DR SHYAMAPRASAD MUKERJI 77 ASHUTOSh MOOKERJEE ROAD CALCUTTA.

PLEASE BROADCAST THE FOLLOWING IN BENGAL STOP LET BENGALI HINDUS BEWARE OF THE SCHEMING PLATITUDES AND PROMOSLEM DESIGNS OF GANDHIJI WHO STARTED FOR BENGAL STRAIGHT AFTER HIS INTERVIEW WITH MR JINNAH AND AVOWING OPEN HOSTILITY TOWARDS THE DEMAND FOR FRAMING A HINDU MAJORITY PROVINCE IN BENGAL STOP NO COMPROMISE SHOULD DUPE US INTO ABANDONING THAT DEMAND AS MOSLEMS ARE SURE TO REPUDIATE THEIR PART AS SOON AS ARE TRAPPED STOP PAKISTAN OR NO PAKISTAN WE MUST HAVE NEW HINDU PROVINCE IN BENGAL PUNJAB AND SIND IN THE INTEREST OF AKHAND BHARAT ITSELF STOP FOR EVEN IF THE IMPOSSIBLE HAPPENS AND BRITAIN CONCEDES INTEGRITY OF INDIA UNDER A STRONG CENTRAL GOVERNMENT THE NEW HINDU MAJORITY PROVINCE IN BENGAL CAN ONLY SERVE US AS A FAITHFUL SENTRY CHECKMATING ANY FURTHER TREACHEROUS ATTEMPT ON THE PART OF MOSLEM MAJORITY THERE STOP ON OTHER HAND IN CASE PAKISTAN THRUST ON US BY BRITAIN THE CREATION OF THESE PROVINCES SHALL FORM AN UNBROKEN LINK OF HINDU MAJORITY PROVINCES FROM EAST PUNJAB TO WEST BENGAL AND WITH THE HINDU KINGDOM OF NEPAL AND KASHMERE IN THE NORTH AND HINDU ASSAM IN THE EAST WOULD CONSOLIDATE HINDUDOM AS NOTHING ELSE CAN AT PRESENT DO PROVIDED OF COURSE THAT WE HINDUS ALL POLITIES AND MILITARISE HINDUDOM

SAVARKAR

45. Adopting Term ‘Socialist Republic’ Debars Bengal from Commonwealth

Extract from a Letter from Louis Mountbatten to J.F. Burrows, 16 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 18, NMML.

...3. On my return from Simla on the 14th May I had a long talk with Suhrawardy and his Minister for Land and Land Revenue. Suhrawardy told me that, as a result of our previous conversation and the one that I had had with K.S. Roy, they had been having discussions about retaining the unity of Bengal. He added that Sarat Chandra Bose had also joined in the conversation.

4. He said that they had made good progress and on the whole he was hopeful as to the result. He did not mention to me, however, that the document which Bose and Roy had handed to him, but of which I fortunately had already procured a copy myself, contained in its opening clause the words that ‘Bengal was to be a Socialist Republic’.

5. I tackled him about this and told him that obviously if the term ‘Socialist Republic’ were to be adopted now it would debar their entry into the British Commonwealth, whatever the rest of India might decide to do, and that if they wished to turn to any big power, the only one that I could think of if they insisted on calling it a ‘Socialist Republic’ would be the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. I went on to say that surely if they wished to be independent, it would be quite enough for them to call themselves ‘Bengal’ and, if necessary, describe themselves as a ‘Free State’. When they had formed their Constitution they could call themselves anything they liked, but it was silly to prejudge the issue at this stage. I drew Suhrawardy’s attention to the recent statement by Patel on Dominion Status, and suggested to him that until the situation was cleared up it seemed to me the greatest mistake possible for them to call themselves a Socialist Republic.

6. I went on to tell him that in the most recent correspondence with HMG the suggestion was that provinces or parts of provinces not in A Group were going to be given the option of voting for Hindustan or Pakistan and not the option of remaining independent, but if, of course, the Bengal Legislative Assembly were to pass a resolution asking for independence and give it to you, I knew that you would pass it on to me with your recommendations and that I should judge the case in the light of what you said.

7. I finally told him that if any agreement were to be reached by the Hindus and Muslims in Bengal on a coalition Government basis, I would urge the leaders of the Congress and Muslim League High Commands to accept it, and knew that Gandhi would help. If this were done by the 2nd June I would do my utmost to obtain the agreement of the leaders that the final announcement should contain no reference to the partition of Bengal.

8. I warned him that Nehru was not in favour of an independent Bengal unless closely linked to Hindustan, as he felt that a partition now would anyhow bring East Bengal in to Hindustan in a few years.

9. Suhrawardy finished by referring once again to the question that, if the words ‘Socialist Republic’ were cut out and Bengal asked to remain within the British Commonwealth, whether I would be prepared to support such a proposal. I told him that my position remained the same, that in no circumstances would I recommend to HMG that Bengal should be allowed to come into the Commonwealth unless the bulk of India were to make a similar request.

10. I beg of you to use all your influence on Subhrawardy, Bose and Roy not to use the phrase ‘Socialist Republic’ or anything like it until the Constituent Assembly has met later on, because, as I said in paragraph 5, it would be the greatest mistake, in the light of Patel’s recent statement on Dominion Status, for Bengal to declare itself a Socialist Republic until the situation has been cleared up, and until it can be definitely seen whether the Indian Union is going to remain within the British Empire, which now seems to be a likely eventuality....

46. Sovereign Bengal Poses Dangers to Indian Union Letter from Binoy Kumar Roy to Vallabhbhai Patel, 16 May 1947
SPC, Vol. IV, p. 42.

74A South Sinthee Road
P.O. Ghughudanga
Calcutta

Respected Sardar V.J. Patel,

I beg to be excused for again troubling you with this. But the unhappy and dangerous situation that is being created by some so-called Congress leaders forces me to place before you some facts for your kind consideration.

I had occasion to write to you just after August [1946] killings of Calcutta how the Muslim League tried to impose Pakistan in Bengal and by what methods.

A situation more dangerous is now arising in Bengal and Mr Sarat Chandra Bose, who has more ambition than sense, is responsible for this. Mr Kiran Shankar Roy has also joined hands with Mr Bose in creating a free undivided Bengal. These people have joined hands with the Muslim League. But the Hindu public of West Bengal are very strongly in favour of partition. The betrayal of these so-called Congress leaders has come as a shock to the public under the circumstances. Please try to come to Bengal and rescue Bengal from the clutches of these traitors. These leaders forget that they are helping the Britishers by their unholy game.

The British diplomacy to create a weak Union Centre by combining opposing forces in undivided India having failed, it is trying to win away more areas from the jurisdiction of the Union State of India.

If Bengal is made free today, Assam will be forced to follow suit, since Assam does not possess direct communication with the Indian Union.

Eastern Pakistan will, in course of time, grow upon the ashes of Bengal and Assam.

Please, under these circumstances, come and visit Bengal. I can assure you that your presence will bring solidarity in Hindu ranks. For heaven’s sake do come to Bengal once.

Yours faithfully,
Binoy Kumar Roy
Dear Dr Rajendra Prasad,

I have been reading with keen interest your speeches on the cooperative movement delivered in Madras, and as I am interested in the movement, having established a Women’s Cooperative Industrial Home in Calcutta, I thought I might write about our difficulties.

I established the Home with the help of the Government of India. I happened to know Sri Biswanath Das, late Premier of Orissa, and asked him to come and see our work. He was so impressed that when a Conference of Premiers was held in Delhi he kindly recommended the grant. So we owe our organization entirely to his sympathy and help. At present this grant is distributed by the Bengal Government through the Cooperative Department of Bengal. We established the Home to train workers and send them to their villages and open cooperative industrial societies among the women. Our work was progressing splendidly and we were thinking of opening markets abroad when the war began and everything was upset. Our house was taken by the military, our workers left for their villages. We began anew after the war ended but the Calcutta massacre again stopped everything. We are trying to revive again but now the difficulty is to get yarn. Our agent goes to the Textile Department to get permit for our quota and has to return without it. This goes on from day to day and he sees people who can bribe the officer-in-charge to get a permit whereas our man is refused an interview. I am writing this to you as your Government is carrying on a drive against corruption. Our Government is steeped in corruption, and there is no hope for us, unless we are masters of our destiny. This can only happen with a divided Bengal. It breaks our heart to think of dividing our beloved Bengal but there seems to be no other alternative.

People like us who are surrounded by the majority community and have witnessed the August massacre can’t think of any way of escape except division. Neighbours with whom we have lived as friends for so many years seem to turn into brutes through communal passions. Hindus are traditionally pacifists, but their character is fast changing. If things go on like this there will be nothing left of our culture.

It pains the Congress-minded masses in Bengal that Dr Syama Prasad Mookerjee is giving us the right lead and not the Bengal Congress, some of whom have even joined Sj Sarat Bose, a renegade from Congress. It was not my intention to write to you in this strain, but all our thoughts are turned to our future. This is certain that we can’t live under the League Government.

All our thoughts are turned to our leaders in Delhi for we have no reliance on Bengal leaders.

Yours sincerely,
Abala Bose
48. Report from Bengal Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bengal for the First Half of May 1947, 17 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

Political.

...4. The strenuous attempt that has been made in certain political quarters to wean the Hindus and Muslims away both from partition and Pakistan and to form a united sovereign Bengal has had a very mixed reception. The general opinion, as at present known, is that the proposal has come too late; if it was to have had any chance of success it should have been put forward at least a year ago. As it is, organized Hindu opinion, including almost the entire Hindu press, is committed to the cause of partition, with its corollary of a union of West Bengal with India proper. Certain of the Muslim League leaders too are apparently far from prepared to abandon, at this stage, their claim to the Pakistan known to them.

5. The attempt to put forward a substitute for partition, a substitute which might be thought to be alluring to some at least of the Hindus of the Province and which, having regard to the national characteristics of the Bengalees, would, in normal times, probably have made a very definite appeal has caused the protagonists of partition to redouble their efforts to achieve their aim. In Calcutta the Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha has taken steps to speed up the preliminary steps for the foundation of a separate Hindu State including the general passing of resolutions supporting the proposal. For this purpose it is proposed to launch a systematic campaign against all proposals for a united Bengal and, as part of the plan, take the following steps—raise a fund of Rs 10 lakhs, recruit one lakh of volunteers and to impart the training necessary to meet any national emergency, stir up public opinion against the alleged barbarities committed by the Muslims and the police, form a separate Legislative Assembly with the present pro-partition Congress MLAs and form a provisional Government and make a formal declaration of the establishment of a new Bengal State. It is proposed to impress on Mr Gandhi that only a united stand by the Hindus of Bengal for the immediate partition of the Province can prevent disaster. A series of meetings have been held during the period in Calcutta in support of the general partition theme. At the first day’s session of the Jatiya Banga Mahasammelan on 10th May, at which some 10,000 persons were present including a thousand delegates from the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions, speeches were made and resolutions were passed in support of the proposition that a separate Province united with those territories which wish to come under the all-India Union should be formed. Opportunity was also taken by the Mahasabha, by the observance of Independence Day on the same date, to stress the same ideas, and at a meeting presided over by Dr Shyamaprasad Mookerjee, at which some 10,000 people were present, a demand for the partition of the Province was made; any pact with the Chief Minister was repudiated and the audience was called upon to bring the membership of the Hindusthan National Guards up to at least one lakh volunteers. An indication was also given that if the partition of Bengal was not effected through constitutional channels they would have to fight for it.

6. The series of unfortunate events which culminated in the passing by the Corporation of a resolution in favour of partition provided further arguments for those in favour of cutting off all connection with the Muslim League.
7. Muslim League leaders have been vocal on several occasions against the attempt by the Chief Minister and Mr Sarat Chandra Bose to form a united sovereign Bengal and have made it perfectly clear that they are not prepared to modify their previously expressed demand for Pakistan—involving the handing over of an undivided Bengal. As can be imagined this open divergence of view has caused very considerable confusion of thought in Muslim League circles—the general consensus of opinion being that Mr Jinnah must and will have the final say so far as the Muslims are concerned.

8. The suggestion that an Anti-Partition Day should be held to synchronise with the Independence Day of May the 10th fell flat and the Muslims did not observe the day. Shops and other business concerns remained open as usual and there was no demonstration or disturbance.

9. In the Divisions, too—West Bengal in particular—the pros and cons of partition have been the main matter of interest. In West Bengal the movement for partition continues to gain momentum and all districts report growing evidence in favour of the scheme. A large number of meetings have been held, including one at Serampore at the end of last month attended by 20,000 persons. No reaction has, however, been noted to the conciliatory attitude adopted by the Chief Minister and other leaders sponsoring the idea of a united sovereign Bengal. In the Presidency Division meetings of Hindus in urban areas in support of the partition proposal continue to be held. In North Bengal speculation generally favours partition. In Dacca, where the Nawab is attempting to regain his hold on the Divisional capital, local politics held the field but in Chittagong there is interest in the idea and a general belief that the Province will be partitioned.

10. In face of the, at present, intense interest in the whole future of the Province, interest in the political happenings in Calcutta city has very considerably abated following, and perhaps as a result of, the very definite improvement in the situation in the city.

49. ‘Bengal Muslims Will Fight Partition Move—Maulana Akram’

_Dawn, 19 May 1947._

NEW DELHI, Sunday.—Muslim Bengal is positively against the division of Bengal. I can assure everyone concerned with the question of separation that the Muslims of Bengal will fight against it united like a solid rock, said Maulana Mohammad Akram Khan, President of the Bengal Provincial Muslim League in an interview to the Orient Press of India here today.

He added, ‘partition of Bengal can be affected only on the corpses of the Muslims of Bengal. But we may consider the proposal provided this procedure is adopted as a matter of principle in all small zones and pockets where the Muslims are in a majority in the Hindu dominated provinces.’

He said that as far as the internal politics of the Muslim League in Bengal were concerned there was no difference of opinion between the Provincial Muslim League and the Ministry.

Continuing, he said that the Committee appointed by the Working Committee of the Bengal Provincial Muslim League to negotiate with the Hindu leaders did not make progress as the gulf between the two parties was too wide and the terms and conditions for compromise put forth by one party were not acceptable to the other.

Referring to the Sovereign United Bengal question he said that he would not support any proposal that was not in consonance with the scheme outlined in the Lahore Resolution of the All-India Muslim League.
Concluding he said that shortly after the arrival of Bengal Muslim League Leaders in Calcutta, the Working Committee of the Provincial League would be convened and informed of the talks they had today with the Qaed-e-Azam. —OPI.

50. ‘No Agreement on Future Bengal Constitution Yet’

Dawn, 19 May 1947.

CALCUTTA, Sunday.— ‘No agreement has yet been reached between the Bengal Muslim League and Congress leaders on the future constitution of Bengal,’ says Mr Fazlur Rahman, Revenue Minister, in a statement today.

Mr Rahman, who visited Delhi last week with Mr H.S. Suhrawardy, the Bengal Premier, and held discussions on the question with members of the League High Command, says:

‘We have the reactions of the Qaed-e-Azam to the discussions. Further talks will be carried on in the light of these reactions, and if at any time an agreement is arrived at it will be placed before the Working Committee of the Bengal Provincial Muslim League for its approval. If approved by it the whole matter will be placed before the High Command of the All-India Muslim League’.

Summing up the proposals arising from the discussions which have not, however, yet been agreed to, Mr Rahman says they are as follows:

1. Bengal to be a sovereign Socialist Republic. The Socialist Republic of Bengal will decide its relations with the rest of India.
2. The Bengal Legislature, after the constitution is framed and put into force should be elected on the basis of adult franchise and joint electorate.
3. On paras 1 and 2 being accepted by both the parties and on Bengal being declared by His Majesty’s Government as an independent state, the present Ministry will be dissolved and an Interim Government will be formed consisting of equal numbers of Muslims and Hindus (including the Scheduled Caste Hindus) but excluding the Chief Minister, who will be a Muslim. The Home Minister shall be a Hindu.
4. The Interim Government will give Hindus, including Scheduled Castes and Muslims equal share in the services.
5. The British Government shall transfer power to the Interim Government on or before June 1948.
6. An Ad Hoc constitution making body consisting of 30 persons, 16 Muslims and 14 Hindus, will be set up by the Muslim League and the Congress respectively to frame a constitution.—API

51. Appeal to Stand United with Congress

Extract from a Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Sarat Bose, 22 May 1947

SPC, Vol. IV, pp. 44–5.

Mussoorie

My dear Sarat,

....I am sorry to find that you have isolated yourself so completely from all-India politics and even in provincial politics you have not kept in touch with us. In these critical times, we cannot afford to be standoffish and must pool our resources and take a united stand. Vital matters which will leave their mark on generations to come have to be settled, and in such settlement it behoves all of us to contribute our best to the combined strength of the Congress. I do hope that you will take a broader share in all-India politics and will keep us in touch with your activities both in regard to all-India and in regard to provincial politics.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

52. Division of India Makes Partition of Punjab and Bengal Imperative

Extract from a Letter from Rajendra Prasad to Abala Bose, 22 May 1947
R.P. Papers, File No. 6-I/45-6-7, NAI.

1 Queen Victoria Road
New Delhi

My dear revered Lady Bose,

...You might have seen in the papers that I have personally very strongly supported the division of Bengal if India is to be divided. So far as we are concerned, we here are unanimously of opinion that there is no other way except to divide Punjab and Bengal if the League insists upon the division of India. The whole matter is under the active consideration of the British Government and we shall get definite information about the attitude of the British Government when Lord Mountbatten returns next week. I can fully visualize and appreciate the situation in Bengal and should do everything that I personally can to be of any service. So far as the official Congress in Bengal is concerned, I understand that the Provincial Committee supports the proposal for division. I have met Sjt Surendra Mohan Ghosh, President of the Bengal Provincial Congress Committee, on several occasions and he told me that the Congressmen, barring Sjt Sarat Chandra Bose and some of his co-workers, are all in favour of division. But, of course, Sarat Babu has a position in public life and I am afraid his attitude is causing a misunderstanding of the position in Bengal. From the talk that I have had with all friends whom I have met, I gather that Sjt Sarat Chandra Bose is practically isolated and has no support for his viewpoint in Bengal. But Europeans and others, who are interested against the partition of Bengal, are making capital out of Sjt Sarat Chandra Bose’s opposition. That is unfortunate. We shall do what we can from here.

With kind regards,

Yours sincerely,
Rajendra Prasad
Towards Freedom: 1947

53. Bengal to Be Partitioned
Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Binoy Kumar Roy, 23 May 1947
SPC, Vol. IV, p. 43.

Dear Friend,

I have received your letter of the 16th instant.

You are unnecessarily taking an alarmist view of the situation. Shri Kiran Shankar Roy is coming to Delhi on the 28th instant to meet me. I do not think he will do anything against the advice of the Congress High Command. Nor have we reason to apprehend any scheming or interference from British diplomacy.

Bengal cannot be isolated from the Indian Union. Talk of the idea of a sovereign republic of independent Bengal is a trap to induce the unwary and unwise to enter into the parlour of the Muslim League. The Congress Working Committee is fully aware of the situation in Bengal, and you need not be afraid at all. Bengal has got to be partitioned, if the non-Muslim population is to survive.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel

54. No Hindu Support for Anti-Partition Movement
Letter from H.S. Suhrawardy to Liaquat Ali Khan, 23 May 1947

BENGAL SECRETARIAT, CALCUTTA
23 May 1947

My dear Liaquat Ali Sahib,

I hope to come to Delhi on the 25th or the 26th. Representatives of the Working Committee of the Bengal Provincial Muslim League will also come up with Maulana Akram Khan about the 30th or the 31st.

I have had more chances of judging the situation. There is not the ghost of a chance of winning in any fight once the partition is announced. Even before the partition is announced, it is impossible to arouse Hindu public opinion against it. The Hindu leaders, Mr Sarat Chandra Bose and Mr K.S. Roy are indeed taking a great risk in setting their face against partition. They do not hope to be able to convince their community but they hope to be able to induce their High Command to agree. I think they deserve great honour and respect for their courage. We have not been able to touch a single Scheduled Caste member yet and not one of them has come forward to say that he is in sympathy with the non-partition movement.

Even the Hindus of East Bengal, who do not count in the voting, are supporting the partition with death staring them in the face.

Even the talk of partition has led to a recrudescence of riots in Calcutta, and when it is announced then two things might happen—either the Muslims of Calcutta will succumb and accept or they will fight—and if Calcutta passes into the hands of the Hindus, they will be decimated.

More when we meet.

Yours sincerely,
H.S. Suhrawardy

55. Bengal Must Not Be Partitioned
Letter from Liaquat Ali Khan to M.A. Jinnah, 24 May 1947

NEW DELHI

My dear Mr Jinnah,

Here are two more letters from Mr Suhrawardy. They arrived today.

I am leaving for Lahore this afternoon and will be back either Monday or Tuesday morning.

Yours sincerely,
Liaquat Ali Khan

Enclosure

H.S. Suhrawardy to Liaquat Ali Khan

BENGAL SECRETARIAT, CALCUTTA
21 May 1947

My dear Liaquat Ali Sahib,

I have had a talk with Maulana Akram Khan. I feel that I must once more impress upon the Quaid-i-Azam through you the disaster that will overtake us if Bengal is partitioned or if the partition of Bengal is announced on the 2nd June, that is to say, if we cannot come to an agreement before the 2nd of June. He seems to think that the Quaid-i-Azam feels that any settlement with the Hindus here or the local Congress, which will of course have to be ratified by the High Commands, will mean that we are giving up our principles—referring probably to the Two Nation Theory or to Bengal being declared a Muslim zone or to Bengal from the beginning forming part and parcel of a Pakistan Federation. Now my submission is this, that we are not compromising our principles in any way by coming to an agreement for Bengal, and even if we do, the compromise will be of such a minor nature that it will be expedient to make that compromise in view of the terrible disaster that will overwhelm Bengal, and particularly the Muslims of Bengal, if Bengal is partitioned. I wish to expand this. The Lahore Resolution visualized Independent Sovereign States of those areas where the Muslims are in a majority, with such readjustments, etc. This in practice came down to provincial boundaries to start with. Hence a Free State of Bengal subscribes to this criterion. Nowhere do I find it stated that there must be a declaration from the beginning that it will be Pakistan or that it should form part of a Federation of Pakistan States. So, what principles after all are we compromising? As regards joint electorate within the agreement, the present formula is equivalent practically to separate electorate, and it may surprise you to know that our formula of joint electorate with adult franchise unadulterated has alarmed the Hindu leaders who are demanding reservation of seats in proportion to the population, giving us therefore a statutory majority. Also the formula which has been accepted means practically separate electorate. It keeps their face, namely, their demand for joint electorate, and at the same time it gives us what we want, namely, separate electorate. Joint Ministries have, as I have said over and over again, been treated as an all-India issue. But when India is definitely going to be partitioned into Zone ‘A’ and Zone ‘B’ and we are pulling out, each one framing its own Constitution, then we may be left to frame ours, and the manner in which we settle our affairs will not affect the Ministries either of Zone ‘A’ or of Zone ‘B’. And what after all is the alternative unless we come to an agreement now? It would appear that the Quaid-i-Azam intends to fight against the partition inch by inch even after the declaration, that is to say that he will fight in the Legislative Assembly, in the Notional Assemblies and even at the time of a referendum which he hopes will be granted but the Viceroy has reiterated over and over again cannot be conceded. Now may I say with great respect that there is no hope whatsoever of retrieval of partition is declared on the 2nd of June. We may force a non-partition resolution in the Assembly, but this is valueless as there will be Notional Assemblies. In the Notional Assembly of the Hindu-majority areas composed of the present Members of the Legislature or of Members elected by the present Members of the Legislature on the basis of one for a million or one for two millions, there is absolutely no hope of getting a single Hindu vote in our favour. Even if we today arouse a volume of opinion amongst the Scheduled Castes—and I can tell you that the task is extremely uphill and except two meetings in the Burdwan Division it has not been possible to hold more, and the Scheduled Caste workers are ever afraid to go amongst the Scheduled Castes in the Burdwan Division, and they want protection and they want officers to support them—even if we were able to arouse Scheduled Caste public opinion in any degree or form, the present representatives of the Scheduled Castes or those that will be elected by the present representatives will all vote in favour of partition. Further, once partition is announced, there will be no hope of trying to get Hindu opinion in our favour, Scheduled Castes or Caste. The propaganda of the Scheduled Castes in our favour will be that they will be divided, hence there should not be a partition. This is weak against the propaganda of the Hindus, namely, that ‘we Hindus of these areas, both Caste and Scheduled Caste, will govern together and have a great Hindu province which will be linked to the Hindu provinces of the rest of India and which will dominate over the Muslims, a province which will be rich in resources and which we shall not surrender’. Please realize that this partition will give to the Western Bengal Hindus such a great victory that they will not give up an inch of ground once the partition is announced. So, neither shall we win in the Notional Assemblies, nor is there any hope of winning even if a referendum is given at a subsequent stage. And what I am telling you is an absolute fact which everyone here knows, and let there be no misconception regarding this. I repeat, once the partition is announced there is not the slightest hope of getting Hindu opinion from any section against that partition. West Bengal, which will be Hindu-dominated, will be rich in resources, and why should they agree to link themselves up with a large rural population with the prospect of utilizing their resources for the benefit of the rural population and with the further prospect of being dominated by Muslims, whereas they can utilize all those resources for their own wealth and development and at the same time save themselves from Muslim domination? I use the word ‘domination’ because, if all these things are not being done by agreement but are based upon a struggle, that will be the result in spite of all that we may say about treating the Hindu minorities fairly and squarely and everybody having a share in the administration. And what will be the disaster? If there is a struggle, nothing can save the Muslims of West Bengal from being wiped out, and nothing can save the Hindus of East Bengal, even the Scheduled Caste Hindus, from being wiped out. I am including the Scheduled Castes also because, however much we may try and differentiate between Caste and Scheduled Caste Hindus, there is no differentiation made where there is a communal struggle, as is evidenced by the fact that the Muslims attacked the Scheduled Caste Hindus in Tippera and Noakhali, and the Hindus attacked the Congress Muslims and killed them in Calcutta and Bihar. Now no Government is powerful enough to be able to save this province however much we may try. Before Government’s resources can be mobilized—and these resources are really peacetime resources—the mischief will have been done and the massacre already enacted. If we use the army, what is the army we are getting here? It is all a Hindu army. It would seem as if there are no Muslims in the army; and while they talk about the army being free from communalism, they will not send Muslim troops to Bengal. So, the army will not come to our help but will actually work against us.

So much for life and death. Then comes the condition of East Bengal. I have in a previous letter told you how absolutely unprepared East Bengal is for a struggle for existence. I will not repeat it here. Please once more refer to the previous letter. If North Bengal also goes to the Hindus, namely, the area of Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling and the top portion of Dinajpur (which may go to them when a Boundary Commission is set up), then one more commodity, namely, tea, also goes to them. What will be left of East Bengal will be an area absolutely deficit in food grains, and by the time other Muslim areas or surplus areas send foodgrains to us, the Muslims of East Bengal will be dead; they will have to pass not through one famine but through several famines, and I can quite visualize that within six months of the partition the Muslims of East Bengal will be kneeling before West Bengal or before Group A or before the Congress to be taken into their fold. What else, after all, is the alternative? So, will you please give some thought to the problem of Bengal and discuss this matter with the Quaid-i-Azam? Pakistan having been gained, is it not worthwhile that we should consolidate our gains? Will you also realize that with the partition cry having been raised, how difficult indeed it is to induce the Hindus to co-operate with us on the basis of a Free State of Bengal? But some who have vision and some who do not wish to hold themselves responsible for the murder of Hindus and Muslims, that will surely follow if Bengal is partitioned, are prepared to come to an agreement with us. For Heaven’s sake let us take advantage of this. And now there will be only one snag; it may be a very big snag but it will be a snag for which we shall not be responsible either before God or [before] man or before our own conscience; and that is that the Congress High Command, in its dream of giving a blow to Pakistani Bengal and in its dream of dominating the Muslims in one section of Bengal, may not agree to the agreement arrived at between ourselves. If so, all that can be said is that we have done our best, and we or the Muslim League will not be held responsible for the horrors that will follow. Secondly, if we had agreed and if the Quaid-i-Azam also says that he is prepared to agree on these terms and if the Congress stands out, then it may well be that the Viceroy may not announce the partition of Bengal in view of the unreasonableness of the Congress attitude; it may well be too that the Viceroy may force the Congress to yield. But let us not, for fear that the Congress High Command may not accept, also fail to do our bit. The Quaid-i-Azam has always been brave and courageous to do the right thing, and although the Congress High Command has not accepted, he has come out in shining glory because he has done the right thing and without considering whether the Congress will accept or not.

Please, may I have an answer?

Yours sincerely,
H.S. Suhrawardy

56. Sovereign Bengal a Sinister Move from Muslim League

Letter from P.N. Banerjea to Rajendra Prasad, 27 May 1947
G.G. (Reforms), F.N. 41/3/47- R, Part IV, NAI.

INDIAN ASSOCIATION
62, BOWBAZAR STREET,
Calcutta

Dear Dr Rajendra Prasad,

I am enclosing a copy of the Resolution passed at a meeting of the Council of the Indian Association held on the 26th instant.

I shall leave for Delhi tomorrow and will take the earliest opportunity of meeting you to discuss the Bengal situation.

I trust you are keeping good health.

Yours sincerely,
P.N. Banerjea

The following Resolution was passed at a meeting of the Council of the Indian Association held on the 26th May 1947:

The Indian Association has given its serious consideration to the Free State plan for Bengal as adumbrated in the Bose–Hashim agreement and come to the conclusion that its object is not only to defeat the almost unanimous demand of the Hindus and other nationalists for the creation of a separate autonomous province in Bengal as an integral part of the Indian Union, but is also a clever and sinister move to hand over the whole of the province to Pakistan in a stealthy and surreptitious manner. This move has been strongly condemned by all the non-Muslim newspapers of the province which have any circulation and rejected outright at all the representative conferences and largely attended meetings which have been recently held. The plan has thus received no support and is unworthy of consideration of His Excellency the Viceroy and His Majesty’s Government. The Indian Association strongly support the nationalist demand that all non-Muslim majority areas in Bengal be kept out of Eastern Pakistan and incorporated into a separate province within the Indian Union.

The Association desires to point out that the communal situation in Calcutta and some other parts of Bengal is steadily deteriorating. The depredations of the Muslim League volunteers and the atrocities perpetrated by the Muslim Armed Police are daily increasing. The use of firearms by Muslim League volunteers and hooligans is another serious feature of the situation. Business is almost at a standstill, and a large number of businessmen are actually thinking of closing their transactions for an unlimited period. But, if the situation is bad now, it is apprehended that it will become infinitely worse in the near future.
The Association, in this connection, invites the earnest attention of His Excellency the Viceroy to the statement of Mr H.S. Suhrawardy in which he threatened Bengal with dire consequences in case the partition of Bengal be decided upon. The Association urges His Excellency and the Interim Government to take all precautionary measures against a fresh outbreak of violence which may prove disastrous to the country. The Association is convinced that peace and tranquility cannot be maintained in Bengal unless the present Muslim League Ministry is removed and two Regional Ministries are formed for the two parts of Bengal. But, if for any administrative or other reasons, there be the likelihood of any delay in forming two ministries, the Association urges that Section 93 of the Government of India Act be applied before the announcement of the British Government’s decision in order to tide over the critical period.

57. Partition Disastrous

Extract from a Letter from Sarat Bose to Vallabhbhai Patel, 27 May 1947

Calcutta

My dear Sardar,

...Isolation from all-India politics has not been of my seeking. Health and other circumstances have been conspiring against me since December last. During intervals, when I had a little respite from illness, I did some political work and also devoted some of my time and energy to curbing to some extent communal frenzy. Today the position is that communal frenzy is not the monopoly of the Muslim Leaguers; it has also overtaken large sections of Hindus, both Congressites and Mahasabhaitees. The Congress stand regarding partition has been taken advantage of by the sections mentioned above to inflame communal passions further. It has also brought back the Hindu Mahasabha to life and considerably strengthened its position.

I have given the public from time to time a very clear indication of my views. I consider it most unfortunate that the Congress Working Committee conceded Pakistan and supported partition. It is true that I have not been able to address public meetings yet for reasons of health; but having been in close touch with public opinion both in West and East Bengal, I can say that it is not a fact that Bengali Hindus unanimously demand partition. As far as East Bengal is concerned, there is not the slightest doubt that the overwhelming majority of Hindus there are opposed to partition. As regards West Bengal, the agitation for partition has gained ground because the Congress came to the aid of the Hindu Mahasabha and also because communal passions have been roused among the Hindus on account of the happenings since August last. The demand for partition is more or less confined to the middle classes. When the full implications of partition are realized and when people here find that all that they will get for Western Bengal province will be roughly one-third of the area of Bengal and only about half of the total Hindu population in Bengal, the agitation for partition will surely lose support. I entirely agree with you that we should take a united stand; but I shall say at the same time that the united stand should be for a united Bengal and a united India. Future generations will, I am afraid, condemn us for conceding division of India and supporting partition of Bengal and the Punjab.
I have been feeling somewhat better during the last fortnight and I do intend to take a greater part in all-India politics and, at the same time, to explain to the public of Bengal that partition would be disastrous to them.

I may come to Delhi within the next few days, but my coming or not coming will depend on the situation in Calcutta.

I trust you are keeping well. With kind regards.

Yours sincerely,
S.C. Bose

58. Governor’s Assessment of the Political Situation in Bengal

Extract from a Letter from J.F. Burrows to Louis Mountbatten, 28 May 1947
Mountbatten Papers, File No. 18, NMML.

SECRET

GOVERNMENT HOUSE

CALCUTTA,

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

....All our information—and there is plenty of it—goes to show that if as result of the discussions beginning on the 2nd June it appears that partition is being forced on Bengal or that the Hindus can have partition for the asking, the Muslims will refuse to take it lying down and will adopt every form of resistance, in the course of which much blood will be shed and much property devastated, especially in Calcutta, the loss of any interest in which will be the greatest blow, financially and in prestige, to the Muslims of Eastern India. In the Province generally there is a feeling of pessimism and almost of resignation to the prospect of renewed communal strife on an unprecedented scale and in some parts the wildest ideas are current regarding the preparedness of the rival community to launch a planned campaign of violence the moment the signal is given. Calcutta is particularly ‘jittery’....

....But what I really have in mind in acquainting you with this aspect of the position down here is to give you material (which I believe Suhrawardy and Kiran Shankar Roy will confirm and reinforce) for impressing on the All-India leaders of both sides the danger of the position in Bengal, the danger of widespread communal strife, followed almost immediately, as it inevitably would be in present circumstances, by a complete breakdown of our feeding arrangements for Calcutta and the deficit pockets of the Province (largely in East Bengal). A serious outbreak of communal strife at this moment might well cost us more lives by famine in the next few months than the rioting itself. If, therefore, and this is the point I am leading up to, division of India becomes inevitable and with it the opportunity to the Hindus to partition Bengal, it is in my opinion of supreme importance that if that is by any means an agreed decision or even a decision acquiesced in by the All-India leaders, these (and from my point of view especially Jinnah) should, if it is humanly possible, be got to the microphone at the earliest possible moment to say that all should acquiesce in the decisions taken at Delhi and to appeal in the strongest possible terms for their peaceful implementation. Though the response in Calcutta, so far, to the Gandhi-Jinnah appeal to abjure violent means has not been conspicuously favourable in practice, I believe that a strong indication by Jinnah (if he can be got to give it) that the decision is accepted by him as the best that can be got and as worthy of acceptance and working out, for what it is worth, in peace and amity, would have a most steadying effect on Muslims down here and, incidentally, on Hindu apprehensions.

Yours sincerely,
Burrows

59. Move for Partitioning Bengal Being Sabotaged by Some Local Congressmen
Letter from Surendra Nath Sen to Vallabhbhai Patel, 28 May 1947
SPC, Vol. IV, pp. 50–1.

39/2/G Manoharpukur Road
PO Rashbehari Avenue
Calcutta

Dear Sir,

May I take the liberty of encroaching on your valuable time for a few minutes? The matter is very urgent and requires prompt action by the Congress High Command, otherwise the move for partition of Bengal will be sabotaged, not by the Muslim Leaguers, nor by the European merchants, but by the local Congress leaders.

Many retired officers of the locality, including my humble self, suggested, as early as May 1946, through the Amrita Bazar Patrika, separation of Western Bengal from Eastern Bengal, and incorporation of the former in the Union of India. We had to contend against strong public opposition until the great Calcutta killing, the Noakhali incidents, and the continuous misrule by the League Government convinced the public about the necessity of partition. The movement gathered momentum, until everyone accepted that it was almost a settled fact. I now find that some of the persons who had been ardent advocates of partition, are now advocating a 'sovereign Bengal.' I have reasons to believe that they have been influenced by some of the Congress leaders. It is rumoured that a huge sum of money has been placed at the disposal of those leaders for scuttling partition. Emissaries are being sent to Eastern Bengal to create disunity amongst caste and depressed class Hindus, and between Eastern Bengal and Western Bengal Hindus, through the agency of Peace and Prosperity League and the Communist Party. Up till now the saboteurs had not the courage to face any public meeting. But individual agents have been approaching old men and telling them that unless they agree to a free and independent Bengal, all the Hindus will be killed by the Muslims. To the middle aged persons those agents have been telling that Union Government is not likely to look much to the interest of Bengal. To the young men they are telling that if Western Bengal remains within the Union, Bengal will be exploited by non-Bengalis, especially the Marwaris. It is being preached in Eastern Bengal that after partition the men of Eastern Bengal will be deprived of all advantages of educational and other institutions of Calcutta. More and more Congress leaders are reported to be drawn into the conspiracy. The general feeling of the public is very much against those leaders who either through misconception or through motives of personal gain are going to sell the nationalists of Bengal to the Muslim Leaguers. If matters are permitted to drift further, those 'babus' may feel strong enough to declare a revolt against the High Command. But, if enquiries are held now, and a firm attitude [is] shown by the High Command they may recant their past actions and may pledge loyalty to the High Command. There is not much time to lose if Bengal is to be saved from the mischievous actions of their so-called leaders.

With best regards,

I am,
Yours truly,
Surendranath Sen
(Retired Distt Judge)

PS.
One Bengal MLA who is now in England is reported to be helping the saboteurs.

60. Sovereign Bengal Would Mean Perpetual Communal Strife
Letter from Secretary, Bengal Provincial Depressed Classes League, to Louis Mountbatten, 30 May 1947

To
His Excellency
The Governor-General of India,
NEW DELHI.

Your Excellency:

As per resolution of the Bengal Provincial Depressed Classes Conference under the auspices of the Bengal Provincial Depressed Class League, under the Presidency of Mr Radha Nath Das, MLA (Bengal), Member Constituent Assembly, held on 27th May, 1947 at the University Institute Hall, the following resolutions are being sent to your Excellency for your kind perusal and consideration:

1. Whereas the Muslim League is determined to separate Bengal from the Indian Union with a view to include the province in the Free Pakistan State and the British Government, according to the statement of February 20, instead of transferring power to the Indian Union might transfer power to the present Provincial Government and whereas the Muslim League wants to force the nationalist Bengalees to live like foreigners in their homeland of Bengal, this Conference proposes that a separate province be created with Burdwan and Presidency Divisions, Jalpaiguri and Darjeeling districts, Calcutta and other parts which are willing to remain within the Indian Union.

2. Being misled by the political hoax of the Muslim League, some are trying to create a Sovereign Bengal State separate from the Indian Union. This Conference while condemning this move is of the opinion that creation of a Sovereign Bengal State will be dangerous for all nationalist Bengalees and will establish communalism permanently. This proposal is, therefore, unacceptable to this Conference.
3. This Conference demands that pending creation of a new Province in Bengal two regional Ministries for the administration of the affairs of the two parts of Bengal under one Governor, be formed for the interim period.

I have the honour to be,

Sir,

Your most obedient servant

Ramananda Das,

Chairman,

Reception Committee

61. Muslim League Demands Inclusion of Calcutta in East Pakistan

Extract from a Memorandum from Calcutta District Muslim League and Others to M.A. Jinnah, 31 May 1947

8 ZAKARIA STREET, CALCUTTA

MEMORANDUM OF THE CALCUTTA DISTRICT MUSLIM LEAGUE, THE INDIAN NATIONAL MARITIME UNION AND THE ASANSOL SUBDIVISION MUSLIM LEAGUE

Our dear Quaid-i-Azam,

Permit us to lay before you the following:

That the Calcutta District Muslim League and the Indian National Maritime Union, Calcutta, in their meeting dated the 29th May, 1947, unanimously decided to represent the views and sentiments of the Muslims of Greater Calcutta on the future of Bengal and the proposed partition of Bengal, to Quaid-i-Azam and the League High Command, through a memorandum and a deputation to the Quaid-i-Azam. This deputation and memorandum is accordingly seeking to represent to you Calcutta Muslims' views and feelings.

Calcutta the Spearhead and Pivot of East Pakistan

The Muslims of Calcutta have been the spearhead of the entire League movement and the pivotal and focal point of the whole Pakistan struggle in Bengal. Calcutta was the first League on mass basis and the Calcutta League was the first to organize a Pakistan Conference in Calcutta Town Hall. The tremendous struggle and sacrifices of the Muslims of Calcutta for the cause of Pakistan soon after the Bombay Resolution of the Council of the All India Muslim League, rejecting the Cabinet Mission Plan and the blood-bath of Muslim Calcutta during and after the disturbances on 16th August, 1946, opened a new chapter in the history of the Pakistan struggle.

Battle of Calcutta is the Battle of Bengal

The Muslims of Calcutta have been fighting the Battle of Calcutta for the cause of Pakistan with the firm conviction that the party which will win the Battle of Calcutta will win the Battle of Bengal and the people who will control Calcutta will most certainly control Bengal....
Towards Freedom: 1947

Sinister moves of sabotage, treachery and betrayal

Quaid-i-Azam,

Your statement declaring your firm resolve to fight every inch for the integrity of Bengal and the Punjab has reassured us. But as we see very sinister underground moves to sabotage Pakistan in East India Zone, we believe it our duty to freely and frankly lay before you not only our feelings and views but also our dangers. The moment is critical and decisive in the history of Muslim India and it demands brutal frankness.

We belong to no party but the party of the League and we aspire for nothing personal or selfish but the integrity, sovereignty and greatness of Pakistan.

Treachery of selfishness

The Dangers are:

(A) First and foremost is the fact that we do not so much fear the Hindus. We do not even fear the British. But we most certainly fear treachery, betrayal, sabotage, defeatism and surrender to enemy’s machinations in our own ranks in Bengal. To be free and frank, we apprehend that a certain section of leaders of East Bengal have not only failed in mobilizing forces to counter and resist the Hindu move for partition of Bengal and the Hindu occupation of Calcutta, rather they are really supporting the Hindu move covertly and indirectly. They are happy to see this partition. Bengal League leaders are openly divided into two groups (1) the Divisionists and (2) the Unionists—those who want the division of Bengal and those who want the unity of Bengal. For instance:

Divisionists

Mr Abdul Ghufran, Minister Civil Supplies, was saying openly that the loss of Calcutta will be a good riddance as it was a white elephant which produced no food but consumed huge amount of foodgrains and that East Bengal will be happy without Calcutta.

Mr Shamsuddin, Labour Minister, seems of the same view.

Mr Hamidul Haque Chaudhry, MLC, who in Bengal League Working Committee always supported Greater Bengal schemes and even advocated joint electorate to secure greater Bengal, became a turncoat Divisionist overnight and is an advocate of East Bengal State. It is said that he is hoping to secure a sure seat in the new East Bengal Ministry, which he hopes will be soon formed after 2nd June, 1947, under Mr Noorul Amin.

Mr Noorul Amin, the Speaker of the Bengal Legislative Assembly, who was very anxious to secure a seat in the Bengal Ministry and is disgruntled for being disappointed in his campaign for reshuffling Bengal Cabinet, is aspiring to be the Premier of East Bengal. He fears that he will not be able to become Premier if Bengal is not partitioned.

The Retreatists and Defeatist

(A) The Azad Group of the East Pakistan Renaissance Society has been an advocate of partition of Bengal since 1945. They published a pamphlet on this subject with a map demarcating the boundary lines of East and West Bengal. Maulana Akram Khan belongs to this group which wants to retain Calcutta for Pakistan but regards the Hooghly River as natural boundary of East Pakistan. It is ready to sacrifice Burdwan Division.
The Unionists

(C) Mr H.S. Suhrawardy, the Bengal Premier, honestly feels that partition of Bengal will be a calamity which East Pakistan State will not be able to survive at all. He is obsessed with the idea that we must avoid partition of Bengal at any cost. He may be wrong in his methods and diplomacy but there is no doubt that he is feeling honestly and deeply for the unity of Bengal. Khwaja Nazimuddin seems to be not fully posted on facts. He sometimes supports Divisionists and sometime says that division will do harm to Bengal Muslims.

The Calcutta Muslims and Seamen

(D) The Muslims of Calcutta, including the Seamen, are for Pakistan—full-fledged and in its entirety. They are firmly resolved to fight for the whole of Bengal....

Our Submission

Quaid-i-Azam,

The Muslim masses of Bengal are sound and ready to fight for Pakistan. The Muslims of Calcutta assure you that they will not yield an inch to the enemy.

Our submissions in brief are that:

1. Never agree to sacrifice Calcutta or West Bengal.
2. For heaven's sake do not be misled by the false propaganda of the group of self-seekers, disgruntled defeatists and divisionists who by covertly advocating East Bengal State are really supporting Shyama Prashad Mukherjee and sabotaging your stand for integrity of Bengal.
3. Kindly pay more attention to the problems of Muslims of Greater Calcutta and the problems of the better organization of the splendid Bengal seamen.
4. Do something to organize and win over the tribals of Assam, West and North Bengal and Chhotanagpur and the depressed classes of Bengal and Assam.
5. As Quaid-i-Azam, order dissolution of all group of Divisionists in Bengal League fold. We are confident that this mischief of Divisionism and Divisionists Party in Bengal League fold can be nipped in the bud by your mere order. No leader in Bengal has the power to go against your declared order, policy or principle. But please let Bengal know that you regard Divisionism in Muslim League as a treachery and betrayal of the League's fundamental creed and ideal.

Bengal Seamen and Muslim Calcutta's impregnable position in Sea Front and River Front and Dock and Port Front

In conclusion we beg to reassure you that Muslims of Calcutta hold the strongest and most impregnable position and are capable of fighting and defeating the enemy in Calcutta provided they get support and guidance from League High Command.

Facts of Make-up of Calcutta

We beg to lay before you the following facts regarding the port city of Calcutta.

The Jute Front of Muslim Bengal

(1) The first and foremost factor in the making and make-up of Calcutta comes jute. Calcutta is the 'City of Jute.' It is the by-product of the jute of Bengal. Calcutta is therefore rightly called the port of jute and jute is the product of mainly the Muslims of East Bengal. This forms the Jute Front of Muslim Bengal.

The Sea Front of Muslim Bengal

(2) The second factor in the making and make-up of Calcutta comes the Seamen of Bengal, known all over the world as Lascars. They are all Muslims. This forms the Sea Front of Muslim Bengal.

The River Front of Muslim Bengal

(3) The third factor in the making and make-up of Calcutta comes the inland shipping which connects Assam with Bengal and India via Calcutta. The inland shipping companies of Calcutta are mostly British but they are manned wholly and solely by Muslims from Captain to Sarang. They control the entire trade and commerce of Bengal and Assam. This forms the River Front of Muslim Bengal.

The Tea Front under Command of Bengal Mariners

(4) Although tea is grown in Assam and North Bengal, it is exported through inland shipping steamers which are 100 per cent manned and officered by Muslim navigators of Bengal. Moreover this commodity is exported mainly through the port of Calcutta which is chiefly manned by Muslims. This forms the Tea Front of Muslim Bengal.

The Port Front of Muslim Bengal

(5) The port of Calcutta employs 22,000 workers as dockers and port workers and others, who work on the shores and do not go to the sea or to the rivers. Out of this, 17,000 are Muslims and 5,000 are Hindus and others. This forms the Port Front of Muslim Bengal.

Port Areas are Pakistan Areas in Population

(7) As the port of Calcutta is entirely a product of the labour, toil and sacrifices of generations of Muslims Seamen, Rivermen and Dockers, consequently the areas of port of Calcutta are overwhelmingly populated by Muslims.

From Garden Reach Municipality of Matiaburj down to Chandpall Ghat and the Armenian Ghat—the entire area of the port—Muslims vastly predominated in the population.

Matiaburj

In Matiaburj Municipality the population in 1941 was:

- Total population: 1,25,000
- Muslims: 1,05,000
- Hindus: 20,000
- Bihar Muslim Refugees: 50,000 (Approx.)
- Total Muslims: 1,55,000
- Total Hindus: 20,000

Matiaburj is a separate Municipality.

Iqbalpur, Kidderpore, Watganj and Hastings—95 percent

Iqbalpur, Kidderpore, Watganj and Hastings, which are port areas covered ward Nos. 25 and 26 of the Calcutta Corporation. Even before the war they were predominantly Muslim... wards. During the war Muslim population vastly increased due to war demand of seamen and dockers. After the Great Calcutta Riots of August, 1946, the Hindu population decreased much. Muslims are over 95 per cent.

In short from Matiaburj to Mominpur, Iqbalpur, Kidderpore, Watganj, Hastings, Calcutta Maidan, New Market, Chandni, Riverside Ghat, Hastings Street, Calcutta High Court and Town Hall, there is one long contiguous belt of predominantly Muslim wards which cover the entire port area of Calcutta. This gives Muslims a unique strategic position in the Battle of Calcutta and the Battle of Bengal.

The moment the League decides and order goes, the entire Sea Front, River Front, Dock and Port Front, Jute Front and Tea Front can be mobilized for war of Pakistan and the entire port, sea and river services of Bengal can be paralysed.

Glorious War Record of our Seamen

Please also remind Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten of the glorious part played by Bengal seamen, portmen and rivermen. Here are some salient facts about their war record:

Merchant Navy—Sea-going Vessels

1. 1,72,000 took part in World War II, including engine crew, deck crew, and saloon crew.
2. 28,000 Bengal seamen fell and died fighting in the World War II (1939-45) in the seven seas, excluding war prisoners who numbered [several] thousands.
3. 52,000 seamen from Sylhet were permanently engaged in War barring others who were coming and going.
4. 32,000 seamen from Noakhali were engaged in the war.
5. 20,000 seamen from Chittagong were engaged in the war.
6. 10,000 seamen from Calcutta were engaged in the war.

Inland Shipping

Bengal Steamer Service Men: 36,000 mariners are permanently engaged and they are cent per cent Muslim. Present strength of seamen engaged is over 55,000.

Most difficult functions are performed by Muslim seamen who can immobilize the entire port any moment.

Muslim seamen do all the most difficult and dangerous work, for example.

Arakatis—100% Bengal Muslims

They pilot and lead in the ships from the Bay of Bengal to Calcutta port and also pilot and lead out the ships from the port to the sea. No captain can sail or move without them. They alone know the safe routes for the ships. Without them ships run aground and are lost in the Bay or the Hooghly River, which are very dangerous for shipping. There is not a single non-Muslim Arakati.

Kamalias—100% Muslims

They are experts in proper loading of cargo. If the cargo is not loaded in order and properly, ships are unbalanced and sunk. This is a very specialised difficult function. There is not a single non-Muslim Kamalia.
Dubals (Divers)–100% Muslims

They are the world’s most wonderful divers who dive and remain in the bed of the river and sea for 45 minutes without any cover, helmet or respiratory apparatus for doing marine work. There is not a single non-Muslim Dubal.

Each Dubal saves Rs 10,000. If apparatus for diving is employed it cost Rs 10,000 a month.

Sookanis (Steermen)–100% Muslims

They steer ships. There is not a single non-Muslim Sookani.

Mastmen–100% Muslims

They are perched high up on the masts of ships and have to do their duty day and night in hazardous seas in rain and hailstorm and watch sea routes. They are all Muslims.

Men of Anchor-Boat–100% Muslims

They cast anchors of ships and fix them to Bayas.

Men of Heave-up Boat–100% Muslims

They raise anchors of ships.

Men of Transfer Department–100% Muslims

They transfer ship from one jetty to another which is a very difficult job.

Engine Crew–100% Muslims

They work in engines deep below the sea surface in oppressive heat. They have wonderful power of endurance.

Sir Archibald Hurd, British authority on Merchant Navy, says that their power of endurance is wonderful and they are first class seamen.

British Decorations and Honours for Bengal Seamen

The British Government recognized the War Services of Bengal seamen by conferring British decorations and titles, honours and rewards on Bengal Muslim seamen. Many of them have been decorated with titles of OBE, Khan Bahadur, Khan Sahib, George Cross and other certificates, sanads and rewards. All the recipients are Muslims. Some of them were presented to His Majesty the King Emperor.

How Calcutta Port and Inland and Sea Shipping can function for a day without these Muslims?

How can the port of Calcutta and the inland and coastal and sea shipping function for a day without these Muslims? Please point it out to Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten that everyone of these men is firmly determined to defend the port of Calcutta and prevent it from shipping [sic] out to the control of Hindus. They will fight and die rather than accept the domination of Hindus in Calcutta.

Our Quaid-i-Azam, we stand by you in your fight for the integrity of Bengal and the unity of Pakistan. We assure you that the River Front, the Sea Front, the Dock Front and the Port Front of Calcutta will be your first line of Defence and that the Watermen will alone be able to bring the other parties to knees.
But there is one proviso—the Seamen, the Rivermen, the Portmen, who are all League-minded, should be thoroughly organized under the League and trained for this job.

We attach a note on the different organizations of Seamen, Rivermen, Boatmen, Dockers and Portmen.

We remain,

Yours most sincerely and obediently,

RAGHIB AHSAN
Member, Working Committee, Bengal Provincial Muslim League, Member, All India Muslim League Council,
S.M. USMAN
Ex-Mayor of Calcutta, Secretary, Calcutta Muslim League
S.A. HAMID
Vice-President Calcutta Muslim League,
Member, All India Muslim League Council
SYED MUHIBUR REHMAN
President, Kidderpore Muslim League,
Founder, Indian National Maritime Union
ABDUL AZIZ
Secretary, Kidderpore Muslim League,
Secretary, Indian National Maritime Union
MOHAMMAD YASIN
Secretary, Asansol Subdivisional Muslim League,
President, Bihar Refugees Union of Bengal, Asansol,
Member, Council All India Muslim League

62. Calcutta Should Be a Free City—Jinnah

Letter from H.S. Suhrawardy to Eric Mieville, 31 May 1947

Dear Sir Eric,

I have had an interview with Mr. Jinnah. He asked me if I had seen HE and, may the Lord forgive me, I told him ‘no’ as I did not want him to think HE had seen me. (Please show this to HE). He told me that if HE were to see me tomorrow, I should impress upon him the necessity for ascertaining the wishes of the people on the question of partition by utilizing the electoral roll on the basis of 1941 census. He says this is very important, and he does not know what HE has brought back from London on this point. He says that getting the wishes of the present members of the Legislature would not be fair, as the opinion of the Scheduled Castes will not be expressed—and we must not let the Scheduled Castes down. He seemed to think that we could create sufficient atmosphere to maintain peace after the announcement. I hope the appeal of the leaders, accepting though not agreeing or even deliberating, will be simultaneous with the announcement in the interests of peace. He insists that Calcutta should be a free city, otherwise it will always remain a bone of contention. I have made clear to him my view regarding the Commonwealth, and I have every hope—all in good time. For this reason I am even reconciling myself to partition (if it is inevitable) and if zone A does not come within the Commonwealth. If it does, then, of course, the Congress can have no objection if independent Bengal also comes into the Commonwealth: if it does not and Bengal is independent, I shall have to work hard to get it in. I wonder if I am clear.

Yours sincerely,

H.S. SUHRRAWARDY

63. League’s Preparations to Resist Partition by Violent Means Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Louis Mountbatten, 31 May 1947

New Delhi

My dear Lord Mountbatten,

I am enclosing a copy of an extract from the Daily Report of the Central Intelligence Officer, Bengal, dated 22 May 1947. It appears that the general impression that the League is preparing itself to resist the partition of Bengal and the Punjab, even by resort to violent means, has a great deal more basis than one would be inclined to credit.

Yours sincerely,

Vallabhbhai Patel.

ENCLOSURE

Extract from daily report dated 22 May 1947 of the Central Intelligence Officer, Bengal.

The general opinion among Muslims, however, seems somewhat different. On 18 May 1947 I.A. Mohajer, Salar-e-Suba of the Bengal Muslim National Guards, while addressing a large number of Muslim National Guards at Krishnagar (Nadia) is reported to have said that the Muslims of Bengal would not allow an inch of land to be taken out of Pakistan-Bengal. He concluded that if 17 Muslims could conquer this province, several crores of them could certainly retain it. The Muslim League paper Morning News of 22-5-47 draws attention to Mohajer’s speech.

According to a secret report dated 18-5-47 emanating from the Eastern Command Intelligence Centre, Maulana Akram Khan claims that Mr. Jinnah agreed that ‘partition would be resisted at all costs’ and that Mr. Jinnah had gone over the plans for the Muslims’ struggle in Calcutta and Bengal and had approved of it. This agency further claims that another Muslim Leaguer had said that the League had been perfectly prepared for a violent struggle and that arms of every description had been kept ready and that the League leaders had been doing their best to keep the Muslims quiet until after 2 June 1947 when on a call coming from Mr. Jinnah a big war would start. The League leaders also hoped that if a holy war came the Muslim troops in the Indian Army would answer it. Today’s (22-5-47) papers publish a statement of Mr. Jinnah that the League would fight the partition of the Punjab and Bengal.
Dear Friend,

I have received your letter of 28 May 1947.

We are aware of the danger arising from the activities of some people who are now trying to sabotage the scheme of partition of Bengal. But I do not think that the game will succeed. People in Bengal have seen through the whole game, and it is not likely that except for a few selfish individuals anybody will be taken in by the propaganda that is being carried on in the pompous name of a sovereign Bengal. The League people are now glibly talking of one race, one culture and one language; till yesterday they were swearing by their being a different nation, having a different language and a different culture. Nobody will fall into this trap in Bengal. Anyway, I do not think there is any cause for apprehension.

Yours sincerely,
Vallabhbhai Patel

65. ‘Nationalist Bengal Must Join Centre or Perish’

‘Let not the outer world carelessly imagine that we are crying for a Hindu Bengal to offset a Muslim Bengal. No, we are anxious to be united with the rest of India under a liberal modern Central Government in which sectarian differences will have no influence on politics and the modern progressive spirit—as found in Europe and America—will govern the action of the State. If any province of India is so misguided as to refuse to join our centre, we claim the right to cut ourselves off from it for our own good and also for the ultimate good of these dissenting members.’

Thus observed Sir Jadunath Sarkar, the noted historian and educationist presiding over a largely-attended meeting at Singhee Park, Ballygunj on Sunday forenoon.

The meeting which was organized under the joint auspices of Congress, Hindu Mahasabha, New Bengal Association and All-India Depressed Classes Association reiterated the demand for creation of a new Bengal with Calcutta as the capital, which would remain an integral part of the Indian Union. The proposals for Sovereign Bengal or Free State of Bengal and the reported Bose–Suhrawardy agreement were bitterly condemned by the meeting in a resolution. Speakers including Sj N.C. Chatterjee, Meher Chand Dhiman and others addressed the gathering.

Pleading that an Indian Union would be unconquerable Sir Jadunath in an impassioned appeal said: ‘Let all who love their native land gather under the banner of a strong modern and beneficent Central Government of India irrespective of colour or creed and help to defend, feed, educate and enrich our masses. Let Bengal avoiding all selfish spirit of isolation and loyally serving the Central Government of Hindusthan make itself an example and model to the rest of India. This great land, this holy Bharatbarsha will advance with the Muslim League if the League is wise enough to join us, but in spite of the League if it continues to be led by selfish and blind Fuehrers. Our enemies can make our advance painful and our path blood-stained, but nothing in the world, not even Carlton Club and Clivenden House standing behind our enemies, stop us now.’
Sir Jadunath Sarkar said: We meet when the future destiny of Bengal is being decided. Let us make known to the world outside what the problem of our province really is and how we feel on it. The question is not that a Hindu area should be created in west Bengal because there is a predominantly Muslim area in east Bengal. The question is of deeper significance than a scramble for patronage and power; it vitally affects the future of our race, and unborn generations in Bengal, both Hindus and Muslims, will suffer from a false decision now. Reduced to its simplest form the choice before us is this,—should Bengal form a civilised progressive province of a modern secular State or should it be a part of a medieval dogmatic theocracy in which the entire civil life of the people is subordinated to the exclusive religious code of the dominant sect. Only four days ago Mr Ghazanfar Ali Khan (the League leader) said at Patna that ‘the constitution of the Pakistani State was already embodied in the religious code of Islam’, so, there is no doubt left in any rational mind as to how Pakistan will govern its members. The Quranic law will strictly regulate the policy and measures of this Government, and the modern political wisdom of Europe and America will have no place in it. Which of these two sides should Bengal choose?

UNION WITH REST OF INDIA

Let not the outer world carelessly imagine that we are crying for a Hindu Bengal to offset a Muslim Bengal. No: We are anxious to be united with the rest of India under a liberal modern Central Government in which sectarian differences will have no influence on politics and the modern progressive spirit—as found in Europe and America, will govern the action of the State. In such a State all men will have equal status, with no weightage no reservation, no special privileges; the public service will be thrown open to talent without consideration of caste or creed or family connection. Efficiency of administration cannot be secured and the present rampant corruption in the Government departments cannot be put down unless the best men are selected for posts. Only on such a basis can a true democracy be built and we are all crying for democratic government.

Every province that joins such a progressive federal centre, will make that centre stronger and better able to defend itself and its component parts and give them the best value for the revenue they pay. Therefore our Central Government must be given real power and varied authority; a weak centre, with its hands tied down to two or three general matters, will be impotent for good; it cannot possibly defend such a continent as India; it cannot raise the necessary revenue and maintain order and the transport services in the various provinces without which no State can function in the modern world. Therefore let the world understand that we want first, union with the Central Government of India, (2) secondly, to make our provincial as well as the Central Government secular, progressive and modern in spirit and (3) thirdly, to establish absolute democratic equality among our citizens, in the choice of legislators and public servants.

ISLAMIC THEOCRACY AND MODERN SPIRIT

If any sect objects to such a programme it will be the first to suffer for its folly. Let us take a glaring example. A century ago, when English education was introduced into this country, the Hindus took gladly to it, while the selfish leaders of the Muslim community told their blind followers that if they studied European literature and science, Islam would be in danger. The result is that the Muslims have been thrown by these leaders a century behind the Hindus, intellectually, economically and in political education as distinct from the herd instinct. Look at the status of the Muslim University of Aligarh in the learned opinion of Europe and contrast it with the reputation enjoyed by the Madras University. The Fellowship of the Royal Society of Great Britain is the highest honour in the scientific world, and there have been nearly a dozen Hindus and Parsis elected to this honour. What communal quota have the Indian Muslims got here. The only two Asiatics to win the Nobel Prize have been Hindus; no ‘parity at the centre’ for the Muslims here. Is this a state of things of which any patriotic Muhammadan can feel proud? Should he not wish to remedy it, by joining in the full stream of modern knowledge and modern progress, ignoring the theocratic ideal of primitive Islam, which Mr Ghaznafar Ali still adores.

Look forward, look at the great moving world and not to your small narrow dim religious past, nor to your small narrow comer, by cutting yourself off from the progressive parts of India and the outer world. The whole teaching of modern history has been synthesis or integration of parts, not fragmentation or isolation of limb. The United States of America started with a loose Federation of semi-independent States, but the whole history of that country during 170 years has been a movement towards the greater union of the parts, towards strengthening the hands of the Central Government and extending its functions and control over the various provinces of that Union. The result is that North America is not today a second Balkan cockpit, but the strongest unified Power in the world, a Power, whom even the great Colossus of Russia is afraid to challenge. Should India be now called upon to act contrary to this unmistakable teaching of history? Should the disintegration of our country on the downfall of the Mughal Empire be repeated after the withdrawal of English suzerainty? What patriot can desire it? What sensible man can welcome such a prospect?....

It is a mistake to suppose that Islamic Society is uniform and solidly united. The great rift between the Shias and Sunnis is known to all. But students of Islamic history will tell you that even in the early days of the Caliphs after the Prophet’s death, there sprang up seventy two different sects in Islam, and some of them (like the Aga Khan’s first ancestor) resorted to secret murder of their Muslim opponents. If once fanaticism is let loose, the prospect is not alluring.

DEFENCE OF INDIAN UNION

What about the military defence of India? Can Hindustan, when cut off from West Punjab, the NWFP and Sind, maintain itself by its own armed people? Take it from me that Hindustan can hold its own, though the positive hostility or covert intrigue of the western Pakistan belt may add to the difficulty and costliness of our national defence. In the British Indian army today 23.7 per cent of the officers and 33.8 per cent of the other ranks are Muslims as against 64.1 per cent of officers and 63.2 per cent of the men being Hindus and Sikhs. Besides, there are 37 Gurkha units, not counted in the above. Exclude all the Muslims from this calculation and even then what remains of non-Muslims will be sufficient to defend India. But why should we lose all the Muslim officers and men? Such of them as have their homes in Hindustan will usually be glad to continue in their honourable career in the loyal service of their homeland, without hankering to banish themselves to the hills and deserts of Pakistan....
Chapter 22. Exercising Options: Referendum in North-West Frontier Province and Sylhet

A. NWFP

1. ‘Pathans Have No Grouse against Any Party in India—Faqir of Ipi Issues Poster’

Extracts from a Report from The Tribune, 7 April 1947.

PESHAWAR, April 5—Thousands of posters under the signature of Sultanul Mijahidi, known for all practical purposes to be Faqir of Ipi, have recently been distributed in tribal areas of NWFP...

The declaration says: ‘Of late we have come to know that Congress Party of India has gained strength to such an extent that it can make the British quit the sacred soil of Hindustan and Waziristan, and, therefore, it wants to negotiate terms of mutual interest and welfare of both settled and tribal areas. If that is so we are ready to come to terms with the accredited Ambassador for India because we feel that without such an arrangement no agreement could be really binding. We have been deceived by the cunning British diplomacy in season and out of season and now we cannot afford to fall a prey to any more hypocrisy and cheating.’...

‘We have been constantly crusading against the British Government for maintenance of our religious rights and political as well as economic freedom and whosoever favours our programme on the above lines can befriend us with pleasure. On the other hand we have nothing to do with our ideals. We have no grouse against the ideals and policy of any party in India and hence neither we have joined nor do we intend to join any party. Nevertheless we harbour no ill-will towards any Indian. The real enemy of us all is the British who is responsible for creating suspicion and distrust between the two great people of Hindustan and Waziristan and as such it is our bounden duty to refuse him every assistance in his underhand games.’—United Press.
2. Impending Referendum in NWFP
Letter from Firoz Khan Noon to M.A. Jinnah, 30 April 1947

PESHAWAR,

Dear Mr. Jinnah,

I have spent a week here and addressed 20 meetings and covered about 250 miles outside Peshawar, [including the] districts [of] Kohat, Mardan and Peshawar. There is a great swing over to the League.

You must press for Section 93. There will be a referendum on the Pakistan issue and on such occasions one of the contesting parties cannot be allowed to remain in charge of the elections. There is, of course, the danger that Olaf Caroe may, like Jenkins, become a Ranjit Singh in the NWFP and procrastinate and not hold elections, but try and get the Viceroy committed to holding elections.

If there are new elections in the Punjab, some Sikhs in the Western Punjab may split from Tara Singh on the United Punjab issue.

Yours sincerely,

FIROZ NOON

PS. If Caroe behaves like Jenkins and continues to rule under Section 93, then a movement would develop here against the British which will finish the Congress for ever and put the League at the top.

3. Caroe’s Views on Referendum
Extracts from a Telegram from Louis Mountbatten to H.L. Ismay, 5 May 1947 \textit{IOR}, R/3/1/151, Acc. No. 3819, NAI.

MOST IMMEDIATE
NEW DELHI

No. 987-S. I. Further to my 968-S of 3rd May and 982-S of 4th May. Views of Governor of North-West Frontier Province on proposal for referendum in that Province have now been received. In general he greatly favours plan. He mentions following difficulties, which, however, we both feel can be overcome:

(a) machinery. It would be hard to find enough outside officials without calling on NWFP resources;
(b) modification of law. It might be necessary to promulgate special ordinance.
(c) Result in favour of Pakistan would have to be followed by election which owing to weightage or other reasons might, though improbably, return Congress to power. It would have to be made clear that on the main issue result of referendum was final.

2. In view of this I am strongly in favour of a referendum in the N.W.F.P., organized by m. and run by specially selected officers. I have now sent for Nehru to discuss this at 15.30 today, Monday; I will telegraph again after I have seen him....
4. Consensus amongst Leaders Necessary for Referendum

Extract from a Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Louis Mountbatten, 10 May 1947

Simla

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Thank you for your two letters dated 10th May which I have just received. As suggested by you, I am trying to get a meeting of the Congress Working Committee convened for the 16th or 17th May in Delhi. I have telephoned to Sardar Patel to this effect and I hope he will make the necessary arrangements. Gandhiji and Dr Khan Sahib are also being invited.

2. I am myself anxious that there should be no avoidable delay in coming to decisions and giving effect to them....Apart from the original proposals which were put forward somewhat vaguely, there are now other suggestions in addition which introduce a great deal of complexity to the problems we have to face. Each step acts and reacts on the other and we have to consider carefully what the final outcome might be. I confess that I do not see much light and many things trouble me....

3. I find from one of your letters that you have asked Caroe to tell Dr Khan Sahib that I am in general agreement with the procedure suggested, namely a referendum. Now this is the one thing on which there is very strong opinion among my colleagues not only of the Working Committee but also of Dr Khan Sahib’s Government, and I was specifically asked to inform you of their strong opposition to this. I myself greatly fear that any referendum, before the situation is much clearer and other final decisions have been taken, may lead to grave consequences. In any event such a referendum can only be held with the full concurrence of the Frontier Government. As I have told you, I am in agreement with the idea that the will of the people of the Frontier Province should be consulted before final decisions in regard to the position of the province are taken. But it is very important when this is done and in what context.

4. You will have seen Gandhiji’s reactions and an interview that Sardar Patel gave yesterday. I have no doubt that the former should be given due weight, though in regard to some details it does not fit in with the general Congress viewpoint. Sardar Patel’s interview is a clear expression of the Congress viewpoint.

5. What I fear is that if the new proposals are not generally agreed to and are a marked departure from the position which flowed from the Cabinet Mission’s Scheme, they will result in producing a very great deal of uncertainty in the public mind. This will be unfortunate from every point of view. The Cabinet Mission’s Scheme at least produced some certainty. If it cannot be applied in toto, it might be varied to suit the exigencies of the situation. Another landmark which brought some certainty was the declaration of February 20th. If anything happens to shake that feeling of certainty, there will be complete instability in the country. The new proposals, therefore, should fit in as far as possible, subject to necessary variations, with the position as it has been thus far.

Yours sincerely,

Jawaharlal Nehru
5. No Need for Section 93 or Fresh Elections in NWFP

Telegram from Louis Mountbatten to Jawaharlal Nehru, 10 May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/151, Acc. No. 3819, NAI.

No. 1446(3)

I have read through the amendments which Dr Khan Sahib proposes to the minutes of the meeting which I held with him and his Ministers last week at Peshawar which you handed to me earlier in the week at Delhi. I have also received a copy of these amendments from Caroe.

2. As you know, I am no longer of the view that it is necessary to go into Section 93 in the Frontier Province, or that fresh elections should be held now. I am, therefore, asking Caroe to explain to Dr Khan Sahib that there is now no question of this procedure being adopted; and that instead I had recommended to HMG that there should be, at a suitable date when the partition of India was clearer, a referendum on the electoral roll, which will be conducted by an organization under my control.

3. I will tell Caroe to tell Dr Khan Sahib that you are in general agreement with this procedure. I am sure that it is the fairest and best way of achieving the object, namely of making sure that decision whether the NWFP goes to Pakistan or Hindustan is in accordance with the will of the people.

4. In the circumstances I feel that no detailed discussion of Dr Khan Sahib’s amendments is now required.

MOUNTBATTEN OF BURMA

6. Pathans Demand Independent Sovereign State

Extract from a Report from The Hindustan Times, 14 May 1947.

PESHAWAR, May, 13.—Further clarification of an independent sovereign State of Pathans was made by Qazi Attaullah Khan, Minister for Revenue, N.W.F.P., at the press conference today.

He said: ‘First of all we want to have an independent sovereign State of Pathans and then we will visualize a joint jirga conference of the whole Pathan nation which will ultimately negotiate on equal footing either with Hindustan or Pakistan whichever offers us better terms. But we shall in no case tolerate any domination by Hindustan or Pakistan. Whatever form of constitution the British Government offers we shall negotiate only on equal footings and not as subordinate of the Government of India. We will never agree to sacrifice Pathans’ interest at the altar of Pakistan. When there is no political or moral obligation why should we sell ourselves to Hindustan or Pakistan?’

Replying to a question, Qazi Attaullah said: ‘We are even prepared to negotiate with the so-called Muslim League in the N.W.F.P. and also to sit in group with the Punjab according to the Cabinet Mission’s proposal provided no constitution is forced on us against the wishes of Pathans which reduces them to a subordinate position.’

In reply to another question, he said: ‘For the present we have not made up our mind to join Hindustan or Pakistan and our mind is open for treaty with any party which offers us best terms.’...
7. Struggle for Pathan National Province under Coalition

Extract from a Letter from Olaf Caroe to John Colville, 22 May 1947

CONFIDENTIAL

GOVERNOR’S CAMP, PARACHINAR
No. GH-58

2. The interesting local development in the political field is that my Ministry and Abdul Ghaffar Khan have started propaganda on a theme which I advised them to take up some months ago: that of a Pathan national Province under a coalition if possible, and making its own alliances as may suit it. When I put it to them then they professed what amounted to fury at the mere suggestion. There is a good deal in the theme itself, and the appeal is a far more constructive one than that of Islam in danger. The switch-over has probably come too late, but to my mind it is a strength, and not a weakness, that Pathanistan cannot subsist financially or otherwise on its own legs. The weakness is that the Pathans have hitherto been too divided among themselves to set up a stable State, and where they have ruled they have ruled as conquerors of alien populations. They themselves had always been in a state of anarchy right through history until we came and put them in order. (Afghanistan is not really a Pathan State at all).

8. ‘Congress Has Miserably Failed in Frontier: Idea of Pathanistan—A Stunt’

NEW DELHI, Friday.—‘I am quite confident that if a referendum is held in the Frontier, an overwhelming majority of Pathans will vote in favour of Pakistan and all that the League stands for’, said Mr Mohammad Aslam Mehmand, President of the Peshawar City Muslim League, in an interview to the Orient Press of India, here last night.

He added: All sections of tribal people are in full sympathy with the League movement and with the demand for Pakistan.

‘The tribal people have no liking for the Congress and its supporters. News occasionally appears in papers, of tribal maliks meeting Dr Khan Sahib and Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan and assuring them of their loyalty and co-operation. This is false. In reality, they are not tribal maliks but Congress agents.’

Giving instance to show how the Congress had lost its popularity, he said that in Utmanzai, the home village of the Khan brothers, all Muslims, excepting their close relatives and domestic servants, had burnt their Red Shirt uniforms and joined the League. In Charsadda, the stronghold of the Red Shirt movement, the League was not able to launch a movement till May 21.

As police could not check the movement, the Khan brothers organized the ‘Zalme Pakhtoon’ but as the number of ‘Ghazi Pakhtoon’ was greater, the former could not be very effective.

Congress Admission

The formation of the ‘Zalme Pakhtoon’, Mr Aslam Mehmand said, was clear admission of the fact that the Congress had failed in the Frontier. The Khan brothers were trying all possible means to revive their popularity and that of the Congress. But the movement had not attracted more than a handful of persons and could not frighten the brave Leaguers.
Exercising Options: Referendum in North-West Frontier Province and Sylhet

The ‘Ghazi Pakhtoon’, he said, was organized only to counteract the violent and aggressive activities of the ‘Zalme Pakhtoon’. Its duty was to provide aimed defence. It was not correct to refer to it as the League Army....

He ridiculed the idea of an independent Pathanistan and said that this new Congress stunt could not carry them far. This suggestion was intended to woo the Pathans but they had realized that the advocates of independent Pathanistan were not with the Muslim but with the Congress. If they were really serious in promoting the welfare of the Pathans, they should begin by cutting all connections with the Congress....

9. ‘Do or Die’
M.K. Gandhi’s Talk with Abdul Ghaffar Khan, 31 May 1947

GHAFFAR KHAN: So, Mahatmaji, you will now regard us as Pakistanis?... A terrible situation faces the Frontier Province and Baluchistan. We do not know what to do.

GANDHJI: Have you read what I have been saying during the past two or three days? One who has faith in non-violence should not yield to despair in this manner. You and your Khudai Khidmatgars are going to be tested now. You can say that you do not accept Pakistan and then submit to whatever is inflicted on you. We have, as you know, adopted the motto of ‘do or die’. It does not befit one who professes such a motto to give way to despair. And whatever happens I am going to visit the Frontier Province, for I don't believe in these divisions of the country. I am not going to ask anybody’s permission. If they kill me for my defiance, I will embrace death with a smiling face. That is, if Pakistan comes into existence, I intend to tour it, live there and see what they do to me. This girl will of course be with me, so that we two old men and this girl will tour together. Will that be all right?

GHAFFAR KHAN: I understand. I won’t take any more of your time.

10. Jinnah’s Views on Referendum in NWFP
Letter from Eric Mieville to Louis Mountbatten, c. May 1947
IOR, R/3/1/151, Acc. No. 3819, NAI.

Your Excellency.

I had an unsatisfactory talk with Mr Jinnah this morning. He flatly turned down the two drafts on the grounds that there was no mention that the referendum would be held under your agency and that there was also no mention of an election. I went over the grounds once more on the lines that you took last night but he was unshaken. He said that the people on the Frontier were not particularly intelligent and unless it were made clear that an election would follow the referendum they would not be satisfied. He therefore felt that it would be best for him to issue a statement on his own responsibility, but assured me that he would not do so until he heard further from you. He added that so much of the plan had now leaked in the Congress press and was known to so many people that it was being freely and openly discussed, that he felt you would raise no objection to what he proposed to say. The gist of his statement would be as follows:
'He had reason to believe that Your Excellency had recommended to HMG a referendum in the NWFP. This could only be done by the Viceroy through his own agency and he hoped that HMG would accept the recommendation. If, as a result of the referendum, the people voted in favour of Pakistan, in his judgment elections were inevitable and must be held and would give an opportunity to the people to choose their representatives. A new Ministry would be formed to carry out the verdict given by the people. In these circumstances, he most earnestly appealed to the members of the Muslim League to remain strictly peaceful and not allow the movement to take a communal turn, whatever the provocation might be from the other side. He would not advise them to call off the movement, but he again repeated that they should remain strictly peaceful, and as far as possible not give a case to the other side to use violence or force which he had already denounced in unequivocal terms. They must remember that the All-India Muslim League had only changed its policy as it was bound to pursue according to its constitution strictly constitutional methods, but it had never up to now decided to resort to Direct Action. The resolution made it clear that they would launch the movement as and when necessary. Even if they were forced to resort to such extreme measures it had never been contemplated that they would use violence or force. It was quite obvious that people without arms would be ill-advised if they were to resort to violence and force against the organized power of the Government.'

I then asked him whether under any conditions he would agree to accept the Cabinet Mission Plan. He replied 'Under no conditions whatsoever', and then trotted out the old slogan of accepting a portion of the Sind desert rather than the Plan. I warned him that in all probability the fact that the Cabinet Mission plan had been turned down would probably fall entirely on his shoulders, although I was not in a position to say under what conditions the Congress could accept it. He was unmoved.

I finally mentioned the PUNJAB and told him that I had seen Sikhs and Hindus from that Province who one and all had complained to me that in the 17 districts that were going to him all the rich, arable and fertile land would be his. He laughed and said that that was not his fault! This reinforced my belief that he is quite ready to accept the division of the Punjab in spite of his recent statement to the contrary in the Press.

E. C. MIEVILLE

11. ‘Pathanistan Move Gains Momentum’

Extract from a Report from Dawn, 1 June 1947.

ABBOTTABAD, (By air mail).—The movement for the establishment of a sovereign Pathan Socialist Republic has gained great momentum. This movement which was initiated originally by Nawabzada Allah Nawaz Khan, Speaker of the Frontier Assembly, has received the support, not only of Frontier Ministers and Congress leaders, but also of all the leading tribal chieftains and sardars. This has become more popular in the tribal areas. It is suggested that a plebiscite on this question should be held there, three or four months after the British quit. A suggestion from some influential quarter is that a provincial Socialist State of Frontier and the Tribal Areas should immediately be formed for the transition period under the Faqir of Ipi and an Interim Ministry be constituted forthwith, consisting of all those elements who pin their faith in the new Socialist Republic.
The Khudai Khidmatgar organization should form as a nucleus for the army of this State. This army should also be responsible for the protection of all tribal Passes.

A significant feature of the popularity of this movement is that some prominent League workers of Kohat District have also lent their support to this movement. They further suggest that the present Congress Ministry should give proof of their solicitude for the masses by a radical change of the agrarian laws and abolishing of landlordism....

12. ‘Unity of Islam More Sacred Than Pathanistan: Ghaffar Khan’s Propaganda Exposed’

Peshawar, Sunday.—‘The move to create a separate sovereign State of Pathans—Pathanistan—is another move of Hindus to truncate Pakistan and another attempt on the part of Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan to keep himself supreme in the Frontier Province,’ said Mr Mohd Ashraf Khan, Secretary of the Peshawar City Muslim League, in a Press statement.

Mr Ashraf Khan said: ‘Where the Pathan considers the unity of the Pathans necessary he considers the unity of Islam more essential and sacred. The unity of Pathans will be automatically achieved when all Muslims unite.’

Referring to the present visit to Delhi of Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan and the Muslim League leaders, Khan Abdul Qayyum Khan and Khan Samin Jan Khan, at the same time Mr Mohd Ashraf Khan said: ‘Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan wishes to meet Qaed-e-Azam Jinnah through these Muslim League leaders.

‘The Congress has lost its hold on the Frontier and the Muslim League is the only representative body of Muslims.

‘I am sure that unless Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan joins the Muslim League unconditionally the Qaed-e-Azam will never call a truce.’

Replying to the statement of Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan’s Secretary, Mr Yunas Khan that Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan was not going to see Qaed-e-Azam Jinnah, Mr Ashraf Khan said that this was not the first time that he had issued a baseless and irresponsible statement.—API.

B. Sylhet

1. Bengal’s Future Must Be Decided before Referendum in Sylhet
   Telegram from J.F. Burrows to Louis Mountbatten, 8 May 1947
   Mountbatten Papers, Subject File No. 25, NMML.

IMMEDIATE

SECRET

112-S. Addressed Viceroy repeated Secretary of State and Governor, Assam. Secretary of State’s telegram 5889 from Ismay. I have not seen VCP 42: latest paper I have seen is VCP 38.

2. I do not think possibility of inclusion of Sylhet would materially affect chances of retaining a united Bengal if parties were otherwise willing. I would suggest therefore (if this is not already provided for) that Sylhet should vote only after all voting in Bengal is finished. Sylhet would then have complete picture before taking its own side. As suggested below, Sylhet’s option, if in favour of joining united Bengal or East Bengal, should be subject to agreement from Bengal side. Subject to this I would agree that Sylhet should enjoy option of voting to join either united or separate East Bengal.

3. I would agree that if there is no insuperable objection to the possibility of Sylhet’s being left to form separate administration, transfer of Sylhet from Assam to united or partitioned Bengal should be subject to agreement from Bengal side. I would add that I anticipate no difficulty from Bengal side in including Sylhet.

2. Protest against Inclusion of Sylhet in East Bengal

Letter from P.B. Biswas to Congress and Hindu Mahasabha Leaders, 27 May 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 130, Installment II to IV, NMML.

Sir,

I crave your indulgence for encroaching upon your valuable time but urgency leaves no alternative.

I am much perturbed over the suggestion in the Press that Sylhet would be annexed to Eastern Pakistan. The proposed partition of Bengal and the Punjab means curving out two new provinces out of the existing ones. The same principle does not apply in the case of Sylhet as it cannot constitute a province by itself when taken out of the Surma Valley Division and for the matter of that from Assam. If this is done either on (i) linguistic or (ii) religious basis, then it can be argued with equal force, if not more, on both counts that the whole of Surma Valley (Sylhet with 46/47 per cent Hindus and Cachar a predominantly Hindu district) with other Bengal districts now in Bihar should be ceded to the present province of Bengal, thus making it a Hindu majority, that is, a nationalist majority province, to thwart the reactionary element. If for any reason whatsoever it is not feasible at the moment, I don’t see any reason why a district, when it cannot by itself be a province, should be cut off from one province and annexed to another.

Another point in favour of this argument is that not only Hindus, but also quite a good number of Muslims of Sylhet are not supporters of the Muslim League.

You are better gifted to espouse the cause of Sylhet and I am quite sure you will not fail us.

Thanking you,

Yours faithfully,

P.B. Biswas

May 27th, 1947.
58, Balaram Mazumdar St., Calcutta.
(Home address—
PO and Vill Narpati, (Sylhet).

1. Hon’ble Pandit Jawahar Lal Nehru,
2. Sardar Ballav Bhai Patel,
3. Dr Shyama Prasad Mukherjee.
4. Hon’ble Mr Gopinath Bardoloi
Chapter 23. Minority Groups* and Displaced Populations

1. Recovery of Abducted Women
   Extract from Note of an Interview between Evan Jenkins and Firoz Khan Noon, 24 March 1947
   Malik Firoz Khan Noon saw me at 3 p.m. today. He has just spent a few days in Rawalpindi. Like all the Muslim League leaders, he is very complacent and does not realize the effect of the massacre in the Rawalpindi Division on the opinion of all non-Muslims in the Punjab and of all British officers. As always, he was almost too reasonable and agreed with everything I said. The only specific points he made were as follows:

   (1) He thought that the recovery of non-Muslim women abducted during the riots might be accelerated if an amnesty were given. In Bihar apparently the Premier made a public announcement that if women were returned within a week (or some stated period), it would be assumed that those returning them had been protecting them and had not committed any offence.

   I replied that I was doubtful and would ascertain what the position was in Rawalpindi.

   3. The Malik Sahib has very little importance politically. He is complacent and full of prejudice, and told me stories about alleged excesses by the troops, etc. I pointed out that I had heard different stories about the same incidents, and added that he must not be surprised if the Police and troops were tough on occasions. The Muslim rioters had not been gentle, and if they were roughly handled sometimes, it was not more than they deserved.

   E.M.J.

2. Establishment of Relief Camps
   Extract from a Note by Evan Jenkins on His Interview with Kartar Singh and Jagjit Singh Mann, 24 March 1947
   Giani Kartar Singh and Sardar Jagjit Singh Mann saw me for over an hour this afternoon. The Giani did nearly all the talking.

* The term 'Minority Groups' has been used as indicative of all those groups which were in a demographic minority in parts or the whole of India.
2. He began by handing me the attached paper, which originally contained ten points, but was expanded by him to include fourteen. I deal with these points below seriatim.

(1) What the Giani really wants is that the Wah Camp should be reserved for Attock refugees, that Kala should be reserved for Jhelum refugees, and that a new Camp, preferably near Gujar Khan, should be established for Rawalpindi. He says that the large Gurdwaras in the Punjab and the Patiala, Kapurthala and Faridkot States can between them take from 7,000 to 8,000 persons. He would like a camp at Dhudial. I explained our policy and said that it would be impossible for us to have a lot of small camps. I was going to Rawalpindi tomorrow and would look into the position further.

(2) Sardar Jagjit Singh put the number of abducted women at about 400. The Giani said that there should be a general search not only for women, but for stolen property and arms, and exits from the Punjab should be guarded. I said that all this was in hand, but I would see tomorrow in Rawalpindi what progress had been made.

(3) The Giani said he appreciated that rehabilitation would be a long business. He thought that a large number of the Sikhs could be accommodated near various Gurdwaras and in various small towns.

(11) The SGPC/SA Dal would like to send a party of relief workers to Rawalpindi on 27th or 28th March. The party would include the Giani, Sardar Jagjit Singh and 8 or 10 others. They would travel by lorry and would like an escort from Lahore. They felt that they could do much to help in sorting out the refugees and moving those who are prepared to settle near the Gurdwaras, and other places in other parts of the Punjab. I said I would enquire about this at Rawalpindi and let the Giani know my views on my return. He asked for a letter to be sent care of the SGPC, Amritsar. IG might consider this, and we will discuss this at Rawalpindi.

3. Arrangements for Relief Work

Note by Evan Jenkins about His Interview with Swaran Singh and Kartar Singh, 26 March 1947

Sardar Swaran Singh and Giani Kartar Singh saw me this afternoon at 3.40 p.m. by appointment. Sardar Swaran Singh did most of the talking. The following are the points which concern Mr Henderson.

(1) Refugees are very short of bedding. I said Mr Henderson was procuring blankets in large numbers. Sardar Swaran Singh said one blanket and one durrie (both obtainable from Disposals) would suffice for each person.

(2) Sikh organizations are sending some made-up clothes, but considerable quantities of cloth will be needed, and the Sikhs would like this made available at Government expense. I said that we were going into the clothing problem later when the refugees had been sorted out.

(3) The refugees would prefer to have no ration of rice and to have their whole ration in wheat. Sardar Swaran Singh said that Mr Sachdev was looking into this and that Mr Buch and Mr I.U. Khan would probably visit Rawalpindi shortly with authority to take a final decision. His argument against rice is that it requires plates, and other things, whereas wheat chapattis are easily cooked and consumed in camp conditions.
There are some Sikh relief workers at Kala—probably 100 in all. They will pay for their food, but would like rations issued to them. I said I would refer this to Mr Henderson. I thought that within a few days there would be no work for voluntary workers to do. Sardar Swaran Singh said that in that case the voluntary workers would be withdrawn.

The refugee problem will probably solve itself before long, since most of the refugees are well-to-do. After confidence has been restored and the investigations are well launched, many of them will be ready to go away. I made no comment on this.

There should be certain recognized rehabilitation centres such as Gujar Khan, Sukho, Daultala, where military or police guards should be maintained for some time. Many of the refugees are determined to settle down again in the area, but may wish to concentrate in places with a considerable non-Muslim population. I said that this was in line with what I understood to be the official opinion. DC Rawalpindi was not anxious to force people to go back to their villages, but thought that any who wished to do so should be encouraged. I said that the Army were being very co-operative about helping the civil authorities for some time longer.

I took the opportunity of mentioning Giani Kartar Singh’s proposed mission to Rawalpindi. I said that the local officers had to consider not only the administrative problem of the refugees, but Muslim feeling. Constant visits by leaders did not help while the sorting out of refugees was beginning and investigations were being launched. From this point of view the position would be much clearer in another ten days or so. Also we must remember that punitive action against the offending Muslims was now in hand. The Muslims attributed the communal disturbances largely to statements by Master Tara Singh; some of them were resentful, others apprehensive, and others truculent. We were doing what we possibly could, and it would be fair to leave the local officers to sort matters out. Sardar Swaran Singh said that the Sikhs would accept my advice, and I hope they will do so. Giani Kartar Singh did not raise the question of an escort again, but was rather silent throughout the interview.

2. I took the opportunity of mentioning Giani Kartar Singh’s proposed mission to Rawalpindi. I said that the local officers had to consider not only the administrative problem of the refugees, but Muslim feeling. Constant visits by leaders did not help while the sorting out of refugees was beginning and investigations were being launched. From this point of view the position would be much clearer in another ten days or so. Also we must remember that punitive action against the offending Muslims was now in hand. The Muslims attributed the communal disturbances largely to statements by Master Tara Singh; some of them were resentful, others apprehensive, and others truculent. We were doing what we possibly could, and it would be fair to leave the local officers to sort matters out. Sardar Swaran Singh said that the Sikhs would accept my advice, and I hope they will do so. Giani Kartar Singh did not raise the question of an escort again, but was rather silent throughout the interview.

4. ‘More Valiant to Get Killed Than Kill’

M.K. Gandhi’s Talk with Refugees from Rawalpindi, 4 April 1947

Q. You tell people to discard arms, but in the Punjab the Muslims kill the Hindus at sight. Do you want us to be butchered like sheep?

GANDHIJI: If all the Punjabis were to die to the last man without killing, the Punjab would become immortal. It is more valiant to get killed than to kill. Of course my condition is that even if we are facing death we must not take up arms against them. But you take up arms and when you are defeated you come to me. Of what help can I be to you in these circumstances? If you cared to listen to me, I could restore calm in the Punjab even from here. One thousand lost their lives of course, but not like brave men. I would have liked the sixteen who escaped by hiding to have come into the open and courted death. More is the pity. What a difference it would have made if they had bravely offered themselves as a non-violent, willing sacrifice! Oppose with ahimsa if you can, but go down fighting by all means if you have not the non-violence of the brave. Do not turn cowards.
Towards Freedom: 1947

There was a time when the most casual remark from me was honoured as a command. Such is not the case today. Man after all is mortal. We are born only to die. Death alone is the true friend of man. [Birth and death] are like the two sides of a coin.

How did we react in Bihar? Man's claim to humanity consists in his magnifying his own fault a million times and minimizing others' faults correspondingly. You ought to know that I have been to villages where death reigned supreme. But in spite of it if I feel like it I would certainly go to the Punjab. But now I am doing the same work from here. I believe I have calmed down Bihar to some extent. Naturally it could be only with God's grace, without which nothing happens. Why, I had said to none else than Master Tara Singh that I was the true heir of Guru Govind Singh and not he.... Matters can be mended only if you try to understand this without getting excited.

5. 'League Relief Parties for Riot Areas'

Lahore Monday.—The Punjab Muslim League Committee of Action today heard the report on post-riot conditions obtaining in Amritsar from Mr Abu Saeed Anwar, Editor of the Muslim League weekly, Pakistan, deputed by the Committee to study the situation in Amritsar.

The Committee of Action today also deputed Nawabzada Zulfiqar Ali, Mirza Hadi Ali, Councillors of the Lahore Corporation, to visit Amritsar along with Mr Abu Saeed Anwar tomorrow.

In order to explain relief work for the riot victims a Committee of Action has been formed for the city of Amritsar superseding the Working Committee of the Amritsar City Muslim League. The Committee of Action consists of Sheikh Sadiq Hassan Malik, Ghulam Nabi, Mr Abdullah Khan, Mr Aftab Ahmad, Mr Anwar Saeed, Ustad Ghulam Nabi, Mian Mohammad Amin, Haji Sanaullah and Khalifa Ahmad Din.

Maulana Dadood Ghaznavi, MLA and Chaudhry Abdul Karim, President of the Lahore Civil Lines Muslim League, were today deputed by the Punjab Muslim League Committee of Action to visit Gurgoon and Ludhiana respectively.

Sardar Shaukat Hayat Khan, deputed by the Provincial League to assist and advice local Leaguers in connection with the rehabilitation, commercial and other problems due to recent riot, left for Lahore after four busy days. He visited riots victims of all communities in hospital and all the affected areas and heard Muslim grievances and discussed matters with local authorities and representative of commercial interests.—API

6. Relief Work Should Be Non-communal

Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to Bhimsen Sachar, 14 April 1947

My dear Bhimsenji,

I have received reports from creditable sources that the relief fund that you have started in the Punjab is used for Hindus and Sikhs only and Muslims are specifically excluded. Indeed I was told that the sponsors of the relief fund objected to state in public that the fund was for all. This news has rather upset me and Gandhiji was also put out by it. I am quite clear in my mind that in any kind of relief work no Congressman can discriminate as between different communities. Relief work is humanitarian work and it loses all its virtue if even humanitarianism assumes a communal garb. It may be, of course, that most of the cases demanding relief are Hindu or Sikh. But our declared object must be to give relief wherever it is needed regardless of community, religion or creed. In the past I have refused to associate myself with any sectarian organization or relief fund and I do not wish to do so now.

I hope the news I received was not correct. In any event an open declaration should be made.

Yours sincerely,
Jawaharlal Nehru

7. ‘Harijans Not Safe in “Domain of Pakistan”: Mr P.S. Azad’s View’

Extract from a Report from The Tribune, 20 April 1947.

Lahore April 19.—Mr Prithvi Singh Azad MLA, Member, Constituent Assembly, has issued the following statement in reply to the various statements made by some pro-Muslim League Scheduled Caste leaders:

The Muslims though in a majority in this province have utterly failed to safeguard the lives and properties of the minority communities and the partition of the Punjab has become inevitable. The recent disturbances in Bengal and the Punjab have revealed that the Harijans are not at all safe in the domain of Pakistan if at all it is created in these two provinces. Principally, Harijans stand for a united Punjab but the prevailing circumstances have compelled us to support the demand of the partition of the Punjab which would undoubtedly solve the various interlinked problems of the Hindus, Sikhs and the Harijans. One factor is, however, to be borne in mind and that is that the Harijans are thickly populated in the proposed Eastern zones. Their population is 21.8 per cent of the total populace of the Hindus of the Punjab. In the Ambala and the Jullundar divisions their population is 12,35,673 as compared with the total population of 50,50,286 of the Hindus, namely, 25 per cent or one-fourth of the total Hindu population. In the Ambala and the Jullundar Divisions the population of the Sikhs is 15,62,704 which includes most of the Ramdasia and Mazhabi Sikhs who, for all intents and purposes,...

These facts clearly reveal that in the proposed Eastern zone the Harijans are more in numerical strength than the Sikhs, which also justify the claim of the Harijans in the proposed cabinet of the said zone without which the partition scheme would be all farce and a dumb show. The past experience of all the ages have shown that a non-Harijan minister has very little sympathy for the inner feeling of the Harijan and it becomes incumbent on the originator and supporters of this scheme to reserve a seat in the cabinet of the said zone for the Harijans. We are not at all safe in the Pakistan and the notion of the few Scheduled Castes that the League would support us is all baseless, and is only a tool, to create a gulf in the solidarity of the Harijans. They being ignorant of the hard facts and being under the magic wand of the Muslim League and having tasted the dainty dishes of the League fail to distinguish the real harbingers of equality, liberty and fraternity. In the future political life the sacred and ancient Hindu cult of which we too are the members would guide the destinies of the mother India.

---
8. ‘Bihar Muslims Coming Back: Govt’s Relief Plans’
The Tribune, 23 April 1947.

PATNA, April 22.—The Bihar Government have put into operation a new rehabilitation scheme estimated to cost about Rs 2 lakhs during the next three months to help the repatriation of the Muslim refugees from the towns to their villages.

The scheme is proposed to be put into effect initially at 15 camps in the rural areas of Patna, eight in the Monghyr district and four in Gaya, each with a capacity to accommodate 500 people. The refugees numbering 20,000 who are in the Government relief camps in the towns will be transferred to the rural camp nearest their original villages, pending their final resettlement in their own hearths and homes. A proposal to give them freedom to select the places for their habitation, is also under consideration of the Government.

The town relief camps, once vacated, will be converted into transit camps to house the refugees who are expected to return from Bengal in response to Gandhiji’s appeal. Rural camps are to be housed in school buildings, mosques, and other permanent structures available, as tents will be unsuitable for hot weather. Free rations are to be supplied to the refugees by the Government and will be continued till three weeks after their return to their homes.

A new rehabilitation plan of the Government for expediting house-building programme for the refugees is also engaging the attention of the authorities.

According to the plans, 700 houses are expected to be completed every month. The work in this respect had been greatly hampered because of the obstructions put up by interested quarters in the way of the refugees returning home.

A large number of refugees has been returning from Bengal in response to Gandhiji’s peace efforts but the process has been impeded by Calcutta disturbances. The reports received, however, indicate that hundreds of them will be coming back soon when conditions return to normal.—United Press.

9. ‘Ambedkar Neither Supports Nor Rejects Bengal Partition’
Dawn, 29 April 1947.

Dr B.R. Ambedkar, President, Scheduled Castes’ Federation, in an interview in New Delhi on Sunday said that the Federation had not come to any conclusion on the question of partition of Bengal and the Punjab nor had it any desire to prejudge the issue.

If the Hindus wanted partition, he said, they would have to satisfy the Scheduled Castes on the following points. Firstly, what protection are the Hindus prepared to offer to the Scheduled Castes under the new constitution as against what the Muslim League would be ready to offer?

Secondly, where will the boundary line be drawn?

Thirdly, will there be provision for the exchange of population?

And fourthly, what provision are the Hindus prepared to make for the economic rehabilitation of the Scheduled Castes who, as a result of division, will be left within the Muslim zone and who will be brought over to the Hindu zone as a result of exchange of population?

Unless these points were cleared, Dr Ambedkar added, it would not be possible for the Federation to give a clear lead on the issue of the partition of Bengal and the Punjab.—API
10. Statements Made by Refugees of Tippera and Noakhali

Unstarred Questions in Bengal Legislative Assembly, 30 April 1947

MR AMULYA CHANDRA ADHIKARI: (a) Will the Hon’ble Minister in charge of the Home Department be pleased to state whether it is a fact that one Deputy Magistrate has recorded the statements of refugees of Tippera and Noakhali?

(b) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, will the Hon’ble Minister be pleased to state—

(i) how many of those are of rape;

(ii) how many of those are of murder;

(iii) how many of those are of arson; and

(iv) how many of those are of looting?

(c) Have the Government taken cognisance of the crimes and sent orders to the respective district authorities to take necessary action?

MINISTER in charge of the HOME DEPARTMENT, (the Hon’ble Mr H.S. Suhrawardy):

(a) Noakhali.—No; but four of the statements taken by a Sub-Deputy Collector of Tippera related to Noakhali.

(b) Tippera.—Yes; by a Sub-Deputy Collector.

(c) Police investigation is proceeding. ...

11. Demand for Anglo-Indian Representation in the Pakistan Constituent Assembly

Letter from C.E. Gibbon to M.A. Jinnah, 2 May 1947

CONFIDENTIAL

Dear Mr. Jinnah,

I have read your recent statement calling on the leaders in the Punjab to prepare themselves for ‘a separate Constituent Assembly’ for Pakistan. In that statement, reference is made to the guaranteeing of ‘minority rights’. I am not clear as to whether this embraces ‘minority representation’ in this Assembly, and am naturally perturbed in my mind on this issue.
I am writing to ask you kindly to keep the question of ‘minority representation’ in mind before any scheme is finally devised. I realize that this is a complex matter, but I have no doubt that you will give it your anxious consideration, and devise ways and means whereby my Community will not be forgotten and incorporated in a constituency in which either the Congress Party or the Hindu Mahasabha will have the upper hand.

It has occurred to me that a possible solution would be for you to give Anglo-Indians direct representation, or an allotment of seats from the majority quota. In the latter case, Anglo-Indian representatives could be elected in the same manner as has been done by the majority party in the existing Constituent Assembly.

If you can spare some time to see me, before I leave for Lahore, on the 6th or the 7th May, I shall be grateful, as I have now to shoulder the task of consolidating the Anglo-Indian community in the Western Pakistan area.

With my kind regards,

Yours sincerely,

C.E. GIBBON

12. ‘Bihar Muslims’ Prospects in Sind: Exchange of Property Issue’

_Dawn_, 5 May 1947.

Mr Mohammad Yunus of the Central Relief Committee has sent the following communication to ‘Dawn’:

‘I am constantly receiving a very large number of inquiries about the prospect of the rehabilitation of Bihar Muslims in Sind. I am issuing this statement so that the public may know what the situation is.

Before giving the information, it is necessary to state the background which has led to this desire of the people to go to other provinces. I have always been opposed and am still opposed to any exodus of Bihar Muslims to any other province. I have always done and will do my best to prevent it as far as it lies in my power. Before the carnage it was impossible to imagine that people would leave their hearths and homes. But now I find it difficult to persuade them to stay in their hearths and homes. It is not my desire to induce people to go to other provinces, nor have I any right to guarantee them any safety in this province, as I have not the means to do so. It is for the Bihar Government to guarantee them the necessary safety and for the major community to create the necessary atmosphere, which will induce Bihar Muslims to remain in this province.

Exchange of population, however, under the present circumstances is a desirable thing, but that is only possible when two parties agree; and as a matter of fact some Hindus of Sind have expressed the desire to exchange properties with Muslims of Bihar and some Muslims of Bihar have expressed a similar desire. I appeal to them to send full particulars of their properties to the Secretary, Bihar Relief Committee marked on the top of the envelope “exchange of properties department.” This will be entered in a book which is being maintained for the purpose, and necessary information will be given to those who desire any information on the subject, and possible exchange of properties arranged I strongly urge Muslims of Bihar not to sell their properties cheaply and suffer unnecessary loss.
Warning to Muslims

I wish to warn all Bihar Muslims that they should on no account go to Sind with any hope of obtaining service from the Government. I am opposed to any Bihar Muslim going to Sind and seeking Government employment. It must be remembered that Sind, though in area it is as big a province as Bihar, its population is about one-tenth of the population of Bihar. Therefore the number of services is very few, and even all the Sind Muslims cannot be provided with service in Sind. I may however mention that doctors, compounders, engineers, overseers and sub-overseers are needed there, and qualified men of these professions may go and seek employment, and they may get even Government or District Board employment.

I may however mention that there are various other avenues in which people can profitably employ themselves in Sind. There is scope for Muslim restaurants all over Sind in cities such as Karachi, Hyderabad, Sukkur, Shikarpur, Jacobabad and other places. People may also be usefully employed in carrying on the trades of rice hulling, handloom weaving and other things, with a small capital between five to ten thousand rupees. There is also scope for small Muslim traders who may engage themselves to sell vegetables, grain, cloth and other things. People may also take up the business of carting by running motor trucks, camel trucks, horse trucks and other things, which are all paying concerns. People may also get employment in private concerns provided they are honest and intelligent, but they will have to seek for employment themselves and those who want to go to Sind must keep expenses at least for three months.

There is great dearth of houses towards which Government is helping by requisitioning hats, which people of moderate means can secure on rents ranging from Rs 20 to 50. The Sind Government is also contemplating the construction of a Bihar Colony very close to Karachi where nearly twenty thousand Biharis can be accommodated. This will be practically a well-planned Colony of about 1,000 acres consisting of 1,600 plots of 1/8th of an acre, 400 of 1/4th of an acre, 200 of 1/2 of an acre, and 100 of 1 acre. The 1/8th acre plots will be given to the public for a nominal sum, and all other plots above 1/8th of an acre will be settled at a reasonable price. The amount has not yet been fixed. In 1/8th of acre plots, the Government will build the house on 1/3rd area of the plot and 2/3rds will be open space. The cost of these buildings will be about Rs 3,000 each. 25 per cent of the price will be paid by the applicant for the plot at the time of taking possession and the balance in small instalments, the amount and period of which has not yet been fixed.

Modern Amenities

This city will have all modern amenities of life. There will be two parks, two mosques, a Musafirkhana, a boys’ HE School, a girls’ HE School, a boys’ Madrasa and a girls’ Madrasa, a Hospital, a Dispensary, Telegraph and Post Office and a Police Station. All buildings will have flush system and water pipes laid on throughout with electricity in the Colony. In the plots other than 1/8th of an acre, only 1/4th portion of each plot will be built upon, and the plan will have to be approved and sanctioned by the Government before the building is commenced.

No person will be given more than one plot. Members of the same family or relations may apply for settlement of adjoining plots, but they will not be allowed to amalgamate the plots and separate buildings will have to be built. For agriculture also the Sind Government has decided to give 18 to 24 acres of fertile irrigated lands to Bihar refugees per family on easy terms. The price of these lands will vary from Rs 100 to Rs 250 per acre according to its quality and productivity. Only 10 per cent of this price will be charged at the time of settlement and the balance will have to be paid in 20 equal yearly instalments. This will give the settlers both proprietary and tenancy rights and they will become peasant proprietors of these lands. They will have to pay water rate which includes revenue and rent only for every acre at the rate of Rs 5 to 7 per acre for the quantity of land actually cultivated by them. No other charge will be payable. Government will also help them in building residential houses.

These are the necessary informations which I hope will be of some use to those who desire to go to Sind.'

13. Relief Arrangements for Refugees in Hardwar
Letter from G.B. Pant to Vallabhbhai Patel, 5 May 1947

Lucknow

My dear Sardar Sahib,

I have just arrived here after spending some time with the refugees at Hardwar. Necessary arrangements for relief have been made. We had offered them one of our camps at a distance of about three miles from Hardwar, but they prefer to stay in the town. I think sufficient accommodation is available for the people who are there at present in the dharmshalas and other buildings. So there need not be any difficulty. I have also informed them that if they choose to shift to Dehra Dun, it will be possible to find suitable buildings for them there also. A non-official committee has been formed to look after their needs and comforts and one of our prominent members of the Legislature has kindly undertaken to devote his time and energy mainly to this matter. He will be going to Hardwar tomorrow and from there to Dehra Dun within a week.

Shankar Prasad is willing to take up the responsibilities of the office which is to fall vacant at Ajmer on the 10th. We will be prepared to spare him, though it will not be easy for us to find a suitable successor to take his place. I have discussed the matter with the Chief Secretary and he has not yet been able to suggest any man. However there being no option, we will have to find the best man we can. I am afraid, however, that Shankar Prasad will not be able to take charge for another four to six weeks. The situation is particularly delicate in Meerut district. Besides, this is the season for procurement of foodgrains and Meerut is one of our principal centres.

With kind regards.

Yours sincerely,

G.B. Pant

14. Apprehension among the Hindu Minority in Quetta Letter from Vallabhbhai Patel to Jawaharlal Nehru, 8 May 1947

NEW DELHI

MY DEAR JAWAHARLAL,

A deputation of Hindus and Sikhs from Quetta met me yesterday. I understand that they have seen you also. From what they told me, it appears that about 90 per cent of private property in Quetta belongs to non-Muslims. As a result of recent riots in the Punjab and NWFP, there is a great deal of uneasiness and apprehension prevailing amongst Hindus and Sikhs in Quetta. The position is made worse partly to the character and population round about Quetta and partly to the worse numerical proportion of non-Muslims. It is alleged that most of the Muslims are armed and the non-Muslims have got no arms. As far as I could make out, a great sense of insecurity prevails and there is absolute lack of confidence in local officers in regard to protection of life and property. To make matters worse, a conference of League workers was recently held and was presided over by Chowdhuri Kaliquzzaman. At this Conference, some violent speeches were made—the worst being that of Muslim professor from Lahore.

I feel that something should be done not only to allay panic and instill [sic] a greater sense of security but also to safeguard life and property in Quetta. It is obviously wrong to reserve strong action until events force us to take it, and that too, after the mischief has been done. What is wanted is vigorous and prompt preventive action. I do not know to what extent it would be possible to leave the initiative to local officers. It depends on the set-up and your confidence in their ability to deal with the situation effectively and impartially. I personally feel that the local officers should be warned in time that the responsibility for preserving law and order and ensuring protection of life and property of minorities lies on them and the Central Government will see that no delinquency in this regard is tolerated. They may also be told that vigilance is required at the precautionary and preventive stage as well as after the event, should any unfortunate occurrence take place. A special report may be called about the present situation and the action which the Agent-General proposes to take to create confidence and to prevent disorder.

If you consider it advisable, you can either consult the Viceroy on this subject or show him a copy of this letter. I feel that the matter brooks no delay.

Yours sincerely,
VALLABHBHAI PATEL

15. ‘Bengal Partition Move, a Caste Hindu Attempt to Break Scheduled Caste Solidarity—Mandal’

Calcutta, Monday

Mr J.N. Mandal, Law Member, Government of India, addressing a meeting of Scheduled Castes during the week-end expressed apprehensions at the plight of the Scheduled Castes when the British quit India ‘and Caste-Hindus took up the reins of Government in their own hands.’ The time had come, he said, for the Scheduled Castes to decide what role they would play in the future administration of free India.

The meeting, which was held at Kholapota Bazar in the suburban district of 24-Parganas, passed a resolution opposing the partition of Bengal and demanding separate electorates for the Scheduled Castes.

Mr Mandal said that when both the Congress and the Muslim League were fighting for power, the Scheduled Castes should also try to get their due share of power in the India of tomorrow. He reminded his audience of the ‘atrocities perpetrated by Caste Hindus on Scheduled Castes in different parts of India.’ These were not printed by the ‘Caste Hindu
Towards Freedom: 1947

Press’ and even an enquiry was not held by the Congress Governments in spite of his best efforts in this respect.

Describing the move for partition of Bengal as a Caste Hindu attempt to break the solidarity of the Scheduled Castes, Mr Mandal asked who would save the Scheduled Castes in a mutilated Bengal. How would the Hindu leaders protect east Bengal after partition when they could not protect them now, when Bengal was united? There should be an understanding with the Caste Hindus as to the rights and privileges of Scheduled Castes before the former pressed for a partition of Bengal.

He warned the supporters of the partition move that they would not get peace unless they solved the Scheduled Castes problem in the Province....

16. Ministers Visit Riot-affected Areas in D.I. Khan

Unamended Text of a Report from The Hindustan Times, 19 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 33/11/47, NAI.

HINDUSTAN TIMES

(From our Correspondent)

Peshawar, May 19.—Mr Mehrchand Khanna, Finance Minister, and Khan Mohammed Yahya, Education Minister, Frontier Province, visited the riot-affected areas in Dera Ismail Khan on May 10. I was allowed to accompany them on this tour.

Dera Ismail Khan District, before the present disturbances began, had about 50,000 members of the minority communities forming nearly 14 per cent of its total population—the largest percentage in a province with an average of seven per cent minority population. Nearly half of them lived in Dera Ismail Khan city and the other half was spread over the rural areas. Tank, Kulachi, Paharpur and Paroha were important trading centres with substantial minority population. In Tank alone more than 4,000 minority community members were engaged in various flourishing trades. Hardly a soul had evacuated till the trouble began on April 15. ‘We were living peacefully and there was no communal question till then’, some minority community members pointed out to the ministers.

The last batch of evacuees was brought to Dera Ismail Khan from the surrounding villages under military escort the day we arrived there by plane. Thousands of refugees (women and children included) having lost their all had already left for different parts of India with the hope of starting fresh their lives.

Over 10,000 men, woemen [sic] and children are still living in about half a dozen relief centres located in various temples, guardwaras and schools in the city. They depend on free rations of food and clothing from the Government and other non-official charitable institutions. They are compelled to live under unhygienic and insanitary conditions. In many cases families consisting of over a score were huddled together in a small room which can hardly accommodate even one small family under normal conditions. They cook in the open. Water supply is not adequate. Most of them complained to the Ministers that the supply of rations was inadequate. It is far less than what League prisoners in Frontier jails are being allowed.

The Ministers gave a sympathetic hearing to the evacuees’ complaints and asked the local authorities to do the needful. The help given by local authorities does not go far. A band of selfless workers are doing their bit to relieve their distress. But many more such persons are needed if some sort of order is to be evolved out of the prevailing chaos.
Refugees from different villages waited upon the Ministers and told them their tales of woe. With many their chief concern was their standing crops and their belongings left behind under the custody of the local authorities. While they were full of admiration and praise for the help the military had rendered none of them had the least confidence in the police. The worst tragedy had taken place at Mallana village, about seven miles from Dera Ismail Khan where 54 men, women and children are alleged to have been burnt alive and about half a dozen kidnapped. As far as loss of property is concerned Tank has suffered the most in rural areas. Shops and houses belonging to the Minority community have been reduced to ashes. Thanks to the valiant fight put up by Sardar Assad Jan Khan, a Congress MLA, and his supporters at Kulachi, against tribal raiders, Kulachi has escaped with comparatively minor loss.

One could not help being struck by the courageous outlook of the evacuees. In, most villages they had put up a stiff fight with the help of their peace-loving fellow Muslims against League-cum-official hooligans. They surrendered only after their last cartridge had been fired in self-defence or when the military had arrived to evacuate them. In most cases they know the culprits and are prepared to go back to their villages to identify them before the authorities and rescue their belongings. They are reluctant to quit the villages where they were born and bred up. Even the few remaining inhabitants of Mallan village showed their willingness to return as soon as conditions permitted. They assured Mr Mehrchand Khanna that they were true Pathans.

As we walked through the bazaars of Dera Ismail Khan we noted the complete and total destruction that had taken place there as a result of the arson indulged in by some League processionists in the presence of officials. About a thousand shops had been looted and gutted. Even educational and municipal institutions were not spared. The well-equipped library in Bhrauti College had been reduced to ashes. The major portion of the 4,000 bags of sugar lying in the Town Hall had been destroyed by the fire. Most of the worst cases of arson had occurred near the police stations.

To understand the forces working behind the Dera Ismail Khan tragedy one has to revert to Pandit Jawaharlal’s visit to NWFP in October, 1946. It may be recalled that the friendly reception which Pathans gave him at Jandola where he paid a surprise visit at the instance of Badshah Khan was in sharp contrast to the shows arranged for him at Razmak and Miranshah under the personal supervision of Mr Packman, Resident, Waziristan. The warm reception given to Pandit Nehru was resented by the anti-Congress authorities. Hence a Pakistan conference was soon after organized at Dera Ismail Khan to which several hundred Waziris were imported in Government Lorries. League volunteers armed with spears tried to march through the streets. Thanks to Dr Khan Sahib’s vigilance and precautionary measures taken by the authorities under his pressure the city escaped communal fire.

But the conspiracy to discredit the officers and the tribal people who were responsible for giving Pandit Nehru a befitting welcome did not end there. A tense atmosphere was created at Tank towards the end of December when about half a dozen raids took place in the villages adjoining Tank. The Deputy Leader of the League Party publicly urged his audience at several places to avenge the Bihar wrongs.

Mr Dilawar Khan was at that time acting as the Deputy Commissioner of Dera Ismail Khan. He was suspended on charges of corruption and Dewan Shiv Sharan Lal, Assistant Commissioner, Tank, was appointed in his place. This seems to have further exasperated the reactionary clique. The League championed the cause of Mr Dilawar Khan and so called League agitation in Dera Ismail Khan was designed to avenge this step on the part of the Ministry.
But in spite of all the intrigues and machinations of the League leaders the heart of the Dera Ismail Khan inhabitants remained sound. The League then resorted to the practice of hiring people to carry on the agitation.

The Frontier Governor was however interested in provoking incidents which would strengthen his hands in facilitating his taking over the administration of the province. Before going to Delhi to attend the Governors’ conference on April 15—the very day on which the trouble started in Dera Ismail Khan—he desired a flare-up in some part of the province so that he could raise the issue afresh with the Viceroy that only section 93 rule could save the province from destruction. Because of the strong Khudai Khidmatgar organization Peshawar and Mardan did not offer the League a congenial soil to start their movement and discredit the Ministry. The rift between the Deputy Commissioner and the District staff in Dera Ismail Khan provided the mischievous elements the necessary material to start a communal flare-up.

Those minority community members whom we met did not express resentment against the majority community as such. They gratefully acknowledged the help they had received from many of their majority community neighbours. Many people who had voted for the League came forward to offer the minority communities protection in their hour of need. It was not a question of the Congress and the League, much less a question of Hindus and Muslims. It was a question of the British Raj versus the popularly elected Congress Ministry. They have been made scapegoat because the reactionary elements hoped to use their miserable plight as an argument against the Ministry and in favour of the Governor’s rule. Most of them clearly realize this.

The Dera Ismail Khan tragedy has exposed the imperialist game in all its nakedness. The hidden hand behind the Noakhali, Bihar and Western Punjab riots could perhaps be perceived only dimly. But it is most clearly and unmistakably visible in the case of Dera Ismail Khan disturbances. Most persons in Dera Ismail Khan knew that the Resident of Waziristan, the Superintendent of Police, Dera Ismail Khan, and the Assistant Commissioner, Tank, worked hand in glove with the Governor, Sir Olaf Caroe. Many representations made to Lady Mountbatten during her visit here contained clear allegations against these officials.

The Pathans of the NWFP have reached a stage from where they have to forge their destiny through their own organized strength and not depend upon Whitehall or viceregal Lodge to do justice. The demand for an independent sovereign State for the Pushtu-speaking people is born out of this conviction. It is meant to defeat all the clever arguments and the insurmountable hurdles which the reactionary elements both British and Indian, are trying to put in the way of the independence of the Pathans. The new youth organization Zulme Pakhtoon, represents the will of the Pathan youth to achieve their ideal or perish in the cause.

To thousands who have lost their all in life, it is of the last consequence whether the Deputy Commissioner is to blame or the Superintendent of Police. It is an established fact that not only the forces of law and order in the district looked on with indifference while this all-consuming fire was raging throughout the district, but they actually dipped their fingers in the blood of the innocent. They are reported to have provided guns and cartridges to the goondas. They are also reported to have participated in the loot and even today are alleged to be helping themselves to the property which the evacuees have left under their custody when they fled for safety.

1 The italicized portion in this document was censored.
17. Refugee Problems Surfacing in United Provinces
Letter from Jawaharlal Nehru to G.B. Pant, 22 May 1947

Mussoorie

My dear Pantji,

I am here for just four days and am returning to Delhi on Sunday next. On my way down I shall spend a few hours in Dehra Dun and visit the Indian Military Academy, St. Dunstan’s, and meet some Congress colleagues.

I am rather worried about the refugee situation that is developing in this province. I have no doubt you are doing all that is necessary in regard to it. The main problem is, of course, that of Hardwar. A minor problem is that of Dehra Dun where the richer people have gathered and are throwing about their money in buying up houses, shops and other things, and generally upsetting everything. There is a growing feeling against them and I fear we might have a regular UP versus Punjab sentiment which would be unfortunate.

You will remember my mentioning to you the desirability of placing one of the war camps near Dehra Dun at the disposal of these refugees for the present at least. You said that this would require the permission of the Defence Department. I am sure this permission will be obtainable. This seems a quick way of dealing with the situation and canalizing it. I hope you will look into this matter.

I expect to meet you in Delhi at the time of the Working Committee meeting. Gandhiji is due to arrive there on the 26th. Meanwhile disgraceful things are happening in Lahore. We have arrived at a crisis when there must be final decisions and final authorities to deal with every situation that arises.

Yours affectionately,

Jawaharlal

18. Problems Created by Influx of Refugees
Unamended\textsuperscript{1} Text of an Indian News Agency Press Advice, 22 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 33/11/47, NAT.

INDIAN NEWS AGENCY TELEGRAMS
FOR PRESS ADVICE

Lucknow

Mr Mohan Lal Saxena, MLA (Central) in a statement says: ‘The tragic happenings in NWFP and the Punjab \textit{entailing self-immolation by scores of women and children besides those who have been killed, burnt or outraged and forcibly converted} have compelled Hindus and Sikhs of these provinces to leave their home towns and villages to seek refuge in other places. Besides about twenty thousand in Hardwar and ten thousand in Dehradun district there are about ten thousand refugees in other districts of UP. Most of the refugees are well to do and do not as yet require any pecuniary assistance. Efforts are undoubtedly being made to help these unfortunate brethren of ours both by individuals and public bodies. But the problem created by the influx of such large numbers of men and women can alone be tackled by the Government with its large resources and organization.
‘I am sure the Congress Government at the centre will have to take the whole question in its own hand and to arrange it on a planned and all India basis.

What the people of these provinces expect of the provincial government is as follows: Firstly, it should not fight shy of coming to the help of these unfortunate men and women who had to run away from their own provinces for want of protection to their life and honour, because they happen to be Hindus and Sikhs. Secondly, government should take such steps as were taken for helping refugees from Burma during the war. Besides special officers at Hardwar and Dehradun there should be a central office at the headquarters of the government whose function should be to collect information from all districts regarding the refugees.

It should also publish periodical bulletins giving information regarding the refugees as well as instructions for their benefit and guidance. The District Magistrate should also be instructed to receive and forward declarations from the refugees regarding their property and other things.

Thirdly there are a number of war prisoners camps in Dehradun and other districts which should be acquired from the Government of India and should be made available for housing the refugees after suitable additions and alterations.’

Mr Saxena suggests that women and children should be evacuated from danger zones to places of safety where arrangements should be made not only for their board and lodging but also for their education. This work should be undertaken by various provincial governments and if necessary in cooperation with the government of neighbouring states and provinces or even the central government.—API.

1. The italicised portion in this document was censored.

19. Rehabilitation Work by Hindu Mahasabha

Extracts from the Report by Secretary of Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha, 26 May 1947
S.P. Mookerjee Papers, Subject File No. 32, First Installment, NMML.

Visited on the 1st May, 1947
Name of the Centre—Karpara Centre
Address—PO Karpara, PS Ramganj, Dt. Noakhali
In-charge: Babu Surendra Kumar Das up to April.
Opened on February, 1947
In-charge (Present) Babu Anukul Chakraverty
Date of Reconstitution—8-5-47

ACTIVITIES

I. Agriculture

6 bullocks were purchased with Hindu Mahasabha money (Rs 925). Those are in custody of the volunteers and the Officer-in-charge of the Centre. About 4 (four) kanis of land were cultivated, (bullocks being purchased towards the close of the season). Three servants, one to keep the bullocks and two to plough the land, have been appointed. Their monthly wages are Rs 6 plus food and Rs 32-8-0. each of the ploughmen respectively. Cultivation is continuing and more land will be cultivated. Money raised from the owners of the land for cultivation—Rs (...text missing)
Note: There was agricultural boycott, the Muslim cultivators refusing to plough the land of the Hindus. So bullocks were purchased by the Hindu Mahasabha. The Muslims are now cultivating the land of the Hindus.

Excepting the land of Rajendra Babu (about one kani which lies uncultivated, the owner of the land taking no interest whatsoever and the land being left in case of Sailesh Babu, a communist living in the house of Rajendra Babu) all lands belonging to the Hindus of this locality have been cultivated. ...

IV. Defence

No organization of defence worth the name has yet been made. Village Defence Party should be formed.

V. Rehabilitation

About 50 per cent of the evacuees have returned for rehabilitation. More are expected to come soon. ...

Decision

1. 5 Local Volunteers will get Rs 15 per month without food.
2. Medical Unit should be reopened.
3. Appointment of Babu Anukul Chandra Chakraverty as Hony. Secretary and Officer-in-charge of the Centre is confirmed.
4. For the Training and Organization of Volunteers, the service of the INA, Punjabi Sikh how [sic] staying at Karpara should be secured and if necessary an allowance for tiffin not exceeding Rs 15 per month may be paid. And the result of his work should be reported to the District and the Provincial Office fortnightly.
5. Appointment of Manoranjan Bhopi for keeping the bullocks at Rs 8 per month and food with effect from the 15th May, 1947 confirmed.
6. Appointment of two ploughmen on Rs 32/8 per month without food for cultivation is confirmed on condition that no other day labourers will be appointed for weeding purposes....

Makhan Lal Biswas
Secretary
Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha

Visited on 16th and 17th May 47
Borali Relief Camp
PO Faridganj (Chandpur)
Camp Opened on 25-12-1945
Officer-in-charge: Swami Bhaktananda

...Activities: At present they are supervising cultivation. Formerly they were helping the Sangathan work and impeding physical training to the younger section of the area....

Rehabilitation:

In the area direct under Borali Camp consisting 15 villages out of the local Hindu population 4113, 2647 repatriated. Most of the repatriated people belong to cultivators and labour class.
Rich people are not coming back, but they are coming occasionally to supervise their properties from the neighbouring villages where they took shelter....

Social Service Undertaken: Officer-in-charge organized 10 to 12 meetings and Pantibhojan (Class denior) was also arranged. Hindus belonging to all sections joined the Pantibhojan. 6 widow marriages were performed. Cloth Sankha Sindur were supplied from the Relief Centre. Small amounts were also spent for each marriage. ...

Visited on the 17th May 47
Name of the Centre—Gupti Centre
Opened on—11th January 1947
Name of the O.C.—Ramesh Chandra Sengupta
Vill. Gupti, PO Sinhergaon. Tippera
Tele: Ramganj Dist Noakhali.

...Rehabilitation:
Out of the total population of 10,175 of the 23 villages under this Centre 8650 people have come back and living in the villages. Thirty families lost 560 houses by arson, out of that only 111 houses have been built with burnt sheets, thatches and other things. But no house is really habitable in the monsoon.

The villages Khajuria and Hamchapur have not yet been rehabilitated due to terror and constant disturbances. Number of Baris burnt in different villages are as follows:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Villages</th>
<th>Baris</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>Khajuria</td>
<td>8</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Gupti</td>
<td>3</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Baichatari</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Mandatali</td>
<td>11</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Safalipar</td>
<td>10</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Dishua</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Noagaon</td>
<td>6</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Raghavpur</td>
<td>1</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

The O.C. prays that the Mahasabha grants for house construction should be given to most deserving cases.

O.C. is advised to prepare a list which will be placed before the Relief Committee....

REHABILITATION

There are 7 villages under this Relief Center

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>No.</th>
<th>Village</th>
<th>Rehabilitated</th>
<th>Details</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>(1)</td>
<td>Paikpara</td>
<td>968 out of 2070</td>
<td>3204</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(2)</td>
<td>Karuilali</td>
<td>490 out of 917</td>
<td>6337</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(3)</td>
<td>Jayasree</td>
<td>155 out of 239</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(4)</td>
<td>Asta</td>
<td>617 out of 1091</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(5)</td>
<td>Bholal</td>
<td>278 out of 4024</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(6)</td>
<td>Saisanga</td>
<td>249 out of 524</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>(7)</td>
<td>Soladanga</td>
<td>447 out of 577</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

In these villages about 50 per cent of the villagers who left the village have returned with their families. 360 New huts have been already constructed. ...
Mahasabha Organization

A Branch Hindu Mahasabha under the name and style Paikpara Hindu Mahasabha was opened about a month ago. It comprises 7 villages, 543 members enrolled. Sj Ananga Mohon Majumder has been elected as President and Sj Nakul Chandra Chowdhury as Secretary. Working Committee formed with 12 members. Sub-divisional Quota and Provincial Quota have been paid to Sj Haradhan Chakraverty. It is reported that the Hindus of this locality are very much eager to join Hindu Mahasabha. It is expected within a month the number will rise up to 1000.

Makhanlal Biswas
Secretary
Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha

Visited on the 16-5-1947
Name of the Centre: Narayanpur Hindu Mahasava Camp.
Date of opening the centre: 1.3.47
Officer-in-charge: Babu Binayandre Guha (Dattapara)

...Defence

About 100 able bodied young men are ready to undertake training under Hindusthan National Guards. They want a trainer from Calcutta for the purpose. At present there is no activity of Defence Organization for want of a trainer.

The young people are interested in sports they want a volley ball.

There is one Police Camp at Paikpara. 9 Constables under one Habildar are staying in the Camp. They are all Hindu. The presence of the Police has created sense of security in the area.

Social Activities

Pankti bhojan, on the Saraswati Puja Day has created tremendous effect among the Hindus of all section. Free mixing and mutual sympathy have been noticed among them.

Requirements

Account submitted up to the 15th of May. The money raised by the centre has covered all expenses made up to that date.

They want Rs 100 for the pared [sic] from the 16th of May.
2 Torches for volunteers, one umbrella are also required.

About 306 families have come back and constructed their houses. They expect a grant from Hindu Mahasabha also as the money which they received from the Government is inadequate for building a complete hut. Officer-in-charge suggests that the artisans and cultivators who have come back should be given grants from Hindu Mahasabha. He has been advised to submit a list of such deserving families, which will be considered by the Provincial Office at Relief Committee Meeting.

Road Construction in Paikpara Village by Hindu Mahasabha

Hindu Mahasabha in co-operation with Congress has taken up Road Construction in Paikpara village. Two roads have already been constructed....
A meeting of the Governing Body of the Scheduled Castes Christians Federation was held on 25 May 1947 at Guntur, which passed the following minutes to be submitted to the Government of India.

1. Voted to bring home to the mind of His Majesty’s Government that numerous cases of anarchy, arson and bloodshed have been taking place in many parts of India ever since the declaration of their transferring power to Indian hands (United India) and their quitting India for good is causing in us great dread and dismay; as such our hearts fail us for fear since we know that more dreadful and dolorous events shall surely befall our Motherland as a matter of course after the English left India. The English though [they] came to India first for commercial gains have been appointed as God’s custodians to keep her safe from invasions, pillage and plunder and also from internal quarrels and flare-ups, which duties have honestly been accomplished by them until recently. But now they could not wash their hands off from the said guilts as much as the Almighty is still holding them responsible for the safety and protection of India, who knew pretty well that the political leaders who demanded the transfer of power from the English on the pretence of the so-called ‘Freedom from British Imperialism’ could neither effect an amicable agreement among themselves nor stop the people whom they represent from communal strifes. Seeing our inability to protect our Motherland from foreign invasions and internal chaos of distress we should rather lament over our want of unity and brotherly fellowship among us and agitate for the English remaining in India in order to work along with them for our peace and tranquillity, diverting our attention for the attainment of real freedom from British Imperialism (not chaos), which is certainly possible with the present British Government as they are showing their readiness to part with all.

2. In the face of adverse conditions of castes, creeds, kindreds, babel of tongues and races, very peculiar to India alone, and in view of the indubitable fact that her people have been divided multifariously never to be fused into a united nation again to carry on her own Government independently without the aid of any foreign nation such as that of the British, it is resolved that the British Government be requested through H.E. the Viceroy to revise their decision of transfer of power either to a united India or divided India into that of granting us Dominion Status keeping our country in the British Commonwealth of Nations. This request is being made not because that we are unpatriotic or owing to lack of love on our part towards our Motherland but because of the fact that we are as patriotic, if not, more patriotic than, any community in India and want to sing the glorious patriotic song in the presence of the English youths.

‘Rule Indicus (pet name for India), Indicus rules the waves, Indians never shall be slaves,’ instead of ‘Rule Britannia, rule the waves,
Britains [sic for Britons] never will be slaves.’
But awful terrorism, dolorous destruction [sic] of a pandemonium (unlike eternal peace and brotherly fellowship of Heaven) now prevailing in many parts of India, hurry us back to dreadful despair and once more we are forced to agitate for the English remaining in India for their diverting [sic] the said dire consequences.

3. Resolved to note with regret, and remark to say, that the action of the present British Government who are directing their dramatic attention and yielding to the demands of the two major parties, the Congress high caste Hindus and the Muslim League, at the express expense of Scheduled Castes’ (Christians and others) safety and protection on the pretence of their being minority (but becomes a big majority when compared with the English nation), is highly unjust. If our case is put before a big world court (or better still a court of Heaven) it may be argued that when Germans being a majority nation invaded Poland and other minority nations, England declared war and subdued them. But they are taking a reverse course by enslaving us, the minorities, eternally to the wishes of the two majorities simply because God was with them then and granted them glorious victories over the most powerful nations, that is, Germany and Japan. Perhaps He is not with them now. Therefore, they have made themselves ready to yield to any weak power such as Indian Congress etc. in which case we also make ourselves ready to look up to the Almighty for our protection and safety.

4. The recent decision of the British Cabinet that they are willing to divide India into two big parts (one) Hindustan for the Congress and (two) Pakistan for the Muslims, makes us to note that HM Government pays little or no attention towards the cause of our Scheduled Castes (Christians and others) who being too poor and illiterate could offer now no big name or fame (though they volunteered and fought His Majesty’s recent and last European wars but the Congress impeded them), nor could they make the world at large know their unmiserable [sic] condition nor the real state of other people of this land but whose (Scheduled Castes) cause has been taken up by one who accomplished great and marvellous things in recent years in bringing to nought the power of Nazism which shook the very foundations of not only the European and other kingdoms but also the British throne and her Empire, namely, Mr Winston Churchill who perhaps admonished by the word of God, expecting no such name or fame but hoping for a reward and a name from an unseen source (Almighty), chose the base and small things (Scheduled Castes) of the world to serve, depicted of them with clear-cut and astounding words, recalling past British pledges regarding their protection by the British Government, produced no useful results before the present British Government. We therefore appeal to them to make good the past British pledges and grant us security, safety and protection.

5. In view of the unchangeable peculiar conditions inherent among the people of India from times immemorial, it is resolved to suggest to the British Government and to HE the Viceroy to grant to India the Dominion Status with a changed plan of Democratic Government while keeping the English who, with all their so-called Imperialism, rendered most meritorious services to our people in making our country from the Himalayas down to Cape Comorin as one big Indian Empire and giving peace and tranquillity which was either fully or partially absent in other ages at the helm of steering [affairs], in order to protect our people from foreign invasion, pillage and plunder and to keep her out of internal strifes has all these years been [sic]. Owing to the above said peculiarities no attention should be paid to the counting of majorities or minorities but the power of administration should be divided into three equal shares and assigned one to the Congress Hindus, one to the Muslim League and the third to the Scheduled Castes (Christians and other minorities). This ratio is suggested to be observed by the Central Government all round, the Provincial Governments to the Village Panchayat Boards. In which case no one needs to clamour for Pakistan or Hindustan or any other stan. All leaders who really love our bruised mother India will surely accept this plan and help the British Government and HE the Viceroy to avert all dire consequences from befalling our country. If, on the other hand, the division of India is inevitable, the country should be divided among the three great religions, namely, (1) Hindus (Congress), (2) Muslims and (3) Christians comprising all Scheduled Castes whether Christian or non-Christian and other minorities. This Christianstan should be kept in the British Commonwealth of Nations having Dominion Status. As has been stated by Mr Gandhi that Congress in every Province has become a strong organization of selfish power-seekers and job-hunters, therefore it can be stated that no good Government can be expected of them.

G. ABRAHAM
President,
The Guntur District Scheduled Castes and Christians’ Federation (Regd.)

Copy to
1. Mr Winston Churchill through HE The Viceroy of India,
2. HE The Viceroy of India
3. Hon’ble Mr Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Vice-President, Interim Government
4. Mr M.A. Jinnah, President, All India Muslim League
Chapter 24. Volunteer Organizations

1. Need for a Volunteer Campaign to Counter League Propaganda

Letter from Khan Bahadur Saadullah to Vallabhbhai Patel, 29 March 1947

6 Commissioner Road,
Peshawar

Respected Sardar Sahib,

I hope Dr Khan Sahib has acquainted you with the latest situation over here. As a whole, barring Hazara district, it is not so bad. The Mullah of Manki was arrested yesterday and thank God that it went off without any incident. However, the situation is tense and we have to mobilize our resources to counteract League propaganda. In spite of the communal frenzy which the League leaders have created, the mass of the people in the rural areas are with us. At present we have 10,000 Red Shirts in Peshawar city. We have also Red Shirts in Mardan, Kohat and Bannu towns. We intend to launch a great campaign against reactionary forces. As you are aware, all this requires a lot of money which is not possible for us to raise here though we are trying our best. In this critical time we need your help more than at any time in the history of the province. Our opponents, that is, the League organization, have enormous funds at their disposal which they spend like water. Our cause is just and it appeals to the heart and head of the people.

Drafting large numbers of volunteers to the city means expenditure. It will be absolutely necessary to keep these volunteers at least for a couple of months for which we require several lakhs of rupees. The exact amount could not be estimated at this stage; we shall be revising our policy and tactics according to the circumstances, but roughly I feel that we shall need about three lakhs of rupees, which may be sent to us [in] 50,000 instalments at an interval of 10 days. I am writing this letter in the presence of Shri Mehrchand Khanna. You had given him a sum of Rs 50,000 for Hazara relief. The whole of it, with your approval on the telephone, has been diverted to meet the present needs.

It is not possible to tap the Frontier Hindus and Sikhs at this juncture. In the first instance they have suffered heavily through loss of life and destruction of property. A large number have already left the province and others are in the course of transit. Business is at a standstill. I need not repeat once again that we are passing through a period of crisis never known in the history of the province.

Sofia sends her respects to you and Maniben.

With kind regards,

Affectionately yours,

Saadullah
2. Report from NWFP

Extracts from the Fortnightly Report on NWFP for Second Half of March 1947, 2 April 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

...5. The following appreciation is added as an appendix as desired by the Government of India, Home Department in their demi-official letter no. 28/5'46-Poll. (I), dated the 12th December, 1946:

Redshirts.—Small parties of Redshirts continue to attend Congress and Jamiat-ul-Ulema meetings during the period under review marched in processions, and carried Congress flags. The Kamalzai bye-election at Mardan called forth the largest gatherings of redshirt volunteers and during a procession which was held prior to the election, it is estimated, that about 2,100 Redshirt volunteers were present in the procession. During the actual polling, Redshirt volunteers were present near the polling booths in large numbers, but their conduct was peaceful and they cooperated with the district authorities.

On 18th February, at a Muslim League meeting held at Latambar, Kohat District, two ex-Redshirts publicly announced that they had joined the Muslim League, and one then proceeded to burn his red uniform in front of those present.

The estimated number of active members of the Redshirt organization in the Frontier Province is 8,000.

Muslim National Guard.—Muslim National Guards have continued to attend Muslim League meetings, to march in processions and to hold parades, until the middle of February when orders under section 144 Cr. P.C. were announced, first in Mardan, and later in Peshawar City and Cantonments, prohibiting assemblages of more than five persons. The volunteers, as usual, wore their green uniform with badges of rank, carried spears or lathis, and Muslim League flags.

The bye-election in the Kamalzai Constituency attracted a large number of Muslim National Guards from various villages in Peshawar and Mardan Districts, who assisted their supporters at the polling booths. Their behaviour, was, on the whole, peaceful.

A large Muslim League meeting was held on 21st February in Peshawar City, which was attended by about 800 Muslim National Guards, some of whom carried spears and sticks. After the meeting a procession was formed which moved to the house of the Premier of the North-West Frontier Province in Peshawar Cantonments, despite the attempts of the police to disperse them. On arrival at the Premier’s house, the processionists threw brickbats at the house, damaging window panes, a car, and the contents of the Premier’s office.

In the middle of February, the Muslim League started a civil disobedience movement in this province in Mardan and Peshawar, from whence it spread to all other districts. The movement took the shape of breaking orders issued under section 144 CrPC, picketing of courts, and in Bannu, the picketing of liquor shops. Muslim National Guards, often wearing uniform, were responsible for these attempts to break the law. Their picketing was, on the whole, peaceful, but on occasions, they forced their way into courts and occupied the magistrates’ chairs, and hoisted Muslim League flags on buildings.

In Hazara District, however, the volunteers have interfered with trains on the Havelian—Taxila line by standing or lying on the railway line, and by pulling the alarm chord. A favourite slogan on occasions has been ‘Khun Se Lenge Pakistan’ (We will achieve Pakistan by shedding blood).

The movement appears to be gathering force and popularity, despite the arrests of some of the leading Muslim National Guards. If the present agitation against the Congress Government in the North-West Frontier Province continues on its existing scale, it obviously has dangerous possibilities, since the large demonstrations which have been, or may be, organized may easily lead to a clash with the authorities, as occurred on 10th March near the Legislative Assembly Hall at Peshawar. On this occasion, the volunteers became unruly and refused to obey directions to disperse, or not to approach the Assembly Hall, with the result that steps had to be taken to disperse them by force.

The estimated strength of Muslim National Guards in the Frontier Province is 5,000.

Khaksars.—A few Khaksar volunteers continued their routine parades in Peshawar and Kohat during the period, and held rallies and route marches. The volunteers wore uniform, and Arab head-dress, and carried burnished spades.

This organization has not acted in any way during the month which might result in an actual breach of the peace, but at the same time its past history, and the rigid discipline, render it a dangerous weapon if unscrupulously used.

The estimated strength of Khaksar volunteers in the Frontier Province is 1,200.

Ahrars.—A few small parties of Ahrar volunteers held spasmodic parades in Peshawar City during the month, wearing uniform and carrying ornamental axes. Ahrar volunteers are not sufficiently well organized, or numerous, to be an immediate danger to public order, but their habit of carrying axes while parading or marching is a dangerous one.

The estimated strength of active Ahrar volunteers in the Frontier Province is 200.

RSS Sangh.—Members of this Hindu organization continued to hold their usual rallies at various towns throughout the province, during the period under report. In Bannu, the volunteers carried spears. After the 24th February, Peshawar City and Cantonments volunteers stopped holding their exercises in public, owing to the promulgation of orders under section 144 CrPC, though they continued them in private.

The RSS Sangh organization sets out to develop the martial qualities in the Hindu race, but in view of the fact that Hindus are in a minority in this province, it would seem that the emphasis laid on physical training, is more of a defensive nature, than any immediate threat to public safety. The activities of the Sangh, however, are looked on with suspicion by the Muslim League.

The estimated strength of RSS Sangh volunteers in the Frontier Province is 2,000.

A few volunteers of the Bajrang Sewak Akhara, Mahabir Dal, Ranjit Dal, Arya Samaj and Akali Dal also held meetings during the month, but their influence is not sufficiently strong to merit notice....
3. Report from Bombay Province
   Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bombay for Second Half of March 1947, 3 April 1947
   Home Poll (I), File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

...Note showing the development of Volunteer Organizations in Bombay Province

(1) Rashtra Seva Dal
   There has been a marked increase in the membership. Seven new branches have also been opened. The strength of these branches varies from 20 to 40.
   Since the recent rally at Satara, the organization is gaining popularity in that District. Most of the political workers of the district have declared that the personnel of the future Indian Army will be drawn from this Dal. At present the organization is not interfering with public peace in the district but it being a militant body of young men, a tendency to take the law in hand might develop and it may prove dangerous eventually.
   Two training classes have been opened at Ahmedabad for one month and another at Nasik. The latter is for Dal workers from the Hyderabad State.
   At Surat, about 20 volunteers have been working in the Municipal Fire Brigade since March 11th, as the Municipal workers are on strike.
   About 50 volunteers of the Dal attended the ‘Shahid Bhagat Singh Day’ meeting held in Bombay City and collected funds.

(2) Rashtra Swayam Sewak Sangh
   There has been a general increase in the membership which may be attributed to the communal situation in the country. Eleven new branches have also been opened.
   With the object of holding discussions with volunteers from different places regarding the working of the Sangh, a rally of 250 volunteers from East Khandesh, West Khandesh and Nasik Districts was held at Chalisgaon.
   At three places in the Thana District night rounds were performed by the volunteers and in Poona City about 1,000 volunteers took part in a moonlight march.
   At two places in Greater Bombay ‘Gudhi Padva’ was celebrated. At one of the places about 1,000 volunteers gave demonstrations in drill, lezim, physical exercises, and other things before an audience of about 4,000.

(3) Khaksar Volunteer Corps
   This organization is inactive, except at Poona, where an officers’ camp was held of about 111 Khaksars from different districts. The programme included flag salutation, prayers, lessons in discipline, and others. This was followed by a route march of about 55 Khaksars in uniform. Two Khaksar leaders from Bombay addressed the camp followers on the importance of prayers, pure life, service to the masses and Hindu–Muslim unity. They also exhorted the Khaksars to sacrifice their lives for the country’s freedom and indirectly criticized the obstructionist policy of the Muslim League.
   Four Khaksars were arrested in Bombay City for carrying ‘Belchas’ (spades) but were released later.

(4) Muslim National Guards
   Six new branches have been opened.
There is a considerable decrease in the membership at Belgaum due to the abolition of some of the branches temporarily opened on account of ‘Bara Vafat’.

The Guards performed night rounds at three places in Thana District.

The Bombay Provincial Muslim League Committee had decided to send ten batches of eleven Guards each to the Punjab to participate in the civil disobedience movement and had sanctioned a grant of Rs 7,000 for the purpose, but as the movement was called off in the meanwhile the decision was not put into effect.

The Guards took part in the celebration of the ‘Pakistan Day’.

(5) Lok Sena
About 200 volunteers gave demonstrations in physical exercises before the International Youth Commission.

Note: The organization has no influence but the branch at Sholapur is likely to play a leading role in communal riots if they were to occur in future.

(6) Bombay National Guards
Attended the reception given in honour of the International Youth Commission.

(7) Azad Hind Dal
One new branch has been opened.

(8) Sikh Nav Javan Dal
The Dal observed ‘Anti-Pakistan Day’ by holding a flag salutation ceremony.

Leaflets stating that Sardar Kartar Sing Suthra, the Chief Organizer of the Dal, had misappropriated certain funds of the Akali Dal and that donations towards any funds should not be given to him, were distributed amongst the Sikhs and Hindus.

.....

NB—There was no appreciable activity by the other Volunteer Organizations.

Statement showing the strength of the organizations during the month of March 1947.

(1) Rashtra Seva Dal 56,868
(2) Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh 31,284
(3) Khaksars Volunteer Corps. 215
(4) Muslim National Guards 12,024
(5) Congress Seva Dal 1,500
(6) Independent Labour Party Volunteer Corps 1,065
(7) Rashtriya Seva Samiti 195
(8) Hindu Rashtra Dal 50
(9) Lok Sena 1,675
(10) Bombay National Guards 125
(11) Swastika League Volunteer Corps. 200
(12) Arya Vir Dal 250
(13) Red Guards 800
(14) Samata Sainik Dal 9,065
(15) Azad Hind Dal 1,120
(16) Sikh Nav Javan Dal 200
4. Report from Orissa Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Orissa for the Second Half of March 1947, 10 April 1947
Home Poll [I], File No. 18/3/47, NAI.

...Volunteer Organizations:

Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh: Two new branches were opened and three defunct branches revived during the period under review. Regular parades were held in Raipur and Jubbulpore. At most of the other centres, members were trained in lathi drill and physical exercises. In Balaghat, spears were used in training. Several district branches celebrated their anniversaries with displays of physical, lathi and lezim exercises. Golwarkar, [sic] the head of the Sangh, addressed a special meeting of 3,000 on Hindu unity and the aims and objects of the Sangh. He exhorted the audience to follow the example of Hindu warriors and prepare to meet the threat of civil war. He condemned Congress for its futile parliamentary activities and the double faced policy of its capitalist leaders who were actuated by personal gain. At another propaganda meeting, the political situation was described and the need for unity to defend their religion, community and country emphasized. Secrecy was also stressed. Rallies of 500 workers and 1000 volunteers were held at Akola. At private meetings, Golwalkar explained the increasing popularity of the Sangh all over the country and described how the Hindus, in provinces affected by communal trouble, appreciated its utility. He said that the Sangh was not afraid of anybody nor did it want to terrorize anybody. At Jubbulpore some Muslim students are alleged to have been assaulted by Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh members. An enquiry is in progress. An offence under section 120 Railways Act was registered against some Sangh volunteers for assaulting a military sepoy on the Jubbulpore Railway platform.

Azad Hind Dal: Though propaganda continued unabated, the Dal at Nagpur has received a rude shock when some of the ex-INA personnel who had left it had formed a separate body called the Azad Hind Fouz Samiti comprised entirely of ex-INA personnel under the patronage of the provincial ex-INA Relief Committee. The Azad Hind Fouz Samiti has a civilian organization called Azad Hind Fouz Sainik Samiti. A new branch was opened at a village in Yeotmal district. The Dal is active only in Nagpur, Sauger, Chanda and Yeotmal districts. Their activities consist of squad drill and physical training only. The Azad Hind Dal at Nagpur collaborated with the Forward Block in conducting the three day programme of the Royal Indian Navy Day from the 21st to the 23rd February. At the public meeting on the 23rd, the Interim Government was asked to release the Royal Indian Navy Ratings, Indian National Army personnel and other political prisoners still in jail. The arrest of Forward Block leaders during the observance of the Royal Indian Navy Day at Bombay was condemned and the Bombay Government requested to release them immediately. About 200 volunteers in uniform took part in the reception given to Nana Patil on the 3rd March at Nagpur. At a meeting of the Azad Hind Dal held at Harda, speakers denounced local Congress workers in particular and Congress capitalists in general. At another meeting at the same place, the teachers’ strike was justified. On the 8th March 1947, about 100 volunteers of the Dal paraded at Sahajpur (Jubbulpore) on the occasion of a Kisan Sabha meeting.

Muslim National Guards: Amraoit and Jubbulpore districts recorded an increase in membership. A new branch was opened in Jubbulpore and another in Bilaspur district.
Members were put through squad drill in addition to training in the use of lathi, sword and dagger. Muslim National Guards at Raipur held parades every morning. Batches of volunteers were posted in different Muslim mohallas to warn the Muslims to be on the alert while anti-Pakistan Day Procession was being taken out in Raipur town. At two meetings held in connection with Id-e-Milad at Jubbulpore, Professor Abdul Quayum of the Aligarh University, advised Muslims to join the Muslim National Guards to equip themselves morally, physically and spiritually to overcome all opposition. Speaking at a similar function, Moulana Burhanul Haq described the Muslim National Guards as the militant arm of the League formed to protect persons irrespective of caste or creed in abnormal times and criticized the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh as definitely anti-Muslim. A camp of Nagpur District Muslim National Guards is being conducted at Suradevi near Kamptee (Nagpur). Details are lacking.

Hindustan Red Army: Two new branches were formed, one at Tumsar (Bhandara) and the other at Itarsi (Hoshangabad). Route marches were conducted at Harda (Hoshangabad). About 40 Hindustan Red Army volunteers led by Dr Vaze took part in the reception given to Nana Patil on the 3rd March at Nagpur. At Gondia (Bhandara) and Itarsi (Hoshangabad) they joined the Congress Socialist Party in the observance of ‘Labour Day’ on the 4th March. The Hindustan Red Army convened a meeting of 200 at Saoner (Nagpur) at which speeches were made depicting the pitiful plight of cultivators, demanding the suspension of land revenue and the disbursement of loans. A Provincial camp, attended by 20 was inaugurated at Akola by Maganlal Bagdi. The volunteers were housed in tents, the entrance to the grounds being guarded by sentries. The programme included military drill, intellectual classes and games. A uniform of Khaki shirt, red shorts, boots and putties was worn. The camp is reported to have inspired little enthusiasm.

Rashtriya Dal or Veer Bajrang Dal: About 400 volunteers led by Francis Jadhao presented a guard of honour to Nana Patil. Several volunteer organizations participated in the reception but the turn out of the Rashtriya Dal was the best. Nana Patil received a salute from about 150 volunteers of the Dal when he visited their headquarters in the evening. Volunteers displayed Indian games with lathis, daggers, and other things. Nana Patil was then accorded a reception at a meeting of 800. The president Wamanrao Ghorpade, explained the progress of the Dal and claimed that 100 branches of the Dal were functioning in the Province. Nana Patil exhorted the volunteers to be ready for the future struggle and warned them that if the British do not keep their promise of quitting India, the Government offices would be seized by force and the functions of the police and military performed by the volunteers. He also expressed his satisfaction at the progress of the Dal.

Azad Hind Fouj Samiti and Azad Hind Fouj Sainik Samiti: These organizations were started by the Provincial ex-IN A Relief Committee towards the end of January last at the instance of ex-IN A men R.J. Hatwar and Wali Mohammad, who were turned out of the Azad Hind Dal for misappropriation of funds. The ostensible purpose is to concentrate all ex-IN A personnel in the province in one organization but the real object seems to be to break the Azad Hind Dal. The organizations have the support of the Central Indian National Army Relief Committee, which has sent some 40 or 50 ex-IN A men to Nagpur for rehabilitation work. Since the occurrence of the rift in the Azad Hind Dal, G.A. Kirde and his colleagues in the Azad Hind Dal are turning their attention to the Azad Hind Fouj Samiti and have formed a committee of the following:
President: L.N. Mishra, ex-INA i/c provincial ex-INA Relief Committee
Secretary: R.J. Hatwar, ex-INA
Treasurer: Wali Mohammad ex-INA.

The Secretary was later replaced by Sham Lal Nai, as he was again suspected of misappropriation. The Azad Hind Fouj Samiti is reported to have collected Rs 1500 from subscriptions. The Azad Hind Fauj Sainik Samiti is the civilian counterpart and has some 30 volunteers who are trained by ex-INA personnel. L.N. Mishra is eager to extend the organization to the districts, but nothing has been done so far and its activities are confined to Nagpur only.

Hindusthani Sewa Dal: Three new branches were started during the period. The Bilaspur branch is reported to have 50 swords to be used for training. A flag salutation ceremony was held at Raipur on the 22nd after a march by 60 volunteers through the streets with tri-colour flags. About 500 volunteers led by Suleman Khan Pathan presented a salute to Nana Patil on the 3rd March at Nagpur. When he visited their office later in the day, he was provided with a guard of honour by about 400. In the course of his address, he advised the volunteers not to become dejected over the present turn of political affairs but to keep his personal example before them. He asked them to start volunteer organizations in villages with a view to fight the British if they fail to quit India as promised. Even after the British quit, the volunteers would be needed to establish the rule of peasants and workers in India. About 30 volunteers formed a guard of honour to Nana Patil at Umrer (Nagpur) on the 14th March 1947. He inaugurated the Umrer Tahsil Camp at a meeting of 300 on the 15th. 150 trainees are being put through a course of squad drill and physical exercises....

---

5. Training and Organization of the Proposed Hindustan National Guards

Letter from R.B. Phadke, Honorary Secretary, Militarization Board, to L.B. Bhopatkar, 6 April 1947
AIHM Papers, File No. C-143/1947, NMML.

Office of the Militarization Board
Maharashtriya Mandal
Tilak Road, Poona

Sir,

With reference to the discussion you had with us the other day on the above topic, I have the honour to submit the following for your perusal and information.

Our Board is ready and willing to undertake the conduct of the Training Class during the summer vacation for your Hindusthan National Guards. The Summer Vacation on this side of India means the period from 1st May to 1st June.

Curriculum

The course of training for the period of one month is outlined as follows:

(a) Drill without Arms.
(b) Drill with Arms.
(c) Physical Training.

(d) A course of lectures on the Theory and Practice of 'the Military Soldiers in aid of civil power'.

(e) The indigenous fencing systems of—Lathi, Lakdi, Dagger, Spear, Half-Sword and other things.

(f) A course of lectures on organization of Guards, strategy and tactics, map reading, population problem and so forth.

Details of (a):

Drill in modern days has been much simplified. The movements are very few but the characteristic feature of modern training is quick mobility.

1. Positions—Stand at ease, Attention, Stand easy.
2. Turnings.
4. Dressing at intervals, Close Dressing.
5. Quick March.
6. Turnings on March.
7. Double March.
8. Diagonal March.
9. Formations at the halt—etc.
10. Platoon in three sections.
11. Advance in column and Retire in column.
12. Formations.
13. Saluting Drill.
15. Deployment.
16. Street Fighting.

Details of (b):

1. Positions—Stand at ease, Attention, Stand easy.
2. Trail and Order.
3. Shoulder Arms.
4. Present Arms.
5. Change Arms.
7. Secure Arms.
8. Ground and take up Arms.
10. Port Arms.
11. Examine Arms.

Details of (c):

Tables 1 to 3 of Army Physical Training.
Details of (d):
A course of lectures by Experts.

Details of (e):
1. About 30 different positions and exercises in Lathi.
2. About 26 different positions and exercises in Dagger.
3. Theory and practice in fencing with Sword and Lakdi.

Details of (f):
A course of lectures by experts.

The above is the rough outline of the Training Course to be gone through. It is an intensive and rigorous course which would require at least 4 hours’ instruction per day; and if the Trainees stand the Training well during the first week, then instruction will advance and be completed within a month. Candidates have to be very serious about it.

About the cost of Training, we will have to increase our Staff by securing the services of specially trained Army Instructors who have to be paid decently for the work they will put in. Also additional materials will have to be purchased for training. All things considered, each candidate will have to pay our Board Rs 100 (one hundred) for one month’s course of training including his Boarding and Lodging.

A minimum number of 50 candidates at least is necessary to make the whole scheme feasible and practicable.

We hope you will give this your due consideration and let us know your decision on or before the 20th of this month.

On hearing from you we shall arrange to take further steps in this matter.

With regards,

Yours sincerely,
R.B. Phadke
Hon Secretary,
Militarization Board,
C/O Maharashriya Mandal, Tilak Rd,
Poona 2.

6. Prohibiting Private Armies

Extracts from the Minutes of Second Day of First Governor’s Conference, 16 April 1947

...ITEM 6 PRIVATE ARMIES

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he had been amazed to find what a very large number of ‘private armies’ there were in India. Altogether it was estimated that there were approximately 413,000 persons in such organizations. These were divided between 12 different private armies, of which the Communists had a strength of only 1,000 and one Hindu Mahasabha organization of over 100,000.
SIR EVAN JENKINS said that the troubles in the Punjab had really begun with an attempt to ban private armies. The Prime Minister had decided to take this course rather than to try to maintain a balance of power between them. The Hindu private army in the Punjab had taken the ban very quietly and so had the Muslims except in Lahore. There had been trouble which was the immediate casus belli in the Province. The ban had then been quickly withdrawn and now the Sikhs had started up a private army of their own. He had decided that he could not now consider the question of reintroducing the ban in view of the general situation.

SIR OLAF CAROE said that the Red Shirts, a Congress organization in the NWFP, were one of the best known of all the private armies. They had been started 15 years ago. Since the Congress Ministry had been in power, they had not been much in evidence until recently; but then, without any warning, the Ministry had brought in between 6 and 7,000 Red Shirts in uniform to Peshawar City on the pretext that they were to protect the Hindus there. The military had refused to work in conjunction with the Red Shirts and had withdrawn from Peshawar. The presence of the Red Shirts had stimulated enormous processions on the part of the Muslims, whose organization in the NWFP was called Green Shirts. Then the Red Shirts had been withdrawn by the Ministry—again without him being informed—and a large unofficial fine had been levied to pay for their stay. The presence of the Red Shirts in Peshawar had caused a very dangerous situation which might have become even worse as the Ministry wished to make them into special police and arm them with official rifles.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY asked whether the Central Government could issue an ordinance banning private armies. MR ABELL said that this would not be constitutionally possible. Such legislation would have to be introduced by Provinces.

MR TYSON suggested that the two main parties might order a ban from the Centre. He felt that this would be obeyed. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he would take this suggestion up during the forthcoming meeting at Simla. He would call upon the Party Leaders to have these private armies suppressed and also try and persuade the Central Government to co-ordinate action to this end by Provincial Governments.

SIR FRANCIS WYLIE said that, in the United Provinces, District Magistrates had been authorized to ban the wearing of uniform if the situation required it. He added that he was doubtful of the prospects of persuasion by Party Leaders proving successful. SIR EVAN JENKINS pointed out that Congress did not have to control the Mahasabha if it did not want to.

SIR OLAF CAROE said that he was very doubtful that an appeal not backed up by forcible measures would be successful. With this SIR EVAN JENKINS agreed.

SIR FREDERICK BOURNE pointed out that many of these volunteer organizations regarded themselves more in the nature of athletic clubs. It would not be possible to ban them. HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICEROY said that he had no objection to athletic clubs as such. The criterion would be that they must not parade through the streets in coloured shirts, nor carry arms. SIR HUGH DOW said that, in one training camp, members of one of these clubs were taught, among other subjects, how to throw acid.

SIR CHANDULAL TRIVEDI said that there were no private armies in Orissa. His Prime Minister had been able to persuade the local Muslim leaders not to form one.
HIS EXCELLENCY THE VICE ROY:

(i) decided to raise the question of the banning of private armies with the Indian leaders at the Simla conference;

(ii) invited Their Excellencies the Governors to keep him informed concerning the activities of private armies and of any ideas they might have to abolish them....

7. Report from Bombay Province

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Bombay for the Second Half of April 1947, 2 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

...Note showing the development of volunteer organizations in Bombay Province during the month of April

(1) Rashtra Seva Dal

The membership continued to increase and eleven new branches were opened. The strength of these branches varied from 25 to 30.

Pursuant to the All-India Congress Committee resolution adopted on 9th March 1947, the Maharashtra Provincial Congress Committee, at its meeting held at Mulund (Thana) on 30th March 1947, appointed a Maharashtra Provincial Congress Seva Dal Board, to draft to a new constitution for the Dal. At its Poona meeting, held on 20th April 1947, the Executive Committee of the Maharashtra Provincial Congress Committee approved the constitution drafted by the Board in its meeting held on 19th April 1947 and directed the Board to conduct all Seva Dals as laid down in the constitution. The Executive Committee further warned that all those who would conduct or join other unauthorized Seva Dals would commit a breach of Congress discipline.

This move of the Maharashtra Provincial Congress Committee to take over the control of the Seva Dals has been resented by the socialist rank and file in the existing Rashtra Seva Dals, and as a protest, Messrs S.G. Ranade, present Seva Dal Chief, and S.M. Joshi did not attend the Board’s meeting although specially invited.

Mr K.M. Jedhe, the President of the Maharashtra Provincial Congress Committee, has in this connection issued a statement clarifying the stand taken by the Maharashtra Provincial Congress Committee and requesting all Seva Dal workers and volunteers to commence work according to the new constitution.

A private meeting of about 800 Seva Dal workers from all over Maharashtra was held in the Congress House, Poona, on April 12th and 13th, under the presidentship of Mr S.G. Ranade, the present Dal Chief, to discuss whether or not the Rashtra Seva Dal, which was so far a separate entity, though owing allegiance to Congress, should totally abide by the rules and regulations passed by the Board. It was decided to continue the independent existence of the Dal without Congress intervention in its day-to-day working. The meeting further opined that (1) two of its representatives should be taken on the Controlling Board, (2) the Dal Chief should be of their choice, and (3) no member of the Controlling Board should be allowed to contest any elective post in the Congress organization.

A split between the rightist and leftist workers of the Rashtra Seva Dal appears to be inevitable and it is learnt that the leftists intend to organize their own Rashtra Seva Dal independent of Congress control.
(2) Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh

Seven new branches were opened. Their strength varied from 20 to 35.

The chief activity of the Sangh during the month was the observance of the ‘New Year Day’ (Gudhi Padwa). Private rallies of volunteers ranging between 50 to 3,000 were held in almost all the Maharashtra districts and Ahmedabad when speeches were made by local leaders explaining the significance of the day and advising the volunteers to sink their differences and to strengthen the organization. The rally at Poona on 23rd March 1947 was the biggest. About 3,000 volunteers performed the flag salutation and gave demonstration in physical exercises under the presidency of Mr Govardhandas Dayalshet of Bombay. Mr V.G. Apte, the City Organizer of the Sangh, addressing the gathering recalled the Muslim onslaughts on Hindus in the Punjab and Bengal and said that amongst the several Hindu organizations, the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh had the courage to protect the Hindus. The Hindu society talked of retaliation but made no preparation. Unfortunately, power had been vested in the hands of deceitful Hindus—Congressmen—who were worse than those who committed atrocities on Hindus. The Hindu Society therefore, he said, looked to the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh for its safety and protection.

Mr Apparao Joshi of Wardha (CP) addressing about 2,000 volunteers of the Sangh in camera at the Nuten Marathi Vidayalaya High School, Poona, on March 10th, said that Congress had fallen a prey to the Muslim League and that the Congress Ministries were resorting to repressive policy against the Hindu organizations like the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh. They should bear in mind that more the repression the more the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh would grow. The Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh did need such calamities to prove its mettle.

The Sangh volunteers at Sangamner (Ahmednagar) took keen interest in the Hanuman Rath procession taken out on 5th April 1947. They played lezim and shouted slogan ‘Hindustan-Hai-Hinduoka, Nahi-Kisike-Bapka’ which created a slight tension amongst the local Muslims. The volunteers were checked in time by the Police and the procession passed off peacefully.

On 9th April 1947, Mr SJ. Joshi, a Hindu Sabha worker from Belgaum, visited the Sangh branch at Bagalkot (Bijapur) and addressed the volunteers to be well prepared to guard their hearths and homes in the event of a communal aggression.

(3) Muslim National Guards

Two new branches were opened, the strength of which was 20 and 200. The Captain of the Guards and a few other leaders are endeavouring to whip up enthusiasm but without any appreciable result.

The internal dissensions among the top-rank Muslim National Guards of Broach City have taken an ugly turn. The orders of the Salar-e-Shahar, Broach City, to work as volunteers in the Local Board elections on 17th February 1947, were disregarded by some of the Guards. The defaulters were subsequently dismissed under orders from the Provincial Muslim National Guards office. Their request for reconsideration of their case was rejected and they were asked to prefer an appeal to the All India National Guards office if they so desired.

At Ahmednagar the Guards hold route marches on Panchpir Chavdi Road every night. Muslim boys who are either servants in private shops or wanderers participate.

League flag salutations was performed by about 400 Guards, at Poona, on 23rd March 1947 under the presidency of Mr A.A. Khan. Addressing the gathering he observed that the Muslim League had become strong within six months and that they would achieve their goal of Pakistan within a year. He exhorted the Muslims to join the League and the Muslim National Guards.

At a similar function at Lonavla, Poona District, organized on the same day, about 40 Muslim National Guards gave a demonstration in drill. Mr Mirza, who presided, urged the Muslims to strengthen the Guards and threatened social boycott against those Muslims who would absent themselves on such functions.

At Godhra, old volunteer organization has been dissolved and fresh enrolment commenced. About 200 Muslims have so far joined the new organization of the Muslim National Guards. The new entrant has to take an oath before a Committee consisting of five persons. The Committee contemplate to enrol about 500 guards for active work and has requested the local City Muslim League to donate Rs 10,000 for the use of the Guards.

In Bombay City, the Guards mainly kept order at various Muslim functions. A member of the Guards was arrested on April 21st for an offence under section 307, Indian Penal Code, as he is alleged to have instigated a Muslim to stab a Hindu passer-by on January 29th.

(4) Khaksar Volunteer Corps
After a couple of months inactivity, the Khaksars at Ahmednagar revived their activities on 19th March 1947. In observance of the ‘Ganj Shahada’ a cycle procession of about 12 Khaksars was taken out in Ahmednagar City with a flag having words ‘Akhwat’ written on it. The demonstration was peaceful.

(5) Samata Sainik Dal
The volunteers of the Dal participated in Dr B.R. Ambedkar’s birthday celebrations held at Ahmedabad between April 14th and 20th.

(6) Hindu Rashtra Dal
A new branch of the Dal has been opened in Bombay City and about 20 volunteers attend it.

As a result of certain dissensions a rival branch has been started under the name of ‘Hindu Rashtra Seva’ with about 25 volunteers.

(7) Lok Sena
Owing to internal disputes, the branch at Sholapur has been closed for the present.

(8) Azad Hind Dal
A new branch of the Dal has been formed in Bombay City with 20 volunteers.

As a result of the bickerings between the President and the Organizer and Instructor of the Dal, all the branches of the Dal in Poona are now defunct.

NB. There was no appreciable activity by the other Volunteer Organizations.

8. Report from Sind Province
Extract from the Fortnightly Report on Sind for the Second Half of April 1947, 3 May 1947
Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

...Note showing the development of volunteer organizations in Sind Province

1. Muslim National Guard: The strength of the Guard is increasing and members carried out exercises with ‘lathis’ and drilled in military formation at several places throughout the province and also held meetings. At Sukkur an ex-police constable has been appointed to instruct members of the Guard in police duties. A branch of the Guard has been formed at Shikarpur and has about fifty members on its rolls at present.

2. This habit of parading through streets attracted a great deal of notice and criticism in Karachi and with a view to preventing trouble the District Magistrate sent for the leaders and advised them to have this parading stopped. At the first meeting they agreed to reduce it to one parade a month, the route of which was to be notified to the authorities and a permit for which was to be taken out from the Superintendent of Police. Subsequently, the District Magistrate suggested that parading in streets should cease altogether, and the suggestion was accepted subject to the condition that the agreement will be implemented within a week.

3. There has been a rift between the branch of the National Guards in Karachi on account of differences between the City leaders. The Guard is being re-organized and the re-organization is expected to take about a couple of months.

4. Rashtrya Swayam Shewak Sangh: The Sangh carried out its usual physical exercises and drills in military formation. It celebrated ‘Vesakhi Day’ at Karachi on the 13th and 14th April. A meeting was held at Hyderabad at which the attendance numbered about 1,000 and where speeches were delivered on the present political situation in India in general, and at Hyderabad in particular, stressing the need for recruiting and training more members for the protection of Hindus in case of communal riots.

5. At Sukkur, on the 13th April, a clash occurred between members of the Sangh and the Rashtrya Sewa Dal over the use of a playground for their routine activities. Wiser counsels prevailed and the incident was nipped in the bud. On the 12th, a Muslim donkey cart driver was loading sand and stones into his cart from the New Model High School Ground at Karachi when 30 Hindu boys alleged to be members of the Sangh took exception to it. Nothing untoward, however, occurred. On the 13th, the school ground was the scene of another incident. About 200 members of the Sangh had assembled there to celebrate the ‘Vesakhi’ festival. Five Muslim National Guards were watching the Sanghatis and the latter noticing them, asked them to quit the place. The Guards refused to do so. But the Sanghatis observing that discretion was the better part of valour, let the Guards alone.

6. Reports received indicate that the Sangh has decided to change its name to ‘Hindu Dharam Sangh’ in the event of its being banned by Government. At Sukkur, a subsidiary body known as the ‘Hindu National Guard’ has been established with a view to carry on the mission of the Sangh when and if the latter is declared an illegal body. The members of the Guard are none other than the Sanghatis themselves, and for all practical purposes the guard is identical with the Sangh.

7. Rashtrya Shewa Dal: Physical exercises and drill in military formation formed the main feature of the activities of the Dal during the fortnight under review. About 1,000 members from various places in the Province attended the meeting organized by the Dal at Shahdadpur in the newly-created Sanghar District on the 6th April where about 200 of them gave exhibitions of physical feats and ‘lathi’ practice. Speeches were also made in a pro-Congress strain.

8. Khaksars: Batches of Khaksars numbering from five to about fifty carried on routine activities and drilled in military formation with ‘belchas’. A branch of the Khaksar Jamait has recently been formed at Shikarpur, and at a meeting of this branch Muhammad Inayatullah condemned the Muslim League and Congress for their capitalistic policy and the former in particular for exploiting all avenues to destroy the Hurs, and also alleged that the Muslim League was a body of British agents. This organization also indulged in a novel form of propaganda of writing slogans on the wall in Urdu with coal tar.

9. The Arya Vir Dal: This defunct Hindu organization has been revived and its activities have so far been confined to the performance of physical exercises.

9. Report from CP and Berar

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on CP and Berar for Second Half of April 1947, 6 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

5. Volunteer Organizations:

Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh: Four new branches were started, 2 in Balaghat, one in Bilaspur and one in Jubbulpore district. The new most important Sangh gathering was the camp at Pardi in the Nagpur district from the 3rd to the 5th April. The camp was attended by about 6,000 uniformed volunteers who were housed in 100 tents pitched for the purpose. All the paraphernalia of a military camp were maintained, such as bugle calls, guards, camp police etc. Mr Golwalkar, the head of the organization, addressing the volunteers said that India was the home of the Hindus, that the Moguls and others were foreigners, that the Hindus should discard their inferiority complex and exert themselves to arouse among the Hindus a sense of realism.

Azad Hind Dal: Three new branches were established during the month. Nagpur, Kamptee and Katni branches performed squad drill regularly. There was a camp attended by 60 Azad Hind Dal volunteers at Ramtek, under the command of G.A. Kirde and G. Ingle Ex-INR men. This camp was run on military lines and the main item of the programme was drill. Some 150 uniformed volunteers of the Nagpur branch of the Azad Hind Dal formed a guard of honour to Prithvi Raj, the cinema actor who came to play the part of the hero in the play called ‘Deewar’ and who unfurled the Congress flag.

Muslim National Guards: Two new branches were formed at Jamai (Chhindwara) and Amraoti. Routine activities consisted mainly of drill, lathi, dagger and other physical exercises. They participated in the observance of ‘Pakistan’ Day.

Hindustan Red Army: Physical exercises and drill were performed at Wardha and Tumsar.

Hindustan Sewa Dal: Two branches were established in Bilaspur and Wardha. Training in lathi and other physical exercises was given at Bilaspur. Camps were held in Narsinghpur, Sakoli and Gumgaon (Nagpur). Inaugurating the camp at Gumgaon, Poonamchand Ranka described the Dal as the official organization of the Congress and advised the volunteers to serve the country, observe discipline and increase the number of branches. Instructions were given in map reading and in maintaining peace during communal disturbances.

Samata Sainik Dal: A new branch was opened at Yeotmal. The Dal is active only in the Chanda district consisting largely of Mahars....
10. Report from Punjab Province

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/4/47, NAI.

...VOLUNTEER ORGANIZATIONS: The steadily increasing appreciation of the Hindu community for the Rashtriya Swayam Sewak Sangh has recently been most clearly expressed by the increasing number of enlistments and by the response to the Sangh’s appeal for funds, ostensibly for refugees relief, both of which have been particularly marked in the central and eastern Punjab. The devotion of Sangh members to the collection of funds and relief work however has not detracted from their more militant activities, and the performance of physical exercises, gatka and lathi fighting is becoming more regular. In Amritsar, Sangh members were concerned in a bomb case and while this incident may not be a safe indication that the RSSS as an organization has commenced a programme of terrorism, it is clear that its workers are adopting a more aggressive attitude and are being more blatant about keeping articles which can be used for offensive and defensive purposes. The Ambala Cantonment branch recently demonstrated ‘riot tactics’ which caused considerable panic in the Muslim localities into which they ventured, and action u/s 21 of the Punjab Public Safety Act had to be taken against three Sangh leaders of Sirsa who were exhorting Hindus to collect arms and to prepare to fight the Muslims. In Karnal, Sangh workers are being provided with lathis, and hockey sticks have been distributed to Batala members. The Multan branch continues slowly to equip itself with hatchets and the Dera Ghazi Khan with knives. It is now believed that instructions issued to the RSSS enjoin complete cooperation between the RSSS and the Arya Vir Dal and close collaboration with the Sikhs. An early outcome of this policy has been the enlistment in the Sangh of a number of Sikhs in Hoshiarpur district.

The harvest has interfered with the progress in the enrolment of members of the Akal Saina, but thirteen new branches have recently been formed in nine districts and membership has increased by nine hundred and fifty. Enlistment has been rapid in the Hoshiarpur, Ludhiana, Gurdaspur, Lyallpur and Multan districts, and SA Dal workers, are now touring and organizing formations of the Akal Fauj which they hope to complete within two to three months. There is less activity in the western districts but, in common with the RSSS, training on more militant lines is discernible in the eastern Punjab, particularly in Ambala. A new volunteer corps has now been formed at Amritsar, the Shahidi Dal, under the direction of Jathedar Mohan Singh, which aims at having a corps of picked Sikhs available to deal with Muslim ‘aggression’ there. The present strength is estimated at between three and four hundred. A SGPC Fauji Guard, eventually to consist of 750 Sikhs, enlisted from ex-military, Akali and INA ranks, has also been formed in Amritsar. Two hundred Guards have so far been enlisted, of whom about 125 have been sent to various gurdwaras for protection duties. Before they go out, these Guards have to undertake in writing to remain faithful to the Panth and obey the orders they receive implicitly.

The necessity for recruitment and reorganization of the Muslim League National Guards is occupying the attention of the Provincial Salar, who has compared the progress of the organization most unfavourably with that of the RSSS and the Akal Fauj. An increase of 6630 Guards, however, has been reported and accelerated activity has been noticeable in the western and north-western Punjab. In the eastern Punjab, active training has been confined mainly to Simla, Ambala Cantonment and Panipat, where Guards have been exercised secretly in lathi fighting, and, in the central Punjab, to the Jullundur district where Khaksars have undertaken their training. Open activity has been confined to the collection of relief funds, reorganization and, in the Rawalpindi area to warning Muslims to destroy looted property and refrain from giving evidences in connection with the recent disturbances. A rift in the Provincial Muslim League National Guards organization, caused by dissension in the Punjab Muslim League High Command, is hampering progress and the Provincial Salar has been subjected to severe criticism of having taken no active steps to protect the Muslim community during the recent communal riots. ...

11. All India Dharmasangh Launches a New Campaign

Extracts from a Memorandum from the Hindu Citizens of Delhi, 17 May 1947
Confidential Branch, File No. F44/47-C. 1947, Chief Commissioner’s Office, Delhi State Archives.

Memorandum for Redress of Grievances of Volunteers of Dharmayudha Peaceful Campaign by The Hindu Citizens of Delhi through Shastrartha Maharathi Pt Madhavacharya Shastri

To
The Chief Commissioner
Delhi Province
Delhi.

Sir,
The All India Dharmasangh, under the leadership of His Holiness Shri 1008 Swami Karpatriji Maharaj, one of the Greatest Hindu leaders and a saint of very high spiritual order, launched the Dharmayudha Campaign on the 28th of April 1947. It is said that previous to the actual start of the campaign repeated representations were made to members of the Central Government, especially Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru, Sardar Patel and Dr Rajendra Prasad, to bring home to them the five fundamental demands of the Hindus. The five demands are as follows:

(1) Cow-protection—by banning cow-slaughter throughout India on religious, social, physical and economic grounds. This step to begin with Muttra, the birth place of Lord Kishena Gopal, the protector of cows.

(2) Akhand Bharat, dropping all schemes of vivisection of our Motherland.

(3) Religion be left Independent—There should be no legislative interference in religious, socio-religious and religio-social affairs of Hindus. In this respect only great scholars and acharyas, educated on oriental lines, are entitled to define religion and say whether a particular matter is religious or not.

(4) Sanctity of temples to be maintained according to agelong traditions and Shastric injunctions. All legislation in this respect, to be dropped.

(5) Adequate representation of the Sanatani Hindus on the constitution making body and all its committees.

His Holiness Shri Karpatriji was arrested along with 58 other volunteers, who were demonstrating peacefully outside assembly chamber and Shri Swamiji accompanied them still Volunteer Organizations

It was demanded by the whole of Hindu community throughout India through telegrams to His Excellency the Viceroy, Hon’ble Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and even the Secretary of State to release Shri Swamiji and his followers forthwith and to give them an assurance of the acceptance of their demands. It is a pity that the demand of the Hindu public has also gone unheeded and now we listen to the reports of maltreatment of these peace loving volunteers at the hands of police and Jail Authorities....

It is further requested that your honour may advise the Central Government to accept their most legitimate fundamental demands and drop all sort of legislation interfering with religious life of the Hindus.

We believe that this will all bring good will to the Government as well as good name to your goodself along with heartfelt gratitude of us all.

We have the honour to be

Sir,

Yours obediently,

Madhavacharya
For the Hindu Citizens of Delhi

12. Activities of Volunteer Armies in NWFP

Letter from Olaf Caroe to Louis Mountbatten, 17 May 1947

PESHAWAR,

TOP SECRET
D.O. No. G.H. 57.

Dear Lord Mountbatten,

Your Excellency will remember that on the second day of the Governors’ Conference the question of private armies was discussed and we were invited to keep you informed and to put forward ideas about their abolition. It was also stated that you had decided to raise the question at the coming Conference with the leaders. During your visit to Peshawar I told you that my Ministry were pressing me to have a Home Guard, and also to distribute official rifles to this Guard. I resisted this, for I was quite sure at the time that they intended to use the rifles for distribution to Red Shirts, and this has now been proved.

2. While I was away in Delhi some official police rifles were issued in one District, namely Peshawar, and these have all gone to Red Shirts, who are parading them about and form armed guards when the Congress leaders go to meetings. Dr Khan Sahib always pretends that Red Shirts are unarmed, but it is false, and entirely reliable sources confirm that the great majority of Red Shirts, particularly in the Charsadda area of Peshawar District, are very well armed indeed with 303 rifles from the Kohat Pass, most of them unlicensed. They have even been seen armed in Peshawar Cant[onmen]t.
3. On top of that we have this new formation of ‘Young Pathans’. Dr Khan Sahib again when I raised the matter tried to pretend, even in Council, that he knew nothing about it, but it is now confirmed by open announcement by Abdul Ghaffar Khan that this party has been raised with his blessing to form bodyguards and to ‘resist aggression’ as a sort of counter to the League movement. The chief organizer is Abdul Ghaffar Khan’s son, Abdul Ghani, the MLA (Central). I have already reported this move by telegram and it is dangerous. There is already a counter movement by the League to set up their own armed organization. We have reached the strange position whereby the Government of the day has two armed organizations: one a sort of corps d’élite’ (its SS) which is acknowledged to be armed and another, the Red Shirts (its SA) who are known to be widely armed. In some cases the weapons may be licensed, and I am afraid it is the case that my Premier issues licenses to his own supporters with no discretion whatever in hundreds. There are cases also of unlicensed arms, for which only permits are given. The arms themselves can be got from the Kohat Pass factories, which are working overtime. It seems to me that if a responsible Government adopts measures of this kind, we are driven to think seriously once more how far it will be possible to leave it in office. How are we to hold any form of election or referendum with private armies going up and down the country? The logical course would no doubt be to declare at any rate the ‘Young Pathans’ an unlawful association under the Criminal Law Amendment Act, but that would have to be done by the Provincial Government itself. (I suppose it is conceivable that I take action myself in exercise of my special responsibility, but even that is a reductio ad absurdum.)

4. A certain amount of this may be regarded as a war of nerves, and a demonstration to set off the League meetings in Peshawar at the end of April. But it will be noticed that it all follows on the rather obscure threat uttered by Qazi Attaullah at the meeting of Ministers which Your Excellency saw in Peshawar on April 28th—a threat which was repeated in the Ministry’s comments on the minutes of that meeting.

Yours sincerely,

OLAF CAROE

13. Report from NWFP

Extract from the Fortnightly Report on NWFP for the First Half of May 1947, 27 May 1947

Home Poll (I), File No. 18/5/47, NAI.

...Note showing the Development of Volunteer Organizations in the NWFP during the month of April 1947

RED SHIRTS. The Red Shirts were active during April, especially in the Mardan and Bannu Districts, marching in processions and attending party meetings. Active members of the organization fluctuate in number to some extent, but are estimated at about 8,000. An offshoot of the organization has been formed, to which the name ‘Zalmai Pakhtun’ has been given. This body has been declared to be armed for self-defence and for the defence of party leaders in the present disturbed conditions of the Province. Its members are reported at present to be about 50.

MUSLIM LEAGUE NATIONAL GUARDS. The exact strength of this organization also is not known, more especially since at demonstrations they are mingled with other supporters of the Muslim League. The probable figure is 5,500. It is noticeable that Muslim League National Guards took a prominent part in the Dera Ismail Khan Civil Disobedience Campaign, which developed into very grave communal rioting. The leaders have always emphasized the necessity of not persecuting minorities, but experience has shown that the danger of communal trouble is inherent in the activities of this body.

Khaksars. Their strength is estimated at 1,200. There have been a few parades and small batches left the Province for Bihar for volunteer work. No breach of the peace has been threatened from them recently, but their past history and present organization render the Khaksars a potential menace to law and order.

Ahrars. They are estimated to number 200, but they may became even fewer as the result of the recent decision of the party to sever connection with Congress. They carry little influence in the Province, although one leader, Maulvi Ghulam Ghaus of Baffa, Hazara District, is believed to have initiated a no-rent campaign in the south west of the District and adjacent independent areas. This campaign has so far made little headway.

RSS Sangh. Since Hindus are a very small minority of the population of the Province, this organization is not a serious threat to public tranquility. But its volunteers number 2,000; it holds frequent rallies; and is an object of suspicion on the part of the Muslim League.

14. ‘Hindustan National Guard in Bengal: Dr Mookerjee’s Appeal for Men & Money’

Dr Syama Prasad Mookerjee has issued the following statement:

‘The Hindusthan National Guards was formed by me in Bengal as the President of the Hindu Mahasabha nine months ago to work for the protection of the Hindus and for helping in the maintenance of peace and order. In recent months, the response from the citizens of Calcutta and from other parts of Bengal has been most encouraging.

   ‘Our organization is functioning under the auspices of the Hindu Mahasabha but it is open to all Hindus irrespective of party politics who share our aims and objects and are willing to join hands in this supreme crisis facing all peace-loving citizens of the province. It is only a united and disciplined organization actuated by true spirit of courage and service that can save Calcutta and Bengal.

   ‘I appeal to all sections of Hindus to rally round the banner of the Hindusthan National Guard and make it a force which will effectively checkmate and disintegrate all reactionary elements that are working for violence, disorder or anarchy. We have to resist at all cost the growing menace that threatens the sanctity of our hearths and homes and the honour of our womenfolk. All those who are ready to join this force in this supreme emergency will get in touch with our head office or any of our branches in Calcutta and in districts.

   ‘I appeal to all public spirited citizens who are willing to help us with contributions to come forward and contribute generously to the Hindusthan National Guard Fund.

   ‘Contribution earmarked for this purpose may be sent to any of the following addresses: (1) Treasurer, Hindusthan National Guard, Ashutosh College, Russa Road, Calcutta; (2) Treasurer, Hindu Mahasabha, 162, Bowbazar Street, Calcutta; (3) Mr N.C. Chatterjee, Working President, Bengal Provincial Hindu Mahasabha, 5 Theatre road, Calcutta.’—API.
About the Editors

Sucheta Mahajan, the Editor of the volume on 1947, is Professor of History, Centre for Historical Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. She is an editor of Studies in History, the journal of the Centre. She was a fellow at the Indian Institute of Advanced Study, Shimla, and the Bellagio Center of the Rockefeller Foundation in Italy. She has been Gillespie Visiting Professor at the College of Wooster, USA. She is the author of Education for Social Change: MVF and Child Labour (2008) and Independence and Partition: The Erosion of Colonial Power in India (2000). She has also co-authored RSS, School Texts and the Murder of the Mahatma: The Hindu Communal Project (2008) and India’s Struggle for Independence (1987) and has edited H.M. Patel, Rites of Passage: A Civil Servant Remembers (2005).

Sabyasachi Bhattacharya, the General Editor of the Towards Freedom series, is former Chairman, Indian Council of Historical Research, New Delhi. He was earlier Vice Chancellor of Visva-Bharati, Santiniketan, and Professor at the Centre for Historical Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. He has also held teaching and research appointments at the University of Chicago; St Antony’s College, University of Oxford; and El Colegio de México. His publications include Talking Back: The Idea of Civilization in the Indian Nationalist Discourse (2011), Vande Mataram: The Biography of a Song (2004), and Mahatma and the Poet: Letters and Debates between Gandhi and Tagore, 1915–1941 (ed. 2002).
Index

Abdali, Ahmed Shah 996
Abdullah, Quraishi 289, 296
Abraham, G. 1260–2
Acquisition of Waste Land Bill 1186
Adhikari, Amulya Chandra 1247
Adhikari, G. 130–3
Afridis 140, 419, 455, 941, 945, 948, 1084
Afzal, Sultan Mohammad 915
Agra and Oudh amalgamation 267
Ahad, Chowdhury Abdul 1062
Ahmad, Mohiuddin 916
Ahmad (Ahmed), Maqbool 403, 915
Ahmad, Aftab 1244
Ahmad, Col. Mahboob 404, 407, 416
Ahmad, Mirza Bashiruddin Mahmud 315
Ahmad, Syed Amin 401, 916
Ahmad, Syed Mujtaba 916, 919
Ahmad, Syed Mushtaq 347
Ahmed, Agha Badruddin 404, 1036
Ahmed, Bashir 289
Ahmed, Ch Faiz 296
Ahmed, G. 653
Ahmed, Khalil 289
Ahmed, Mafizuddin 558
Ahmed, Maulvi Saleh 358
Ahmed, Paniruddin 1053, 1054
Ahmed, Syed 907
Ahmed, Tosodduq 1056
Ahmed, Zohra 401
Ahoms 91, 104, 1072
Ahrras 499, 566, 567, 970, 982, 998, 1109, 1265, 1283
Ahsan, Raghib 1227
Aiyar, C.P. Ramaswami 227
Aiyar, Krishna Swamy. See Ayyar, Diwan Bahadur Alladi Krishnaswami
Aiysha Begum 1080
Akali Fauj (Saina), the Sikh volunteer organization 299, 313, 314, 317, 1013, 1279
Akali Regiment 439
Akhiyan 352
Alexander, A.V. 8, 173, 198, 212, 228, 231, 232, 233, 228, 231–2, 774
Alexander, Horace 780–1
Ali, Aruna Asaf 722
Ali, Asaf 88, 142, 147, 163–4, 202, 802–3
Ali, Fazal 289
Ali, Hasmat (Hoshmat) 1056, 1072–3
Ali, Kh Shamsher 296
Ali, Mahbub 343, 354
Ali, Mahmud 1053
Ali, Malik Shaukat 289
Ali, Mir Bundeh 1027
Ali, Qazi Ibrahim 1062
Ali, Sadiq 976–7
Ali, Shaukat 862, 867
All India Adi-Hindu Depressed Classes Association 659–60
All India Akali Conference (1940), Attari 521 to group Assam with Bengal 104, 105, 111, 267; freedom to provinces 101; resolution recommending partition of the Punjab 1115

All India Dharmasangh 1280
All India Digambar Jain Parishad 650–3
All India Gurkha League 586
All India Hindu Mahasabha. See Hindu Mahasabha
All India Hindu Student Federation 870
All India Jat Mahasabha 747
All Indian Scheduled Castes Federation 583
All Parties Peace Committee 459, 470, 472, 486, 1020–1, 1042–3
Allahabad, riots 508–9
Allenby, Edmund 7
All-India Depressed Classes Association 1229
All-India Momin Conference 126, 854–5
Ambala 315, 330, 463, 464, 521, 524–5, 537, 539, 746, 747, 820, 840, 1114, 1118, 1121–2, 1125, 1129, 1131, 1133, 1135, 1136, 1137, 1148, 1245, 1279, 1280; Muslims oppose partition of Punjab 1128
Ambedkar, B.R. 23, 26, 29, 30, 50, 62, 63, 69, 70, 75, 82, 125, 434, 583–4, 587, 669, 696–7, 701–2, 714, 717, 718–19, 1173, 1175, 1246, 1276; on rights of minorities and Scheduled Castes 619–33
American and Irish Constitutions 661
Amery, L.S. 114, 143, 634
Amin, Choudhri Mohammad 44, 1244
Amiruddin (Amir-ud-Din), Mian 283, 470, 1027
Amrit Kaur, Rajkumari 51, 63, 75, 444, 668–9, 675–6, 725, 764, 784, 898, 948; appeal not to partition Punjab 777; memorandum on minorities 79–81
Ananda Priyaji 265
Anderson, John 223, 825
Andrews, C.F. 734
Anekantvada, Jain doctrine 650
Anglo-American bloc 108
Anglo-American public law 713
Anglo-American-French-Russian Control Councils 272
Anglo Indian Schools: demand for retention and reservation in Civil Services 682–5
Anglo-Indians 3, 48, 52, 55, 56, 59, 62, 125, 192, 585, 634, 667, 639, 641, 684, 703, 850, 1248; and Indian Christians of Bengal 585, 629; wish to join Muslim League 587
Ansari, Abdul Qayum 394, 405, 415, 854, 865, 867, 922, 1269
Anthony, Frank Reginald 50, 55–6, 62, 63, 75, 689–90, 691, 692, 825; on cultural autonomy, 682–5 appointments and budget 146–7
Apte, V.G. 1275
Arab League 163
Arif, Muhammad, Qazi Sahib of Sararogha 354
Armed Forces 421, 954; additional legal powers 883–4; posting in Assam 1054–5
Arms Act 1038, 1039
Arya Samaj 271, 517, 567, 932, 994, 1040, 1096, 1150–1, 1265
Arya Vir Dal 564, 579, 1267, 1278, 1279
Aryans 18, 19, 659
Asian Conference 220
Asiya Khatoon 1073
Assam Rifles 421, 870, 1054, 1055, 1071
Assam, Assam Valley 86, 89, 90, 101, 112, 133, 154, 267, 355–61; case of Mizo people for self determination 1059–62; composite character 104–5; fear of Muslim League majority unfounded 103–4; grouping option 101, 102, 105, 110–11; government’s eviction policy condemned 1058–9; Hindus 91, 103, 105, 354, 356–8, 360, 1047, 1050, 1052, 1063, 1068, 1071–2, 1188; immigration from Bengal 24; Legislative Assembly 637, 789, 1052; movement to bring into Pakistan zone 1057–8; note on Muslim majority areas 1065–9; Muslim League civil disobedience 356, 360, 1046–1112; Muslim Students’ Federation 1055–6, 1072–3; plains tribes, proportionate representation on popular basis and socio-religious and economic safeguards 637–40; position in negotiations for transfer of power 805–6, 814; Pradesh Congress Committee 83, 101, 104, 105; settlement of immigrants in tribal areas 1063–4
Associated and Allied Powers 47
Associated Press of India (API) 93, 269, 380, 395–7, 843–4 declaration 330–4; threatens India with Partition 216–17
Attock, arson and looting 452–3, 1028
Auchinleck, Claude 209, 501–2
Aung San 88–9, 109, 200–01, 202
Aurangzeb 456, 462, 871
Australian Commonwealth 20, 744
Austria 47, 61, 271
Ayyangar, M. Ananthasayanam 687, 688, 715, 717
Ayyangar, N. Gopalaswami 54–5, 62, 65, 68, 678–80
Ayyar, Diwan Bahadur Alladi Krishnaswami 24, 51, 63, 65, 68, 75, 681, 688, 714, 715, 716–17
Azad Hind Dal 564, 569, 579, 580–1, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1276, 1268
Azad Hind Fouj (Fouz) Sainik Samiti 1268, 1269, 1270
Azad Muslim League 567
Azad, Maulana Abul Kalam 48, 51, 63, 75, 113–14, 115, 139, 150–1, 163–4, 203, 207, 210, 305, 397, 510, 596, 725, 782, 833, 867, 884–5, 1081–2; blames Congress for rejection of Cabinet Mission Plan 737–8; clarifies Congress stand 111–13; on Gandhi’s offer to Jinnah to form Government 726; solution for Congress-League compromise 758
Azad, Prithvi Singh 50, 63, 590, 1132, 1136, 1245
Aziz, Syed Abdul 296, 404, 416, 457, 596, 610, 912, 1021, 1227
Badri Das, Rai Bahadur 279, 478
Bagdi, Manganlal 581
Bahadur Shah Zafar 22–3
Bahar, Mohd Habibullah 1058
Bajrang Sewak Akhara 567, 1265
Bajwa, Harcharan Singh 527
Bakar, Malik 1086
Baksh, Pir Ilahi (Buksh, Pir Ilahi/Bux, Pir Ilahi) 614, 841, 1027, 1033–5
Baksh, Qadir 296
Bakshi Tek Chand 50, 63, 65, 68, 75, 714, 1132, 1136
Balkishen 958
Baluchistan 51, 119, 814, 835–6; inclusion in NWFP 89, 91, 92, 102
Banerjea, P.N. 1216–17
Banerjee, Bijoy Behari 1155
Banerjee, D.N. 540–3
Banerjee, M.N. 547
Banerjee, Promothanath 552
Banerjee, R.N. 938–9, 939–40, 1038–9
Banerjee, R.R. 545–7
Banerjee, Sankar 547
Banerjee, Srikumar 1155
Banerjee, Surendra Nath 545, 547
Banerjee, Suresh Chandra 704–5
Banerjee, Upendra Nath 1155
Bannu 946–7, 948
Bardoloi, Gopinath 51, 63, 75, 83, 96, 101, 104, 1050, 1054–5, 1058–9, 1063–4, 1065, 1069, 1070, 1073, 1240; censorship of eviction news imposed by Ministry 1049–50; greeted with black flags in Silchar 1062–3; immigration policy, approved by Patel 1051; Ministry must go 1048–9; proposed that Assam frame her own Constitution 91; talk with Saadulla 1051–2
Bari Memorial Day 570
Bari, Maulana Abdul 405, 416, 901, 918, 1063
Baroti, D.N. 1190
Barq, Mian Muhammad Ibrahim 473
Baruya, Nirmal Chandra 584–6
Basanti, Sikh girl of Hazara 344
Basu, A.K. 547
Basu, A.M. 547
Batra, P.C. 474
Bawa, Harkishan Singh 1127
Bazm-i-Pakistan 438, 932
Bedekar, G.V. 251, 254–5, 257, 571, 574, 599, 600, 601
Bedekar, J. 857
Bedi, B.P.L. 1007–9
Bengal 220; Act I of 1947 883, 894; communalism 258–60, 362–80, 388–90, 393, 389, 403, 414, 432, 478, 485, 505, 850, 858–60, 870, 872–99, 904, 907, 908, 950–60; Constitution 422; Council of Action 939; creation of new province 550–2; demand for partition (see partition of Bengal); demand for separate non-Muslim province irrespective of partition 1187–8; dismemberment 778; famine 279, 369–70; Legislative Assembly 229, 378; Ministry, demand for removal 893–4; Police Force 891–2; Provincial Buddhist Association 584–6; Provincial Congress Committee 364–5, 369, 585, 855, 887, 1154, 1162–3, 1167, 1173, 1211;—calls for Partition 1162–3; Provincial Hindu Conference, Tarakeshwar 875–7, 1164–5; Provincial Hindu
Mahasabha 544–5, 554, 875–7, 1256–9; Provincial Muslim League 269, 360, 361, 1048, 1057, 1210; government/ministry 260, 262, 269, 307, 370, 614, 1160; refugees 387, 395; rights and safeguards for Hindu minority of East Bengal 540–3; State Acquisition and Tenancy Bill 885. See also United Bengal

Bengali: Hindus 510, 534, 540-4, 546, 548-9, 557, 925-6; Muslims 559, 1058, 1129, 1153, 1223, 1225, 1226;—will fight partition 1209–10

Beniabad incident 400, 405, 406, 412–14, 910

Beveridge, EJ. 857

Bennett, John 470

Beveridge, EJ. 857

Bennett, John 470

Bhumibol Purana 21–2

Bharat Bhushan 1021

Bharathi, L. Krishnaswami 686

Bhargava, Gopi Chand 50, 62, 75, 294, 323, 328, 330, 1132, 1136

Bhargava, Thakur Das 1116

Bhasani, Maulana 360

Bhoj, Raj 587

Bhopal 266; Nawab of 145, 233, 841; reaction to HMG’s 6th December statement 225

Bhopatkar, L.B. 135–7, 230, 259, 267, 398, 529, 547, 843-4, 957–9, 1270–2; Calls for United Hindu–Sikh Front 959–60

Bhopi, Manoranjan 1256

Bhusal, Jahan Khan 288

Bihar 803–4; chargesheet against government 924–5; communalism 258–9, 262–3, 274–5, 386–434, 852, 900–26;—causes 412;—Inquiry Commission 425–6, 917;—massacre like Jallianwala massacre 424–5;—ministers should be held responsible 391;—non-violence resistance to provocations 427–8;—official apathy 422–3;—persons accused 908;—questions in Legislative Assembly regarding 249–58; Gandhi’s visit 407, 423, 424–8, 429–30, 431–3, 900–2, 906–8, 912–14, 918, 920–3; Hindu Relief and Protection Board 399; Hindu Religious Endowments Bill 723; Muslim Political Conference 920; Muslim(s) refugees 538, 897;—in Bengal 377, 594, 875;—must return 394–5;—rehabilitation 613–14; Muslims, prospects in Sind, exchange of property issue 1248–50; Provincial Hindu Sabha 399; Provincial Muslim League 388–9, 396, 406; punitive taxes 915

Billarmine, St. Robert 28

Bindra, Jaswant Singh 1021

Birla, B.M. 1188

Birla, Ghanshyam Das 210, 605, 778

Biswa, Makhan Lal 1257, 1259

Biswa, P.B. 1240

black-marketing 369, 491

Bolshevist revolution 4

Bombay: Akhali Dal 564; Beggars Act 723–4; communalism 434–9, 852, 926–7; Muslim National Guards 564, 579, 1267

Bordoloi, Gopinath. See Bardoloi, Gopinath

Bose, Abala 1207, 1211

Bose, Mrinal Kanti 1155

Bose, N.N. 547

Bose, Nirmal 912, 918

Bose, Raj Krishna (Rajkrushna) 75, 700, 712

Bose, Sarat Chandra 65, 68, 87, 98, 144, 150, 162, 201, 202, 535, 558, 836, 870, 873, 887, 1158–9, 1167, 1182, 1203, 1205–6, 1209, 1210–11, 1212, 1216, 1217–18, 1229

Bose, Subhash Chandra 36, 83, 435, 564, 569, 580–1

Boundary Adjustments, request for 818

Boundary Commission 546, 666, 745, 804, 805, 813, 818, 820, 838, 840–1, 1018, 1126, 1136, 1144, 1145, 1147–9, 1183, 1185, 1204, 1215

Bourne, Frederick 91, 1273

Bradlaugh, Charles 635

Brahma, Rup Nath 51, 63, 75, 637–40

Brandan, T. 1023

Brij Lal 471

British, British Commonwealth of Nations 5, 6, 38, 41–2, 96–7, 108, 173, 198, 754, 761–2, 774–6, 789, 802, 834, 839, 1205, 1260, 1262; appeal for retention of rule over India 1260–2; Conservative Party 115, 232, 233, 825, 826, 1079; engineered riots in Punjab 1008–9; Forces 798; foreign policy 108; Government’s White Paper on India 218; India’s stand on entry to 761–3; Indian policy 1014; invitation to Muslim League for discussions 166; Labour Party/Government 108–9, 223, 229, 233, 346, 1079; and League conspiracy of grouping plan 101; Liberal Party 223; sovereignty in India 98; Tory Party 232–3; withdrawal and Indo-British relationship 779–80
Brockman, Captain 729, 819, 1001–3, 1011, 1017–20
Buddha 7, 864, 905, 1198
Buddhists 266, 371, 374, 406, 585–6, 638–9, 650, 668, 805
Buksh, Ilahi Bux. See Bakhsh, Pir Ilahi
Bulgaria 47, 61, 271 bureaucracy 284, 316, 317–18, 331–4, 342, 487, 505, 530, 695, 995
Burhanuddin, M. 403
Burma 12, 32, 73, 74, 271; annexation 6; Committee 816–18, 823
Burq, Khan Mohd Ibrahim 1149–50
Burrows, J.F. 95–7, 144, 190–2, 195, 209, 416, 420–2, 558–9, 560, 1156, 1168–9, 1182, 1205–6
Butler, R.A.B. 212–13
Byrnes, James F. 174
C.V.S. 730, 1079, 1091
Cabinet: committees to decide upon higher appointments 147–8; considers future policy towards India 175–77; delegation 374; constitution-making scheme 372
Calcutta: position with regard to division of Bengal 1188–9; realization of collective fines 886; riots 408, 412; University students support Bengal partition 1170–2
Campbell, A. Doon 815–16, 820
Campbell-Johnson, Allan 726, 729
Canadian Commonwealth 7, 27, 76, 78
Carnegie, Andrew 635
Caste Hindus 3–4, 18, 58, 91, 103, 125, 370, 434, 589, 647, 659–60, 778, 800, 812, 821, 920, 1124; and untouchables 625, 630, 813, 908, 927
Cawnpore, arms check-up 868–9 censorship of newspapers and other organizations 436
Central Defence Council 762
Central Government Muslim Employees’ Association 933–4
Central Legislative Assembly 572, 592, 594
Central Provinces and Berar 580–1
Chadda, Jogendra Singh 50, 63, 75, 564
Chadha, Tilak Raj 304
Chakma, Bohmong and Mong states 73
Chakraborty, Satish Chandra 552
Chakravarty, Nil Kamal 1195
Chakraverty, Anukul Chandra 1257
Chakravarty, Kumud Chandra 377–8
Chaman Lal, Dewan 474–7, 480, 952, 1101, 1116, 1132, 1136
Champaran satyagaraha 432, 905
Chandpur Bar Association 380
Chari, A.S.R. 768
Charkha Sangh 579
Chatterjee, A.C. 874, 1154, 1167
Chatterjee, N.C. 230, 261, 529, 547, 872, 874, 881, 887, 1164, 1167, 1191, 1229, 1283
Chatterjee, Saradendu 364
Chattopadhyay (Chattopadhyaya), Kamaladevi 722, 833
Chaudhary, Valmiki 158–61, 761
Chaudhry, Hamidul Haque 1222
Chaudhry, Moinul Haque (Huq) 1055, 1062
Chaudhry (Chaudhuri/Chaudhury), Rohini Kumar 24, 682, 689, 699–700, 1051, 1054
Chaudhuri, R. 547
Chaudhury, Abdul Matin 26, 1056, 1058, 1065–9
Chaudhury, Mahendra Mohan 83
Chengappa, Diwan Bahadur K. 250, 600
Chengiz Khan 866
Chhotu Ram 1118
China, Imperialist Kuomintang Government 271
Chittagong Hill Tracts (CHT), 72–5, 585, 1059–60, 1175, 1183; demand representation and protection 72–5; Hillmen Association 72–5
Chopra, P.N. 141, 149-50, 444, 843, 853, 868, 891, 1250–1
Chopra, V.D. 1021
Choudhury, Dhirindra Kanto Lahiri 1162
Chowdhary, Ashrafuddin Ahmad 826–7, 855–6, 866–7
Chowdhury, Annada Prosad 552
Chowdhury, Fazlul Qadir 579
Chowdhury, Khaliquzzaman. See Khaliq-uz-Zaman, Chaudhry
Chowdhury, Moulvi Nazir Ahmad 580
Christian(s) 3, 28, 31, 52, 56, 60, 323, 362, 629, 705, 812, 1188–9; missionaries 374–5; population of Assam 694
Christianity 375, 690–1, 693, 697
Christie, W. 437–9, 930, 932–3, 935–6, 939–40
Chundrigar, L.I. 163, 203, 237
Civil and Military Planning Committee 179 civil marriages between Indians of different religious faiths 668
Clive, Robert 11
Clow, A. 91, 103, 104–5
Coal Report 201
Coalition Government 184, 214, 318–20, 322–3, 327, 335, 337–8, 341, 730, 737
Collins, M.V.H. 60, 63, 75
Colville, John 82, 1011–12, 1015–16, 1021–2, 1236 common civil code 672 communal harmony 983–4; appeal for 844–5; behind swords 980–1; joint plea for 845 communal ministry in Punjab, apprehensions about 999–1000 communal riots/violence, communalism 56, 97, 180–1, 185, 280, 323, 298, 313, 362–517, 586, 632, 665, 784; Ajmer–Merwara 252; in Assam 869–70, 1071–2; in Bengal 362–80, 390, 546–7, 551, 852, 872–99, 1154, 1158–9, 1161, 1215, 1220–2; Hindu point of view 408; in Calcutta 369, 872, 894–5, 896–8; troops needed for safeguarding 895–6; Noakhali 378, 380; in Saidpur, Rangpur district 363, 364–5; Tippera 378; in Bihar 386–434, 852, 900–26; causes 412; government policy and relief measures 406; housing for riot victims 418–19; questions in Legislative Assembly regarding 249–58; in Bombay 434–9, 852, 926–7; in Central Provinces and Berar 928–30; Delhi 436–9; compensation for riot victims 595–6; Garhmukteshwar 254; in Karachi 511; in North West Frontier Province 440–56, 843–71, 940–57; in Hazara district 443–4; a result of League propaganda 444; in Punjab 251–2, 262, 264, 275, 293, 296, 298, 313, 457–507, 843–71, 957–1030, 1130; appeal for action against 270–3; Fact Finding Commission 396; political parties responsible for communal flare up 506–7; riots result of Congress–League policies 485–6; situation takes serious turn 458–9; in Gurgaon 1027–9; in Rawalpindi 948; in Sind 1031–40; in United Provinces 250, 507–17, 1040–5
Communism 271, 233
Communist Party of India 317–18, 341, 366, 436, 486, 887, 1007
Communists 181, 191, 341
Conference of Bengal Hindus, Kolkata 548–9
Congress Seva Dal 579, 1034, 1267, 1274
Congress Socialist Party (CSP) 98, 313, 437, 578, 892, 917; censorship imposed on, 436; oppose 6 December Statement 82–3; members to join the Constituent Assembly if invited 722; observed Labour Day 1269; and partition 559–60; for unity of country and provinces 750
662, 676, 677, 689, 696, 722-4; Muslim League’s inclusion in CA 126, 133-4, 142, 143-4, 153, 161, 163, 171, 178-80, 190, 193, 220, 224, 227, 236, 238, 241, 293, 341;—dilemma 143-4;—Karachi Resolution on 125, 135, 149, 150-1, 204-5;—unwilling 145-6; policy of the Princes and States towards participation 156, 164; Objectives Resolution, discussions 4-23, 24-36; Procedural Sub-Committee 82; proceedings objected to 119-20; reservation in legislatures 632, 641-2, 655;—shall be proportionate 657; Rev Jerome D’Souza’s speech about cultural autonomy 28; safeguards for minorities 637-40, 641, 643, 647; Scheduled Castes’ demand for representation 633-4; should be dissolved 121; social and economic rights 641; Viceroy’s opinion on, and its working 114-15. See also Muslim League

Constitution 8-10, 12-21, 24-7, 29, 32-8, 74, 80, 82, 86-7, 89, 92, 94-7, 102-4, 117, 120-6, 130, 132, 136-40, 145-7, 149, 153-5, 158, 160-2, 167-8, 175, 179, 183-5, 187-90, 193, 195, 197, 200, 202, 204, 216, 219-20, 224-31, 235-6, 238-41, 243-6, 263-5, 314, 321, 329, 338, 341, 348, 372, 421, 482, 485, 523, 526, 530-1, 533, 544, 548, 585, 620-5, 632-3, 635-9, 641, 644-7, 649, 651-2, 654-5, 961, 965; Act 309, 644, 677; of the Advisory Committee 45-64; amendments 658-9; of Assam 91, 110-14, 119, 172; of Bengal 422, 554; of committee on subjects assigned to the union centre 64-71; League-Congress negotiations for 233-4; for Pakistan 420; question about framing new Constitution 75-9; rights of states 83; safeguards for Hindu minority 540, 542-3;—for Scheduled Castes 629, 660;—of tribals 639; Sikhs demand communal veto regarding making of 100 conversion by force from Hinduism to Islam 273, 369-70, 372-5, 676, 689, 691, 696-7, 851; of minor children 696; in NWFP 1096-7; triggers communal rioting 450-2

Corfield, Conrad 744
Coupland, Professor 332, 640 cow protection 918, 1280
Cranborne, Bobbety 212
Criminal Law (Amendment) Act (1908) 283, 295, 314, 480, 1282

Criminal Procedure Code (CrPC) 252, 290, 349, 445, 517, 883, 931, 935, 1085, 1107, 1108, 1264-5 criminal tribes 30, 694

Cripps, Stafford 8, 56, 96, 112, 117, 120, 127, 145-6, 152, 170-2, 174, 177, 212, 236, 244, 246, 528, 534, 588, 744, 755, 793, 802, 1143-5, 1146
Crown and Indian States, relations 193, 217
Crum, Erskine 729, 1087
Curzon, Lord 168, 210, 554, 893, 1152, 1161, 1172-3, 1175
Cust, Robert Needham 640
Czechoslovakia 47, 61

Daily Telegraph, The 495
D’Souza, Alban 50, 63, 75
D’Souza, Jerome 26-9
Dalal, K.N. 881
Damle, G.V. 1063
Damodar Valley project 201, 556
Danona, Joginder Singh 1115-16
Darrang Muslim League Committee 358
Das Gupta, S.R. 547
Das Gupta, Satish (Satis) Chandra 247, 376, 380, 877, 913, 918
Das, Basanta Kumar 1048, 1064
Das, Biswanath 25-6, 60-1, 65, 68, 681, 1207
Das, C.R. 996
Das, Chhabi 994-7
Das, Kanailal 552
Das, P.R. 547
Das, Radhanath 552, 1155, 1220
Das, Ramananda 1221
Das, Sarat Chandra 890
Das, Satyendra Kumar 547, 1162
Datta Roy, B.N. 547
Datta, Akhil Chandra 1158-9
Datta, D.N. 688, 699, 700
Daultana, Mian Mumtaz Mohammad 281, 282, 283, 320, 328, 472, 476, 492-3, 1027-9
Dayal, Prabhu 1051
Dayal, R. 254
de la Fargue, D.G.H. 444–5, 450, 454, 567, 1080
De, Abhay Charan 898–9
De, Kanailal 552
Debgun, Hardayal 265 defence and foreign policy 168
Delhi Muslims observe Punjab Day 292
Delhi Provincial Students Congress 437 democracy 9, 13, 93, 263, 290–1, 307–8, 412, 428, 479, 518, 536, 547–8, 559–60, 630, 669, 673, 778, 860, 975, 987, 1005–6, 1044, 1144, 1171, 1230
Deo, Shankar Rao 89, 103, 783, 833
Deorukhkar, B.J. 434
Depressed and Backward Classes 19, 44, 46, 47, 56, 59, 643, 694, 1181; demands for political representation and socio-economic safeguards 659–60; separate political representation 583–4
Dera Ismail Khan: communalism 454, 851–2, 940, 943–4, 945–7, 950–6, 994, 1034, 1252–4; Muslim League civil disobedience movement 346, 1076, 1084, 1095, 1097, 1101–2, 1105, 1109–11, 1283; refugees 603, 1252–4; volunteer organizations 567, 1283
Desai, Durgabehn 431
Desai, Mahadev 431
Desai, Morarji 864
Deshmukh, Dr 69, 70
Deshpande, V.G. 264, 456, 529, 870
Dev Dutt 1008
Dewan, Abani Ranjan 73
Dhamdhere, K.H. 264
Dhar, Chunilal 365
Dharam Prakash 50, 63
Dharam Vir 279–80
Dharmayudha Campaign 1280–1
Dhiman, Meher Chand 1191, 1229
Digvijayanath (Digbijaynath), Mohant 261, 265
Din Faqir Sahib of Amakhel 354
Dina Nath, Rai Bahadur 1093–4
Dinshaw, Nadirsha Edulji 635
Direct Action movement, direct action 4, 16, 135, 149, 151, 179, 184, 204, 224, 260, 262, 323, 342, 348, 357, 358, 405, 408, 412, 498, 553, 771, 829, 845, 851, 852, 866, 880, 949, 956, 988, 996, 1000, 1005, 1051, 1052–4, 1090, 1094, 1102–3, 1105–6, 1133, 1238 divide and rule policy 23, 217, 227–9, 725.
See also Two Nation Theory
Dominion status 211, 238, 241, 743, 744, 749, 754, 762, 764–5, 767, 782, 785–9, 790, 797–8, 800, 802, 816–17, 829, 1205, 1206, 1260, 1261, 1262; for Pakistan 791; reporting on 825–6
Dow, Hugh 150, 394, 760, 846, 902, 912, 1273
Driver, D.C. 1187, 1188
Duggal, Jaswant Singh 1127
Dundas, A.D.F. 1043
Dutt Mazumdar, Niharendu 1196
Dutt, Ch. Krishan Gopal 322
Dutt, R. Palme 227
Dutt, S.B. 1188
Dutta, Sukumar 552
Eady, Wilfred 164
East Pakistan Renaissance Society 1222 economic: conditions 8;–in Punjab 499–500, 521; efficiency 673; instability 765; justice 10; policy 159; safeguards for minorities 639, 652; security 4, 673; and social systems 905
Eden, Anthony 825
Education Bill 1186
electorates: provincial and union 666–7
Enquiry Commission for Bihar riots 392 equality before law 80, 920
Eustace, J.C. 470
Excluded and Partially Excluded areas 23–4, 45, 53, 56, 58, 67, 74, 694
Explosive Substances Act 1013
External Affairs and Commonwealth Relations Departments 206
Famine Relief Code 674
Faqir of Ipi 342, 565, 948, 1232, 1238
Farid, Ghulam 1008
Farid, S.M. 915
Faroque, S.M. 915
Faruqi, Abdul Salam 570
Fatima, Begum 314, 315
Fazl-i-Husain 301
Feni Muslim League 889
First War of Independence 23, 705, 708, 710 foreign policy 42, 109, 169; British 108; of Pakistan 816, 822
Forward Bloc 191, 404, 436–7, 564, 578, 887, 1021, 1268
Fraser, Lovat 1175 fraternity and brotherhood 15, 21–2
French Constitution 77
French revolution 4
Fridgman, F.H.G. 436–7 fundamental rights 8, 10, 14, 47, 55, 71, 72, 74, 75, 638, 644, 647–8, 662, 672, 677, 691, 702, 710, 712, 716, 718
Gadgil, N.V. 9–12
Gallacher, William 217
Gandhi, Kasturba 271, 431
Gandhi, M.K. 14, 18, 25, 45, 83, 84, 88, 91, 98, 104, 106, 111, 141, 149–50, 156, 162–4, 192, 202–5, 209, 219–20, 221, 225, 233, 258, 272, 273, 274, 362–3, 367, 386–9, 395, 398, 404, 405, 416, 417, 442, 444, 456, 484, 497, 528–9, 535, 558, 560, 587, 593–4, 596, 597, 605, 629, 635, 650, 668, 744, 754, 756, 757, 770, 777, 785, 792, 824, 825, 830–1, 832, 833, 836–7, 841–2, 843, 844, 845, 846, 848–9, 853, 854, 856, 859, 865–6, 873, 898–9, 910–13, 916, 917–18, 925, 947, 956, 961, 971, 1013, 1015, 1031, 1037, 1051, 1078–9, 1082, 1090, 1105–6, 1112, 1115, 1129, 1147, 1166, 1171, 1201, 1202–3, 1204–5, 1208, 1234, 1243–4, 1246, 1255, 1262; and communal disturbances, in Bihar 407, 511–12, and communal disturbances, in Bihar 407, 511–12; in Noakhali 247–8, 249, 258, 363, 366, 368–77, 380, 391–2, 429, 471, 742, 877–8, 898, 913–14; deplores Punjab riots 471–2; discussion with PCC members 425–6; faith in British pledge 742; faith in Cabinet Mission’s bona fides 133; on future of Assam 111; and Hindus 397; advice to migrate from Noakhali 877; on continued fervor 908–9; appeal to undo the damage 433–4; of Sindh, advice to 869; interviews with—Abul Hashem 1197–9; with—H.S. Suhrawardy 1119–1200; to S.P. Mookerjee 1201–2; and Jinnah, appeal for communal peace 846–7, 851–2, 853, 884, 892–3, 895, 951, 953, 992, 997, 1003, 1042, 1097, 1218; versus Jinnah 200, 781–2; and Muslim League 125–6, 426; and Muslims, advice to refugees at Patna on resettlement and rehabilitation 606–9; assures safety and resettlement 424, 609–12, 615; call for donations for victims 903–5; meeting with women 429; and Mountbatten 735–6; on Pakistan 25, 781; and partition, British withdrawal and Indo-British relationship 779–80; of Bengal and Punjab 783–4; on Congress’ acceptance of 837; opposes 538; plan on Interim Government 725–33; withholds plan 733–4; plea for tolerance 362–3; reading of 20th Feb Statement 221; reaction to HMG’s statement 839; speech about communal disturbances 375–6; talks with Abdul Ghaffar Khan 1237; talks with refugees from Rawalpindi 1243–4
Gandhi, Manu 836–7
Ganga Saran 327
Ganguli, Bipin Behari 552
Ganguly, Subodh 1155
Gardezi, Syed Ali Hussain 289
Gardezi, Syed Vilayet Hussain 289
Garg, Ratan Lal 515, 516
Garhukteshwar communal riots 268, 511–12
Gayen, Arabinda 552
Gazdar, M.H. 1027
General Clauses Act (1897) 719
George VI, King 162–5, 177–8, 192–3
Ghadar Party of San Francisco 521
Ghani, Abdul 403, 1281
Ghanshyam, Prof. 1034
Ghaznavi, Maulana Dawood (Dadood) 307, 1244
Ghorpade, Wamanrao 1269
Ghose, Hemendra Prasad 1155
Ghosh (Ghose), Surendra Mohan (Surendramohan) 50, 63, 833, 885–6, 898, 1182, 1211
Ghosh, Amar Krishna 882, 885–6, 898
Ghosh, Atulya 550–1
Ghosh, J.K. 547
Ghosh, Profulla Chandra 50, 63, 75, 833, 1182, 1200
Ghosh, Sailen 1155
Ghosh, Sudhindra Nath 226–7
Ghosh, Sudhir 145–6, 156, 170–2, 239–42
Ghulam Nabi 1244
Ghushkhara Bihar Refugee Relief 379
Ghyashuddin Pathan 1053
Gias Ram, L. 976
Gibbon, C.E. 65, 69, 328, 471, 692, 693, 1004, 1247–8
Index

Gidwani, Choitram (Choithram) 93, 1037–8, 1039–40
Gilani, Syed Nabi Shah 289
Gill, Sardar Niranjan Singh 141, 221, 416, 593–4, 596–7, 598, 605; report on the Bihar riots 404–16
Glancy, Bertrand J. 287
Globe 534–5
Goala, Kalanya 365
Gobind Singh, Gum 518
Godbole, Y.A. 1031
Godse, Nathu Ram 265
Goenka, Buddredas 1188
Gohil, J.V. 71, 72
Gokhale, D.V. 261
Golwalkar, M.S. (Golvelkar, Madho Rao) 439, 1268, 1278
Goondas Act 929
Gorkhas 421, 1038; appeal to recognize as a minority community 586; right to carry Khukries 1038
Guru Dutt, Pandit 1150
Gurung, Damber Singh 49, 56–7
Hai, Abdul (Hye, Abdul) 1062, 1063, 1073
Hakam, H.A. 339–41
Halifax, Earl 213, 232–3
Hallett, Maurice 1031
Hameed, Ch Abdul 296
Hamid, S.A. 1227
Hannah, A.B. 253
Hans Raj, Mahatma 1150
Hans Raj, Raizada 1116
Harbaj Ram, Chaudhri 590, 1132, 1136
Hariana. See Haryana
Harijan 629, 869, 900–2, 903–5, 906–8, 908–9, 913–15, 918, 922–23
Harijans 18, 19, 24, 29, 30, 31, 35, 58, 59, 587, 659, 905; atrocities on 29–30; part and parcel of Hindu community 589–90; not safe in domain of Pakistan 1245; of Sind, representation in the Constituent Assembly 71; want partition of Punjab 1140
Haroon, Begum Yusuf 340
Haroon, Yusuf A. 613–14
Harris, Ronald 137–8, 180–2, 225–6
Harrison, Agatha 780–1, 824
Harvesting of Paddy and Cultivation of Rabi Ordinance 592
Haryana: Jats support Sikhs’ demand 1118; will resist communal domination 494–5
Hashem, Abul 1194, 1197–9, 1216
Hashmi, Laeeque Ahmad 916
Hassan, Chaudri Mohd 603, 1128
Hassan, S. Ibani 339
Hassan, Syed Mehdi 493
Hastings, Warren 11, 1059
Hatwar, R.J. 1269, 1270
Havludar, Mohammad Khan 461–2
Hazara: civil disobedience by Muslim League 343, 344, 346, 956, 1075, 1076, 1084; communal disturbance 24, 258, 261–2, 342, 349–51, 392, 407, 440, 443–5, 449, 454, 941, 944, 946–7, 953, 1104–5, 1109, 1110, 1264–5; in response to exaggerated propaganda about Bihar 442; result of
Index

League propaganda 444;—triggered by forcible conversion 450-1, 453, 455; District
Public Safety Ordinance 441-2, 445; HinduSikh Relief Committee 604-5; refugees 591; relief and rehabilitation 604-5, 1263; situation normal 596; tribal raids 445-7
Henderson, Arthur 144-5, 146, 164, 177, 203,
529, 1242-3
Hidaytullah, Begum 341
Hidaytullah, Ghulam Hussain 95, 244-6, 613-14
Hills State, Scheduled Castes of 633-4
Himalaya Scheduled Castes Association
(Himalaya Prantiya Koli Sabha) 634
Hindlay, N.L. 595
Hindu Mahasabha (AIHM) 82-3, 143, 191,
230, 248-9, 259-67, 269, 271, 377, 390, 398,
407, 422, 432, 438, 456, 506, 515, 529, 531,
548-9, 553, 559, 561, 573, 744, 763, 768,
772, 773, 843, 873, 957-9, 977, 1217, 1229, 1248, 1272, 1283; disapproves the policy of appeasement of Muslims 262; opposes 6 December Statement 82-3; reactions to Karachi Resolution 135-7; rehabilitation work by 1256-9; Resolution passed 269; violates orders 493-4
Hindu National Army 265
Hindu Rashtra Dal 579, 1276
Hindu Sahayata Samiti on Delhi Police highhandedness 937-8
Hindu (Benares Hindu) University Act,
Amendment 266
Hindu(s) 3-4, 7, 17, 26, 29, 31, 128, 137, 142, 143,
147-8, 152, 157-8, 165, 181, 183, 186, 200,
201, 207-10, 222, 227, 232, 233-4, 237-8,
248, 259, 264-6, 270-2, 279-80, 292-3,
295-6, 297, 313-14, 317, 320, 323, 325, 348,
354, 360, 395, 397, 405-7, 415, 418, 423, 424,
425, 427-8, 433, 465, 494-5, 497-8, 500,
567, 568, 569, 572-3, 577, 597, 606, 615, 684,
686, 722-3, 740-2, 749, 753, 763-4, 768-9,
773-4, 778-80, 799-802, 805, 812, 814, 831-2, 847, 858-60, 863, 867, 874-5, 887, 892, 948,
955-7, 1021-2, 1024, 1032-4, 1084, 1104, 1254-5, 1262, 1265, 1267-8, 1276-81; action taken against 389-90; of Assam (5^^ Assam);
and Harijans 589-90; and Muslims {see Hindu-Muslim relations); and non-Hindus, demand for separate ministries 915-16; and Sikhs (j^f Hindus and Sikhs); Caste Hindus
3-4, 18, 58, 125, 240, 243, 584, 625, 768, 778, 1297

800, 812-13, 821, 897, 927, 1189-90, 1251-2, 1261; continue communal fervor 908-9, 910;
domination 131, 158, 194, 222, 241, 243, 330, 343, 455-6, 463, 921, 1015; idealism 518; in revolt 190-1 ;Jats 302, 330, 463, 524, 626, 1024, 1028, 1118, 1121-2; minorities 15, 32,
58-61, 241, 261, 263, 266, 365, 369, 454, 460,
524, 540-3, 549, 751, 772, 865, 996, 1037-8, 1039-40, 1114, 1250-1; no support for anti¬ partition movement 1212-13; of Bengal 137, 161, 170, 191, 261, 362-3, 364, 377-8, 379,
493, 510, 526, 534, 536-7, 540-6, 548-9,
553-60, 727, 761, 872, 879-81, 887-95, 897,
1152-4, 1156-61, 1164-70, 1172-83, 1188-94,
1197-9, 1201-19, 1222, 1224-6, 1229-31,
1240, 1246, 1275; of Bihar 201, 258, 260-3,
274, 375, 389, 390, 391, 397, 398-9, 406-8,
416-21, 471, 767, 900-14, 917-18, 920-3,
925-6;—peasant uprising 370; of Bombay 434-5, 439, 926-7; of Central Provinces and Berar 928-9, 931-9; of Hazara 442, 443-5;
of Hyderabad 556; of Noakhali 260, 376-7,
426, 569, 607-12, 875-7; of NWFP 940, 945,
1001, 1078, 1097-8, 1104-5, 1107, 1109-10,
1238, 1263; of Peshawar 1094-5; of Punjab
137, 161, 170, 194, 297-9, 301-2, 305, 330,
334-5, 338, 457-8, 463, 464, 466-8, 470-2,
474-7, 479, 484-90, 493, 500-4, 506, 518,
521-4, 525-8, 532, 534-9, 727, 761, 769,
957-61, 963-4, 966, 970, 978-84, 986, 989,
993-4, 996-1002, 1006-9, 1011-18, 1025-6,
1028-9, 1031, 1114-18, 1120, 1123-9, 1133-4,
1136-8, 1141-3, 1145, 1149, 1243-5, 1251, 1275; of Sind 71, 267, 362, 556, 869, 1037-40;
of United Province 507, 509-15, 517, 1041,
1248;—proportion in services 1045-6; Press
884-5, 912-13, 1015; private army 1273;
raids on 157; refugees 262, 438, 598, 604-5, 875, 926, 950; representation in Advisory Committee 54, 58, 59; retaliate against Muslim aggression 273-4; states 266, 531, 555, 805, 1028; tribals, relation 350; violence against/riot victims 249, 252, 254, 256-7, 260-3, 269, 351, 364-6, 377, 379, 386, 402-3,
408, 411-12, 416, 431, 442, 443-5, 448, 453-4,
455, 456, 457-8, 463, 464, 466-8, 470-1, 477,
484, 494, 500-1, 564, 592, 843, 853, 872, 881,
885, 889-90, 906-8, 917, 933, 935-6, 945,
947, 950, 954, 973-6, 996; women 429, 904,
1120


Hinduism 266, 375, 272, 432, 536, 574, 580, 624, 650, 651, 694, 903, 904, 939
Hindus and Sikhs 55, 800; atrocities committed against 500–1; coalition with Muslim Unionists 336; forcible conversion 261, 266, 369–70, 374–5, 691, 844, 995; refugees exodus 445; responses to Muslim League agitation in Punjab 294; to oppose Pakistan together 529–31
Hindu–Sikh Minorities Protection Board 1093–6
Hindustan National Army 561
Hitler, Adolf 272, 290, 1019, 1028, 1100
Hobb, Brigadier 453
Hobbes, Thomas 34
Home Guards, organization 581–2
Houlton, J.W. 386–8, 912
Huda, Najmul 404
Hume, A.O. 635
Huq, A.K. Fazul 190, 366, 376
Huq (Haque), Abdul 1055–6
Huq, Abdullah Nurul 1062, 1063, 1072
Huq (Haq), Azharul 909
Huq (Haq), Maulana Burhanul 569, 928–9, 930, 1269
Huq, Maulvi Nazamul 1053
Huq (Haque), Saghirul 916
Hussain, Abdul 1063
Hussain, Akhtar (Akhter), 284, 500, 572, 999, 1015, 1027
Hussain, Begum Tasadduque 314, 315, 340, 871

Hitler, Adolf 272, 290, 1019, 1028, 1100
Hobb, Brigadier 453
Hobbes, Thomas 34
Home Guards, organization 581–2
Houlton, J.W. 386–8, 912
Huda, Najmul 404
Hume, A.O. 635
Huq, A.K. Fazul 190, 366, 376
Huq (Haque), Abdul 1055–6
Huq, Abdullah Nurul 1062, 1063, 1072
Huq (Haq), Azharul 909
Huq (Haq), Maulana Burhanul 569, 928–9, 930, 1269
Huq, Maulvi Nazamul 1053
Huq (Haque), Saghirul 916
Hussain, Abdul 1063
Hussain, Akhtar (Akhter), 284, 500, 572, 999, 1015, 1027
Hussain, Begum Tasadduque 314, 315, 340, 871
Index

Hussain, Chowdury Abid 915–16
Hussain, Ghulam. See Hidayullah, Ghulam
Hussain
Hussain, Sardar Mohammad 289
Hutchings, Robert H. 115, 204, 206, 208
Hyat, Zahida 283, 289
Hydari, Akbar 869–70, 1063–4, 1073–4
Hyderabad 266
Hye, Abdul. See Hai, Abdul
Ibrahim, Mirza Muhammad 499
Ifikhar-ud-Din (Ifikharuddin), Mian 281, 282, 283, 328, 332, 489
Imam, Hussein (Hossain), 147, 209
Imam, Jaffar (Jaffar) 253, 404, 415, 596, 598, 803
Imam, Lady 404
Imam, Mazhar 401, 404, 912–13, 915, 917, 919
imperialism 12, 16, 23, 46, 93, 100, 103, 107, 108, 109, 130–2, 217, 292, 372, 849
Independent Labour Party, Volunteer Corps 579
India: fateful hour 739–40; and His Majesty’s Government 133–4; pessimism about future 737; stand on entry to Commonwealth 761–3
Indian Armed Forces 186–7, 214, 541, 798; new policy statement may destabilize 196
Indian Army 173–4, 199, 208, 640, 667, 735, 995, 1231, 1266; division of 793, 916; integrity of 161, 165; Muslim troops 1228; post-war 205; role of Sikhs 518, 642
Indian National Army (INA) 36, 106, 144, 200, 201–2, 205, 207, 221, 407, 564, 740, 1269;
Relief Committee 1269
Indian National Congress (INC). See Congress
Indian National Maritime Union 1221
Indian Naturalization Act (1926) 713
Indian Penal Code (IPC) 309, 883, 936, 1276
Indian Railway Enquiry Committee 893
Indian states 5, 7, 21, 33, 40–1, 44, 67, 74, 136, 170, 198–9, 214, 215, 220, 228, 662, 677, 678–80, 714, 751, 753, 761, 766, 782, 788, 795, 805–6, 815–16, 821, 1024–5, 1028–9, 1192; and the Crown, relations 193; paramountcy and Divine Rights of Kings 135, 186, 216; protection of Scheduled Castes in 623–33
Indo-British relations 767, 788, 790, 774–6, 788, 798, 829
Indo-China 12, 34, 93, 271
Indonesia 12, 271
Indra Prakash 264
Ingle, G. 1278
International Court, Hague 90
Iqbal, Mohd 683
Ireland (Irish Republic in British Commonwealth) 40, 76, 77, 78; Act (1920) 523; Constitution 656
Ishar Prehlad 461
Isher Das, R.B. Lala 604
Islam Bibi case 342
Islam, Islamic 362, 376, 415, 955–6; social democracy 518; theocracy and modern spirit 1230–1
Islam, Maulvi Sarwaral 1053
Islam, Mohd 289
Ismail, S.M. 400, 402
Ismay, H.L. (Pug) 175, 177, 211, 229, 726, 728–9, 730, 731–2, 735–6, 744, 751–4, 757–8, 759, 764–5, 770–1, 780, 782, 790, 797–9, 938, 944, 1078–9, 1080, 1087, 1097, 1103, 1132–3, 1145, 1179, 1183, 1191–2, 1233, 1239
Iyer, Krishna Swamy. See Ayyar, Diwan Bahadur Alladi Krishnaswami
Jaffer, A.E.H. 249–57, 562, 568, 570–1, 572–5, 592, 595, 598
Jagannadharao, M. 654–9
Jagjivan Ram 50, 63, 75, 151, 206–7, 645–9, 689, 782, 833, 1140
Jai Hind Dal 569
Jai Prakash Dal 578
Jain Swetambar Conference 722–4
Jain, Ajit Prasad 705
Jain, S.P. 895–6
Jain, Ugra Sen 650–3
Jainism 650–3; doctrine of non-violence 650
Jains 672; demand for minority rights 650–3; memorandum to minority Sub-Committee by Jain Shvetambar Conference 722–4
Jairamdas Daulatram 50, 58–9, 62, 65, 68, 75, 833
Jalan, B.L. 1188
Jallianwala massacre 424–5
James I 28
James, Captain, 564
Jamiat-ul-Ulema 831, 910, 1264
Jamna Dass, Seth 1026
Jan, Malik Ali 352
Jan, Mohammad Yahya 349, 455
Jan, Mohd 603
Janki Nath 536–8
Jatiya Banga Sangathan Samiti 550–2
Jayakar, M.R. 21, 23, 25, 31, 36, 40, 69, 70, 82, 92
Jedhe, K.M. 1274
Jee, Ghulam 1062
Jejeebhoy, Jamsetjee 635
Jinnah, Begum Fatima 314–5, 1078; argues case for Pakistan 763–4
Jirgas in Baluchistan 350, 354–5, 445, 835–6, 941, 943, 947–8, 950, 1084, 1086, 1107, 1235
Joginder Kaur 461
joint electorates 80–1, 740; with reservation of seats 544, 657
Joint Planning Committee 183–8
Jones, E. Stanley 769–70
Jones, Lewis 140
Josh, Sohan Singh 1007–9
Joshi, Apparao 1275
Index 1301

Joshi, G.M. 744, 844, 925, 1040
Joshi, P.C. 341, 342, 485–7
Joshi, S.J. 1275
Joshi, S.M. 1274
Joshi, Yaswant Rao 265 judiciary and the Constitution 78–9, 658; in Australia 78–9; in Canada 79; in USA 78
Jugal Kishore, Acharya 515, 516, 833, 1023, 1101
Kabir, Abdul 289
Kacharis and Boro Kacharis 637, 638
Kachru, D.N. 633
Kalia, Ram Nath 262, 529
Kalyan Dass, Seth 481
Kamal-ud-Din 281, 285
Kamath, H.V. 678–9, 688, 695
Kamath, S. 694
Kanitkar, R.A. 529
Kapoor, Jaidev 443–4
Karam Chand 261
Karim, Akhwand Abdul 289
Karim, Fazal 1021
Karpatri Maharaj, Swami 853, 1280–1
Kashem, Maulvi Abdul 356–7, 1052–4, 1071, 858
Kashmir 92, 266, 518, 763, 853, 1029, 1030; Hindu and Sikh refugees from Hazara 443, 591, 604, Kashmere Durbar 262; Muslims in Kashmiri Lai 1021
Kashmiri, Agha Shorish 471
Kashmiri, Shyamnarain 581
Kashtakari 710
Kasuri, Ghulamuddin 283
Katju, K.N. 714
Kazi Isa 1034
Ken, Karan Singh 587
Keshab Chandra 262, 957
Khaitan, D.P. 66, 69, 713–14
Khaksar Volunteer Corps 563, 578, 579, 1266, 1276
Khaksars 289, 296, 299, 313, 404, 566–7, 932, 970, 1021, 1265, 1277–8, 1280, 1283; government attitude towards 562–3
Khalil, Mohd 601
Khaliq-uz-Zaman, Chaudhry 1057, 1167
Khalistan 536, 982
Khan, A.K. Asharaf 1021
Khan, A.R. 1123–6
Khan Abdul Qayyum Khan 1239
Khan, Abdulla 1086
Khan, Aga 233–4
Khan, Akhtar Ali 968, 1275
Khan, Alhaj Islam 580
Khan, Ali Ahammad 558
Khan Amir Mohd Khan 955
Khan, Arbab Abdul Ghafoor 451–2
Khan, Arbab Dur 345
Khan, Arbab Mohammad Afzal 347
Khan, Assadjan 1253
Khan Atta Mohammed Khan 352
Khan Bahadur A.H. Khan 364
Khan Bahadur Haji Majradil Khan 350
Khan, Burhanuddin 915, 919
Khan, Dilawar 1253
Khan, Dost Muhammad 345
Khan Faqir Khan 346
Khan, Haji Soheb 350
Khan, Jan Mohammad 1062
Khan, I.U. 1242
Khan, Jammat 1086
Khan, Jan Mohammad 1062
Khan, K.S. Hafta 354
Khan, K.S. Hayat 354
Khan, K.S. Qutab 354
Khan, Kaiser 350
Khan, Khan Abdul Qaiyum 344, 451
Khan, Liaquat Ali 99, 113, 115, 127-9, 139, 140, 142, 143, 146-7, 149, 151-4, 155, 158, 163, 166, 171, 200-1, 204, 206, 207, 208, 210-11, 242-3, 278-9, 280, 297-8, 336, 355, 737, 746-7, 757, 759, 763, 790, 799, 867, 941-4, 977-9, 1017-20, 1024-5, 1027-9, 1089, 1097-8, 1133, 1194, 1212, 1213-16; Jenkins denies charges laid upon him by 979-80; statement on AICC’s decision on HMG’s 6 December statement 110-11; on future political scenario 767
Khan, M. Khaisor 354
Khan, Malik Amir 1086
Khan, Malik Gulab 354
Khan, Malik Kutab 350
Khan, Malik Youssuf 352
Khan, Maulana Abdul Hamid 356-7, 1049, 1056
Khan, Maulana Mohd Akram 347, 349, 1194, 1209-10, 1212, 1213, 1222, 1228
Khan, Maulana Zafar Ali 292
Khan, Maulvi Aziz Ahmad 509
Khan, Mir Badshah 350, 1111
Khan Mohammed Isqah Khan 1076
Khan Mohammed Khan of Sahiwal 296
Khan, Mohammad Ismail 347
Khan, Mohammad Jan 947
Khan, Mohammad Yaqub 346
Khan, Muhammad Akbar 344
Khan, Muhammad Ashraf 284, 1239
Khan, Muhammad Zafrullah 315
Khan, Munshi Mohamed 1008
Khan, Nawab Ismail 26
Khan, Nawabzada Allah Nawaz 346, 1239
Khan, Nawabzada Asghar Ali 289
Khan, Pir Muhammad 344
Khan, Qalandar 346
Khan, Qazi Attaullah 782, 945, 947, 1074-5, 1235, 1282
Khan, Raja Ghazanfar Ali 26, 157-8, 163, 203, 278, 312, 320-1, 347, 489, 500, 871, 921, 965, 967-8, 974-6, 1021-2, 1024, 1105, 1133, 1230-1
Khan, Saif Ali 350
Khan, Samandar 350
Khan Samin Jan Khan 1239
Khan, Sardar Shaukat Hayat (Hayat) 281, 282, 283, 328, 476, 802, 867
Khan, Shahzad 350
Khan, Shahzada Fazaldin 1111
Khan, Shaukat Hayat 320
Khan, Sher 1008
Khan Siddique Ali 352
Khan, Sikandar Hayat 289, 301
Khan, Suleman 1270
Khan, Sultan Mohd 352
Khan Wali Mohd Khan 443
Khan, Yaquib 46
Khan Yar Mohd Khan 1009
Khan, Yunus 1239
Khandekar, H.J. 29-31, 50, 63, 75, 686
Khandker, Maulvi Nazir Hussain 1053
Khanna, Gangaram 265
Khanna, Mehr Chand 50, 62, 75, 440, 442, 591, 945, 947, 1096, 1110, 1252-3, 1263
Khanna-Khan axis/combine 870, 1077, 1107
Khaparde B.G. 265, 529
Khwatinkhuma 1062
Khel, Hayat-Nazar 354
Kher, B.G. 720, 864-5
Khilafat movement 918
Khilafat Pakistan Scheme 856-63
Khudai Khidmatgars 444, 455, 1074-5, 1081, 1107, 1237, 1239, 1254
Khuhro, Khan Bahadur 95, 613
Khurshid, K.H. 815-16, 1065-9
Khushal Chand, Lala 1150-1
Kidwai, Rafi Ahmad 516, 833
Kirde, G.A. 1269, 1278
Kirpa Ram 463
Kiran, Saif-ud-Din 480-1, 537
Kirpan question 262, 643, 665, 685, 931-2, 934-6, 973, 978, 979, 982, 983, 988, 989-90, 1002, 1018. See also Sikhs
Kishorlalbhai 853
Kitchlew, Saif-ud-Din 480-1, 537
Kodandaramayya, P. 24
Kohat Muslim women demand fresh elections 1079-80; political prisoners 1078
Kukis 1059–60. See also Nagas
Kunzru, Gopi Nath 265
Kunzru, H.N. 92
Kurram Agency 1086

Lad, D.N. 434
Lahiry, Somnath 377
Lahore District Congress Committee 322
Lahore Muslim women in Frontier movement 1078
Lahore rioting uncontrollable 1015–16
Lajpat Rai, Lala 1150
Lal, Jagat Narain 20–1, 403, 405
Lamrro, Kishenlal 747 land issue in Assam 639; in Bihar 418–9 land revenue of Bengal 1176–8; of Punjab 1133–4
Lari Saheb 510
Lascelles, Alan 196–7
Laski, Harold 14
Latif (Latiff), Abdul Sahib, Pir of Zakori 229, 346, 1021, 1071, 1111 law and order 322; in Assam 1072; in Bihar 905, 914; in Calcutta 889–90; in Punjab 971, 982–3, 999
Law, U.C. 547
League of Nations 47
Leghari, Jamai Khan 289
Leghari, Nawab Mohd Khan 289
Lekh Ram, Pandit 1150
Line System 360, 1051
linguistic minorities 27, 554
Linlithgow, Lord 744
Listowel, Lord 212, 1110, 1141–2, 1145–6
Lloyd, Lord 1110
Lobo, L. 588–9
Lohia, Ram Manohar 89, 90, 513, 559–60, 722
Lok Sena 564, 579, 1267, 1276

Lucknow Pact (1916) 664
Lushai Hill District 1059–62, 1068

Macaulay, Thomas Babington 11
MacDonald, A.A. 311, 340
Macmillan, Harold 825
Madhavdas Shivalomal 1034
Mahabir Dal 567, 1265
Mahalanobis, Nagendra 366
Mahalingayal, V. 261
Mahanti, Charu Chandra 552
Maharashtra Provincial Congress Committee 1274
Mahmud of Ghazni 157, 871
Mahmud, Syed 397, 403, 405–7, 414, 416, 423, 425, 900–1, 912–13, 914, 917–18
Mahmud, Zaffar 1021
Mahsud, Sher Badshah Khan 354–5, 1111
Mahnus 350, 354, 950, 954–5, 1084
Maitra, Lakshmi Kanta 1160–2, 1182
Maity, Nikunja Behari 552
Majhi, Nishapati 552
Majid, Hakim Abdul 1008
Majid, Sheikh Abdul 739
Majithia, Surender Singh 262
Majithia, Surjit Singh 1117
Majlis-i-Ahrar 471, 536, 1021
Majumdar (Mazumder), Abdul Malib 1062
Majumdar (Majumder), Ananga Mohon 1259
Majumdar, Harendra Nath 550
Majumdar (Mazumder), Hemaprova 1155
Majumdar, Mukabbi Ali 1062
Majumdar, S.N. 592–3
Malaviya Hindu Sangathan Fund 248–9, 259, 577
Malaviya, Mukund 264
Malaviya, Pandit Madan Mohan 259, 996
Mal-guzar 15
Malik, D.M. 936–7
Mallam, Colonel G.L. 946
Mallick, Ashutosh 552
Mamdott. See Khan Iftikhar Hussain Khan
(Nawab of Mamdot)
Man Kaur 461
Manaen, T. 586
Mandal, J.N. 163, 203, 211, 587–8, 1172, 1175, 1190, 1197, 1251–2
Manik Chand 587
Manki Sharif, Pir of 243, 343, 344, 355, 943–4, 945, 950, 1075, 1077, 1080, 1089, 1091, 1104
Mann, Jagjit Singh 1241
Mann, Jogindar Singh 1121
Mardan 343–4
Marjan, Ghazi 352
Martial Law 191; in Lahore, appeal for 1009–10, 1011–12; denied by Jenkins 1010; in Rawalpindi 503
Martyn, D. 884
Masani, M.R. 51, 63, 66, 75, 76, 667, 668
Mashriqi, Allama 349, 565, 653
Mohamands (Mohmands) 349, 565, 653
Mohammad, Malik Ata 1086
Mohluddin, Ghomal (Ghulam) 915, 1021
Moitra, Bejoy C. 364
Mokcha Mayang. See Nokcha, Mayang
Momin Muslim volunteers 394
Momins 406, 415
Mondal, Anna Prosid 552
Montagu—Chelmsford Report 664
Montgomery 302, 506, 521, 524, 533, 1003, 1122, 1124, 1129, 1131, 1133, 1136
Moonje, B.S. 263–4, 267, 994–7; comments on Indian policy statement 229–30; exhorts Hindus to retaliate against Muslim aggression 273–4; on action taken against Hindus 389–90; opposed division of Punjab 534–5
Moors 406
Morley, Lord John 1175
Morris, Michael 403
Moslem ‘separatism’ 217
Mountbatten, Edwina 178, 763–4, 778, 948, 1092, 1182, 1254
Index

1218-19, 1220-1, 1226, 1228, 1233, 1234, 1235, 1237-8, 1239-40, 1281-2; agenda for 198-9; clarifies his position on Gandhi’s scheme 732; comments on political situation 759; discussion with Gandhi on political situation 734-6; interview with Maulana Azad 726-7, 737-8, 1081-2; clarifies his position on Gandhi’s scheme 732; comments on political situation 759; discussion with Gandhi on political situation 734-6; interview with Gandhi 825-6, 1078-9; interview with B.G. Kher 864-5; interview with Gandhi 825-6, 1078-9; interview with Jinnah 748-9, 844-5, 1097-8; interview with B.G. Kher 864-5; interview with Kripalani 760; interview with Krishna Menon 761-3; interview with Liaqat Ali Khan 746-7, 1097-8; interview with Maharaja of Patiala 984-5; interview with Matthai 737; interview with G.B. Pant 1041; interview with Patel 755-6, 764; interview with Raj Kumari Amrit Kaur 777; interview with Rajendra Prasad 749-50; interview with Suhrwardy 1178-9; and Nehru 733; Plan 797-9; realizes united India impractical 753-5

Mudie, Francis 286, 729, 734, 1031; against Congress claim 1032-3

Muhammad bin Qasim (Kassim) 22, 157

Muhammad, Malik 495

Mukeijee, B.C. 251

Mukherjee, Baidyanath 83, 104

Mukherjee (Mookherjee, Mookerjee), Shyama Prasad (Shyamaprasad, Syamaprasad, Shyamaprosad) 23, 50, 63, 75, 230, 267, 380, 399, 536-8, 540-3, 544-5, 548, 559, 586, 872, 874, 1163, 1167, 1174, 1182, 1183-6, 1191-4, 1195, 1197, 1201-2, 1204-5, 1207, 1208; appeals for men and money 183; memorandum on minorities 662-7; response to Suhrawardy’s statement 1169-70; on Bengal Division 543-4, 554-7

Mukherjee, Jogesh Chandra 1195

Mukherjee, Kalipada 364-5, 1200

Mukherjee, Saila Kumar 1155

Mukhopadhyay, Nagendranath 552

Mukharanji 575

Mullah, Manki 351

Munick, Mukunda Behari 1155

Munir, Shah Uzair 431

Munjee, Mukunda Rao 568

Munshi, K.M. 49-50, 51, 52, 54, 55, 56, 57-8, 59, 61, 64, 65, 66, 68, 69, 75, 685-6, 687, 688-9, 690, 691, 693, 695, 696, 699, 700-01, 702, 714, 718

Murli Dhar 405, 408

Mushabib, Abdul Makin Muhammad 1063

Muslim Jamaat 739-40

separate electorates given to 629–30; separate Ministries for 915–16; services to British 96; and Sikhs, relation/clashes 194, 311–12, 322–3, 334, 501, 641, 642, 989, 1011, 1017–20, 1083, 1119–21, 1279; troops helping Hindus against Muslims 1021–2; Unionists 301, 336; unity essential for creation of Pakistan 243–4; women 284, 341. See also Khaksars; Muslim League, Gandhi, M.K., Nehru, Jawaharlal; Jinnah, Muhammad Ali

Muslim League 3–4, 5, 8, 9, 16, 17, 18, 25, 32, 35, 40, 44, 54, 93, 94–5, 101, 103–4, 105, 110–11, 112, 113, 115, 123–4, 135, 137, 138, 147, 150–3, 156, 158, 164, 170–2, 179, 190–1, 194, 200, 203, 206–8, 219–20, 222, 228–9, 231, 234–5, 236, 241, 245, 260, 266–7, 269, 443, 584, 800, 1031, 1054, 1062, 1101, 1102–3, 1122–3, 1145, 1196, 1208–9, 1220, 1251; Action Committee 313, 746; attitude hampers relief work in Bihar 593–4; Bihar government 390;—No-Confidence motion against ministry moved 400–1; blackmail to enforce undemocratic features of British plan 130–3; charges of carrying out sinister activities 358–9; and Cabinet Mission plan 116–21, 823–4; civil disobedience movement 276–361, 451;—non-violent and non-communal 345;—in Assam and NWFP 1046–1112;—in Punjab 284–6, 356;—senseless 346; coalition impossible in Sind 95; communalism/communal activities, 1093–6;—in Bihar 362, 365, 366, 369–73, 376, 379, 386–9, 391, 394, 399, 403–6, 408–9, 412, 414, 415–16, 417, 419, 430;—in Delhi 438, 439;—in Punjab 458, 460, 794–6, 977–8, 991, 995–6, 1014, 1026;—necessary partition 985–6;—must withdraw their policy of violence 948–9; condemns atrocities in Assam 355–6; condemns Bihar riots 395–7; and Congress (see Congress); Constituent Assembly, entry into 45, 67–8, 71, 81, 84, 85, 88–9, 91, 92, 98, 99, 106, 126, 130, 133, 155, 527–9;—and the notion of Pakistan 95–7, 131;—unwilling to enter 145–6; demand for a Corridor not genuine 823, 827–8; demand for Partition 555, 556, 560; demands inclusion of Calcutta in East Pakistan 1221–7; dilemma 143–4; and division of Bengal 1060–2, 1167, 1169, 1170–2;—opposition to United Bengal 1194–5; fascist character 122; Interim
Index 1307

Government, position in 151–4, 161–2, 184, 192, 224, 728; Karachi resolution 149, 156, 184, 268; leaders 283;—action taken against 1035;—arrests in Punjab 280–1;—involved in Punjab campaign 276;—objectionable activities of 1033;—released, Punjab government's decision 281;—urge government to do justice to oppressed minority 402–3;—members impropriety 157–8;—problems regarding 1003–7; Ministry, not formed through Constitutional methods 336–8;—opposition to 330; National Guards 114, 132, 165, 229, 272, 278–83, 314, 345, 379, 438, 475, 479, 493, 496, 564–6, 569, 571, 579, 580, 832, 875, 895, 932, 938, 1034, 1037, 1062, 1071, 1080, 1228, 1264–5, 1266–7, 1268–9, 1275–9, 1282–3;—advised to stick to noble ideals 562;—create panic in Chittagong 579–80; non-cooperation 16;—adverse effects 144–5; disagreements of Nehru 139–43; NWFP, loses track in 1104–6; revulsion against, in 1081; objectionable activities 1033–4; opposition 360–1; public speeches of leaders questioned 1038–9; Punjab, —ministry, formation of 324–5, 968–9;—negotiations with government 305–6, 308–9;—role in Premier's resignation 315; Rehabilitation Committee 376; resist transfer of power 799; Sikh coalition 309, 336; secret pact with reactionaries 121–2; leaders should have made Muslims repent 917–18; Sukkur Conference 1036–7; War Council 345. See also Khaksars; Gandhi, M.K., Nehru, Jawaharlal; Jinnah, Muhammad Ali

Muslim Relief and Defence Committee 879

Muslim Students' Federation 831

Naga Hills 90, 123, 739, 1068
Naga National Council 738–9
Nagappa, S. 18–20, 59, 703–4
Nagas: demand for self determination 738–9
Nahar, Bejoysingh 885–6
Naidu, Sarojini 782, 833
Nanak, Guru 518
Nanda, B.R. 507, 509–12, 581–2, 823, 1042, 1043, 1044–5, 1250
Nankana Sahib 524
Narot, Dadhboy 635
Narain, Brij 1113
Narain, Jai Prakash (Jayaprakash) 82, 89, 202, 400, 405, 408, 569, 740–1, 750, 788, 833, 834, 1031; criticism of AICC, 90; differences with Congress, 94, 98, 139, 162, 181, 834; mention in Bihar League's report 388–9; letter to Jawaharlal Nehru 722; on Punjab disturbances 505–6
Narang, Gokul Chand 261, 496–7, 506, 612, 957–9, 961, 1009–10
Narayan Dutt, Lala 262, 529
Narayan, Jayaprakash. See Narain, Jai Prakash
Narendra Deva, Acharya 107, 722; opposes partition 815; questions Muslim League's ideology 517
Narendra Nath, Raja 536–8
National Volunteer Corps 939
Nationalism 7, 109, 548, 555, 560, 632, 920, 970
Naijawian Pathan Party 1015
Nazimuddin (Nazim-ud-Din), Khwaja 95–7, 105, 144, 205, 294, 299, 300–3, 304–5, 311, 317, 332, 387, 394, 1105, 1123; discussions with Jenkins 304–5
Nazism 1261
the grouping plan 89–91; consoles refugees 606; demands Caroe’s resignation 1075–6; demand for removal of Governor 354; demands martial law in Punjab 481–2, 504; denial for any role in change of Viceroyalty 217–18; disagreement on NWFP elections 1098–9; disapproves of Sovereign Bengal 1204; explains his press statement 223–4; explains reluctant acceptance of Partition of India 802–3; fears the ‘throwing overboard of the basic all-India Union 793–7; plea to Gandhi to return to Delhi 156; on Gandhi’s offer to Jinnah and other political solutions 733; 6 December HMG’s statement, interpretation 137–8;—welcomes 218–19; interview with Wavell 139–40, 161–2; response to League’s Karachi Resolution 149; moves resolution for acceptance of HMG’s 6 December Statement 84–6, 87–9; resolution about the Sovereign Republican State 106; speech in Central Legislative Assembly 447–50; speech on Objectives Resolution and its adoption 36–44; statement, need to restore normalcy in Punjab 491–2; suggests changes in the Draft Plan 803–5; suggested measures 487–8; versus Liaquat 200; visits Punjab 338–9, 478;—Governor’s objection to 353; willing for Dominion Status 782

Nehru, Motilal 996; Report 158
Neogy, K.C. 893–4, 1163, 1203–4
Nepal, Maharaja of 586
New Bengal Association 1229
new provinces, creation 556
New Statesman and Nation, The 107
Nicholls, Commander 754
Nicholson, Godfrey 825
Nichols-Roy, J.J.M. 49, 51, 59–60, 63, 75, 691–2, 1064
Nirbhay, Sardar Hari Singh 320–1
Nishtar, Sardar Abdur Rab 163, 203, 347, 352, 355, 415, 566, 736, 831–2, 871, 890, 949
Nizam of Hyderabad 229
Nizam Uddin 915
Nokcha, Mayang 51, 63, 75
Noman, Mohammad 409, 919
Noon, Begum Viqar-un-Nisa 292, 325–6
Noorullah, Mian 283, 320
North-West Frontier Province (NWFP) 45, 86, 89, 91, 92, 102, 110–11, 115, 119, 154, 206, 243, 345, 642, 733, 1282–3; civil disobedience movement by Muslim League 342–61, 1046–1112; Crime Regulations 441–2, 445, 453, 1103; critical situation 496–7; decision regarding elections 1097–8, 1100; Nehru’s disagreement with 1098–9; religious conversion 1096–7; Governor, assesses League campaign 348–9;—objects to Nehru’s visit 353;—pro-League leanings of 1082–5;—reports on continuing League agitation 351–2; minority faces communal insanity 955; minister brings 2000 Red Shirts to Peshawar 455; Muslim hooliganism 273; Muslim League movement withdrawn 1111–12;—condemns Frontier Government aggression 343–4; need for fresh elections 1092–3; prevent disintegration 455–6; Public Safety Ordinance 440–1; raiding Punjab villages 454; referendum 1232–9; relief arrangements 591; revulsion against Muslim League 1081; tribes oppose the Tribal Areas Sub-Committee of Constituent Assembly 653; volunteer armies 1281–2
North-West Frontier Province: communalism 1074–1112
Nuffield, Lord 635
Nuru, Abdullah. See Huq, Abdullah Nurul
Nye, Archibald 99, 774–6
Ordinance Raj 317–18, 485

Pai, K. Subraya 270–3

Pakistan 25, 140, 157–8, 169–70, 181, 206, 220–1, 227, 267, 287–8, 301, 314, 319, 320–1, 322, 339, 362, 369, 375, 377, 390, 405, 415, 485, 510, 547, 548, 556, 562, 727–8, 732, 777, 856–63; bound to come 557–8; Constituent Assembly 814; demand for Anglo-Indian representation 1247–8; cannot be achieved through civil war 249; economic aspects 827; and Hindustan, relations 820–2; notion of 95–7; should become really 608–9; territorial integrity 778–9. See also Jinnah, Muhammad Ali; Muslim League; partition; partition of Bengal; partition of Punjab

Palestine 7, 109, 173, 183, 206, 233, 371, 390, 780

Panchanantham, N. 529

Panchayat rent (or Chowkidari tax) 417–8

Pande, Ram Krishna 265

Pandit, R.C. 399

Pandit, Vijayalakshmi 5, 12-13

Panikkar, Sardar K.M. 662

Paniruddin, Maulvi 1053-4

Panja, Jadabendra Nath 550, 551

Pant, Govind Ballabh 45, 49, 51, 52, 53–4, 58, 61–2, 63, 65, 68, 70, 75, 89, 507, 823, 834, 1041, 1250, 1255; on organization of Home Guards and assistance to refugees 581–2, 1043; on Peace Committees 1042–3; on proportion of Hindus and Muslims in services 1044–5; on riots in Allahabad 508–9; on UP Maintenance of Public Order Bill (1947) 509–12

Panthic Parties 303, 991, 1127

paramountcy 5, 21, 135, 185–6, 217, 225, 228, 240–1, 784, 795, 822, as a system 199, 215, 784; powers and obligations under 217

Parikh, Manibehn Narahari 431

Parikh, Narahari Bhai 431, 853

Parliament of Religions, Chicago (1893) 272

Parmanand (Parma Nand), Bhai 512, 959, 1137

Parsi(s) 3, 28, 51, 52, 59, 125, 428, 668, 903, 1037, 1038, 1040, 1231; approach to Hindu-Muslim compromise 848–50; Marriage and Divorce Act (1936) 636; role in building up modern India, demand for safeguards 634–7

Parsram, Jethamal 1037

Partap, Bhai 1037

partition 768–9, 771, 801, 804, 808, 809, 827–9, 832–4, 874; a final decision 823–4; based on self determination 771; Congress accepts 837; followed by fragmentation of states 777; inevitable 823, 826–7; no solution 994–7; opposed by Jinnah 776; Nehru accepts reluctantly 802–3; plan admitted, provinces to be split 768; racket 768–9; based on self-determination 771; a sinister move 772–3; wrong 783–4 partition of Bengal 236, 544–5, 547, 554–7, 557–8, 768–9, 771–2, 800, 812–14, 815, 821, 823, 828, 1152–1231; demand for 161, 170, 540–60; impact on Assam 1191–4; opposed by majority of non-Muslims 1172–4; for a separate non-Muslim province 545–7; sovereignty would mean perpetual communal strife 1220–1 partition of Punjab 161, 312, 485, 488–9, 518–39, 768–9, 771–2, 777, 800, 812–13, 815, 819–21, 823–4, 828–9, 832–4, 874, 1113–51, 1170, 1174; active steps should be taken to avert 1149–50; on the basis of landed property 1138–9; Congress should take harder stand 1146–9; opposition 534–5; problems and prospects of partition 536–8; a solution of despair 1130–2; support for 538–9

Parushram, Chaudhri 587

Pasand, Col. Shah 350, 354, 1086

Punjabis to fight back goondaism 1016; appeal to help Punjab 609; approves Bardoloi’s immigration policy 1051 clarifies basis of representation in the Constituent Assembly 71–2; criticizes League leaders involved in Punjab campaign 276; demands immediate transfer of full authority 764; demands Martial Law 483; demands resignation of League members 736; discussion with Bengal Members of Congress Committee on AICC Resolution 97–8; dismisses propaganda against him 141; Gandhi-Jinnah appeal, comments on 853;—follow-up 851–2; on apprehension among the Hindu minorities in Quetta 1250–1; on Hindu-Minorities in Sind 1037–8, 1039–40; for a form of dominion Status 782; against Inquiry Commission in Bihar 398; on illegal detenus under District Commissioner’s order 1022–3; Jinnah rejects his proposal on transfer of power to the Central Government 799–801; on Frontier Ministry 1091–2; on Khukris 1039; on Muslim League’s plan to carry out demonstration 949–50; on preparations for direct action against the Assam Government 1052–4; on provision of military aid to Assam 1050; objects to attack on government of Bihar 871; on objectionable activities of League leaders 1033; opposes inquiry commission into riots 917; opposition to Suhrawardy’s Plan 1203–4; on prospects of unity and partition 755–6; rejoinder to Jinnah 748; solution for political impasse 792–3

Pathanistan movement 956, 1236–7, 1238–9
Pathans 348, 352, 354, 456, 518, 653, 832, 870, 876, 905, 956, 1052
Patiala pleads for separate province for Jats 1142
Patiala, Maharaja of 984–5
Patil, Nana 1268, 1269, 1270
Patwardhan, Achyut Rao 722, 833
Peace Committee. See All Parties Peace Committee
Peshawar Intelligence Bureau 947
Phadke, R.B. 1270–2
phased transfer of territory to Indian control 183, 186
Pillai, V.I. Muniswami 50, 63
Pindi Dass 264
Pipal, Gopi Chand 587
Plato 62
Poddar, Ananda Mohan 1162
Poddar, Hanuman Pd. 261, 265
Police Act (1861) 255, 593
police mutiny in Bihar 892 policy statement in India: apprehensions regarding effects 196–7; may destabilize Indian Armed Forces 196; military implications 198 political alternatives 737–91; and economic crisis 230; and social discontent 13; appeasement 109; developments in early 1947 82–138; gangsterism 122; nature of communal disturbances 935–6; prisoners in Kohat 1078; representation and socio-economic safeguards for depressed classes 638, 659–60; rights in general 662–4 political situation, politics 82, 162–5, 180–2, 411, 734–6, 885–8, 970–1; in Assam 1056–8, 1071; in Bengal 1166–8; in NWFP 1080, 1087–8; in Punjab 497–9, 981–2, 1025–7 politicization of government servants 438 polygamy 80, 676
Poona Pact 30, 72, 587, 627, 632, 659–60, 813
Poonacha, C.M. 33
population distribution of Hindus and Muslims; in Assam 1047; Bengal 543–4, 548, 551, 761, 1175–7; Punjab 521, 525–6, 761, 1123–6, 1133–6, 1147–8
Porter, A.E. 437–8, 599, 930, 932–3, 935–6, 989–90 power politics 407–8, 414, 485, 507, 1009
Praja Parishad 633
Prakasam, Sri T 704
Prakash, Sree Inder 529
Pramanick, G.D. 1190
Pramanick, Rajani Kanta 552
Prasad, Bimal 749
Prasad, Brijkishore (Brij Kishore) 431–2, 914
Prasad, Nawalkishore 399
Pratap Dayaldas 869
Prater, S.H. 31–3, 50, 63, 75
Pratinidhi Panthic Board 100, 527
Prem Das 955
Press Emergency Powers Ordinance 930
Princes 216–17
Prior, Geoffrey 836
private armies, prohibition 1272–4
Privy Council case 291
Provincial Autonomy 7, 12, 32, 71, 84, 87, 88, 89, 101, 118, 146, 361, 526, 1153
Provincial Coalition Governments 140
Provincial Governments 217; to inherit power 244–6
Provincial Legislature 30, 75–6, 124, 158, 240–2, 289, 290, 343, 356
Provincial Public Service Commission 667 provincial units 248–9
Public Service Commission 1032
Index

laws 296–7; victim of imperialist manoeuvres 485–7; women tear-gassed inside police van 292

Pyare Lal 513

Qizilbash, Nawab Muzaffar Ali Khan 277–8, 289, 291, 315, 473
Quadir, Col Ehsan 579
Qudus, (Maulana) Maulvi Abdul 1035
Quit India Resolution 16, 36, 38, 107, 181, 485, 494, 740, 748
Qurban, Fazal Elahi 327, 1007–9
Qureshi, Ghiasuddin 347
Radhakrishnan, S. 4–9, 28, 29
Raghvachariar 650
Rahman, Alhaj Abdur 347
Rahman, Fazlur 1210
Rahman, Hifzul 89
Rahman, Latifur 126, 127–9, 401
Rahman, Syed Muhibur 1227
Raja, B. Shiva 634–7, 637–40, 645–9, 661–2, 662–7, 675–6, 713–4, 722–24
Rajput 1028, 1118
Rallia Ram, K.E. 980–1
Ram Kishan 990–4
Ram Nath, Yogi 1021
Ramzan, Hakim 917
Ranade, S.G. 1274
Rangi, N.G. 13–17, 70, 71
Rangnekar, Justice 650
Ranjit Dal 567, 983, 1265
Ranjit Singh, Maharaja of Punjab 518, 535, 1233
Rao, B.N. See Rau, B.N.
Rao, V.C. Kesava 708–9
Rashtra Seva Dal 274, 563, 564, 569, 578, 579, 1266, 1267, 1274
Rashtra Dal (Veer Bajrang Dal) 1269
Rashtra Seva Samiti 579, 1267
Rashtra Seva Sangh 293
Rashtra Sevak Sangh (RSSS) 114, 165, 272, 275, 279–80, 281, 283, 286, 294, 295, 296, 299, 314, 435, 439, 563, 567, 571–6, 578, 579, 580, 768, 929, 931, 937–8, 1025–26, 1265, 1266, 1267, 1268, 1269, 1275, 1278, 1279, 1283; offence registered under section 120 of Railways Act against Sangh volunteers 1268; question about activities in Central Legislative Assembly 570–1; strength in Orissa 568
Rau, B.N. 75–6, 654, 710, 1069, 1070
Rauf, Syed Abdur (Abdul) 930, 1046, 1063
Rawalpindi 291, 297, 312, 329, 339, 524; communalism 289, 440, 452, 456, 459, 488
Ray Chowdhary, Susil Kumar 1162
Ray, B.C. See Roy, B.C.
Ray, Rajendra Lal 260
Razaq, Abdur 289
Razi, Hakim Fakheruddin 916
Raziuddin 915
Red Shirts (volunteers) 404, 455, 471, 565–6, 575, 946, 951, 1074–5, 1080, 1236, 1263, 1264, 1273, 1281–2; join League movement 1106–7, 1108 refugee and relief camps, refugees’ problems 410–11; compensation for riot victims 388, 394, 401, 408, 592–3; in Bihar 596–7, 606–7; exodus from Bihar 598–604; from Noakhali and Tipperah 260; Hardwar, relief arrangements 1250; organization of Home Guards and assistance to 1043; in Punjab 489, 612; in the Rawalpindi division 504; rehabilitation work by Hindu Mahasabha 1256–9; relief and rehabilitation, need for 604–5; in United Provinces 1255–6
Reid, Colin 495
Renkin, General 1054
Revolutionary Socialist Party (RSP) 436–7, 887
Rig Veda 21, 22
right of conscientious objection 672 right of veto 111, 118, 128, 153, 154, 527, 528, 743, 1121 right to work or employment 670, 672–3 rights and duties 645, 648, 654, 671, 672 rights of minorities and scheduled castes 8–9, 12, 30, 619–33 rights of provinces 102–3
RIN Mutiny 141, 201
Rizvi, Karrar Hussain 915
Roche-Victoria 50, 63
Roosevelt, Franklin D. 673, 826
Round Table Conference, meet on Punjab problem 532–3, 1118
Roy, B.C. (Ray, B.C.) 1163, 1182, 1192
Roy, Binoy Kumar 1206, 1212
Roy, Jogendra Narayan 552
Roy, Kamal Krishna 552
Roy, Kiran Shankar (Sankar, Kiran Shankar, Kiron Shankar) 52, 560, 777, 878, 885–6, 1156–7, 1182, 1183, 1191, 1194, 1203, 1205, 1206, 1212, 1218
Roy, Leela 1165–7
Roy, N.N. 1189
Roy, S.C. 1188
Roy, Shibendu Sekhar 263
Rutnaswamy, M. 75
Saadullah, Syed Muhammad 360, 1048, 1051–2, 1055, 1056–8, 1065, 1069–70, 1073, 1263
Saeed, Anwar 1244
Saha, M.N. 889–90, 1195–6
Sahay, A.M. 404
Sahaya, Rai Bahadur Syamanandan 40, 52, 57, 58, 709
Sahni, Jit Singh 1021
Sahny, Bhisham 1020, 1021
Sahu, Lakshminarayan 58, 702, 711
Said, A.A. 257, 574–5, 601
Sakhire, T. 739
Saksena, Mohan Lal. See Saksena, Mohanlal
Sayeed, Abdul 1063
Scheduled Castes (SCs), 17, 47, 59, 60, 62, 71–2, 91, 125, 190, 207, 210, 271, 301, 312, 323, 527, 643, 659, 812, 813, 988, 1173, 1214, 1245; in British India 632–3; appeal for retention of British rule 1260–2; Constitutional safeguards in new Constitution 660; demand for representation in Constituent Assembly 633; of Dera Ismail Khan support Pakistan 1111; against Hindus 1158–9; representative character of MLAs questioned 1189–90; separate electorates, political representation for 583–4, 587–8, 627, 629, 630–1; of Sind and NWFP 621;
Sanaullah, Haji 1244
Sant Ram, Chaudhri 590
Santhanam, K. 49, 57, 58, 687, 714–15, 717, 718, 721
Sanyal, H.N. 547
Sanyal, N. 547
Sanyal, Sasanka Sekhar (Sasankasekhar) 378, 547, 571, 594
Sapru Committee 539, 665
Sapru, Tej Bahadur 147
Sarabhai, Mridula 141, 433
Saraswati, Swami Dayanand (Dayananda) 271, 1151
Saray Prasad, Lala 512
Sarda Act 675
Sarda, Chand Karan 261
Sargent Scheme 684
Sarkar, Abani Nath 889–90
Sarkar, Jadunath 889, 1229–30
Sarkar, Nalini Ranjan 553, 1152–4, 1163, 1173, 1188
Sarva Sind Hindu Panchayat 1037
Sastri, Pt. Rajendramani 263
Satnam Kaur’s Report on the communal violence in Mogul, Rewat Tehsil, Rawalpindi 460–2
Satramdas 1034
Sattar, Pirzada Abdul 245, 550, 1035, 1038
Savarkar, S.S. 744, 844–5, 1040
Savarkar, V.D. 844, 1204–5; congratulates Bihar Hindus 925–6; stand on Assam situation 1063
Saxena, Mohan Lal. See Saksena, Mohanlal
Sayeed, Abdul 1063
Index

social discrimination 629; solidarity 1251–2; weightage 627–9
Scheduled Castes Association 633
Scheduled Castes Christians Federation 1260–2
Scott, I.D. 143, 203, 757, 979, 1074, 1094, 1139
Scott, W.B. 587
Secretary of State for India on his reservations about Congress acceptance of Cabinet Mission’s proposal 124–5
Secretary of State’s Services 184 self-determination 101, 750, 795, 797, 801–2, 1130; Mizos’ demand for 1059, 1061; Muslim demand for 319, 334, 405, 505, 546, 588, 653; Naga demand for 738, 739; partition based on 771
Sen, Benod Behari 880, 882
Sen, D.N. 1188
Sen, Narendra Nath 1200
Sen, P.K. 17–18
Sen, P.N. 547
Sen, Prafulla Chandra 552
Sen, Surendra Nath (Surendranath) 1219–20, 1229
Sen Gupta, Manoranjan 552
Sethi, Lehna Singh 973–4, 1140
Shafi, Mian Mohammad 347
Shah Nawaz, Begum 281, 283, 284, 314, 315, 320–1
Shah Nawaz, Gen. 405, 407, 578, 907, 911
Shah, Hazi Syed 1107
Shah, K.T. 51, 64, 75, 670–5, 703, 705
Shah, M.L. 1188
Shah, Sher Bahadur 354
Shah, Syed Abdullah 347
Shaha, Phool Bhan 51, 63, 75
Shahabuddin, P.M. 1062
Shahidi Dal 939, 1279
Shahzada Sahib, Faqir of Waziristan 354, 947
Sham Lal Nai 1270
Shamsuddin 1222
Shankar Memorial Day 581
Shankar, V. 599–600, 857, 990
Shankaracharya, the Hindu saint 374
Sharif, Pir Mohammad 984
Sharma, A.N. 1023
Sharma, Balkrishna 3, 693, 721
Sharma, Hari Dev 815
Sharma, Siddhinath 83
Sharma, Sri Ram (Sri Ram) 494, 1132, 1136
Shastri, Algu Rai (Algurai) 21–3, 512, 514, 693–6
Shastri, Devprakash 456
Shastri, Kumarswami 650
Shastri, Raghavacharya 262
Shastri, Vaidya Yogi Ramnath 440
Shastri, Viswanath 263
Shia Conference 536, 763
Shiromani Akali Dal. See Akali Dal
Shiromani Gurudwara Prabandhak Committee (SGPC) 336, 934–5, 966, 1009, 1013, 1242
Shiv Chand 633–4
Shiv Sharan Lal, Dewan 1253
Shone, T. 1168
Short, Major W. 1143–5
Shukla, R.S. 928–9
Sial, Fateh Mohammed 296
Siddiqui, Hafiz Qudrat Ali 928
Siddiqui, Moulana Abdul Wassy 916
Siddiqui, Zainab 314
Sidhwa, B.K. 61
Sidhwa, R.K. 51, 63, 75, 89, 634–7, 680, 689, 706, 707, 715, 717–18, 719, 721, 1037–8, 1039–40
Sikh Nav Javan Dal 564, 579, 1267
Sikh Volunteer Corps 939
Sikhs: in Punjab 7, 15, 25, 31, 89, 93, 106, 111, 113, 119, 161, 194, 208, 273, 274, 275, 304, 335, 404, 460, 524–5, 564, 589, 657, 684, 685, 694, 745, 767, 769, 773, 778–9, 799–800, 805, 807–7, 812, 824, 911, 1026; and the British Cabinet’s scheme of 16 May 1946 86–7, 91, 116, 121, 129; conversion 351; cultural autonomy 326; demand for a separate Constituent Assembly 1143–5; demand support for communal veto regarding Constitution making 100; in a divided Punjab 1142–3; exploited by the British, the Hindus and the Congress 158; Jinnah offered no assurance to 205; Mazhabi 321, 1245; Memorandum on, by Ujjal Singh and Harnam Singh 640–5; and Muslims and Muslim League coalition/relations 207, 238, 292–4, 299, 301–3, 309, 311–12, 313–14, 317, 321, 323, 327, 328, 330, 336–8, 344, 463–5, 477–8, 529, 727, 928, 930–2, 1011, 1141–2; partition of India and Sikhs 819–21, 838–9; reactions to HMG’s statement 207; representation on Advisory Committee 45, 52, 53; Ramdasia 643, 1245; no right of veto 111, 128, 154; rights 118, 665; sentiments should be considered 840–1; Sikh-Hindu province in Punjab 518–24; targets in communal violence 843–4, 849–50, 853, 865–7, 933–40, 945, 949, 954, 1001–3

Simon Commission. See Statutory Commission

Simon, Lord 3, 738–9, 825

Sinclair, A. R. 576

Sind 58, 89, 95, 112, 126, 158, 163, 168, 170, 206, 220, 227, 229, 522, 531, 538, 565, 567, 594; communalism 264, 267, 274–5, 362, 406, 422, 426, 1031–40; civil disobedience movement by Muslim League 278, 299, 307, 315, 341, 352; role of Congressmen in local politics 1037; demand for separation of Hindu majority districts 1040; Legislative Assembly 246–50; provincial autonomy 71; and Punjab, grouping 102; Provincial Muslim League 229

Sindhi, Abdul Majid 88

Sing, Amir 984

Singh, Arjan 440

Singh, B. Labh 993

Singh, Baba Gurdit 404

Singh, Baldev 50, 63, 151, 207, 297, 317, 440, 547, 747, 759, 790, 806, 833, 845, 944, 992, 1051, 1055, 1119, 1120, 1141–2; appeal to young men to join armed forces 95; demand for a separate Constituent Assembly for Sikhs 1143–5; Evan Jenkins on his interview with Baldev Singh 477, 1017–20; on INA 201, 202, 204, 205; reflections on Muslim League campaign 293–4, 336–8; communication with Nehru 334, 338–9, 478, 1146–9; letter to Lord Mountbatten that Sikh sentiments should be considered 840–1; letter from Patel to 359–60, 1050; suggested martial law in disturbed areas 487–8, 504; S. E. Abbott on his attitude 971–3

Singh, Balwant 521

Singh, Banta 966

Singh, Basant 527

Singh, Bhag 1128

Singh, Bhagat 487, 966

Singh, Bhai Mangal 966

Singh, Bindeshwari Prasad 263

Singh, Buta 1117, 1121

Singh, Chaudhri Prem 590

Singh, Chaudhri Sunder 590

Singh, Dalip 466, 467, 468

Singh, Ganesha 265

Singh, Gokul 465, 466, 467

Singh, Gurbachan 1121

Singh, Gurcharan 1021

Singh, Gyani (Giani) Kartar (Karter) 63, 301, 311–12, 323, 328, 472–3, 482, 518–24, 525, 527–8, 564, 624, 985, 1119, 1121–2, 1132, 1136, 1142, 1241, 1242, 1243, 1267

Singh, Hari 984

Singh, Harman 48, 50, 63, 70, 75, 640, 1132, 1136, 1137

Singh, Ishar 442, 1142

Singh, J. J. 483–4

Singh, Jaipal 52, 53, 54, 61, 63, 69, 70, 75

Singh, Jaswant 966

Singh, Jiwan 221

Singh, Jowand 1021

Singh, Kabul 322

Singh, Kartar (of Sarabha) 521

Singh, Kumar Suresh Prakash 263

Singh, Lahiri 476

Singh, Lahore 475

Singh, Lt. Kartar 911

Singh, Makhan 461

Singh, Mangal 449, 1117

Singh, Mathura 909

Singh, Mehal 461

Singh, Mela 1021

Singh, Mohan 934, 1279

Singh, Moti Ram 465–9

Singh, Muneshwar 263

Singh, Nanak 966, 993

Singh, Nihal 543–4

Singh, Phool 513–4, 689, 712

Singh, Pratap 50, 63, 322, 1132, 1136

Singh, Raja Jagannath Bakhsh 707, 708, 709, 711

Singh, Ram 984

Singh, Rao Gajraj 976

Singh, Sampuran 1117

Singh, Sardar Kartar 50

Singh, Shyam Narain 403

Singh, Swaran (Swarn) 311–12, 328, 336, 471, 472–3, 475, 477–8, 608, 973–4, 985–6, 992, 1137, 1141–2, 1242

Singh, T. P. 386, 573–4

Singh, Tarlok 469, 1139
Singh, Ujjal 50, 63, 328, 329, 527, 528, 640, 1121, 1132, 1136
Singha, Dewan (Diwan) Bahadur S.P. 327, 328, 471, 1004
Singh, A.N. 24
Singh, Chandreshwar Prasad Narain 402, 424
Singh, Krishna Narain 390
Singh, Kumar Ganganand 263, 399
Singh, Rambishnu 365
Singh, S.B. 547
Singh, Sri Krishna 392, 394-5, 400-1, 402-3, 424, 908
Sinn Fein agitation 20
Sitaramayya (Sitarammayya), Pattabhi 65, 68, 833
Smiles, Walter 232
Smith, N.P.A. 180-82
socialism 93, 94, 109, 556, 560, 750, 996, 1154
South Waziristan Agency 350, 1086
Soviet Union 42, 108, 232; conflict with Europe 108
Special Marriage Act III (1872) 668
Srivastava, J.P. 208
Statesman, The 422, 496, 827, 868-9, 884, 1123, 1164-5
Statutory Commission (Simon Commission) 738-9, 1133
Steering Committee 527
Stevens, Thomas 28
Steicher, Julius 1048
Suhrawardy, Shaista Akhtar 326
Sukh Lal, Chaudhury 320-1
Sukkur Muslim League Conference, communal speeches 1036-7
Sulaiman, Prophet 832
Sultanudin, Mr. 404
Sundar Lal, Chaudhri 590
Suraj Mal (Surajmal), Rai Bahadur (Rao Bahadur) Choudhry 1118, 1132, 1136
Surma Valley 104-5, 1058, 1073, 1181, 1240; Muslim Zone 1065-6
Suthra, Sardar Kartar Sing 1267
Swastika League Volunteer Corps 579
Switzerland 7, 27, 76, 77, 78
Syadvada, Jain doctrine 650
Sylhet 104, 545, 789, 804, 807, 814, 1047; referendum 1239-40; separation from Assam 789
Tagore, Rabindranath 777, 1198
Tahilramani, Parasaram V. 1036
Talbot, Phillips 368-75
Talleyrand, Charles 26
Talpur, Mir Ghulam Ali 88, 1027
Talwar, Sant Singh 450-2, 1144
Tandon, Purushottamdas 51, 53, 92, 692, 693, 695
Tata, Dorabji 635
Tata, J.N. 635
Tata, Jamsheoji 635
Taxila-Murree-Gujar Khan triangle 490
Tayabullah, Mahomed 101, 111
Tebhaga movement in Bengal 132
Templewood, Lord 6
Thakkar, A.V. 75
Thakur, P.R. 50, 63, 69, 75, 690-1, 879, 1175
Tiwari, Ram Prasad 569 transfer of power 8, 92, 107, 115, 134, 156, 176, 179, 183-7, 206, 214-16, 227, 231, 231-3, 309, 312, 485, 531, 547, 549, 560, 727, 728, 729, 731-2, 743, 747, 749, 760, 764, 772, 773, 785, 787-9, 796, 797-8, 801, 806, 807, 810, 814, 823, 824, 825, 828, 856, 868, 885, 942, 974, 979, 1094, 1097, 1138, 1145, 1156, 1165, 1184, 1186, 1260; arrangements for 239-42; Assam's position in negotiations 805-6;
Congress position on 770–2; discussion in London on related issues 816–18; discussion in Simla 789–91; in June 1948, 189–90, 192, 193–5, 196, 197, 198, 199, 215, 216, 218, 223, 228, 229, 230, 232, 244, 311, 318, 332, 335, 337–8, 341, 346, 530, 543, 548, 554, 557, 681, 733, 751–2, 754, 755–6, 758, 766–7, 786, 802, 804, 816, 854, 941, 957, 986, 1074, 1126, 1141, 1154, 1161, 1163, 1192, 1210; League resisted 799; Nehru’s apprehension regarding the new proposal for 785; on Dominion Status basis 764–7; proposal for, during interim period 808–9; questions about 815–16; should come with peace 913–15, 937; two plans for 756–8, 818; V.P. Menon’s scheme for 785–9

Tribal Areas 19, 44, 46, 56, 59–60, 67, 74, 343, 585 tribals: in Advisory Committee 53–4, 70, 643, 812, 814; need protection from immigrants’ encroachment 360; not to negotiate with Hindu government 350; raids in Hazara 445–7;—policy to be adopted on 447–50
Tripathi, R.K. 263
Tripathi, Vishwambhar Dayal 33–6, 707–8, 712, 720, 721
Trikamdas, Purushottam 722
Tripathi, Vishwambhar Dayal 33–6, 707–8, 712, 720, 721
Tucker, General 1054
Trivedi, Chandulal 1273
Tumandar, Chaudhri Mazhar Ahmed 289
Two Nation Theory 406, 413, 415, 538, 548, 802, 865, 866, 1153, 1202, 1213
Tyabji, Abbas 429
Tyagi, Mahavir 698–9, 701
Tyson, J.D. 1156, 1189–90, 1273
Ulema i Hind 536
Umar, Hazrat 22
Ummar, Mohammad 1021
Union Naturalization Law 714–17
Union Powers Committee 527
United Bengal 556, 1208; communal raj in 555; minority community under 1153, 1169, 1172, 1175; defence and foreign relations in 1178–9; Muslim League’s opposition to 1194–5, 1209; should be based on mutual consent 1201–2; Sarat Chandra Bose on 1217; inclusion of Sylhet in 1239–40; Socialists for 750
United Nations Organization (UNO) 5, 12, 38, 41, 233, 372, 758, 780, 783, 801, 816, 822, 823, 1112, 1145
United Provinces 4, 12, 21, 33–6, 51, 54, 64, 82, 95, 197, 250, 268, 269, 273, 310, 418, 421, 517, 536, 576, 581–2, 642, 689, 692, 693–5, 698, 705–6, 712, 720, 721, 747, 769, 827, 852, 860, 983, 998, 1024, 1028, 1030, 1031, 1032, 1115, 1117, 1122, 1125, 1273; communalism, communal riots 254, 515, 1028, 1040–5;—Allahabad 508–9;—Hapur 512, 513–14, 516; Governor’s assessment of the political situation 234–5; Legislative Assembly 581–2; maintenance of Public Order Bill 509–12; Muslim electorates 951–2; Ordinance 940; Provincial Hindu Sabha 267; refugee problems 956, 1255; Scheduled Castes Federation Conference (1947), Firozabad 587–8; Zamindari Abolition Committee 707; Zamindari system 1014
United States of America 7, 42, 76, 77, 78; attained freedom through direct action 4; Constitution 20; War of Independence 20
University Act 1039 untouchability 780; to be abolished 681–2 untouchables 17, 589, 624–5, 908; and Hindus, relation 630–2; of Kherijessore 626–7; poverty and economic dependence 631
Usman, S.M. 1227
Usmani, Maulana Shabbir Ahmad 404, 831–2
Utkal Union Conference 702
Varadachariar, S. 714
Varma, Phulan Prasad 401
Vazirani, Nihchaldas C. 1038, 1039
Velayudan, Dakshayani 58
Vidyarthi, Moulana Mohammad Abbas 916
Vir Bajrang Dal 581
Visaluddin Saheb 510
Vivekananda, Swami 272
Volunteer organizations 314, 561–81, 1263–83
Wadia, Jal K. 848
Waheed, Abdul 283
Wali Mohammad 1270
War Services of Bengal 1226
Warsi, Mahboob Ahmad 915, 919–20
Watson, Miss 948
Wazirs 349–50, 352, 354, 947, 1111, 1253; reaffirm faith in Pakistan 1111
Weightman, Hugh 123–4 widow remarriage 1258
Widow Remarriage Act 675
World War I 47, 88, 518, 1118
World War II 88, 271, 443, 518, 1118, 1129, 1225
Wylie, Francis 234–5, 286, 1273
Yasin, Mohammad 1227
Yunus, Mohammad 339, 405, 613–14, 1248
Zafar, Syed Abu 916
Zaffar, Ishaq 1021
Zaheer, Ali 763, 854
Zaheer, Sajjad 1007–9
Zahir-ud-Din 854–5
Zaildar, Fayaz Mohammad 289
Zaildars 302
Zakar, Abu 403
Zakat 859
Zalmai (Zalme) Pakhtun. See Zulme Pakhtoon zamindari system 15, 35, 705, 708, 709, 711–13, 905, 914, 1014; abolition 366, 704, 709, 1186
Zia-ul-Islam 1151
Zilliacus, Konni 233, 744
Zinkin, Maurice 754
Zonal Autonomy Plan for Punjab 539
Zulme Pakhtoon 1236–7, 1254, 1282
Sucheta Mahajan, the Editor of this volume, is Professor of History, Centre for Historical Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. She was Gillespie Visiting Professor at the College of Wooster, Ohio, and Fellow of the Indian Institute of Advanced Study, Shimla, and the Rockefeller Bellagio Center in Italy. She is an editor of Studies in History, the journal of the centre where she teaches.

Sabyasachi Bhattacharya, the General Editor of the Towards Freedom series, is former Chairman, Indian Council of Historical Research, New Delhi. He was earlier Vice-Chancellor of Visva-Bharati, Santiniketan, and Professor of History at the Centre for Historical Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi.
OTHER TITLES IN THE SERIES

SUCHETA MAHAJAN (EDITOR)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1947
Parts 2 & 3
(forthcoming)

K.N. PANIKKAR (EDITOR)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1940
Parts 1 & 2

SUMIT SARKAR (EDITOR)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1946
Parts 1 & 2

MUSHIRUL HASAN (EDITOR)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1939
Parts 1 & 2

BIMAL PRASAD (EDITOR)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1945

BASUDEV CHATTERJEE (EDITOR)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1938

PARTHA SARATHI GUPTA (EDITOR)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1943–1944

AMIT K. GUPTA & ARJUN DEV (EDITORS)
Towards Freedom
Documents on the Movement for Independence in India, 1941
Part 1